ASSEMBLIES FACE SPLIT ON SOCIAL SERVICE

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

Will the Southern Presbyterian Assembly organically unite with one Presbyterian denomination and cut off fraternal relationships with all other protestants?

This is the question which its commissioners probably will be compelled to answer while the Assmebly is in session in Atlanta.

There is little doubt that the Southern Assembly will combine with the United Presbyterian Church, but it is possible that it will sever its connection with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The Federal Council includes practically the combined Protestant forces of the United States, representing 30 different denominations which have a communicant membership of 16,000,000. One of the chief reasons given by those who favor the separation is their objection to the social service platform adopted by the Federal Council.

Platform of Council.

Here is the platform of the Council to which exception has been taken:

The Church must stand:

1. For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

2. For the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage and proper housing.

3. For the fullest possible development for every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.

4. For the abolition of child labor.

5. For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

6. For the abatement and prevention of poverty.

7. For the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.

8. For the conservation of health.

9. For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases and mortality.

For Aiding Workers.

10. For the right of all men to the opportunity of self-maintenance, for safeguarding this right against encroachment of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment.

11. For suitable provision for the old age of the workers, and for those incapacitated by injury.

12. For the right of employees and employers alike to organize for adequate means of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

13. For a release from employment one day in seven.

14. For the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and for that degree of leisure for all, which is a condition of the highest human life.

15. For a living wage as a minimum in every industry, and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

16. For a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

This platform has in substance been

NEW THEORY IS OFFERED IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Detectives in the Phagan mystery are not centering all their efforts upon Frank and Lee. New theories have been advanced, new clews examined and every possible theory is being investigated.

It was because of these rumors on the streets to-day that a report was spread that an entirely new lead was being followed by Solicitor Dorsey that might eliminate both Frank and Lee.

"There are no developments so far," he said, "which would tend to swerve the prosecution from its present course. The cases of the two men held will be placed before the Grand Jury as soon as the evidence against them can be properly shaped, unless other developments justify a change."

New Theory Investigated.

The new theory alluded to has been submitted by a private detective employed by the Solicitor's office. The man, whose identity has not been revealed, has been working along lines entirely at variance to those pursued by the prosecutor. Mr. Dorsey stated that while as yet no evidence had been produced to substantiate the proposed solution, that his investigators have taken the matter up and will go to the bottom of it. Every available means will be used to prove or disprove the detective's theory.

An important affidavit was added Tuesday to the great mass of evidence already collected by Solicitor Dorsey.

Another affidavit considered of importance was that made by Miss Maggit Wyatt, 44 Pickett Street, who formerly was employed at the pencil factory.

Miss Willie M. Ross, 259 Crew Street; who is said to have heard screams in the pencil factory at 4:30 on the afternoon of the tragedy, appeared at Mr. Dorsey's office in the morning and made an exhaustive statement which she signed.

Dorsey Will Welcome Burns.

When asked later what she knew of the case, Miss Ross declared she had absolutely no knowledge of it.

Solicitor Dorsey, when asked about the report that Detective Burns was coming to Atlanta to take charge of the investigation, declared that he would welcome Mr. Burns.

Colonel Felder, whose correspondence with the great detective gave rise to the report that he would enter the investigation, stated Tuesday morning that he would know positively by Wednesday whether Burns would comply with his request. Mr. Burns is due to arrive in New York from Europe some time Tuesday.

The Grand Jury probably will hold an extra session this week to "clean up" the routine docket in order that there will be nothing to interfere with the Phagan case when it is presented by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey.

Consider Extra Session.

The Solicitor and his assistant, E. A. Stephens, discussed Monday the advisability of an extra session for one day before Friday, the regular meeting day, and may issue a call to the jurors to assemble Wednesday.

The Solicitor explained, however, that it probably would take the two sessions this week to dispose of the routine, and the Phagan case might not reach the jury until Friday of next week, or an extra session to be called the first part of the week.

Mrs. Rudolph Frank, mother of Leo Frank, was seen for the first time at her home in Brooklyn Monday by the newspaper reporters. She de-

SHRINE MEET CONCEDED TO ATLANTA BOOSTERS

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 13.—Forrest Adair filed with the Imperial Council to-day official invitations from Atlanta for next year's session from Governor Brown, Governor-elect Slaton, Mayor Woodward, the Capital City, Transportation, University and Piedmont Driving Clubs and many other social and business organizations and persons in Atlanta.

There seems to be nothing left that might have been done to insure Atlanta's winning the big prize of the session in Dallas. About the hotels and streets it generally is conceded that Atlanta will win.

The parade of the patrols to-day, escorting the Imperial Council to its opening session, was beautiful and served to jam the streets with spectators almost to suffocation. There were about 100 patrols in line, averaging 50 men each; 20 brass bands, and a civic procession of something like 150 filled automobiles. Every patrol was uniformed differently and gorgeously.

Great Parade for To-night.

That parade, bigger and better, for already it is predicted that the attendance in Atlanta next year is to be much heavier than it is here, will look mighty attractive along Whitehall and Peachtree next year. The big parade of the session takes place to-night, when it is expected that about 15,000 Shriners will march in line under the glitter of 100,000 electric lights.

No patrol in to-day's parade attracted more applause and attention than the Yaarab patrol, under Captain J. O. Seamans and Lieutenants Cuts Vandiver and Ashford.

Atlanta's fight was given a big boost to-day when Colonel Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, arrived and plunged headlong into the contest to put Atlanta over. He is one of the best known Shriners in America, and has been of vast help to the Atlanta workers.

Fred Houser, of Atlanta, has the publicity end of the Atlanta campaign in hand and has handled it splendidly. The Dallas papers are full of Atlanta and its enterprise to-day. They all pick the Gate City for a winner in to-morrow's balloting.

Irwin Named Potentate.

At the Texas session, the only thing done of interest to the public was the election of William W. Irwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., to be imperial potentate next year. He will preside in Atlanta and he told me to-day that the fact was particularly gratifying to him.

He has been outspoken in his support of Atlanta for the honor of entertaining the Shrine in 1914. He and Forrest Adair are great cronies, and have been at many sessions of the Imperial Council. The other Imperial Council members were advanced in rotation, as is customary in the order.

There was a mighty careful checking up of names and counting of noses along somewhere after midnight last night. The Yaarab workers did not quit talking Atlanta until the rest of creation out here had gone to bed. Along about daylight Forrest Adair figured that Atlanta had it on Memphis by about two to one. Maybe it is more than that, but two to one looks good enough anyway.

Memphis is putting up the gamest sort of fight. The Tennessee city has a big bunch of rooters here and the town has been flooded with literature. However, Atlanta has been right there with the literature, and in the matter of pure unadulterated talk and hard work the Georgia city has made Memphis hard to locate.

Claude Hutcheson have been Potentate Adair's right hand men in the fight for Atlanta, and when the credit is slid up and passed around, likewise the glory, they will come in for a large share of both, along with Mr. Adair.

Mr. Adair expressed himself to me to-day as particularly gratified with the help extended the Atlanta movement by the Hearst newspapers.

"I hear from Mr. Hearst's personal appeals and his newspapers' work for next year's big meeting at all turns. His publications, especially in the West, have helped tremendously in bringing support to Atlanta. If Atlanta wins, as I expect, we will owe much to Mr. Hearst."

In the hotel lobbies one sees Atlanta newspapers everywhere. One hears Atlanta talk everywhere. The great 12 hours' hustle Atlanta made to raise that entertainment fund of nearly $100,000 is talked of by everybody. Whenever I buttonhole a Shriner and ask him how about that Imperial Council meeting next year, and I have done that about 100 times since I landed here, I never get a reply that does not make some reference to that great financial stunt. The impression seems to be that a town capable of doing that is capable of doing anything, no matter how big.

"Don't Worry, Atlanta."

In the matter of taking care of the Imperial Council next year, I should say to Atlanta, "Don't worry." Whatever this town of Dallas can do footloose and free, Atlanta can do with one hand tied behind her back and a hobble skirt draped around her ankles. Not that Dallas is not a great little town, either, for it is, but still it is not Atlanta. Dallas simply is bulging with Shriners. It is packed and jammed and it is acting handsomely toward the visitors.

"The city is profusely and beautifully decorated. Free automobiles stand around and invite fez wearers to get in and ride to their hearts' content, which many of them do. The hotels and boarding houses are playing fair, and there is no gouging.

"For its size, Dallas is a wonder. It, however, is only about one-half the size of Atlanta. If Dallas can entertain 25,000 visitors—and it is entertaining approximately that many to-day—then Atlanta can handle 50,000 and never mind it or find it the least uncomfortable.

"Somehow, too, the Dallas newspapers seem to feel and hope that Atlanta will win out in its fight, and the news they print carries a pro-Atlanta color.

"The Imperial Council is holding its first session to-day. Yesterday was given over to handshaking, Shrineresque kidding, merrymaking and getting things under way. All one hears as one walks along the streets of Dallas to-day is "Morning, Silas." That's the greeting, and everybody hands it to you, whether he ever saw you before or not. It's the same friendly, happy, good-natured greeting that the Elks' "Hello, Bill!" is.

"The voting on next year's meeting place will be held some time during Wednesday's session. The big parade, one of the annual events people come hundreds of miles to see, occurs to-night, and Dallas has fixed her streets for the glittering spectacle in such wise that they will be as bright as day when the parade is passing.

"To-day's session of the Imperial Council began at 9 o'clock, but its proceedings were secret in the main. To-morrow's session will be the one to tell the big story.

East Aids Gate City.

One most gratifying thing about Atlanta's big fight for the Imperial Council next year is the way Shriners from all over the East and Southeast are rallying to her support. There is not a member of the imperial organization from a State that touches Georgia, except Tennessee, that is not for Atlanta. Whatever little jealousies there may be or may have been between Atlanta and other cities of the South, they are all for Atlanta in the movement to make Atlanta the next year's meeting place, and it is more than half way suspected that Memphis will swing into line before the ballot is spread and make it unanimous for the Gate City of the South.

"The Shriners want to go to Atlanta and they are going," The Dallas Times-Herald quotes Forrest Adair as saying. "Many of them have already visited the Georgia city and have seen for themselves that we have the hotels. Every temple knows that we have the money for the entertainment, too. You just can't get away from the fact that Atlanta pledged $75,000 in less than one day. If it will take more than $75,000 the amount needed will be there. The Shriners will have everything they want and more than they can ask when they go to Atlanta."

Atlantans All Optimistic.

This feeling of optimism is reflected in every Atlanta visitor in Dallas to-day. The magnificent campaign the Gate City has made for next year's meeting is destined to win out, or Adair and his men are the worst fooled lot that ever were, and the betting is 1,000 to 1 that they have not been fooled for a minute.

And don't forget Mrs. Shriner and the Misses Shriner are here in all their freshness and loveliness—5,000 or so of them. Believe me, they are on hand and everybody notices them and approves of their presence. A prettier lot of girls I never saw than these Texas specimens. Southern beauty is more or less running riot in Dallas to-day.

Gets Proposal by Phone at Breakfast And Weds by 9 A. M.

To arise heartfree, to receive a proposal before breakfast over the telephone and to be married by 9 o'clock—that's what happened to Miss Emma Wofford, 26 Alaska Avenue, Copenhill, Tuesday morning.

Dr. Smith and his bride long had been friends, but the subject of matrimony had never come up. When the physician came to Atlanta Monday on a business trip he called Miss Wofford over the telephone and after a few minutes' conversation, asked her if she would marry him.

Mrs. Smith formerly was an employee in the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company's Atlanta office.

Advertising Agents Honor Massengale

St. Elmo Massengale, head of the Massengale Advertising Agency and one of the best known publicity men in the country, was to-day elected director at a meeting in Chicago of general advertising agents from throughout the country. Plans were perfected for forming a permanent organization.

Mr. Massengale probably will make arrangements to open a branch office of the Massengale Advertising Agency in Chicago. This step is made necessary by the rapid growth of the agency which handles some of the largest advertising accounts in the United States.

Smith Reported in Custody at El Paso

Report that J. Wylie Smith, formerly head of the Commercial Loan and Discount Company, of Atlanta, is being held at El Paso, Tex., for return to this city to answer forgery charges, reached here to-day.

A dispatch from Austin, Tex., telling of the arrest, stated Governor Colquitt already had honored a requisition for the extradition of Smith and that T. H. Hamilton, the agent of the Fulton County, Georgia, authorities, was en route to El Paso to take charge of the prisoner.

Smith departed suddenly from Atlanta two years ago, leaving the affairs of the Commercial company in a chaotic condition. It is alleged that he secured large sums of money from clients of the organization.

Reports of his capture were denied in El Paso.

Flies Over Alps, and Lives to Tell Story

Special Cable to The American.

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, May 13. Aviator Rider, using a monoplane, flew over the Alps to-day. It took two hours to fly 50 miles. This was the second successful flight made over the Alps.

Rider left Berne in a high wind and landed at Sion. He attained a height of 10,560 feet, and was so cold when he dscended he had to be lifted from his machine.

Chavez, a Peruvian aviator, the first to fly over the Alps, fell at the conclusion of his flight and succumbed to his injuries.

clared her belief in her son's entire innocence. She has been greatly afcted by the shadow which is hovering over her son's life, but had said nothing of his plight to her neighbors until Monday, as she had been hoping against hope that he would be liberated by the Coroner's jury.

Mother Thinks He Is Innocent.

"My son is entirely innocent," she is quoted as saying. "But it is a terrible thing that even the suspicion should fall on him. I have every confidence that he will be proved guiltless of the terrible crime.

"He is suspected merely because he was the last one who is known to have seen her on the day she was killed. I know it will be shown that he had no knowledge of who put the girl to death."

Mrs. Frank has not seen her son since nearly three years ago when she and her husband came to Atlanta to attend the marriage of young Frank to the daughter of Emil Selig. It is understood that she is planning to return to Atlanta to be with Frank in the event that he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

She always has been proud of her son and happy at his rapid rise in the business world. Although only 29 years old he has been the superintendent in charge of the National Pencil Company's plant for several years. Before coming to Atlanta about five years ago he was with the National Meter Company, of Brooklyn. He is a Cornell graduate.

Burns Leaves New York.

The arrival of William J. Burns is expected in New York Tuesday afternoon. As announced in The Georgian Monday the great detective has been engaged to work personally upon the Phagan mystery. He is expected to come here at the solicitation of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who is representing the friends and relatives of the slain girl.

Colonel Felder interviewed Raymond Burns, son of the famous detective, in New York, and a cable was at once dispatched to England, where Burns had been looking for J. Wilberforce Martin, the wealthy Memphian whose mysterious disappearance stirred two continents. Burns quickly found that Martin was safe and unharmed and withdrew from the case. The detective will be in Atlanta Thursday on his way to Macon, where he has been invited to speak before the Georgia State Bankers' Association.

Chief of Detectives Lanford just smiles when Solicitor Dorsey's "mysterious sleuth" is mentioned. Mr. Dorsey announced several days ago that he had the best detective in the world on the job.

Who Is "Mysterious Sleuth?"

"The sleuth is either Detective John Starnes or Patrick Campbell," said Chief Lanford. "Both of these men are attached to the local staff and are working under the solicitor."

The solicitor continued to deny that the man was a local detective.

"I intend to withhold his name until the proper time," he said. "He is out of the city at present working on several new phases of the Phagan case. Upon his return I may be able to give out some startling information."

Of the many prisoners confined in the Tower, Leo M. Frank stands far above them all as the central figure in the public eye while the exhaustive investigation into the death of Mary Phagan continues.

Hundreds of curious persons apply daily at the prison in a futile effort to see the man now being held in the Phagan mystery. The jailers are beset with thousands of questions pertaining to his life during the two weeks that he has spent behind the bars.

Only Frank's attorney, his immediate relatives and a few friends have been permitted to see him. The man on other occasions has refused point blank to be interviewed or questioned. He has maintained an unbroken silence on the accusations made against him by the State.

Cheerful With Friends.

To his friends, however, Frank presents an amazingly bright countenance. Frequently his laughter is heard ringing through the dismal corridors of the Tower. Despite his cheery disposition, however, he has grown pale under his confinement.

Arises at 7 o'clock each morning; shaves with a safety razor brought him by a jailer and dresses for breakfast. Morning meal is brought to him at 7:30 and he partakes of it from a low bench in lieu of a table. Frank's meals are all prepared at his home and sent to the Tower. He is permitted to have any food that he may desire. So far, the prison life has not affected his appetite, which is one of a healthy man.

Reads Papers Carefully.

After breakfast Frank is handed the morning papers, which he peruses carefully, especially with reference to his own case. Despite what the printed pages may contain about him, though, the prisoner has never been known to comment on the newspaper articles.

Frank is a great reader. As the single electric lamp in the corridor does not furnish sufficient light to read by in the cells adjacent, the prisoner has secured a candle and under its flickering flame reads magazines and other periodicals.

Friends of the prisoner begin to arrive about 9 o'clock. He converses with them through the bars. At 2 o'clock he is served with dinner. During the afternoon Frank receives more of his friends and whiles away the idle hours in reading.

Wife Embraces Him.

When his wife called for the first time since his confinement Sunday afternoon, Frank was allowed to receive her in the "consultation room." The meeting between the husband and wife was affecting.

Tearfully Mrs. Frank clasped her arms about her husband's neck and kissed him as they met. Following the visit, which was of an hour's duration, Frank was returned to his cell.

The prisoner is served with supper at 6:30 o'clock and retires at about 11 o'clock. He sleeps on a regulation prison cot.

Mother Thinks Police Are Doing Their Best.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of little 14-year-old Mary Phagan, prostrated with grief for sixteen days following the tragic slaying of her child, took up her household duties Tuesday for the first time, resigned to the calamity that has befallen her home, and relying on the law to avenge the death of her child.

"It was such a beautiful morning," said Mrs. Coleman to a Georgian reporter, "and I have been able to rest now for three nights, so I felt like doing my work again. My house has been in such a turmoil since this dreadful tragedy. I feel I am helpless and have resigned myself to the sad lot that has befallen us. All we can do is wait, and waiting is a hard task.

No Complaint of Police.

"Don't misunderstand me. I am not complaining about what the officers are doing. It is far better to go slow and be sure that we are doing right than to hurry and make a mistake. I believe that the police and the solicitor are doing everything they can to find the guilty man. They ought to do it; such a crime ought to be punished. But I do not want them to make a mistake.

"I heard that feeling was very strong last week, but I am glad that no hasty action was taken. It might have been all wrong, and I think I would have been grieved as much as anybody.

"We have made many inquiries among our friends and acquaintances and have not found one who saw Mary after 12 o'clock Saturday, when she went to the factory to get her pay. So much seems to depend on that point, and if anyone did see her, he certainly ought to tell about it. It does look like if Mary were on the streets Saturday afternoon, as many friends as we have, some of them would have seen her. We do not believe she ever left the factory.

Has Read No Reports.

Mrs. Coleman, since her nervous collapse, has not been allowed to read the newspapers, her husband realizing the seriousness of her condition. Since last Wednesday she has had absolute quiet, and Tuesday she resumed her duties with the hope, as she expressed it, "to make home like it used to be, if possible." She declared that only the strength and vigor that has always been hers enabled her to withstand the blow that had befallen her.

"Mary and I were very much alike," she said, "strong and healthy. Mary would have been 14 years old on June 1, but she was very large and robust for her age. She often passed for 16. Her birthday is nearly here, but it will be so different this year."

Hearse Drivers War On Sunday Funerals

NEW YORK, May 13.—The hearse and carriage drivers of Brooklyn have declared that Sunday weddings and funerals must go. In their campaign to do away with the burial of persons and weddings on Sunday they are trying to enlist the services of the clergy.

As to weddings, they are a unit for Cupid taking a day off, but they are willing to bury on Sunday persons dying of contagious diseases.

GAME WARDEN AND DEPUTY ON WAY TO MILLTOWN POND

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—Accompanied by his son, W. C. Westcott, Deputy Game Warden Charles B. Westcott leaves to-night for Milltown to take charge of the fish situation there. He is acting under instructions from State Game and Fish Commissioner Jesse E. Mercer, who will meet Westcott in Milltown Thursday and map out a plan of campaign.

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss Alien Law; Johnson Will Sign

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Japanese situation was discussed for the greater part of two hours at the meeting of the President with his Cabinet, but at the conclusion of the conference absolute silence was maintained regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—A reply by Governor Johnson to the message of Secretary of State Bryan, advising against hasty action in the California anti-alien law legislation was expected to-day. The Governor announced that he would not discuss the subject until he had replied to Secretary Bryan, which likely would be to-day.

He intimated that he would sign the Webb anti-alien land bill, but that he would delay action out of respect to President Wilson's wishes.

In his farewell message to the Legislature Governor Johnson said:

"I would like to have mentioned the land bill with the others that I consider worthy accomplishments in legislation this season, but I refrained from so doing because it would not be courteous to say anything in advance of my reply to Mr. Bryan's telegram."

PHOENIX, ARIZ., May 13.—A slight amendment by the Senate to the House anti-alien land bill makes it necessary for the measure to be passed on by a conference between the two houses before it is sent to the Governor. It was predicted the conference would agree on the bill this afternoon. The Governor's attitude is not known, although his closest friends say he will sign it.

Four hundred Japanese residents of the State will appeal to the Governor to veto the bill.

FEARS TO PUNISH RIVAL HE SAYS STOLE BRIDE

An angry husband waited for three hours at the Terminal Station Tuesday morning determined to wreak vengeance upon the man who, he said, had enticed his 17-year-old bride of four months from his home and gone with her to Macon, Ga., her former home. Then he notified the police and now awaits developments.

The husband is Edward M. Brown, of 20 Hayden Street. He appeared at the station at 7:50 o'clock, when a train is due into Atlanta from Macon, but the man he claimed he was after, J. G. Reeves, a real estate operator, did not appear. Brown waited. About 10 o'clock Reeves strode into the station from the train platforms.

Brown started toward Reeves and stopped before he reached him. Brown is a little man, and he surveyed the well-built real estate man dubiously. Then he returned to his seat.

Daunted by His Size.

"He's pretty big," he said. "I won't whip him; I'll have him arrested."

Brown asserts that Reeves has showered attentions upon his wife, Mrs. Amelia Brown, for the past three weeks, and yesterday afternoon, he claims, he induced her to leave her husband and go to Macon. Brown declares that Reeves met Mrs. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Sally Bryant, at the station and purchased their tickets to Macon, buying one for himself also.

"We were married in Macon four months ago," said Brown, "and until this Reeves appeared on the scene we were happy. About three weeks ago I decided to buy a lot and this man was sent to sell it to me. He came out to the house to see me about it, and after that he kept coming. I hurried the purchase of the lot and told my wife to keep away from Reeves.

Threatened To Go Home.

"Even after I had bought the lot he kept coming around and taking my wife out in an automobile. I told him to keep away, and he began sneaking around when I wasn't at home. When I came home yesterday afternoon my wife said she was going home with her mother, and said that if I wouldn't give her any money she had a friend who would.

"I went downtown on some business last night, and when I got home I was told that my wife had gone. A girl who lives in the house said she had gone to the station with my wife and her mother, and that Reeves had met them there. Reeves took my wife's grips, the girl told me, and went to the train with them.

She said she saw him get on the train, and he didn't get off. I hurried to the station to stop them, but the train had gone. Then I went to the police station, and they told me to get a gun and shoot Reeves.

Claims Former Marriage.

"I'm going to have Reeves and my wife arrested, and I'm going to get a divorce. I learned yesterday I'm not the only husband she has. She told me when we were married she had been married before, but said her other husband was dead. I found out he is not dead."

Miss Thelma Bigby, the girl who accompanied Mrs. Brown to the Terminal Station, corroborated Brown's story Tuesday morning.

"Reeves met Mrs. Brown at the corner of Luckie and Harris Streets late yesterday afternoon, before Mr. Brown got home," she said. "They talked a long time, and then Mrs. Brown came in and had a talk with her mother. Then she asked us to tell her husband when he came home that she had gone to her old home with her mother and was not coming back.

Reeves Didn't Return.

"I went to the station with her, and Mr. Reeves met them there. He took their grips and told her not to worry. 'I'll fix everything so we can be together in a few days,' I heard him say.

"Mr. Reeves went to the train with them, telling me he would return in a minute. I waited almost half an hour after the train had gone, and he didn't come back."

SENATORS CLASH ON TARIFF; BILL IN BALANCE

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The fate of the Underwood tariff bill in the Senate was in the balance to-day while the Republicans and Democrats debated on the Penrose motion to instruct the Senate Finance Committee to hold open hearings on the measure. The clash also tended to show the real strength of the supporters of the administration measure.

It is on the sugar and wool schedules that the fight will come, and Democratic leaders anxiously watched the debate to see how far the defection started by Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana had influenced Senators from the sugar and wool-producing States.

It already had been agreed to refer the Underwood bill to the Finance Committee without public hearings when that measure was brought from the House Friday. Senator Simmons, chrairman of the committee, made a motion to this effect, followed immediately by a motion by Senator Penrose for public hearings.

So critical was the situation raised by the Penrose motion that a call was issued for every Democratic Senator to be in his seat. The Republicans also marshaled their entire strength to fight for open hearings.

LaFollette to Draft A New Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator LaFollette will not confine his tariff-making efforts to the wool and cotton schedules. He intends to draft practically a complete bill. This measure will be offered in the Senate, probably as a substitute for the Underwood bill. He regards many of the Democratic rates as too low.

BIBB GRAND JURY PROBES VICE DISTRICT IN MACON

MACON, GA., May 13.—The Grand Jury is this week investigating the restricted district, as the result of a complaint made by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, former president of Wesleyan College. On account of the spreading of the district, a negro church was forced to abandon its place of worship, and this fact aroused the ire of the white clergyman, who appealed to the Grand Jury for assistance.

ATLANTA CALLED MODEL CITY BY PRESBYTERIAN THOUSANDS

ALL TRAINS BEAR DELEGATES

With the beginning of the influx of thousands of delegates and visitors to the Presbyterian Assembly which opens here Wednesday, Atlanta already is ringing with their praises as the cleanest city in the world—both morally and physically.

Experts from other and larger cities, who inspected the town Monday, have declared Atlanta is an object lesson to other cities of the nation in what can be done.

"The fact that such a large city as this could so effectively remove the scars from its social side is a great proof of the fact that so-called evil necessities are anything but necessary," declared the Rev. Charles Scanlon, of Pittsburg, the noted temperance lecturer, who arrived Monday.

While few delegates were expected to arrived before Wednesday, early trains Tuesday brought in their quota and several hundred are expected to come in during the day.

From now until Thursday afternoon it is doubtful if any train entering Atlanta will be minus a corps of ministers and elders coming to Atlanta to participate in the convention. Several special trains are scheduled to arrive Wednesday morning. There will be two from New York, one from Chicago, one from St. Louis bringing in the Western delegates, one from Ohio and one from Philadelphia. These are the special trains of which the local committee has received notice. It is possible there will be others.

Registration Bureau Opens.

Tuesday morning found headquarters on the fifth floor of the Empire Building opening with as busy a rush as characterized the place Monday. Rev. Jere Moore, who is secretary of the local convention committee, has been the busiest man in Atlanta for the past week and is right up to his ears in work now. Assisting him are a large number of ministers and business men, grinding away in the effort to make everything run smoothly. In the list are a number of men of heavy business interests who have laid aside everything in the entertainment of the mammoth joint convention.

Rev. Mr. Scanlon, who will be one of the principal speakers at the great temperance service Sunday night in Wesley Memorial chapel, is much interested in Atlanta, especially in connection with the vice crusade campaign which Chief of Police Beavers has waged,

"Of course, I know nothing personally of what Atlanta has done in cleaning up the city, but I have heard much of it," he said to a Georgian reporter. "I suppose the vice crusade in Atlanta has attracted more attention than any single city campaign ever carried on in this country, and there has been much discussion of it. When a city like Atlanta decides to make itself good and succeeds in doing so, it is indeed an object lesson to every other city in the world, for certainly what has been done here can be done elsewhere."

Another prominent arrival was Rev. T. P. Junkin, president of the Daniel Baker College, of Brownwood, Texas. "Well, I'm with you and glad to be here, too," was his greeting as he introduced himself to Rev. Jere Moore. "The joint assembly here has been all the talk among Presbyterians down my way, and I suppose this mammoth meeting will be talked of for many years to come."

Missionary Meeting Sunday.

In addition to the mammoth temperance meeting to be held Sunday night, there will be a Sunday school missionary meeting Sunday afternoon in the Central Presbyterian Church. It will be one of the most interesting features of the convention.

The meeting will be unique in that its object is somewhat different from that of the ordinary missionary meeting. It will be an actual demonstration of platform missionary instruction in the Sunday school. Dr. A. L. Phillips, general superintendent of the Department of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will preside at this meeting.

There will be a brief address on "The Value of Missionary Education in the Sunday School," by the Rev. Charles R. Watson, of Philadelphia. This will be followed by a demonstration of "A Missionary Opening Exercise" for the Sunday school, entitled "America's Welcome." The theme of this address will be immigration, and it will be presented by a number of young people from the Central Presbyterian.

Often features of the work will be the demonstration of how, in five minutes or less, to present to a Sunday school a missionary book so as to insure its being read. There also will be instructions as to how to make a telling misionary speech and how to present a missionary map talk effectively.

Special Music Feature.

Among other prominent workers who will participate in this meeting are Mrs. D. E. Waid, New York; George Innes, Philadelphia, and the Rev. A. W. Halsey, New York. There will be a large chorus and special music under the direction of Professor Joseph MacLean, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Progress of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which section of the church includes a majority of the Presbyterian churches in the South, is interesting.

Statistics to be read in the assemblies show the number of ruling elders in the church to be 10,977; the number of deacons, 10,537; the number added to the church during the year on examination, 14,103; the number added on certificate, 12,077; the total number of communicants, 292,845. During the year 6,021 adults and 4,970 infants were baptized. The total Sunday school enrollment was 245,495.

Huge Sums Contributed.

The amount contributed last year to foreign missions was $501,412; to home missions, $125,787; to Christian education and ministerial relief, $97,143; to Sunday school extension and publication, $25,499; to Bible cause, $8,483; to orphans' home, $86,125; to pastors' salaries, $1,320,059; to congregational expense, $1,493,234; to miscellaneous, $223,673, making a total of $4,293,044 contributed to all causes.

The vote of the presbyteries on the proposed amendments in the Confession of Faith and the Book of Church Order, handed down by the assembly of 1912, has been awaited with special interest, as every amendment must receive the approval of three-fourths of the presbyteries before the assembly can authorize the same.

With reference to the "elect infant clause" in the Confession of Faith, reports from the presbyteries to be presented to the assembly will show that 22 presbyteries voted against the amendment, making the three-fourths vote in favor of the same impossible. It will be necessary, therefore, for the assembly in Atlanta to consider overtures to omit the paragraph entirely from the Confession of Faith.

HAWKINSVILLE ELKS VOTE TO ABOLISH CLUB LOCKER

HAWKINSVILLE, GA., May 13.—The Elks voted last night to discontinue their locker adjunct and after June 15 no more liquors or beers will be dispensed in the club rooms. Public sentiment was averse to a locker club and the churches looked with displeasure upon their members affiliating with any fraternity or club maintaining a locker. The Elks voluntarily voted to discontinue it.

BANKERS' MEETING HERE UP TO HOTELS

There Will Be No Difficulty in Raising Funds to Entertain, Says Joseph McCord.

"Whether Atlanta gets the 1914 convention of the American Bankers' Association depends on two things—hotel accommodations and the guarantee of a satisfactory entertainment fund. The first is under consideration; the second is assured."

J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank, thus sums up the situation. With Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank, Mr. Ottley delivered Atlanta's invitation to the 1914 convention when the executive council met at Briarcliff, N. Y., last week.

"Proper accommodation of delegates and guests demands 2,000 hotel rooms. Atlanta has more than this," said Mr. Ottley. "The question is whether it is possible for hotel men to co-operate in setting aside that number of rooms. The Convention Bureau will discuss this with hotel men when its heads return from the Shriners' convention.

"If the Convention Bureau and the hotel men make a satisfactory reply, the information will be forwarded to the national secretary. He then will make a visit to Atlanta and will look over the situation.

"Detroit last year spent $40,000 entertaining the bankers. Boston this year has underwritten $100,000 for the same purpose. But the question of raising funds in Atlanta is not bothering us. If we can get the hotel rooms we can get the money."

MILITANT CHIEF, ILL, AVOIDS TRIAL

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—When the trial of the leaders of the militant suffragettes arrested in the police raid on the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, was resumed to-day in Bow Street Court, Mrs. Flora Drummond, the "General," was not present.

The court was informed that Mrs. Drummond is still in a serious condition at a nursing home, where she was taken after collapsing in court last week.

Mrs. Drummond, who went upon a hunger strike after her arrest, has refused to eat in the nursing home. Her bail was extended for two months.

Testimony was adduced to show that the Women's Social and Political Union offered medals and other prizes for the militants who were able to accomplish the most destruction of property and think up new new forms of violence. Those who underwent punishment also were rewarded.

Militants Smash Shop Windows Worth $5,000.

NORWICH, ENG., May 13.—Vandal suffragettes smashed $5,000 worth of plateglass in dry goods store windows here to-day before they were driven from the streets by policemen.

The women opened an organized campaign, going through the streets armed with hammers and missiles with which they smashed the windows.

Differences of Opinion on Social Service May Serve to Keep Presbyterians Apart.

adopted by most of the leading denominations in this country, some of them having accepted it long before the platform of the Federal Council had been drawn up.

The Federal Council's platform is, therefore, practically the expression of the Protestant forces of this country, with regard to social service.

As a matter of fact, most of the criticism that has been directed against the social service platform of the Federal Council is based upon the assumption that these are the only principles for which the council is contending, but the council spoke just as strongly with regard to "evangelism," "foreign missions," "temperance," "Sabbath observance," "the family and the home" and upon kindred subjects as it did upon social service.

At its last meeting in Chicago a strong evangelistic commission was appointed, which will no doubt in time be just as influential as the social service commission of the council. It simply happened that the men who were interested in social service became immediately active when they were appointed, so that they have got a better start than some of the other commissions.

Favored by Atlantans.

The report of the social service commission submitted at the Chicago meeting indicates that the men who framed it are warmly sympathetic toward evangelistic work and the evangelistic spirit. Following are some extracts from this much-maligned report:

"The church is not turning aside from her task, neither is she creating new forces; still further than this, we are happily discovering that the conservation of the evangelistic note is an essential to an effective social gospel, and are no longer disposed to rend asunder that which Christ has joined together.

"We are not to forget that we can have no kingdom of heaven on earth until our economic programs are fashioned in the light of spiritual ideals and with spiritual ends in view, and we are to remember that the world will come together in the consummation of sympathy, tenderness and brotherhood only when all men are brought to sit together at the feet of Christ."

It is impossible to tell how strongly developed is the feeling that the Southern Assembly should sever its connection with the Federal Council, but the men who have been fighting in Atlanta for the eradication of the social evil are strongly in favor of having the Southern Assembly retain its relationship to this interdenominational organization. This feeling also characterizes the attitude of the members of the Presbytery of Atlanta.

County Will Build A Home for Girls

Fulton County will erect a home for wayward girls and incorrigible women, the work to begin at once and the home to be completed within the year.

This announcement was made Tuesday following a conference between a committee from the County Commission and a committee from the trustees of the Harriet Hawkes Home. The latter agreed to deed to the county a 50-acre tract of land on Stewart Avenue, near Mt. Zion Church, and a fund of approximately $12,000 pledged for the erection of an institution.

The agreement reached Tuesday is the result of several conferences. Fulton County will have absolute title to the property and will be in complete control. It will be responsible for the home's maintenance. As a concession for the Harriet Hawkes donations, the home will bear this name. Several members of the former trustees will constitute an advisory board for the institution.

Following Tuesday's conference it was announced that work would begin immediately. A meeting of the Board of County Commissioners is expected to ratify the action of the committee, which comprises three members of the board—Shelby Smith, C. L. Anderson and Tull C. Waters. Henry Y. McCord represented the Harriet Hawkes trustees.

Just when you thought that The Georgian's "Man of Mystery," with the three ties ranging down his shirt front, had vanished as unaccountably as he first made his appearance, presto, up he bobs!

Returning, he explained that his appearance, disappearances and reappearances all are for the same purpose—that of exciting your interest and curiosity.

The picture of the "Man of Mystery" was published three days in The Georgian without any explanation or comment. There was not even a line to say whether he was a foreign nobleman or the latest suspect in some daring crime.

After the office of The Georgian had been deluged with letters asking the identity of the strange personage came the explanation. It was simply this:

The Georgian is about to publish a great serial story. It may be said with assurance that it is the most interesting story Atlantans have read in years. This picture typifies the story. The first instalment will appear in next Monday's Georgian.

What should be the title, judging solely from the picture? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title has already been selected. It is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be considered in awarding the prizes.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor," The Georgian, Atlanta. The contest closes Sunday night. No answers posted after midnight, May 18, will be considered.

Decatur and Atlanta

The corporate limits of Atlanta and Decatur are just two miles apart.

The center of Decatur is connected with the center of Atlanta by two street car lines, the Georgia railroad and by three public roads.

East Lake Drive, through Druid Hills to Oakhurst, thence by DeKalb avenue to Decatur, is at present an almost perfect automobile route from Decatur to Atlanta.

The straight shoot from Decatur to Atlanta is now DeKalb avenue, which eastward from Mayson avenue is now being paved with vitrified brick.

Ponce DeLeon avenue is being rapidly extended to the Court House at Decatur. A few months more of good weather will see the work completed.

By street car the distance from the center of Atlanta to the center of Decatur is 30 minutes; by the Georgia railroad the distance is about 10 minutes.

Hundreds of telephones, both Bell and Atlanta, connect Atlanta with Decatur, and residents of Decatur have exactly the same use of these two telephone systems as the citizens of Atlanta.

The truth of the matter is, a resident of Decatur on the average is just as closely in touch with the business in Atlanta as the residents of the best residence sections of the city of Atlanta.

Think of these things, and find out for yourself how much more cheaply you can build a home in Decatur than in Atlanta.

FACTORY EXPENSE IN U. S. CHEAPEST

Other Nations, Though, Pay Lower Wages and Smaller Prices, Commerce Report Says.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That United States industries are carried on at a higher degree of efficiency than those of other nations is indicated by a report issued by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to-day.

The report shows that in the United Kingdom one-sixth more power and two and one-half times as many wage-earners are required to produce a net output of equal value.

In fifteen of the seventeen industries compared, the outlay for wages is higher in England than here for an equal output, the difference ranging from 8 per cent for linen, jute and hemp to 30 per cent for silks.

Prices in the United States are higher, however.

As to tariffs, the report states that German duties are not so high as generally supposed, but that this country is discriminated against in instances.

'U. S. Makes Me Sick' Says Departing Diva

NEW YORK, May 13.—America came in for a nice sizzling roast today at the hands of Marie Cavan, of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company, who sailed for Europe and may never, never come back.

"I would rather sing for $100 a week in Europe than $1,000 a week in America," said the diva. "America makes me sick."

It would seem that some "puritanical reformers" vexed the prima donna, for she gave them a left-handed uppercut for their efforts to 'reform the—of course—terribly immoral stage."

KOREAN SEES WAR CLOUDS IN EAST

WASHINGTON, May 13.—With a taste of republicanism, the Oriental peoples, particularly the Japanese, are beginning to grow restless and are exhibiting an inclination to throw off the old oligarchic rule, according to Seek Hun Kimm, president of the Korean Patriotic Association, in a statement published to-day.

The establishment of the Chinese republic has inspired the stirring of a new life, he says, and indicates that the situation in the Far East is delicate. Under the present order, the statement says, Japan wants complete control of Manchuria, Russia of Mongolia; Japan wants to preserve her alliance with England; Russia wants to keep England quiet, and therefore the last two understand each other as regards Persia and Thibet; Russia is aggressive and England stubborn. The result may be the dismemberment of China.

The commercial interests of Germany and the United States, says Seek Hun Kimm, demand the interest of those countries in the game. The United States holds the balance of power because England and this country are natural allies in the Far East, the statement says.

ARKANSAS PRISON BOARD ANSWERS GOV. FUTRELL

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., May 13.—In reply to Governor Futrell's open letter criticising certain actions of the new State Prison Board with regard to letting contracts, preparing vouchers, etc., members of the board have sent a pointed letter to the chief executive defending their actions in every particular and inviting the closest scrutiny." They declare that when they assumed office April 1, they found the old system of accounting in a chaotic condition. The Governor has the power of removal under the new law.

BEACHEY QUITS AIR REGRETS DARING

Noted Flyer Says He Feels That His Reckless Feats Led Others to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—With the announcement that he had quit the air and would never sail an aeroplane again, Lincoln Beachey to-day issued a statement in which he said he felt that he had committed murder. He blamed himself for the death of several birdmen, and said he could not be induced to enter an aeroplane again at "the point of a gun."

"There was only one thing that drew crowds to my exhibitions," said Beachey. "They wanted to see something happen. They predicted that I would be killed. They paid to see me die. They bet, the odds being greatly against my landing safely.

"In Chicago last September Horace Kearney's mother begged me not to teach him any more tricks. Kearney insisted on learning them all. Three months later he was dead. Welch's wife begged him to quit doing spirals. Welch replied 'Beachey does them.' Two weeks later he was killed when a wire snapped as he was doing a reverse spiral at Trenton, N. J. I felt I had murdered him. Some time ago I sent tickets to Mrs. Ely. She sent back the tickets, writing: 'Gene would be with me now if he had never seen you fly.'

"I have no fear that I would be killed, but I am in the grip of a great fear that I would make others kill themselves."

Jap Cherry Blossoms Disappoint American

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 13.—The cherry blossoms of Japan were disappointing to John Corbett, a Chicago contractor, who is in Berlin.

"We were in Japan in the cherry season," he said, "but all we saw were a few trees with a few small blossoms. California's cherry blossom show is far more beautiful."

Corbett was in Japan during the excitement over the California land law but he says that he was most courteously treated. The Japanese seemed to be anxious to make an impression for politeness.

Gambling Shown on Increase in France

PARIS, May 13.—The fallacy of the popular idea that gambling is on the decline in France is clearly shown by figures just issued on the revenue to the State from the tax on playing cards.

During 1912 this amounted to $587,898, an increase of $35,647 over 1911, and the largest amount realized since the imposition of the tax, which remained practically at the same figure between 1908 and 1910.

FACTORS BOOST PRICE OF ROSIN

First Move in New Selling Plan Is to Mark All Grades Except "M" at Higher Figures.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—That the prices obtaining on all grades of rosins are the lowest that will be quoted for many years to come, is the firm belief of those familiar with conditions centering about the naval stores markets and the industry in general.

The opening gun in the campaign for better prices was fired at the afternoon sale Thursday. K grade, and all grades below, were advanced on "asked" prices to the extent of 5 cents the barrel, while N and above were advanced 10 cents, with the exception of M, which was allowed to remain at quotations obtaining for several days.

Factors state that this is but the beginning of a gradual upward movement on all grades of rosins, which have ruled notoriously low in values for many months. In other words, the educational campaign now under way has for its purpose the establishment of equitable prices, and these will be slowly but surely advanced as may be deemed necessary by the factors.

Trading in large lots is a daily feature on the exchange, whereas for a month previously the market was practically dead. The creditors' committee of the American has at last secured money with which to carry on the business of that concern, but it has been announced that it will not again actively enter the market, and that its affairs will be wound up as rapidly as possible.

Naval stores receipts are increasing in volume. It is said that the stability of the market has induced many producers to abandon their intention of converting their orchards into other channels. The new crop is now beginning to show up.

GIRL'S MOTHER CALLS ELOPER BIGAMIST

Amazing marital complications have come to light with the arrest early Tuesday morning of J. L. Wimbish, 24 years old, of 777 Ashby Street, at the request of the mother of Miss Ella Kate Mann, 18 years old, of East Point. Mrs. Mann charges Wimbish with having committed a bigamous marriage with her daughter.

Wimbish eloped with Miss Mann last December. Since then a vain, country-wide search has been made by relatives of the girl. Not until Wimbish reappeared in Atlanta were the police called. Then Wimbish was arrested and confronted by Mrs. Mann, who demanded the whereabouts of her daughter. Wimbish refused to tell, but stated he knew where she was and would bring her to Atlanta as soon as he could disentangle himself from the meshes of the law.

Wimbish Denies Bigamy Charge.

While Wimbish denies he is married to Miss Mann, that charge has been placed against him by Mrs. Mann, who avers he has a wife in Birmingham. It was because of that fact which she declares Wimbish admitted to her last December, that she objected to his attentions to her daughter.

Wimbish Tuesday morning admitted again he had been married before he met Miss Mann. He declared, though, he had been separated from his wife two years, and, while they had never been divorced to his knowledge, she had remarried.

"I love Ella," said Wimbish, "and I'll marry her as soon as I can determine my marital status with my former wife."

"My former wife was Ola May Jones, of Atlanta. In 1909 I fell in love with her. Her parents objected to the marriage, so we eloped. Her folks had me arrested. Then I married her and we left the city, but separated May 13, 1909. She went to Birmingham and married again, I hear. Whether she got a divorce or not I don't know. I was never served with any papers.

Got in Trouble Again.

"Later I got into trouble with another girl and was again arrested. When released I came back to Atlanta and met Miss Mann. When I told Mrs. Mann I had a wife in Birmingham; that we had separated and I guessed were divorced by that time, she told me not to come about her daughter again.

"To do this was impossible. I loved Ella and she loved me. We met secretly and planned the elopement. I told her we would get married just as soon as I could find out how I stood with my wife; that I thought we were divorced.

Arrested on Return.

"Ella and I left Atlanta December 14, 1912. We traveled all around the State, but did not go outside of the Georgia boundaries. Later I decided to come back to Atlanta and see if I could not get work to support us until things could be straightened out. I had no sooner set foot in this city than I was arrested."

Wimbish says Miss Mann is happy and living in a nearby town, though not as his wife. According to G. N. Bullock, the policeman who took Wimbish into custody, the prisoner stated at first he had three wives. Wimbish denies this.

EARL PARKER, who was stolen by women in an auto. His father believes the mother has hidden the boy.

Lays Kidnaping of Son to Two Women

Telegrams sent to Birmingham and other cities by the police at the instance of J. M. Parker, 102 Jett Street, whose 3-year-old son, Earl, was mysteriously kidnaped in an automobile a few days ago, so far have failed to bring any clew as to the whereabouts of the missing boy.

Parker is confident that one of the two women in the auto was his wife, from whom he is seeking a divorce. He believes she is hiding the boy to prevent his being taken from her by the courts. Mrs. Parker has been living in Birmingham, and Parker is satisfied the boy is in that city or in some nearby town.

Made Millionaires But Left Only $363

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—The inventory of the estate of Professor Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, one of America's foremost men of science, and a man who had made many men millionaires, shows that he left property worth approximately $363.

Lowe at one time was many times a millionaire. He lost his fortune in building the Mount Lowe Observatory and incline railroad, which he hoped would enable himself and other astronomers to learn some new truth among the maze of suns, moons and planets.

Among his inventions are those of artificial illuminating gas by the "water gas" method now used in all commercial gas plants of the world. The artificial ice invention is believed to rank second. He is also credited with having been the pioneer dirgible balloon man.

California Cotton Tests Successful

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The experiment of growing Durango cotton in the Imperial Valley of California is proving successful, according to reports made by Argyle McLachlan, assistant in crop acclimatization, to the Department of Agriculture.

Durango cotton is a long staple upland variety of cotton apparently well adapted to conditions in California and Arizona. The experiments are in their third year.

WILSON TO URGE MONEY REFORM

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An administration-made currency bill will be the fruit of the numerous conferences this week between Senate and House leaders, the President and Cabinet members.

Representative Underwood said today the currency bill soon will be whipped into fairly definite shape. The President and the Senate and House leaders plan to present a bill upon which a practical agreement has been reached and to designate it as an administration bill.

Carter Glass, chairman of the next House Banking and Currency Committee, desires a non-partisan bill, upon which both the Republicans and Democrats of the new Banking and Currency Committee may agree.

Currency Reformers Seek Views of Bankers.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator Owen announced to-day that the subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee would formally begin the compilation of questions to be submitted to bankers and economy experts this week. These will be drafted with the intention of learning the attitude of those concerned on currency reform legislation.

Senator Owen said the Democratic members of his committee were in favor of enacting currency legislation at the present session.

Another Great Liner Will Use Oil Fuel

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—More alterations are being made on the Olympic. She is being prepared to carry oil fuel between the inner and outer shells.

It is considered that the changes for this purpose will be more expensive than the installation of ordinary steam engines, as it will be necessary to place burners under the furnaces. However, if the installation proves to be a success a similar installation will be made on the Britannic, her sister ship.

Dr. Hinman for Rigid Dental Inspection

Declaring a great many diseases can be traced to defective teeth, Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, a leading Atlanta dentist, said he would recommend a rigid enforcement of dental inspection in public schools of the city when he spoke before the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Dr. Hinman quoted Dr. William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins University and now professor emeritus of Oxford University, England, in saying, "Mouth infections cause more injury to the human race than alcohol."

Goes to Europe to Buy a New Pet Dog

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Within forty-eight hours after "Trix," a pet Pomeranian of his daughter, Mrs. Bertram Townsend, broke its $1,000 neck by falling down an elevator shaft in the hotel and was buried at Atlantic City in a silver-handled rosewood casket, beneath a silken shroud, Mahlon W. Newton, owner of Green's Hotel, was on the ocean, bound for Switzerland to buy another toy dog.

By long-distance to the steamship office he engaged a reservation. The steamer sailed at noon. Mrs. Townsend received a wireless from her father.

"Don't worry about 'Trix.' Will have another Pom just as good," read the aerogram.

RESINOL CLEARS AWAY PIMPLES

And Blackheads. Restores Health to Unsightly Complexions.

Pimples and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clear, clear and velvety, and hair health and beauty usually follow the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive and complicated "beauty treatments" utterly fail.

The nearest drug store is sure to have Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Why not get some to-day? You can't begin too soon to get rid of those ugly, embarrassing complexion blemishes. The Resinol medication is so gentle, yet so effective, that it can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Doctors throughout the country have prescribed Resinol for eighteen years. You can test it free by writing to Dept. 20-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a generous trial.

PIANO MAKERS STRIKE ON EFFICIENCY SYSTEM

CHICAGO, May 13.—"The efficiency experts must go or we will not come back to work."

This was the ultimatum handed to Lyon & Healy, piano manufacturers, to-day following a walk out of 200 men, who declared that they were compelled to turn out twice as much work under the efficiency system and that the bonus paid them was not sufficient.

Foods That Bind Little Children

Start Them Off Right with a Good Laxative and Then Watch Their Diet.

MARJORIE DARLING

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Many of America's foremost families are never without Syrup Pepsin, because one can never tell when some member of the family may need it, and all can use it. Thousands indorse it, among them Mrs. M. E. Darling, R. F. D. No. 4, Belleview, Pa., who writes: "I certainly think Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin saved my baby's life. Marjorie is a bottle baby and could not get her food to digest, but I found by giving her a small dose of Syrup Pepsin when she had colic it always cured her." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being bought by those who already know its value, and it contains proportionately more. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin, as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-griping and free from injurious ingredients.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

"New Neckwear" in the sense that every piece is of this Spring, having arrived since February.

The Halved Prices are accounted for by the fact that some pieces are counter-tossed, or show signs of handling. Other pieces are the tag ends of quick-selling lines. A little bit of everything is represented:

Sunshine collars, coat and collar sets, guimpes, yokes, jabots, Dutch collars, etc. Variously in lawn, linen and lingeries; embroidery, lace and embroidery trimmed. White and colors. The price tickets will read:

19c; values to 50c
49c; values to $1.25

$4 Silk Shirt

Mannish silk shirts that fit as they should. Neat stripes on white grounds, attached flat collar, or detached turn-over collar. $2.98

(Second Floor.)

SILK PRICES Slashed to 49c

Former Prices up to $1.50, now

Snip! snip! Scissors have been working overtime the past two weeks. As a result, many lines have dwindled, color lines have become broken, price lots have been depleted. For one cause and another, then, we group the following silks to sell at 49c. Look them over, they tell of big savings:

$1.50 silk and wool crepes—silk warp, wool filling. Soft and crepey, drape delightfully. 44 in. wide. Gray, rose, tan, chasseur, violet.

85c to $1.25 silks—odd lots of fancy taffetas and messalines in various colors and combinations, 49c.
85c foulards—spot proof, not to hurt by rain drops. Neat patterns, allover and spaced designs. Blues, greys, rose, Copenhagen, brown. In the same lot are a few solid color messalines in odd shades, 49c.

P. S.—While this is the best item in the May Silk Sale, it is by no means the only good value. There are almost a score of others, including the most fashionable silks. Savings generally are a fourth to a half.

(Ready at 8:30. Silk Annex—Main Floor, Left)

Half-Price Sale of Ribbon Remnants

Because of the busy ribbon season, many short lengths have accumulated. So to-morrow we speed them out at halved prices. Just about any kind of ribbon you want is represented. Variously 1-2 to 10 inches wide.

Formerly 5c to $2 a yd.
Now at 3c to $1 a yd.

(Main Floor, Right)

Large $27.50 Rugs at $17.50

Choice of two sizes—the regulation 9x12 or the larger 12x15 ft. Scotch weave, firm, closely woven, deep pile, handsome patterns to harmonize with almost any color scheme.

Were $11.00, $25.00, $35.00, $50.00, $80.00.
Now $8.50, $17.50, $27.50, $35.00, $65.00.

(Rugs—Third Floor.)

1913 Spring sample line of the Royal Society Co.'s finished art pieces is here to sell at just half the usual prices.

As shown, there are centerpieces, scarfs, squares, pillow tops, baby dresses, towels, pincushions, combinations, night gowns and shirtwaists. Judge of the variety by the fact that in centerpieces alone there are 22, 25, 27 and 36-inch sizes. The materials are white and brown linens and white nainsooks for underwear and lingerie. Variously embroidered in French, eyelet and punch work, Roman cut-out work, the new tapestry stitch, etc.

Regular prices are $2, $3.00, $4, up to $18.
Now just half: Pay $1, $1.50, $2, up to $9.

Royal Society Package Goods: Half Price

In designs and materials much the same as above, but all unfinished. Each piece includes sufficient threads for working.

Usually 25c to $1.25. Sale prices, 13c to 63c.

(Main Floor, Center Aisle)

Good-Bye to All

WHAT WONDER IF BOYS LEAVE THE OLD FARM?

They're Tired of Sharing None of the Advantages, Says Secretary Houston.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—While not a practical farmer, Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston has given the subject of agriculture years of careful study. He stands for education of the farmers. He believes that they have been sorely neglected in that respect; that their advantages have been few as compared to those enjoyed by city dwellers.

"Have you discovered any inducement to persuade young men on the farms to remain on them?" the Secretary was asked.

"It is a problem which cannot be easily solved," he replied. "You can't hold men on the farms unless you offer sufficient inducements. It is little wonder that farmers and their sons have flocked to the cities for more lucrative and congenial employment. For many years they have been contributing to the partially artificial upbuilding of our industrial centers, to the development of the cities as against their own communities—and what have they received in return? You cannot find the best educational advantages among farming communities. They are to be obtained only in the larger cities.

Why They Quit the Farm.

"Take a farmer with six small children, for whom he desires to provide an education. They will be sent to the country school as long as some one can be found to take charge of it, but at best the education received there is meager. If he would give them an education which will be of benefit to them, he must send them away to some institution of learning, entailing perhaps greater expense than he can afford. He must either maintain his farm at the expense of the education of his childen, or move to one of the large cities. So, education, among other things, is driving occupants of farms to the cities."

"If the high cost of living is the result of less production and greater demand, what remedies would you propose?"

Too Much Gold.

"Don't say 'high cost of living;' say, rather, the cause for high prices. One great contributing cause is the enormous increase in the production and supply of gold during the past eighteen years. There is more gold now than ever before in the history of our country. The greater the supply of gold the higher the prices, and so the greater the cost of living."

"Do you believe that the present tariff, or the tariff presented by the Democrats, has affected or will affect the high cost of living?"

"A lower tariff on the necessities of life should bring about reduced prices to the consumer; but, not being a tariff expert, I do not pretend to know just what effect the present Underwood Tariff bill will have. It should bring about reduced prices, but not all at once. You can not expect too much of such legislation. It must be given a fair trial. Take sugar in Louisiana. I believe that if the people of that State could produce it on a business basis there would be no need for a tariff on it such as the people of Louisiana and their representatives claim. But with a reduced tariff the railroads might retaliate by increasing their rates of transportation. That is one of the contingencies that might prevent a healthy and remunerative profit to the sugar producer in Louisiana."

No "Uplift" About It.

Recurring to the education of the farmer, Secretary Houston said:

"Don't think that the Department of Agriculture has any idea of a policy of 'uplift' among the farmers. What I have in mind, and what I believe will be for the best interests of all concerned, is education along the lines of better production and better marketing. More scientific methods must be devised to benefit both the producer and the consumer. The farmers, especially those in the South, must have better banking facilities; they must be able to secure loans at a lower rate of interest. A system of rural credits must be devised to give them equal advantages with city folk."

MACON MAN TO BE TRIED FOR SHOOTING NEIGHBOR

MACON, GA., May 13.—Mallary Bedingfield, mill supply agent, who shot Ferd Guttenberger, a musician, last December, will be tried in the Superior Court Monday for assault with intent to murder. Bedingfield says he thought Guttenberger, a neighbor, who had just returned home from the theater, was a burglar.

Tag Day Returns Near $5,000

Record Sales, but Gifts Are Small

Entire Fund Goes to Charity Work

Receipts Still Uncounted Because of Great Number of Nickels and Dimes Donated.

Between $4,500 and $5,000 was the sum obtained through Tag Day sales Monday for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Association, according to Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, president of the organization.

Owing to the vast amount of small change collected, the receipts have not all been counted, and will not be before Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Fraser said more tags were sold Monday than ever in the history of the organization, though premiums paid for them were unusually small.

"Instead of quarters and half-dollars, the people gave nickels and dimes," said Mrs. Fraser, "and therefore returns are not so large."

The greatest amount of money gathered at any one station was $230, secured in front of the Third National Bank building. Mrs. A. McD. Wilson was chairman of the committee at that station.

The entire fund will be devoted to the Sheltering Arms Association work, which includes the upkeep of four day nurseries and kindergartens.

Short Postage Loses U. S. Much Business

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Department of Commerce is receiving complaints in increasing numbers from business men in foreign countries against the short postage on letters received from the United States. These foreign merchants aver that the double postage which they are required to pay on letters from America is so annoying that it turns much trade away from our country.

Complaints have reached the department from France, Argentina, Africa, Australia and many other parts of the world, and the statement is usually added that short paid letters from the United States are beginning to be refused.

It has been suggested that the simple device of using a special colored envelope for foreign letters would prevent the oversight of short postage. Many firms have already adopted this method with success.

SENATORS AFRAID TO 'PLAY HOOKEY'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Does the United States need currency reform legislation worse than members of the Senate will need to go to seashore resorts, Europe and other vacation spots in August?

This is the real question that is posed before President Wilson.

The President has said that he wants such legislation at this session. A large part of the Senate believes it is entitled to a vacation when it has completed consideration of the tariff bill.

It is admitted that legislation could be passed during the latter part of the session that would give those affected by the tariff the advantage of a more elastic currency system, but Senators don't want to stay in Washington all through a hot summer. They privately admit that they fear public sentiment.

President Wilson has made no secret of the fact that he will appeal to the public in support of his demand.

BOYS OF BERRY SCHOOL TO ERECT FOUR BUILDINGS

ROME, GA., May 13.—Berry School boys are going to spend their vacation in building four buildings for the Berry School for Girls. The structures will cost $8,000.

All the buildings will be constructed of logs in harmony with the distinctive style of architecture which makes the school attractive. With the completion of the buildings, Miss Martha Berry, the founder, will be at the head of a plant worth more than $100,000.

'DAD' IN CABINET BUT GIRL LOSES U. S. JOB

Daughter of Secretary Wilson, Society Miss, Will Quit Drawing $2,000 a Year in June.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Miss Agnes Wilson, daughter of Secretary of Labor Wilson, is one of the House employees who probably will be dropped from the Government payroll when the reorganization of the committee is effected. Miss Wilson is still clerk to the Committee on Labor, although her father left the House March 4 to become a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

According to the Disbursing Clerk of the House, Miss Wilson still is drawing $2,000 a year and will continue to do so until June 1. She has been prominent in society here since her father entered the Cabinet circle and has acted as hostess at his receptions.

Another society girl who will be more fortunate than Miss Wilson is Miss Anne Ferris, who is clerk to the Committee on Public Lands. Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, chairman of this committee, probably will retain the position, and Miss Ferris will remain on the House payroll.

Cleveland to Have Shortcake Inspected

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—A city bureau to regulate the making of strawberry shortcake and pie, with inspectors, is in prospect in Cleveland as the result of recommendationns made to the new city charter commission by George E. Murray, famous chef here.

"Restaurant and hotel cooking has fallen into the hands of Swiss cooks," said Murray. "They despise pies and shortcake and it is impossible to find cherry or berry pie that is not adulterated or strawberry shortcake worthy of the name."

'Bathhouse John' for Ban on Gown Rustle

CHICAGO, May 13.—"Bathhouse John" Coughlin, alderman, to-day began a campaign to have the rustle of silk gowns included in the list of noises prohibited by city ordinance.

This decision was reached after his poetry-trimmed ordinance "regulating women's dress and censoring same" won a host of friends in the City Council last night.

The ordinance was assigned to the health committee.

Famous "C" Ranch in Texas Cut Into Farms

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 13.—The famous "C" ranch in Texas, owned by the late Nelson Morris, will be broken up and sold to small settlers. The announcement that the big ranch, which comprises four counties and is larger than Montenegro, will be sold for about $2,000,000, was made here to-day by O. W. Kerr.

"C" ranch was the home of the herd of 20,000 Poll Angus cattle and it played a large part in changing the State of Texas from the home of the long horn to that of blooded stock.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

"ARE YOU A MASON?" IS GOOD.

Miss Billy Long and company, at the Atlanta last night, presented "Are You a Mason?" to a crowded house, and it was received with almost continuous laughter.

The play is a farce. For the past three weeks the company has been handling more or less serious plays, and for that reason the presentation of a pure farce in so capable a manner was a pleasant surprise.

The distinct surprise of the play was the work of Bert Gardner, who impersonated a female French costumers' assistant, and extracted quite a lot of humor from the scene where he assists Mrs. Perry (Miss Billy Long) to fit her waist, while the indignant husband (Edwin Vail) who is aware of the gender of the assistant—who is impersonating the female as a part of the plot and with the husband's sanction—looks on in impotent rage.

Miss Long's part this week is more or less incidental, but was handled with the splendid skill of the very versatile star, and Miss Sheldon as the mother has another opportunity to show her splendid ability as a character artist.

"Are You a Mason?" is good for many a hearty laugh, and can be seen nightly (except Wednesday) and at matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

FINE BILL AT THE FORSYTH.

Cleverly plotted and written and a laugh from curtain to curtain, "The Come Back" has no difficulty in maintaining its headline position at the Forsyth this week. It is one of the really laughable college skits. Paul Dickey, programmed as a former University of Michigan football star, gets more than his share of the limelight, being not only the hero, and a very good one, but the playwright and the impresario of the little company as well. He is well supported by pretty Miss Inez Plummer, Cogbett Morris, Stewart Robbins and Clay Boyd.

Billy K. Wells, in his Yiddish oratoricals, is an invariable hit, and the bill has two excellent singing acts, those of Mayo and Allman and of Newhoff and Phelps. Two unusually meritorious athletic numbers are on the program this week. The Apollo Trio are well known in their bronze posing and reproductions of sculptural masterpieces. The McAlsavey Marvels are comparatively new to the larger vaudeville circuits, but are making good with a clever jumping act. An amusing farce, "The New Scholar," is presented by Clarence Wilbur and a company of seven others.

MORE VERSES FOR NEW TESTAMENT

Parts of Gospel Long Missing Discovered Among Ancient Manuscripts From Egypt.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, May 13.—Some long missing verses of the New Testament are included in manuscripts of the Gospel discovered in Egypt six years ago and purchased by Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Mich., according to a study made of the Freer manuscripts by The Times.

A facsimile of the writings has been presented to the British Museum by the University of Michigan, to which Mr. Freer assigned the task of publication, and according to The Times' study, there have been found in the gospel of St. Mark several verses which occur in no other known manuscript of the New Testament, although they were known to St. Jerome, who quotes part of them.

In the Freer manuscript, after the passage in which it is said that Jesus upbraided His disciples for their unbelief, the text continues as follows:

"And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, suffers not the true power of God to be apprehended.

"For because, said they unto Christ, reveal at once Thy righteousness.

"And Christ said unto them, The limit of the years of the powers of Satan is (not) fulfilled, but it draweth near. (The text here and elsewhere is corrupt.)

"For the sake of those that have sinned was I given up unto death that they may return unto the truth and sin no more, but may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven."

A number of variations in other portions of the New Testament are also pointed out by The Times in the Freer manuscripts.

DRINKS POISON, THEN ASKS FOR DOCTOR; DEAD

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 13.—Cornelius Clark, who registered at the Florence Hotel here a week ago, today telephoned the clerk to send for a doctor. When Dr. B. A. Fox responded he found the young man had taken carbolic acid. He died. Three notes, one addressed to his mother in Tupelo, Miss., one to his wife in Chicago and one "to whom it may concern but keep it from newspaper men," were found.

STERILIZATION FAVORED BY CHATTAHOOCHEE JUDGE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—Declaring that the present methods of punishment do not reform criminals as they should, and that some other plan should be employed to make better people of those sent to the chain-gangs and penitentiaries, Judge S. P. Gilbert, of the Chattahoochee Circuit, has indorsed sterilization of criminals.

CALLS BALKAN WAR BLESSING TO TURKS

Bucknam Pasha, American Admiral in Sultan's Navy, Sees Prosperity Ahead.

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, May 13. — Bucknam Pasha, the famous American, who is an Admiral in the Turkish navy, has been in London for two weeks. He has no hope that conditions in Turkey will straighten themselves out for at least a year. The various details in regard to the signing of the peace treaty, the delimitation of the frontiers and the arrangements for the payment of debts will take a least a year.

"So far as Turkey is concerned," he said, "it is a blessing in disguise for her to lose her European provinces, as they were a source of continual expense and trouble. The Turks are essentially Asiatics and their destiny now is the development of Asia Minor, which is rich in oil and mineral wealth, which simply needs intelligent working. Even on the European side close to Constinople the oil fields are of incredible richness. In fact, Turkey will be the coming oil country of Europe.

"Turkey needs money to straighten herself out," continued Bucknam Pasha, "and Europe will undoubtedly furnish it. I do not expect much from the present Turkish Government. It is essentially a military dictatorship. It answered the purpose for the time being, but must soon pass away.

"Now that peace has been restored one of the difficulties with which the Turks are confronted is that after the despotism they have not the development capacity of a government and it will be necessary to introduce trained Europeans to take charge of every department of State and teach the Turks the science of government. Financially, Turkey is in better condition than the people imagine. The entire funded debt is only about $40,000,000 and this comprises everything. There are practically no municipal debts. Constantinople, in 1912, for the first time in its history, borrowed $5,000,000, yet the borrowing capacity of the city, based on European standards, is equal to the entire funded debt of the Empire."

Mutiny Threatened by Montenegrin Soldiers.

VIENNA, May 13.—Seven thousand Montenegrin troops in and near Scutari, enraged at the decision of King Nicholas to give up the Albanian city at the demand of the powers, are threatening to mutiny and commence a massacre of Albanians.

Word to this effect was received to-day from Cattaro by the official newspaper, Neue Freie Presse.

The dispatch further stated that unless the troops from the international fleet arrive at Scutari within the next 48 hours the Montenegrins will probably be out of hands.

The arrival of the international force at Scutari has been delayed by bad weather, although the city has already been surrendered to Admiral Burney, commander-in-chief of the war fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast.

Company Stops Cars In Cincinnati Strike

CINCINNATI, May 13.—Not a street car moved in Cincinnati to-day, owing to the strike tie-up, and the officials of the Cincinnati Traction Company announced that until a decision is reached by the carmen as to whether they will agree to arbitration, proposed by Mayor Hunt and accepted by the company, no attempt will be made to run cars.

The union members are to take up the arbitration proposition at a meeting this afternoon.

The proposition is to end the strike pending the adjustment of differences by an impartial board.

Bells Put on Poison Bottles in Hospital

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Sleigh bells tinkled in all the wards of the City Hospital to-day. There was such a merry concert as the nurses moved from place to place that the curiosity of the patients was aroused. They foundn that the bells were chained around the necks of bottles containing poisonous drugs.

Dr. Wayne Smith, superintendent, issued an order to put bells on the poison bottles after Thomas Adams, an attendant, had ben indicted for giving carbolic acid to a patient by mistake. The patient died.

He Wanted Cover And Took It.

Sunday he rode his machine to Marietta. It was late—very late—before he started on the trip home. So late, in fact, that when something went wrong with the engine a few miles out of town he waited in vain for assistance to come along.

Painfully he pedaled the heavy machine in to town, and dismounting before his boarding house, crept up to bed.

Heated by his exertions, he quickly fell asleep, only to awake in a few minutes, shivering with the cold. Failing to find any additional covers in his room, he arose in the darkness, quietly entered the "spare bedroom" made a hasty grab at the bedclothes and dragged them into his room.

There he wrapped himself up and blissfully sank into the arms of Morpheus.

It was not until the next morning at the breakfast table that he learned a young lady friend of the family missing the last car to her suburban home, had been placed in the "spare room" for the night.

The young lady's opinion is not of record.

Did You Ever Hear of Such Luck?

"Ever notice how some people have all the luck in the world at poker?" asked a gentleman who is noted for his love of poker.

"Coming down from New York not long ago a number of us got up a little game in the smoking room of one of the big boats. We were all old friends, but interest in the game grew until finally the stakes mounted in the hundreds.

"I was dealing one jackpot and only two men were drawing cards. The opener took one. The other hesitated—he had been lucky all evening. Then he spread his cards out face up. He had a split straight with a queen lacking.

"'Just deal me a queen, old man,' he said.

"The opener scoffed.

"'Great chance you have. I've got three of the ladies to come in on,' he said.

"'What's you bet I don't get my queen?' asked the lucky one.

"'All you want, at ten to one.'

"'Done, for a hundred.'

"I dealt. The two bet around cautiously for a minute, then the man with the split straight raised the opener $100.

"'Call your bluff,' said the opener, showing down his three queens.

"'And it's my pot,' said the other, flipping over a queen.

"That broke up the game."

He Sure Was Absent Minded.

"I've heard of absent minded persons," said the barber as he prepared his implements of torture and shoved a lather brush into his patron's mouth to hush his protests, "but the strangest case I ever knew of happened right here yesterday.

"One of our best known lawyers, who has been wearing a beard for several years, dropped in and ordered it taken off. After the operation——"

"Operation's good!" interrupted the customer, feelingly.

"——," proceeded the tonsorial sharp, unheeding. "I wouldn't have known him if I had met him in the street.

"But a stranger thing was that he didn't know himself. When he got out of the chair and looked at his face in the mirror he turned around to see who the strange chap was whose face he saw in the glass.

Ten Cars of Cattle Killed in Explosion

FORT WAYNE, IND., May 13.—The explosion of a tank car filled with oil in a freight wreck near Fort Wayne to-day blew a brakeman from the top of a car and set fire to the train. Ten carloads of cattle were burned to death.

Their frantic bellowings were heard for miles, and farmers from the country around, attracted by the bedlam, helped the train crew battle the flames.

We Are Pleased To Announce

Mrs. Marvin Is Here

Demonstrating

La Vida Corsets

The coming of Mrs. Marvin at this season is a new departure.

Until now her visits have been confined to two a year—in the fall and early spring.

To have her with us now for two weeks at the beginning of the summer season is good fortune.

The corset for the light and filmy summer dresses must be right, it must give the proper support to make such dresses "hang" gracefully. And what woman does not know that summer comfort is largely a matter of the right summer corset?

It is along these lines that Mrs. Marvin will help you—this is warranted not only by her corset knowledge, but by the splendid models of LaVida Corsets she has here at her command.

A Sparkling, Brilliant Sale of Jewelry

We Do Not Know That Prices Have Ever Been Treated in Any Such Fashion

And such a clearaway it will be!

50c Belt Pins for 10c; $1.00 to $2.50 Brooches for 25c; $3.00 Vanities for 50c; $7.50 LaVallieres for $2.00, etc., etc., etc., including watches, watch fobs, hat pins, scarf pins, fan chains and the like.

But properly to advertise such a sale as this places us in a dilemma. To do full justice to the radical reductions, the really unheard of prices, it would seem that the jewelry is not right and desirable, so prone is the mind to judge events by past experiences.

In this instance you must not!

You see below what the prices are; the jewelry that they stand for is exquisite---good-taste jewelry, chosen because it possessed the qualities that appeal to a woman's refined sense of ornamentation.

True, there are some few pieces that are a bit damaged, but they are the rare exceptions; they figured but slightly in the causes of this sale.

This list below is not so long as it might be. There are others and other pieces all reduced on the same scale.

Court "Graft" Temptations

ONLY those who have had the privilege to serve in King George of England's household can realize the temptation that is thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected officially with the court. To the credit of the members of the royal staff it has to be said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department were implicated, shows, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than can be resisted.

Punishment in such a case is swift and severe. So soon as any one joins the royal household it is made perfectly plain to him or her that any attempt to gain personal profit by reason of their position means instant dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no mater how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the mere fact that the confidence of the sovereign has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from the court.

No Orders From the Palace.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes that any one known to be connected in any way with the royal household, or possessed of any influence there, is not approached with suggestions that he might benefit his own pocket by falling in with schemes propounded to him. It is not many months since one of the best known officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department was offered a check for $3,000 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply a certain article to the King.

It was known, of course, to those who made this offer that the official in question had access to the blank forms upon which these warrants are drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of the least difficulty to get one of these signed by the then Lord Chamberlain among his daily pile of documents. The offer was indignantly rejected and the whole matter reported to Viscount Knollys, his majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm which made the proposal is still without the royal patronage and is probably wondering why no orders from Buckingham Palace come its way.

It is not always money that is the bribe offered to court officials. Social advancement is often the bait dangled before them. A case in point may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the master of the horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with the suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting young ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the political world, and openly promised the official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme he was then threatened with the lady's grave displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from his position. His retort was prompt and surprising. He went direct to his official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the household and the lady in question no longer receives invitations to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how popular one is until one is appointed to a position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from people of whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from all quarters upon those whose good fortune it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story may be told in this connection. About this time last year an extremely well dressed lady went up to an official of the Lord Chamberlain's department in Piccadilly one morning, addressed him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for having "neglected her for so long," and made him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. This done, she tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and has not to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

King Edward's Champagne.

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few months ago. He was written to by a firm of cigarette merchants hailing from America, forwarding him samples of their goods, together with the cool intimation "that they were well aware that the cigarettes were just the thing the King could smoke and enjoy," and that for every 1,000 that His Majesty ordered the official approached could have 60 per cent of the account repaid.

The reply was curt, but deserved. It was to the effect that the samples had been handed by the courtier to his chauffer, who pronounced them rubbish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in pressing them upon his sovereign.

It was due to the late King Edward, one of the finest connoisseurs of wine who ever lived, being served with a very indifferent brand of champagne one morning that the gravest case of corruption that has ever been proved against the officials of the British court was brought to light. He asked the name of the firm who supplied it and what on earth it was doing in his cellars. He pursued this matter to some length, and ultimately found that one of his most trusted servitors had been substantially bribed to introduce this wine into the bins of the then Prince of Wales preliminary to an application for the royal warrant in the ordinary course. It is on record that the offender in this case was continued in his position just under half an hour after King Edward was informed of his identity.

Didn't Mention Names.

A number of enthusiasts, returning from an important match in New York, were playing cards in a railway carriage. Among the number was a rather shady individual who had lost one eye, but seemed to be winning freely, and time after time he scooped in the money, put down by his less fortunate comrades.

This continued for some time, when the man at the head of the table felt he could stand it no longer; so he rose in a fearful temper and remarked:

"Look ye 'ere, boys, someone here is cheatin'. Now, I don't want to mention any names, but if he does it again I'll knock his other eye out."

The Social World

The largest affair of the week will be the annual reception and formal opening of the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday evening. For a number of years these receptions have been among the most brilliant social events of the summer season. They assemble the entire club membership, with their wives or friends.

The election of officers will take place at 6 o'clock. During the late afternoon the women will assemble in groups on the terrace, and following the election will be joined by club members. Through the evening there will be music by an orchestra. Refreshments and dancing will follow dinner.

The presence of a number of visitors will add to the pleasure and brilliancy of the occasion.

Among the visitors present will be Miss Mary Gaut, Nashville, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun's guest; Miss Ruth Wilson, New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest; Miss Nelson Chambliss, Chattanooga, Miss Lula Dean Jones' guest; Mrs. Edward Echols, Richmond, Miss Constance Knowles' guest; Mrs. James Hook Spratling, Macon, Mrs. Roy Collier's guest; Miss Lorna Carr, St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, Arkansas, Mrs. Bates Block's guests; Miss Gwendolyn Barnes, Uniontown, Pa., Miss Alice Vandiver's guest; Miss Ruth Hull, Mexico City, Mrs. H. L. Manson's guest; Miss Ellen Meeks, Memphis, Mrs. Robert L. Cooney's guest; Miss Anne Selden, Washington, Mrs. George K. Selden's guest, and Miss Marion Phinizy, Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Dinner Dance at Club.

There will be the usual informal dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening, which will be a happy close to the week's gayeties.

For Mrs. Byrd.

Mrs. Henry A. Leonard entertained at auction-bridge Tuesday afternoon at her home in Merritts Avenue for her sister, Mrs. S. F. Byrd, who will leave June 1 for Birmingham to live. There were 16 guests. Appropriate souvenirs were given winners of the top scores.

Mrs. Block Entertains.

Thirty young women were guests of Mrs. Bates Block Tuesday afternoon at a bridge tea, given for her house guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Vari-colored sweetpeas adorned the apartments. Dainty pieces of hand-made lingeries were given for top score and for the honor guests. The score cards bore the monogram of the hostess. Following the game tea was served on the terraced garden at the rear of Mrs. Block's residence. Guests were grouped around a circular table, surrounding a great oak tree. Decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas. The hostess and honor guests wore white lingeries.

Luncheon for Miss Wilson.

Mrs. C. A. Wood will entertain ten guests at a luncheon Wednesday at the Georgian Terrace for Miss Helen Dargan's guest, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York.

For Mrs. King.

Mrs. Edward King, who was Miss Elizabeth McLaws, of Savannah, was given an informal tea Tuesday afternoon by Miss Nita Black. There were twelve guests.

Gayeties at Fort McPherson.

A bowling party was given at Fort McPherson Monday evening by officers of the post. It was one of a series of affairs enjoyed by the residents of the fort. After the bowling, Colonel and Mrs. Styer gave a supper party.

Captain and Mrs. Cochran will give a bridge party Tuesday evening.

Embroidery Club Meets May 21.

The meeting of the North Side Embroidery Club, which was to have been held Wednesday with Mrs. Emily Trotti McCarley, has been postponed until May 21, owing to the illness of Mrs. W. T. D. Wilson, mother of two club members.

For Miss Wilson.

Mrs. Ronald Ransome will entertain at bridge Friday afternoon for Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who is visiting Miss Helen Dargan.

Miss Stoney Hostess.

Miss Josephine Stoney entertained twelve guests Tuesday morning at bridge at her home in Peachtree Street for Miss Marion Phinizy, of Augusta, a guest of Mrs. A. W. Calhoun. Paul Neyron roses were used in decorating the rooms where the card tables were placed. The prize for top score was a pair of silver slipper buckles; the consolation, a spoon, and to the guest of honor was presented a silver picture frame.

Miss Cowles Hostess.

Miss Laura Cowles will be among those having tea on the Terrace at the Driving Club Friday. She will have as her guests Mrs. Bates Block and Mrs. Block's guests, Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, of Arkansas.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The Piedmont Continental Chapter, D. A. R., will meet in the parlor of the Piedmont Hotel Thursday at 3:30 p. m. The regent's report of the national congress will be heard.

Woman's Club Elects Officers.

Mrs. A. P. Coles has been re-elected president of the Atlanta Woman's Club. Other officers are Miss Alice Baxter, vice president; Mrs. Linton Hopkins, second vice president; Mrs. Lott Warren, recording secretary; Mrs. Albert Akers, assistant secretary; Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, corresponding secetary; Mrs. M. M. Davies, treasurer, and Mrs. Arthur Powell, auditor. The business meeting was followed by the rendition of "The House of Rimmon" by Mrs. William Chase Spiker.

Miss Morgan Hostess.

Miss Elizabeth Morgan will give a box party, followed by tea, Saturday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Bates Block's guests, Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, of Arkansas.

For Miss Roberts.

Miss Nora Roberts will entertain at a shower Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at her home in Jackson Street for her cousin, Miss Eula Roberts, a bride-elect. The guests will include 25 friends.

Miss Edith Little gave a matinee party at the Forsyth for Miss Roberts. The guests were: Miss Nina Hadley, Miss Fan Witherspoon, Mrs. James Rolestone, Mrs. J. F. Nutting and Mrs. Fred Fowler.

Adam-Granberry.

Mr. and Mrs. John Adam, of Richmond, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Maude Estelle, to Mr. William C. Granberry, of College Park. The wedding will take place early in June.

Madam Pavsner at Home.

Madam Pavsner, of Jaffa, Palestine, graduate of the University of Paris and lecturer on social and economic problems, is visiting Miss Feibleman at 461 Washington Street. Madam Pavsner and her hostess will be at home informally Wednesday evening.

Reception for Seniors.

The senior class of Washington Seminary was tendered an informal party Tuesday afternoon by Miss Emma B. Scott, principal.

Rodin's 'The Biplane' Called Remarkable

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—Details have just come out of a remarkable work of sculpture that Rodin is now engaged on, which he calls "The Biplane."

The sculpture consists of a tall, slender, unadorned shaft surmounted by what may be described as a lengthened sphere on which twin figures stand side by side, their bodies which almost touch, curving gracefully backward. Their faces are upturned. Only one foot of each rests on the sphere, which seems to spring from beneath them in the moment of flight, and their wings are only half opened.

The two figures, which seem to aid and support each other in flight, symbolize the two wings of the biplane.

Son's Dress Too Gay for Author Rostand

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—A good deal of amusement has been caused by the difference of opinion between Maurice Rostand, son of Edmond, and the rest of the family on the subject of taste in dress.

During the whole of the time that Edmond Rostand has been staying in Paris he has not dared to be seen in the streets with his son, whose extravagant costumes and general appearance appal the shy Academician. "I'll go to wark with you," it is said he told him the other day, "but only on condition that you cut your hair and change your tailor."

MUCH EXCELSIOR MADE IN GEORGIA

Production of 6,805 Tons Is Ahead of All Southern States Except Virginia.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Georgia, producing 6,805 tons in nine plants, principally from yellow pine, next to Virginia leads all Southern States in the manufacture of excelsior.

The figures are for the year 1911, as compiled by the Bureau of the Census.

Total production for the United States in 1911 was 139,830 tons, of which Virginia's output was 25,160 tons, leading all states.

Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi the Carolinas and Texas take unimportant rank with one and two plants each.

Excelsior has been manufactured in this country for more than fifty years. It was first placed on the market in 1860, but for the ten succeeding years it was not in great demand. Since then, it has become a staple commodity for many important uses, until now over 85,000,000 feet of forest material are needed each year to meet the demand.

Excelsior might be called ribbon veneer, since it is made by cutting wood into very thin strands. The size of the strand, with the kind and color of the wood, gauges the price and grade. The thinnest grades are called wood wool. The finish product is baled by a press such as is used for baling hay, and in this form it goes to market.

The first government record of the excelsior industry is contained in the reports of the Tenth Census (1880); only the value of the raw material, amounting to $150,800, being shown. Assuming the value of a cord at the time to have been $2.50, the amount of wood consumed would have been about 60,000 cords, as compared with 142,944 used in 1911.

Cottonwood is the favorite excelsior wood, contributing 43.3 per cent. of the total amount consumed.

Yellow pine, including scrub, shortleaf, and loblolly, was reported from 11 States, Virginia using more than all the others together. In that State scrub pine was probably the species most largely supplied.

The best grades of excelsior are made from basswood. That not more of this is used is due probably to its scarcity and to the high price of the stumpage.

Other woods which were used for excelsior were spruce, buckeye, cypress, butternut, soft maple, chestnut, birch, hemlock, beach, and white cedar.

Jersey City 'Next' in N. Y. Barbers' Strike

NEW YORK, May 13.—Jersey City is "next" in the barbers' strike, begun in Brooklyn a week ago and spreading over Greater New York. One thousand barbers in Jersey City voted to strike to-day unless employers recognize the Industrial Workers of the World.

In riots along Broadway, mobs of from 300 to 400 men stoned shops and terrorized patrons. At the Hotel St. Denis eight customers, their faces covered with lather, were driven into the streets.

NAPOLEON'S SPOOK DESPISES GLORY

PARIS May 13.—Napoleon the Great has learned in the other world that glory is a bubble, according to a communication from his shade, quoted to-day by one who heard it at a spiritist seance. Said the Conqueror's spook:

"It is very painful for spirits to note how all the evils caused by politics quickly disappear from the consciousness of people. The glory you have acquired is soon forgotten or only vaguely remembered; but you cannot be blamed for forgetting glory, because everything called glory is in reality only a great monstrosity toward humanity.

"Your monstrous earthly politics are nearly always inspired by the personal ambitions of a few individuals. It is unpardonable wickedness for men to warn people that their vitality in relation to liberty is at stake.

"These are only words used to influence great masses. Those uttering them know that nobody can deprive the world of what God created."

MAN WANTED HERE IS ARRESTED IN PITTSBURG

Frank Stomakin, wanted by the Atlanta police on the charge of misappropriating $200 while in the employ of a local tobacco company as collector, has been caught by the police of Pittsburg, Pa.

Moosers Get First Pie—Only a Crumb

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Although the Progressive party polled more than a million votes in the last presidential election, as far as known, it has received no single morsel of patronage pie until to-day, when Carl Cooper, of Kansas, was made "a special messenger to the minority" in the House at an annual salary of $1,800

The Republicans of the House have six such jobs allotted to them. Cooper has been secretary to Representative Murdock, Progressive leader in the House.

Turks Hastily Seek a $100,000,000 Loan

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—The Paris Journal announced to-day that the Turkish Government is negotiating with the Rothschilds financial group of Europe for a loan of $100,000,000.

The Ottoman Government is making frantic efforts to have the loan closed before peace is concluded with the Balkan allies, so that the Turkish Government will not suffer the humiliation arising from an absolutely impoverished national treasury.

AMATEURS WILL HAVE 2 EVENTS IN HILL CLIMB

PERMISSION has been received, in the form of an official sanction from the American Automobile Association to the committee of the Atlanta Automobile Association, to include in the list of events which are to be held in the Stewart Avenue hill climb next Saturday one which will undoubtedly interest a large majority of motorists. It is the sanction for an amateur event, one in which any owner of a motor car may participate, be he a seasoned driver or not.

Two Classes for Amateurs.

The amateur event will be run in two classes. The first class provides for cars of a piston displacement up to 300 cubic inches and the second 301 and over. This will make, as far as the committee can judge, a fair and equitable adjustment.

The handsomest prizes of the entire event will be offered to the amateur drivers and all that is necessary to qualify in this event is for an aspirant to telephone E. H. Eleby at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. A special concession has been made to the amateur drivers of $3 entry fee and $2 license tax.

Officials Are Named.

The following officials have been named for the meet:

Technical Committee—Automobiles, Fred Steele, F. C. Skinner, A. R. Almond; motorcycles, H. Gilbert, Dove Wylie, Mr. Schulenberger.

Starters—K. T. McKinstry, L. S. Collier.

Referee—W. G. Humphrey.

Judges—L. E. Bissell, C. L. Elyea, T. H. Smart, R. S. Abbott.

Clerk of Course—E. H. Elleby.

Gasoline Tester—Ed L. Wight, Jr.

M'GRAW ASKS WAIVERS ON OLD DOC CRANDALL

NEW YORK, May 13.—Word comes by the way of Cincinnati that John J. McGraw, who controls the destinies of the Giants, has asked for waivers on Otis Crandall, the Indiana farmer, who has prescribed so effectively in the past for many sick games, that he earned the name of "Old Doctor" Crandall.

The rescue pitcher extraordinary and sometimes great pinch hitter, has found it hard to get into condition this year, but the news that McGraw has decided to part with him will come as a shock to the fans who have a warm place in their hearts for the player who never quailed, no matter what the odds he was called on to face. It is just possible that McGraw has asked for waivers to rouse Crandall and will hold tight if some other club jumps at the chance to get him for $1,500.

INGERTON, BOUGHT BY COLONELS, TO PLAY THIRD

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 13.—The purchase of Outfielder Scotty Ingerton from the Indianapolis American Association club by Louisville was announced here to-day. The purchase price was said to be about $3,000. Ingerton will be tried at third base by the Colonels.

LELIVELT LET OUT BY NORTHERN LEAGUE CLUB

MINNEAPOLIS, May 13.—The unconditional release of Pitcher "Bill" Lelivelt, of the local Northern League team, was announced to-day. Lelivelt was turned over to the Northern League by Manager Cantillon, of the local American Association club, this spring.

For a Red Blotchy Skin

The Remarkable Action of a Famous Remedy and Some Facts About It.

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream and the influence of these properties is that of an antidote. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 157 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin trouble.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SCORING RULES SILLY

By Percy H. Whiting.

AT last, after a vast number of years, the scoring committee of the National Baseball Writers Association has met and taken some action—though I can't say I think so much of it, now that they have done it.

The committee appointed by the Baseball Writers' Association to clear up points in the scoring rules so as to bring about more uniformity has held its first meeting and adopted a number of recommendations to be presented to the National Commission and through that body to the playing rules committee of the big leagues for action.

The committee was unanimously in favor of the much discussed plan to giving a hit to the batsman who advances a base runner on an infield jab when the batsman reaches first and no error is made on the play. It is argued that the good points of this method of scoring will outweigh any defects it might have and that it was the logical and equitable way to score the play. Instructions already have been issued to National and American official scorers to record the play as a base hit.

The wording of several of the rules was clarified. One made it clear that one assist, and one only, shall be credited to a player who takes part in the run-down of an opponent. A fielder might have two assists in a double play.

Some scorers have been in doubt as to whether or not to charge an error in case a runner is caught napping but gets back to his base because the man who takes the throw drops the ball. The verdict was that in case the runner would have been out if the fielder had held the ball the latter should be charged with an error.

* * *

TAKE now this rule that gives a batter a base hit when he grounds to the infield and an attempt to force another man at second, third or home goes wrong.

In many cases the jab will be a feeble thing, on which the batter would be thrown out a mile if the play were made to first. But because of the happening that there is a runner on bases who draws the throw the batter gets a hit for it in the box score.

In other words a man can come up in the first inning, ground to third base and go out by three steps at first, getting a time at bat and nothing else. The next time up he can exactly duplicate the blow but the throw will be made to second, the other runner will beat the ball there—and the batter gets a hit. That's about as logical as——as,——as might be expected.

* * *

TAKE the matter of giving a player only one assist on a run-down. That's absolutely wrong. Every time a man handles a ball in such a run-down he takes the chance of making an error. Therefore he should get an assist if he performs the feat without making a bungle.

If you don't give the man an assist for every time he handles the ball you should not give him an error for any miscue he makes after his first handling of the sphere.

If that rule sticks a player will jump into a run-down, handle the ball once and then let George do it—for after that time he is in constant danger of acquiring an error without the slightest chance of getting any credit in the box scores for his further efforts.

More fine logic.

TINKER SAYS DODGERS WILL LAND NEAR TOP

NEW YORK, May 13.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, to-day predicted that the Dodgers would finish well up in the first division.

"They've got a team without a weak spot," declared Tinker, "and the game they are playing now isn't any flash in the pan work—it's just the sort of game they'll play all season, barring accidents."

BRADLEY-COULON GO IS EASY FOR JOHNNY

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—In one of the greatest contests seen in the city of Philadelphia, Johnny Coulon, bantam weight champion of the world, easily defeated Frankie Bradley, of Philadelphia, last night.

From the sound of the gong it was apparent that Coulon had the greater science and was far the stronger of the two. He defeated Bradley in every round of the six.

JOE BIRMINGHAM OUT OF BATTLE FOR MONTH

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps will not be seen in action for all of a month, if then, for he is suffering to-day from a broken bone in the right ankle, acquired while sliding for second base in the ninth inning of the game here yesterday. His right foot caught in the iron that holds the bag in place, and it bent, snapping the bone.

Birmingham will direct the Nap team on crutches for a month or more. "Buddie" Ryan will play center field in his place.

This is the Naps' second mishap of the New York series, as Larry Lajoie can not grip his bat to-day because of the two bones broken Sunday by Klepfere's shoot.

LLOYD BREAKS RECORD IN FIFTY-MILE CONTEST

LONDON, May 13.—The world's amateur running record for 50 miles was beaten yesterday by E. W. Lloyd, who ran the distance in 6 hours, 13 minutes and 8 seconds at the Stamford Bridge athletic grounds.

The former record was made in 1885 by J. E. Dixon and was 4 minutes and 15 seconds slower.

DENNY BESTS BRONSON.

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Young Denny, the South's new welterweight star, whipped Ray Bronson in ten rounds here last night, scoring a knockdown in the third round.

ZBYSZKO VS. CAZEAUX.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Articles were signed to-day for a finish wrestling bout on May 19 between Zbyszko, the giant Pole and Cazeaux, the Italian champion. The winner probably will be pitted against Gotch, if the world's champion really can be induced to come out of retirement.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 13.—"What's the matter with the Giants?" friends and rooters inquired from me when the club returned from Philadelphia, after the unsuccessful series.

"We ran into good pitching, the best in the league right now, and some of the games were kicked away by thick-skulled playing," was my reply.

"Does John really say anything to the players when they make mistakes?" a man who calls McGraw by his first name only when he is not around asked me.

"He mentions them sometimes," said I. "For instance, an outfielder missed a foul fly in that Philadelphia series which would have won us a game if he had caught it. There was a man on second base at the time.

"'Why didn't you get that ball,' said McGraw to him when he came to the bench. 'You were slow going after it.'

"'Well,' replied the outfielder, 'I was trying to watch the runner on second out of the tail of my eye to see whether he started, and I thought I could get a double play.'

THERE were two out when he went after the ball. McGraw dweit on the caliber of that player's intelligence for a minute or two. Yes, sometimes he speaks of little things like that when he feels talkative. He had many "a bone" to thrash over with the various players when he went into executive session with them in the clubhouse after those games, too. That is when he talks it over—in private.

The Giants are playing good ball now. They ought to climb, and climb rapidly—particularly on this Western diet, which for the first time in years should prove to be nutritious. It used to be the hardest in the league to swallow. The New York pitching staff was off for a time there. Tesreau has not really acquired his stride yet, although he was better in a game he started against Cincinnati last week until he banged out a three-bagger with the bases full and ran all the "pep" out of himself getting his big bulk around to third. After that, somebody had to be sent to pitch for him. Marquard is over his case of tonsilitis, and should be around in shape again very soon. He did pretty well against Philadelphia last week, except for one inning. The team was not hitting the ball hard in Philadelphia, but this was not due so much to weak batting as superior pitching. The men are all in good shape now, with the exception of John Murray, who caught a little cold and has a stiff neck. He will be able to turn his head again very soon now, and should be in the game this week. McGraw is plentifully supplied with substitute outfielders, but he refuses to let any of them go. Stallings is very anxious to get hold of "Josh" Devore because of his speed. "Josh" runs and hides every time he hears his name mentioned in connection with Boston. He says the climate up there does not agree with him.

AS I predicted, the Western clubs have found the Eastern brand of pitching very superior to that on exhibition in the West this year.

The Cubs had a tough time in Brooklyn, where they were unable to roll up the big scores to which they had grown accustomed in the West. They met good pitching. Pittsburg had trouble enough in Boston. I expect to see the Cubs start to drop very soon now. It is necessary for them to make too many runs to win a ball game, and the pitchers all around the league, like wine and shoes, will improve as the season ages. If you have observed the scores, you will find that Cheney has worked in more than twenty games already this spring. If Evers had a couple more good workmen in the box he would make a great fight for the pennant, because there is no fault to be found with the rest of the club. It is a team of hardened, shrewd veterans.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Joe Levy, manager of Joe Rivers, announced yesterday that he does not intend to let his protege box again until July 4. "I have got that date at Tom McCarey's Vernon arena for Joe," said Levy "and I think I would be taking a big chance of losing it if I should match Rivers in the East and take a chance of being outpointed by one of those clever fellows."

* * *

Jack Britton is another crack Eastern lightweight who is going to California to try and force Willie Ritchie to meet him in a 20-round battle on July 4.

* * *

Britton and his manager, Danny Morgan will leave about May 30 for the coast where Morgan will have Britton box two men within two weeks, after which he will post a forfeit of $2,500 and issue a challange to match Britton against Ritchie.

* * *

"Digger" Stanley, the bantamweight champion of England, and Eddie Moran, the clever English bantam, are to fight after all for the English title.

* * *

They were matched a few days ago to battle for twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club of London on June 2 for $500 side bet, a purse of $1,750 and the Lord Lonsdale belt. They were to have fought on March 31, but Morgan could not make the weight and the match was called off.

* * *

* * *

While here he stopped Spider Britt and held Kid Young to a draw, despite the fact that Young outweighed him eight pounds. Grant expects to return here in about three weeks.

* * *

Buck Crouse, the Pittsburg middleweight, has started training for his 6-round bout with Blink McCloskey at Pittsburg, May 19.

* * *

With shrewd handling such as Frank Moran is sure to get, being that Dan Ketrick has him in charge, there will be big money for Moran during the next six months. McKetrick's protege has shown as much as McCarty or any other big fellow in the game to-day. His great exhibition against Luther with a broken hand is still being talked of by New York fans.

* * *

Eddie Johnson, who recently held Frankie Whitney to a draw, was matched yesterday to box Bobby Waugh in a 10-round affair at Denver, May 21.

* * *

Johnny Lore is after Willie Ritchie. Lore's manager, Walter Burke, says that the St. Nicholas Club of New York, will stage the event June 7, if Ritchie agrees to the match.

* * *

Frank Loughrey, the Philadelphia fighter, will leave June 3 for Australia, where he is signed for five fights.

* * *

The Garden Club of New York will stage two 10-round bouts Friday night. Mike Gibbons and Tommy Connors meet in one and Tommy Gibbons and Young Mike Donovan in the other.

* * *

Soldier Kearns and Boer Rodel will clash in a 10-round battle in New York on May 23. They meet in the semi-final to the Jim Flynn-Jim Coffey encounter.

* * *

George Carpentier has been guaranteed $10,000 to box Bombardier Wells at Paris, June 28. The bout has been clinched.

* * *

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, started training yesterday for his 10-round go with Frank Klaus at Indianapolis, May 29. This will be the third meeting between the pair. Frank holds a 20-round decision over Dillon on the coast while Jack is said to have shaded the Pittsburg boy in a short scrap at New York.

* * *

Jack Britton, who has received nearly $15,000 for 29 fights in the past eight months, was matched yesterday to box Phil Cross in a 10-round set-to at New York on May 21.

FODDER FOR FANS

Mike Donlin, the slugging outfielder, who has just completed a vaudeville engagement, wafted into New York and announced that he'd like to play with the Giants again. He is on the reserve list of the Phillies.

* * *

Maranville, the Brave's shortstop, was the hero of yesterday's game. It was his fielding and pinch hitting that enabled his team to win from the Cardinals.

* * *

Milan, of the Senators, is after the American League pilfering record again. To date he has stolen sixteen bases.

* * *

Two doubles a triple and a homer were the contributing factors in the Giants' 5 to 1 victory over the Cubs.

* * *

"Smoky" Joe Wood, who led the American League pitchers last year, went in against the Tigers yesterday in the closing rounds and the Detroiters promptly batted the wadding out of him.

* * *

"Lefty" Russell, of the White Sox, held the Athletics to three hits yesterday, but failed to win.

* * *

The Brooklyn ball club's receipts to date for the 23 regular and four exhibition games are estimated at slightly over $100,000. Last season the receipts up to this time were about $25,000.

* * *

Manager Dahlen, of the Dodgers, sort of sassed Umpire Rigler yesterday and was sent to the bench.

* * *

"Bobby" Groom was at his best yesterday and the Senators scored a shutout victory over the Browns.

* * *

Edgar Willett says that after a runner has knocked the ball over the fence he should not waste his time rounding the bases but should return to his seat and save time. That's the idea—save the time. The cooks are clamoring for early suppers—so let's have 'em.

* * *

This is a joyous day for New York sport writers. The Giants, Yankees and Brooklyns won yesterday, and no alibis were necessary.

GLAD DAYS.

The melancholy days have gone,
The saddest of the year.
The wrestling game is pale and wan—
Its final gasp is near.

The wrestler now will give us peace,
And sail across the main;
His manager also will cease
From giving us a pain.

Soon we can hie to yonder park
And see a baseball game,
While wintry winds from noon till dark
Coagulate our frame.

Several newspapers inform us that the Tigers have acquired Pipp. A study of recent box scores leads to the same conclusion.

Finis Wilson is the name of a youthful pitcher sent to the Southern League by the Naps. He may be a promising young man, but that is no name for a beginner.

Still, if George Stovall loses his job in St. Louis he will be welcomed by Spitzbergen in the Polar League.

J. Jeffries arises to remark that he will not be anybody's sparring partner. Having once enacted the role of a punching bag, he knows how it feels.

While those Sox and Giants are touring the universe it behooves them to pause in Africa so as to compare the American and African brands of ivory.

RASSLING.

You may pan, you may hammer the game if you will,
But thousands of suckers will fall for it still.

TOM M'CAREY'S PET PRESERVES TO BE INVADED

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Tom McCarey, who has been operating as a boxing promoter in this section of the country for years without opposition, to-day confronts a rival organization.

Backed by big money powers and assured by the Vernon authorities every right that McCarey enjoys, Harry will soon begin to lay plans for the erection of an open air arena down by the beach.

Gilmore will throw open his new club to the public on July 4. A certified check of $20,000 has been placed in the bank here to enable him to work out his plans. Harry is matchmaker of the organization, with William Aldrich president. None but high class matches will be staged.

A contest between Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers for the world's lightweight championship is the opening card desired.

A flat offer of $17,000 has been telegraphed to Ritchie. Negotiations will be taken up with Rivers immediately.

"That covers the situation," said Gilmore. "Our hats are in the ring and they are going to stay there."

Articles of incorporation will be filed inside the next three days.

BATTERS CAN BE DEVELOPED SAYS MEYERS

By John (Chief) Meyers.

BATTING ability is the high art of baseball. True skill with the stick hides many a minor fault. Brilliancy in all other lines pales into nothingness if not backed by at least average hitting power.

There is a so-called axiom in our profession that "batters are born, not made." I disagree with such logic. There is the same opportunity for improvement in batting as in fielding or base running.

Not every one, of course, no matter how studious, may become a Ty Cobb or a Honus Wagner. And it is a mighty good thing for the pitchers and catchers that this is so. Few athletes have the lightning speed of Cobb, which enables him to beat plenty of infield taps which would be easy outs against average runners. Few again have the muscular power of Wagner, which enables him to drive the ball with rifle-like velocity.

300 Notch Real Feat.

When one stops to consider conditions, a .300 batting average strikes home as real achievement. It means hitting safely three times in every ten chances.

The batsmen, single-handed, must fight an army of obstacles.

In the first place he has a perfectly round stick with which to change the direction and propel a perfectly round ball thrown from a distance of 65 feet with all the force of human power.

He has approximately half a second from the time the ball leaves the pitcher's fingers until it is up to him. In that half-second he must swing his bat so that the curved surfaces of the two objects (bat and ball) meet fairly in the middle of their respective lines of flight.

Now there are nine agile and active opponents so distributed throughout the playing field that any sort of high fly means certain retirement.

If the batter hits a fraction of an inch over the ball he sends it down to the ground where the speed is checked, and where it is generally quite easy for one of the infielders to intercept it.

Add to these complications a skilled pitcher who can make the ball vary many ways in its flight to the plate, and that little half second of grace dwindles almost into an infinity. The wonder then is that so many reach the select class.

Chief Tells Secret.

Still there are certain principles of batting science that will help to overcome these obstacles. The most important, to my mind, is that of meeting the ball in front of the body. This is no more than the swing of the player who is termed the natural hitter. Zimmerman, Wagner, Lajoie, Doyle and Cobb all employ the style.

Some of them may do it all unconsciously. I know I did for several years before I joined the Giants. McGraw pointed out to me the reason. He drills and drills this idea into his men.

Al Bridwell is a player that I would term a "made" hitter. In a pinch he was one of our most trusty batsmen, for he was sure to play every shade in his own favor. Bridwell became proficient by learning to meet the ball in front of himself.

Uppercutting Is Fatal.

In the old days great hitters, like McGraw and Jennings, used to run out to meet the ball before it broke. The present rule about staying in the batters' box prevents this. But the principle may be applied through the medium of the natural swing.

The swing should be made in a horizontal arc. The bat naturally has a tendency to propel the ball directly in its course.

An "uppercutter" is a batsman whose thrust ascends after the fashion of fungo hitters. This style of hitter usually raises high flies or pop-ups, and can never hope to become proficient.

A downward stroke is practically as weak, for by it it is practically impossible to hit the ball with speed along the ground.

SEATTLE CREW TO ROW IN EASTERN REGATTA

MAY BATTLES BRING HEAVIES TO LAST ROUND

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—In the balance of his journey toward the championship goal Gunboat Smith will have to do principally with cowboys. The rough riders he has to work past are Luth McCarty and Jess Willard and if he can escape being thrown, roped and branded he will be in a position to write champion heavyweight of the world after his name.

At least that is the way the heavyweight outlook looms at present. That the Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard bout at Coffroth's Eighth Street arena on May 17 will be the semi-final in the blue ribbon tourney is universally admitted. But that Luther McCarty will be the man the winner will meet is not so sure. Luther is to hook up with Arthur Pelky at Calgary on May 24 and while it does not look as though McCarty is endangering his title, you can't always tell.

Pelky is the big husky who recently held his own with Tommy Burns and vanquished Andy Morris. That may not be much, to be sure, but it suggests that Mr. Pelky is "a buildin' up." There are no really finished products among latter day white hopes and the sporting world is apt at any time to ring with the praises of some new heavyweight who was scarcely known twenty-four hours before.

Willard Defeated Pelky.

It's strange how Pelky's fortunes have been linked with those of Jess Willard and Lute McCarty. Willard defeated Pelky in New York. At another time Pelky was to box Luther McCarty and failed to put in an appearance. Willard took his place at short notice and, in the opinion of Eastern sport writers, outboxed McCarty. Now McCarty and Pelky are to meet at Calgary.

The month of May will surely clear the way for a decisive championship encounter. The Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard and Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky bouts are only a week apart and there should be little difficulty in signing the two victors for a Fourth of July match. It is understood that Promoter Coffroth has his eye on the attraction and it is to be hoped he lands it, for it will be the biggest thing that has happened in pugilistic circles for a long time.

O'CONNOR IS TICKLED; HE WINS HIS LAW SUIT

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Jack O'Connor, veteran ball player, was happy to-day over the court's ruling yesterday that the St. Louis American League club must pay him the $5,000 salary which he claimed was due him. O'Connor was demoted as manager of the club before the expiration of his contract.

Heisman Ranks Alabama Second Dobson Works Miracle at Clemson

By J. W. Heisman.

THE first two games of the Tech-Georgia series were the big noise in college circles last week. They did not have much bearing on the championship no matter how they came out, but they were of special interest to all Georgians and of some interest to all Southerners, nevertheless.

No matter how grand a record either of these teams may make or how punk, up to the time when they don the gloves for each other, everybody has come to understand that it is going to be a battle to the frayed and frazzled finish between the two despite any seeming disparities.

Over and over again this has happened in the past, and the apparently weaker team has overthrown the stronger to the bewilderment of all followers of the college game in the South. And realizing this to be a fact, as they more and more are doing, people in larger and larger numbers each year find it well worth while to cut out some other attraction and arrange their affairs so they can go and see the Tech-Georgia games, whether they take place in Athens or in Atlanta. That is the explanation of the huge crowds that last Friday and Saturday witnessed these contests in Athens. On these two days all previous Athens records for baseball attendance were badly shattered, notwithstanding it appeared to the man without bias that Georgia was bound to make a runaway affair of both games. Those who remembered their baseball history, though, couldn't see it that way, and made sure of being on hand when the factory whistle blew.

Nor were they disappointed, for if ever there were two hard-fought and evenly-contested games anywhere, these were they. Both games were lost by Georgia by a margin of one run only, and in both the Athenians had men on bases when their last batter was retired in the last half of the ninth inning.

What now about the comparative strength of the two teams? Before these games the records of the two teams seemed to have settled that matter pretty thoroughly. But when it comes to the all-around effectiveness and playing ability of the two teams right now—as they played yesterday and as they would play to-day—that may be a very different matter.

Despite the promising nature of the new material on hand this spring at Tech, it early became evident that seven new men on the team meant a badly balanced organization, and one that was bound to get some bad bumps from first to last before the season was over. With this fact recognized, high aims for a whole season's record were ruthlessly abandoned, and every word and plan and step of action was bent toward whipping the green team in such condition of preparedness and fitness as would result in their giving a good account of themselves in the Georgia series alone. That result has, seemingly, been attained by the Yellow Jackets, and that is the season why they appear to-day to be a match for the Red and Black, whereas a month ago they would have been mince pie for their rivals.

* * *

BUT do not be misled into believing that the tables are turned to any such extent as to make of Georgia mince, or any other kind of pie for Tech. Far, very far, from it.

Tech won the first games by a hair's breadth only: and perhaps they have good old side pal Mr. O'Confidence to thank for helping them to even this much margin.

* * *

PRAISE, more praise, and yet again praise, is what is overdue the Clemson team and Coach Dobson for the way they have fought their way to the light out of dark wilderness and triumphed over teams that were whole laps ahead of them in form and condition when the season opened. Two out of three from Auburn on the latter's own playground is a glorious finish to a game, up-hill season. And I cannot forbear to cite the fact, unknown to many in this section, that besides winning ten straight from the colleges of South Carolina, the Tigers wrested a 4-3 victory from the University of North Carolina and played Trinity a 14-inning 3-3 game at Durham. This certainly puts them up in the running in the estimation of all fair-minded fans.

By Way of Aftermath

A few points that neither the box scores, nor yet the detail of the games, show of the recent Tech-Georgia battles may be worth jotting down.

* * *

I never saw amateur pitchers who can wheel and throw to second any quicker or more accurately than do Corley and Morris. They must have put in hours and hours of practice to have acquired this precision: it was very fine.

* * *

* * *

Wootten, the Tech freshman, grandly justified my judgment in putting him back into the game as a varsity man in spite of his failure to get a single hit in the entire first eight college games in which he played. Who shall say how much his home run (the only one of the series) the first time he stepped to the plate didn't have to do with the winning of both games by Tech?

* * *

Ginn is the fastest and most finished base runner I have seen in the colleges in many, many years. He gets away with it at any old stage of the game, and no matter how we lay for him.

* * *

On Friday Tech had six men in the game who were playing their first year of varsity ball, and on Saturday they had seven such in the line up. All but one of the ten who played are due to be back next year, and also every last one of the present scrub players; so that Tech men think they have little cause to worry over next year's troubles if not even a single new man comes in.

* * *

To my mind, the umpiring of both the officials was splendid work. I am thoroughly convinced that the final outcome of neither game was affected, or would have been affected, by the changing of any close decisions that came up. Messrs. Harmon and Holland are two fine umpires, two clever gentlemen, two absolute sportsmen: they typify the best traditions of college life and college athletics.

* * *

In another year Amason should size up to thoroughly fill Holliday's shoes at first base. This youngster has even more natural reach and stretch than Holliday, and he is fast picking up in every way. Had McWhorter not been playing unusually deep for him, every one of his three terrific drives to center in Friday's game should have been good for a home run. As he himself puts it, though, all he accomplished was to give Bob a chance to be a hero. (Never mind, "Amy," I am sure Bob appreciates the courtesy.)

* * *

Bob McWhorter is surely one good base runner, and he is as sure and graceful in his handling of fly balls as the cleverest professionals.

* * *

During the past three seasons Fax Montague has made a success of every position in which he has been placed. Now he is a second baseman, and a good one. "Fax" is also a real captain; one of the very best Tech has ever had.

* * *

You'll have to hand it to both Pitts and Eubanks for pulling themselves up from positions of only mediocre reputation to where they have earned the undying gratitude of their college mates. With both it was a case of tightening their belts and their courage up to the very last hole, then "up and at 'em," and, finally, of "staying" with the opposition till the cows came home.

JOHNSON STICKS FINE ON TWO MORE PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 13.—President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has fined Catcher Nunnamaker, of the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Olson, of Cleveland, $25 each for their fist fight in Cleveland last week.

President Johnson said the reports of the fight were greatly exaggerated, and that these two players were the only ones involved in the trouble. He said he obtained a straight story of the trouble from the two players themselves.

MATTY HAS PITCHED 47 INNINGS WITHOUT ALLOWING FREE PASS

NEW YORK, May 13.—Running along with Walter Johnson in his efforts to pitch a record number of scoreless inning is Christy Mathewson, who is setting a mark for perfect control that may never be equaled.

The star twirler of the New York Giants finished his forty-seventh inning yesterday afternoon without a base on balls. Matty has given only two passes this year. That was in the first game he pitched against Boston on April 17.

Matty has won five games and lost one so far this season. He was beaten by the Phillies on May 3, the score being 3 to 2, two men being out when the winning run was scored.

Willard Is Hard Man to Handle Nervousness May Wreck Chances

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 13.—Unless Jess Willard curbs his inclination to extreme nervousness as the day of an important ring battle draws nigh, he is apt to wreck all of the good chances he has of getting to the top of the heap of white hopes that are struggling for recognition at the present time. This is the straight opinion of Charley Cutler, Willard's old friend, and the man who is chiefly responsible for getting the elongated Kansas fighting proposition a good start on the pugilistic sea. Cutler knows the tall Westerner better than anybody else in the world, and while he is still friendly with Willard and eager to see him win, which would justify all of the nice things Cutler has said about him, he fears his one weakness will be his undoing.

* * *

TOM JONES has the Willard affairs in hand right now, and is training him in person for the affair with Gunboat Smith in Jim Coffroth's arena a week from Tuesday. Coast critics are saying some nice things about Jess and the form he is showing out there in his preparation, and that is what moved Cutler to speak at this time. "Knowing Willard as well as I do, I can speak freely of him," the big wrestler-fighter told me the other day. "There is one weakness that he will have to overcome. That is his extreme nervousness the day before a battle and on the day of the event. I wouldn't call it fear exactly, because I have seen some of the gamest men in the world quake as if they had the ague just before stripping to go into the ring. It is merely a high-strung condition, and unless he gets over it his chances of becoming a real star will go glimmering.

* * *

"IT is my honest opinion that Willard is as game, if not gamer, than any of them among the big fellows right now. At heart he knows he can defeat all the Gunboat Smiths they can lead to him, but the fact remains that Willard is a terrible fretter. He gets morbid and morose as the fight draws near, and this is followed by a state of acute nervousness that is apt to completely unfit him for a hard battle. Once he is in the ring and the real work begins, Willard is all right.

* * *

"UNLESS Smith gets him quick and gets him in the right spot, I believe Willard will whip him nicely. Further, it is my opinion that if he does this, he is apt to enter the ring with Luther McCarty at a later date and be made an equal favorite with the big man from Nebraska. I wouldn't venture an opinion on that fight right now, preferring to see how Willard comes out with Smith. If he can whip the Gunboat he will have a lot of confidence, and then he will be a mighty hard man to beat."

CRACKERS CAN HOLD MEMPHIS EVEN—J. AGLER

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 13.—"King" Brady will be the selection to twirl the second game for the Crackers, with Graham receiving. Bernhard will probably use Kissinger and Seabaugh.

The Crackers lost the opener here. The Turtles come from rear and overcame five runs obtained by us.

Chappelle made his debut in a Cracker uniform and was knocked off of the rubber. Furchner, who succeeded him, was treated very roughly by the Turtles.

The Crackers hit the ball hard, but it seems lately that the luck breaks with the other team. The Crackers scored all the runs in one inning and was not able to score again. The necessary wallop could not be produced.

Chappelle had everything at first, but weakened, and the Turtles romped on him, which will win many ball games for them.

"King" Brady should win his game to-day with his steadiness and control. He is the kind of a pitcher that will win from this club.

The Turtles are drawing well. They have big crowds and are supporting a good team. We should at least break even here, and that would give us an even chance to keep above the .500 mark on this road trip.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HUSBAND, sed ma, did you reed that peece in the paiper the other day wich sed that a prominent sientist sed that baseball was the curse of the United States?

No, I dident see that artikel, sed Pa, but the way it sounds I bet it was in a Sunday paiper. How often have I toald you, sed Pa, that you mussent beleeve everything you see in the Sunday paipers? I guess I will have to stop bringing the Sunday paipers hoam, sed Pa. All you read in them is freek stories like the one you was jest telling about or else the ads. After you reed the freek stories you talk about them & think about them all the week, & after you reed the ads you cry all the afternoon & say you cud be perfeckly happy if you jest had a few thousand dollars to go shopping with.

That isent so, sed Ma. You know it isent so. All I sed I wanted to go shopping with was a few hundred not a few thousand. & beesides, this artikel about baseball was the truth, beekaus I happen to know the great sientist wich gaiv the interview to the paiper. He & his wife is cumming up to the house to dinner tonite. You will have a chanst to meet him. He is a reely grate man, Ma sed, beekaus eeven his wife thinks so.

Another Scientist.

Oh deer, sed Pa, & so we have got to feed another sientist. I havent forgot yet, sed Pa, the sientist wich caim to see us last fall, the one wich was trying to prove that fishes breethed thru thare scales & not thru thare gills. He didn't talk anything else except fish, & we had fish for dinner that day, too. I saw fish in my sleep that nite, sed Pa.

Oh, this sientist is different, sed Ma. He is interested in man, not fish. He beleeves that every man shud have the fizeck of a old Roman gladitor & wud have it if he observed the proper rules of hy-geen. That is why he thinks that baseball is the curse of the United States. He will explain it all to you wen he cums tonite.

Well, that nite the sientist & his wife caim to dinner. He was a littel bit of a man & his wife was a fine big woman. She looked as if she cud have been a White Hope if she didn't happen to be a woman insted of a man. Her husband squeeked like a mouse wen he talked, & his hands was thin like birds feet. If I was a man I wud like to marry his wife, but if I was a lady I wuddent like to marry the sientist.

The sientist dident talk about sience during the dinner. I thought from what Ma sed about hy-geen that he wud be vary careful about what he ate, but he wasent. I nevver seen a man eet so much. I guess the way his wife looked at him he had forgot what she toald him about over-eeting beefoar they left hoam to cum to our house. But after dinner Pa started rite in on him.

I was to the ball gaim to-day, sed Pa. I was sorry old Matty had to lose that gaim. He pitched one of the grandest gaims of his career.

He Detested It.

I detest baseball, sed the sientist. It is the curse of the country. Jest think of it, sum days thare are maybe twenty thousand men watching a gaim of ball wen thay ought to be exercising themselfs insted of watching 18 men that are doing the exercising. If they were all out exercising themselfs, thay mite be trained athleets too.

Do you exercise? ser Pa.

What kind of a trained athleet are you? sed Pa.

That is neether here nor thare, sed the sientist. He saw his wife laffing & he was gitting mad.

I nevver exercise much, sed Pa, & I nevver mis a ball gaim wen my bizness will let me git away, but I feel as fine as silk & I guess I cud give Sam Langford quite a fite as long as my wind lasted. Baseball is not the curse of the United States, sed Pa, with all due deference to yure opinyun. Baseball is the grandest gaim that was evver invented. How to Tell the Bite of a Venomous Snake

IF you should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so-called harmless variety, look at the injury.

If there are four punctures, or even three, the chances are that it was not a venomous snake; but if there are only two punctures it is probable that you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake.

While this does not always hold good, as a non-poisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake's deadly fangs are but two—generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should, whenever possible, be kept for identification.

If, as generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more bands above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next, wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available, suck the wound, then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now, wash the wound well, and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution; or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely, not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whisky, if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whisky than by snake bite.

When positively certain that the poison has been removed from the wound, loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them, so they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical care, and the wound should be kept open by packing with wet antiseptic gauge, as sepsis and local gangrene often follow a snake bite.

Weak Sickly Ailing Women

What more can we do to convince you that you positively can find perfect health and relief from your suffering by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? All the world knows of the wonderful cures which have been made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, yet some women do not yet realize that all that is claimed for it is true.

Bluffton, Ohio. — "I wish to thank you for the good I derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sometime ago. I suffered each month such agony that I could scarcely endure, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely cured.

"Then I had an attack of organic inflammation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am cured. I thank you for what your remedies have done for me and should anything bother me again, I shall use it again, for I have great faith in your remedies. You may use my testimonial and welcome. I tell every one what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs Rhoda Wingate, Box 395, Bluffton, Ohio.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. Alice Darling, R. F. D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

THE PROBLEM OF THE RED MAN

An Interesting Discussion of a Vigorous Article on the American Indian in Hearst's Magazine for May

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

WE do not see ourselves as others see us, and that is as true of nations as of individuals.

To our eyes the red man has practically sunk out of sight. To European eyes he is still the most picturesque figure in the Western world. If you doubt that statement, then, the next time you are in Europe fall into conversation with any intelligent Frenchman, German or other native of the Old World, about life in America, and you will be likely to discover that he is much more deeply interested in Indians than in fifty-story buildings. Even the wonders of the Panama Canal appeal to him with far less force than do the history and the fate of those unique tribes which owned this continent in fee simple for centuries before our ancestors landed upon its shores.

If you have imbued yourself with the notion that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian," you may be a little vexed to find that our contemporaries abroad, with their bird's-eye view of things on this side of the water, persist in regarding the American red man as a personage quite as interesting to the philosophical observer as the American white man, and infinitely more romantic.

In Hearst's Magazine.

Then you might with advantage turn to an article in this month's number of Hearts's Magazine, where Mr. Francis E. Leupp, recently Indian Commissioner, explains his ideas about the way we have heretofore treated the red men and the way we ought to treat him.

A great-brained European once said to me: "I am a friend of your country and an enthusiastic admirer of its ideals, but I most respectfully protest against the manner in which you have dealt with one of the most interesting races that ever existed on this earth. Pardon me for saying that I think you have done very wrong. You might have kept him and made a good citizen of him, instead of driving him into extinction, or, what is even worse, into racial abasement."

A Similar View.

Mr. Leupp appears to take a similar view. He has ideas about the capacity of the Indian for civilization, and about the best way to develop that capacity, which ought to command the attention of a liberty-loving and fair-dealing people.

The sole idea of our Government seems to have been to make a farmer of every Indian. "Give him a farm and make him work it," has been the slogan. And when the poor Indian, ignorant of the white man's science and the white man's methods, fails to become a successful farmer in a single generation or less he is condemned as good for nothing and treated with contempt and with renewed injustice.

Disregarding the fact that he has neither the capital to develop his farm nor the experience to enable him to compete in agriculture with men of European origin, whose ancestors were trained in that kind of industry long before America was discovered, the red man is required to devote himself exclusively to work for which, in many cases, he is racially and constitutionally unfitted, or else to become a drunkard and a pauper.

Some Indians make good farmers. Some of them have the gift and the ancestral tendency. Every reader of our history knows what the Iroquois Indians did in the fertile valleys of Central and Western New York. When General Sullivan mercilessly raided the lake region of New York he destroyed farms and stores of grain, of which any industrious European agricultural community might have been proud. That was a war measure and, as such, perhaps, excusable at the time. But suppose that an enlightened government had taken pains to develop the skill of the Indians in cultivation after peace had been established.

It may be replied that the Indians ran away and refused to be civilized. True, in part; but at last they could no longer run beyond the white man's reach. As Red Jacket once eloquently expressed it, "We are become a small island in the bosom of the great waters. We are encircled; we are encompassed. The waters rise; they press upon us; and the waves once settled over us, we disappear forever!"

Made Him a Brute.

Taking advantage of the terrible effect that "fire-water"—whisky!—had upon the unimmunized red man, his white enemies pressed it upon him, as they press it upon him still, until he became a brute in spite of himself.

The Indian has many useful capacities which he would develop if he had a proper opportunity, but the opportunity is refused to him. Read what Mr. Leupp has to say about the multitude of red men who take naturally to mechanic arts and to various trades, and the hopelessness of their struggle against the immense agricultural units that his white competitors, with comparatively unlimited capital, are developing around him, and you may be led to exert your influence to have the doors of opportunity opened wider to this long-cheated race.

We may consistently keep out Japanese, but the Indian was here before we were, and the principles of eternal justice demand that he shall not have the door shut in his face.

The Poet's Plea

IT was all over. They were in the the carriage at last, man and wife, driving back to the wedding breakfast. But suddenly, without warning, the youthful bride burst into heartrending sobs.

"Oh-o!" she cried. "Oh-o! Oh-o!"

"My dearest dear!" breathed the new-made hubby. Why does my pet weep so on her wedding day? Tell her hubsie-wubsie all about it, then!"

"Marmaduke, I've hidden something from you. I've not told you all. Alas! What shall I do?"

Marmaduke's heart stood still for what seemed to him a century, but was, in reality, a second; then:

"Tell me"—and his voice was hoarse—"tell me what you mean at once! I can not bear this suspense!"

"I c-can not c-ook!" sobbed the little wife.

"Oh, lovey, is that all?" the young man cried, as his heart beats slowed to normal time. "You frightened me! But worry not. I am a poet, and there will be precious little to cook!"

Are Children a Duty?

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

I.

BEFORE beginning these three short plain talks it may be well to warn the idealist who allows sentimental tradition to preclude honest and independent thought to read no further lest he or she be shocked—possibly scandalized. Yet one should bear in mind also the fact that there is a sentimentality sometimes degenerating into a selfishness that amounts almost to cruelty. Such cruelty unpremeditated and unrecognized.

Bearing this truth in mind one may almost dare to reply in the negative to the question asked above.

For that question is not, Are children a joy, a comfort, a privilege? but, Are they a duty?

Race Would Die Out.

Doubt comes often to one's mind in reading the opinions of certain writers who discourse on the sin of childlessness, the evils of race suicide, the selfishness of unfruitful marriages. Right here one may pause to acknowledge that the arguments in favor of child-bearing to perpetuate the race are irrefutable. One cannot erect a building without material, and the race would die out were there no children born. So, for the purpose of continuing the species, children are certainly essential.

But of those who inveigh against the iniquity of childlessness only a few look at the matter from the standpoint of the good of their kind. I think I am safe in asserting that not one parent in one thousand has sons or daughters for the express purpose of perpetuating the race. So we will leave that aspect of the question out of consideration.

Some expressions become so common that we take them at their face value without analyzing them. Some opinions have been voiced for so long that their very age confers upon them a seeming stability which we seldom thing of disputing.

"I am glad to see that you are one of the women who fulfills her mission in life," was said to a mother of eight children. "You have been conscientiously doing your duty in having a goodly number of sons and daughters."

"Yes," assented the pale-faced mother, "through all privations and self-denials I have had the comforting assurance that I was doing my duty."

Surely Not Herself.

To whom? Surely not to herself, for she is a semi-invalid whose frequent attacks of illness are a menace to her life and to the happiness of husband and children; certainly not to the husband who works in a poorly-lighted, ill-ventilated office all day and burns the midnight oil in the effort to make both ends meet, and is always conscious that they never do; assuredly not to the children, the oldest of wrom—a bright lad of sixteen—has had to surrender all hopes of a college education, as his earnings in a shop are required to help support the little brothers and sisters, and to pay the bills of the doctor needed with appalling frequency by the delicate mother. To whom then was the duty performed?

Recently I heard a heated altercation between a mother and her modern and irreverent daughter. At last the mother, losing all patience, burst forth with:

"You girls of the present day do not appreciate all that your mothers did for you! You seem to forget that you owe a debt of gratitude to me, the woman who braved death itself to bring you into the world!"

"I consider it no debt," she declared. "I did not ask to come. Then why should I thank you for bearing me?"

A coarse and vulgar way of stating a truth. Mothers seldom consider whether their children will find the gift of life itself a positive blessing. And after we have brought our children here the least we can do for them is to give them as good an education and as cultivated an environment as possible so that they may start even with their associates. This is one of the few ways in which we can "make up" to them for their having been born.

Some of Us Are Happy.

Does this sound like pessimism? It is not that. Some of us who are glad that we are alive and to whom life has meant much that is joyful and good would not care to live it over again if we had to learn the same lessons, make the same mistakes, suffer the same penalties that we have already known. Now that we are here we love life and want to say as long as we can. Some of us are very happy, others very necessary, others have a natural curiosity to see how it is all going to turn out. But as one cannot miss that which one has never had, we would have missed none of these things had we never been born.

Put the question to any one as to whether he would care to go back and begin life once more as a tiny child, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the reply will be: "Perhaps I would," or "Yes," always coupled with the proviso—"If I could remember the mistakes I have made and profit by them."

But, unfortunately for our children, they will not or cannot profit by the mistakes of their parents. Each one must fight the battle for himself, and win out or fail for himself.

A Cow's Rights

"IT is about time," said the farmer to the hostler, as the two stood passing the time of day, "for these sportsmen to act more sportsmanlike. They ought to quit shooting cattle.

"Nearly all the farms are posted in our part of the county, and we are going to forbid shooting along roads and waterways also.

"I tell you, there is entirely too much cattle shooting.

"A fellow starts out for a week-end hunt. He takes along about forty rounds of ammunition, which gets heavier and heavier during the day. Seeing nothing else to shoot, he shoots a cow, simply to get rid of a shell that costs five cents and weighs a pound.

"I suppose, too, he wants to see the cow jump and run. That is fun for the hunter, but not for the cow nor for the farmers, either. We hate to have a cow come lumbering into the house and crawl under the bed when we are discussing the crop reports.

"Nor is it any fun to get up out of a warm bed and take the broom and jab under a bed or a sofa to chase out a cow that has been shot at and scared. It isn't a bit of fun.

"When it comes to milking that cow it is no easy job. She thinks that every one who comes along has a shooting iron and that she is going to get stung again. Poor, patient animal. She never did any harm except for an occasional thinness in her product.

"Cows, I admit, do not look as graceful and dainty as minuet dancers when they exhibit speed mania characteristics, but there are so many other funny things nowadays that it is unsportsmanlike to shoot cows in order to get this kind of entertainment

"The cow has a perfect right to graze in her owner's pasture unmolested except at milking time, which comes often enough. Besides the responsibilities of the dirty she has files and lots of other things to worry her.

"A man who would shoot a cow or even shoot at her would welcome campaign contributions from any source and root for the opposing team in a world's series."

The "Breach of Promise" Suit, Its Use and Abuse

By DOROTHY DIX.

IN a recent article in this column I expressed the opinion that a man is just as much entitled to a change of mind and a change of heart in matters of the affections as a woman is, and that if a man found out before marriage that he was tired of the woman to whom he was engaged, and no longer wanted her for a wife, he had a perfect right to break the engagement and withdraw from a bargain that would bankrupt his life.

These sentiments have brought a howl of protest from a large number of my feminine readers, who accuse me of being a traitor to my sex, and berate me for encouraging perfidious man to trifle with the tender affections of trusting maidens.

I confess that I don't quite catch the point of view of my correspondents, nor do I grasp their ideal of matrimony. If their theory of marriage is the sordid one of marrying for a home and a meal ticket, and that it is easier for a woman to work a husband than it is to work a typewriter or a sewing machine, or stand behind a counter, then I can see why they think that a man should be compelled to carry out a matrimonial engagement, no matter how loathsome it had become to him, nor how he dreaded the prospect of having to spend the balance of his life with a woman who had lost her every vestige of charm for him.

This argument would have been a good one in the old days, when no gainful occupation were open to women, and the only way a lady had of getting a home was to marry it; but we have changed all of that. Any able-bodied and intelligent girl can support herself quite as well as a husband is likely to do it, and in consequence marriage has become a sentimental luxury and not a bread-and-butter necessity, as it used to be.

If you should suggest to the average high-spirited and independent girl of to-day that she should coerce an unwilling and protesting man into marching to the altar with her she would overwhelm you with her scorn. She would say that in her opinion the woman who married for a living earned it in the hardest way on earth, and that she thanked God she didn't have to make hers that way.

She would also remark that she was not a confidence woman who ran a skin game on any sentimental Tommy, nor was she a Lady Shylock who would exact the last drop of blood in a man's heart in payment of a little indiscreet love-making. Further, she would add, as did one girl that I knew, that if any man could get tired of a love affair sooner than she did and change his mind quicker he would certainly be a marvel of rapid action.

Admitting that few young women in this day are willing to marry a man just solely for the sake of the loaves and fishes that he can provide, on what ground can my correspondents advocate the holding of an unwilling man to a matrimonial engagement he has made?

Certainly no one who knows anything of life can hope that such a marriage will bring any happiness to the woman, or result in anything but misery for both parties. Malignity itself could devise no more cruel fate than the long-drawn-out years of torture that are the portion of an unloved and undesired wife. She drinks the very dregs of the cup of humiliation.

Even in the ordinary marriage, where the swain is romantically and passionately in love, and when he counts impatiently the hours to the wedding day, the ardor of the man cools off soon enough. It is not long before he ceases to take any interest in holding his wife's hand, and when he goes to sleep of an evening when she tries to talk to him, and begins to have business that keeps him downtown of evenings. You could count on the fingers of one hand every husband you know who is still a lover after five years of married life.

What prospects of domestic felicity has a woman, then, if she forces a man to marry her who does not want to, who is not in love with her, and who is already tired of her before the long matrimonial journey begins? To say that he will fall in love with her after marriage, and that she will win his heart by her devotion and her goodness, is to talk idiotic nonsense. The whole tendency of matrimony is to disillusion. It thrusts people together in a relationship where their personalities clash, and where they strike fire out of each other's temper and temperament.

Brings Out Faults.

Matrimony brings out every fault in a woman as exaggerated as if it were under a magnifying glass, and the woman who could not win a man, nor hold him, when she had all the allure of distance, of always being primped up, and on her best behavior, can never do it in close quarters of domesticity, where her husband sees her in her everyday clothes and surrounded with an aura of bills and boiled dinners.

Canaries have been bred in cages so many generations that they are perfectly satisfied to live in cages. Women have been bred for so many centuries to put up with whatever domestic lot they draw in life that they endure an unhappy marriage with stoic fortitude, and many of them put up a pretty good bluff at loving a husband they actually hate.

But men have no such finesse, no such patience, no such amiable hypocrisy. When a man is married to a woman of whom he has grown tired, and who bores him, he frankly neglects her. If he is forced to marry a woman after he has ceased to care for her he makes her pay for it by his brutalities to her, so it is incomprehensible why any one should think it better for a woman to compel a man to marry her when he doesn't want to than to be jilted.

In reality such a marriage is the substitution of a gnawing agony that never ends for a scratch that hurts for a moment and then heals. A woman may not even collect a debt of honor from the man who has compromised her without being far worse off than if she had wiped the slate clean and blotted out his score against her.

The Return of Grandmother's Hat

Described by Olivette, The Georgian's Fashion Expert

THE hat of grandmother's day is with us again, with all the charm of modern improvements.

If you have an old leghorn, cut it down and bind the edge of the brim with wide shadow or burgundy lace.

Tilt the hat to the proper angle with one of the "halos" we have so long discarded and bank the flat crown with forget-me-nots or any dainty little flower.

Here and there a wee bunch of roses in contrasting color add an effective touch, and the soft taffeta streamers pendant from beneath the brim sound the final not of becomingness and follow the latest Persian fancy.

A Fetching Model.

The top picture shows a fetching model developed in black satin, with a tiny cord of pale gray satin at the edge of the slightly rolled brim.

At the left of the back are two graceful, long-fronted plumes of uncurled ostrich.

Black satin ribbon tied in a loose knot holds the brim in front, encircles the sloping crown and falls in two "follow-me-lads" streamers from the even loops of a large bow directly at the base of the plumes in the center of the back.

In these days of bright coloring the home milliner may copy this becoming hat at small expense if she owns two feathers long useless because of the popularity of black and white.

UNCLE JOHN'S PROPHECY

To-day's Short Story

"UNCLE JOHN always did have luck with him," said the man with the big black cigar. "Don't tell me that a man can prophesy disaster and always get away with it unless there is some supernatural agency of evil helping him!

"I've always been fond of Uncle John and his aversion to automobiles has pained me deeply, since I own three, and with the purchase of each one his bewildered wrath at me has increased. Each time a machine was added to my garage the mails have sizzled with the letters from Uncle John remonstrating with me. His idea of an automobile is that it is a diabolical contrivance straight from the regions below, and that those who risk their lives in one should be restrained in an asylum for the feeble minded.

Nearly Wept.

"The last time I went East on business I hired a touring car and a driver in order that I might cover ground quickly, and as Uncle John lived in the city I was visiting, I naturally went up to see him. The first time I called he nearly wept over me because he had witnessed my arrival in the big red car. He had visiting him his brother from Maine, whose ideas of automobiles were even more primitive than Uncle John's—but Uncle Henry had some excuse, for he lives in a region where there aren't any automobiles.

"Each of them called upon the other to witness that I was a reckless young thing and probably would meet my doom before I left the city.

"I resolved to put an end forever to such foolishness and to show Uncle John that automobiles were harmless things that would eat out of one's hand if properly approached. So the next day I came again in my big red car and with an expression of firmness and resolve.

"'Uncle John,' I said, without any preliminaries, 'I have come to take you and Uncle Henry out for a ride in my machine! Get on your things!'

"After they had fainted and been revived we thrashed the matter out. They had been strong men in their youth, but they were no match for me now, so I won out. I really felt sorry for Uncle Henry as he went trembling out to the machine.

"'Remember, George,' he said, 'that my will and other valuable papers are down in the trust valuts. I have the feeling that something dreadful is going to come of this, but it is all due to your persistence. I am going because I can't help myself. I never expect to return to my comfortable fireside, but I suppose I have lived the allotted span, and perhaps the good Lord chooses to have me go this way. It seems hard, though.'

"Of course, I laughed at him. I told him airily that positively nothing could happen and that I expected that he and Uncle Henry would be buying a car themselves by another week.

"Well, I started out with those two timorous old men, honestly resolved to give them the time of their lives and banish their absurd fears. I know all about cars, and my driver was an extra good one, so I guess what happened was my fault.

"I told him to turn a corner an instant later than I should have told him. The steering gear locked, I think, or else it was just that little imp of bad luck. My lovely red car choked, gurgled and then shot straight at the curb, which it skimmed over as lightly as a bird. Then it absent-mindedly hit the coping between the sidewalk and the lawn, and as it was only an imitation stone coping, it merely brushed it aside without breaking it.

Snapped the Tree.

"Continuing our program, we gouged across a fine lawn and aimed at a choice tree that apparently had been recently set out, because its throat was still tied up in burlap. We snapped that tree in two as though it were a straw, and with the top part dangling coquettishly above Uncle John and Uncle Henry and the radiator of the machine perched rakishly on the mangled stump we came to a pause.

"About a million people surrounded us at once. I didn't even look at Uncle John and Uncle Henry. I just faded out of that car. They were on the street car traveling back home before the driver and I got the car off the tree stump. I had to hunt them up, though, to see how their nerves stood the shock.

"'Did you do anything in reparation for the frightful damage you created?' Uncle Henry asked me in awful tones.

"'Yes, uncle,' said I, 'I pushed the coping back into place and stuck it down with a postage stamp, and as the people who lived in the house were not at home to receive my apologies I went to the corner florist and got a bunch of flowers, which I tied to the mangled tree stump.'

"'But wasn't it just Uncle John's luck to have his prophecies come true? He ought to get a job as a weather man!'

BEAUTIFUL HAIR DO YOU WANT IT?

You Can Surely Have It By Using Parisian Sage.

Who does not love a beautiful head of hair? You may think it is a gift that some women are born that way. The fact is, beautiful hair is largely a matter of cultivation, just as you would water the plants in your garden and fertilize the soil.

Parisian Sage is a scientific preparation which the hair and scalp readily absorb. It removes dandruff at once. It puts a stop to itching scalp and makes your whole head feel better—as if your hair had had a square meal.

One application will astonish you—it will double the beauty of the hair. If used daily for a week you will be simply delighted with the result—you will want to tell all your friends that you have discovered Parisian Sage. You should see the number of enthusiastic letters we receive from delighted users.

Parisian Sage is a tea-colored liquid—not sticky or greasy—delicately perfumed, that comes in a fifty-cent bottle. The "Girl With the Auburn Hair" on the package. Get a bottle to-day—always keep it where you can use it daily.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

unless they get out of town. Irwin, the lawyer of General Hastings, whom Aggie Lynch is suing for breach of promise, calls on Mary. He attempts to corner Mary and Aggie, but the girls are too wise for him.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically, but with returning cheerfulness, since he saw the end of his quest in visible form before him. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary who, with a swift movement, caught and held it.

"Not quite yet, Mr. Irwin, I'm afraid," she said, calmly.

But there's the money waiting for you," he protested, indignantly.

The rejoinder from Mary was spoken with great deliberation, yet with a note of determination that caused a quick and acute anxiety to the General's representative.

"I think," May explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, there's no need for all that formality," Irwin urged, with a great appearance of bland friendliness.

"I Thought You Would."

"Just the same," Mary persisted, unimpressed, "I'm quite sure you would better see Mr. Harris first." There was a cadence of insistence in her voice that assured the lawyer as to the futility of further pretense on his part.

"Oh, I see, he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned, and now she smiled in a kindly manner, which, nevertheless, gave no pleasure to the chagrined man before her. As he rose she went on crisply: "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris, Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letter. * * * Good-afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow, which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door. But he was arrested before he reached it by the voice of Mary, speaking again, still in that imperturbable evenness which so rasped his nerves, for all its mellow resonance. But this time there was a sting, of the sharpest, in the words themselves.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled, and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word, after a long moment in which he perceived intently the delicate, yet subtly energetic, loveliness of this slender woman, he walked back to the desk, picked up the money, and restored it to the billcase. This done, at last he spoke, with a new respect in his voice, a quizzical smile on his rather thin lips.

Aggie Ends the Silence.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And with that laudatory confession of her skill, he finally took his departure, while Mary smiled in a triumph she was at no pains to conceal, and Aggie sat gaping astonishment over the surprising turn of events.

It was the latter volatile person who ended the silence that followed on the lawyer's going.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently, "letting all that money go out of the house. * * * Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied, blandly; "but it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it? Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters, and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

Aggie's innocent eyes rounded in an amazed consternation, which was not at all assumed.

"Gee!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned, apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There, he will pay over that same marked money. Then, he will get the letters he wants so much. And, just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics——"

"What's legal ethics?" Aggie demanded, impetuously. "They sound some tasty!" With the comment, she dropped weakly into a chair.

Mary laughed in carefree enjoyment, as well she might after winning the victory in such a battle of wits.

"Oh," she said, happily, "you just get it legally, and you get twice as much!"

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused. She was doing her best to get a clear understanding of the matter, though to her it was all a mystery most esoteric.

Mary reviewed the case succinctly for the other's enlightenment.

"Yes, it's the same game precisely," she affirmed. "A shameless old roue makes love to you, and he writes you a stack of silly letters."

The pouting lips of the listener took on a pathetic droop, and her voice quivered as she spoke with an effective semblance of virginal terror.

"He might have ruined my life!"

"If you had asked him for all this money for the return of his letters, it would have been blackmail, and we'd have gone to jail in all human probability. But we did no such thing—no, indeed! What we did wasn't anything like that in the eyes of the law. What we did was merely to have your lawyer take steps toward a suit for damages for breach of promise of marriage for the sum of ten thousand dollars. Then his lawyer appears in behalf of General Hastings, and there follow a number of conferences between the legal representatives of the opposing parties. By means of these conferences, the two legal gentlemen run up very respectable bills of expenses. In the end, we get our ten thousand dollars, and the flighty old General gets back his letters. * * * My dear," Mary concluded vainglioriously; "we're inside the law, and so we're perfectly safe. And there you are!"

MOTHER

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are only a few certainties in life. One is Mother. You can always depend on her.

Make Mother a present and it pleases her most when it is something that will divide equally among the children.

It frequently happens that Mother has better health than father and the children because she doesn't have time for sickness or any other recreation.

When a child excels its father, he is teased about it, but when it excels its Mother it pleases her almost to death.

Photographs of Mother never look like her, for the reason that she seems to have been idle when they were taken.

The children are sick, Mother is up with them all night; father is sick, and Mother is up with him; but when Mother is sick does anybody know of it but the Lord?

A hen never tries to spread her wings over a rooster-sized son to protect him, but Mothers do it.

When a child has a pain, father's sympathy is dependent on his memory of a similar pain, but Mother's sympathy is independent of all experience.

When Mother prays it is for something she wants for her children, and when father prays it is for something he wants for himself.

A really fine Mother never lets her children see her cry or show cowardice. There are certain qualities that are splendid to remember in connection with Mother, and courage is one of them.

From the time Mother gets up in the morning till she goes to bed at night every one in the household, from her husband to the children and the laundress, takes complaints to her and lays them on her shoulders. It is a task too great for any statistician to enumerate how many complaints a woman hears from the day she enters her home, showered with rice, till the day she leaves it in a box covered with flowers.

There are some bright spots in Mother's life. A great and shining one is when she picks up the stocking bag and finds a stocking that doesn't need darning.

The only human being in the world whose duties and obligations are not bound by the clock is Mother.

And the great sorrow that confronts us, her children, and that will make heaven an unhappy place for her, is that when St. Peter lines us all up and passes out the crowns he will not take our Mother's word for it.

Slave to Fashion.

A butcher in a certain town recently received from a friend abroad a number of small alligators which he proudly displayed in an aquarium in his shop.

A customer came into the shop one afternoon and stood for some time gazing at the reptiles.

Having turned the matter over in his mind, the customer approached the butcher and exclaimed:

"I suppose a body might as well be dead as out of style. Gimme a couple of pounds of alligator!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"But, no—mothers always ask so many questions."

CHAPTER III.

WHEN Jennie got in the house that night and found her motherly boarding house keeper waiting up for her hot tea, she evaded her old friend's look and questions, saying she was tired and had a headache—hurried up stairs to her room, where she could be alone and THINK.

Why had she so long put up with this sordid way of living—no good times, dresses or theaters, such as other girls have. All she ever did was to hurry down to work every morning, a hurried little lunch with the other girls at noon and then back to work till evening, when she would hurry home to supper and then maybe to see some of her girl acquaintances or to the "movies" with girl and boy friends.

How shallow and sordid and monotonous it seemed to Jennie, who had just had dinner in one of the best cafes in town and came home in a taxi-cab for the first time.

What if she hadn't been introduced to the man and what difference did it make if her mother or father didn't know him or approve of him?

Hadn't he been just as nice and polite—a lot more so than some of the boy friends she knew—and hadn't he asked her to "call him up" the next day? But shouldn't she tell her old friend all about the nice time she had that evening?—but no—old woman always asked so many questions—what if THE MAN was a great deal older than she—hadn't he told her that he had a little daughter just her age, but his family was away on a trip to Europe, and he was so lonesome since they were gone, and wouldn't she be his little pal and meet his wife and daughter when they arrived home—and she must bring her mother, too, when his family got back—no, it wouldn't do to tell her mother till then, for she might not understand it like he and Jennie did, didn't she like him just a little bit?

But Jennie went to sleep that night, thinking of a great big, bright restaurant, with its beautifully gowned women, heavenly music, thick carpet, a fountain playing in the center and the "taxi" ride home that was so different from the pokey old street cars she was used to riding in.

She was sound asleep and didn't hear her old friend noiselessly open the door and come into see if there was anything she could do before she went to bed—or hear the murmur "poor little girl—if she just didn't HAVE to work so hard," as she went out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T GIVE HER UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a girl 20 years of age, and she loves me, but there is one thing out of the way with me; I have six fingers on my right hand. So her parents say that it is unlucky to get married. What shall I do with a case like this, as I am worried that I will have to give this girl up. LOVESICK.

Her parents are unfair. If your habits are good, one finger more or less is immaterial, and I regret they haven't the good sense to know it.

You love each other; that is "good luck" enough to banish all the bad.

GIVE HIM UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am just 18 years old and love a man of 25. I have been keeping steady company with him for the past two months, before which time I had heard many wrong things about him, and find that he has an awful reputation among people that know him. He has been a perfect gentleman toward me, and I have learned to love him very dearly, but the way my friends talk bothers me.

N. B. D.

I am sure they would not accuse him without reason, and that it will be for your greater happiness to heed them and give him up.

His First Mistake

ONE of the first tasks they set the curate, who was handicapped by youth and inexperience, was to investigate the bona fides of a "widow woman" who had applied to the church for help. He departed nervously on his errand and knocked, as ill-luck would have it, at the wrong door.

"How long has your poor husband been dead, my good woman? What number of children have you? Are any of them working? If so, what amount of money are they earning, altogether?" were the questions he fired, like shots from a revolver, at the slatternly woman who answered his summons. "I presume I am addressing Mrs. Harriet Smith?" he added, noticing, with alarm, that she looked angry.

"No you ain't," answered the woman snappishly. "My name is Selina Jackson, my bairns go to school, and my 'usband's doin' what is necessary to a plateful of steak and onions at this very moment. Would you like to know anything else? Where I was born? When I was christened? At what age I started courtin'? Perhaps," she concluded, sarcastically, rolling her tattered sleeve up above the elbow, 'you'd like to see my vaccination mark before you go?"

But the bashful curate, redder in the face than a poppy, was already in full flight.

Fry Fish in Cottolene

You can fry fish in Cottolene, and use the remaining fat for frying potatoes or other food. The odor of the fish will not be imparted to the other fried food.

Cottolene is not alone economical for the reason that it can be used over and over, but also because it is richer than butter or lard, and one-third less is required. It is twice as economical as butter; much more economical than lard.

Cottolene makes rich, digestible, tasty, healthful food. Does not make food greasy, and is free from indigestion.

Cottolene is never sold in bulk—always in air-tight tin pails, which protect it from dirt, dust and odors. It is always uniform and dependable.

IMPORTS SHATTER ALL FISCAL MARKS

Manufacturers' Materials Brought in at an Unprecedented Rate, Hides and Wool Excepted.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A statement given out by Secretary of Commerce Redfield indicates the quantities of manufacturers' materials imported into the United States during the present fiscal year will greatly exceed the imports of last year and the mark of any previous year if the figures for the nine months ended March, 1913, be any criterion.

Of the ten important articles forming the bulk of the imports of such materials, cotton, wool, fibres, silk, tin, copper, rubber, hides, lumber and tobacco—the imports will, with but two exceptions, exceed the former high record mark.

The quantity of raw cotton imported during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was over 100,000,000 pounds, as compared with 66,000,000 pounds the same months last year; 163,000,000 pounds of wool, as against 126,000,000 last year; 318,900 tons of fibers, against 231,000; 20,000,000 pounds of raw silk against 16,000,000; 91,000,000 pounds of pig tin against 82,000,000; 234,000,000 pounds of copper pigs, bars, etc., against 206,000,000; 87,000,000 pounds of crude India rubber against 81,000,000; 453,000,000 pounds of hides and skins against 374,000,000; 818,000,000 feet of boards, planks and deals against 645,000,000 feet and 48,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco against 37,000,000 pounds.

The only cases in which the imports for the corresponding period of any previous year exceeded the imports for nine months ended March this year were when the imports of hides and skins amounted to 48,000,000 pounds in 1910, as against 453,000,000 pounds for this year and when in 1896, 1897, 1905, 1909 and 1910 the imports of wool slightly exceeded the imports of the current year.

Oats—No. 2 ..... 36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 13.—May wheat was firm at 89⅛@89⅝c, as the offerings were small at the opening, and there was some demand from shorts. The more deferred months were off ¼@⅝c and were under some pressure.

Liverpool reported the larger world's shipments and favorable European crop prospects as offset by smaller Manitoba offerings and the stronger feeling for Indian and Plate wheat. Northwestern receipts were considerably in excess of a year ago, also the receipts at Winnipeg. The European visible supply showed a small increase.

There was little change in corn and oats, but both of these markets were the smallest fraction lower. The markets of the Old World were quite dull for corn.

There was a stronger feeling for hogs at the yards, but the provision situation was dull and without any change early.

STOCKS FIRM ON SHORT COVERING

Pool Manipulation of Copper and Consolidated Gas Also Credited With Causing Strength.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Central Railroad of New Jersey was again the weakest feature of the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, declining 1 point to 295 on continued reports of a threatened Government suit. This was a drop of 25 points since the close Saturday.

Most of the other stocks were up. Amalgamated Copper began ¼ higher, but soon lost the gain. Southern Pacific acted similarly, commencing with a gain of ⅜, but losing it and making a fractional decline within a half hour. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which has been under pressure for some time, lost ⅛. Union Pacific commenced at 148⅜ for a fractional gain, but soon declined, losing ⅜.

Canadian Pacific lost 1⅜, although it was strong in London on earnings reports. New York, New Haven and Hartford and Northern Pacific gained fractionally. United States Steel common opened at 59¼, unchanged from Monday. Pennsylvania road shaded ⅛. Erie lost the same amount.

The curb market was steady.

A strong tone prevailed in the last hour, most issues making satisfactory gains. Amalgamated Copper crossed 75 for a gain of ½ over the noon level, while United States Steel crossed 60 for an advance of ⅝. Canadian Pacific was under some pressure and shaded fractionally. St. Paul, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific made gains.

Stocks closed strong.

Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

EARLY ADVANCE IN COTTON VANISHES

Recent Buyers Liquidate on News of Good Rains and Bearish Weekly Weather Report.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Firm cables, coupled with bullish weather reports, caused an upturn of from 3 to 4 points at the opening of the cotton market to-day. After the call, however, traders sold and in consequence of the orders, most of which came from profit-takings, the list dropped several points.

Sentiment was mixed.

The early strength in the market was attributed to short covering by Wall Street operators. This buying was based upon the failure of the map to show rains. The official weather map showed a few rains in Georgia, the other Atlantics and Alabama and much lower temperatures in North Carolina. This caused rather free offerings from the ring and selling by recent buyers, which was said to be profit-taking. Prices dropped 3 to 5 points from the opening range, with the exception of May, which held steady at the opening quotation.

It is said those who covered short lines during the past few days will put out these short lines again if there are rains in the Eastern belt within the next twenty-four hours. The bears express the belief that the dry May makes it apparent that the crop will have a good start and they are not inclined to put much confidence in the talk of damage of the excessive dry weather.

The weekly weather report issued at noon was construed as bearish, with the exception of Georgia, which shows the lack of moisture. Texas shows the effect of cold nights, but not seriously.

During the afternoon session the market was under heavy selling pressure, based upon the weather report and May dropped 6 points, July 7, October 8, December 9 and January 7 points from the initial level. The buying was light and scattered.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 5 to 7 points from the final quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: May, 11.52; July, 11.67; August, 11.43; October, 11.08; January, 11.07.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: May, 12.28; July, 12.07; August, 11.65; October, 11.21.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Europe apparently was treated to bad crop news which led to a strong Liverpool, with futures 3 to 4 points better than due. Political news is worse, reporting that almost a state of war exists between Greece and Bulgaria, with actual fighting, the Bulgarians attacking Greek posts and wounded arriving at Saloniki.

Correspondence from Liverpool shows bearish views as to the ultimate course of prices, but opinion is in favor of waiting around 6 pence for a while until more is known about the crop development. The strength of July in New York is still pulling the New Orleans market up, but lack of confidence is shown by restricted support. Current damage reports are regarded as accessory to professional attempts at the part interest and faith in the established record of the benefits of a dry May still predominates.

The greater part of Alabama has had enough rainfall to start the replant, and official records show that sufficient showers fell over a considerable territory of Georgia. The Savannah district shows seven stations with an average of half-inch over night.

Auto Racer Loses Elopement Chase

RACINE, WIS., May 13.—Joe Jorgesberger, automobile racer, lost the most important road race of his career to-day. Jorgesberger, Dan Cupid and Miss Amanda Olles comprised one team. Angry father, the long-distance telephone and the police of Waukegan, Ill., were the other.

In front of the home of a wealthy foundryman, Jorgesberger stopped his racing car shortly before dawn. A girl, with a suitcase, ran to the racing car and jumped in. Jorgesberger and his 17-year-old heiress bride-to-be started for Waukegan.

A few minutes later a car puffed out of the Olles garage. Miss Olles' father was at the wheel. He overtook the elopers as they reached Waukegan and were halted by the police.

'Boy,' 72, on Visit to His 'Dad,' 103, Jailed

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., May 13.—James M. Goldsberry, 72 years old, arrived in Leavenworth to visit his father, Herman Goldsberry, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who is 103 years old. The son, however, began drinking and was arrested. When arraigned before Judge Stewart Brewster in police court he told his age and explained the reason for being here.

Goldsberry unhesitatingly admitted that his grandfather was dead, but that he lived to be 100 years old. Goldsberry was discharged.

Burns Assured of Dynamiting Reward

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—The $10,000 reward offered by the State two years ago for apprehension of the persons responsible for the dynamiting of The Times building in Los Angeles is about to be paid. A bill appropriating that amount to satisfy the claim of Detective William J. Burns passed the Assembly 42 to 14, and was sent to the Governor, having already passed the Senate.

San Francisco members all voted against the bill.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Practical Points in Care of Poultry

Successful Chicken Breeders Look Closely to the Little Things.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

About two weeks before weaning time, put the old hen and her brood in a good roomy brood coop, large enough to accommodate the youngsters until cold weather without crowding. It is so easy to make the change while the hens are with their chicks and so difficult after they are weaned.

If you are trying to raise a lot of young chicks and your time is limited so that you are inclined to throw your youngsters a lot of feed at most any time, having no fixed time or regular amount of feed, better adopt the hopper plan. Keep the hopper full of good mixed grain and another with good beef scraps and a third with grit and oyster shell. A large self-feeding water fountain to be filled once a day. These conveniences, with a good clean roosting coop, and chicks will do better and grow faster than they will as cared for by many hurried people.

The poultry house, either for young chicks or grown fowls, should be so arranged as to allow thorough airing and sunshine. Nothing is so conducive to health as sunshine and fresh air, and nothing will cause more troublesome diseases than a dark and damp house with the air and sunshine kept out. Stick a pin here and prevent wholesale trouble.

It is a good plan to protect your young and growing broods from rats and vermin of all kinds by the dexterous use of a little one-inch mesh poultry wire. It is a much more economical way than to wait until you have one or two broods all broken up by these night raiders, and then go to work to prevent it. Better make the first move yourself than to wait for the rats.

Look out for lice and mites these warm days. Do not let them get the upper hand of you. Keep the house clean, especially the roost poles, and at the points at which they rest upon the support. These are the breeding places. A quart-sized oil can with a small spout, filled with kerosene, can be used to drown them out effectually, running it right along over the roost pole, so that it becomes thoroughly saturated. To rid the fowls of what they have upon their bodies, use a good ready-prepared lice powder of some reliable make and dust the feathers thoroughly of each specimen. Night is a good time to attend to this part of the business.

A good chick feed for small and growing chicks may be made as follows, although it is usually cheaper to buy it ready-mixed: Fine cracked corn, 50 pounds; cracked wheat, 20 pounds; cut hulled oats, 20 pounds; cracked kaffir corn, 7 pounds; broken rice, 5 pounds; millet, 5 pounds; whole flax seed, 1-2 pound. Mix thoroughly and feed dry.

Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me where I can buy some Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks? I have been raising them for a number of years, and now I want to get some new blood. I may buy either the eggs or some cockerels to mate with what I have on hand. I have never seen them advertised anywhere, but thought you would know all about them.

I will certainly appreciate some information about them.

Seneca, S. C. R. B. JACKSON.

Answer.—There is no such breed as the Rose Comb Barred Rock. You are either breeding the old American Dominique, which is colored almost the same as the Barred Rock, but has a rose comb, or you have Wyandotte blood mixed in with Plymouth Rock, and by selecting the Rock color with the rose comb you have what you thought was a Rose Comb Rock.

The American Dominique is a much older breed than the Plymouth Rock, but has never been very popular or extensively bred. It is a good one, nevertheless. It is, however, about two pounds lighter in weight than the Rock and for that reason has not taken the place as a general purpose fowl. If you are really anxious to have a rose comb barred fowl, we would advise you to get the pure Dominique and breed it in its purity, unless that is what you have already. We could not tell without seeing what you have.

Ducks.

FOR SALE—Five ducks, one drake, fawn and white Indian Runners. Harshbarger white egg strain, now laying. Drake matches ducks perfectly in coloring. These fine birds for $15. Should be prize-takers if exhibited. G. Embry, 24 Trotti Street, Kirkwood, Ga. 32-13-5

WHITE DIARRHOEA is the most dreaded of all diseases in little chicks, but if taken in time it can be cured easily. We sell Conkey's and Pratt's remedies for this disease and guarantee a cure. 25c and 50c package.

DON'T let the mites and lice get a start on you; disinfect the poultry houses and runs thoroughly with Pratt's Poultry Disinfectant. No germs can live where you use it and it leaves the place nice and clean. Quart 35c, gallon $1.00.

A GREAT many people advocate feeding baby chicks on a feed that has no corn. We have the Rice special feed that is absolutely free from corn. A good, clean feed at $2.50 per 100 pounds.

IF YOUR BIRD needs a new cage, come in and see how complete our line is; we have them ranging in prices from $1.00 up to $5.00.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Druid Hills Parcel Brings $100 a Foot

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun Buys and Will Build—Peachtree Road Residence—Other Notes.

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun purchased to-day from Druid Hills a large lot on Ponce DeLeon Avenue for $21,400, and will build a handsome home on it. Forrest Adair, Jr., of the Forrest & George Adair agency, handled the transaction. The front foot rate was over $100.

This property is east of S. H. Venable's palatial stone house at the northeast corner of Oaddale Road and Ponce DeLeon Avenue and is known as the old Arkwright place. Mr. Arkwright picked it some time ago to build, but went to another location and swapped his old lot to Druid Hills for the new one. The dimensions of Dr. Calhoun's lot are 214x450 feet. Dr. Calhoun now resides on the north side of West Fifth Street, between the Peachtrees. He expects to keep his present home.

G. Arthur Howell will also soon be a resident of Druid Hills, having started recently a home on Fairview Road to cost $7,500.

J. Clark McMichael has decided to go out Peachtree Road. He broke ground yesterday for his $15,000 two-story residence on the west side of Peachtree just south of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate, half a mile south of Buckhead.

Deeds Gone to Record.

Dr. W. J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National Bank, has sold as executor of the L. F. Blalock estate a triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Whitehall and Humphries Streets to Alex Reeves for $13,750, $3,000 of which was cash. The dimensions are 121 by 200 by 170 feet.

Deeds have also gone to record in the transfer of 385 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to James Morgan from Mrs. Cecelia B. Wallace for a consideration not named. Mrs. Wallace bought this property April 15 from W. J. Brown, Sr., who had acquired it August 3, 1912, from W. J. Brown, Jr., and Milton Strauss for $9,000.

J. J. West has sold to Mrs. Jessie L. Thrash a 50 by 190-foot lot on East Tenth Street, 50 feet east of Bedford Place, for $6,750.

Confirms Brookhaven Sale.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton Superior Court, has confirmed the sale made last Tuesday of the Brookhaven Club to the Brookhaven Estates at $90,000.

This was one of the details which had to be cleared up before a transfer could be made to the Capital City Club, and the said transfer is expected to be made in a few days. The terms of the sale, it is said, have already been agreed on. Possession can be had within two weeks, and it is expected that the Capital City Club will make substantial improvements.

Hotel Planned for Decatur.

Decatur will soon have a hotel costing $100,000, if plans of the Decatur Board of Trade do not go awry. Robert W. Ramspeck, secretary of the board, is in correspondence with Eastern capitalists who have become interested in the project, and a definite announcement is expected to be made in the course of a few weeks.

Who Will Head Realty Board?

There is considerable gossip in Atlanta realty circles as to who will head the Atlanta Real Estate Board this year. The election will be held in July, following the annual outing Saturday, June 14. Among names suggested are those of Harris G White, now vice- president; W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and Carlos Lynes, of the Thomson & Lynes Agency. Other names will probably find their way into the list of nominations. Ralph O. Cochran was the first president of the organization, and he served two terms. Then came Charles P. Glover, the incumbent. A ruling now in effect makes it impossible to stand for re-election, and this will bring out new candidates.

Saturday, June 14, is the date fixed for the annual outing of the real estate men. The outing will be in the nature of a barbecue, and the place will be Cold Springs, where "Jack" Slaton's barbecues are usually held. Mr. Glover and M. C. Kiser, chairman of the entertainment committee, are busy arranging the details of the barbecue, and they expect a record crowd to attend.

R. D. Dorsey's New Home.

R. D. Dorsey, former Buckhead grocer and now connected with the W. E. Treadwell Real Estate Agency, is building a handsome home on the east side of the Ivey Road, 600 feet north of Piedmont Road. This place is north of the recently completed home of W. J. Stoddard. The house will have a stone front, the stone having been taken from Mr. Dorsey's back yard. Mr. Dorsey recently exchanged his former home on Piedmont Road, near Roswell Road, for several lots on Fifteenth Street.

OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY

Requires Forty-Eight Battleships by 1915 to Hold Its Place of Safety.

England carries an unsolved and serious difference with our country over the free passage of American coastwise vessels through our own Panama Canal.

It is impossible to see how our country, in dignity and honor, can meet England's demands along this line.

Japan has sprung a serious issue with our country over the right of California to protect the interests of race and the safety of the citizen by a law regulating the alien and in time hostile ownership of her lands.

Neither England nor Japan would be willing all alone to precipitate a conflict with the United States over the impossible issues they have raised. But with England upon the eastern and Japan upon the western coast of our country in simultaneous demand, and in co-operative menace, the tension becomes both probable and startling.

In the Far East the myriads of Russia and the millions of Austria and Germany front each other behind the gathering antagonism of Pan-Slavism and Germanism.

The war spirit is in the spirit and blood of nations on both sides the sea.

And yet the American Congress, with an apathy that is blind and with a parsimony that is worse than narrow, refuses to equip the American Navy with strength and power to keep the peace in these tremendous times. Every officer and soldier of the American Navy demands two battleships every year. The American Senate demands two battleships every year.

The General Navy Board, without a dissenting voice, makes public its declaration that not one of our thirty-three battleships is ready for war if war should be declared. Germany could put to sea forty-one battleships now. France is ready to-morrow with thirty-eight battleships, and Japan holds in instant readiness thirty-six battleships, while England's mighty navy overshadows them all.

For a hundred years no nation has initiated war with England—because of England's awe-compelling navy.

THAT ENGLISH NAVY IS THE MIGHTIEST PEACE-MAKER AND PEACE-KEEPER THAT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

One hundred years ago it sailed up the Chesapeake and Potomac and burned our capital at Washington. To-day it is great enough to batter our battleships on all the seas and ride once more in destroying insolence to reduce Washington to ashes.

The Georgian is as ardent an advocate of disarmament and universal peace as any newspaper published in America.

But The Georgian has held, and holds to-day, that as long as other nations build big navies we must build a big navy to keep ourselves sufficiently formidable to discourage attack and to protect ourselves if we are assailed. We do not believe in having a large navy one moment longer than a large navy is necessary—any more than we believe in carrying a gun unless a gun is necessary to protect our lives. This newspaper would have welcomed the acceptance of Winston Churchill's proposition for England and Germany to lead the movement for all nations to stop building battlehsips for a single year of peaceful experiment.

But the proposition went unheeded. England and Germany and Japan are building battleships, and the United States must build battleships, too.

The naval experts that we select and pay to tell us what our country needs tell us explicity that to hold its place of safety OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY REQUIRES TO HAVE FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS IN 1915.

THEREFORE, THIS NEWSPAPER, WHICH IS ABOVE ALL THINGS AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, UNHESITATINGLY PLANTS ITSELF IN WHOLE HEARTED AND PERSISTENT ADVOCACY OF FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS BY 1915.

CHEER UP

By M. E. MURRAY.

LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

How Do You Think This Would Look?

This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.

Rev. John E. White Writes on "Was Pierpont Morgan a Christian?"

He Was as Good a Christian, He Says, as His Circumstances Permitted, But His Training and Environment Were Against Him.

Written for The Georgian
By REV. JOHN E. WHITE.
Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE editor of an influential religious paper in Missouri has raised the question about the Christianity of J. Pierpont Morgan.

It may be regarded a venture upon ground of doubtful delicacy to question publicly the religious status of one recently deceased, and particularly to suggest a doubt about the Christianity of a man who made the confession of his personal Christian faith the most conspicuous feature of his last will and testament.

But this editor deals quite fairly and gently with Mr. Morgan and advances no severe judgment against the great financier. He only indicates the perplexity of reconciling the difficulties and contrasts of what Mr. Morgan believed and his life and career implied.

He simply asks whether the Morgan of absolutely orthodox creed, emphatic of humble dependence and devotion and attachment to the Saviorhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ can be harmonized with the character and career of the Morgan who was a man of the world known among men as "cold, severe, austere, indomitable, Ceaserish" and whose life was absorbed in financial ambitions, in personal self-assertion and in laying up treasures on earth for himself and those who helped him in his plans.

It is easier to criticise this editor for raising such a question on the ground of bad taste, than to deny the point of his question on the ground of Christianity itself.

The Rich Man's Religion.

The absolute standard of Christianity is in its founder. The record of whose life and teachings is in the New Testament. He incarnated, defined and illustrated the ideal Christian character.

In the New Testament Christianity took up the case of the rich man and dealt with it in a way to warn and alarm those who had great possessions. That Christianity, according to its founder and its first followers raised solemn questions in the path of every rich man and dealt with him faithfully for the sake of his soul, is a matter of open knowledge.

But the state of mind in modern Christianity is far from encouraging explicit and personal applications of these early principles to the rich Christians of to-day. Orthodox Christianity ordinarily does not take itself quite seriously on this subject, and to apply the message of Jesus to modern men of wealth consistently would risk a serious resentment.

Imagine a great monarch of Mammon in Jerusalem "who gave no public impression of being deeply in love with its fellows and showed no positive evidence of being sorely troubled over the awful hurt of the world, nor sympathized expressly with the stress and strain and struggle of the poor, nor offered his powerful hand directly to the oppressed and the distressed; who accumulated a private fortune twenty times as great as Croesus over in Rome, and who dying, left the bulk of it not for education, not for sending the gospel of the Atonement to the uttermost parts of the earth, not for printing Bibles, not for feeding, clothing and housing the poor; but to his son to perpetuate the great house of Mammon and its power in the world of finance and make to itself other millions."

One cannot help wondering how Jesus Christ would have fitted that situation into his scheme of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how he would have dealt with one of his disciples who insisted on playing that ambitious role. We know at least that the rich men of Jerusalem were not entirely comfortable about the Sermon on the Mount. Nicodemus was a magnate of money at that time.

Perhaps Nicodemus is the luminous exposition of our question, though Mr. Morgan was a more pronounced champion of Christ than ever Nicodemus dared to be, and his creed was as correct as Peter's, and his personal conduct as irreproachable as the rich young ruler's, who had kept the commandments from his youth up.

Mr. Morgan as a Symbol.

There is nothing new or strange in Mr. Morgan's relation to Christianity. He symbolizes to extraordinary advantage the type of the modern millionaire Christian. In his creed and private piety he was in possession of all the Christianity his circumstances would permit.

So far his example is a distinguished one and stands as a rebuke to many with far less fortune who profess Christianity with far less to show for it.

But the issue relating to Mr. Morgan personally in fairness deserves this conclusion: He was as good a Christian as his training and environment made possible.

The remarkable words of personal confession in his will may be indeed his confession rather than his creed. When we read them we may well wonder if he had not realized deeply the pathetic imperfection of a multimillionaire's Christianity.

He threw himself wholly upon the grace of God. He was no longer rich, but poor, no longer great, but small, no longer masterful, but humble.

That confession was the next best thing for a multimillionaire, who desired to inherit Eternal Life, could do for his fellow men.

Winifred Black Writes on "In Love With Love and Not With Anybody"

Being a Little Talk With a Girl Who Thinks That There Is No Joy in Life Because a Certain Young Man Has Ceased to Care For Her.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NOW, my dear girl, why don't you face the truth, the disagreeable, embarrassing truth; look it fairly in the face, and be done with it once and for all?

The man does not care for you. Put all idea that there may be some "misunderstanding," etc., out of your puzzled little head. A man who loves a woman doesn't let any misunderstanding come between him and the girl he loves.

He's tired of you and wants to get rid of you. Why do you pursue him? He is free, white and more than twenty-one. He has a right to love whom he pleases.

He acted as if he loved you? Well, if he did he certainly does not love you now, and what are you going to do about it?

Don't Run After Him!

Write to him again; go and see him? Never, never, never again. You are miserable without him you say. Well, if you run after him you will be miserable also and lose your own self-respect in the bargain.

Don't lose that, whatever happens. Don't do anything that will make the girl you see in the glass ashamed to look you straight in the eyes.

Your heart is broken? No it isn't. It isn't even cracked. Just twenty, poor thing, and "nothing to live for!" Why, it's a joke, a pitiful little joke, but a joke nevertheless. In a year from now you'll laugh at it yourself.

Twenty and a broken heart! Wait till you're forty and see what a tough, ready-to-wear heart you really have, and be glad of it.

This man you are sighing for, ten to one you'd be perfectly miserable with if you did get him. Almost any woman of thirty and past can tell you strange tales of the queer specimens she loved, or thought she loved, when she was twenty.

I remember a dark-browed youth with mournful eyes. I thought him a regular heart-breaker. I used to be afraid to look at him for fear he'd read my desperate secret in my embarrassed glance.

When I heard the dark-browed youth had asked my dearest friend to marry him I thought I'd never live through it, but I did, and danced at the marriage supper, too, and rather gayly at that.

I met the dark-browed youth just the other day. He looked to me rather more than commonplace, and how I had ever admired those hollow eyes and that sallow, stupid face I can't imagine.

You'll Get Over It.

His wife was with him and she did not seem seraphically happy. They say she is a bit of a nagger. I believe I'd have been more than a bit of a nagger if I had been tied up for life to that melancholy failure of a man. So much for dark eyebrows and mournful eyes.

No, my dear, you are not in love with this poor man that you want to follow and write to and call up on the 'phone. You aren't in love with him at all. You are in love with love, that's all. You'll get over it and smile to think it over some sane, comfortable day.

You're just twenty, little girl; only twenty. What on earth do you know, even about yourself? Get acquainted, get acquainted with that little person you see every day in the mirror. How do you know what she may turn out to be?

What! Throw her at some runaway man's head; let her make a goose of herself over some one who can't appreciate her? Don't you do it, little girl. Don't even think of doing it.

And, whisper, don't even hint your secret to a soul. Keep it to yourself, whatever you do, and have it to think of when the moon shines and there's soft music playing somewhere. Hug your foolish story to your breast and be nice and miserable for a while. It will do you good.

She Cried, Too.

Your mother! Oh, you haven't hinted this to her? Why not?

She wouldn't understand? What makes you think that? She's probably the one person on earth who would understand perfectly.

Would it astonish you to learn that when your mother was twenty, before she met your father, she had her romance? Get her to tell you about it to-night when you two are alone and the house is still. You'll be surprised to find that she's really a human being, this mother of yours.

Oh yes, she cried too, and beat her breast and wished to die, and the man didn't look at all like the one she married, either.

Come, come, you are not the only human being who ever was "hopelessly in love" at twenty. Millions of others have lived through it, like yourself. It isn't so important to be happy—it is important to be sensible. Make up your mind to that and some day you'll be astonished to find that you can't remember whether that heart-breaking wave of his hair was on the right or the left side of the part.

Pouf, it's over, the heart-ache and the misery and the folly. All over, and you are all the better for having lived through it.

BABY, KIDNAPED BY AN INSANE NEGRESS, FOUND

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Lucile Arbed, the eighteen-months-old baby kidnaped by an insane negress yesterday, was found in a pitiable condition to-day near an abandoned race track just outside the city, still in custody of the woman. The baby's muffled cries directed the searchers to a stall where the woman was trying to hush it. The child was almost starved, and showed evidence of abuse, but it was not maimed.

ASSEMBLIES FACE SPLIT ON SOCIAL SERVICE

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

Will the Southern Presbyterian Assembly organically unite with one Presbyterian denomination and cut off fraternal relationships with all other protestants?

This is the question which its commissioners probably will be compelled to answer while the Assmebly is in session in Atlanta.

There is little doubt that the Southern Assembly will combine with the United Presbyterian Church, but it is possible that it will sever its connection with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The Federal Council includes practically the combined Protestant forces of the United States, representing 30 different denominations which have a communicant membership of 16,000,000. One of the chief reasons given by those who favor the separation is their objection to the social service platform adopted by the Federal Council.

Platform of Council.

Here is the platform of the Council to which exception has been taken:

The Church must stand:

1. For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

2. For the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage and proper housing.

3. For the fullest possible development for every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.

4. For the abolition of child labor.

5. For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

6. For the abatement and prevention of poverty.

7. For the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.

8. For the conservation of health.

9. For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases and mortality.

For Aiding Workers.

10. For the right of all men to the opportunity of self-maintenance, for safeguarding this right against encroachment of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment.

11. For suitable provision for the old age of the workers, and for those incapacitated by injury.

12. For the right of employees and employers alike to organize for adequate means of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

13. For a release from employment one day in seven.

14. For the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and for that degree of leisure for all, which is a condition of the highest human life.

15. For a living wage as a minimum in every industry, and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

16. For a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

This platform has in substance been

Bandit Pair Fails in Attempt to Hold Up Busch's Private Car

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 13.—Two armed men swung onto the railing of the observation end of the private car of Adolphus Busch, wealthy brewer of St. Louis, early to-day and attempted to board the car. They were thrown off by the speed of the train, which did not slow down as much as they expected for a railway crossing.

The millionaire brewer and his physician were asleep in the car. The attempted robbery was reported here.

The men attempted to board the train a few feet from the spot from where a Kansas City Southern train was held up a few days ago and Jesse J. Short, a millionaire mine owner, of Joplin, Mo., was seriously wounded.

"Mutt" Sues "Jeff" for $1,000 Damages

SHEBOYGAN, WIS., May 13.—A "Mutt and Jeff" case was on trial in the Circuit Court to-day, "Mutt" suing "Jeff" for $1,000 damages for whipping him, breaking three ribs, smashing his false teeth and causing other damage.

"Mutt," otherwise Fred Daetz, and "Jeff," better known as John Goelzer, were working in a gravel pit near Plymouth. Discussion over a keg of beer led to a row and it appears that Goelzer, who is much the smaller of the two men, put Daetz out of the game.

Daetz is six feet two inches tall, weighs 195 pounds. Goelzer is five feet, four inches in height, weighs 115 pounds.

Burleson Confronted by $600,000 Deficit

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Postmaster General Burleson is confronted with an actual deficit in postal funds that will cause serious curtailment of the postal service unless Congress passes an appropriation of $600,000 by May 15.

The House passed an appropriation bill carrying $600,000 to supply the impending deficit. The Senate must quickly act on the measure if it is to become law by May 15. The deficit has been brought about by unforeseen consequences resulting from the eight-hour law for postal employees, passed at the last session of Congress, and the parcel post.

Wiggles Barred at Police Picnic Dance

The recent dances that have met with considerable public disapproval will not be permitted at the outing.

Borden Heiress in West With Mother

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Ramona Borden, daughter of Gail Borden, millionaire New York milkman, who startled her family and friends a few weeks ago by disappearing from an Eastern sanitarium, to-day arrived in Los Angeles with her mother.

The girl ran away because she wanted to live in the country instead of hotels and sanitariums.

Dr. Neill Leaves U. S. Labor Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Dr. Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor since 1905 and recently made commissioner of labor statistics in the new Department of Labor, resigned to-day to take a position outside the Government service. He was prominently identified with the arbitration of many noted wage disputes under the Erdman act.

DISCUSS TRAVELERS' AID.

The Atlanta Woman's Missionary Association will meet Wednesday morning at 10:45 o'clock in the Central Congregational Church to discuss the Travelers' Aid work, in which the association has been interested.

NEW THEORY IS OFFERED IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Detectives in the Phagan mystery are not centering all their efforts upon Frank and Lee. New theories have been advanced, new clews examined and every possible theory is being investigated.

It was because of these rumors on the streets to-day that a report was spread that an entirely new lead was being followed by Solicitor Dorsey that might eliminate both Frank and Lee.

"There are no developments so far," he said, "which would tend to swerve the prosecution from its present course. The cases of the two men held will be placed before the Grand Jury as soon as the evidence against them can be properly shaped, unless other developments justify a change."

New Theory Investigated.

The new theory alluded to has been submitted by a private detective employed by the Solicitor's office. The man, whose identity has not been revealed, has been working along lines entirely at variance to those pursued by the prosecutor. Mr. Dorsey stated that while as yet no evidence had been produced to substantiate the proposed solution, that his investigators have taken the matter up and will go to the bottom of it. Every available means will be used to prove or disprove the detective's theory.

An important affidavit was added Tuesday to the great mass of evidence already collected by Solicitor Dorsey.

Another affidavit considered of importance was that made by Miss Maggit Wyatt, 44 Pickett Street, who formerly was employed at the pencil factory.

Miss Willie M. Ross, 259 Crew Street, who is said to have heard screams in the pencil factory at 4:30 on the afternoon of the tragedy, appeared at Mr. Dorsey's office in the morning and made an exhaustive statement which she signed.

Dorsey Will Welcome Burns.

When asked later what she knew of the case, Miss Ross declared she had absolutely no knowledge of it.

Solicitor Dorsey, when asked about the report that Detective Burns was coming to Atlanta to take charge of the investigation, declared that he would welcome Mr. Burns.

Colonel Felder, whose correspondence with the great detective gave rise to the report that he would enter the investigation, stated Tuesday morning that he would know positively by Wednesday whether Burns would comply with his request. Mr. Burns is due to arrive in New York from Europe some time Tuesday.

The Grand Jury probably will hold an extra session this week to "clean up" the routine docket in order that there will be nothing to interfere with the Phagan case when it is presented by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey.

Consider Extra Session.

The Solicitor and his assistant, E. A. Stephens, discussed Monday the advisability of an extra session for one day before Friday, the regular meeting day, and may issue a call to the jurors to assemble Wednesday.

The Solicitor explained, however, that it probably would take the two sessions this week to dispose of the routine, and the Phagan case might not reach the jury until Friday of next week, or an extra session to be called the first part of the week.

Mrs. Rudolph Frank, mother of Leo Frank, was seen for the first time at her home in Brooklyn Monday by the newspaper reporters. She de-

H. M. Flagler Dying; Plans for Funeral Already Under Way

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Word was received here this afternoon from West Palm Beach that Henry M. Flagler is rapidly growing weaker and is now unable to take nourishment. Arrangements for his funeral are being made in St. Augustine. He is not expected to live through the day.

Dr. Alfred S. Badger, pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, in St. Augustine, Mr. Flagler's pastor, now is in Atlanta to attend the Presbyterian Assembly.

Movie Men, Perhaps Edison, to Visit Here

Charles M. Seay, general manager of the Thomas A. Edison Company, New York, and possibly the electrical wizard himself, will arrive in Atlanta Thursday with a party of eight for a short visit, according to a dispatch received Tuesday by Benjamin S. Barker, commercial agent of the Southern Railway.

The party will stop at the Georgian Terrace Hotel and make scenic views of the city for the Edison Company.

FIRST WOMAN IS INDICTED AS SLAYER IN MUSCOGEE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—The May term Grand Jury of Muscogee Superior Court has indicted Mrs. Jennie Mae Radcliff and Bill Creen, both white, on murder charges.

Mrs. Radcliff, the first white woman ever indicted in Muscogee County for murder, is charged with the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff, a merchant, April 19. Creen is indicted for killing Otis D. Kitchens, an insurance agent.

SHRINEMEET CONCEDED TO ATLANTA BOOSTERS

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 13.—Forrest Adair filed with the Imperial Council to-day official invitations from Atlanta for next year's session from Governor Brown, Governor-elect Slaton, Mayor Woodward, the Capital City, Transportation, University and Piedmont Driving Clubs and many other social and business organizations and persons in Atlanta.

There seems to be nothing left that might have been done to insure Atlanta's winning the big prize of the session in Dallas. About the hotels and streets it generally is conceded that Atlanta will win.

The parade of the patrols to-day, escorting the Imperial Council to its opening session, was beautiful and served to jam the streets with spectators almost to suffocation. There were about 100 patrols in line, averaging 50 men each; 20 brass bands, and a civic procession of something like 150 filled automobiles. Every patrol was uniformed differently and gorgeously.

Great Parade for To-night.

That parade, bigger and better, for already it is predicted that the attendance in Atlanta next year is to be much heavier than it is here, will look mighty attractive along Whitehall and Peachtree next year. The big parade of the session takes place to-night, when it is expected that about 15,000 Shriners will march in line under the glitter of 100,000 electric lights.

No patrol in to-day's parade attracted more applause and attention than the Yaarab patrol, under Captain J. O. Seamans and Lieutenants Cuts Vandiver and Ashford.

Atlanta's fight was given a big boost to-day when Colonel Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, arrived and plunged headlong into the contest to put Atlanta over. He is one of the best known Shriners in America, and has been of vast help to the Atlanta workers.

Fred Houser, of Atlanta, has the publicity end of the Atlanta campaign in hand and has handled it splendidly. The Dallas papers are full of Atlanta and its enterprise to-day. They all pick the Gate City for a winner in to-morrow's balloting.

Irwin Named Potentate.

At the Texas session, the only thing done of interest to the public was the election of William W. Irwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., to be imperial potentate next year. He will preside in Atlanta and he told me to-day that the fact was particularly gratifying to him.

He has been outspoken in his support of Atlanta for the honor of entertaining the Shrine in 1914. He and Forrest Adair are great cronies, and have been at many sessions of the Imperial Council. The other Imperial Council members were advanced in rotation, as is customary in the order.

There was a mighty careful checking up of names and counting of noses along somewhere after midnight last night. The Yaarab workers did not quit talking Atlanta until the rest of creation out here had gone to bed. Along about daylight Forrest Adair figured that Atlanta had it on Memphis by about two to one. Maybe it is more than that, but two to one looks good enough anyway.

Memphis is putting up the gamest sort of fight. The Tennessee city has a big bunch of rooters here and the town has been flooded with literature. However, Atlanta has been right there with the literature, and in the matter of pure unadulterated talk and hard work the Georgia city has made Memphis hard to locate.

John Hynds, Joe Greenfield, and

Claude Hutcheson have been Potentate Adair's right hand men in the fight for Atlanta, and when the credit is slid up and passed around, likewise the glory, they will come in for a large share of both, along with Mr. Adair.

Mr. Adair expressed himself to me to-day as particularly gratified with the help extended the Atlanta movement by the Hearst newspapers.

"I hear from Mr. Hearst's personal appeals and his newspapers' work for next year's big meeting at all turns. His publications, especially in the West, have helped tremendously in bringing support to Atlanta. If Atlanta wins, as I expect, we will owe much to Mr. Hearst."

In the hotel lobbies one sees Atlanta newspapers everywhere. One hears Atlanta talk everywhere. The great 12 hours' hustle Atlanta made to raise that entertainment fund of nearly $100,000 is talked of by everybody. Whenever I buttonhole a Shriner and ask him how about that Imperial Council meeting next year, and I have done that about 100 times since I landed here, I never get a reply that does not make some reference to that great financial stunt. The impression seems to be that a town capable of doing that is capable of doing anything, no matter how big.

"Don't Worry, Atlanta."

In the matter of taking care of the Imperial Council next year, I should say to Atlanta, "Don't worry." Whatever this town of Dallas can do footloose and free, Atlanta can do with one hand tied behind her back and a hobble skirt draped around her ankles. Not that Dallas is not a great little town, either, for it is, but still it is not Atlanta. Dallas simply is bulging with Shriners. It is packed and jammed and it is acting handsomely toward the visitors.

"The city is profusely and beautifully decorated. Free automobiles stand around and invite fez wearers to get in and ride to their hearts' content, which many of them do. The hotels and boarding houses are playing fair, and there is no gouging.

For its size, Dallas is a wonder. It, however, is only about one-half the size of Atlanta. If Dallas can entertain 25,000 visitors—and it is entertaining approximately that many to-day—then Atlanta can handle 50,000 and never mind it or find it the least uncomfortable.

Somehow, too, the Dallas newspapers seem to feel and hope that Atlanta will win out in its fight, and the news they print carries a pro-Atlanta color.

The Imperial Council is holding its first session to-day. Yesterday was given over to handshaking, Shrineresque kidding, merrymaking and getting things under way. All one hears as one walks along the streets of Dallas to-day is "Morning, Silas." That's the greeting, and everybody hands it to you, whether he ever saw you before or not. It's the same friendly, happy, good-natured greeting that the Elks' "Hello, Bill" is.

The voting on next year's meeting place will be held some time during Wednesday's session. The big parade, one of the annual events people come hundreds of miles to see, occurs to-night, and Dallas has fixed her streets for the glittering spectacle in such wise that they will be as bright as day when the parade is passing.

To-day's session of the Imperial Council began at 9 o'clock, but its proceedings were secret in the main. To-morrow's session will be the one to tell the big story.

East Aids Gate City.

One most gratifying thing about Atlanta's big fight for the Imperial Council next year is the way Shriners from all over the East and Southeast are rallying to her support. There is not a member of the imperial organization from a State that touches Georgia, except Tennessee, that is not for Atlanta. Whatever little jealousies there may be or may have been between Atlanta and other cities of the South, they are all for Atlanta in the movement to make Atlanta the next year's meeting place, and it is more than half way suspected that Memphis will swing into line before the ballot is spread and make it unanimous for the Gate City of the South.

"The Shriners want to go to Atlanta and they are going." The Dallas Times-Herald quotes Forrest Adair as saying. "Many of them have already visited the Georgia city and have seen for themselves that we have the hotels. Every temple knows that we have the money for the entertainment, too. You just can't get away from the fact that Atlanta pledged $75,000 in less than one day. If it will take more than $75,000 the amount needed will be there. The Shriners will have everything they want and more than they can ask when they go to Atlanta."

Atlantans All Optimistic.

This feeling of optimism is reflected in every Atlanta visitor in Dallas to-day. The magnificent campaign the Gate City has made for next year's meeting is destined to win out, or Adair and his men are the worst fooled lot that ever were, and the betting is 1,000 to 1 that they have not been fooled for a minute.

And don't forget Mrs. Shriner and the Misses Shriner are here in all their freshness and loveliness—5,000 or so of them. Believe me, they are on hand and everybody notices them and approves of their presence. A prettier lot of girls I never saw than these Texas specimens. Southern beauty is more or less running riot in Dallas to-day.

Gets Proposal by Phone at Breakfast And Weds by 9 A. M.

To arise heartfree, to receive a proposal before breakfast over the telephone and to be married by 9 o'clock—that's what happened to Miss Emma Wofford, 26 Alaska Avenue, Copenhill, Tuesday morning.

Dr. Smith and his bride long had been friends, but the subject of matrimony had never come up. When the physician came to Atlanta Monday on a business trip he called Miss Wofford over the telephone and after a few minutes' conversation, asked her if she would marry him.

Mrs. Smith formerly was an employee in the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company's Atlanta office.

Advertising Agents Honor Massengale

St. Elmo Massengale, head of the Massengale Advertising Agency and one of the best known publicity men in the country, was to-day elected director at a meeting in Chicago of general advertising agents from throughout the country. Plans were perfected for forming a permanent organization.

Mr. Massengale probably will make arrangements to open a branch office of the Massengale Advertising Agency in Chicago. This step is made necessary by the rapid growth of the agency which handles some of the largest advertising accounts in the United States.

Smith Reported in Custody at El Paso

Report that J. Wylie Smith, formerly head of the Commercial Loan and Discount Company, of Atlanta, is being held at El Paso, Tex., for return to this city to answer forgery charges, reached here to-day.

A dispatch from Austin, Tex., telling of the arrest, stated Governor Colquitt already had honored a requisition for the extradition of Smith and that T. H. Hamilton, the agent of the Fulton County, Georgia, authorities, was en route to El Paso to take charge of the prisoner.

Smith departed suddenly from Atlanta two years ago, leaving the affairs of the Commercial company in a chaotic condition. It is alleged that he secured large sums of money from clients of the organization.

Reports of his capture were denied in El Paso.

Flies Over Alps, and Lives to Tell Story

Special Cable to The American.

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, May 12. Aviator Rider, using a monoplane, flew over the Alps to-day. It took two hours to fly 50 miles. This was the second successful flight made over the Alps.

Rider left Berne in a high wind and landed at Sion. He attained a height of 10,560 feet, and was so cold when he descended he had to be lifted from his machine.

Chavez, a Peruvian aviator, the first to fly over the Alps, fell at the conclusion of his flight and succumbed to his injuries.

New Arrest Is Expected Tuesday in the Baffling Factory Crime Mystery.

cared her belief in her son's entire innocence. She has been greatly affected by the shadow which is hovering over her son's life, but had said nothing of his plight to her neighbors until Monday, as she had been hoping against hope that he would be liberated by the Coroner's jury.

Mother Thinks He Is Innocent.

"My son is entirely innocent," she is quoted as saying. "But it is a terrible thing that even the suspicion should fall on him. I have every confidence that he will be proved guiltless of the terrible crime.

"He is suspected merely because he was the last one who is known to have seen her on the day she was killed. I know it will be shown that he had no knowledge of who put the girl to death."

Mrs. Frank has not seen her son since nearly three years ago when she and her husband came to Atlanta to attend the marriage of young Frank to the daughter of Emil Selig. It is understood that she is planning to return to Atlanta to be with Frank in the event that he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

She always has been proud of her son and happy at his rapid rise in the business world. Although only 29 years old he has been the superintendent in charge of the National Pencil Company's plant for several years. Before coming to Atlanta about five years ago he was with the National Meier Company, of Brooklyn. He is a Cornell graduate.

Burns Leaves New York.

The arrival of William J. Burns is expected in New York Tuesday afternoon. As announced in The Georgian Monday the great detective has been engaged to work personally upon the Phagan mystery. He is expected to come here at the solicitation of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who is representing the friends and relatives of the slain girl.

Colonel Felder interviewed Raymond Burns, son of the famous detective, in New York, and a cable was at once dispatched to England, where Burns had been looking for J. Wilberforce Martin, the wealthy Memphian whose mysterious disappearance stirred two continents. Burns quickly found that Martin was safe and unharmed and withdrew from the case. The detective will be in Atlanta Thursday on his way to Macon, where he has been invited to speak before the Georgia State Bankers' Association.

Chief of Detectives Lanford just smiles when Solicitor Dorsey's "mysterious sleuth" is mentioned. Mr. Dorsey announced several days ago that he had the best detective in the world on the job.

Who Is "Mysterious Sleuth?"

"The sleuth is either Detective John Starnes or Patrick Campbell," said Chief Lanford. "Both of these men are attached to the 'local' staff and are working under the solicitor."

The solicitor continued to deny that the man was a local detective.

"I intend to withhold his name until the proper time," he said. "He is out of the city at present working on several new phases of the Phagan case. Upon his return I may be able to give out some startling information."

Hundreds of curious persons apply daily at the prison in a futile effort to see the man now being held in the Phagan mystery. The jailers are beset with thousands of questions pertaining to his life during the two weeks that he has spent behind the bars.

Only Frank's attorney, his immediate relatives and a few friends have been permitted to see him. The man on other occasions has refused point blank to be interviewed or questioned. He has maintained an unbroken silence on the accusations made against him by the State.

Cheerful With Friends.

To his friends, however, Frank presents an amazingly bright countenance. Frequently his laughter is heard ringing through the dismal corridors of the Tower. Despite his cheery disposition, however, he has grown pale under his confinement.

Arises at 7 o'clock each morning; shaves with a safety razor brought him by a jailer and dresses for breakfast. Morning meal is brought to him at 7:30 and he partakes of it from a low bench in lieu of a table. Frank's meals are all prepared at his home and sent to the Tower. He is permitted to have any food that he may desire. So far, the prison life has not affected his appetite, which is one of a healthy man.

Reads Papers Carefully.

After breakfast Frank is handed the morning papers, which he peruses carefully, especially with reference to his own case. Despite what the printed pages may contain about him, though, the prisoner has never been known to comment on the newspaper articles.

Frank is a great reader. As the single electric lamp in the corridor does not furnish sufficient light to read by in the cells adjacent, the prisoner has secured a candle and under its flickering flame reads magazines and other periodicals.

Friends of the prisoner begin to arrive about 9 o'clock. He converses with them through the bars. At 2 o'clock he is served with dinner. During the afternoon Frank receives more of his friends and whiles away the idle hours in reading.

Wife Embraces Him.

When his wife called for the first time since his confinement Sunday afternoon, Frank was allowed to receive her in the "consultation room." The meeting between the husband and wife was affecting.

Tearfully Mrs. Frank clasped her arms about her husband's neck and kissed him as they met. Following the visit, which was of an hour's duration, Frank was returned to his cell.

The prisoner is served with supper at 6:30 o'clock and retires at about 11 o'clock. He sleeps on a regulation prison cot.

Mother Thinks Police Are Doing Their Best.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of little 14-year-old Mary Phagan, prostrated with grief for sixteen days following the tragic slaying of her child, took up her household duties Tuesday for the first time, resigned to the calamity that has befallen her home, and relying on the law to avenge the death of her child.

"It was such a beautiful morning," said Mrs. Coleman to a Georgian reporter, "and I have been able to rest now for three nights, so I felt like doing my work again. My house has been in such a turmoil since this dreadful tragedy. I feel I am helpless and have resigned myself to the sad lot that has befallen us. All we can do is wait, and waiting is a hard task.

No Complaint of Police.

"Don't misunderstand me, I am not complaining about what the officers are doing. It is far better to go slow and be sure that we are doing right than to hurry and make a mistake. I believe that the police and the solicitor are doing everything they can to find the guilty man. They ought to do it; such a crime ought to be punished. But I do not want them to make a mistake.

"I heard that feeling was very strong last week, but I am glad that no hasty action was taken. It might have been all wrong, and I think I would have been grieved as much as anybody.

"We have made many inquiries among our friends and acquaintances and have not found one who saw Mary after 12 o'clock Saturday, when she went to the factory to get her pay. So much seems to depend on that point, and if anyone did see her, he certainly ought to tell about it. It does look like if Mary were on the streets Saturday afternoon, as many friends as we have, some of them would have seen her. We do not believe she ever left the factory.

Has Read No Reports.

Mrs. Coleman, since her nervous collapse, has not been allowed to read the newspapers, her husband realizing the seriousness of her condition. Since last Wednesday she has had absolute quiet, and Tuesday she resumed her duties with the hope, as she expressed it, "to make home like it used to be, if possible." She declared that only the strength and vigor that has always been hers enabled her to withstand the blow that had befallen her.

"Mary and I were very much alike," she said, "strong and healthy. Mary would have been 14 years old on June 1, but she was very large and robust for her age. She often passed for 16. Her birthday is nearly here, but it will be so different this year."

Hearse Drivers War On Sunday Funerals

NEW YORK, May 13.—The hearse and carriage drivers of Brooklyn have declared that Sunday weddings and funerals must go. In their campaign to do away with the burial of persons and weddings on Sunday they are trying to enlist the services of the clergy.

As to weddings, they are a unit for Cupid taking a day off, but they are willing to bury on Sunday persons dying of contagious diseases.

GAME WARDEN AND DEPUTY ON WAY TO MILLTOWN POND

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—Accompanied by his son, W. C. Westcott, Deputy Game Warden Charles B. Westcott leaves to-night for Milltown to take charge of the fish situation there. He is acting under instructions from State Game and Fish Commissioner Jesse E. Mercer, who will meet Westcott in Milltown Thursday and map out a plan of campaign.

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss Alien Law; Johnson Will Sign

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Japanese situation was discussed for the greater part of two hours at the meeting of the President with his Cabinet, but at the conclusion of the conference absolute silence was maintained regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—A reply by Governor Johnson to the message of Secretary of State Bryan, advising against hasty action in the California anti-alien law legislation was expected to-day. The Governor announced that he would not discuss the subject until he had replied to Secretary Bryan, which likely would be to-day.

He intimated that he would sign the Webb anti-alien land bill, but that he would delay action out of respect to President Wilson's wishes.

In his farewell message to the Legislature Governor Johnson said:

"I would like to have mentioned the land bill with the others that I consider worthy accomplishments in legislation this season, but I refrained from so doing because it would not be courteous to say anything in advance of my reply to Mr. Bryan's telegram."

PHOENIX, ARIZ., May 13.—A slight amendment by the Senate to the House anti-alien land bill makes it necessary for the measure to be passed on by a conference between the two houses before it is sent to the Governor. It was predicted the conference would agree on the bill this afternoon. The Governor's attitude is not known, although his closest friends say he will sign it.

Four hundred Japanese residents of the State will appeal to the Governor to veto the bill.

FEARS TO PUNISH RIVAL HE SAYS STOLE BRIDE

An angry husband waited for three hours at the Terminal Station Tuesday morning determined to wreak vengeance upon the man who, he said, had enticed his 17-year-old bride of four months from his home and gone with her to Macon, Ga., her former home. Then he notified the police and now awaits developments.

The husband is Edward M. Brown, of 20 Hayden Street. He appeared at the station at 7:50 o'clock, when a train is due into Atlanta from Macon, but the man he claimed he was after, J. G. Reeves, a real estate operator, did not appear. Brown waited. About 10 o'clock Reeves strode into the station from the train platforms.

Brown started toward Reeves and stopped before he reached him. Brown is a little man, and he surveyed the well-built real estate man dubiously. Then he returned to his seat.

Daunted by His Size.

"He's pretty big," he said. "I won't whip him; I'll have him arrested."

Brown asserts that Reeves has showered attentions upon his wife, Mrs. Amelia Brown, for the past three weeks, and yesterday afternoon he claims, he induced her to leave her husband and go to Macon. Brown declares that Reeves met Mrs. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Sally Bryant, at the station and purchased their tickets to Macon, buying one for himself also.

"We were married in Macon four months ago," said Brown, "and until this Reeves appeared on the scene we were happy. About three weeks ago I decided to buy a lot and this man was sent to sell it to me. He came out to the house to see me about it, and after that he kept coming. I hurried the purchase of the lot and told my wife to keep away from Reeves.

Threatened To Go Home.

"Even after I had bought the lot he kept coming around and taking my wife out in an automobile. I told him to keep away, and he began sneaking around when I wasn't at home. When I came home yesterday afternoon my wife said she was going home with her mother, and said that if I wouldn't give her any money she had a friend who would.

"I went downtown on some business last night, and when I got home I was told that my wife had gone. A girl who lives in the house said she had gone to the station with my wife and her mother, and that Reeves had met them there. Reeves took my wife's grips, the girl told me, and went to the train with them.

She said she saw him get on the train, and he didn't get off. I hurried to the station to stop them, but the train had gone. Then I went to the police station, and they told me to get a gun and shoot Reeves.

Claims Former Marriage.

"I'm going to have Reeves and my wife arrested, and I'm going to get a divorce. I learned yesterday I'm not the only husband she has. She told me when we were married she had been married before, but said her other husband was dead. I found out he is not dead."

Miss Thelma Bigby, the girl who accompanied Mrs. Brown to the Terminal Station, corroborated Brown's story Tuesday morning.

"Reeves met Mrs. Brown at the corner of Luckie and Harris Streets late yesterday afternoon, before Mr. Brown got home," she said. "They talked a long time, and then Mrs. Brown came in and had a talk with her mother. Then she asked us to tell her husband when he came home that she had gone to her old home with her mother and was not coming back.

Reeves Didn't Return.

"I went to the station with her, and Mr. Reeves met them there. He took their grips and told her not to worry. 'I'll fix everything so we can be together in a few days,' I heard him say.

"Mr. Reeves went to the train with them, telling me he would return in a minute. I waited almost half an hour after the train had gone, and he didn't come back."

SENATORS CLASH ON TARIFF; BILL IN BALANCE

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The fate of the Underwood tariff bill in the Senate was in the balance to-day while the Republicans and Democrats debated on the Penrose motion to instruct the Senate Finance Committee to hold open hearings on the measure. The clash also tended to show the real strength of the supporters of the administration measure.

It is on the sugar and wool schedules that the fight will come, and Democratic leaders anxiously watched the debate to see how far the defection started by Senators Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana, had influenced Senators from the sugar and wool-producing States.

It already had been agreed to refer the Underwood bill to the Finance Committee without public hearings when that measure was brought from the House Friday. Senator Simmons, chairman of the committee, made a motion to this effect, followed immediately by a motion by Senator Penrose for public hearings.

So critical was the situation raised by the Penrose motion that a call was issued for every Democratic Senator to be in his seat. The Republicans also marshaled their entire strength to fight for open hearings.

LaFollette to Draft A New Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator LaFollette will not confine his tariff-making efforts to the wool and cotton schedules. He intends to draft practically a complete bill. This measure will be offered in the Senate, probably as a substitute for the Underwood bill. He regards many of the Democratic rates as too low.

BIBB GRAND JURY PROBES VICE DISTRICT IN MACON

MACON, GA., May 13.—The Grand Jury is this week investigating the restricted district, as the result of a complaint made by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, former president of Wesleyan College. On account of the spreading of the district, a negro church was forced to abandon its place of worship, and this fact aroused the ire of the white clergyman, who appealed to the Grand Jury for assistance.

ATLANTA CALLED MODEL CITY BY PRESBYTERIAN THOUSANDS

ALL TRAINS BEAR DELEGATES

With the beginning of the influx of thousands of delegates and visitors to the Presbyterian Assembly which opens here Wednesday, Atlanta already is ringing with their praises as the cleanest city in the world—both morally and physically.

Experts from other and larger cities, who inspected the town Monday, have declared Atlanta is an object lesson to other cities of the nation in what can be done.

"The fact that such a large city as this could so effectively remove the scars from its social side is a great proof of the fact that so-called evil necessities are anything but necessary," declared the Rev. Charles Scanlon, of Pittsburg, the noted temperance lecturer, who arrived Monday.

While few delegates were expected to arrived before Wednesday, early trains Tuesday brought in their quota and several hundred are expected to come in during the day.

From now until Thursday afternoon it is doubtful if any train entering Atlanta will be minus a corps of ministers and elders coming to Atlanta to participate in the convention. Several special trains are scheduled to arrive Wednesday morning. There will be two from New York, one from Chicago, one from St. Louis bringing in the Western delegates, one from Ohio and one from Philadelphia. These are the special trains of which the local committee has received notice. It is possible there will be others.

Registration Bureau Opens.

Tuesday morning found headquarters on the fifth floor of the Empire Building opening with as busy a rush as characterized the place Monday. Rev. Jere Moore, who is secretary of the local convention committee, has been the busiest man in Atlanta for the past week and is right up to his ears in work now. Assisting him are a large number of ministers and business men, grinding away in the effort to make everything run smoothly. In the list are a number of men of heavy business interests who have laid aside everything in the entertainment of the mammoth joint convention.

Rev. Mr. Scanlon, who will be one of the principal speakers at the great temperance service Sunday night in Wesley Memorial chapel, is much interested in Atlanta, especially in connection with the vice crusade campaign which Chief of Police Beavers has waged.

"Of course, I know nothing personally of what Atlanta has done in cleaning up the city, but I have heard much of it," he said to a Georgian reporter. "I suppose the vice crusade in Atlanta has attracted more attention than any single city campaign ever carried on in this country, and there has been much discussion of it. When a city like Atlanta decides to make itself good and succeeds in doing so, it is indeed an object lesson to every other city in the world, for certainly what has been done here can be done elsewhere."

Another prominent arrival was Rev. T. P. Junkin, president of the Daniel Baker College, of Brownwood, Texas. "Well, I'm with you and glad to be here, too," was his greeting as he introduced himself to Rev. Jere Moore. "The joint assembly here has been all the talk among Presbyterians down my way, and I suppose this mammoth meeting will be talked of for many years to come."

Missionary Meeting Sunday.

In addition to the mammoth temperance meeting to be held Sunday night, there will be a Sunday school missionary meeting Sunday afternoon in the Central Presbyterian Church. It will be one of the most interesting features of the convention.

The meeting will be unique in that its object is somewhat different from that of the ordinary missionary meeting. It will be an actual demonstration of platform missionary instruction in the Sunday school. Dr. A. L. Phillips, general superintendent of the Department of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will preside at this meeting.

There will be a brief address on "The Value of Missionary Education in the Sunday School," by the Rev. Charles R. Watson, of Philadelphia. This will be followed by a demonstration of "A Missionary Opening Exercise" for the Sunday school, entitled "America's Welcome." The theme of this address will be immigration, and it will be presented by a number of young people from the Central Presbyterian.

Often features of the work will be the demonstration of how, in five minutes or less, to present to a Sunday school a missionary book so as to insure its being read. There also will be instructions as to how to make a telling missionary speech and how to present a missionary map talk effectively.

Special Music Feature.

Among other prominent workers who will participate in this meeting are Mrs. D. E. Wald, New York; George Innes, Philadelphia, and the Rev. A. W. Halsey, New York. There will be a large chorus and special music under the direction of Professor Joseph MacLean, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Progress of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which section of the church includes a majority of the Presbyterian churches in the South, is interesting.

Statistics to be read in the assemblies show the number of ruling elders in the church to be 10,977; the number of deacons, 10,637; the number added to the church during the year on examination, 14,103; the number added on certificate, 12,077; the total number of communicants, 292,845. During the year 6,021 adults and 4,970 infants were baptized. The total Sunday school enrollment was 245,495.

Huge Sums Contributed.

The amount contributed last year to foreign missions was $501,412; to home missions, $125,787; to Christian education and ministerial relief, $97,143; to Sunday school extension and publication, $25,499; to Bible cause, $8,483; to orphans' home, $86,125; to pastors' salaries, $1,320,059; to congregational expense, $1,493,234; to miscellaneous, $233,673, making a total of $4,298,044 contributed to all causes.

The vote of the presbyteries on the proposed amendments in the Confession of Faith and the Book of Church Order, handed down by the assembly of 1912, has been awaited with special interest, as every amendment must receive the approval of three-fourths of the presbyteries before the assembly can authorize the same.

With reference to the "elect infant clause" in the Confession of Faith, reports from the presbyteries to be presented to the assembly will show that 22 presbyteries voted against the amendment, making the three-fourths vote in favor of the same impossible. It will be necessary, therefore, for the assembly in Atlanta to consider overtures to omit the paragraph entirely from the Confession of Faith.

BANKERS' MEETING HERE UP TO HOTELS

There Will Be No Difficulty in Raising Funds to Entertain, Says Joseph McCord.

"Whether Atlanta gets the 1914 convention of the American Bankers' Association depends on two things—hotel accommodations and the guarantee of a satisfactory entertainment fund. The first is under consideration; the second is assured."

J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank, thus sums up the situation. With Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank, Mr. Ottley delivered Atlanta's invitation to the 1914 convention when the executive council met at Briarcliff, N. Y., last week.

"Proper accommodation of delegates and guests demands 2,000 hotel rooms. Atlanta has more than this," said Mr. Ottley. "The question is whether it is possible for hotel men to co-operate in setting aside that number of rooms. The Convention Bureau will discuss this with hotel men when its heads return from the Shriners' convention.

"If the Convention Bureau and the hotel men make a satisfactory reply, the information will be forwarded to the national secretary. He then will make a visit to Atlanta and will look over the situation.

"Detroit last year spent $40,000 entertaining the bankers. Boston this year has underwritten $100,000 for the same purpose. But the question of raising funds in Atlanta is not bothering us. If we can get the hotel rooms we can get the money."

HAWKINSVILLE ELKS VOTE TO ABOLISH CLUB LOCKER

HAWKINSVILLE, GA., May 13.—The Elks voted last night to discontinue their locker adjunct and after June 15 no more liquors or beers will be dispensed in the club rooms. Public sentiment was averse to a locker club and the churches looked with displeasure upon their members affiliating with any fraternity or club maintaining a locker. The Elks voluntarily voted to discontinue it.

MILITANT CHIEF, ILL, AVOIDS TRIAL

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—When the trial of the leaders of the militant suffragettes arrested in the police raid on the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, was resumed to-day in Bow Street Court, Mrs. Flora Drummond, the "General," was not present.

The court was informed that Mrs. Drummond is still in a serious condition at a nursing home, where she was taken after collapsing in court last week.

Mrs. Drummond, who went upon a hunger strike after her arrest, has refused to eat in the nursing home. Her bail was extended for two months.

Testimony was adduced to show that the Women's Social and Political Union offered medals and other prizes for the militants who were able to accomplish the most destruction of property and think up new new forms of violence. Those who underwent punishment also were rewarded.

Militants Smash Shop Windows Worth $5,000.

NORWICH, ENG., May 13.—Vandal suffragettes smashed $5,000 worth of plateglass in dry goods store windows here to-day before they were driven from the streets by policemen.

The women opened an organized campaign, going through the streets armed with hammers and missiles with which they smashed the windows.

OBSTACLES SEEN TO MERGER OF CHURCHES

adopted by most of the leading denominations in this country, some of them having accepted it long before the platform of the Federal Council had been drawn up.

The Federal Council's platform is, therefore, practically the expression of the Protestant forces of this country, with regard to social service.

As a matter of fact, most of the criticism that has been directed against the social service platform of the Federal Council is based upon the assumption that these are the only principles for which the council is contending, but the council spoke just as strongly with regard to "evangelism," "foreign missions," "temperance," "Sabbath observance," "the family and the home" and upon kindred subjects as it did upon social service.

At its last meeting in Chicago a strong evangelistic commission was appointed, which will no doubt in time be just as influential as the social service commission of the council. It simply happened that the men who were interested in social service became immediately active when they were appointed, so that they have got a better start than some of the other commissions.

Favored by Atlantans.

The report of the social service commission submitted at the Chicago meeting indicates that the men who framed it are warmly sympathetic toward evangelistic work and the evangelistic spirit. Following are some extracts from this much-maligned report:

"The church is not turning aside from her task, neither is she creating new forces; still further than this, we are happily discovering that the conservation of the evangelistic note is an essential to an effective social gospel, and are no longer disposed to rend asunder that which Christ has joined together.

"We are not to forget that we can have no kingdom of heaven on earth until our economic programs are fashioned in the light of spiritual ideals and with spiritual ends in view, and we are to remember that the world will come together in the consummation of sympathy, tenderness and brotherhood only when all men are brought to sit together at the feet of Christ."

It is impossible to tell how strongly developed is the feeling that the Southern Assembly should sever its connection with the Federal Council, but the men who have been fighting in Atlanta for the eradication of the social evil are strongly in favor of having the Southern Assembly retain its relationship to this interdenominational organization. This feeling also characterizes the attitude of the members of the Presbytery of Atlanta.

County Will Build A Home for Girls

Fulton County will erect a home for wayward girls and incorrigible women, the work to begin at once and the home to be completed within the year.

This announcement was made Tuesday following a conference between a committee from the County Commission and a committee from the trustees of the Harriet Hawkes Home. The latter agreed to deed to the county a 50-acre tract of land on Stewart Avenue, near Mt. Zion Church, and a fund of approximately $12,000 pledged for the erection of an institution.

The agreement reached Tuesday is the result of several conferences. Fulton County will have absolute title to the property and will be in complete control. It will be responsible for the home's maintenance. As a concession for the Harriet Hawkes donations, the home will bear this name. Several members of the former trustees will constitute an advisory board for the institution.

Following Tuesday's conference it was announced that work would begin immediately. A meeting of the Board of County Commissioners is expected to ratify the action of the committee, which comprises three members of the board—Shelby Smith, C. L. Anderson and Tull C. Waters. Henry Y. McCord represented the Harriet Hawkes trustees.

Just when you thought that The Georgian's "Man of Mystery," with the three ties ranging down his shirt front, had vanished as unaccountably as he first made his appearance, presto, up he bobs!

Returning, he explained that his appearance, disappearances and reappearances all are for the same purpose—that of exciting your interest and curiosity.

The picture of the "Man of Mystery" was published three days in The Georgian without any explanation or comment. There was not even a line to say whether he was a foreign nobleman or the latest suspect in some daring crime.

After the office of The Georgian had been deluged with letters asking the identity of the strange personage came the explanation. It was simply this:

The Georgian is about to publish a great serial story. It may be said with assurance that it is the most interesting story Atlantans have read in years. This picture typifies the story. The first instalment will appear in next Monday's Georgian.

What should be the title, judging solely from the picture? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title has already been selected. It is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be considered in awarding the prizes.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor," The Georgian, Atlanta. The contest closes Sunday night. No answers posted after midnight, May 18, will be considered.

GRIFFIN, GA., May 13.—W. A. Goodrich, of the insurance firm of R. H. Drake & Company, and prominent in business circles of Griffin, committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth at his home here to-day. Ill health is assigned as the cause. His business affairs are said to be in excellent shape.

GOES TO SLEEP UNDER A WATERSPOUT; DROWNED

OMAHA, NEBR., May 13.—Jack O'Donnell went to sleep in a downtown alley. So much water came out of the spout above his head during an early morning storm that he was drowned.

Decatur and Atlanta

The corporate limits of Atlanta and Decatur are just two miles apart.

The center of Decatur is connected with the center of Atlanta by two street car lines, the Georgia railroad and by three public roads.

East Lake Drive, through Druid Hills to Oakhurst, thence by DeKalb avenue to Decatur, is at present an almost perfect automobile route from Decatur to Atlanta.

The straight shoot from Decatur to Atlanta is now DeKalb avenue, which eastward from Mayson avenue is now being paved with vitrified brick.

Ponce DeLeon avenue is being rapidly extended to the Court House at Decatur. A few months more of good weather will see the work completed.

By street car the distance from the center of Atlanta to the center of Decatur is 30 minutes; by the Georgia railroad the distance is about 10 minutes.

Hundreds of telephones, both Bell and Atlanta, connect Atlanta with Decatur, and residents of Decatur have exactly the same use of these two telephone systems as the citizens of Atlanta.

The truth of the matter is, a resident of Decatur on the average is just as closely in touch with the business in Atlanta as the residents of the best residence sections of the city of Atlanta.

Think of these things, and find out for yourself how much more cheaply you can build a home in Decatur than in Atlanta.

Pony Outfit Contest Attracts 250 Competitors From Whole South

Leaders Alone Poll 111,100 Votes in Race Which Grows Exciting

STATE AT LARGE HAS SIXTY ENTRANTS---DISTRICT FOUR NEXT, WITH FORTY-THREE

These leaders alone have polled 111,100 votes, or 100,100 more than the start the nominations gave them.

There are an even 250 contestants. The State at large has 60; District No. 4 is next, with 43 boys and girls, and District No. 1 is close behind, with 38.

Already the contest is keen, and it promises to grow more and more exciting daily. Keep track of the runners through the list printed daily. Here it is:

BEACHEY QUITS AIR REGRETS DARING

Noted Flyer Says He Feels That His Reckless Feats Led Others to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—With the announcement that he had quit the air and would never sail an aeroplane again, Lincoln Beachey to-day issued a statement in which he said he felt that he had committed murder. He blamed himself for the death of several birdmen, and said he could not be induced to enter an aeroplane again at "the point of a gun."

"There was only one thing that drew crowds to my exhibitions," said Beachey. "They wanted to see something happen. They predicted that I would be killed. They paid to see me die. They bet, the odds being greatly against my landing safely.

"In Chicago last September Horace Kearney's mother begged me not to teach him a. y more tricks. Kearney insisted on learning them all. Three months later he was dead. Welch's wife begged him to quit doing spirals. Welch replied 'Beachey does them.' Two weeks later he was killed when a wire snapped as he was doing a reverse spiral at Trenton, N. J. I felt I had murdered him. Some time ago I sent tickets to Mrs. Ely. She sent back the tickets, writing: 'Gene would be with me now if he had never seen you fly.'

"I have no fear that I would be killed, but I am in the grip of a great fear that I would make others kill themselves."

Jap Cherry Blossoms Disappoint American

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 13.—The cherry blossoms of Japan were disappointing to John Corbett, a Chicago contractor, who is in Berlin.

"We were in Japan in the cherry season," he said, "but all we saw were a few trees with a few small blossoms. California's cherry blossom show is far more beautiful."

Corbett was in Japan during the excitement over the California land law but he says that he was most courteously treated. The Japanese seemed to be anxious to make an impression for politeness.

Gambling Shown on Increase in France

PARIS, May 13.—The fallacy of the popular idea that gambling is on the decline in France is clearly shown by figures just issued on the revenue to the State from the tax on playing cards.

During 1912 this amounted to $587,898, an increase of $35,647 over 1911, and the largest amount realized since the imposition of the tax, which remained practically at the same figure between 1908 and 1910.

EXPRESS COMPANY OFFERS $1,000 FOR $15,000 ROBBER

FACTORS BOOST PRICE OF ROSIN

First Move in New Selling Plan Is to Mark All Grades Except "M" at Higher Figures.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—That the prices obtaining on all grades of rosins are the lowest that will be quoted for many years to come, is the firm belief of those familiar with conditions centering about the naval stores markets and the industry in general.

The opening gun in the campaign for better prices was fired at the afternoon sale Thursday. K grade, and all grades below, were advanced on "asked" prices to the extent of 5 cents the barrel, while N and above were advanced 10 cents, with the exception of M, which was allowed to remain at quotations obtaining for several days.

Factors state that this is but the beginning of a gradual upward movement on all grades of rosins, which have ruled notoriously low in values for many months. In other words, the educational campaign now under way has for its purpose the establishment of equitable prices, and these will be slowly but surely advanced as may be deemed necessary by the factors.

Trading in large lots is a daily feature on the exchange, whereas for a month previously the market was practically dead. The creditors' committee of the American has at last secured money with which to carry on the business of that concern, but it has been announced that it will not again actively enter the market, and that its affairs will be wound up as rapidly as possible.

Naval stores receipts are increasing in volume. It is said that the stability of the market has induced many producers to abandon their intention of converting their orchards into other channels. The new crop is now beginning to show up.

FACTORY EXPENSE IN U. S. CHEAPEST

Other Nations, Though, Pay Lower Wages and Smaller Prices, Commerce Report Says.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That United States industries are carried on at a higher degree of efficiency than those of other nations is indicated by a report issued by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to-day.

The report shows that in the United Kingdom one-sixth more power and two and one-half times as many wage-earners are required to produce a net output of equal value.

In fifteen of the seventeen industries compared, the outlay for wages is higher in England than here for an equal output, the difference ranging from 8 per cent for linen, jute and hemp to 30 per cent for silks.

Prices in the United States are higher, however.

As to tariffs, the report states that German duties are not so high as generally supposed, but that this country is discriminated against in instances.

'U. S. Makes Me Sick' Says Departing Diva

NEW YORK, May 13.—America came in for a nice sizzling roast today at the hands of Marie Cavan, of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company, who sailed for Europe and may never, never come back.

"I would rather sing for $100 a week in Europe than $1,000 a week in America," said the diva. "America makes me sick."

It would seem that some "puritanical reformers" vexed the prima donna, for she gave them a left-handed uppercut for their efforts to "reform the—of course—terribly immoral stage."

KOREAN SEES WAR CLOUDS IN EAST

WASHINGTON, May 13.—With a taste of republicanism, the Oriental peoples, particularly the Japanese, are beginning to grow restless and are exhibiting an inclination to throw off the old oligarchic rule, according to Seek Hun Kimm, president of the Korean Patriotic Association, in a statement published to-day.

The establishment of the Chinese republic has inspired the stirring of a new life, he says, and indicates that the situation in the Far East is delicate. Under the present order, the statement says, Japan wants complete control of Manchuria, Russia of Mongolia; Japan wants to preserve her alliance with England; Russia wants to keep England quiet, and therefore the last two understand each other as regards Persia and Thibet; Russia is aggressive and England stubborn. The result may be the dismemberment of China.

The commercial interests of Germany and the United States, says Seek Hun Kimm, demand the interest of those countries in the game. The United States holds the balance of power because England and this country are natural allies in the Far East, the statement says.

ARKANSAS PRISON BOARD ANSWERS GOV. FUTRELL

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., May 13.—In reply to Governor Futrell's open letter criticising certain actions of the new State Prison Board with regard to letting contracts, preparing vouchers, etc., members of the board have sent a pointed letter to the chief executive defending their actions in every particular and inviting the closest scrutiny." They declare that when they assumed office April 1, they found the old system of accounting in a chaotic condition. The Governor has the power of removal under the new law.

GIRL'S MOTHER CALLS ELOPER BIGAMIST

Amazing marital complications have come to light with the arrest early Tuesday morning of J. L. Wimbish, 24 years old, of 777 Ashby Street, at the request of the mother of Miss Ella Kate Mann, 18 years old, of East Point. Mrs. Mann charges Wimbish with having committed a bigamous marriage with her daughter.

Wimbish eloped with Miss Mann last December. Since then a vain, country-wide search has been made by relatives of the girl. Not until Wimbish reappeared in Atlanta were the police called. Then Wimbish was arrested and confronted by Mrs. Mann, who demanded the whereabouts of her daughter. Wimbish refused to tell, but stated he knew where she was and would bring her to Atlanta as soon as he could disentangle himself from the meshes of the law.

Wimbish Denies Bigamy Charge.

While Wimbish denies he is married to Miss Mann, that charge has been placed against him by Mrs. Mann, who avers he has a wife in Birmingham. It was because of that fact, which she declares Wimbish admitted to her last December, that she objected to his attentions to her daughter.

Wimbish Tuesday morning admitted again he had been married before he met Miss Mann. He declared, though, he had been separated from his wife two years, and, while they had never been divorced to his knowledge, she had remarried.

"I love Ella," said Wimbish, "and I'll marry her as soon as I can determine my marital status with my former wife."

"My former wife was Ola May Jones, of Atlanta. In 1909 I fell in love with her. Her parents objected to the marriage, so we eloped. Her folks had me arrested. Then I married her and we left the city, but separated May 13, 1909. She went to Birmingham and married again, I hear. Whether she got a divorce or not I don't know. I was never served with any papers.

Got in Trouble Again.

"Later I got into trouble with another girl and was again arrested. When released I came back to Atlanta and met Miss Mann. When I told Mrs. Mann I had a wife in Birmingham; that we had separated and I guessed were divorced by that time, she told me not to come about her daughter again.

"To do this was impossible. I loved Ella and she loved me. We met secretly and planned the elopement. I told her we would get married just as soon as I could find out how I stood with my wife; that I thought we were divorced.

Arrested on Return.

"Ella and I left Atlanta December 14, 1912. We traveled all around the State, but did not go outside of the Georgia boundaries. Later I decided to come back to Atlanta and see if I could not get work to support us until things could be straightened out. I had no sooner set foot in this city than I was arrested."

Wimbish says Miss Mann is happy and living in a nearby town, though not as his wife. According to G. N. Bullock, the policeman who took Wimbish into custody, the prisoner stated at first he had three wives. Wimbish denies this.

EARL PARKER, who was stolen by women in an auto. His father believes the mother has hidden the boy.

Lays Kidnaping of Son to Two Women

Telegrams sent to Birmingham and other cities by the police at the instance of J. M. Parker, 102 Jett Street, whose 3-year-old son, Earl, was mysteriously kidnaped in an automobile a few days ago, so far have failed to bring any clew as to the whereabouts of the missing boy.

Parker is confident that one of the two women in the auto was his wife, from whom he is seeking a divorce. He believes she is hiding the boy to prevent his being taken from her by the courts. Mrs. Parker has been living in Birmingham, and Parker is satisfied the boy is in that city or in some nearby town.

Made Millionaires But Left Only $363

Lowe at one time was many times a millionaire. He lost his fortune in building the Mount Lowe Observatory and incline railroad, which he hoped would enable himself and other astronomers to learn some new truth among the maze of suns, moons and planets.

Among his inventions are those of artificial illuminating gas by the "water gas" method now used in all commercial gas plants of the world. The artificial ice invention is believed to rank second. He is also credited with having been the pioneer dirgible balloon man.

California Cotton Tests Successful

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The experiment of growing Durango cotton in the Imperial Valley of California is proving successful, according to reports made by Argyle McLachlan, assistant in crop acclimatization, to the Department of Agriculture.

Durango cotton is a long staple upland variety of cotton apparently well adapted to conditions in California and Arizona. The experiments are in their third year.

GLASGOW, May 13.—Seven hundred passengers sailed from here for New York on the steamship Columbia, and 3,000 emigrants sailed for Canada on the Hesperia and Letitia.

Mother Loves 19, So She Adopts the 20th

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 13.—Nineteen children, seventeen of her own blood and two adopted, have been reared by Mrs. May C. Koch, yet she has undertaken the task of bringing up another.

A petition signed by Mrs. Koch for the adoption of an 18-month-old girl, Helen Shirley, was before the Superior Court to-day.

"While I believe I already have done my duty," said the petitioner, "I might just as well rear an even score of them."

'Pirated' Success Makes Shubert Sad

pecial Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—Lee Shubert almost wept when he learned that the London Opera House management was taking in about $32,000 a week from the American revue. He said the American copyright law was signally at fault. He added:

"Hereafter I propose to copyright my stuff in England previous to its production. I figure that I have lost thousands of pounds this year by my failure to do this."

WILSON TO URGE MONEY REFORM

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An administration-made currency bill will be the fruit of the numerous conferences this week between Senate and House leaders, the President and Cabinet members.

Representative Underwood said today the currency bill soon will be whipped into fairly definite shape. The President and the Senate and House leaders plan to present a bill upon which a practical agreement has been reached and to designate it as an administration bill.

Carter Glass, chairman of the next House Banking and Currency Committee, desires a non-partisan bill, upon which both the Republicans and Democrats of the new Banking and Currency Committee may agree.

Currency Reformers Seek Views of Bankers.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator Owen announced to-day that the subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee would formally begin the compilation of questions to be submitted to bankers and economy experts this week. These will be drafted with the intention of learning the attitude of those concerned on currency reform legislation.

Senator Owen said the Democratic members of his committee were in favor of enacting currency legislation at the present session.

Another Great Liner Will Use Oil Fuel

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—More alterations are being made on the Olympic. She is being prepared to carry oil fuel between the inner and outer shells.

It is considered that the changes for this purpose will be more expensive than the installation of ordinary steam engines, as it will be necessary to place burners under the furnaces. However, if the installation proves to be a success a similar installation will be made on the Britannic, her sister ship.

Dr. Hinman for Rigid Dental Inspection

Declaring a great many diseases can be traced to defective teeth, Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, a leading Atlanta dentist, said he would recommend a rigid enforcement of dental inspection in public schools of the city when he spoke before the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Dr. Hinman quoted Dr. William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins University and now professor emeritus of Oxford University, England, in saying, "Mouth infections cause more injury to the human race than alcohol."

Goes to Europe to Buy a New Pet Dog

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Within forty-eight hours after "Trix," a pet Pomeranian of his daughter, Mrs. Bertram Townsend, broke its $1,000 neck by falling down an elevator shaft in the hotel and was buried at Atlantic City in a silver-handled rosewood casket, beneath a silken shroud, Mahlon W. Newton, owner of Green's Hotel, was on the ocean, bound for Switzerland to buy another toy dog.

By long-distance to the steamship office he engaged a reservation. The steamer sailed at noon. Mrs. Townsend received a wireless from her father.

"Don't worry about 'Trix.' Will have another Pom just as good," read the aerogram.

RESINOL CLEARS AWAY PIMPLES

And Blackheads. Restores Health to Unsightly Complexions.

Pimples and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear and velvety, and hair health and beauty usually follow the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive and complicated "beauty treatments" utterly fail.

The nearest drug store is sure to have Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Why not get some to-day? You can't begin too soon to get rid of those ugly, embarrassing complexion blemishes. The Resinol medication is so gentle, yet so effective, that it can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Doctors throughout the country have prescribed Resinol for eighteen years. You can test it free by writing to Dept. 20-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a generous trial.

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Many of America's foremost families are never without Syrup Pepsin, because one can never tell when some member of the family may need it, and all can use it. Thousands indorse it, among them Mrs. M. E. Darling, R. F. D. No. 4, Belleview, Pa., who writes: "I certainly think Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin saved my baby's life. Marjorie is a bottle baby and could not get her food to digest, but I found by giving her a small dose of Syrup Pepsin when she had colic it always cured her." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being bought by those who already know its value, and it contains proportionately more. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

MARJORIE DARLING

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin, as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-gripping and free from injurious ingredients.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

SILK PRICES Slashed to 49c

Former Prices up to $1.50, now

Snip! snip! Scissors have been working overtime the past two weeks. As a result, many lines have dwindled, color lines have become broken, price-lots have been depleted. For one cause and another, then, we group the following silks to sell at 49c. Look them over, they tell of big savings:

$1.50 silk and wool crepes—silk warp, wool filling. Soft and crepey, drape delightfully. 44 in. wide. Gray, rose, tan, chasseur, violet

85c to $1.25 silks—odd lots of fancy taffetas and messalines in various colors and combinations, 49c.
85c foulards—spot proof, not to hurt by rain drops. Neat patterns, allover and spaced designs. Blues, greys, rose, Copenhagen, brown. In the same lot are a few solid color messalines in odd shades, 49c.

P. S.—While this is the best item in the May Silk Sale, it is by no means the only good value. There are almost a score of others, including the most fashionable silks. Savings generally are a fourth to a half.

(Ready at 8:30. Silk Annex—Main Floor, Left)

Half-Price Sale of Ribbon Remnants

They're Tired of Sharing None of the Advantages, Says Secretary Houston.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—While not a practical farmer, Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston has given the subject of agriculture years of careful study. He stands for education of the farmers. He believes that they have been sorely neglected in that respect; that their advantages have been few as compared to those enjoyed by city dwellers.

"Have you discovered any inducement to persuade young men on the farms to remain on them?" the Secretary was asked.

"It is a problem which cannot be easily solved," he replied. "You can't hold men on the farms unless you offer sufficient inducements. It is little wonder that farmers and their sons have flocked to the cities for more lucrative and congenial employment. For many years they have been contributing to the partially artificial upbuilding of our industrial centers, to the development of the cities as against their own communities—and what have they received in return? You cannot find the best educational advantages among farming communities. They are to be obtained only in the larger cities.

Why They Quit the Farm.

"Take a farmer with six small children, for whom he desires to provide an education. They will be sent to the country school as long as some one can be found to take charge of it, but at best the education received there is meager. If he would give them an education which will be of benefit to them, he must send them away to some institution of learning, entailing perhaps greater expense than he can afford. He must either maintain his farm at the expense of the education of his childen, or move to one of the large cities. So, education, among other things, is driving occupants of farms to the cities."

"If the high cost of living is the result of less production and greater demand, what remedies would you propose?"

Too Much Gold.

"Don't say 'high cost of living,' say, rather, the cause for high prices. One great contributing cause is the enormous increase in the production and supply of gold during the past eighteen years. There is more gold now than ever before in the hisry of our country. The greater the supply of gold the higher the prices, and so the greater the cost of living."

"Do you believe that the present tariff, or the tariff presented by the Democrats, has affected or will affect the high cost of living?"

"A lower tariff on the necessities of life should bring about reduced prices to the consumer; but, not being a tariff expert, I do not pretend to know just what effect the present Underwood Tariff bill will have. It should bring about reduced prices, but not all at once. You can not expect too much of such legislation. It must be given a fair trial. Take sugar in Louisiana. I believe that if the people of that State could produce it on a business basis there would be no need for a tariff on it such as the people of Louisiana and their representatives claim. But with a reduced tariff the railroads might retaliate by increasing their rates of transportation. That is one of the contingencies that might prevent a healthy and remunerative profit to the sugar producer in Louisiana."

No "Uplift" About It.

Recurring to the education of the farmer, Secretary Houston said:

"Don't think that the Department of Agriculture has any idea of a policy of 'uplift' among the farmers. What I have in mind, and what I believe will be for the best interests of all concerned, is education along the lines of better production and better marketing. More scientific methods must be devised to benefit both the producer and the consumer. The farmers, especially those in the South, must have better banking facilities; they must be able to secure loans at a lower rate of interest. A system of rural credits must be devised to give them equal advantages with city folk."

Tag Day Returns Near $5,000

Record Sales, but Gifts Are Small

Entire Fund Goes to Charity Work

Receipts Still Uncounted Because of Great Number of Nickels and Dimes Donated.

Between $4,500 and $5,000 was the sum obtained through Tag Day sales Monday for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Association, according to Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, president of the organization.

Owing to the vast amount of small change collected, the receipts have not all been counted, and will not be before Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Fraser said more tags were sold Monday than ever in the history of the organization, though premiums paid for them were unusually small.

"Instead of quarters and half-dollars, the people gave nickels and dimes," said Mrs. Fraser, "and therefore returns are not so large."

The greatest amount of money gathered at any one station was $230, secured in front of the Third National Bank building. Mrs. A. McD. Wilson was chairman of the committee at that station.

The entire fund will be devoted to the Sheltering Arms Association work, which includes the upkeep of four day nurseries and kindergartens.

Short Postage Loses U. S. Much Business

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Department of Commerce is receiving complaints in increasing numbers from business men in foreign countries against the short postage on letters received from the United States. These foreign merchants aver that the double postage which they are required to pay on letters from America is so annoying that it turns much trade away from our country.

Complaints have reached the department from France, Argentina, Africa, Australia and many other parts of the world, and the statement is usually added that short paid letters from the United States are beginning to be refused.

It has been suggested that the simple device of using a special colored envelope for foreign letters would prevent the oversight of short postage. Many firms have already adopted this method with success.

SENATORS AFRAID TO 'PLAY HOOKEY'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Does the United States need currency reform legislation worse than members of the Senate will need to go to seashore resorts, Europe and other vacation spots in August?

This is the real question that is posed before President Wilson.

The President has said that he wants such legislation at this session. A large part of the Senate believes it is entitled to a vacation when it has completed consideration of the tariff bill.

It is admitted that legislation could be passed during the latter part of the session that would give those affected by the tariff the advantage of a more elastic currency system, but Senators don't want to stay in Washington all through a hot summer. They privately admit that they fear public sentiment.

President Wilson has made no secret of the fact that he will appeal to the public in support of his demand.

BOYS OF BERRY SCHOOL TO ERECT FOUR BUILDINGS

ROME, GA., May 13.—Berry School boys are going to spend their vacation in building four buildings for the Berry School for Girls. The structures will cost $8,000.

All the buildings will be constructed of logs in harmony with the distinctive style of architecture which makes the school attractive. With the completion of the buildings, Miss Martha Berry, the founder, will be at the head of a plant worth more than $100,000.

'DAD' IN CABINET BUT GIRL LOSES U. S. JOB

Daughter of Secretary Wilson, Society Miss, Will Quit Drawing $2,000 a Year in June.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Miss Agnes Wilson, daughter of Secretary of Labor Wilson, is one of the House employees who probably will be dropped from the Government payroll when the reorganization of the committee is effected. Miss Wilson is still clerk to the Committee on Labor, although her father left the House March 4 to become a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

According to the Disbursing Clerk of the House, Miss Wilson still is drawing $2,000 a year and will continue to do so until June 1. She has been prominent in society here since her father entered the Cabinet circle and has acted as hostess at his receptions.

Another society girl who will be more fortunate than Miss Wilson is Miss Anne Ferris, who is clerk to the Committee on Public Lands. Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, chairman of this committee, probably will retain the position, and Miss Ferris will remain on the House payroll.

Cleveland to Have Shortcake Inspected

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—A city bureau to regulate the making of strawberry shortcake and pie, with inspectors, is in prospect in Cleveland as the result of recommendations made to the new city charter commission by George E. Murray, famous chef here.

"Restaurant and hotel cooking has fallen into the hands of Swiss cooks," said Murray. "They despise pies and shortcake and it is impossible to find cherry or berry pie that is not adulterated or strawberry shortcake worthy of the name."

'Bathhouse John' for Ban on Gown Rustle

CHICAGO, May 13.—"Bathhouse John" Coughlin, alderman, to-day began a campaign to have the rustle of silk gowns included in the list of noises prohibited by city ordinance.

This decision was reached after his poetry-trimmed ordinance "regulating women's dress and censoring same" won a host of friends in the City Council last night.

The ordinance was assigned to the health committee.

Famous "C" Ranch in Texas Cut Into Farms

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 13.—The famous "C" ranch in Texas, owned by the late Nelson Morris, will be broken up and sold to small settlers. The announcement that the big ranch, which comprises four counties and is larger than Montenegro, will be sold for about $2,000,000, was made here to-day by O. W. Kerr.

"C" ranch was the home of the herd of 20,000 Poll Angus cattle and it played a large part in changing the State of Texas from the home of the long horn to that of blooded stock.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

"ARE YOU A MASON?" IS GOOD.

Miss Billy Long and company, at the Atlanta last night, presented "Are You a Mason?" to a crowded house, and it was received with almost continuous laughter.

The play is a farce. For the past three weeks the company has been handling more or less serious plays, and for that reason the presentation of a pure farce in so capable a manner was a pleasant surprise.

The distinct surprise of the play was the work of Bert Gardner, who impersonated a female French costumers' assistant, and extracted quite a lot of humor from the scene where he assists Mrs. Perry (Miss Billy Long) to fit her waist, while the indignant husband (Edwin Vail) who is aware of the gender of the assistant—who is impersonating the female as a part of the plot and with the husband's sanction—looks on in impotent rage.

Miss Long's part this week is more or less incidental, but was handled with the splendid skill of the very versatile star, and Miss Sheldon as the mother has another opportunity to show her splendid ability as a character artist.

"Are You a Mason?" is good for many a hearty laugh, and can be seen nightly (except Wednesday) and at matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

FINE BILL AT THE FORSYTH.

Cleverly plotted and written and a laugh from curtain to curtain, "The Come Back" has no difficulty in maintaining its headline position at the Forsyth this week. It is one of the really laughable college skits. Paul Dickey, programmed as a former University of Michigan football star, gets more than his share of the limelight, being not only the hero, and a very good one, but the playwright and the impresario of the little company as well. He is well supported by pretty Miss Inez Plummer, Corbett Morris, Stewart Robbins and Clay Boyd.

Billy K. Wells, in his Yiddish oratoricals, is an invariable hit, and the bill has two excellent singing acts, those of Mayo and Allman and of Newhoff and Phelps. Two unusually meritorious athletic numbers are on the program this week. The Apollo Trio are well known in their bronze posing and reproductions of sculptural masterpieces. The McAleavey Marvels are comparatively new to the larger vaudeville circuits, but are making good with a clever jumping act. An amusing farce, "The New Scholar," is presented by Clarence Wilbur and a company of seven others.

ODDITIES —in the— DAY'S NEWS

EASIER TO SEE NICKEL.—A slight change has been ordered in the new nickel. The words "Five Cents" will be more clearly defined.

SHIPS PLOW THROUGH FISH.—The inland waterways connecting the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays are so filled with herring that thousands of fish are killed with the passing of each vessel.

HOME RUN FOR "BOSSIE."—During a ball game in St. Louis, a fly ball dropped within a few feet of a cow. "Bossie" beat the fielder to the sphere and gulped it down. The runner romped home.

DRUNK, SAVED SIX FAMILIES.—Two drunken men, homeward bound, after making a night of it in downtown Chicago cafes, saved six families from death in a fire that destroyed a large apartment building.

ROBS LAWYER IN COURT.—A pickpocket stole $5 from the pockets of John E. Sandberg, an attorney, while he was arguing a case before Municipal Judge Goodnow in Chicago. The thief was not caught.

OFFERS HORSE FOR MONUMENT.—Believing that death is not far off, George L. Newton has advertised that he will exchange his horse, Peter, a fast trotter, for a monument to be placed on his grave in the New Britain, Conn., cemetery.

URGES $2 DIVORCE.—"A divorce license bureau, where a divorce may be obtained for the asking and a $2 fee, would be a unique remedy for the present divorce evil," said Mrs. Harry Huston, director of the Parent-Teacher Federation of Los Angeles.

CONVICTS WELCOME WARDEN.—A letter, done by hand in old English type, was presented to Edmund M. Allen, newly appointed warden of the State penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., by the 1,445 prisoners, congratulating him upon his appointment.

DEATH FINDS HIDDEN WIFE.—Inviting his friend, Jan Piekos, to witness his ability as a marksman, John Staffa, of Mindot, N. Dak., shot through the end of a barrel and killed his wife. The woman hid in the barrel following a quarrel and his threats to kill her.

HOW LEGLESS MAN "RUNS."—Although her husband's legs were cut off near the thigh in a railroad accident, Mrs. Fannie Kendrick, Huntington, W. Va., testified that he "ran" after other women. She asked the court to prevent him from spending his money on affinities.

"NO" BETTER THAN "RENO."—"Better 'no' before marriage than 'Reno' after marriage," said the Rev. John Compton, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, of Washington, D. C., discussing stricter marriage laws. He declared that Paris is the middleman between us and the devil.

U. S.-England War Called Impossible

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"Our work, I believe, has rendered impossible any armed conflict in the future."

This statement was made to-day by Lord Weardale, chief of the British delegation in the conference arranging for the centennary observance of peace between England and the United States.

MORE VERSES FOR NEW TESTAMENT

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, May 13.—Some long missing verses of the New Testament are included in manuscripts of the Gospel discovered in Egypt six years ago and purchased by Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Mich., according to a study made of the Freer manuscripts by The Times.

A facsimile of the writings has been presented to the British Museum by the University of Michigan, to which Mr. Freer assigned the task of publication, and according to The Times' study, there have been found in the gospel of St. Mark several verses which occur in no other known manuscript of the New Testament, although they were known to St. Jerome, who quotes part of them.

In the Freer manuscript, after the passage in which it is said that Jesus upbraided His disciples for their unbelief, the text continues as follows:

"And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, suffers not the true power of God to be apprehended.

"For because, said they unto Christ, reveal at once Thy righteousness.

"And Christ said unto them, The limit of the years of the powers of Satan is (not) fulfilled, but it draweth near. (The text here and elsewhere is corrupt.)

"For the sake of those that have sinned was I given up unto death that they may return unto the truth and sin no more, but may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven."

A number of variations in other portions of the New Testament are also pointed out by The Times in the Freer manuscripts.

DRINKS POISON, THEN ASKS FOR DOCTOR; DEAD

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 13.—Cornelius Clark, who registered at the Florence Hotel here a week ago, today telephoned the clerk to send for a doctor. When Dr. B. A. Fox responded he found the young man had taken carbolic acid. He died. Three notes, one addressed to his mother in Tupelo, Miss., one to his wife in Chicago and one "to whom it may concern but keep it from newspaper men," were found.

STERILIZATION FAVORED BY CHATTAHOOCHEE JUDGE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—Declaring that the present methods of punishment do not reform criminals as they should, and that some other plan should be employed to make better people of those sent to the chain-gangs and penitentiaries, Judge S. P. Gilbert, of the Chattahoochee Circuit, has indorsed sterilization of criminals.

BARES LIFE FOR SISTER WHO SHOT HER BETRAYER

MUNCIE, IND., May 13.—Miss Doris Underwood, the school teacher accused of shooting with intent to kill Otis Fisher, displayed the first signs of emotion to-day when the prosecution exhibited the man's blood-stained necktie. Ada Underwood, eighteen-year-old sister of Doris, over whose alleged betrayal the school teacher shot Fisher, was sworn as a witness to-day. She will bare her life story to save her older sister.

CALLS BALKAN WAR BLESSING TO TURKS

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, May 13. — Bucknam Pasha, the famous American, who is an Admiral in the Turkish navy, has been in London for two weeks. He has no hope that conditions in Turkey will straighten themselves out for at least a year. The various details in regard to the signing of the peace treaty, the delimitation of the frontiers and the arrangements for the payment of debts will take a least a year.

"So far as Turkey is concerned," he said, "it is a blessing in disguise for her to lose her European provinces, as they were a source of continual expense and trouble. The Turks are essentially Asiatics and their destiny now is the development of Asia Minor, which is rich in oil and mineral wealth, which simply needs intelligent working. Even on the European side close to Constinople the oil fields are of incredible richness. In fact, Turkey will be the coming oil country of Europe.

"Turkey needs money to straighten herself out," continued Bucknam Pasha, "and Europe will undoubtedly furnish it. I do not expect much from the present Turkish Government. It is essentially a military dictatorship. It answered the purpose for the time being, but must soon pass away.

"Now that peace has been restored one of the difficulties with which the Turks are confronted is that after the despotism they have not the development capacity of a government and it will be necessary to introduce trained Europeans to take charge of every department of State and teach the Turks the science of government. Financially, Turkey is in better condition than the people imagine. The entire funded debt is only about $40,000,000 and this comprises everything. There are practically no municipal debts. Constantinople, in 1912, for the first time in its history, borrowed $5,000,000, yet the borrowing capacity of the city, based on European standards, is equal to the entire funded debt of the Empire."

Mutiny Threatened by Montenegrin Soldiers.

VIENNA, May 13.—Seven thousand Montenegrin troops in and near Scutari, enraged at the decision of King Nicholas to give up the Albanian city at the demand of the powers, are threatening to mutiny and commence a massacre of Albanians.

Word to this effect was received to-day from Cattaro by the official newspaper, Neue Frele Presse.

The dispatch further stated that unless the troops from the international fleet arrive at Scutari within the next 48 hours the Montenegrins will probably be out of hands.

The arrival of the international force at Scutari has been delayed by bad weather, although the city has already been surrendered to Admiral Burney, commander-in-chief of the war fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast.

Company Stops Cars In Cincinnati Strike

CINCINNATI, May 13.—Not a street car moved in Cincinnati to-day, owing to the strike tie-up, and the officials of the Cincinnati Traction Company announced that until a decision is reached by the carmen as to whether they will agree to arbitration, proposed by Mayor Hunt and accepted by the company, no attempt will be made to run cars.

The union members are to take up the arbitration proposition at a meeting this afternoon.

The proposition is to end the strike pending the adjustment of differences by an impartial board.

Bells Put on Poison Bottles in Hospital

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Sleigh bells tinkled in all the wards of the City Hospital to-day. There was such a merry concert as the nurses moved from place to place that the curiosity of the patients was aroused. They foundn that the bells were chained around the necks of bottles containing poisonous drugs.

Dr. Wayne Smith, superitendent, issued an order to put bells on the poison bottles after Thomas Adams, an attendant, had ben indicted for giving carbolic acid to a patient by mistake. The patient died.

He Wanted Cover And Took It.

Sunday he rode his machine to Marietta. It was late—very late—before he started on the trip home. So late, in fact, that when something went wrong with the engine a few miles out of town he waited in vain for assistance to come along.

Painfully he pedaled the heavy machine in to town, and dismounting before his boarding house, crept up to bed.

Heated by his exertions, he quickly fell asleep, only to awake in a few minutes, shivering with the cold. Failing to find any additional covers in his room, he arose in the darkness, quietly entered the "spare bedroom", made a hasty grab at the bedclothes and dragged them into his room.

There he wrapped himself up and blissfully sank into the arms of Morpheus.

It was not until the next morning at the breakfast table that he learned a young lady friend of the family missing the last car to her suburban home, had been placed in the "spare room" for the night.

Did You Ever Hear of Such Luck?

"Ever notice how some people have all the luck in the world at poker?" asked a gentleman who is noted for his love of poker.

"Coming down from New York not long ago a number of us got up a little game in the smoking room of one of the big boats. We were all old friends, but interest in the game grew until finally the stakes mounted in the hundreds.

"I was dealing one jackpot and only two men were drawing cards. The opener took one. The other hesitated—he had been lucky all evening. Then he spread his cards out face up. He had a split straight with a queen lacking.

"'Just deal me a queen, old man,' he said.

"The opener scoffed.

"'Great chance you have. I've got three of the ladies to come in on,' he said.

"'What's you bet I don't get my queen?' asked the lucky one.

"'All you want, at ten to one.'

"'Done, for a hundred.'

"I dealt. The two bet around cautiously for a minute, then the man with the split straight raised the opener $100.

"'Call your bluff,' said the opener, showing down his three queens.

"'And it's my pot,' said the other, flipping over a queen.

"That broke up the game."

He Sure Was Absent Minded.

"I've heard of absent minded persons," said the barber as he prepared his implements of torture and shoved a lather brush into his patron's mouth to hush his protests, "but the strangest case I ever knew of happened right here yesterday.

"One of our best known lawyers, who has been wearing a beard for several years, dropped in and ordered it taken off. After the operation——"

"Operation's good!" interrupted the customer, feelingly.

"——," proceeded the tonsorial sharp, unheeding. "I wouldn't have known him if I had met him in the street.

"But a stranger thing was that he didn't know himself. When he got out of the chair and looked at his face in the mirror he turned around to see who the strange chap was whose face he saw in the glass.

Ten Cars of Cattle Killed in Explosion

FORT WAYNE, IND., May 13.—The explosion of a tank car filled with oil in a freight wreck near Fort Wayne to-day blew a brakeman from the top of a car and set fire to the train. Ten carloads of cattle were burned to death.

Their frantic bellowings were heard for miles, and farmers from the country around, attracted by the bedlam, helped the train crew battle the flames.

MOB THREATENS COURT AT TRIAL OF JERSEY STRIKER

PATERSON, N. J., May 13.—Five thousand Industrial Workers of the World, most of them silk mill workers, swarmed about the court house to-day when the trial of Patrick Quinlan, one of the leaders, under indictment for inciting riot by inflammatory speeches, was resumed.

The mob threatened to storm the building, and hasty calls were sent for extra police.

La Vida Corsets

The coming of Mrs. Marvin at this season is a new departure.

Until now her visits have been confined to two a year—in the fall and early spring.

To have her with us now for two weeks at the beginning of the summer season is good fortune.

The corset for the light and filmy summer dresses must be right, it must give the proper support to make such dresses "hang" gracefully. And what woman does not know that summer comfort is largely a matter of the right summer corset?

It is along these lines that Mrs. Marvin will help you—this is warranted not only by her corset knowledge, but by the splendid models of LaVida Corsets she has here at her command.

A Sparkling, Brilliant Sale of Jewelry

We Do Not Know That Prices Have Ever Been Treated in Any Such Fashion

And such a clearaway it will be!

50c Belt Pins for 10c; $1.00 to $2.50 Brooches for 25c; $3.00 Vanities for 50c; $7.50 LaVallieres for $2.00, etc., etc., etc., including watches, watch fobs, hat pins, scarf pins, fan chains and the like.

But properly to advertise such a sale as this places us in a dilemma. To do full justice to the radical reductions, the really unheard of prices, it would seem that the jewelry is not right and desirable, so prone is the mind to judge events by past experiences.

In this instance you must not!

You see below what the prices are; the jewelry that they stand for is exquisite---good-taste jewelry, chosen because it possessed the qualities that appeal to a woman's refined sense of ornamentation.

True, there are some few pieces that are a bit damaged, but they are the rare exceptions; they figured but slightly in the causes of this sale.

This list below is not so long as it might be. There are others and other pieces all reduced on the same scale.

Court "Graft" Temptations

ONLY those who have had the privilege to serve in King George of England's household can realize the temptation that is thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected officially with the court. To the credit of the members of the royal staff it has to be said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department were implicated, shows, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than can be resisted.

Punishment in such a case is swift and severe. So soon as any one joins the royal household it is made perfectly plain to him or her that any attempt to gain personal profit by reason of their position means instant dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no mater how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the mere fact that the confidence of the sovereign has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from the court.

No Orders From the Palace.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes that any one known to be connected in any way with the royal household, or possessed of any influence there, is not approached with suggestions that he might benefit his own pocket by falling in with schemes propounded to him. It is not many months since one of the best known officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department was offered a check for $3,000 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply a certain article to the King.

It was known, of course, to those who made this offer that the official in question had access to the blank forms upon which these warrants are drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of the least difficulty to get one of these signed by the then Lord Chamberlain among his daily pile of documents. The offer was indignantly rejected and the whole matter reported to Viscount Knollys, his majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm which made the proposal is still without the royal patronage and is probably wondering why no orders from Buckingham Palace come its way.

It is not always money that is the bribe offered to court officials. Social advancement is often the bait dangled before them. A case in point may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the master of the horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with the suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting young ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the political world, and openly promised the official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme he was then threatened with the lady's grave displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from his position. His retort was prompt and surprising. He went direct to his official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the household and the lady in question no longer receives invitations to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how popular one is until one is appointed to a position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from people of whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from all quarters upon those whose good fortune it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story may be told in this connection. About this time last year an extremely well dressed lady went up to an official of the Lord Chamberlain's department in Piccadilly one morning, addressed him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for having "neglected her for so long," and made him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. This done, she tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and has not to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

King Edward's Champagne.

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few months ago. He was written to by a firm of cigarette merchants hailing from America, forwarding him samples of their goods, together with the cool intimation "that they were well aware that the cigarettes were just the thing the King could smoke and enjoy," and that for every 1,000 that His Majesty ordered the official approached could have 60 per cent of the account repaid.

The reply was curt, but deserved. It was to the effect that the samples had been handed by the courtier to his chauffer, who pronounced them rubbish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in pressing them upon his sovereign.

It was due to the late King Edward, one of the finest connoisseurs of wine who ever lived, being served with a very indifferent brand of champagne one morning that the gravest case of corruption that has ever been proved against the officials of the British court was brought to light. He asked the name of the firm who supplied it and what on earth it was doing in his cellars. He pursued this matter to some length, and ultimately found that one of his most trusted servitors had been substantially bribed to introduce this wine into the bins of the then Prince of Wales preliminary to an application for the royal warrant in the ordinary course. It is on record that the offender in this case was continued in his position just under half an hour after King Edward was informed of his identity.

Didn't Mention Names.

A number of enthusiasts, returning from an important match in New York, were playing cards in a railway carriage. Among the number was a rather shady individual who had lost one eye, but seemed to be winning freely, and time after time he scooped in the money, put down by his less fortunate comrades.

This continued for some time, when the man at the head of the table felt he could stand it no longer; so he rose in a fearful temper and remarked:

"Look ye 'ere, boys, someone here is cheatin'. Now, I don't want to mention any names, but if he does it again I'll knock his other eye out."

The Social World

The largest affair of the week will be the annual reception and formal opening of the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday evening. For a number of years these receptions have been among the most brilliant social events of the summer season. They assemble the entire club membership, with their wives or friends.

The election of officers will take place at 6 o'clock. During the late afternoon the women will assemble in groups on the terrace, and following the election will be joined by club members. Through the evening there will be music by an orchestra. Refreshments and dancing will follow dinner.

The presence of a number of visitors will add to the pleasure and brilliancy of the occasion.

Among the visitors present will be Miss Mary Gaut, Nashville, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun's guest; Miss Ruth Wilson, New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest; Miss Nelson Chambliss, Chattanooga, Miss Lula Dean Jones' guest; Mrs. Edward Echols, Richmond, Miss Constance Knowles' guest; Mrs. James Hook Spratling, Macon, Mrs. Roy Collier's guest; Miss Lorna Carr, St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, Arkansas, Mrs. Bates Block's guests; Miss Gwendolyn Barnes, Uniontown, Pa., Miss Alice Vandiver's guest; Miss Ruth Hull, Mexico City, Mrs. H. L. Manson's guest; Miss Ellen Meeks, Memphis, Mrs. Robert L. Cooney's guest; Miss Anne Selden, Washington, Mrs. George K. Selden's guest, and Miss Marion Phinizy, Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Dinner Dance at Club.

There will be the usual informal dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening, which will be a happy close to the week's gayeties.

For Mrs. Byrd.

Mrs. Henry A. Leonard entertained at auction-bridge Tuesday afternoon at her home in Merritts Avenue for her sister, Mrs. S. F. Byrd, who will leave June 1 for Birmingham to live. There were 16 guests. Appropriate souvenirs were given winners of the top scores.

Mrs. Block Entertains.

Thirty young women were guests of Mrs. Bates Block Tuesday afternoon at a bridge tea, given for her house guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Vari-colored sweetpeas adorned the apartments. Dainty pieces of hand-made lingeries were given for top score and for the honor guests. The score cards bore the monogram of the hostess. Following the game tea was served on the terraced garden at the rear of Mrs. Block's residence. Guests were grouped around a circular table, surrounding a great oak tree. Decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas. The hostess and honor guests wore white lingeries.

Luncheon for Miss Wilson.

Mrs. C. A. Wood will entertain ten guests at a luncheon Wednesday at the Georgian Terrace for Miss Helen Dargan's guest, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York.

For Mrs. King.

Mrs. Edward King, who was Miss Elizabeth McLaws, of Savannah, was given an informal tea Tuesday afternoon by Miss Nita Black. There were twelve guests.

Gayeties at Fort McPherson.

A bowling party was given at Fort McPherson Monday evening by officers of the post. It was one of a series of affairs enjoyed by the residents of the fort. After the bowling, Colonel and Mrs. Styer gave a supper party.

Captain and Mrs. Cochran will give a bridge party Tuesday eveping.

Embroidery Club Meets May 21.

The meeting of the North Side Embroidery Club, which was to have been held Wednesday with Mrs. Emily Trotti McCarley, has been postponed until May 21, owing to the illness of Mrs. W. T. D. Wilson, mother of two club members.

For Miss Wilson.

Rodin's 'The Biplane' Called Remarkable

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—Details have just come out of a remarkable work of sculpture that Rodin is now engaged on, which he calls "The Biplane."

The sculpture consists of a tall, slender, unadorned shaft surmounted by what may be described as a lengthened sphere on which twin figures stand side by side, their bodies which almost touch, curving gracefully backward. Their faces are upturned. Only one foot of each rests on the sphere, which seems to spring from beneath them in the moment of flight, and their wings are only half opened.

The two figures, which seem to rise and support each other in flight, symbolize the two wings of the biplane.

Son's Dress Too Gay for Author Rostand

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—A good deal of amusement has been caused by the difference of opinion between Maurice Rostand, son of Edmond, and the rest of the family on the subject of taste in dress.

During the whole of the time that Edmond Rostand has been staying in Paris he has not dared to be seen in the streets with his son, whose extravagant costumes and general appearance appal the shy Academician. "I'll go to wark with you," it is said he told him the other day, "but only on condition that you cut your hair and change your tailor."

MUCH EXCELSIOR MADE IN GEORGIA

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Georgia, producing 6,805 tons in nine plants, principally from yellow pine, next to Virginia leads all Southern States in the manufacture of excelsior.

The figures are for the year 1911, as compiled by the Bureau of the Census.

Total production for the United States in 1911 was 139,830 tons, of which Virginia's output was 25,160 tons, leading all states.

Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi the Carolinas, and Texas take unimportant rank with one and two plants each.

Excelsior has been manufactured in this country for more than fifty years. It was first placed on the market in 1860, but for the ten succeeding years it was not in great demand. Since then, it has become a staple commodity for many important uses, until now over 85,000,000 feet of forest material are needed each year to meet the demand.

Excelsior might be called ribbon veneer, since it is made by cutting wood into very thin strands. The size of the strand, with the kind and color of the wood, gauges the price and grade. The thinnest grades are called wood wool. The finish product is baled by a press such as is used for baling hay, and in this form it goes to market.

The first government record of the excelsior industry is contained in the reports of the Tenth Census (1880), only the value of the raw material, amounting to $150,800, being shown. Assuming the value of a cord at the time to have been $2.50, the amount of wood consumed would have been about 60,000 cords, as compared with 142,944 used in 1911.

Cottonwood is the favorite excelsior wood, contributing 43.3 per cent. of the total amount consumed.

Yellow pine, including scrub, shortleaf, and loblolly, was reported from 11 States, Virginia using more than all the others together. In that State scrub pine was probably the species most largely supplied.

The best grades of excelsior are made from basswood. That not more of this is used is due probably to its scarcity and to the high price of the stumpage.

Other woods which were used for excelsior were spruce, buckeye, cypress, butternut, soft maple, chestnut, birch, hemlock, beach, and white cedar.

NAPOLEON'S SPOOK DESPISES GLORY

PARIS May 13.—Napoleon the Great has learned in the other world that glory is a bubble, according to a communication from his shade, quoted to-day by one who heard it at a spiritist seance. Said the Conqueror's spook:

"It is very painful for spirits to note how all the evils caused by politics quickly disappear from the consciousness of people. The glory you have acquired is soon forgotten or only vaguely remembered; but you cannot be blamed for forgetting glory, because everything called glory is in reality only a great monstrosity toward humanity.

"Your monstrous earthly politics are nearly always inspired by the personal ambitions of a few individuals. It is unpardonable wickedness for men to warn people that their vitality in relation to liberty is at stake.

"These are only words used to influence great masses. Those uttering them know that nobody can deprive the world of what God created."

AMATEURS WILL HAVE 2 EVENTS IN HILL CLIMB

PERMISSION has been received, in the form of an official sanction from the American Automobile Association to the committee of the Atlanta Automobile Association, to include in the list of events which are to be held in the Stewart Avenue hill climb next Saturday one which will undoubtedly interest a large majority of motorists. It is the sanction for an amateur event, one in which any owner of a motor car may participate, be he a seasoned driver or not.

Two Classes for Amateurs.

The amateur event will be run in two classes. The first class provides for cars of a piston displacement up to 300 cubic inches and the second 301 and over. This will make, as far as the committee can judge, a fair and equitable adjustment.

The handsomest prizes of the entire event will be offered to the amateur drivers and all that is necessary to qualify in this event is for an aspirant to telephone E. H. Eleby at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. A special concession has been made to the amateur drivers of $3 entry fee and $2 license tax.

Officials Are Named.

Technical Committee—Automobiles, Fred Steele, F. C. Skinner, A. R. Almond; motorcycles, H. Gilbert Dove Wylie, Mr. Schulenberger.

Starters—K. T. McKinstry, L. S. Collier.

Referee—W. G. Humphrey.

Judges—L. E. Bissell, C. L. Elyea, T. H. Smart, R. S. Abbott.

Clerk of Course—E. H. Elleby.

M'GRAW ASKS WAIVERS ON OLD DOC CRANDALL

NEW YORK, May 13.—Word comes by the way of Cincinnati that John J. McGraw, who controls the destinies of the Giants, has asked for waivers on Otis Crandall, the Indiana farmer, who has prescribed so effectively in the past for many sick games, that he earned the name of "Old Doctor" Crandall.

The rescue pitcher extraordinary and sometimes great pinch hitter, has found it hard to get into condition this year, but the news that McGraw has decided to part with him will come as a shock to the fans who have a warm place in their hearts for the player who never quailed, no matter what the odds he was called on to face. It is just possible that McGraw has asked for waivers to rouse Crandall and will hold tight if some other club jumps at the chance to get him for $1,500.

For a Red Blotchy Skin

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream and the influence of these properties is that of an antidote. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taxing from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. SUGGESTIONS FOR SCORING RULES SILLY

By Percy H. Whiting.

AT last, after a vast number of years, the scoring committee of the National Baseball Writers Association has met and taken some action—though I can't say I think so much of it, now that they have done it.

The committee appointed by the Baseball Writers' Association to clear up points in the scoring rules so as to bring about more uniformity has held its first meeting and adopted a number of recommendations to be presented to the National Commission and through that body to the playing rules committee of the big leagues for action.

The committee was unanimously in favor of the much discussed plan to giving a hit to the batsman who advances a base runner on an infield jab when the batsman reaches first and no error is made on the play. It is argued that the good points of this method of scoring will outweigh any defects it might have and that it was the logical and equitable way to score the play. Instructions already have been issued to National and American official scorers to record the play as a base hit.

The wording of several of the rules was clarified. One made it clear that one assist, and one only, shall be credited to a player who takes part in the run-down of an opponent. A fielder might have two assists in a double play.

Some scorers have been in doubt as to whether or not to charge an error in case a runner is caught napping but gets back to his base because the man who takes the throw drops the ball. The verdict was that in case the runner would have been out if the fielder had held the ball the latter should be charged with an error.

* * *

TAKE now this rule that gives a batter a base hit when he grounds to the infield and an attempt to force another man at second, third or home goes wrong.

In many cases the jab will be a feeble thing, on which the batter would be thrown out a mile if the play were made to first. But because of the happening that there is a runner on bases who draws the throw the batter gets a hit for it in the box score.

In other words a man can come up in the first inning, ground to third base and go out by three steps at first, getting a time at bat and nothing else. The next time up he can exactly duplicate the blow but the throw will be made to second, the other runner will beat the ball there—and the batter gets a hit. That's about as logical as——as,——as might be expected.

* * *

TAKE the matter of giving a player only one assist on a run-down. That's absolutely wrong. Every time a man handles a ball in such a rundown he takes the chance of making an error. Therefore he should get an assist if he performs the feat without making a bungle.

If you don't give the man an assist for every time he handles the ball you should not give him an error for any miscue he makes after his first handling of the sphere.

If that rule sticks a player will jump into a run-down, handle the ball once and then let George do it—for after that time he is in constant danger of acquiring an error without the slightest chance of getting any credit in the box scores for his further efforts.

More fine logic.

TINKER SAYS DODGERS WILL LAND NEAR TOP

NEW YORK, May 13.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, to-day predicted that the Dodgers would finish well up in the first division.

"They've got a team without a weak spot," declared Tinker, "and the game they are playing now isn't any flash in the pan work—it's just the sort of game they'll play all season, barring accidents."

BRADLEY-COULON GO IS EASY FOR JOHNNY

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—In one of the greatest contests seen in the city of Philadelphia, Johnny Coulon, bantam weight champion of the world, easily defeated Frankie Bradley, of Philadelphia, last night.

From the sound of the gong it was apparent that Coulon had the greater science and was far the stronger of the two. He defeated Bradley in every round of the six.

"CAN'T you play a little faster?" said a magnate to a team.
"There ain't no one behind us, and that's no idle dream.
See how eagerly the lobsters and the pinheads hoot the ball;
Say, ain't you guys agonna ever win a game o' ball?

"You can really have no notion how delightful it would be
If you tramps would get together and win some games for me."
But the team replied, "We got no luck," and gave a look depressed.
When they got to hitting, the breaks would change, they guessed.

"Just can that stuff about the breaks," the magnate glum replied.
"I need the coin, you grab some games, or you'll all take a ride.
The further from the pennant the nearer to the bush.
Just get this straight, you pull your freight or get up with the push."

JOE BIRMINGHAM OUT OF BATTLE FOR MONTH

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps will not be seen in action for all of a month, if then, for he is suffering to-day from a broken bone in the right ankle, acquired while sliding for second base in the ninth inning of the game here yesterday. His right foot caught in the iron that holds the bag in place, and it bent, snapping the bone.

Birmingham will direct the Nap team on crutches for a month or more. "Buddie" Ryan will play center field in his place.

This is the Naps' second mishap of the New York series, as Larry Lajoie can not grip his bat to-day because of the two bones broken Sunday by Klepfere's shoot.

LLOYD BREAKS RECORD IN FIFTY-MILE CONTEST

LONDON, May 13.—The world's amateur running record for 50 miles was beaten yesterday by E. W. Lloyd, who ran the distance in 6 hours, 13 minutes and 8 seconds at the Stamford Bridge athletic grounds.

The former record was made in 1885 by J. E. Dixon and was 4 minutes and 15 seconds slower.

ZBYSZKO VS. CAZEAUX.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Articles were signed to-day for a finish wrestling bout on May 19 between Zbyszko, the giant Pole and Cazeaux, the Italian champion. The winner probably will be pitted against Gotch, if the world's champion really can be induced to come out of retirement.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 13.—"What's the matter with the Giants?" friends and rooters inquired from me when the club returned from Philadelphia, after the unsuccessful series.

"We ran into good pitching, the best in the league right now, and some of the games were kicked away by thick-skulled playing," was my reply.

"Does John really say anything to the players when they make mistakes?" a man who calls McGraw by his first name only when he is not around asked me.

"He mentions them sometimes," said I. "For instance, an outfielder missed a foul fly in that Philadelphia series which would have won us a game if he had caught it. There was a man on second base at the time.

"'Why didn't you get that ball,' said McGraw to him when he came to the bench. 'You were slow going after it.'

"'Well,' replied the outfielder, 'I was trying to watch the runner on second out of the tail of my eye to see whether he started, and I thought I could get a double play.'

THERE were two out when he went after the ball. McGraw dwelt on the caliber of that player's intelligence for a minute or two. Yes, sometimes he speaks of little things like that when he feels talkative. He had many "a bone" to thrash over with the various players when he went into executive session with them in the clubhouse after those games, too. That is when he talks it over—in private.

The Giants are playing good ball now. They ought to climb, and climb rapidly—particularly on this Western diet, which for the first time in years should prove to be nutritious. It used to be the hardest in the league to swallow. The New York pitching staff was off for a time there. Tesreau has not really acquired his stride yet, although he was better in a game he started against Cincinnati last week until he banged out a three-bagger with the bases full and ran all the "pep" out of himself getting his big bulk around to third. After that, somebody had to be sent to pitch for him. Marquard is over his case of tonsilitis, and should be around in shape again very soon. He did pretty well against Philadelphia last week, except for one inning. The team was not hitting the ball hard in Philadelphia, but this was not due so much to weak batting as superior pitching. The men are all in good shape now, with the exception of John Murray, who caught a little cold and has a stiff neck. He will be able to turn his head again very soon now, and should be in the game this week. McGraw is plentifully supplied with substitute outfielders, but he refuses to let any of them go. Stallings is very anxious to get hold of "Josh" Devore because of his speed. "Josh" runs and hides every time he hears his name mentioned in connection with Boston. He says the climate up there does not agree with him.

AS I predicted, the Western clubs have found the Eastern brand of pitching very superior to that on exhibition in the West this year.

The Cubs had a tough time in Brooklyn, where they were unable to roll up the big scores to which they had grown accustomed in the West. They met good pitching. Pittsburg had trouble enough in Boston. I expect to see the Cubs start to drop very soon now. It is necessary for them to make too many runs to win a ball game, and the pitchers all around the league, like wine and shoes, will improve as the season ages. If you have observed the scores, you will find that Cheney has worked in more than twenty games already this spring. If Evers had a couple more good workmen in the box he would make a great fight for the pennant, because there is no fault to be found with the rest of the club. It is a team of hardened, shrewd veterans.

Joe Levy, manager of Joe Rivers, announced yesterday that he does not intend to let his protege box again until July 4. "I have a date in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena for Joe," said Levy, "and I think I would be taking a big chance of losing it if I should match Rivers in the East and take a chance of being outpointed by one of those clever fellows."

* * *

Jack Britton is another crack Eastern lightweight who is going to California to try and force Willie Ritchie to meet him in a 20-round battle on July 4.

* * *

Britton and his manager, Danny Morgan will leave about May 30 for the coast where Morgan will have Britton box two men within two weeks, after which he will post a forfeit of $2,500 and issue a challange to match Britton against Ritchie.

* * *

"Digger" Stanley, the bantamweight champion of England, and Eddie Moran, the clever English bantam, were to fight after all for the English title.

* * *

They were matched a few days ago to battle for twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club of London on June 2 for $500 side bet, a purse of $1,750 and the Lord Lonsdale belt. They were to have fought on March 31, but Morgan could not make the weight and the match was called off.

GLAD DAYS.

The melancholy days have gone,
The saddest of the year.
The wrestling game is pale and wan—
Its final gasp is near.

The wrestler now will give us peace,
And sail across the main;
His manager also will cease
From giving us a pain.

Soon we can hie to yonder park
And see a baseball game,
While wintry winds from noon till dark
Coagulate our frame.

Several newspapers inform us that the Tigers have acquired Pipp. A study of recent box scores leads to the same conclusion.

Finis Wilson is the name of a youthful pitcher sent to the Southern League by the Naps. He may be a promising young man, but that is no name for a beginner.

Still, if George Stovall loses his job in St. Louis he will be welcomed by Spitzbergen in the Polar League.

J. Jeffries arises to remark that he will not be anybody's sparring partner. Having once enacted the role of a punching bag, he knows how it feels.

While those Sox and Giants are touring the universe it behooves them to pause in Africa so as to compare the American and African brands of ivory.

RASSLING.

You may pan, you may hammer the game if you will,
But thousands of suckers will fall for it still.

Hugh Jennings will now take up the education of Mr. Pipp where Charles Dana Gibson left off.

TOM M'CAREY'S PET PRESERVES TO BE INVADED

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Tom McCarey, who has been operating as a boxing promoter in this section of the country for years without opposition, to-day confronts a rival organization.

Backed by big money powers and assured by the Vernon authorities every right that McCarey enjoys, Harry will soon begin to lay plans for the erection of an open air arena down by the beach.

Gilmore will throw open his new club to the public on July 4. A certified check of $20,000 has been placed in the bank here to enable him to work out his plans. Harry is matchmaker of the organization, with William Aldrich president. None but high class matches will be staged.

A contest between Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers for the world's lightweight championship is the opening card desired.

A flat offer of $17,000 has been telegraphed to Ritchie. Negotiations will be taken up with Rivers immediately.

"That covers the situation," said Gilmore. "Our hats are in the ring and they are going to stay there."

Articles of incorporation will be filed inside the next three days.

BATTERS CAN BE DEVELOPED SAYS MEYERS

By John (Chief) Meyers.

BATTING ability is the high art of baseball. True skill with the stick hides many a minor fault. Brilliancy in all other lines pales into nothingness if not backed by at least average hitting power.

There is a so-called axiom in our profession that "batters are born, not made." I disagree with such logic. There is the same opportunity for improvement in batting as in fielding or base running.

Not every one, of course, no matter how studious, may become a Ty Cobb or a Honus Wagner. And it is a mighty good thing for the pitchers and catchers that this is so. Few athletes have the lightning speed of Cobb, which enables him to beat plenty of infield taps which would be easy outs against average runners. Few again have the muscular power of Wagner, which enables him to drive the ball with rifle-like velocity.

300 Notch Real Feat.

When one stops to consider conditions, a .300 batting average strikes home as real achievement. It means hitting safely three times in every ten chances.

The batsmen, single-handed, must fight an army of obstacles.

In the first place he has a perfectly round stick with which to change the direction and propel a perfectly round ball thrown from a distance of 65 feet with all the force of human power.

He has approximately half a second from the time the ball leaves the pitcher's fingers until it is up to him. In that half-second he must swing his bat so that the curved surfaces of the two objects (bat and ball) meet fairly in the middle of their respective lines of flight.

Now there are nine agile and active opponents so distributed throughout the playing field that any sort of high fly means certain retirement.

If the batter hits a fraction of an inch over the ball he sends it down to the ground where the speed is checked, and where it is generally quite easy for one of the infielders to intercept it.

Add to these complications a skilled pitcher who can make the ball vary many ways in its flight to the plate, and that little half second of grace dwindles almost into an infinity. The wonder then is that so many reach the select class.

Chief Tells Secret.

Still there are certain principles of batting science that will help to overcome these obstacles. The most important, to my mind, is that of meeting the ball in front of the body. This is no more than the swing of the player who is termed the natural hitter. Zimmerman, Wagner, Lajoie, Doyle and Cobb all employ the style.

Some of them may do it all unconsciously. I know I did for several years before I joined the Giants. McGraw pointed out to me the reason. He drills and drills this idea into his men.

Al Bridwell is a player that I would term a "made" hitter. In a pinch he was one of our most trusty batsmen, for he was sure to play every shade in his own favor. Bridwell became proficient by learning to meet the ball in front of himself.

Uppercutting Is Fatal.

In the old days great hitters, like McGraw and Jennings, used to run out to meet the ball before it broke. The present rule about staying in the batters' box prevents this. But the principle may be applied through the medium of the natural swing.

The swing should be made in a horizontal arc. The bat naturally has a tendency to propel the ball directly in its course.

An "uppercutter" is a batsman whose thrust ascends after the fashion of fungo hitters. This style of hitter usually raises high flies or pop-ups, and can never hope to become proficient.

A downward stroke is practically as weak, for by it it is practically impossible to hit the ball with speed along the ground.

MAY BATTLES BRING HEAVIES TO LAST ROUND

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—In the balance of his journey toward the championship goal Gunboat Smith will have to do principally with cowboys. The rough riders he has to work past are Luth McCarty and Jess Willard and if he can escape being thrown, roped and branded he will be in a position to write champion heavyweight of the world after his name.

At least that is the way the heavyweight outlook looms at present. That the Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard bout at Coffroth's Eighth Street arena on May 17 will be the semi-final in the blue ribbon tourney is universally admitted. But that Luther McCarty will be the man the winner will meet is not so sure. Luther is to hook up with Arthur Pelky at Calgary on May 24 and while it does not look as though McCarty is endangering his title, you can't always tell.

Pelky is the big husky who recently held his own with Tommy Burns and vanquished Andy Morris. That may not be much, to be sure, but it suggests that Mr. Pelky is "a buildin' up." There are no really finished products among latter day white hopes and the sporting world is apt at any time to ring with the praises of some new heavyweight who was scarcely known twenty-four hours before.

Willard Defeated Pelky.

It's strange how Pelky's fortunes have been linked with those of Jess Willard and Lute McCarty. Willard defeated Pelky in New York. At another time Pelky was to box Luther McCarty and failed to put in an appearance. Willard took his place at short notice and, in the opinion of Eastern sport writers, outboxed McCarty. Now McCarty and Pelky are to meet at Calgary.

The month of May will surely clear the way for a decisive championship encounter. The Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard and Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky bouts are only a week apart and there should be little difficulty in signing the two victors for a Fourth of July match. It is understood that Promoter Coffroth has his eye on the attraction and it is to be hoped he lands it, for it will be the biggest thing that has happened in pugilistic circles for a long time.

O'CONNOR IS TICKLED; HE WINS HIS LAW SUIT

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Jack O'Connor, veteran ball player, was happy to-day over the court's ruling yesterday that the St. Louis American League club must pay him the $5,000 salary which he claimed was due him. O'Connor was demoted as manager of the club before the expiration of his contract.

By J. W. Heisman.

THE first two games of the Tech-Georgia series were the big noise in college circles last week. They did not have much bearing on the championship no matter how they came out, but they were of special interest to all Georgians and of some interest to all Southerners, nevertheless.

No matter how grand a record either of these teams may make or how punk, up to the time when they don the gloves for each other, everybody has come to understand that it is going to be a battle to the frayed and frazzled finish between the two despite any seeming disparities.

Over and over again this has happened in the past, and the apparently weaker team has overthrown the stronger to the bewilderment of all followers of the college game in the South. And realizing this to be a fact, as they more and more are doing, people in larger and larger numbers each year find it well worth while to cut out some other attraction and arrange their affairs so they can go and see the Tech-Georgia games, whether they take place in Athens or in Atlanta. That is the explanation of the huge crowds that last Friday and Saturday witnessed these contests in Athens. On these two days all previous Athens records for baseball attendance were badly shattered, notwithstanding it appeared to the man without bias that Georgia was bound to make a runaway affair of both games. Those who remembered their baseball history, though, couldn't see it that way, and made sure of being on hand when the factory whistle blew.

Nor were they disappointed, for if ever there were two hard-fought and evenly-contested games anywhere, these were they. Both games were lost by Georgia by a margin of one run only, and in both the Athenians had men on bases when their last batter was retired in the last half of the ninth inning.

What now about the comparative strength of the two teams? Before these games the records of the two teams seemed to have settled that matter pretty thoroughly. But when it comes to the all-around effectiveness and playing ability of the two teams right now—as they played yesterday and as they would play to-day—that may be a very different matter.

Despite the promising nature of the new material on hand this spring at Tech, it early became evident that seven new men on the team meant a badly balanced organization, and one that was bound to get some bad bumps from first to last before the season was over. With this fact recognized, high aims for a whole season's record were ruthlessly abandoned, and every word and plan and step of action was bent toward whipping the green team in such condition of preparedness and fitness as would result in their giving a good account of themselves in the Georgia series alone. That result has, seemingly, been attained by the Yellow Jackets, and that is the season why they appear to-day to be a match for the Red and Black, whereas a month ago they would have been mince pie for their rivals.

* * *

BUT do not be misled into believing that the tables are turned to any such extent as to make of Georgia mince, or any other kind of pie for Tech. Far, very far, from it.

Tech won the first games by a hair's breadth only; and perhaps they have good old side pa| Mr. O'Confidence to thank for helping them to even this much margin.

* * *

PRAISE, more praise, and yet again praise, is what is overdue the Clemson team and Coach Dobson for the way they have fought their way to the light out of dark wilderness and triumphed over teams that were whole laps ahead of them in form and condition when the season opened. Two out of three from Auburn on the latter's own playground is a glorious finish to a game, up-hill season. And I cannot forbear to cite the fact, unknown to many in this section, that besides winning ten straight from the colleges of South Carolina, the Tigers wrested a 4-3 victory from the University of North Carolina and played Trinity a 14-inning 3-3 game at Durham. This certainly puts them up in the running in the estimation of all fair-minded fans.

By Way of Aftermath

A few points that neither the box scores, nor yet the detail of the games, show of the recent Tech-Georgia battles may be worth jotting down.

* * *

I never saw amateur pitchers who can wheel and throw to second any quicker or more accurately than do Corley and Morris. They must have put in hours and hours of practice to have acquired this precision; it was very fine.

* * *

* * *

Wootten, the Tech freshman, grandly justified my judgment in putting him back into the game as a varsity man in spite of his failure to get a single hit in the entire first eight college games in which he played. Who shall say how much his home run (the only one of the series) the first time he stepped to the plate didn't have to do with the winning of both games by Tech?

* * *

Ginn is the fastest and most finished base runner I have seen in the colleges in many, many years. He gets away with it at any old stage of the game, and no matter how we lay for him.

* * *

On Friday Tech had six men in the game who were playing their first year of varsity ball, and on Saturday they had seven such in the line up. All but one of the ten who played are due to be back next year, and also every last one of the present scrub players; so that Tech men think they have little cause to worry over next year's troubles if not even a single new man comes in.

* * *

To my mind, the umpiring of both the officials was splendid work. I am thoroughly convinced that the final outcome of neither game was affected, or would have been affected, by the changing of any close decisions that came up. Messrs. Harmon and Holland are two fine umpires, two clever gentlemen, two absolute sportsmen; they typify the best traditions of college life and college athletics.

* * *

In another year Amason should size up to thoroughly fill Holliday's shoes at first base. This youngster has even more natural reach and stretch than Holliday, and he is fast picking up in every way. Had McWhorter not been playing unusually deep for him, every-one of his three terrific drives to center in Friday's game should have been good for a home run. As he himself puts it, though, all he accomplished was to give Bob a chance to be a hero. (Never mind, "Amy," I am sure Bob appreciates the courtesy.)

* * *

Bob McWhorter is surely one good base runner, and he is as sure and graceful in his handling of fly balls as the cleverest professionals.

* * *

During the past three seasons Fax Montague has made a success of every position in which he has been placed. Now he is a second baseman, and a good one. "Fax" is also a real captain; one of the very best Tech has ever had.

You'll have to hand it to both Pitts and Eubanks for pulling themselves up from positions of only mediocre reputation to where they have earned the undying gratitude of their college mates. With both it was a case of tightening their belts and their courage up to the very last hole, then "up and at 'em," and, finally, of "staying" with the opposition till the cows came home.

JOHNSON STICKS FINE ON TWO MORE PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 13.—President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has fined Catcher Nunnamaker, of the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Olson, of Cleveland, $25 each for their fist fight in Cleveland last week.

President Johnson said the reports of the fight were greatly exaggerated, and that these two players were the only ones involved in the trouble. He said he obtained a straight story of the trouble from the two players themselves.

NEW YORK, May 13.—A letter received here from Sweden to-day stated that the Swedes will be represented at the Panama-Pacific games in 1915. They will send over a strong team.

MATTY HAS PITCHED 47 INNINGS WITHOUT ALLOWING FREE PASS

NEW YORK, May 13.—Running along with Walter Johnson in his efforts to pitch a record number of scoreless inning is Christy Mathewson, who is setting a mark for perfect control that may never be equaled.

The star twirler of the New York Giants finished his forty-seventh inning yesterday afternoon without a base on balls. Matty has given only two passes this year. That was in the first game he pitched against Boston on April 17.

Matty has won five games and lost one so far this season. He was beaten by the Phillies on May 3, the score being 3 to 2, two men being out when the winning run was scored.

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 13.—Unless Jess Willard curbs his inclination to extreme nervousness as the day of an important ring battle draws nigh, he is apt to wreck all of the good chances he has of getting to the top of the heap of white hopes that are struggling for recognition at the present time. This is the straight opinion of Charley Cutler, Willard's old friend, and the man who is chiefly responsible for getting the elongated Kansas fighting proposition a good start on the pugilistic sea. Cutler knows the tall Westerner better than anybody else in the world, and while he is still friendly with Willard and eager to see him win, which would justify all of the nice things Cutler has said about him, he fears his one weakness will be his undoing.

* * *

TOM JONES has the Willard affairs in hand right now, and is training him in person for the affair with Gunboat Smith in Jim Coffroth's arena a week from Tuesday. Coast critics are saying some nice things about Jess and the form he is showing out there in his preparation, and that is what moved Cutler to speak at this time. "Knowing Willard as well as I do, I can speak freely of him," the big wrestler-fighter told me the other day. "There is one weakness that he will have to overcome. That is his extreme nervousness the day before a battle and on the day of the event. I wouldn't call it fear exactly, because I have seen some of the gamest men in the world quake as if they had the ague just before stripping to go into the ring. It is merely a high-strung condition, and unless he gets over it his chances of becoming a real star will go glimmering.

* * *

"IT is my honest opinion that Willard is as game, if not gamer, than any of them among the big fellows right now. At heart he knows he can defeat all the Gunboat Smiths they can lead to him, but the fact remains that Willard is a terrible fretter. He gets morbid and morose as the fight draws near, and this is followed by a state of acute nervousness that is apt to completely unfit him for a hard battle. Once he is in the ring and the real work begins, Willard is all right.

* * *

"UNLESS Smith gets him quick and gets him in the right spot, I believe Willard will whip him nicely. Further, it is my opinion that if he does this, he is apt to enter the ring with Luther McCarty at a later date and be made an equal favorite with the big man from Nebraska. I wouldn't venture an opinion on that fight right now, preferring to see how Willard comes out with Smith. If he can whip the Gunboat he will have a lot of confidence, and then he will be a mighty hard man to beat."

CRACKERS CAN HOLD MEMPHIS EVEN—J. AGLER

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 13.—"King" Brady will be the selection to twirl the second game for the Crackers, with Graham receiving. Bernhard will probably use Kissinger and Seabaugh.

The Crackers lost the opener here. The Turtles come from rear and overcame five runs obtained by us.

Chappelle made his debut in a Cracker uniform and was knocked off of the rubber. Furchner, who succeeded him, was treated very roughly by the Turtles.

The Crackers hit the ball hard, but it seems lately that the luck breaks with the other team. The Crackers scored all the runs in one inning and was not able to score again. The necessary wallop could not be produced.

Chappelle had everything at first, but weakened, and the Turtles romped on him, which will win many ball games for them.

"King" Brady should win his game to-day with his steadiness and control. He is the kind of a pitcher that will win from this club.

The Turtles are drawing well. They have big crowds and are supporting a good team. We should at least break even here, and that would give us an even chance to keep above the .500 mark on this road trip.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HUSBAND, sed ma, did you reed that peece in the paiper the other day wich sed that a prominent sientist sed that baseball was the curse of the United States?

No, I dident see that artikel, sed Pa, but the way it sounds I bet it was in a Sunday paiper. How offen have I toald you, sed Pa, that you mussent beleeve everything you see in the Sunday paipers? I guess I will have to stop bringing the Sunday paipers hoam, sed Pa. All you read in them is freek stories like the one you was jest telling about or else the ads. After you reed the freek stories you talk about them & think about them all the week, & after you reed the ads you cry all the afternoon & say you cud be perfeckly happy if you jest had a few thousand dollars to go shopping with.

That isent so, sed Ma. You know it isent so. All I sed I wanted to go shopping with was a few hundred not a few thousand. & beesides, this artikel about baseball was the truth, beekaus I happen to know the great sientist wich gaiv the interview to the paiper. He & his wife is cumming up to the house to dinner tonite. You will have a chanst to meet him. He is a reely grate man, Ma sed, beekaus eeven his wife thinks so.

Another Scientist.

Oh deer, sed Pa, & so we have got to feed another sientist. I havent forgot yet, sed Pa, the sientist wich caim to see us last fall, the one wich was trying to prove that fishes breethed thru thare scales & not thru thare gills. He didn't talk anything else except fish, & we had fish for dinner that day, too. I saw fish in my sleep that nite, sed Pa.

Oh, this sientist is different, sed Ma. He is interested in man, not fish. He beleeves that every man shud have the fizeek of a old Roman gladitor & wud have it if he observed the proper rules of hy-geen. That is why he thinks that baseball is the curse of the United States. He will explain it all to you wen he cums tonite.

Well, that nite the sientist & his wife caim to dinner. He was a littel bit of a man & his wife was a fine big woman. She looked as if she cud have been a White Hope if she didn't happen to be a woman insted of a man. Her husband squeeked like a mouse wen he talked, & his hands was thin like birds feet. If I was a man I wud like to marry his wife, but if I was a lady I wuddent like to marry the sientist.

The sientist dident talk about sience during the dinner. I thought from what Ma sed about hy-geen that he wud be vary careful about what he ate, but he wasent. I nevver seen a man eet so much. I guess the way his wife looked at him he had forgot what she toald him about over-eeting beefoar thay left hoam to cum to our house. But after dinner Pa started rite in on him.

I was to the ball gaim to-day, sed Pa. I was sorry old Matty had to lose that gaim. He pitched one of the grandest gaims of his career.

He Detested It.

I detest baseball, sed the sientist. It is the curse of the country. Jest think of it, sum days thare are maybe twenty thousand men watching a gaim of ball wen thay ought to be exercising themselfs insted of watching 18 men that are doing the exercising. If they were all out exercising themselfs, thay mite be trained athleets too.

Do you exercise? ser Pa.

What kind of a trained athleet are you? sed Pa.

That is neether here nor thare, sed the sientist. He saw his wife laffing & he was gitting mad.

I nevver exercise much, sed Pa, & I nevver mis a ball gaim wen my bizness will let me git away, but I feel as fine as silk & I guess I cud give Sam Langford quite a fite as long as my wind lasted. Baseball is not the curse of the United States, sed Pa, with all due deference to yure opinyun. Baseball is the grandest gaim that was evver invented. It is loved by oaver a milyun men & boys & is getting grater evvery year. Ladies can go to ball gaims & fergit thare shopping, Pa said, & men can go & fergit thare creditors. Long live baseball, sed Pa, & three cheers for McGraw.

I think Pa is rite, but he is a raw person sumtimes.

How to Tell the Bite of a Venomous Snake

IF you should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so-called harmless variety, look at the injury.

If there are four punctures, or even three, the chances are that it was not a venomous snake; but if there are only two punctures it is probable that you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake.

While this does not always hold good, as a non-poisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake's deadly fangs are but two—generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should, whenever possible, be kept for identification.

If, as generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more bands above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next, wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available, suck the wound, then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now, wash the wound well, and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution; or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely, not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whisky, if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whisky than by snake bite.

When positively certain that the poison has been removed from the wound, loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them, so they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical care, and the wound should be kept open by packing with wet antiseptic gauge, as sepsis and local gangrene often follow a snake bite.

Bluffton, Ohio. — "I wish to thank you for the good I derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sometime ago. I suffered each month such agony that I could scarcely endure, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely cured.

"Then I had an attack of organic inflammation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am cured. I thank you for what your remedies have done for me and should anything bother me again, I shall use it again, for I have great faith in your remedies. You may use my testimonial and welcome. I tell every one what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs Rhoda Wingate, Box 395, Bluffton, Ohio.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. Alice Darling, R. F. D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

THE PROBLEM OF THE RED MAN

An Interesting Discussion of a Vigorous Article on the American Indian in Hearst's Magazine for May

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

WE do not see ourselves as others see us, and that is as true of nations as of individuals.

To our eyes the red man has practically sunk out of sight. To European eyes he is still the most picturesque figure in the Western world. If you doubt that statement, then the next time you are in Europe fall into conversation with any intelligent Frenchman, German or other native of the Old World, about life in America, and you will be likely to discover that he is much more deeply interested in Indians than in fifty-story buildings. Even the wonders of the Panama Canal appeal to him with far less force than do the history and the fate of those unique tribes which owned this continent in fee simple for centuries before our ancestors landed upon its shores.

If you have imbued yourself with the notion that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian," you may be a little vexed to find that our contemporaries abroad, with their bird's-eye view of things on this side of the water, presist in regarding the American red man as a personage quite as interesting to the philosophical observer as the American white man, and infinitely more romantic.

In Hearst's Magazine.

Then you might with advantage turn to an article in this month's number of Hearst's Magazine, where Mr. Francis E. Leupp, recently Indian Commissioner, explains his ideas about the way we have heretofore treated the red men and the way we ought to treat him.

A great-brained European once said to me: "I am a friend of your country and an enthusiastic admirer of its ideals, but I most respectfully protest against the manner in which you have dealt with one of the most interesting races that ever existed on this earth. Pardon me for saying that I think you have done very wrong. You might have kept him and made a good citizen of him, instead of driving him into extinction, or, what is even worse, into racial abasement."

A Similar View.

Mr. Leupp appears to take a similar view. He has ideas about the capacity of the Indian for civilization, and about the best way to develop that capacity, which ought to command the attention of a liberty-loving and fair-dealing people.

The sole idea of our Government seems to have been to make a farmer of every Indian. "Give him a farm and make him work it," has been the slogan. And when the poor Indian, ignorant of the white man's science and the white man's methods, fails to become a successful farmer in a single generation or less he is condemned as good for nothing and treated with contempt and with renewed injustice.

Disregarding the fact that he has neither the capital to develop his farm nor the experience to enable him to compete in agriculture with men of European origin, whose ancestors were trained in that kind of industry long before America was discovered, the red man is required to devote himself exclusively to work for which, in many cases, he is racially and constitutionally unfitted, or else to become a drunkard and a pauper.

Some Indians make good farmers. Some of them have the gift and the ancestral tendency. Every reader of our history knows what the Iroquois Indians did in the fertile valleys of Central and Western New York. When General Sullivan mercilessly raided the lake region of New York he destroyed farms and stores of grain, of which any industrious European agricultural community might have been proud. That was a war measure and, as such, perhaps, excusable at the time. But suppose that an enlightened government had taken pains to develop the skill of the Indians in cultivation after peace had been established.

It may be replied that the Indians ran away and refused to be civilized. True, in part; but at last they could no longer run beyond the white man's reach. As Red Jacket once eloquently expressed it, "We are become a small island in the bosom of the great waters. We are encircled; we are encompassed. The waters rise; they press upon us; and the waves once settled over us, we disappear forever!"

Made Him a Brute.

Taking advantage of the terrible effect that "fire-water"—whisky!—had upon the unimmunized red man, his white enemies pressed it upon him, as they press it upon him still, until he became a brute in spite of himself.

The Indian has many useful capacities which he would develop if he had a proper opportunity, but the opportunity is refused to him. Read what Mr. Leupp has to say about the multitude of red men who take naturally to mechanic arts and to various trades, and the hopelessness of their struggle against the immense agricultural units that his white competitors, with comparatively unlimited capital, are developing around him, and you may be led to exert your influence to have the doors of opportunity opened wider to this long-cheated race.

We may consistently keep out Japanese, but the Indian was here before we were, and the principles of eternal justice demand that he shall not have the door shut in his face.

The Poet's Plea

IT was all over. They were in the the carriage at last, man and wife, driving back to the wedding breakfast. But suddenly, without warning, the youthful bride burst into heartrending sobs.

"Oh-o!" she cried. "Oh-o! Oh-o!"

"My dearest dear!" breathed the new-made hubby. Why does my pet weep so on her wedding day? Tell her hubsie-wubsie all about it, then!"

"Marmaduke, I've hidden something from you. I've not told you all. Alas! What shall I do?"

Marmaduke's heart stood still for what seemed to him a century, but was, in reality, a second; then:

"Tell me"—and his voice was hoarse—"tell me what you mean at once! I can not bear this suspense!"

"I c-can not c-ook!" sobbed the little wife.

"Oh, lovey, is that all?" the young man cried, as his heart beats slowed to normal time. "You frightened me! But worry not. I am a poet, and there will be precious little to cook!"

Are Children a Duty?

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

I.

BEFORE beginning these three short plain talks it may be well to warn the idealist who allows sentimental tradition to preclude honest and independent thought to read no further lest he or she be shocked—possibly scandalized. Yet one should bear in mind also the fact that there is a sentimentality sometimes degenerating into a selfishness that amounts almost to cruelty. Such cruelty unpremeditated and unrecognized.

Bearing this truth in mind one may almost dare to reply in the negative to the question asked above.

For that question is not, Are children a joy, a comfort, a privilege? but, Are they a duty?

Race Would Die Out.

Doubt comes often to one's mind in reading the opinions of certain writers who discourse on the sin of childlessness, the evils of race suicide, the selfishness of unfruitful marriages. Right here one may pause to acknowledge that the arguments in favor of child-bearing to perpetuate the race are irrefutable. One cannot erect a building without material, and the race would die out were there no children born. So, for the purpose of continuing the species, children are certainly essential.

But of those who inveigh against the iniquity of childlessness only a few look at the matter from the standpoint of the good of their kind. I think I am safe in asserting that not one parent in one thousand has sons or daughters for the express purpose of perpetuating the race. So we will leave that aspect of the question out of consideration.

Some expressions become so common that we take them at their face value without analyzing them. Some opinions have been voiced for so long that their very age confers upon them a seeming stability which we seldom thing of disputing.

"I am glad to see that you are one of the women who fulfills her mission in life," was said to a mother of eight children. "You have been conscientiously doing your duty in having a goodly number of sons and daughters."

"Yes," assented the pale-faced mother, "through all privations and self-denials I have had the comforting assurance that I was doing my duty."

Surely Not Herself.

To whom? Surely not to herself, for she is a semi-invalid whose frequent attacks of illness are a menace to her life and to the happiness of husband and children; certainly not to the husband who works in a poorly-lighted, ill-ventilated office all day and burns the midnight oil in the effort to make both ends meet, and is always conscious that they never do; assuredly not to the children, the oldest of wrom—a bright lad of sixteen—has had to surrender all hopes of a college education, as his earnings in a shop are required to help support the little brothers and sisters, and to pay the bills of the doctor needed with appalling frequency by the delicate mother. To whom then was the duty performed?

Recently I heard a heated altercation between a mother and her modern and irreverent daughter. At last the mother, losing all patience, burst forth with:

"You girls of the present day do not appreciate all that your mothers did for you! You seem to forget that you owe a debt of gratitude to me, the woman who braved death itself to bring you into the world!"

"I consider it no debt," she declared. "I did not ask to come. Then why should I thank you for bearing me?"

A coarse and vulgar way of stating a truth. Mothers seldom consider whether their children will find the gift of life itself a positive blessing. And after we have brought our children here the least we can do for them is to give them as good an education and as cultivated an environment as possible so that they may start even with their associates. This is one of the few ways in which we can "make up" to them for their having been born.

Some of Us Are Happy.

Does this sound like pessimism? It is not that. Some of us who are glad that we are alive and to whom life has meant much that is joyful and good would not care to live it over again if we had to learn the same lessons, make the same mistakes, suffer the same penalties that we have already known. Now that we are here we love life and want to say as long as we can. Some of us are very happy, others very necessary, others have a natural curiosity to see how it is all going to turn out. But as one cannot miss that which one has never had, we would have missed none of these things had we never been born.

Put the question to any one as to whether he would care to go back and begin life once more as a tiny child, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the reply will be: "Perhaps I would," or "Yes," always coupled with the proviso—"If I could remember the mistakes I have made and profit by them."

But, unfortunately for our children, they will not or cannot profit by the mistakes of their parents. Each one must fight the battle for himself, and win out or fail for himself.

A Cow's Rights

"IT is about time," said the farmer to the hostler, as the two stood passing the time of day, "for these sportsmen to act more sportsmanlike. They ought to quit shooting cattle.

"Nearly all the farms are posted in our part of the county, and we are going to forbid shooting along roads and waterways also.

"I tell you, there is entirely too much cattle shooting.

"A fellow starts out for a week-end hunt. He takes along about forty rounds of ammunition, which gets heavier and heavier during the day. Seeing nothing else to shoot, he shoots a cow, simply to get rid of a shell that costs five cents and weighs a pound.

"I suppose, too, he wants to see the cow jump and run. That is fun for the hunter, but not for the cow nor for the farmers, either. We hate to have a cow come lumbering into the house and crawl under the bed when we are discussing the crop reports.

"Nor is it any fun to get up out of a warm bed and take the broom and jab under a bed or a sofa to chase out a cow that has been shot at and scared. It isn't a bit of fun.

"When it comes to milking that cow it is no easy job. She thinks that every one who comes along has a shooting iron and that she is going to get stung again. Poor, patient animal. She never did any harm except for an occasional thinness in her product.

"Cows, I admit, do not look as graceful and dainty as minuet dancers when they exhibit speed mania characteristics, but there are so many other funny things nowadays that it is unsportsmanlike to shoot cows in order to get this kind of entertainment.

"The cow has a perfect right to graze in her owner's pasture unmolested except at milking time, which comes often enough. Besides the responsibilities of the diry she has flies and lots of other things to worry her.

"A man who would shoot a cow or even shoot at her would welcome campaign contributions from any source and root for the opposing team in a world's series."

The "Breach of Promise" Suit, Its Use and Abuse

By DOROTHY DIX.

IN a recent article in this column I expressed the opinion that a man is just as much entitled to a change of mind and a change of heart in matters of the affections as a woman is, and that if a man found out before marriage that he was tired of the woman to whom he was engaged, and no longer wanted her for a wife, he had a perfect right to break the engagement and withdraw from a bargain that would bankrupt his life.

These sentiments have brought a howl of protest from a large number of my feminine readers, who accuse me of being a traitor to my sex, and berate me for encouraging perfidious man to trifle with the tender affections of trusting maidens.

I confess that I don't quite catch the point of view of my correspondents, nor do I grasp their ideal of matrimony. If their theory of marriage is the sordid one of marrying for a home and a meal ticket, and that it is easier for a woman to work a husband than it is to work a typewriter or a sewing machine, or stand behind a counter, then I can see why they think that a man should be compelled to carry out a matrimonial engagement, no matter how loathsome it had become to him, nor how he dreaded the prospect of having to spend the balance of his life with a woman who had lost her every vestige of charm for him.

This argument would have been a good one in the old days, when no gainful occupations were open to women, and the only way a lady had of getting a home was to marry it; but we have changed all of that. Any able-bodied and intelligent girl can support herself quite as well as a husband is likely to do it, and in consequence marriage has become a sentimental luxury and not a bread-and-butter necessity, as it used to be.

If you should suggest to the average high-spirited and independent girl of to-day that she should coerce an unwilling and protesting man into marching to the altar with her she would overwhelm you with her scorn. She would say that in her opinion the woman who married for a living earned it in the hardest way on earth, and that she thanked God she didn't have to make hers that way.

She would also remark that she was not a confidence woman who ran a skin game on any sentimental Tommy, nor was she a Lady Shylock who would exact the last drop of blood in a man's heart in payment of a little indiscreet love-making. Further, she would add, as did one girl that I knew, that if any man could get tired of a love affair sooner than she did and change his mind quicker he would certainly be a marvel of rapid action.

Admitting that few young women in this day are willing to marry a man just solely for the sake of the loaves and fishes that she can provide, on what ground can my correspondents advocate the holding of an unwilling man to a matrimonial engagement he has made?

Certainly no one who knows anything of life can hope that such a marriage will bring any happiness to the woman, or result in anything but misery for both parties. Malignity itself could devise no more cruel fate than the long-drawn-out years of torture that are the portion of an unloved and undesired wife. She drinks the very dregs of the cup of humiliation.

Even in the ordinary marriage, where the swain is romantically and passionately in love, and when he counts impatiently the hours to the wedding day, the ardor of the man cools off soon enough. It is not long before he ceases to take any interest in holding his wife's hand, and when he goes to sleep of an evening when she tries to talk to him, and begins to have business that keeps him downtown of evenings. You could count on the fingers of one hand every husband you know who is still a lover after five years of married life.

What prospects of domestic felicity has a woman, then, if she forces a man to marry her who does not want to, who is not in love with her, and who is already tired of her before the long matrimonial journey begins? To say that he will fall in love with her after marriage, and that she will win his heart by her devotion and her goodness, is to talk idiotic nonsense. The whole tendency of matrimony is to disillusion. It thrusts people together in a relationship where their personalities clash, and where they strike fire out of each other's temper and temperament.

Brings Out Faults.

Matrimony brings out every fault in a woman as exaggerated as if it were under a magnifying glass, and the woman who could not win a man, nor hold him, when she had all the allure of distance, of always being primped up, and on her best behavior, can never do it in close quarters of domesticity, where her husband sees her in her everyday clothes and surrounded with an aura of bills and boiled dinners.

Canaries have been bred in cages so many generations that they are perfectly satisfied to live in cages. Women have been bred for so many centuries to put up with whatever domestic lot they draw in life that they endure an unhappy marriage with stoic fortitude, and many of them put up a pretty good bluff at loving a husband they actually hate.

But men have no such finesse, no such patience, no such amiable hypocrisy. When a man is married to a woman of whom he has grown tired, and who bores him, he frankly neglects her. If he is forced to marry a woman after he has ceased to care for her he makes her pay for it by his brutalities to her, so it is incomprehensible why any one should think it better for a woman to compel a man to marry her when he doesn't want to than to be jilted.

In reality such a marriage is the substitution of a gnawing agony that never ends for a scratch that hurts for a moment and then heals. A woman may not even collect a debt of honor from the man who has compromised her without being far worse off than if she had wiped the slate clean and blotted out his score against her.

The Return of Grandmother's Hat

Described by Olivette, The Georgian's Fashion Expert

THE hat of grandmother's day is with us again, with all the charm of modern improvements.

If you have an old leghorn, cut it down and bind the edge of the brim with wide shadow or burgundy lace.

Tilt the hat to the proper angle with one of the "halos" we have so long discarded and bank the flat crown with forget-me-nots or any dainty little flower.

Here and there a wee bunch of roses in contrasting color add an effective touch, and the soft taffeta streamers pendant from beneath the brim sound the final not of becomingness and follow the latest Persian fancy.

A Fetching Model.

The top picture shows a fetching model developed in black satin, with a tiny cord of pale gray satin at the edge of the slightly rolled brim.

At the left of the back are two graceful, long-fronted plumes of uncurled ostrich.

Black satin ribbon tied in a loose knot holds the brim in front, encircles the sloping crown and falls in two "follow-me-lads" streamers from the even loops of a large bow directly at the base of the plumes in the center of the back.

In these days of bright coloring the home milliner may copy this becoming hat at small expense if she owns two feathers long useless because of the popularity of black and white.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town. unless they get out of town. Irwin, the lawyer of General Hastings, whom Aggie Lynch is suing for breach of promise, calls on Mary. He attempts to corner Mary and Aggie, but the girls are too wise for him.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically, but with returning cheerfulness, since he saw the end of his quest in visible form before him. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary who, with a swift movement, caught and held it.

"Not quite yet, Mr. Irwin, I'm afraid," she said, calmly.

But there's the money waiting for you," he protested, indignantly.

The rejoinder from Mary was spoken with great deliberation, yet with a note of determination that caused a quick and acute anxiety to the General's representative.

"I think," May explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, there's no need for all that formality," Irwin urged, with a great appearance of bland friendliness.

"I Thought You Would."

"Just the same," Mary persisted, unimpressed, "I'm quite sure you would better see Mr. Harris first." There was a cadence of insistence in her voice that assured the lawyer as to the futility of further pretense on his part.

"Oh, I see, he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned, and now she smiled in a kindly manner, which, nevertheless, gave no pleasure to the chagrined man before her. As he rose she went on crisply: "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris, Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letter. * * * Good-afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow, which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door. But he was arrested before he reached it by the voice of Mary, speaking again, still in that imperturbable evenness which so rasped his nerves, for all its mellow resonance. But this time there was a sting, of the sharpest, in the words themselves.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled, and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word, after a long moment in which he perceived intently the delicate, yet subtly energetic, loveliness of this slender woman, he walked back to the desk, picked up the money, and restored it to the billcase. This done, at last he spoke, with a new respect in his voice, a quizzical smile on his rather thin lips.

Aggie Ends the Silence.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And with that laudatory confession of her skill, he finally took his departure, while Mary smiled in a triumph she was at no pains to conceal, and Aggie sat gaping astonishment over the surprising turn of events.

It was the latter volatile person who ended the silence that followed on the lawyer's going.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently, "letting all that money go out of the house. * * * Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied, blandly; "but it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it? Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters, and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

Aggie's innocent eyes rounded in an amazed consternation, which was not at all assumed.

"Gee!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned, apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There, he will pay over that same marked money. Then, he will get the letters he wants so much. And, just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics——"

"What's legal ethics?" Aggie demanded, impetuously. "They sound some tasty!" With the comment, she dropped weakly into a chair.

Mary laughed in carefree enjoyment, as well she might after winning the victory in such a battle of wits.

"Oh," she said, happily, "you just get it legally, and you get twice as much!"

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused. She was doing her best to get a clear understanding of the matter, though to her it was all a mystery most esoteric.

Mary reviewed the case succinctly for the other's enlightenment.

"Yes, it's the same game precisely," she affirmed. "A shameless old roue makes love to you, and he writes you a stack of silly letters."

The pouting lips of the listener took on a pathetic droop, and her voice quivered as she spoke with an effective semblance of virginal terror.

"He might have ruined my life!"

Mary continued without giving much attention to these histrionics.

"If you had asked him for all this money for the return of his letters, it would have been blackmail, and we'd have gone to jail in all human probability. But we did no such thing—no, indeed! What we did wasn't anything like that in the eyes of the law. What we did was merely to have your lawyer take steps toward a suit for damages for breach of promise of marriage for the sum of ten thousand dollars. Then his lawyer appears in behalf of General Hastings, and there follow a number of conferences between the legal representatives of the opposing parties. By means of these conferences, the two legal gentlemen run up very respectable bills of expenses. In the end, we get our ten thousand dollars, and the flighty old General gets back his letters. * * * My dear," Mary concluded vainglioriously, "we're inside the law, and so we're perfectly safe. And there you are!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"But, no—mothers always ask so many questions."

CHAPTER III.

WHEN Jennie got in the house that night and found her motherly boarding house keeper waiting up for her hot tea, she evaded her old friend's look and questions, saying she was tired and had a headache—hurried up stairs to her room, where she could be alone and THINK.

Why had she so long put up with this sordid way of living—no good times, dresses or theaters, such as other girls have. All she ever did was to hurry down to work every morning, a hurried little lunch with the other girls at noon and then back to work till evening, when she would hurry home to supper and then maybe to see some of her girl acquaintances or to the "movies" with girl and boy friends.

How shallow and sordid and monotonous it seemed to Jennie, who had just had dinner in one of the best cafes in town and came home in a taxi-cab for the first time.

What if she hadn't been introduced to the man and what difference did it make if her mother or father didn't know him or approve of him?

Hadn't he been just as nice and polite—a lot more so than some of the boy friends she knew—and hadn't he asked her to "call him up" the next day? But shouldn't she tell her old friend all about the nice time she had that evening?—but no—old woman always asked so many questions—what if THE MAN was a great deal older than she—hadn't he told her that he had a little daughter just her age, but his family was away on a trip to Europe, and he was so lonesome since they were gone, and wouldn't she be his little pal and meet his wife and daughter when they arrived home—and she must bring her mother, too, when his family got back—no, it wouldn't do to tell her mother till then, for she might not understand it like he and Jennie did, didn't she like him just a little bit?

But Jennie went to sleep that night, thinking of a great big, bright restaurant, with its beautifully gowned women, heavenly music, thick carpet, a fountain playing in the center and the "taxi" ride home that was so different from the pokey old street cars she was used to riding in.

She was sound asleep and didn't hear her old friend noiselessly open the door and come into see if there was anything she could do before she went to bed—or hear the murmur "poor little girl—if she just didn't HAVE to work so hard," as she went out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T GIVE HER UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a girl 20 years of age, and she loves me, but there is one thing out of the way with me; I have six fingers on my right hand. So her parents say that it is unlucky to get married. What shall I do with a case like this, as I am worried that I will have to give this girl up. LOVESICK.

Her parents are unfair. If your habits are good, one finger more or less is immaterial, and I regret they haven't the good sense to know it.

You love each other; that is "good luck" enough to banish all the bad.

GIVE HIM UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am just 18 years old and love a man of 25. I have been keeping steady company with him for the past two months, before which time I had heard many wrong things about him, and find that he has an awful reputation among people that know him. He has been a perfect gentleman toward me, and I have learned to love him very dearly, but the way my friends talk bothers me.

N. B. D.

I am sure they would not accuse him without reason, and that it will be for your greater happiness to heed them and give him up.

His First Mistake

ONE of the first tasks they set the curate, who was handicapped by youth and inexperience, was to investigate the bona fides of a "widow woman" who had applied to the church for help. He departed nervously on his errand and knocked, as ill-luck would have it, at the wrong door.

"How long has your poor husband been dead, my good woman? What number of children have you? Are any of them working? If so, what amount of money are they earning, altogether?" were the questions he fired, like shots from a revolver, at the slatternly woman who answered his summons. "I presume I am addressing Mrs. Harriet Smith?" he added, noticing, with alarm, that she looked angry.

"No you ain't," answered the woman snappishly. "My name is Seline Jackson, my bairns go to school, and my 'usband's doin' what is necessary to a plateful of steak and onions at this very moment. Would you like to know anything else? Where I was born? When I was christened? At what age I started courtin'? Perhaps," she concluded, sarcastically, rolling her tattered sleeve up above the elbow, 'you'd like to see my vaccination mark before you go?"

But the bashful curate, redder in the face than a poppy, was already in full flight.

Fry Fish in Cottolene

You can fry fish in Cottolene, and use the remaining fat for frying potatoes or other food. The odor of the fish will not be imparted to the other fried food.

Cottolene is not alone economical for the reason that it can be used over and over, but also because it is richer than butter or lard, and one-third less is required. It is twice as economical as butter; much more economical than lard.

Cottolene makes rich, digestible, tasty, healthful food. Does not make food greasy, and is free from indigestion.

Cottolene is never sold in bulk—always in air-tight tin pails, which protect it from dirt, dust and odors. It is always uniform and dependable.

UNCLE JOHN'S PROPHECY

To-day's Short Story

"UNCLE JOHN always did have luck with him," said the man with the big black cigar. "Don't tell me that a man can prophesy disaster and always get away with it unless there is some supernatural agency of evil helping him!

"I've always been fond of Uncle John and his aversion to automobiles has pained me deeply, since I own three, and with the purchase of each one his bewildered wrath at me has increased. Each time a machine was added to my garage the mails have sizzled with the letters from Uncle John remonstrating with me. His idea of an automobile is that it is a diabolical contrivance straight from the regions below, and that those who risk their lives in one should be restrained in an asylum for the feeble minded.

Nearly Wept.

"The last time I went East on business I hired a touring car and a driver in order that I might cover ground quickly, and as Uncle John lived in the city I was visiting, I naturally went up to see him. The first time I called he nearly wept over me because he had witnessed my arrival in the big red car. He had visiting him his brother from Maine, whose ideas of automobiles were even more primitive than Uncle John's—but Uncle Henry had some excuse, for he lives in a region where there aren't any automobiles.

"Each of them called upon the other to witness that I was a reckless young thing and probably would meet my doom before I left the city.

"I resolved to put an end forever to such foolishness and to show Uncle John that automobiles were harmless things that would eat out of one's hand if properly approached. So the next day I came again in my big red car and with an expression of firmness and resolve.

"'Uncle John,' I said, without any preliminaries, 'I have come to take you and Uncle Henry out for a ride in my machine! Get on your things!'

"After they had fainted and been revived we thrashed the matter out. They had been strong men in their youth, but they were no match for me now, so I won out. I really felt sorry for Uncle Henry, as he went trembling out to the machine.

"'Remember, George,' he said, 'that my will and other valuable papers are down in the trust valuts. I have the feeling that something dreadful is going to come of this, but it is all due to your persistence. I am going because I can't help myself. I never expect to return to my comfortable fireside, but I suppose I have lived the allotted span, and perhaps the good Lord chooses to have me go this way. It seems hard, though.'

"Of course, I laughed at him. I told him airily that positively nothing could happen and that I expected that he and Uncle Henry would be buying a car themselves by another week.

"Well, I started out with those two timorous old men, honestly resolved to give them the time of their lives and banish their absurd fears. I know all about cars, and my driver was an extra good one, so I guess what happened was my fault.

"I told him to turn a corner an instant later than I should have told him. The steering gear locked, I think, or else it was just that little imp of bad luck. My lovely red car choked, gurgled and then shot straight at the curb, which it skimmed over as lightly as a bird. Then it absent-mindedly hit the coping between the sidewalk and the lawn, and as it was only an imitation stone coping, it merely brushed it aside without breaking it.

Snapped the Tree.

"Continuing our program, we gouged across a fine lawn and aimed at a choice tree that apparently had been recently set out, because its throat was still tied up in burlap. We snapped that tree in two as though it were a straw, and with the top part dangling coquettishly above Uncle John and Uncle Henry and the radiator of the machine perched rakishly on the mangled stump we came to a pause.

"About a million people surrounded us at once. I didn't even look at Uncle John and Uncle Henry. I just faded out of that car. They were on the street car traveling back home before the driver and I got the car off the tree stump. I had to hunt them up, though, to see how their nerves stood the shock.

"'Did you do anything in reparation for the frightful damage you created?' Uncle Henry asked me in awful tones.

"'Yes, uncle,' said I, 'I pushed the coping back into place and stuck it down with a postage stamp, and as the people who lived in the house were not at home to receive my apologies I went to the corner florist and got a bunch of flowers, which I tied to the mangled tree stump!'

"But wasn't it just Uncle John's luck to have his prophecies come true? He ought to get a job as a weather man!"

BEAUTIFUL HAIR DO YOU WANT IT?

You Can Surely Have It By Using Parisian Sage.

MOTHER

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are only a few certainties in life. One is Mother. You can always depend on her.

Make Mother a present and it pleases her most when it is something that will divide equally among the children.

It frequently happens that Mother has better health than father and the children because she doesn't have time for sickness or any other recreation.

When a child excels its father, he is teased about it, but when it excels its Mother it pleases her almost to death.

Photographs of Mother never look like her, for the reason that she seems to have been idle when they were taken.

The children are sick, Mother is up with them all night; father is sick, and Mother is up with him; but when Mother is sick does anybody know of it but the Lord?

A hen never tries to spread her wings over a rooster-sized son to protect him, but Mothers do it.

When a child has a pain, father's sympathy is dependent on his memory of a similar pain, but Mother's sympathy is independent of all experience.

When Mother prays it is for something she wants for her children, and when father prays it is for something he wants for himself.

A really fine Mother never lets her children see her cry or show cowardice. There are certain qualities that are splendid to remember in connection with Mother, and courage is one of them.

From the time Mother gets up in the morning till she goes to bed at night every one in the household, from her husband to the children and the laundress, takes complaints to her and lays them on her shoulders. It is a task too great for any statistician to enumerate how many complaints a woman hears from the day she enters her home, showered with rice, till the day she leaves it in a box covered with flowers.

There are some bright spots in Mother's life. A great and shining one is when she picks up the stocking bag and finds a stocking that doesn't need darning.

The only human being in the world whose duties and obligations are not bound by the clock is Mother.

And the great sorrow that confronts us, her children, and that will make heaven an unhappy place for her, is that when St. Peter lines us all up and passes out the crowns he will not take our Mother's word for it.

Slave to Fashion.

A butcher in a certain town recently received from a friend abroad a number of small alligators which he proudly displayed in an aquarium in his shop.

A customer came into the shop one afternoon and stood for some time gazing at the reptiles.

Having turned the matter over in his mind, the customer approached the butcher and exclaimed:

"I suppose a body might as well be dead as out of style. Gimme a couple of pounds of alligator!"

IMPORTS SHATTER ALL FISCAL MARKS

Manufacturers' Materials Brought in at an Unprecedented Rate, Hides and Wool Excepted.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A statement given out by Secretary of Commerce Redfield indicates the quantities of manufacturers' materials imported into the United States during the present fiscal year will greatly exceed the imports of last year and the mark of any previous year if the figures for the nine months ended March, 1913, be any criterion.

Of the ten important articles forming the bulk of the imports of such materials, cotton, wool, fibres, silk, tin, copper, rubber, hides, lumber and tobacco—the imports will, with but two exceptions, exceed the former high record mark.

The quantity of raw cotton imported during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was over 100,000,000 pounds, as compared with 66,000,000 pounds the same months last year; 163,000,000 pounds of wool, as against 126,000,000 last year; 318,900 tons of fibers, against 231,000; 20,000,000 pounds of raw silk against 16,000,000; 91,000,000 pounds of pig tin against 82,000,000; 234,000,000 pounds of copper pigs, bars, etc., against 206,000,000; 87,000,000 pounds of crude India rubber against 81,000,000; 453,000,000 pounds of hides and skins against 374,000,000; 818,000,000 feet of boards, planks and deals against 645,000,000 feet and 48,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco against 37,000,000 pounds.

The only cases in which the imports for the corresponding period of any previous year exceeded the imports for nine months ended March this year were when the imports of hides and skins amounted to 48,000,000 pounds in 1910, as against 453,000,000 pounds for this year and when in 1896, 1897, 1905, 1909 and 1910 the imports of wool slightly exceeded the imports of the current year.

MAY WHEAT OFF ON HEAVY SALES

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 97 @105
Corn—No. 2 ..... 59½
Oats—No. 2 ..... 36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 13.—May wheat was firm at 89⅜@89⅞c, as the offerings were small at the opening, and there was some demand from shorts. The more deferred months were off ¼@⅝c and were under some pressure.

Liverpool reported the larger world's shipments and favorable European crop prospects as offset by smaller Manitoba offerings and the stronger feeling for Indian and Plate wheat. Northwestern receipts were considerably in excess of a year ago, also the receipts at Winnipeg. The European visible supply showed a small increase.

There was little change in corn and oats, but both of these markets were the smallest fraction lower. The markets of the Old World were quite dull for corn.

There was a stronger feeling for hogs at the yards, but the provision situation was dull and without any change early.

STOCKS FIRM ON SHORT COVERING

Pool Manipulation of Copper and Consolidated Gas Also Credited With Causing Strength.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Central Railroad of New Jersey was again the weakest feature of the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, declining 1 point to 295 on continued reports of a threatened Government suit. This was a drop of 25 points since the close Saturday.

Most of the other stocks were up. Amalgamated Copper began ¼ higher, but soon lost the gain. Southern Pacific acted similarly, commencing with a gain of ⅜, but losing it and making a fractional decline within a half hour. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which has been under pressure for some time, lost ⅛. Union Pacific commenced at 148⅝, for a fractional gain, but soon declined, losing ⅛.

Canadian Pacific lost 1⅜, although it was strong in London on earnings reports. New York, New Haven and Hartford and Northern Pacific gained fractionally. United States Steel common opened at 59¼, unchanged from Monday. Pennsylvania road shaded ⅛. Erie lost the same amount.

The curb market was steady.

A strong tone prevailed in the last hour, most issues making satisfactory gains. Amalgamated Copper crossed 75 for a gain of ⅝ over the noon level, while United States Steel crossed 60 for an advance of ⅝. Canadian Pacific was under some pressure and shaded fractionally. St. Paul, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific made gains.

Stocks closed strong.

Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

Oats, increase 1,516,000 bushels.

EARLY ADVANCE IN COTTON VANISHES

Recent Buyers Liquidate on News of Good Rains and Bearish Weekly Weather Report.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Firm cables, coupled with bullish weather reports, caused an upturn of from 3 to 4 points at the opening of the cotton market to-day. After the call, however, traders sold and in consequence of the orders, most of which came from profit-takings, the list dropped several points.

Sentiment was mixed.

The early strength in the market was attributed to short covering by Wall Street operators. This buying was based upon the failure of the map to show rains. The official weather map showed a few rains in Georgia, the other Atlantics and Alabama and much lower temperatures in North Carolina. This caused rather free offerings from the ring and selling by recent buyers, which was said to be profit-taking. Prices dropped 3 to 5 points from the opening range, with the exception of May, which held steady at the opening quotation.

It is said those who covered short lines during the past few days will put out these short lines again if there are rains in the Eastern belt within the next twenty-four hours. The bears express the belief that the dry May makes it apparent that the crop will have a good start and they are not inclined to put much confidence in the talk of damage of the excessive dry weather.

The weekly weather report issued at noon was construed as bearish, with the exception of Georgia, which shows the lack of moisture. Texas shows the effect of cold nights, but not seriously.

During the afternoon session the market was under heavy selling pressure, based upon the weather report and May dropped 6 points, July 7, October 8, December 9 and January 7 points from the initial level. The buying was light and scattered.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 5 to 7 points from the final quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: May, 11.52; July, 11.67; August, 11.43; October, 11.08; January, 11.07.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Europe apparently was treated to bad crop news which led to a strong Liverpool, with futures 3 to 4 points better than due. Political news is worse, reporting that almost a state of war exists between Greece and Bulgaria, with actual fighting, the Bulgarians attacking Greek posts and wounded arriving at Saloniki.

Correspondence from Liverpool shows bearish views as to the ultimate course of prices, but opinion is in favor of waiting around 6 pence for a while until more is known about the crop development. The strength of July in New York is still pulling the New Orleans market up, but lack of confidence is shown by restricted support. Current damage reports are regarded as accessory to professional attempts at the short interest and faith in the established record of the benefits of a dry May still predominates.

The greater part of Alabama has had enough rainfall to start the replant, and official records show that sufficient showers fell over a considerable territory of Georgia. The Savannah district shows seven stations with an average of half-inch over night.

The contract market is dull but steady around 11.18 for October.

New Enterprises in South Listed

Arkansas & Memphis Railway Bridge & Terminal Co., awarded contract at about $125,000 for grading proposed bridge across Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.; company's plans include construction of freight terminals, wagon tracks, warehouses, etc., to cost about $1,000,000; will also construct two subways to cost about $100,000 each.

New Orleans Railway & Light Co., New Orleans, La., contemplates construction of gas-holder costing $350,000, and to have capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet.

Forest Hill Cemetery Co., Birmingham, Ala., plans to expend $125,000 for improvements to Woodlawn Cemetery Company's property which it has acquired with additional land; plans to construct dam to form miniature lakes, arrange fountains, drives, flower beds, etc., to cost $50,000, and build stone mausoleum to cost $75,000.

Locke Cotton Mills, Concord, N. C., increased preferred stock from $200,000 to $500,000.

Hollingsworth Candy, Co., Augusta, Ga., will expend $20,000 to erect factory and store building for the manufacture and sale of candy.

Composite Brick Co., Jacksonville, Fla., will after building at cost of $2,000 and install equipment for the manufacture of about 40,000 common and face bricks daily.

Calhoun Hosiery Co., Penrose, N. C., was incorporated with capital stock of $25,000 to manufacture hosiery.

Oglethorpe Oil & Fertilizer Co., Athens, Ga., was incorporated with capital stock of $25,000 to establish cotton seed oil mill.

Auto Racer Loses Elopement Chase

RACINE, WIS., May 13.—Joe Jorgesberger, automobile racer, lost the most important road race of his career to-day. Jorgesberger, Dan Cupid and Miss Amanda Olles comprised one team. Angry father, the long-distance telephone and the police of Waukegan, Ill., were the other.

In front of the home of a wealthy foundryman, Jorgesberger stopped his racing car shortly before dawn. A girl, with a suitcase, ran to the racing car and jumped in. Jorgesberger and his 17-year-old heiress bride-to-be started for Waukegan.

A few minutes later a car puffed out of the Olles garage. Miss Olles' father was at the wheel. He overtook the elopers as they reached Waukegan and were halted by the police.

'Boy,' 72, on Visit to His 'Dad,' 103, Jailed

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., May 13.—James M. Goldsberry, 72 years old, arrived in Leavenworth to visit his father, Herman Goldsberry, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who is 103 years old. The son, however, began drinking and was arrested. When arraigned before Judge Stewart Brewster in police court he told his age and explained the reason for being here.

Goldsberry unhesitatingly admitted that his grandfather was dead, but that he lived to be 100 years old. Goldsberry was discharged.

Burns Assured of Dynamiting Reward

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—The $10,000 reward offered by the State two years ago for apprehension of the persons responsible for the dynamiting of The Times building in Los Angeles is about to be paid. A bill appropriating that amount to satisfy the claim of Detective William J. Burns passed the Assembly 42 to 14, and was sent to the Governor, having already passed the Senate.

San Francisco members all voted against the bill.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Practical Points in Care of Poultry

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

About two weeks before weaning time, put the old hen and her brood in a good roomy brood coop, large enough to accommodate the youngsters until cold weather without crowding. It is so easy to make the change while the hens are with their chicks and so difficult after they are weaned.

If you are trying to raise a lot of young chicks and your time is limited so that you are inclined to throw your youngsters a lot of feed at most any time, having no fixed time or regular amount of feed, better adopt the hopper plan. Keep the hopper full of good mixed grain and another with good beef scraps and a third with grit and oyster shell. A large self-feeding water fountain to be filled once a day. These conveniences, with a good clean roosting coop, and chicks will do better and grow faster than they will as cared for by many hurried people.

The poultry house, either for young chicks or grown fowls, should be so arranged as to allow thorough airing and sunshine. Nothing is so conducive to health as sunshine and fresh air, and nothing will cause more troublesome diseases than a dark and damp house with the air and sunshine kept out. Stick a pin here and prevent wholesale trouble.

It is a good plan to protect your young and growing broods from rats and vermin of all kinds by the dexterous use of a little one-inch mesh poultry wire. It is a much more economical way than to wait until you have one or two broods all broken up by these night raiders, and then go to work to prevent it. Better make the first move yourself than to wait for the rats.

Look out for lice and mites these warm days. Do not let them get the upper hand of you. Keep the house clean, especially the roost poles, and at the points at which they rest upon the support. These are the breeding places. A quart-sized oil can with a small spout, filled with kerosene, can be used to drown them out effectually, running it right along over the roost pole, so that it becomes thoroughly saturated. To rid the fowls of what they have upon their bodies, use a good ready-prepared lice powder of some reliable make and dust the feathers thoroughly of each specimen. Night is a good time to attend to this part of the business.

A good chick feed for small and growing chicks may be made as follows, although it is usually cheaper to buy it ready-mixed: Fine cracked corn, 50 pounds; cracked wheat, 20 pounds; cut hulled oats, 20 pounds; cracked kaffir corn, 7 pounds; broken rice, 5 pounds; millet, 5 pounds; whole flax seed, 1-2 pound. Mix thoroughly and feed dry.

Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me where I can buy some Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks? I have been raising them for a number of years, and now I want to get some new blood. I may buy either the eggs or some cockerels to mate with what I have on hand. I have never seen them advertised anywhere, but thought you would know all about them.

I will certainly appreciate some information about them.

Seneca, S. C. R. B. JACKSON.

Answer.—There is no such breed as the Rose Comb Barred Rock. You are either breeding the old American Dominique, which is colored almost the same as the Barred Rock, but has a rose comb, or you have Wyandotte blood mixed in with Plymouth Rock, and by selecting the Rock color with the rose comb you have what you thought was a Rose Comb Rock.

The American Dominique is a much older breed than the Plymouth Rock, but has never been very popular or extensively bred. It is a good one, nevertheless. It is, however, about two pounds lighter in weight than the Rock and for that reason has not taken the place as a general purpose fowl. If you are really anxious to have a rose comb barred fowl, we would advise you to get the pure Dominique and breed it in its purity, unless that is what you have already. We could not tell without seeing what you have.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Druid Hills Parcel Brings $100 a Foot

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun Buys and Will Build—Peachtree Road Residence—Other Notes.

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun purchased to-day from Druid Hills a large lot on Ponce DeLeon Avenue for $21,400, and will build a handsome home on it. Forrest Adair, Jr., of the Forrest & George Adair agency, handled the transaction. The front foot rate was over $100.

This property is east of S. H. Venable's palatial stone house at the northeast corner of Oaddale Road and Ponce DeLeon Avenue and is known as the old Arkwright place. Mr. Arkwright picked it some time ago to build, but went to another location and swapped his old lot to Druid Hills for the new one. The dimensions of Dr. Calhoun's lot are 214x450 feet. Dr. Calhoun now resides on the north side of West Fifth Street, between the Peachtrees. He expects to keep his present home.

G. Arthur Howell will also soon be a resident of Druid Hills, having started recently a home on Fairview Road to cost $7,500.

J. Clark McMichael has decided to go out Peachtree Road. He broke ground yesterday for his $15,000 two-story residence on the west side of Peachtree just south of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate, half a mile south of Buckhead.

Deeds Gone to Record.

Dr. W. J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National Bank, has sold as executor of the L. F. Blalock estate a triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Whitehall and Humphries Streets to Alex Reeves for $13,750, $3,000 of which was cash. The dimensions are 121 by 200 by 170 feet.

Deeds have also gone to record in the transfer of 385 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to James Morgan from Mrs. Cecelia B. Wallace for a consideration not named. Mrs. Wallace bought this property April 15 from W. J. Brown, Sr., who had acquired it August 3, 1912, from W. J. Brown, Jr., and Milton Strauss for $9,000.

J. J. West has sold to Mrs. Jessie L. Thrash a 50 by 190-foot lot on East Tenth Street, 50 feet east of Bedford Place, for $6,750.

Confirms Brookhaven Sale.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton Superior Court, has confirmed the sale made last Tuesday of the Brookhaven Club to the Brookhaven Estates at $90,000.

This was one of the details which had to be cleared up before a transfer could be made to the Capital City Club, and the said transfer is expected to be made in a few days. The terms of the sale, it is said, have already been agreed on. Possession can be had within two weeks, and it is expected that the Capital City Club will make substantial improvements.

Hotel Planned for Decatur.

Decatur will soon have a hotel costing $100,000, if plans of the Decatur Board of Trade do not go awry. Robert W. Ramspeck, secretary of the board, is in correspondence with Eastern capitalists who have become interested in the project, and a definite announcement is expected to be made in the course of a few weeks.

Who Will Head Realty Board?

There is considerable gossip in Atlanta realty circles as to who will head the Atlanta Real Estate Board this year. The election will be held in July, following the annual outing Saturday, June 14. Among names suggested are those of Harris G White, now vice president; W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and Carlos Lynes, of the Thomson & Lynes Agency. Other names will probably find their way into the list of nominations. Ralph O. Cochran was the first president of the organization, and he served two terms. Then came Charles P. Glover, the incumbent. A ruling now in effect makes it impossible to stand for re-election, and this will bring out new candidates.

Saturday, June 14, is the date fixed for the annual outing of the real estate men. The outing will be in the nature of a barbecue, and the place will be Cold Springs, where "Jack" Slaton's barbecues are usually held. Mr. Glover and M. C. Kiser, chairman of the entertainment committee, are busy arranging the details of the barbecue, and they expect a record crowd to attend.

R. D. Dorsey's New Home.

R. D. Dorsey, former Buckhead grocer and now connected with the W. E. Treadwell Real Estate Agency, is building a handsome home on the east side of the Ivey Road, 600 feet north of Piedmont Road. This place is north of the recently completed home of W. J. Stoddard. The house will have a stone front, the stone having been taken from Mr. Dorsey's back yard. Mr. Dorsey recently exchanged his former home on Piedmont Road, near Roswell Road, for several lots on Fifteenth Street.

COUNTRY PLACE

TEN ACRES, 6-room cottage, chicken runs for 1,000 hens, spring branch of pure water; house wired for electricity, has bath and sewerage; fine growing crop of oats, corn and sweet potatoes; land in good state of cultivation, only 900 feet from Marietta car line, in one of the best neighborhoods in Georgia. Will sell on terms or exchange for renting property; has quantity of young fruit trees, grape vines and fig trees.

184 SOUTH AVENUE, between Grant Street and Cherokee Avenue, near churches, school and car line; will sell for $2,200; $1,000 cash, balance payable in 2 1-2 years, 5 per cent. This is a bargain house; has 5 rooms.

300 WEST FOURTEENTH, for $1,050 cash. This is second door east of Clarke Street. Property worth $1,350; owner must have money.

Fourteenth Street Residence For Sale or Exchange---$3,000 to $5,000 Sure Profit

ON FOURTEENTH STREET, WEST, just a few doors from Peachtree, we own a strictly modern, up to date and practically new residence of nine rooms. This place also has a cement driveway, a garage, and the lot is 50 by 180 to an alley, and is on the south side of the street. The house itself is attractive, has all conveniences. The street, as everyone knows, is one of the most select North Side residence streets. We will sell this property $2,000 under value. On this basis, $6,000 cash will be required, balance of $6,500 will be divided into seven or eight annual payments if desired. $3,000 to $5,000 profit here sure in next three years. Several parties have applied for lease at $75 per month. This means about 7 per cent net on the investment.

Or we will exchange the property for well located income city property; accept or pay difference.

OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY
Requires Forty-Eight Battleships by 1915 to Hold Its Place of Safety.

England carries an unsolved and serious difference with our country over the free passage of American coastwise vessels through our own Panama Canal.

It is impossible to see how our country, in dignity and honor, can meet England's demands along this line.

Japan has sprung a serious issue with our country over the right of California to protect the interests of race and the safety of the citizen by a law regulating the alien and in time hostile ownership of her lands.

Neither England nor Japan would be willing all alone to precipitate a conflict with the United States over the impossible issues they have raised. But with England upon the eastern and Japan upon the western coast of our country in simultaneous demand, and in co-operative menace, the tension becomes both probable and startling.

In the Far East the myriads of Russia and the millions of Austria and Germany front each other behind the gathering antagonism of Pan-Slavism and Germanism.

Western Europe has just emerged from one of the fiercest and bloodiest wars of history in the Turko-Balkan struggle.

The war spirit is in the spirit and blood of nations on both sides the sea.

And yet the American Congress, with an apathy that is blind and with a parsimony that is worse than narrow, refuses to equip the American Navy with strength and power to keep the peace in these tremendous times. Every officer and soldier of the American Navy demands two battleships every year. The American Senate demands two battleships every year.

The General Navy Board, without a dissenting voice, makes public its declaration that not one of our thirty-three battleships is ready for war if war should be declared. Germany could put to sea forty-one battleships now. France is ready to-morrow with thirty-eight battleships, and Japan holds in instant readiness thirty-six battleships, while England's mighty navy overshadows them all.

For a hundred years no nation has initiated war with England—because of England's awe-compelling navy.

THAT ENGLISH NAVY IS THE MIGHTIEST PEACE-MAKER AND PEACE-KEEPER THAT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

One hundred years ago it sailed up the Chesapeake and Potomac and burned our capital at Washington. To-day it is great enough to batter our battleships on all the seas and ride once more in destroying insolence to reduce Washington to ashes.

The Georgian is as ardent an advocate of disarmament and universal peace as any newspaper published in America.

But The Georgian has held, and holds to-day, that as long as other nations build big navies we must build a big navy to keep ourselves sufficiently formidable to discourage attack and to protect ourselves if we are assailed. We do not believe in having a large navy one moment longer than a large navy is necessary—any more than we believe in carrying a gun unless a gun is necessary to protect our lives. This newspaper would have welcomed the acceptance of Winston Churchill's proposition for England and Germany to lead the movement for all nations to stop building battlehsips for a single year of peaceful experiment.

But the proposition went unheeded. England and Germany and Japan are building battleships, and the United States must build battleships, too.

The naval experts that we select and pay to tell us what our country needs tell us explicity that to hold its place of safety OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY REQUIRES TO HAVE FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS IN 1915.

THEREFORE, THIS NEWSPAPER, WHICH IS ABOVE ALL THINGS AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, UNHESITATINGLY PLANTS ITSELF IN WHOLE HEARTED AND PERSISTENT ADVOCACY OF FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS BY 1915.

CHEER UP
By M. E. MURRAY.

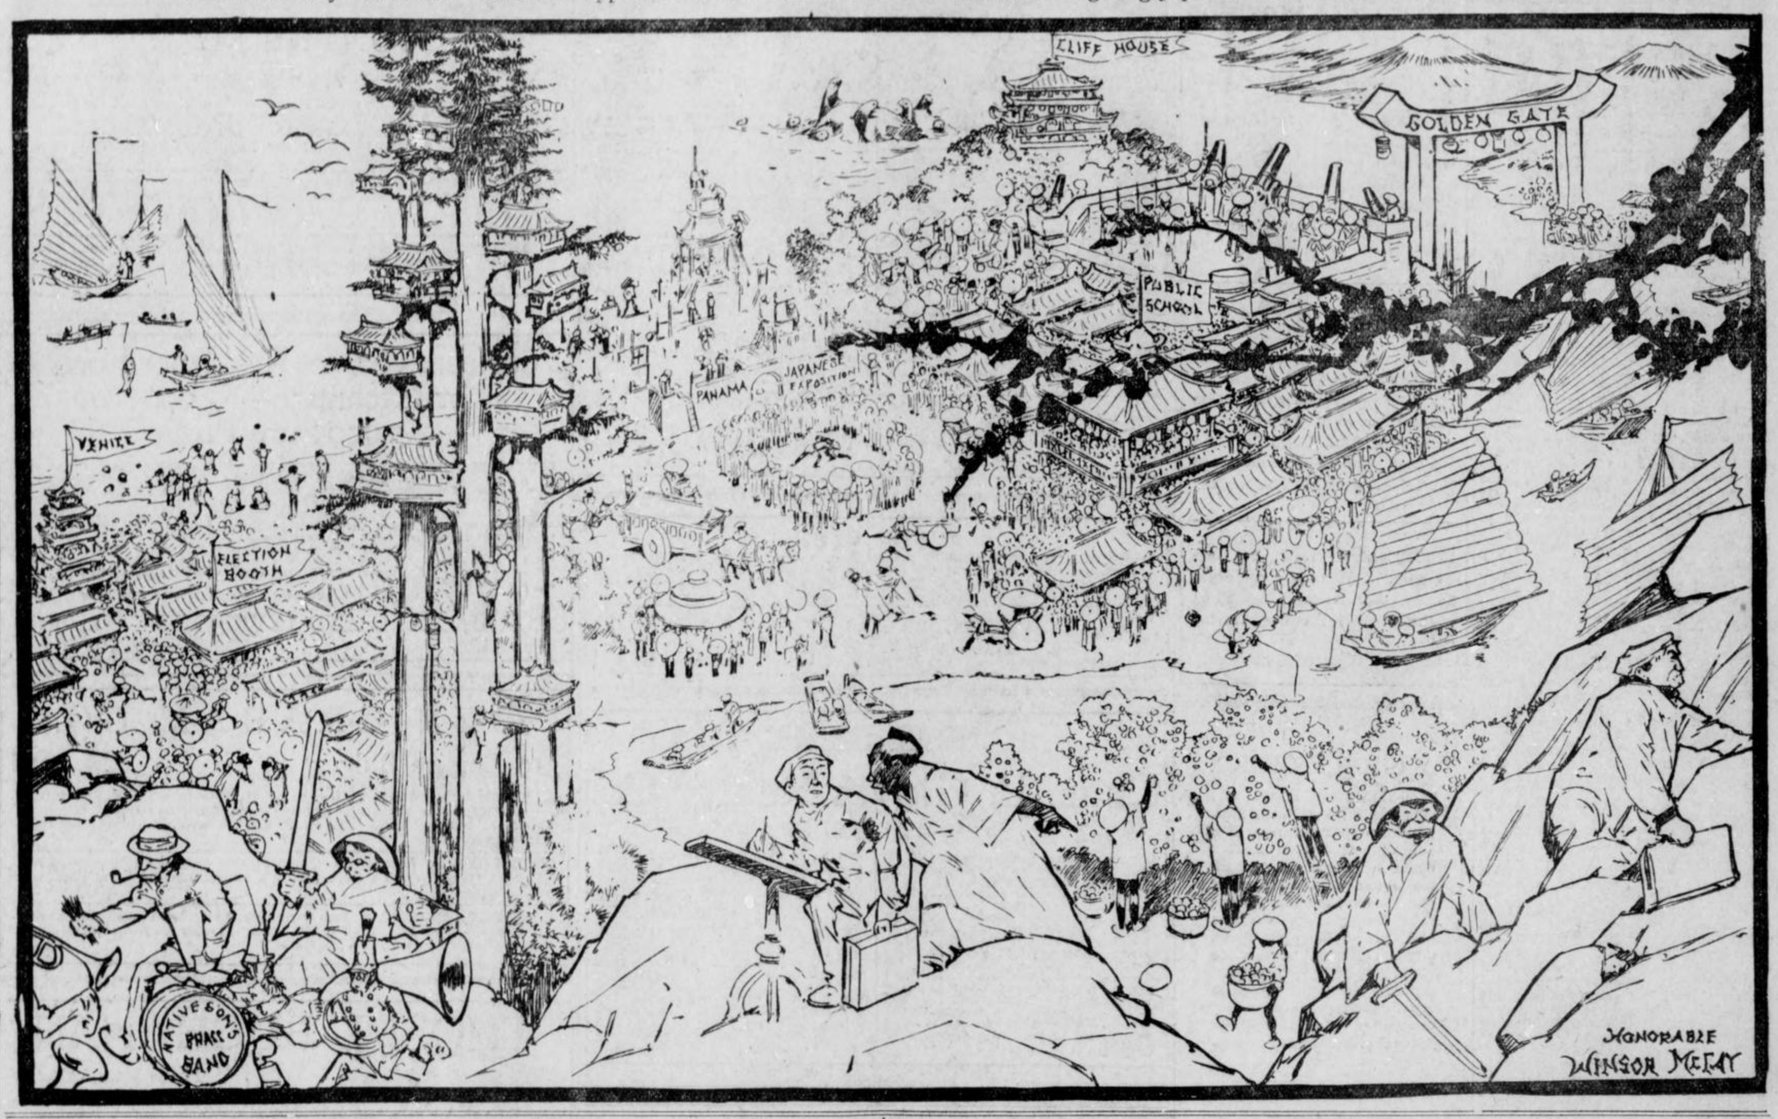
LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

How Do You Think This Would Look?

This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.



Rev. John E. White Writes on "Was Pierpont Morgan a Christian?"

He Was as Good a Christian, He Says, as His Circumstances Permitted, But His Training and Environment Were Against Him.

Written for The Georgian
By REV. JOHN E. WHITE.
Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE editor of an influential religious paper in Missouri has raised the question about the Christianity of J. Pierpont Morgan.

It may be regarded a venture upon ground of doubtful delicacy to question publicly the religious status of one recently deceased, and particularly to suggest a doubt about the Christianity of a man who made the confession of his personal Christian faith the most conspicuous feature of his last will and testament.

But this editor deals quite fairly and gently with Mr. Morgan and advances no severe judgment against the great financier. He only indicates the perplexity of reconciling the difficulties and contrasts of what Mr. Morgan believed and his life and career implied.

He simply asks whether the Morgan of absolutely orthodox creed, emphatic of humble dependence and devotion and attachment to the Saviorhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ can be harmonized with the character and career of the Morgan who was a man of the world known among men as "cold, severe, austere, indomitable, Ceaserish" and whose life was absorbed in financial ambitions, in personal self-assertion and in laying up treasures on earth for himself and those who helped him in his plans.

It is easier to criticise this editor for raising such a question on the ground of bad taste, than to deny the point of his question on the ground of Christianity itself.

The Rich Man's Religion.

The absolute standard of Christianity is in its founder. The record of whose life and teachings is in the New Testament. He incarnated, defined and illustrated the ideal Christian character.

In the New Testament Christianity took up the case of the rich man and dealt with it in a way to warn and alarm those who had great possessions. That Christianity, according to its founder and its first followers raised solemn questions in the path of every rich man and dealt with him faithfully for the sake of his soul, is a matter of open knowledge.

But the state of mind in modern Christianity is far from encouraging explicit and personal applications of these early principles to the rich Christians of to-day. Orthodox Christianity ordinarily does not take itself quite seriously on this subject, and to apply the message of Jesus to modern men of wealth consistently would risk a serious resentment.

Imagine a great monarch of Mammon in Jerusalem "who gave no public impression of being deeply in love with its fellows and showed no positive evidence of being sorely troubled over the awful hurt of the world, nor sympathized expressly with the stress and strain and struggle of the poor, nor offered his powerful hand directly to the oppressed and the distressed; who accumulated a private fortune twenty times as great as Croesus over in Rome, and who dying, left the bulk of it not for education, not for sending the gospel of the Atonement to the uttermost parts of the earth, not for printing Bibles, not for feeding, clothing and housing the poor; but to his son to perpetuate the great house of Mammon and its power in the world of finance and make to itself other millions."

One cannot help wondering how Jesus Christ would have fitted that situation into his scheme of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how he would have dealt with one of his disciples who insisted on playing that ambitious role. We know at least that the rich men of Jerusalem were not entirely comfortable about the Sermon on the Mount. Nicodemus was a magnate of money at that time.

Perhaps Nicodemus is the luminous exposition of our question, though Mr. Morgan was a more pronounced champion of Christ than ever Nicodemus dared to be, and his creed was as correct as Peter's, and his personal conduct as irreproachable as the rich young ruler's, who had kept the commandments from his youth up.

Mr. Morgan as a Symbol.

There is nothing new or strange in Mr. Morgan's relation to Christianity. He symbolizes to extraordinary advantage the type of the modern millionaire Christian. In his creed and private piety he was in possession of all the Christianity his circumstances would permit.

So far his example is a distinguished one and stands as a rebuke to many with far less fortune who profess Christianity with far less to show for it.

But the issue relating to Mr. Morgan personally in fairness deserves this conclusion: He was as good a Christian as his training and environment made possible.

The remarkable words of personal confession in his will may be indeed his confession rather than his creed. When we read them we may well wonder if he had not realized deeply the pathetic imperfection of a multimillionaire's Christianity.

He threw himself wholly upon the grace of God. He was no longer rich, but poor, no longer great, but small, no longer masterful, but humble.

That confession was the next best thing for a multimillionaire, who desired to inherit Eternal Life, could do for his fellow men.

Winifred Black Writes on "In Love With Love and Not With Anybody"

Being a Little Talk With a Girl Who Thinks That There Is No Joy in Life Because a Certain Young Man Has Ceased to Care For Her.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NOW, my dear girl, why don't you face the truth, the disagreeable, embarrassing truth; look it fairly in the face, and be done with it once and for all?

The man does not care for you. Put all idea that there may be some "misunderstanding," etc., out of your puzzled little head. A man who loves a woman doesn't let any misunderstanding come between him and the girl he loves.

He's tired of you and wants to get rid of you. Why do you pursue him? He is free, white and more than twenty-one. He has a right to love whom he pleases.

He acted as if he loved you? Well, if he did he certainly does not love you now, and what are you going to do about it?

Don't Run After Him!

Write to him again; go and see him? Never, never, never again. You are miserable without him you say. Well, if you run after him you will be miserable also and lose your own self-respect in the bargain.

Don't lose that, whatever happens. Don't do anything that will make the girl you see in the glass ashamed to look you straight in the eyes.

Your heart is broken? No it isn't. It isn't even cracked. Just twenty, poor thing, and "nothing to live for!" Why, it's a joke, a pitiful little joke, but a joke nevertheless. In a year from now you'll laugh at it yourself.

Twenty and a broken heart! Wait till you're forty and see what a tough, ready-to-wear heart you really have, and be glad of it.

This man you are sighing for, ten to one you'd be perfectly miserable with if you did get him. Almost any woman of thirty and past can tell you strange tales of the queer specimens she loved, or thought she loved, when she was twenty.

I remember a dark-browed youth with mournful eyes. I thought him a regular heart-breaker. I used to be afraid to look at him for fear he'd read my desperate secret in my embarrassed glance.

When I heard the dark-browed youth had asked my dearest friend to marry him I thought I'd never live through it, but I did, and danced at the marriage supper, too, and rather gayly at that.

I met the dark-browed youth just the other day. He looked to me rather more than commonplace, and how I had ever admired those hollow eyes and that sallow, stupid face I can't imagine.

You'll Get Over It.

His wife was with him and she did not seem seraphically happy. They say she is a bit of a nagger. I believe I'd have been more than a bit of a nagger if I had been tied up for life to that melancholy failure of a man. So much for dark eyebrows and mournful eyes.

No, my dear, you are not in love with this poor man that you want to follow and write to and call up on the 'phone. You aren't in love with him at all. You are in love with love, that's all. You'll get over it and smile to think it over some sane, comfortable day.

You're just twenty, little girl; only twenty. What on earth do you know, even about yourself? Get acquainted, get acquainted with that little person you see every day in the mirror. How do you know what she may turn out to be?

What! Throw her at some runaway man's head; let her make a goose of herself over some one who can't appreciate her? Don't you do it, little girl. Don't even think of doing it.

And, whisper, don't even hint your secret to a soul. Keep it to yourself, whatever you do, and have it to think of when the moon shines and there's soft music playing somewhere. Hug your foolish story to your breast and be nice and miserable for a while. It will do you good.

She Cried, Too.

Your mother! Oh, you haven't hinted this to her? Why not?

She wouldn't understand? What makes you think that? She's probably the one person on earth who would understand perfectly.

Would it astonish you to learn that when your mother was twenty, before she met your father, she had her romance? Get her to tell you about it to-night when you two are alone and the house is still. You'll be surprised to find that she's really a human being, this mother of yours.

Oh yes, she cried too, and beat her breast and wished to die, and the man didn't look at all like the one she married, either.

Come, come, you are not the only human being who ever was "hopelessly in love" at twenty. Millions of others have lived through it, like yourself. It isn't so important to be happy—it is important to be sensible. Make up your mind to that and some day you'll be astonished to find that you can't remember whether that heart-breaking wave of his hair was on the right or the left side of the part.

Pouf, it's over, the heart-ache and the misery and the folly. All over, and you are all the better for having lived through it.

DETECTIVES AT WORK ON ENTIRELY DIFFERENT LINES

SHRINEMEET CONCEDED TO ATLANTA BOOSTERS

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 13.—Forrest Adair filed with the Imperial Council to-day official invitations from Atlanta for next year's session from Governor Brown, Governor-elect Slaton, Mayor Woodward, the Capital City, Transportation, University and Piedmont Driving Clubs and many other social and business organizations and persons in Atlanta.

There seems to be nothing left that might have been done to insure Atlanta's winning the big prize of the session in Dallas. About the hotels and streets it generally is conceded that Atlanta will win.

The parade of the patrols to-day, escorting the Imperial Council to its opening session, was beautiful and served to jam the streets with spectators almost to suffocation. There were about 100 patrols in line, averaging 50 men each; 20 brass bands, and a civic procession of something like 150 filled automobiles. Every patrol was uniformed differently and gorgeously.

Great Parade for To-night.

That parade, bigger and better, for already it is predicted that the attendance in Atlanta next year is to be much heavier than it is here, will look mighty attractive along Whitehall and Peachtree next year. The big parade of the session takes place to-night, when it is expected that about 15,000 Shriners will march in line under the glitter of 100,000 electric lights.

No patrol in to-day's parade attracted more applause and attention than the Yaarab patrol, under Captain J. O. Seamans and Lieutenants Cuts Vandiver and Ashford.

Atlanta's fight was given a big boost to-day when Colonel Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, arrived and plunged headlong into the contest to put Atlanta over. He is one of the best known Shriners in America, and has been of vast help to the Atlanta workers.

Fred Houser, of Atlanta, has the publicity end of the Atlanta campaign in hand and has handled it splendidly. The Dallas papers are full of Atlanta and its enterprise to-day. They all pick the Gate City for a winner in to-morrow's balloting.

Irwin Named Potentate.

At the Texas session, the only thing done of interest to the public was the election of William W. Irwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., to be imperial potentate next year. He will preside in Atlanta and he told me to-day that the fact was particularly gratifying to him.

He has been outspoken in his support of Atlanta for the honor of entertaining the Shrine in 1914. He and Forrest Adair are great cronies, and have been at many sessions of the Imperial Council. The other Imperial Council members were advanced in rotation, as is customary in the order.

There was a mighty careful checking up of names and counting of noses along somewhere after midnight last night. The Yaarab workers did not quit talking Atlanta until the rest of creation out here had gone to bed. Along about daylight Forrest Adair figured that Atlanta had it on Memphis by about two to one. Maybe it is more than that, but two to one looks good enough anyway.

Memphis is putting up the gamest sort of fight. The Tennessee city has a big bunch of rooters here and the town has been flooded with literature. However, Atlanta has been right there with the literature, and in the matter of pure unadulterated

Gets Proposal by Phone at Breakfast And Weds by 9 A. M.

To arise heartfree, to receive a proposal before breakfast over the telephone and to be married by 9 o'clock—that's what happened to Miss Emma Wofford, 26 Alaska Avenue, Copenhill, Tuesday morning.

Dr. Smith and his bride long had been friends, but the subject of matrimony had never come up. When the physician came to Atlanta Monday on a business trip he called Miss Wofford over the telephone and after a few minutes' conversation, asked her if she would marry him.

Mrs. Smith formerly was an employee in the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company's Atlanta office.

Bandit Pair Fails in Attempt to Hold Up Busch's Private Car

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 13.—Two armed men swung onto the railing of the observation end of the private car of Adolphus Busch, wealthy brewer of St. Louis, early to-day and attempted to board the car. They were thrown off by the speed of the train, which did not slow down as much as they expected for a railway crossing.

The millionaire brewer and his physician were asleep in the car. The attempted robbery was reported here.

The men attempted to board the train a few feet from the spot from where a Kansas City Southern train was held up a few days ago and Jesse J. Short, a millionaire mine owner, of Joplin, Mo., was seriously wounded.

"Mutt" Sues "Jeff" for $1,000 Damages

SHEBOYGAN, WIS., May 13.—A "Mutt and Jeff" case was on trial in the Circuit Court to-day, "Mutt" suing "Jeff" for $1,000 damages for whipping him, breaking three ribs, smashing his false teeth and causing other damage.

"Mutt," otherwise Fred Daetz, and "Jeff," better known as John Goelzer, were working in a gravel pit near Plymouth. Discussion over a keg of beer led to a row and it appears that Goelzer, who is much the smaller of the two men, put Daetz out of the game.

Daetz is six feet two inches tall, weighs 195 pounds. Goelzer is five feet, four inches in height, weighs 115 pounds.

Burleson Confronted by $600,000 Deficit

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Postmaster General Burleson is confronted with an actual deficit in postal funds that will cause serious curtailment of the postal service unless Congress passes an appropriation of $600,000 by May 15.

The House passed an appropriation bill carrying $600,000 to supply the impending deficit. The Senate must quickly act on the measure if it is to become law by May 15. The deficit has been brought about by unforeseen consequences resulting from the eight-hour law for postal employees, passed at the last session of Congress, and the parcel post.

Flies Over Alps, and Lives to Tell Story

Special Cable to The American.

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, May 13. Aviator Rider, using a monoplane, flew over the Alps to-day. It took two hours to fly 50 miles. This was the second successful flight made over the Alps.

Rider left Berne in a high wind and landed at Sion. He attained a height of 10,560 feet, and was so cold when he descended he had to be lifted from his machine.

Chavez, a Peruvian aviator, the first to fly over the Alps, fell at the conclusion of his flight and succumbed to his injuries.

ASSEMBLIES FACE SPLIT ON SOCIAL SERVICE

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

Will the Southern Presbyterian Assembly organically unite with one Presbyterian denomination and cut off fraternal relationships with all other protestants?

This is the question which its commissioners probably will be compelled to answer while the Assmebly is in session in Atlanta.

There is little doubt that the Southern Assembly will combine with the United Presbyterian Church, but it is possible that it will sever its connection with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The Federal Council includes practically the combined Protestant forces of the United States, representing 30 different denominations which have a communicant membership of 16,000,000. One of the chief reasons given by those who favor the separation is their objection to the social service platform adopted by the Federal Council.

Platform of Council.

Here is the platform of the Council to which exception has been taken:

The Church must stand:

1. For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

2. For the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage and proper housing.

3. For the fullest possible development for every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.

4. For the abolition of child labor.

5. For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

6. For the abatement and prevention of poverty.

7. For the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.

8. For the conservation of health.

9. For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases and mortality.

For Aiding Workers.

10. For the right of all men to the opportunity of self-maintenance, for safeguarding this right against encroachment of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment.

11. For suitable provision for the old age of the workers, and for those incapacitated by injury.

12. For the right of employees and employers alike to organize for adequate means of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

13. For a release from employment one day in seven.

14. For the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and for that degree of leisure for all, which is a condition of the highest human life.

15. For a living wage as a minimum in every industry, and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

16. For a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

This platform has in substance been

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss Alien Law; Johnson Will Sign

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Japanese situation was discussed for the greater part of two hours at the meeting of the President with his Cabinet, but at the conclusion of the conference absolute silence was maintained regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—A reply by Governor Johnson to the message of Secretary of State Bryan, advising against hasty action in the California anti-alien law legislation was expected to-day. The Governor announced that he would not discuss the subject until he had replied to Secretary Bryan, which likely would be to-day.

He intimated that he would sign the Webb anti-alien land bill, but that he would delay action out of respect to President Wilson's wishes.

In his farewell message to the Legislature Governor Johnson said:

"I would like to have mentioned the land bill with the others that I consider worthy accomplishments in legislation this season, but I refrained from so doing because it would not be courteous to say anything in advance of my reply to Mr. Bryan's telegram."

PHOENIX, ARIZ., May 13.—A slight amendment by the Senate to the House anti-alien land bill makes it necessary for the measure to be passed on by a conference between the two houses before it is sent to the Governor. It was predicted the conference would agree on the bill this afternoon. The Governor's attitude is not known, although his closest friends say he will sign it.

Four hundred Japanese residents of the State will appeal to the Governor to veto the bill.

Preacher Indicted On Charge of Fraud

The Rev. Father George, alias Thomas Kirby, alias Brother James, alias the Rev. Brother James Brady, was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury Tuesday on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

It is alleged that Kirby solicited and got funds from G. P. Docker, of Atlanta, by a letter dated at Griffin, Ga., March 17, representing that he was an agent of St. Leo College, Florida, and that the funds were to be used in the erection of a home for students.

Kirby was arrested in South Carolina.

HEARD MOB HANGS AND SHOOTS NEGRO

Slayer of Farmer Is Taken From Jail and Lynched by One Hundred Men.

FRANKLIN, GA., May 13.—Sam Owensby, a negro, who yesterday killed Brooks Lane at the latter's farm, three miles from here, was lynched last night. He was taken from the Heard County jail by a mob of about 100 men, carried to the river bank nearby and hanged to a tree. Then his body was riddled with bullets.

Sheriff Lee Taylor had planned to take the negro either to Newnan or Atlanta for safe keeping, but when this plan became known he was told that the negro would be killed if an effort were made to remove him from the jail.

By 9 o'clock the crowd that had gathered in town during the afternoon had dispersed and the streets were deserted. Sheriff Taylor and two deputies remained on guard at the jail. An hour later the mob quietly slipped back to town, overpowered the Sheriff and deputies and got the prisoner. To-day the town is quiet.

Borden Heiress in West With Mother

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Ramona Borden, daughter of Gail Borden, millionaire New York milkman, who startled her family and friends a few weeks ago by disappearing from an Eastern sanitarium, to-day arrived in Los Angeles with her mother.

The girl ran away because she wanted to live in the country instead of hotels and sanitariums.

Wiggles Barred at Police Picnic Dance

The recent dances that have met with considerable public disapproval will not be permitted at the outling.

FIRST WOMAN IS INDICTED AS SLAYER IN MUSCOGEE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—The May term Grand Jury of Muscogee Superior Court has indicted Mrs. Jennie Mae Radcliff and Bill Creen, both white, on murder charges.

Mrs. Radcliff, the first white woman ever indicted in Muscogee County for murder, is charged with the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff, a merchant, April 15. Creen is indicted for killing Otis D. Kitchens, an insurance agent.

H. M. Flagler Dying; Plans for Funeral Already Under Way

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Word was received here this afternoon from West Palm Beach that Henry M. Flagler is rapidly growing weaker and is now unable to take nourishment. Arrangements for his funeral are being made in St. Augustine. He is not expected to live through the day.

Dr. Alfred S. Badger, pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, in St. Augustine, Mr. Flagler's pastor, now is in Atlanta to attend the Presbyterian Assembly.

Movie Men, Perhaps Edison, to Visit Here

Charles M. Seay, general manager of the Thomas A. Edison Company, New York, and possibly the electrical wizard himself, will arrive in Atlanta Thursday with a party of eight for a short visit, according to a dispatch received Tuesday by Benjamin S Barker, commercial agent of the Southern Railway.

The party will stop at the Georgian Terrace Hotel and make scenic views of the city for the Edison Company.

The telegram intimates that Mr. Edison is desirous of coming if he can arrange business matters in New York.

NEW THEORY IS OFFERED IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Detectives in the Phagan mystery are not centering all their efforts upon Frank and Lee. New theories have been advanced, new clews examined and every possible theory is being investigated.

It was because of these rumors on the streets to-day that a report was spread that an entirely new lead was being followed by Solicitor Dorsey that might eliminate both Frank and Lee.

"There are no developments so far," he said, "which would tend to swerve the prosecution from its present course. The cases of the two men held will be placed before the Grand Jury as soon as the evidence against them can be properly shaped, unless other developments justify a change."

New Theory Investigated.

The new theory alluded to has been submitted by a private detective employed by the Solicitor's office. The man, whose identity has not been revealed, has been working along lines entirely at variance to those pursued by the prosecutor. Mr. Dorsey stated that while as yet no evidence had been produced to substantiate the proposed solution, that his investigators have taken the matter up and will go to the bottom of it. Every available means will be used to prove or disprove the detective's theory.

An important affidavit was added Tuesday to the great mass of evidence already collected by Solicitor Dorsey.

Another affidavit considered of importance was that made by Miss Maggit Wyatt, 44 Pickett Street, who formerly was employed at the pencil factory.

Miss Willie M. Ross, 259 Crew Street, who is said to have heard screams in the pencil factory at 4:30 on the afternoon of the tragedy, appeared at Mr. Dorsey's office in the morning and made an exhaustive statement which she signed.

Dorsey Will Welcome Burns.

When asked later what she knew of the case, Miss Ross declared she had absolutely no knowledge of it.

Solicitor Dorsey, when asked about the report that Detective Burns was coming to Atlanta to take charge of the investigation, declared that he would welcome Mr. Burns.

Colonel Felder, whose correspondence with the great detective gave rise to the report that he would enter the investigation, stated Tuesday morning that he would know positively by Wednesday whether Burns would comply with his request. Mr. Burns is due to arrive in New York from Europe some time Tuesday.

The Grand Jury probably will hold an extra session this week to "clean up" the routine docket in order that there will be nothing to interfere with the Phagan case when it is presented by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey.

Consider Extra Session.

The Solicitor and his assistant, E. A. Stephens, discussed Monday the advisability of an extra session for one day before Friday, the regular meeting day, and may issue a call to the jurors to assemble Wednesday.

The Solicitor explained, however, that it probably would take the two sessions this week to dispose of the routine, and the Phagan case might not reach the jury until Friday of next week, or an extra session to be called the first part of the week.

Mrs. Rudolph Frank, mother of Leo Frank, was seen for the first time at her home in Brooklyn Monday by the newspaper reporters. She declared her belief in her son's entire innocence. She has been greatly affected by the shadow which is hovering over her son's life, but had said nothing of his plight to her neighbors until Monday, as she had been hoping against hope that he would be liberated by the Coroner's jury.

Mother Thinks He Is Innocent.

"My son is entirely innocent," she is quoted as saying. "But it is a terrible thing that even the suspicion should fall on him. I have every confidence that he will be proved guiltless of the terrible crime.

"He is suspected merely because he was the last one who is known to have seen her on the day she was killed. I know it will be shown that he had no knowledge of who put the girl to death."

Mrs. Frank has not seen her son since nearly three years ago when she and her husband came to Atlanta to attend the marriage of young Frank to the daughter of Emil Selig. It is understood that she is planning to return to Atlanta to be with Frank in the event that he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

She always has been proud of her son and happy at his rapid rise in the business world. Although only 29 years old he has been the superintendent in charge of the National Pencil Company's plant for several years. Before coming to Atlanta about five years ago he was with the National Meter Company, of Brooklyn. He is a Cornell graduate.

Burns Leaves New York.

The arrival of William J. Burns is expected in New York Tuesday afternoon. As announced in The Georgian Monday the great detective has been engaged to work personally upon the Phagan mystery. He is expected to come here at the solicitation of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who is representing the friends and relatives of the slain girl.

Colonel Felder interviewed Raymond Burns, son of the famous detective, in New York, and a cable was at once dispatched to England, where Burns had been looking for J. Wilberforce Martin, the wealthy Memphian whose mysterious disappearance stirred two continents. Burns quickly found that Martin was safe and unharmed and withdrew from the case. The detective will be in Atlanta Thursday on his way to Macon, where he has been invited to speak before the Georgia State Bankers' Association.

Chief of Detectives Lanford just smiles when Solicitor Dorsey's "mysterious sleuth" is mentioned. Mr. Dorsey announced several days ago that he had the best detective in the world on the job.

Who Is "Mysterious Sleuth?"

"The sleuth is either Detective John Starnes or Patrick Campbell," said Chief Lanford. "Both of these men are attached to the local staff and are working under the solicitor."

The solicitor continued to deny that the man was a local detective.

"I intend to withhold his name until the proper time," he said. "He is out of the city at present working on several new phases of the Phagan case. Upon his return I may be able to give out some startling information."

Frank's Life in Tower; Scores Try to See Him.

Of the many prisoners confined in the Tower, Leo M. Frank stands far above them all as the central figure in the public eye while the exhaustive investigation into the death of Mary Phagan continues.

Hundreds of curious persons apply daily at the prison in a futile effort to see the man now being held in the Phagan mystery. The jailers are beset with thousands of questions pertaining to his life during the two weeks that he has spent behind the bars.

Only Frank's attorney, his immediate relatives and a few friends have been permitted to see him. The man on other occasions has refused point blank to be interviewed or questioned. He has maintained an unbroken silence on the accusations made against him by the State.

Cheerful With Friends.

To his friends, however, Frank presents an amazingly bright countenance. Frequently his laughter is heard ringing through the dismal corridors of the Tower. Despite his cheery disposition, however, he has grown pale under his confinement.

Arises at 7 o'clock each morning; shaves with a safety razor brought him by a jailer and dresses for breakfast. Morning meal is brought to him at 7:30 and he partakes of it from a low bench in lieu of a table. Frank's meals are all prepared at his home and sent to the Tower. He is permitted to have any food that he may desire. So far, the prison life has not affected his appetite, which is one of a healthy man.

Reads Papers Carefully.

After breakfast Frank is handed the morning papers, which he peruses carefully, especially with reference to his own case. Despite what the printed pages may contain about him, though, the prisoner has never been known to comment on the newspaper articles.

Frank is a great reader. As the single electric lamp in the corridor does not furnish sufficient light to read by in the cells adjacent, the prisoner has secured a candle and under its flickering flame reads magazines and other periodicals.

Friends of the prisoner begin to arrive about 9 o'clock. He converses with them through the bars. At 2 o'clock he is served with dinner. During the afternoon Frank receives more of his friends and whiles away the idle hours in reading.

Wife Embraces Him.

When his wife called for the first time since his confinement Sunday afternoon, Frank was allowed to receive her in the "consultation room." The meeting between the husband and wife was affecting.

Tearfully Mrs. Frank clasped her arms about her husband's neck and kissed him as they met. Following the visit, which was of an hour's duration, Frank was returned to his cell.

The prisoner is served with supper at 6:30 o'clock and retires at about 11 o'clock. He sleeps on a regulation prison cot.

Mother Thinks Police Are Doing Their Best.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of little 14-year-old Mary Phagan, prostrated with grief for sixteen days following the tragic slaying of her child, took up her household duties Tuesday for the first time, resigned to the calamity that has befallen her home, and relying on the law to avenge the death of her child.

"It was such a beautiful morning," said Mrs. Coleman to a Georgian reporter, "and I have been able to rest now for three nights, so I felt like doing my work again. My house has been in such a turmoil since this dreadful tragedy. I feel I am helpless and have resigned myself to the sad lot that has befallen us. All we can do is wait, and waiting is a hard task.

No Complaint of Police.

"Don't misunderstand me. I am not complaining about what the officers are doing. It is far better to go slow and be sure that we are doing right than to hurry and make a mistake. I believe that the police and the solicitor are doing everything they can to find the guilty man. They ought to do it; such a crime ought to be punished. But I do not want them to make a mistake.

"I heard that feeling was very strong last week, but I am glad that no hasty action was taken. It might have been all wrong, and I think I would have been grieved as much as anybody.

"We have made many inquiries among our friends and acquaintances and have not found one who saw Mary after 12 o'clock Saturday, when she went to the factory to get her pay. So much seems to depend on that point, and if anyone did see her, he certainly ought to tell about it. It does look like if Mary were on the streets Saturday afternoon, as many friends as we have, some of them would have seen her. We do not believe she ever left the factory."

Has Read No Reports.

Mrs. Coleman, since her nervous collapse, has not been allowed to read the newspapers, her husband realizing the seriousness of her condition. Since last Wednesday she has had absolute quiet, and Tuesday she resumed her duties with the hope, as she expressed it, "to make home like it used to be, if possible." She declared that only the strength and vigor that has always been hers enabled her to withstand the blow that had befallen her.

"Mary and I were very much alike," she said, "strong and healthy. Mary would have been 14 years old on June 1, but she was very large and robust for her age. She often passed for 16. Her birthday is nearly here, but it will be so different this year."

talk and hard work the Georgia city has made Memphis hard to locate.

John Hynds, Joe Greenfield and Claude Hutcheson have been Potentate Adair's right hand men in the fight for Atlanta, and when the credit is slid up and passed around, likewise the glory, they will come in for a large share of both, along with Mr. Adair.

Mr. Adair expressed himself to me to-day as particularly gratified with the help extended the Atlanta movement by the Hearst newspapers.

"I hear from Mr. Hearst's personal appeals and his newspapers' work for next year's big meeting at all turns. His publications, especially in the West, have helped tremendously in bringing support to Atlanta. If Atlanta wins, as I expect, we will owe much to Mr. Hearst."

In the hotel lobbies one sees Atlanta newspapers everywhere. One hears Atlanta talk everywhere. The great 12 hours' hustle Atlanta made to raise that entertainment fund of nearly $100,000 is talked of by everybody. Whenever I buttonhole a Shriner and ask him how about that Imperial Council meeting next year, and I have done that about 100 times since I landed here, I never get a reply that does not make some reference to that great financial stunt. The impression seems to be that a town capable of doing that is capable of doing anything, no matter how big.

"Don't Worry, Atlanta."

In the matter of taking care of the Imperial Council next year, I should say to Atlanta, "Don't worry." Whatever this town of Dallas can do footloose and free, Atlanta can do with one hand tied behind her back and a hobble skirt draped around her ankles. Not that Dallas is not a great little town, either, for it is, but still it is not Atlanta. Dallas simply is bulging with Shriners. It is packed and jammed and it is acting handsomely toward the visitors.

"The city is profusely and beautifully decorated. Free automobiles stand around and invite fez wearers to get in and ride to their hearts' content, which many of them do. The hotels and boarding houses are playing fair, and there is no gouging.

For its size, Dallas is a wonder. It, however, is only about one-half the size of Atlanta. If Dallas can entertain 25,000 visitors—and it is entertaining approximately that many today—then Atlanta can handle 50,000 and never mind it or find it the least uncomfortable.

Somehow, too, the Dallas newspapers seem to feel and hope that Atlanta will win out in its fight, and the news they print carries a pro-Atlanta color.

The Imperial Council is holding its first session to-day. Yesterday was given over to handshaking, Shrineresque kidding, merrymaking and getting things under way. All one hears as one walks along the streets of Dallas to-day is "Morning, Silas." That's the greeting, and everybody hands it to you, whether he ever saw you before or not. It's the same friendly, happy, good-natured greeting that the Elks' "Hello, Bill" is.

The voting on next year's meeting place will be held some time during Wednesday's session. The big parade, one of the annual events people come hundreds of miles to see, occurs tonight, and Dallas has fixed her streets for the glittering spectacle in such wise that they will be as bright as day when the parade is passing.

To-day's session of the Imperial Council began at 9 o'clock, but its proceedings were secret in the main. To-morrow's session will be the one to tell the big story.

East Aids Gate City.

One most gratifying thing about Atlanta's big fight for the Imperial Council next year is the way Shriners from all over the East and Southeast are rallying to her support. There is not a member of the imperial organization from a State that touches Georgia, except Tennessee, that is not for Atlanta. Whatever little jealousies there may be or may have been between Atlanta and other cities of the South, they are all for Atlanta in the movement to make Atlanta the next year's meeting place, and it is more than half way suspected that Memphis will swing into line before the ballot is spread and make it unanimous for the Gate City of the South.

"The Shriners want to go to Atlanta and they are going," The Dallas Times-Herald quotes Forrest Adair as saying. "Many of them have already visited the Georgia city and have seen for themselves that we have the hotels. Every temple knows that we have the money for the entertainment, too. You just can't get away from the fact that Atlanta pledged $75,000 in less than one day. If it will take more than $75,000 the amount needed will be there. The Shriners will have everything they want and more than they can ask when they go to Atlanta."

Atlantans All Optimistic.

This feeling of optimism is reflected in every Atlanta visitor in Dallas to-day. The magnificent campaign the Gate City has made for next year's meeting is destined to win out, or Adair and his men are the worst fooled lot that ever were, and the betting is 1,000 to 1 that they have not been fooled for a minute.

And don't forget Mrs. Shriner and the Misses Shriner are here in all their freshness and loveliness—5,000 or so of them. Believe me, they are on hand and everybody notices them and approves of their presence. A prettier lot of girls I never saw than these Texas specimens. Southern beauty is more or less running riot in Dallas to-day.

SUPREME COURT DEFINES 'TIGER'

All Places Selling Liquor Illegally, Whether Openly or Secretly, Put in Same Class.

What is a "blind tiger?"

The Supreme Court of the State of Georgia held in an opinion handed down Tuesday that it is any place that sells intoxicating liquor in violation of the law.

Many misguided persons had the impression that it was only a place where liquor was sold secretly.

The Supreme Court held that it makes no difference whether liquor is sold secretly or in the open. The place of sale is a "blind tiger."

The case arose in Savannah, when W. E. Thompson and several others instituted action against H. H. Simmons & Co. and H. F. Myers, seeking to abate an alleged "blind tiger" near the plaintiffs' places of residence.

The jury returned a verdict for the liquor dealers. Judge Walter G. Charlton of the Chatham County Superior Court refused a new trial, giving as his definition of a "blind tiger", a place where intoxicating liquors were sold "on the sly."

Judge J. P. Evans of the Supreme Court, in handing down the opinion, proceeded to show that the intent of the law was that any place selling liquor in violation of the law, whether openly or secretly, should be regarded as a "blind tiger" in the common acceptation of the term.

'England Is Mean and Asleep,' Says Vaile

NEW YORK, May 13.—"England is asleep. It is a stagnant nation," declared P. A. Vaile, just arrived from Liverpool. Mr. Vaile is an advocate of practical imperialism and an authority on golf and tennis.

"England is a mean nation," he continued. "She won't pay for anything, even for her army, her navy or airships. She is using France as a buffer between herself and Germany. Mr. Hearst's statement that England is a nation that is passing is a good description."

Rams Grizzly Bear To Death With Auto

WALDEN, COLO., May 13.—When a huge grizzly bear rushed at Dr. J. A. Dungan, of this city, as he was making a visit in the mountains Sunday, he saved himself from possible death by throwing a laprobe over the animal's head and then ramming it with his automobile. The bear was instantly killed.

The doctor was at the end of a road at the foot of a steep hill and was about to stop the car to go to a ranch farther up the valley when the bear charged him. It got only a mouthful of laprobe.

The doctor wrapped the rest of the robe around the bear's head, and while it wrestled with the robe in the dirt he ran over it.

Gambler Who Shot Detective Uncaught

Detectives Tuesday had positive evidence that Hamby Lester, a negro living in an alley just off Alexander Street, between the Peachtrees, is the man who shot and seriously wounded Detective Sam Webb Saturday night in a gambling raid in Lester's home.

The negro gamesters bagged in the raid testified before Judge Broyles Monday that they saw Lester fire point blank toward the door as the detectives entered. Lester still is at large.

Judge Broyles held nine negroes for trial in the State courts on a charge of gaming.

Hearse Drivers War On Sunday Funerals

NEW YORK, May 13.—The hearse and carriage drivers of Brooklyn have declared that Sunday weddings and funerals must go. In their campaign to do away with the burial of persons and weddings on Sunday they are trying to enlist the services of the clergy.

As to weddings, they are a unit for Cupid taking a day off, but they are willing to bury on Sunday persons dying of contagious diseases.

POWERS ACCEPT HUERTA REGIME

Resentment Because of United States' Refusal to Recognize New Republic Grows.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—Letters from President Poincare of France and King George of England, conveying official recognition of the Mexican Government, were presented today to President Huerta. Letters of recognition from Belgium, Germany and Italy are expected soon. Resentment because of the refusal of the United States to recognize the present government is growing.

Rebels have tied up practically the entire system of the Mexican Central except the line between this city and Vera Cruz. Insurgents are committing depredations around the city of Fresnillo, where 400 refugee families have sought safety. General Orozco, commandant there, has sent a request for reinforcements.

Communication with Tampico has been cut off and the supply of oil for locomotives is thus intercepted, Tampico being the supply point.

Texas Cattle Men Invade Australia; Meat War Rumored

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—There are rumors in London of an impending meat war between America and Austria arising out of the American meat trust's invasion of North Australia and the settlement of hundreds of Texas cattle breeders, for whom a million square miles of territory has been acquired.

A huge slaughterhouse and freezing plant is being erected at Brisbane by the Americans. The Australians propose to retaliate by extending their operations to the Pacific Coast. Refrigerators will be built at San Francisco and the Australians have ordered four cold storage steamers to be built on the Tyne.

'Nature Garb' Dance On Campus at Yale

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 13.—The spectacle of a Yale senior, clothed only in nature's garb, cavorting around the campus, is a matter today receiving the attention of the Yale faculty. Clarence Bolton, of this city, was the student who unwillingly posed in the altogether. Another member of the class repeated the action later, but his name escaped public notice.

Each was the victim of classmates. The spectacle was an informal part of the Omega Lambda Chi celebration, when the junior societies take in their candidates.

Men Play Marbles to Ridicule Blue Law

LITTLE FALLS, MINN., May 13.—Many people returning from church Sunday saw several well known men playing marbles on the main corner of the business district. They rubbed their eyes and wondered if they were dreaming, but it was true.

Recently Mayor F. C. Johnson extended the Sunday lid in this city so as to include all pool and billiard halls, bowling alleys and photograph galleries.

To voice their disapproval of the Mayor's action and to ridicule it as much as possible, several business men planned to play marbles in the street.

FEARS TO PUNISH RIVAL HE SAYS STOLE BRIDE

Edward Brown, Angry but Small, Swears Vengeance, Then Calls Police.

An angry husband waited for three hours at the Terminal Station Tuesday morning determined to wreak vengeance upon the man who, he said, had enticed his 17-year-old bride of four months from his home and gone with her to Macon, Ga., her former home. Then he notified the police and now awaits developments.

The husband is Edward M. Brown, of 20 Hayden Street. He appeared at the station at 7:50 o'clock, when a train is due into Atlanta from Macon, but the man he claimed he was after, J. G. Reeves, a real estate operator, did not appear. Brown waited. About 10 o'clock Reeves strode into the station from the train platforms.

Brown started toward Reeves and stopped before he reached him. Brown is a little man, and he surveyed the well-built real estate man dubiously. Then he returned to his seat.

Daunted by His Size.

"He's pretty big," he said. "I won't whip him; I'll have him arrested."

Brown asserts that Reeves has showered attentions upon his wife, Mrs. Amelia Brown, for the past three weeks, and yesterday afternoon, he claims, he induced her to leave her husband and go to Macon. Brown declares that Reeves met Mrs. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Sally Bryant, at the station and purchased their tickets to Macon, buying one for himself also.

"We were married in Macon four months ago," said Brown, "and until this Reeves appeared on the scene we were happy. About three weeks ago I decided to buy a lot and this man was sent to sell it to me. He came out to the house to see me about it, and after that he kept coming. I hurried the purchase of the lot and told my wife to keep away from Reeves.

Threatened To Go Home.

"Even after I had bought the lot he kept coming around and taking my wife out in an automobile. I told him to keep away, and he began sneaking around when I wasn't at home. When I came home yesterday afternoon my wife said she was going home with her mother, and said that if I wouldn't give her any money she had a friend who would.

"I went downtown on some business last night, and when I got home I was told that my wife had gone. A girl who lives in the house said she had gone to the station with my wife and her mother, and that Reeves had met them there. Reeves took my wife's grips, the girl told me, and went to the train with them.

She said she saw him get on the train, and he didn't get off. I hurried to the station to stop them, but the train had gone. Then I went to the police station, and they told me to get a gun and shoot Reeves.

Claims Former Marriage.

"I'm going to have Reeves and my wife arrested, and I'm going to get a divorce. I learned yesterday I'm not the only husband she has. She told me when we were married she had been married before, but said her other husband was dead. I found out he is not dead."

Miss Thelma Bigby, the girl who accompanied Mrs. Brown to the Terminal Station, corroborated Brown's story Tuesday morning.

"Reeves met Mrs. Brown at the corner of Luckie and Harris Streets late yesterday afternoon, before Mr. Brown got home," she said. "They talked a long time, and then Mrs. Brown came in and had a talk with her mother. Then she asked us to tell her husband when he came home that she had gone to her old home with her mother and was not coming back.

Reeves Didn't Return.

"I went to the station with her, and Mr. Reeves met them there. He took their grips and told her not to worry. 'I'll fix everything so we can be together in a few days,' I heard him say.

"Mr. Reeves went to the train with them, telling me he would return in a minute. I waited almost half an hour after the train had gone, and he didn't come back."

BABY, KIDNAPED BY AN INSANE NEGRESS, FOUND

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Lucile Arbed, the eighteen-months-old baby kidnaped by an insane negress yesterday, was found in a pitiable condition to-day near an abandoned race track just outside the city, still in custody of the woman. The baby's muffled cries directed the searchers to a stall where the woman was trying to hush it. The child was almost starved, and showed evidence of abuse, but it was not maimed.

He is acting under instructions from State Game and Fish Commissioner Jesse E. Mercer, who will meet Westcott in Milltown Thursday and map out a plan of campaign.

SENATORS CLASH ON TARIFF; BILL IN BALANCE

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The fate of the Underwood tariff bill in the Senate was in the balance to-day while the Republicans and Democrats debated on the Penrose motion to instruct the Senate Finance Committee to hold open hearings on the measure. The clash also tended to show the real strength of the supporters of the administration measure.

It is on the sugar and wool schedules that the fight will come, and Democratic leaders anxiously watched the debate to see how far the defection started by Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana had influenced Senators from the sugar and wool-producing States.

It already had been agreed to refer the Underwood bill to the Finance Committee without public hearings when that measure was brought from the House Friday. Senator Simmons, chairman of the committee, made a motion to this effect, followed immediately by a motion by Senator Penrose for public hearings.

So critical was the situation raised by the Penrose motion that a call was issued for every Democratic Senator to be in his seat. The Republicans also marshaled their entire strength to fight for open hearings.

LaFollette to Draft A New Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator LaFollette will not confine his tariff-making efforts to the wool and cotton schedules. He intends to draft practically a complete bill. This measure will be offered in the Senate, probably as a substitute for the Underwood bill. He regards many of the Democratic rates as too low.

BIBB GRAND JURY PROBES VICE DISTRICT IN MACON

MACON, GA., May 13.—The Grand Jury is this week investigating the restricted district, as the result of a complaint made by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, former president of Wesleyan College. On account of the spreading of the district, a negro church was forced to abandon its place of worship, and this fact aroused the ire of the white clergyman, who appealed to the Grand Jury for assistance.

ATLANTA CALLED MODEL CITY BY PRESBYTERIAN THOUSANDS

Noted Temperance Lecturer Declares Vice Crusade Is Object Lesson to the World.

ALL TRAINS BEAR DELEGATES

With the beginning of the influx of thousands of delegates and visitors to the Presbyterian Assembly which opens here Wednesday, Atlanta already is ringing with their praises as the cleanest city in the world—both morally and physically.

Experts from other and larger cities, who inspected the town Monday, have declared Atlanta is an object lesson to other cities of the nation in what can be done.

"The fact that such a large city as this could so effectively remove the scars from its social side is a great proof of the fact that so-called evil necessities are anything but necessary," declared the Rev. Charles Scanlon, of Pittsburg, the noted temperance lecturer, who arrived Monday.

While few delegates were expected to arrived before Wednesday, early trains Tuesday brought in their quota and several hundred are expected to come in during the day.

From now until Thursday afternoon it is doubtful if any train entering Atlanta will be minus a corps of ministers and elders coming to Atlanta to participate in the convention. Several special trains are scheduled to arrive Wednesday morning. There will be two from New York, one from Chicago, one from St. Louis bringing in the Western delegates, one from Ohio and one from Philadelphia. These are the special trains of which the local committee has received notice. It is possible there will be others.

Registration Bureau Opens.

Tuesday morning found headquarters on the fifth floor of the Empire Building opening with as busy a rush as characterized the place Monday. Rev. Jere Moore, who is secretary of the local convention committee, has been the busiest man in Atlanta for the past week and is right up to his ears in work now. Assisting him are a large number of ministers and business men, grinding away in the effort to make everything run smoothly. In the list are a number of men of heavy business interests who have laid aside everything in the entertainment of the mammoth joint convention.

Rev. Mr. Scanlon, who will be one of the principal speakers at the great temperance service Sunday night in Wesley Memorial chapel, is much interested in Atlanta, especially in connection with the vice crusade campaign which Chief of Police Beavers has waged.

"Of course, I know nothing personally of what Atlanta has done in cleaning up the city, but I have heard much of it," he said to a Georgian reporter. "I suppose the vice crusade in Atlanta has attracted more attention than any single city campaign ever carried on in this country, and there has been much discussion of it. When a city like Atlanta decides to make itself good and succeeds in doing so, it is indeed an object lesson to every other city in the world, for certainly what has been done here can be done elsewhere."

Another prominent arrival was Rev. T. P. Junkin, president of the Daniel Baker College, of Brownwood, Texas. "Well, I'm with you and glad to be here, too," was his greeting as he introduced himself to Rev. Jere Moore. "The joint assembly here has been all the talk among Presbyterians down my way, and I suppose this mammoth meeting will be talked of for many years to come."

Missionary Meeting Sunday.

In addition to the mammoth temperance meeting to be held Sunday night, there will be a Sunday school missionary meeting Sunday afternoon in the Central Presbyterian Church. It will be one of the most interesting features of the convention.

The meeting will be unique in that its object is somewhat different from that of the ordinary missionary meeting. It will be an actual demonstration of platform missionary instruction in the Sunday school. Dr. A. L. Phillips, general superintendent of the Department of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will preside at this meeting.

There will be a brief address on "The Value of Missionary Education in the Sunday School," by the Rev. Charles R. Watson, of Philadelphia. This will be followed by a demonstration of "A Missionary Opening Exercise" for the Sunday school, entitled "America's Welcome." The theme of this address will be immigration, and it will be presented by a number of young people from the Central Presbyterian.

Often features of the work will be the demonstration of how, in five minutes or less, to present to a Sunday school a missionary book so as to insure its being read. There also will be instructions as to how to make a telling misisonary speech and how to present a missionary map talk effectively.

Special Music Feature.

Among other prominent workers who will participate in this meeting are Mrs. D. E. Waid, New York; George Innes, Philadelphia, and the Rev. A. W. Halsey, New York. There will be a large chorus and special music under the direction of Professor Joseph MacLean, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Progress of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which section of the church includes a majority of the Presbyterian churches in the South, is interesting.

Statistics to be read in the assemblies show the number of ruling elders in the church to be 10,977; the number of deacons, 10,637; the number added to the church during the year on examination, 14,103; the number added on certificate, 12,077; the total number of communicants, 292,845. During the year 6,021 adults and 4,970 infants were baptized. The total Sunday school enrollment was 245,495.

Huge Sums Contributed.

The amount contributed last year to foreign missions was $501,412; to home missions, $125,787; to Christian education and ministerial relief, $97,143; to Sunday school extension and publication, $25,499; to Bible cause, $8,483; to orphans' home, $86,125; to pastors' salaries, $1,320,059; to congregational expense, $1,493,234; to miscellaneous, $233,673, making a total of $4,293,044 contributed to all causes.

The vote of the presbyteries on the proposed amendments in the Confession of Faith and the Book of Church Order, handed down by the assembly of 1912, has been awaited with special interest, as every amendment must receive the approval of three-fourths of the presbyteries before the assembly can authorize the same.

With reference to the "elect infant clause" in the Confession of Faith, reports from the presbyteries to be presented to the assembly will show that 22 presbyteries voted against the amendment, making the three-fourths vote in favor of the same impossible. It will be necessary, therefore, for the assembly in Atlanta to consider overtures to omit the paragraph entirely from the Confession of Faith.

HAWKINSVILLE ELKS VOTE TO ABOLISH CLUB LOCKER

HAWKINSVILLE, GA., May 13.—The Elks voted last night to discontinue their locker adjunct and after June 15 no more liquors or beers will be dispensed in the club rooms. Public sentiment was averse to a locker club and the churches looked with displeasure upon their members affiliating with any fraternity or club maintaining a locker. The Elks voluntarily voted to discontinue it.

BANKERS' MEETING HERE UP TO HOTELS

There Will Be No Difficulty in Raising Funds to Entertain, Says Joseph McCord.

"Whether Atlanta gets the 1914 convention of the American Bankers' Association depends on two things—hotel accommodations and the guarantee of a satisfactory entertainment fund. The first is under consideration; the second is assured."

J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank, thus sums up the situation. With Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank, Mr. Ottley delivered Atlanta's invitation to the 1914 convention when the executive council met at Briarcliff, N. Y., last week.

"Proper accommodation of delegates and guests demands 2,000 hotel rooms. Atlanta has more than this," said Mr. Ottley. "The question is whether it is possible for hotel men to co-operate in setting aside that number of rooms. The Convention Bureau will discuss this with hotel men when its heads return from the Shriners' convention.

"If the Convention Bureau and the hotel men make a satisfactory reply, the information will be forwarded to the national secretary. He then will make a visit to Atlanta and will look over the situation.

"Detroit last year spent $40,000 entertaining the bankers. Boston this year has underwritten $100,000 for the same purpose. But the question of raising funds in Atlanta is not bothering us. If we can get the hotel rooms we can get the money."

MILITANT CHIEF, ILL, AVOIDS TRIAL

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—When the trial of the leaders of the militant suffragettes arrested in the police raid on the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, was resumed to-day in Bow Street Court, Mrs. Flora Drummond, the "General," was not present.

The court was informed that Mrs. Drummond is still in a serious condition at a nursing home, where she was taken after collapsing in court last week.

Mrs. Drummond, who went upon a hunger strike after her arrest, has refused to eat in the nursing home. Her bail was extended for two months.

Testimony was adduced to show that the Women's Social and Political Union offered medals and other prizes for the militants who were able to accomplish the most destruction of property and think up new new forms of violence. Those who underwent punishment also were rewarded.

Militants Smash Shop Windows Worth $5,000.

NORWICH, ENG., May 13.—Vandal suffragettes smashed $5,000 worth of plateglass in dry goods store windows here to-day before they were driven from the streets by policemen.

The women opened an organized campaign, going through the streets armed with hammers and missiles with which they smashed the windows.

adopted by most of the leading denominations in this country, some of them having accepted it long before the platform of the Federal Council had been drawn up.

The Federal Council's platform is, therefore, practically the expression of the Protestant forces of this country, with regard to social service.

As a matter of fact, most of the criticism that has been directed against the social service platform of the Federal Council is based upon the assumption that these are the only principles for which the council is contending, but the council spoke just as strongly with regard to "evangelism," "foreign missions," "temperance," "Sabbath observance," "the family and the home" and upon kindred subjects as it did upon social service.

At its last meeting in Chicago a strong evangelistic commission was appointed, which will no doubt in time be just as influential as the social service commission of the council. It simply happened that the men who were interested in social service became immediately active when they were appointed, so that they have got a better start than some of the other commissions.

Favored by Atlantans.

The report of the social service commission submitted at the Chicago meeting indicates that the men who framed it are warmly sympathetic toward evangelistic work and the evangelistic spirit. Following are some extracts from this much-maligned report:

"The church is not turning aside from her task, neither is she creating new forces; still further than this we are happily discovering that the conservation of the evangelistic note is an essential to an effective social gospel, and are no longer disposed to rend asunder that which Christ has joined together.

"We are not to forget that we can have no kingdom of heaven on earth until our economic programs are fashioned in the light of spiritual ideals and with spiritual ends in view, and we are to remember that the world will come together in the consummation of sympathy, tenderness and brotherhood only when all men are brought to sit together at the feet of Christ."

It is impossible to tell how strongly developed is the feeling that the Southern Assembly should sever its connection with the Federal Council, but the men who have been fighting in Atlanta for the eradication of the social evil are strongly in favor of having the Southern Assembly retain its relationship to this interdenominational organization. This feeling also characterizes the attitude of the members of the Presbytery of Atlanta.

County Will Build A Home for Girls

Fulton County will erect a home for wayward girls and incorrigible women, the work to begin at once and the home to be completed within the year.

This announcement was made Tuesday following a conference between a committee from the County Commission and a committee from the trustees of the Harriet Hawkes Home. The latter agreed to deed to the county a 50-acre tract of land on Stewart Avenue, near Mt. Zion Church, and a fund of approximately $12,000 pledged for the erection of an institution.

The agreement reached Tuesday is the result of several conferences. Fulton County will have absolute title to the property and will be in complete control. It will be responsible for the home's maintenance. As a concession for the Harriet Hawkes donations, the home will bear this name. Several members of the former trustees will constitute an advisory board for the institution.

Following Tuesday's conference it was announced that work would begin immediately. A meeting of the Board of County Commissioners is expected to ratify the action of the committee, which comprises three members of the board—Shelby Smith, C. L. Anderson and Tull C. Waters. Henry Y. McCord represented the Harriet Hawkes trustees.

Here He Is Again; Man of Mystery Heralds a Story

Here he is again.

Just when you thought that The Georgian's "Man of Mystery," with the three ties ranging down his shirt front, had vanished as unaccountably as he first made his appearance, presto, up he bobs!

Returning, he explained that his appearance, disappearances and reappearances all are for the same purpose—that of exciting your interest and curiosity.

The picture of the "Man of Mystery" was published three days in The Georgian without any explanation or comment. There was not even a line to say whether he was a foreign nobleman or the latest suspect in some daring crime.

After the office of The Georgian had been deluged with letters asking the identity of the strange personage came the explanation. It was simply this:

The Georgian is about to publish a great serial story. It may be said with assurance that it is the most interesting story Atlantans have read in years. This picture typifies the story. The first instalment will appear in next Monday's Georgian.

What should be the title, judging solely from the picture? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title has already been selected. It is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be considered in awarding the prizes.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor," The Georgian, Atlanta. The contest closes Sunday night. No answers posted after midnight, May 18, will be considered.

Decatur and Atlanta

The corporate limits of Atlanta and Decatur are just two miles apart.

The center of Decatur is connected with the center of Atlanta by two street car lines, the Georgia railroad and by three public roads.

East Lake Drive, through Druid Hills to Oakhurst, thence by DeKalb avenue to Decatur, is at present an almost perfect automobile route from Decatur to Atlanta.

The straight shoot from Decatur to Atlanta is now DeKalb avenue, which eastward from Mayson avenue is now being paved with vitrified brick.

Ponce DeLeon avenue is being rapidly extended to the Court House at Decatur. A few months more of good weather will see the work completed.

By street car the distance from the center of Atlanta to the center of Decatur is 30 minutes; by the Georgia railroad the distance is about 10 minutes.

Hundreds of telephones, both Bell and Atlanta, connect Atlanta with Decatur, and residents of Decatur have exactly the same use of these two telephone systems as the citizens of Atlanta.

The truth of the matter is, a resident of Decatur on the average is just as closely in touch with the business in Atlanta as the residents of the best residence sections of the city of Atlanta.

Think of these things, and find out for yourself how much more cheaply you can build a home in Decatur than in Atlanta.

FACTORY EXPENSE IN U. S. CHEAPEST

Other Nations, Though, Pay Lower Wages and Smaller Prices, Commerce Report Says.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That United States industries are carried on at a higher degree of efficiency than those of other nations is indicated by a report issued by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to-day.

The report shows that in the United Kingdom one-sixth more power and two and one-half times as many wage-earners are required to produce a net output of equal value.

In fifteen of the seventeen industries compared, the outlay for wages is higher in England than here for an equal output, the difference ranging from 8 per cent for linen, jute and hemp to 30 per cent for silks.

Prices in the United States are higher, however.

As to tariffs, the report states that German duties are not so high as generally supposed, but that this country is discriminated against in instances.

'U. S. Makes Me Sick' Says Departing Diva

NEW YORK, May 13.—America came in for a nice sizzling roast today at the hands of Marie Cavan, of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company, who sailed for Europe and may never, never come back.

"I would rather sing for $100 a week in Europe than $1,000 a week in America," said the diva. "America makes me sick."

It would seem that some "puritanical reformers" vexed the prima donna, for she gave them a left-handed uppercut for their efforts to "reform the—of course—terribly immoral stage."

KOREAN SEES WAR CLOUDS IN EAST

WASHINGTON, May 13.—With a taste of republicanism, the Oriental peoples, particularly the Japanese, are beginning to grow restless and are exhibiting an inclination to throw off the old oligarchic rule, according to Seek Hun Kimm, president of the Korean Patriotic Association, in a statement published to-day.

The establishment of the Chinese republic has inspired the stirring of a new life, he says, and indicates that the situation in the Far East is delicate. Under the present order, the statement says, Japan wants complete control of Manchuria, Russia of Mongolia; Japan wants to preserve her alliance with England; Russia wants to keep England quiet, and therefore the last two understand each other as regards Persia and Thibet; Russia is aggressive and England stubborn. The result may be the dismemberment of China.

The commercial interests of Germany and the United States, says Seek Hun Kimm, demand the interest of those countries in the game. The United States holds the balance of power because England and this country are natural allies in the Far East, the statement says.

ARKANSAS PRISON BOARD ANSWERS GOV. FUTRELL

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., May 13.—In reply to Governor Futrell's open letter criticising certain actions of the new State Prison Board with regard to letting contracts, preparing vouchers, etc., members of the board have sent a pointed letter to the chief executive defending their actions in every particular and inviting the closest scrutiny. They declare that when they assumed office April 1, they found the old system of accounting in a chaotic condition. The Governor has the power of removal under the new law.

BEACHEY QUITS AIR REGRETS DARING

Noted Flyer Says He Feels That His Reckless Feats Led Others to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—With the announcement that he had quit the air and would never sail an aeroplane again, Lincoln Beachey to-day issued a statement in which he said he felt that he had committed murder. He blamed himself for the death of several birdmen, and said he could not be induced to enter an aeroplane again at "the point of a gun."

"There was only one thing that drew crowds to my exhibitions," said Beachey. "They wanted to see something happen. They predicted that I would be killed. They paid to see me die. They bet, the odds being greatly against my landing safely.

"In Chicago last September Horace Kearney's mother begged me not to teach him any more tricks. Kearney insisted on learning them all. Three months later he was dead. Welch's wife begged him to quit doing spirals. Welch replied 'Beachey does them.' Two weeks later he was killed when a wire snapped as he was doing a reverse spiral at Trenton, N. J. I felt I had murdered him. Some time ago I sent tickets to Mrs. Ely. She sent back the tickets, writing: 'Gene would be with me now if he had never seen you fly.'

"I have no fear that I would be killed, but I am in the grip of a great fear that I would make others kill themselves."

BERLIN, May 13.—The cherry blossoms of Japan were disappointing to John Corbett, a Chicago contractor, who is in Berlin.

"We were in Japan in the cherry season," he said, "but all we saw were a few trees with a few small blossoms. California's cherry blossom show is far more beautiful."

Corbett was in Japan during the excitement over the California land law but he says that he was most courteously treated. The Japanese seemed to be anxious to make an impression for politeness.

Gambling Shown on Increase in France

PARIS, May 13.—The fallacy of the popular idea that gambling is on the decline in France is clearly shown by figures just issued on the revenue to the State from the tax on playing cards.

During 1912 this amounted to $587,898, an increase of $35,647 over 1911, and the largest amount realized since the imposition of the tax, which remained practically at the same figure between 1908 and 1910.

FACTORS BOOST PRICE OF ROSIN

First Move in New Selling Plan Is to Mark All Grades Except "M" at Higher Figures.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—That the prices obtaining on all grades of rosins are the lowest that will be quoted for many years to come, is the firm belief of those familiar with conditions centering about the naval stores markets and the industry in general.

The opening gun in the campaign for better prices was fired at the afternoon sale Thursday. K grade, and all grades below, were advanced on "asked" prices to the extent of 5 cents the barrel, while N and above were advanced 10 cents, with the exception of M, which was allowed to remain at quotations obtaining for several days.

Factors state that this is but the beginning of a gradual upward movement on all grades of rosins, which have ruled notoriously low in values for many months. In other words, the educational campaign now under way has for its purpose the establishment of equitable prices, and these will be slowly but surely advanced as may be deemed necessary by the factors.

Trading in large lots is a daily feature on the exchange, whereas for a month previously the market was practically dead. The creditors' committee of the American has at last secured money with which to carry on the business of that concern, but it has been announced that it will not again actively enter the market, and that its affairs will be wound up as rapidly as possible.

Naval stores receipts are increasing in volume. It is said that the stability of the market has induced many producers to abandon their intention of converting their orchards into other channels. The new crop is now beginning to show up.

GIRL'S MOTHER CALLS ELOPER BIGAMIST

Amazing marital complications have come to light with the arrest early Tuesday morning of J. L. Wimbish, 24 years old, of 777 Ashby Street, at the request of the mother of Miss Ella Kate Mann, 18 years old, of East Point. Mrs. Mann charges Wimbish with having committed a bigamous marriage with her daughter.

Wimbish eloped with Miss Mann last December. Since then a vain, country-wide search has been made by relatives of the girl. Not until Wimbish reappeared in Atlanta were the police called. Then Wimbish was arrested and confronted by Mrs. Mann, who demanded the whereabouts of her daughter. Wimbish refused to tell, but stated he knew where she was and would bring her to Atlanta as soon as he could disentangle himself from the meshes of the law.

Wimbish Denies Bigamy Charge.

While Wimbish denies he is married to Miss Mann, that charge has been placed against him by Mrs. Mann, who avers he has a wife in Birmingham. It was because of that fact which she declares Wimbish admitted to her last December, that she objected to his attentions to her daughter.

Wimbish Tuesday morning admitted again he had been married before he met Miss Mann. He declared, though, he had been separated from his wife two years, and, while they had never been divorced to his knowledge, she had remarried.

"I love Ella," said Wimbish, "and I'll marry her as soon as I can determine my marital status with my former wife."

"My former wife was Ola May Jones, of Atlanta. In 1909 I fell in love with her. Her parents objected to the marriage, so we eloped. Her folks had me arrested. Then I married her and we left the city, but separated May 13, 1909. She went to Birmingham and married again, I hear. Whether she got a divorce or not I don't know. I was never served with any papers.

Got in Trouble Again.

"Later I got into trouble with another girl and was again arrested. When released I came back to Atlanta and met Miss Mann. When I told Mrs. Mann I had a wife in Birmingham; that we had separated and I guessed were divorced by that time, she told me not to come about her daughter again.

"To do this was impossible. I loved Ella and she loved me. We met secretly and planned the elopement. I told her we would get married just as soon as I could find out how I stood with my wife; that I thought we were divorced.

Arrested on Return.

"Ella and I left Atlanta December 14, 1912. We traveled all around the State, but did not go outside of the Georgia boundaries. Later I decided to come back to Atlanta and see if I could not get work to support us until things could be straightened out. I had no sooner set foot in this city than I was arrested."

Wimbish says Miss Mann is happy and living in a nearby town, though not as his wife. According to G. N. Bullock, the policeman who took Wimbish into custody, the prisoner stated at first he had three wives. Wimbish denies this.

EARL PARKER, who was stolen by women in an auto. His father believes the mother has hidden the boy.

Lays Kidnaping of Son to Two Women

Telegrams sent to Birmingham and other cities by the police at the instance of J. M. Parker, 102 Jett Street, whose 3-year-old son, Earl, was mysteriously kidnaped in an automobile a few days ago, so far have failed to throw any clew as to the whereabouts of the missing boy.

Parker is confident that one of the two women in the auto was his wife, from whom he is seeking a divorce. He believes she is hiding the boy to prevent his being taken from her by the courts. Mrs. Parker has been living in Birmingham, and Parker is satisfied the boy is in that city or in some nearby town.

Made Millionaires But Left Only $363

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—The inventory of the estate of Professor Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, one of America's foremost men of science, and a man who had made many men millionaires, shows that he left property worth approximately $363.

Lowe at one time was many times a millionaire. He lost his fortune in building the Mount Lowe Observatory and incline railroad, which he hoped would enable himself and other astronomers to learn some new truth among the maze of suns, moons and planets.

Among his inventions are those of artificial illuminating gas by the "water gas" method now used in all commercial gas plants of the world. The artificial ice invention is believed to rank second. He is also credited with having been the pioneer dirigible balloon man.

California Cotton Tests Successful

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The experiment of growing Durango cotton in the Imperial Valley of California is proving successful, according to reports made by Argyle McLachlan, assistant in crop acclimatization, to the Department of Agriculture.

Durango cotton is a long staple upland variety of cotton apparently well adapted to conditions in California and Arizona. The experiments are in their third year.

WILSON TO URGE MONEY REFORM

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An administration-made currency bill will be the fruit of the numerous conferences this week between Senate and House leaders, the President and Cabinet members.

Representative Underwood said today the currency bill soon will be whipped into fairly definite shape. The President and the Senate and House leaders plan to present a bill upon which a practical agreement has been reached and to designate it as an administration bill.

Carter Glass, chairman of the next House Banking and Currency Committee, desires a non-partisan bill upon which both the Republicans and Democrats of the new Banking and Currency Committee may agree.

Currency Reformers Seek Views of Bankers.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator Owen announced to-day that the subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee would formally begin the compilation of questions to be submitted to bankers and economy experts this week. These will be drafted with the intention of learning the attitude of those concerned on currency reform legislation.

Senator Owen said the Democratic members of his committee were in favor of enacting currency legislation at the present session.

Goes to Europe to Buy a New Pet Dog

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Within forty-eight hours after "Trix," a pet Pomeranian of his daughter, Mrs. Bertram Townsend, broke its $1,000 neck by falling down an elevator shaft in the hotel and was buried at Atlantic City in a silver-handled rosewood casket, beneath a silken shroud, Mahlon W. Newton, owner of Green's Hotel, was on the ocean, bound for Switzerland to buy another toy dog.

By long-distance to the steamship office he engaged a reservation. The steamer sailed at noon. Mrs. Townsend received a wireless from her father.

"Don't worry about 'Trix.' Will have another Pom just as good," read the aerogram.

RESINOL CLEARS AWAY PIMPLES

And Blackheads. Restores Health to Unsightly Complexions.

Pimples and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear and velvety, and hair health and beauty usually follow the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive and complicated "beauty treatments" utterly fail.

The nearest drug store is sure to have Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Why not get some to-day? You can't begin too soon to get rid of those ugly, embarrassing complexion blemishes. The Resinol medication is so gentle, yet so effective, that it can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Doctors throughout the country have prescribed Resinol for eighteen years. You can test it free by writing to Dept. 20-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a generous trial.

Foods That Bind Little Children

Start Them Off Right with a Good Laxative and Then Watch Their Diet.

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Many of America's foremost families are never without Syrup Pepsin, because one can never tell when some member of the family may need it, and all can use it. Thousands indorse it, among them Mrs. M. E. Darling, R. F. D. No. 4, Belleview, Pa., who writes: "I certainly think Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin saved my baby's life. Marjorie is a bottle baby and could not get her food to digest, but I found by giving her a small dose of Syrup Pepsin when she had colic it always cured her." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being bought by those who already know its value, and it contains proportionately more. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin, as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-griping and free from injurious ingredients.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

SILK PRICES Slashed to 49c

Former Prices up to $1.50, now

Snip! snip! Scissors have been working overtime the past two weeks. As a result, many lines have dwindled, color lines have become broken, price lots have been depleted. For one cause and another, then, we group the following silks to sell at 49c. Look them over, they tell of big savings:

$1.50 silk and wool crepes—silk warp, wool filling. Soft and crepey, drape delightfully. 44 in. wide. Gray, rose, tan, chasseur, violet.

85c to $1.25 silks—odd lots of fancy taffetas and messalines in various colors and combinations. 49c.
85c foulards—spot proof, not to hurt by rain drops. Neat patterns, allover and spaced designs. Blues, greys, rose, Copenhagen, brown. In the same lot are a few solid color messalines in odd shades, 49c.

P. S.—While this is the best item in the May Silk Sale, it is by no means the only good value. There are almost a score of others, including the most fashionable silks. Savings generally are a fourth to a half.

(Ready at 8:30. Silk Annex—Main Floor, Left)

Half-Price Sale of Ribbon Remnants

They're Tired of Sharing None of the Advantages, Says Secretary Houston.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—While not a practical farmer, Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston has given the subject of agriculture years of careful study. He stands for education of the farmers. He believes that they have been sorely neglected in that respect; that their advantages have been few as compared to those enjoyed by city dwellers.

"Have you discovered any inducement to persuade young men on the farms to remain on them?" the Secretary was asked.

"It is a problem which cannot be easily solved," he replied. "You can't hold men on the farms unless you offer sufficient inducements. It is little wonder that farmers and their sons have flocked to the cities for more lucrative and congenial employment. For many years they have been contributing to the partially artificial upbuilding of our industrial centers, to the development of the cities as against their own communities—and what have they received in return? You cannot find the best educational advantages among farming communities. They are to be obtained only in the larger cities.

Why They Quit the Farm.

"Take a farmer with six small children, for whom he desires to provide an education. They will be sent to the country school as long as some one can be found to take charge of it, but at best the education received there is meager. If he would give them an education which will be of benefit to them, he must send them away to some institution of learning, entailing perhaps greater expense than he can afford. He must either maintain his farm at the expense of the education of his childen, or move to one of the large cities. So, education, among other things, is driving occupants of farms to the cities."

"If the high cost of living is the result of less production and greater demand, what remedies would you propose?"

Too Much Gold.

"Don't say 'high cost of living,' say, rather, the cause for high prices. One great contributing cause is the enormous increase in the production and supply of gold during the past eighteen years. There is more gold now than ever before in the history of our country. The greater the supply of gold the higher the prices, and so the greater the cost of living."

"Do you believe that the present tariff, or the tariff presented by the Democrats, has affected or will affect the high cost of living?"

"A lower tariff on the necessities of life should bring about reduced prices to the consumer; but, not being a tariff expert, I do not pretend to know just what effect the present Underwood Tariff bill will have. It should bring about reduced prices, but not all at once. You can not expect too much of such legislation. It must be given a fair trial. Take sugar in Louisiana. I believe that if the people of that State could produce it on a business basis there would be no need for a tariff on it such as the people of Louisiana and their representatives claim. But with a reduced tariff the railroads might retaliate by increasing their rates of transportation. That is one of the contingencies that might prevent a healthy and remunerative profit to the sugar producer in Louisiana."

No "Uplift" About It.

Recurring to the education of the farmer, Secretary Houston said:

"Don't think that the Department of Agriculture has any idea of a policy of 'uplift' among the farmers. What I have in mind, and what I believe will be for the best interests of all concerned, is education along the lines of better production and better marketing. More scientific methods must be devised to benefit both the producer and the consumer. The farmers especially those in the South, must have better banking facilities; they must be able to secure loans at a lower rate of interest. A system of rural credits must be devised to give them equal advantages with city folk."

MACON MAN TO BE TRIED FOR SHOOTING NEIGHBOR

MACON, GA., May 13.—Mallary Bedingfield, mill supply agent, who shot Ferd Guttenberger, a musician, last December, will be tried in the Superior Court Monday for assault with intent to murder. Bedingfield says he thought Guttenberger, a neighbor, who had just returned home from the theater, was a burglar.

Tag Day Returns Near $5,000

Record Sales, but Gifts Are Small

Entire Fund Goes to Charity Work

TAG DAY CUT UNDERLINESTAG DAY CUT UNDERLINES

Receipts Still Uncounted Because of Great Number of Nickels and Dimes Donated.

Between $4,500 and $5,000 was the sum obtained through Tag Day sales Monday for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Association, according to Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, president of the organization.

Owing to the vast amount of small change collected, the receipts have not all been counted, and will not be before Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Fraser said more tags were sold Monday than ever in the history of the organization, though premiums paid for them were unusually small.

"Instead of quarters and half-dollars, the people gave nickels and dimes," said Mrs. Fraser, "and therefore returns are not so large."

The greatest amount of money gathered at any one station was $230, secured in front of the Third National Bank building. Mrs. A. McD. Wilson was chairman of the committee at that station.

The entire fund will be devoted to the Sheltering Arms Association work, which includes the upkeep of four day nurseries and kindergartens.

Short Postage Loses U. S. Much Business

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Department of Commerce is receiving complaints in increasing numbers from business men in foreign countries against the short postage on letters received from the United States. These foreign merchants aver that the double postage which they are required to pay on letters from America is so annoying that it turns much trade away from our country.

Complaints have reached the department from France, Argentina, Africa, Australia and many other parts of the world, and the statement is usually added that short paid letters from the United States are beginning to be refused.

It has been suggested that the simple device of using a special colored envelope for foreign letters would prevent the oversight of short postage. Many firms have already adopted this method with success.

'DAD' IN CABINET BUT GIRL LOSES U. S. JOB

Daughter of Secretary Wilson, Society Miss, Will Quit Drawing $2,000 a Year in June.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Miss Agnes Wilson, daughter of Secretary of Labor Wilson, is one of the House employees who probably will be dropped from the Government payroll when the reorganization of the committee is effected. Miss Wilson is still clerk to the Committee on Labor, although her father left the House March 4 to become a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

According to the Disbursing Clerk of the House, Miss Wilson still is drawing $2,000 a year and will continue to do so until June 1. She has been prominent in society here since her father entered the Cabinet circle and has acted as hostess at his receptions.

Another society girl who will be more fortunate than Miss Wilson is Miss Anne Ferris, who is clerk to the Committee on Public Lands. Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, chairman of this committee, probably will retain the position, and Miss Ferris will remain on the House payroll.

Cleveland to Have Shortcake Inspected

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—A city bureau to regulate the making of strawberry shortcake and pie, with inspectors, is in prospect in Cleveland as the result of recommendations made to the new city charter commission by George E. Murray, famous chef here.

"Restaurant and hotel cooking has fallen into the hands of Swiss cooks," said Murray. "They despise pies and shortcake and it is impossible to find cherry or berry pie that is not adulterated or strawberry shortcake worthy of the name."

'Bathhouse John' for Ban on Gown Rustle

CHICAGO, May 13.—"Bathhouse John" Coughlin, alderman, to-day began a campaign to have the rustle of silk gowns included in the list of noises prohibited by city ordinance.

This decision was reached after his poetry-trimmed ordinance "regulating women's dress and censoring same" won a host of friends in the City Council last night.

The ordinance was assigned to the health committee.

Famous "C" Ranch in Texas Cut Into Farms

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 13.—The famous "C" ranch in Texas, owned by the late Nelson Morris, will be broken up and sold to small settlers. The announcement that the big ranch, which comprises four counties and is larger than Montenegro, will be sold for about $2,000,000, was made here to-day by O. W. Kerr. "C" ranch was the home of the herd of 20,000 Poll Angus cattle and it played a large part in changing the State of Texas from the home of the long horn to that of blooded stock.

SENATORS AFRAID TO 'PLAY HOOKEY'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Does the United States need currency reform legislation worse than members of the Senate will need to go to seashore resorts, Europe and other vacation spots in August?

This is the real question that is posed before President Wilson.

The President has said that he wants such legislation at this session. A large part of the Senate believes it is entitled to a vacation when it has completed consideration of the tariff bill.

It is admitted that legislation could be passed during the latter part of the session that would give those affected by the tariff the advantage of a more elastic currency system, but Senators don't want to stay in Washington all through a hot summer. They privately admit that they fear public sentiment.

President Wilson has made no secret of the fact that he will appeal to the public in support of his demand.

BOYS OF BERRY SCHOOL TO ERECT FOUR BUILDINGS

ROME, GA., May 13.—Berry School boys are going to spend their vacation in building four buildings for the Berry School for Girls. The structures will cost $8,000.

All the buildings will be constructed of logs in harmony with the distinctive style of architecture which makes the school attractive. With the completion of the buildings, Miss Martha Berry, the founder, will be at the head of a plant worth more than $100,000.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

"ARE YOU A MASON?" IS GOOD.

Miss Billy Long and company, at the Atlanta last night, presented "Are You a Mason?" to a crowded house, and it was received with almost continuous laughter.

The play is a farce. For the past three weeks the company has been handling more or less serious plays, and for that reason the presentation of a pure farce in so capable a manner was a pleasant surprise.

The distinct surprise of the play was the work of Bert Gardner, who impersonated a female French costumers' assistant, and extracted quite a lot of humor from the scene where he assists Mrs. Perry (Miss Billy Long) to fit her waist, while the indignant husband (Edwin Vail) who is aware of the gender of the assistant—who is impersonating the female as a part of the plot and with the husband's sanction—looks on in impotent rage.

Miss Long's part this week is more or less incidental, but was handled with the splendid skill of the very versatile star, and Miss Sheldon as the mother has another opportunity to show her splendid ability as a character artist.

"Are You a Mason?" is good for many a hearty laugh, and can be seen nightly (except Wednesday) and at matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

FINE BILL AT THE FORSYTH.

Cleverly plotted and written and a laugh from curtain to curtain, "The Come Back" has no difficulty in maintaining its headline position at the Forsyth this week. It is one of the really laughable college skits. Paul Dickey, programmed as a former University of Michigan football star, gets more than his share of the limelight, being not only the hero, and a very good one, but the playwright and the impresario of the little company as well. He is well supported by pretty Miss Inez Plummer, Corbett Morris, Stewart Robbins and Clay Boyd.

Billy K. Wells, in his Yiddish oraticals, is an invariable hit, and the bill has two excellent singing acts, those of Mayo and Allman and of Newhoff and Phelps. Two unusually meritorious athletic numbers are on the program this week. The Apollo Trio are well known in their bronze posing and reproductions of sculptural masterpieces. The McAleavey Marvels are comparatively new to the larger vaudeville circuits, but are making good with a clever jumping act. An amusing farce, "The New Scholar," is presented by Clarence Wilbur and a company of seven others.

ODDITIES —in the— DAY'S NEWS

EASIER TO SEE NICKEL.—A slight change has been ordered in the new nickel. The words "Five Cents" will be more clearly defined.

SHIPS PLOW THROUGH FISH.—The inland waterways connecting the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays are so filled with herring that thousands of fish are killed with the passing of each vessel.

HOME RUN FOR "BOSSIE."—During a ball game in St. Louis, a fly ball dropped within a few feet of a cow. "Bossie" beat the fielder to the sphere and gulped it down. The runner romped home.

DRUNK, SAVED SIX FAMILIES. Two drunken men, homeward bound, after making a night of it in downtown Chicago cafes, saved six families from death in a fire that destroyed a large apartment building.

ROBS LAWYER IN COURT.—A pickpocket stole $5 from the pockets of John E. Sandberg, an attorney, while he was arguing a case before Municipal Judge Goodnow in Chicago. The thief was not caught.

OFFERS HORSE FOR MONUMENT.—Believing that death is not far off, George L. Newton has advertised that he will exchange his horse, Peter, a fast trotter, for a monument to be placed on his grave in the New Britain, Conn., cemetery.

URGES $2 DIVORCE.—"A divorce license bureau, where a divorce may be obtained for the asking and a $2 fee, would be a unique remedy for the present divorce evil," said Mrs. Harry Huston, director of the Parent-Teacher Federation of Los Angeles.

CONVICTS WELCOME WARDEN. A letter, done by hand in old English type, was presented to Edmund M. Allen, newly appointed warden of the State penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., by the 1,445 prisoners, congratulating him upon his appointment.

DEATH FINDS HIDDEN WIFE.—Inviting his friend, Jan Piekos, to witness his ability as a marksman, John Staffa, of Mindot, N. Dak., shot through the end of a barrel and killed his wife. The woman hid in the barrel following a quarrel and his threats to kill her.

HOW LEGLESS MAN "RUNS."—Although her husband's legs were cut off near the thigh in a railroad accident, Mrs. Fannie Kendrick, Huntington, W. Va., testified that he "ran" after other women. She asked the court to prevent him from spending his money on affinities.

"NO" BETTER THAN "RENO."—"Better 'no' before marriage than 'Reno' after marriage," said the Rev. John Compton, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, of Washington, D. C., discussing stricter marriage laws. He declared that Paris is the middleman between us and the devil.

MORE VERSES FOR NEW TESTAMENT

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, May 13.—Some long missing verses of the New Testament are included in manuscripts of the Gospel discovered in Egypt six years ago and purchased by Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Mich., according to a study made of the Freer manuscripts by The Times.

A facsimile of the writings has been presented to the British Museum by the University of Michigan, to which Mr. Freer assigned the task of publication, and according to The Times' study, there have been found in the gospel of St. Mark several verses which occur in no other known manuscript of the New Testament, although they were known to St. Jerome, who quotes part of them.

In the Freer manuscript, after the passage in which it is said that Jesus upbraided His disciples for their unbelief, the text continues as follows:

"And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, suffers not the true power of God to be apprehended.

"Wor because, said they unto Christ, reveal at once Thy righteousness.

"And Christ said unto them, The limit of the years of the powers of Satan is (not) fulfilled, but it draweth near. (The text here and elsewhere is corrupt.)

"For the sake of those that have sinned was I given up unto death that they may return unto the truth and sin no more, but may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven."

A number of variations in other portions of the New Testament are also pointed out by The Times in the Freer manuscripts.

DRINKS POISON, THEN ASKS FOR DOCTOR; DEAD

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 13.—Cornelius Clark, who registered at the Florence Hotel here a week ago, today telephoned the clerk to send for a doctor. When Dr. B. A. Fox responded he found the young man had taken carbolic acid. He died. Three notes, one addressed to his mother in Tupelo, Miss., one to his wife in Chicago and one "to whom it may concern but keep it from newspaper men," were found.

STERILIZATION FAVORED BY CHATTAHOOCHEE JUDGE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—Declaring that the present methods of punishment do not reform criminals as they should, and that some other plan should be employed to make better people of those sent to the chain-gangs and penitentiaries, Judge S. P. Gilbert, of the Chattahoochee Circuit, has indorsed sterilization of criminals.

BARES LIFE FOR SISTER WHO SHOT HER BETRAYER

MUNCIE, IND., May 13.—Miss Doris Underwood, the school teacher accused of shooting with intent to kill Otis Fisher, displayed the first signs of emotion to-day when the prosecution exhibited the man's blood-stained necktie. Ada Underwood, eighteen-year-old sister of Doris, over whose alleged betrayal the school teacher shot Fisher, was sworn as a witness to-day. She will bare her life story to save her older sister.

CALLS BALKAN WAR BLESSING TO TURKS

Bucknam Pasha, American Admiral in Sultan's Navy, Sees Prosperity Ahead.

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, May 13. — Bucknam Pasha, the famous American, who is an Admiral in the Turkish navy, has been in London for two weeks. He has no hope that conditions in Turkey will straighten themselves out for at least a year. The various details in regard to the signing of the peace treaty, the delimitation of the frontiers and the arrangements for the payment of debts will take a least a year.

"So far as Turkey is concerned," he said, "it is a blessing in disguise for her to lose her European provinces, as they were a source of continual expense and trouble. The Turks are essentially Asiatics and their destiny now is the development of Asia Minor, which is rich in oil and mineral wealth, which simply needs intelligent working. Even on the European side close to Constinople the oil fields are of incredible richness. In fact, Turkey will be the coming oil country of Europe.

"Turkey needs money to straighten herself out," continued Bucknam Pasha, "and Europe will undoubtedly furnish it. I do not expect much from the present Turkish Government. It is essentially a military dictatorship. It answered the purpose for the time being, but must soon pass away.

"Now that peace has been restored one of the difficulties with which the Turks are confronted is that after the despotism they have not the development capacity of a government and it will be necessary to introduce trained Europeans to take charge of every department of State and teach the Turks the science of government. Financially, Turkey is in better condition than the people imagine. The entire funded debt is only about $40,000,000 and this comprises everything. There are practically no municipal debts. Constinople, in 1912, for the first time in its history, borrowed $5,000,000, yet the borrowing capacity of the city, based on European standards, is equal to the entire funded debt of the Empire."

Mutiny Threatened by Montenegrin Soldiers.

VIENNA, May 13.—Seven thousand Montenegrin troops in and near Scutari, enraged at the decision of King Nicholas to give up the Albanian city at the demand of the powers, are threatening to mutiny and commence a massacre of Albanians.

Word to this effect was received to-day from Cattaro by the official newspaper, Neue Frede Presse.

The dispatch further stated that unless the troops from the international fleet arrive at Scutari within the next 48 hours the Montenegrins will probably be out of hands.

The arrival of the international force at Scutari has been delayed by bad weather, although the city has already been surrendered to Admiral Burney, commander-in-chief of the war fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast.

Company Stops Cars In Cincinnati Strike

CINCINNATI, May 13.—Not a street car moved in Cincinnati to-day, owing to the strike tie-up, and the official of the Cincinnati Traction Company announced that until a decision is reached by the carmen as to wether they will agree to arbitration proposed by Mayor Hunt and accepted by the company, no attempt will be made to run cars.

The union members are to take up the arbitration proposition at a meeting this afternoon.

The proposition is to end the strike pending the adjustment of differences by an impartial board.

Bells Put on Poison Bottles in Hospital

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Sleigh bells tinkled in all the wards of the City Hospital to-day. There was such a merry concert as the nurses moved from place to place that the curiosity of the patients was aroused. They foundn that the bells were chained around the necks of bottles containing poisonous drugs.

Dr. Wayne Smith, superintendent, issued an order to put bells on the poison bottles after Thomas Adams, an attendant, had ben ipdicted for giving carbolic acid to a patient by mistake. The patient died.

He Wanted Cover And Took It.

Sunday he rode his machine to Marietta. It was late—very late—before he started on the trip home. So late, in fact, that when something went wrong with the engine a few miles out of town he waited in vain for assistance to come along.

Painfully he pedaled the heavy machine in to town, and dismounting before his boarding house, crept up to bed.

Heated by his exertions, he quickly fell asleep, only to awake in a few minutes, shivering with the cold. Failing to find any additional covers in his room, he arose in the darkness, quietly entered the "spare bedroom" made a hasty grab at the bedclothes and dragged them into his room.

There he wrapped himself up and blissfully sank into the arms of Morpheus.

It was not until the next morning at the breakfast table that he learned a young lady friend of the family missing the last car to her suburban home, had been placed in the "spare room" for the night.

The young lady's opinion is not of record.

Did You Ever Hear of Such Luck?

"Ever notice how some people have all the luck in the world at poker?" asked a gentleman who is noted for his love of poker.

"Coming down from New York not long ago a number of us got up a little game in the smoking room of one of the big boats. We were all old friends, but interest in the game grew until finally the stakes mounted in the hundreds.

"I was dealing one jackpot and only two men were drawing cards. The opener took one. The other hesitated—he had been lucky all evening. Then he spread his cards out face up. He had a split straight with a queen lacking.

"'Just deal me a queen, old man,' he said.

"The opener scoffed.

"'Great chance you have. I've got three of the ladies to come in on,' he said.

"'What's you bet I don't get my queen?' asked the lucky one.

"'All you want, at ten to one.'

"'Done, for a hundred.'

"I dealt. The two bet around cautiously for a minute, then the man with the split straight raised the opener $100.

"'Call your bluff,' said the opener, showing down his three queens.

"'And it's my pot,' said the other, flipping over a queen.

"That broke up the game."

He Sure Was Absent Minded.

"I've heard of absent minded persons," said the barber as he prepared his implements of torture and shoved a lather brush into his patron's mouth to hush his protests, "but the strangest case I ever knew of happened right here yesterday.

"One of our best known lawyers, who has been wearing a beard for several years, dropped in and ordered it taken off. After the operation——'

"Operation's good!" interrupted the customer, feelingly.

"——," proceeded the tonsorial sharp, unheeding. "I wouldn't have known him if I had met him in the street.

"But a stranger thing was that he didn't know himself. When he got out of the chair and looked at his face in the mirror he turned around to see who the strange chap was whose face he saw in the glass.

Ten Cars of Cattle Killed in Explosion

FORT WAYNE, IND., May 13.—The explosion of a tank car filled with oil in a freight wreck near Fort Wayne to-day blew a brakeman from the top of a car and set fire to the train. Ten carloads of cattle were burned to death.

Their frantic bellowings were heard for miles, and farmers from the country around, attracted by the bedlam, helped the train crew battle the flames.

La Vida Corsets

The coming of Mrs. Marvin at this season is a new departure.

Until now her visits have been confined to two a year—in the fall and early spring.

To have her with us now for two weeks at the beginning of the summer season is good fortune.

The corset for the light and filmy summer dresses must be right, it must give the proper support to make such dresses "hang" gracefully. And what woman does not know that summer comfort is largely a matter of the right summer corset?

It is along these lines that Mrs. Marvin will help you—this is warranted not only by her corset knowledge, but by the splendid models of LaVida Corsets she has here at her command.

A Sparkling, Brilliant Sale of Jewelry

We Do Not Know That Prices Have Ever Been Treated in Any Such Fashion

A clearaway in the Jewelry Section to-morrow!

And such a clearaway it will be!

50c Belt Pins for 10c; $1.00 to $2.50 Brooches for 25c; $3.00 Vanities for 50c; $7.50 LaVallieres for $2.00, etc., etc., etc., including watches, watch fobs, hat pins, scarf pins, fan chains and the like.

But properly to advertise such a sale as this places us in a dilemma. To do full justice to the radical reductions, the really unheard of prices, it would seem that the jewelry is not right and desirable, so prone is the mind to judge events by past experiences.

In this instance you must not!

You see below what the prices are; the jewelry that they stand for is exquisite---good-taste jewelry, chosen because it possessed the qualities that appeal to a woman's refined sense of ornamentation.

True, there are some few pieces that are a bit damaged, but they are the rare exceptions; they figured but slightly in the causes of this sale.

This list below is not so long as it might be. There are others and other pieces all reduced on the same scale.

The sale gets under way with the opening of the store.

Court "Graft" Temptations

ONLY those who have had the privilege to serve in King George of England's household can realize the temptation that is thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected officially with the court. To the credit of the members of the royal staff it has to be said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department were implicated, shows, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than can be resisted.

Punishment in such a case is swift and severe. So soon as any one joins the royal household it is made perfectly plain to him or her that any attempt to gain personal profit by reason of their position means instant dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no mater how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the mere fact that the confidence of the sovereign has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from the court.

No Orders From the Palace.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes that any one known to be connected in any way with the royal household, or possessed of any influence there, is not approached with suggestions that he might benefit his own pocket by falling in with schemes propounded to him. It is not many months since one of the best known officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department was offered a check for $3,000 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply a certain article to the King.

It was known, of course, to those who made this offer that the official in question had access to the blank forms upon which these warrants are drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of the least difficulty to get one of these signed by the then Lord Chamberlain among his daily pile of documents. The offer was indignantly rejected and the whole matter reported to Viscount Knollys, his majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm which made the proposal is still without the royal patronage and is probably wondering why no orders from Buckingham Palace come its way.

It is not always money that is the bribe offered to court officials. Social advancement is often the bait dangled before them. A case in point may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the master of the horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with the suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting young ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the political world, and openly promised the official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme he was then threatened with the lady's grave displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from his position. His retort was prompt and surprising. He went direct to his official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the household and the lady in question no longer receives invitations to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how popular one is until one is appointed to a position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from people of whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from all quarters upon those whose good fortune it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story may be told in this connection. About this time last year an extremely well dressed lady went up to an official of the Lord Chamberlain's department in Piccadilly one morning, addressed him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for having "neglected her for so long," and made him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. This done, she tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and has not to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

King Edward's Champagne.

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few months ago. He was written to by a firm of cigarette merchants hailing from America, forwarding him samples of their goods, together with the cool intimation "that they were well aware that the cigarettes were just the thing the King could smoke and enjoy," and that for every 1,000 that His Majesty ordered the official approached could have 60 per cent of the account repaid.

The reply was curt, but deserved. It was to the effect that the samples had been handed by the courtier to his chauffeur, who pronounced them rubbish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in pressing them upon his sovereign.

It was due to the late King Edward, one of the finest connoisseurs of wine who ever lived, being served with a very indifferent brand of champagne one morning that the gravest case of corruption that has ever been proved against the officials of the British court was brought to light. He asked the name of the firm who supplied it and what on earth it was doing in his cellars. He pursued this matter to some length, and ultimately found that one of his most trusted servitors had been substantially bribed to introduce this wine into the bins of the then Prince of Wales preliminary to an application for the royal warrant in the ordinary course. It is on record that the offender in this case was continued in his position just under half an hour after King Edward was informed of his identity.

Didn't Mention Names.

A number of enthusiasts, returning from an important match in New York, were playing cards in a railway carriage. Among the number was a rather shady individual who had lost one eye, but seemed to be winning freely, and time after time he scooped in the money, put down by his less fortunate comrades.

This continued for some time, when the man at the head of the table felt he could stand it no longer; so he rose in a fearful temper and remarked:

"Look ye 'ere, boys, someone here is cheatin'. Now, I don't want to mention any names, but if he does it again I'll knock his other eye out."

The SOCIAL WORLD

The largest affair of the week will be the annual reception and formal opening of the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday evening. For a number of years these receptions have been among the most brilliant social events of the summer season. They assemble the entire club membership, with their wives or friends.

The election of officers will take place at 6 o'clock. During the late afternoon the women will assemble in groups on the terrace, and following the election will be joined by club members. Through the evening there will be music by an orchestra. Refreshments and dancing will follow dinner.

The presence of a number of visitors will add to the pleasure and brilliancy of the occasion.

Among the visitors present will be Miss Mary Gaut, Nashville, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun's guest; Miss Ruth Wilson, New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest; Miss Nelson Chambliss, Chattanooga, Miss Lula Dean Jones' guest; Mrs. Edward Echols, Richmond, Miss Constance Knowles' guest; Mrs. James Hook Spratling, Macon, Mrs. Roy Collier's guest; Miss Lorna Carr, St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, Arkansas, Mrs. Bates Block's guests; Miss Gwendolyn Barnes, Uniontown, Pa., Miss Alice Vandiver's guest; Miss Ruth Hull, Mexico City, Mrs. H. L. Manson's guest; Miss Ellen Meeks, Memphis, Mrs. Robert L. Cooney's guest; Miss Anne Selden, Washington, Mrs. George K. Selden's guest, and Miss Marion Phinizy, Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Dinner Dance at Club.

There will be the usual informal dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening, which will be a happy close to the week's gayeties.

For Mrs. Byrd.

Mrs. Henry A. Leonard entertained at auction-bridge Tuesday afternoon at her home in Merritts Avenue for her sister, Mrs. S. F. Byrd, who will leave June 1 for Birmingham to live. There were 16 guests. Appropriate souvenirs were given winners of the top scores.

Mrs. Block Entertains.

Thirty young women were guests of Mrs. Bates Block Tuesday afternoon at a bridge tea, given for her house guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Vari-colored sweetpeas adorned the apartments. Dainty pieces of hand-made lingeries were given for top score and for the honor guests. The score cards bore the monogram of the hostess. Following the game tea was served on the terraced garden at the rear of Mrs. Block's residence. Guests were grouped around a circular table, surrounding a great oak tree. Decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas. The hostess and honor guests wore white lingeries.

Luncheon for Miss Wilson.

Mrs. C. A. Wood will entertain ten guests at a luncheon Wednesday at the Georgian Terrace for Miss Helen Dargan's guest, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York.

For Mrs. King.

Mrs. Edward King, who was Miss Elizabeth McLaws, of Savannah, was given an informal tea Tuesday afternoon by Miss Nita Black. There were twelve guests.

Gayeties at Fort McPherson.

A bowling party was given at Fort McPherson Monday evening by officers of the post. It was one of a series of affairs enjoyed by the residents of the fort. After the bowling, Colonel and Mrs. Styer gave a supper party.

Captain and Mrs. Cochran will give a bridge party Tuesday evening.

Embroidery Club Meets May 21.

The meeting of the North Side Embroidery Club, which was to have been held Wednesday with Mrs. Emily Trotti McCarley, has been postponed until May 21, owing to the illness of Mrs. W. T. D. Wilson, mother of two club members.

For Miss Wilson.

Mrs. Ronald Ransome will entertain at bridge Friday afternoon for Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who is visiting Miss Helen Dargan.

Miss Stoney Hostess.

Miss Josephine Stoney entertained twelve guests Tuesday morning at bridge at her home in Peachtree Street for Miss Marion Phinizy, of Augusta, a guest of Mrs. A. W. Calhoun. Paul Neyron roses were used in decorating the rooms where the card tables were placed. The prize for top score was a pair of silver slipper buckles; the consolation, a spoon, and to the guest of honor was presented a silver picture frame.

Miss Cowles Hostess.

Miss Laura Cowles will be among those having tea on the Terrace at the Driving Club Friday. She will have as her guests Mrs. Bates Block and Mrs. Block's guests, Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, of Arkansas.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The Piedmont Continental Chapter, D. A. R., will meet in the parlor of the Piedmont Hotel Thursday at 3:30 p. m. The regent's report of the national congress will be heard.

Woman's Club Elects Officers.

Mrs. A. P. Coles has been re-elected president of the Atlanta Woman's Club. Other officers are Miss Alice Baxter, vice president; Mrs. Linton Hopkins, second vice president; Mrs. Lott Warren, recording secretary; Mrs. Albert Akers, assistant secretary; Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, corresponding secetary; Mrs. M. M. Davies, treasurer, and Mrs. Arthur Powell, auditor. The business meeting was followed by the rendition of "The House of Rimmon", by Mrs. William Chase Spiker.

Miss Morgan Hostess.

Miss Elizabeth Morgan will give a box party, followed by tea, Saturday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Bates Block's guests, Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, of Arkansas.

For Miss Roberts.

Miss Nora Roberts will entertain at a shower Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at her home in Jackson Street for her cousin, Miss Eula Roberts, a bride-elect. The guests will include 25 friends.

Miss Edith Little gave a matinee party at the Forsyth for Miss Roberts. The guests were: Miss Nina Hadley, Miss Fan Witherspoon, Mrs. James Rolestone, Mrs. J. F. Nutting and Mrs. Fred Fowler.

Adam-Granberry.

Mr. and Mrs. John Adam, of Richmond, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Maude Estelle, to Mr. William C. Granberry, of College Park. The wedding will take place early in June.

Madam Pavsner at Home.

Madam Pavsner, of Jaffa, Palestine, graduate of the University of Paris and lecturer on social and economic problems, is visiting Miss Feibleman at 461 Washington Street. Madam Pavsner and her hostess will be at home informally Wednesday evening.

Reception for Seniors.

The senior class of Washington Seminary was tendered an informal party Tuesday afternoon by Miss Emma B. Scott, principal.

John and little daughter, Virginia, of North Carolina, will arrive Thursday to visit Mrs. Willis B. Parks. Mrs. Parks and her daughter will give a tea next week for their guests.

Rodin's 'The Biplane' Called Remarkable

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—Details have just come out of a remarkable work of sculpture that Rodin is now engaged on, which he calls "The Biplane."

The sculpture consists of a tall, slender, unadorned shaft surmounted by what may be described as a lengthened sphere on which twin figures stand side by side, their bodies which almost touch, curving gracefully backward. Their faces are upturned. Only one foot of each rests on the sphere, which seems to spring from beneath them in the moment of flight, and their wings are only half opened.

The two figures, which seem to aid and support each other in flight, symbolize the two wings of the biplane.

Son's Dress Too Gay for Author Rostand

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—A good deal of amusement has been caused by the difference of opinion between Maurice Rostand, son of Edmond, and the rest of the family on the subject of taste in dress.

During the whole of the time that Edmond Rostand has been staying in Paris he has not dared to be seen in the streets with his son, whose extravagant costumes and general appearance appal the shy Academician. "I'll go to wark with you," it is said he told him the other day, "but only on condition that you cut your hair and change your tailor."

MUCH EXCELSIOR MADE IN GEORGIA

Production of 6,805 Tons Is Ahead of All Southern States Except Virginia.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Georgia, producing 6,805 tons in nine plants principally from yellow pine, next to Virginia leads all Southern States in the manufacture of excelsior.

The figures are for the year 1911, as compiled by the Bureau of the Census.

Total production for the United States in 1911 was 139,830 tons, of which Virginia's output was 25,160 tons, leading all states.

Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi the Carolinas, and Texas take unimportant rank with one and two plants each.

Excelsior has been manufactured in this country for more than fifty years. It was first placed on the market in 1860, but for the ten succeeding years it was not in great demand. Since then, it has become a staple commodity for many important uses, until now over 85,000,000 feet of forest material are needed each year to meet the demand.

Excelsior might be called ribbon veneer, since it is made by cutting wood into very thin strands. The size of the strand, with the kind and color of the wood, gauges the price and grade. The thinnest grades are called wood wool. The finish product is baled by a press such as is used for baling hay, and in this form it goes to market.

The first government record of the excelsior industry is contained in the reports of the Tenth Census (1880), only the value of the raw material, amounting to $150,800, being shown. Assuming the value of a cord at the time to have been $2.50, the amount of wood consumed would have been about 60,000 cords, as compared with 142,944 used in 1911.

Cottonwood is the favorite excelsior wood, contributing 43.3 per cent. of the total amount consumed.

Yellow pine, including scrub, shortleaf, and loblolly, was reported from 11 States, Virginia using more than all the others together. In that State scrub pine was probably the species most largely supplied.

The best grades of excelsior are made from basswood. That not more of this is used is due probably to its scarcity and to the high price of the stumpage.

Other woods which were used for excelsior were spruce, buckeye, cypress, butternut, soft maple, chestnut, birch, hemlock, beach, and white cedar.

NAPOLEON'S SPOOK DESPISES GLORY

Conqueror's Spirit, at Seance, Pained by Fickleness of Fame in Earthly Life.

PARIS, May 13.—Napoleon the Great has learned in the other world that glory is a bubble, according to a communication from his shade, quoted to-day by one who heard it at a spiritist seance. Said the Conqueror's spook:

"It is very painful for spirits to note how all the evils caused by politics quickly disappear from the consciousness of people. The glory you have acquired is soon forgotten or only vaguely remembered; but you cannot be blamed for forgetting glory, because everything called glory is in reality only a great monstrosity toward humanity.

"Your monstrous earthly politics are nearly always inspired by the personal ambitions of a few individuals. It is unpardonable wickedness for men to warn people that their vitality in relation to liberty is at stake.

"These are only words used to influence great masses. Those uttering them know that nobody can deprive the world of what God created."

It is the sanction for an amateur event, one in which any owner of a motor car may participate, be he a seasoned driver or not.

Two Classes for Amateurs.

The amateur event will be run in two classes. The first class provides for cars of a piston displacement up to 300 cubic inches and the second 301 and over. This will make, as far as the committee can judge, a fair and equitable adjustment.

The handsomest prizes of the entire event will be offered to the amateur drivers and all that is necessary to qualify in this event is for an aspirant to telephone E. H. Eleby at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. A special concession has been made to the amateur drivers of $3 entry fee and $2 license tax.

Officials Are Named.

The following officials have been named for the meet:

Technical Committee—Automobiles, Fred Steele, F. C. Skinner, A. R. Almond; motorcycles, H. Gilbert, Dove Wylie, Mr. Schulenberger.

Starters—K. T. McKinstry, L. S. Collier.

Referee—W. G. Humphrey.

Judges—L. E. Bissell, C. L. Elyea, T. H. Smart, R. S. Abbott.

Clerk of Course—E. H. Elleby.

Timers and Umpires—D. T. Bussey, R. N. Reed, R. J. Slear.

Gasoline Tester—Ed L. Wight, Jr.

M'GRAW ASKS WAIVERS ON OLD DOC CRANDALL

NEW YORK, May 13.—Word comes by the way of Cincinnati that John J. McGraw, who controls the destinies of the Giants, has asked for waivers on Otis Crandall, the Indiana farmer, who has prescribed so effectively in the past for many sick games, that he earned the name of "Old Doctor" Crandall.

The rescue pitcher extraordinary and sometimes great pinch hitter, has found it hard to get into condition this year, but the news that McGraw has decided to part with him will come as a shock to the fans who have a warm place in their hearts for the player who never quailed, no matter what the odds he was called on to face. It is just possible that McGraw has asked for waivers to rouse Crandall and will hold tight if some other club jumps at the chance to get him for $1,500.

INGERTON, BOUGHT BY COLONELS, TO PLAY THIRD

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 13.—The purchase of Outfielder Scotty Ingerton from the Indianapolis American Association club by Louisville was announced here to-day. The purchase price was said to be about $3,000. Ingerton will be tried at third base by the Colonels.

LELIVELT LET OUT BY NORTHERN LEAGUE CLUB

MINNEAPOLIS, May 13.—The unconditional release of Pitcher "Bill" Lelivelt, of the local Northern League team, was announced to-day. Lelivelt was turned over to the Northern League by Manager Cantillon, of the local American Association club, this spring.

For a Red Blotchy Skin

The Remarkable Action of a Famous Remedy and Some Facts About It.

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream and the influence of these properties is that of an antidote. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SCORING RULES SILLY

By Percy H. Whiting.

AT last, after a vast number of years, the scoring committee of the National Baseball Writers Association has met and taken some action—though I can't say I think so much of it, now that they have done it.

The committee appointed by the Baseball Writers' Association to clear up points in the scoring rules so as to bring about more uniformity has held its first meeting and adopted a number of recommendations to be presented to the National Commission and through that body to the playing rules committee of the big leagues for action.

The committee was unanimously in favor of the much discussed plan to giving a hit to the batsman who advances a base runner on an infield jab when the batsman reaches first and no error is made on the play. It is argued that the good points of this method of scoring will outweigh any defects it might have and that it was the logical and equitable way to score the play. Instructions already have been issued to National and American official scorers to record the play as a base hit.

The wording of several of the rules was clarified. One made it clear that one assist, and one only, shall be credited to a player who takes part in the run-down of an opponent. A fielder might have two assists in a double play.

Some scorers have been in doubt as to whether or not to charge an error in case a runner is caught napping but gets back to his base because the man who takes the throw drops the ball. The verdict was that in case the runner would have been out if the fielder had held the ball the latter should be charged with an error.

* * *

TAKE now this rule that gives a batter a base hit when he grounds to the infield and an attempt to force another man at second, third or home goes wrong.

In many cases the jab will be a feeble thing, on which the batter would be thrown out a mile if the play were made to first. But because of the happening that there is a runner on bases who draws the throw the batter gets a hit for it in the box score.

In other words a man can come up in the first inning, ground to third base and go out by three steps at first, getting a time at bat and nothing else. The next time up he can exactly duplicate the blow but the throw will be made to second, the other runner will beat the ball there—and the batter gets a hit. That's about as logical as——as,——as might be expected.

* * *

TAKE the matter of giving a player only one assist on a run-down. That's absolutely wrong. Every time a man handles a ball in such a run-down he takes the chance of making an error. Therefore he should get an assist if he performs the feat without making a bungle.

If you don't give the man an assist for every time he handles the ball you should not give him an error for any miscue he makes after his first handling of the sphere.

If that rule sticks a player will jump into a run-down, handle the ball once and then let George do it—for after that time he is in constant danger of acquiring an error without the slightest chance of getting any credit in the box scores for his further efforts.

More fine logic.

TINKER SAYS DODGERS WILL LAND NEAR TOP

NEW YORK, May 13.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, to-day predicted that the Dodgers would finish well up in the first division.

"They've got a team without a weak spot," declared Tinker, "and the game they are playing now isn't any flash in the pan work—it's just the sort of game they'll play all season, barring accidents."

BRADLEY-COULON GO IS EASY FOR JOHNNY

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—In one of the greatest contests seen in the city of Philadelphia, Johnny Coulon, bantam weight champion of the world, easily defeated Frankie Bradley, of Philadelphia, last night.

From the sound of the gong it was apparent that Coulon had the greater science and was far the stronger of the two. He defeated Bradley in every round of the six.

"CAN'T you play a little faster?" said a magnate to a team.
"There ain't no one behind us, and that's no idle dream.
See how eagerly the lobsters and the pinheads boot the ball;
Say, ain't you guys agonna ever win a game o' ball?

"You can really have no notion how delightful it would be
If you tramps would get together and win some games for me."
But the team replied, "We got no luck," and gave a look depressed.
When they got to hitting, the breaks would change, they guessed.

"Just can that stuff about the breaks," the magnate glum replied.
"I need the coin, you grab some games, or you'll all take a ride.
The further from the pennant the nearer to the bush.
Just get this straight, you pull your freight or get up with the push."

JOE BIRMINGHAM OUT OF BATTLE FOR MONTH

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps will not be seen in action for all of a month, if then, for he is suffering to-day from a broken bone in the right ankle, acquired while sliding for second base in the ninth inning of the game here yesterday. His right foot caught in the iron that holds the bag in place, and it bent, snapping the bone.

Birmingham will direct the Nap team on crutches for a month or more. "Buddie" Ryan will play center field in his place.

This is the Naps' second mishap of the New York series, as Larry Lajoie can not grip his bat to-day because of the two bones broken Sunday by Klepfere's shoot.

LLOYD BREAKS RECORD IN FIFTY-MILE CONTEST

LONDON, May 13.—The world's amateur running record for 50 miles was beaten yesterday by E. W. Lloyd, who ran the distance in 6 hours, 13 minutes and 8 seconds at the Stamford Bridge athletic grounds.

The former record was made in 1885 by J. F[illegible]a and was 4 minutes and 15 s[illegible]ds slower.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Articles were signed to-day for a finish wrestling bout on May 19 between Zbyszko, the giant Pole and Cazeaux, the Italian champion. The winner probably will be pitted against Gotch, if the world's champion really can be induced to come out of retirement.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 13.—"What's the matter with the Giants?" friends and rooters inquired from me when the club returned from Philadelphia, after the unsuccessful series.

"We ran into good pitching, the best in the league right now, and some of the games were kicked away by thick-skulled playing," was my reply.

"Does John really say anything to the players when they make mistakes?" a man who calls McGraw by his first name only when he is not around asked me.

"He mentions them sometimes," said I. "For instance, an outfielder missed a foul fly in that Philadelphia series which would have won us a game if he had caught it. There was a man on second base at the time.

"'Why didn't you get that ball,' said McGraw to him when he came to the bench. 'You were slow going after it.'

"'Well,' replied the outfielder, 'I was trying to watch the runner on second out of the tail of my eye to see whether he started, and I thought I could get a double play.'

* * *

THERE were two out when he went after the ball. McGraw dweit on the caliber of that player's intelligence for a minute or two. Yes, sometimes he speaks of little things like that when he feels talkative. He had many "a bone" to thrash over with the various players when he went into executive session with them in the clubhouse after those games, too. That is when he talks it over—in private.

The Giants are playing good ball now. They ought to climb, and climb rapidly—particularly on this Western diet, which for the first time in years should prove to be nutritious. It used to be the hardest in the league to swallow. The New York pitching staff was off for a time there. Tesreau has not really acquired his stride yet, although he was better in a game he started against Cincinnati last week until he banged out a three-bagger with the bases full and ran all the "pep" out of himself getting his big bulk around to third. After that, somebody had to be sent to pitch for him. Marquard is over his case of tonsilitis, and should be around in shape again very soon. He did pretty well against Philadelphia last week, except for one inning. The team was not hitting the ball hard in Philadelphia, but this was not due so much to weak batting as superior pitching. The men are all in good shape now, with the exception of John Murray, who caught a little cold and has a stiff neck. He will be able to turn his head again very soon now, and should be in the game this week. McGraw is plentifully supplied with substitute outfielders, but he refuses to let any of them go. Stallings is very anxious to get hold of "Josh" Devore because of his speed. "Josh" runs and hides every time he hears his name mentioned in connection with Boston. He says the climate up there does not agree with him.

* * *

AS I predicted, the Western clubs have found the Eastern brand of pitching very superior to that on exhibition in the West this year.

The Cubs had a tough time in Brooklyn, where they were unable to roll up the big scores to which they had grown accustomed in the West. They met good pitching. Pittsburg had trouble enough in Boston. I expect to see the Cubs start to drop very soon now. It is necessary for them to make too many runs to win a ball game, and the pitchers all around the league, like wine and shoes, will improve as the season ages. If you have observed the scores, you will find that Cheney has worked in more than twenty games already this spring. If Evers had a couple more good workmen in the box he would make a great fight for the pennant, because there is no fault to be found with the rest of the club. It is a team of hardened, shrewd veterans.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Joe Levy, manager of Joe Rivers, announced yesterday that he does not intend to let his protege box again until July 4. "I have got that date at Tom McCarey's Vernon arena for Joe," said Levy, "and I think I would be taking a big chance of losing it if I should match Rivers in the East and take a chance of being outpointed by one of those clever fellows."

* * *

Jack Britton is another crack Eastern lightweight who is going to California to try and force Willie Ritchie to meet him in a 20-round battle on July 4.

* * *

Britton and his manager, Danny Morgan will leave about May 30 for the coast where Morgan will have Britton box two men within two weeks, after which he will post a forfeit of $2,500 and issue a challange to match Britton against Ritchie.

* * *

"Digger" Stanley, the bantamweight champion of England, and Eddie Moran, the clever English bantam, are to fight after all for the English title.

* * *

They were matched a few days ago to battle for twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club of London on June 2 for $500 side bet, a purse of $1,750 and the Lord Lonsdale belt. They were to have fought on March 31, but Morgan could not make the weight and the match was called off.

* * *

Jimmy Grant, the Chicago bantamweight, who has ben here for over a month, left last night for Jacksonville, Fla., where he expects to get on with a couple of local boys. Jimmy is one of the best bantams seen around these parts in some time.

* * *

While here he stopped Spider Britt and held Kid Young to a draw, despite the fact that Young outweighed him eight pounds. Grant expects to return here in about three weeks.

* * *

Buck Crouse, the Pittsburg middleweight, has started training for his 6-round bout with Blink McCloskey at Pittsburg, May 19.

* * *

With shrewd handling such as Frank Moran is sure to get, being that Dan Ketrick has him in charge, there will be big money for Moran during the next six months. McKetrick's protege has shown as much as McCarty or any other big fellow in the game to-day. His great exhibition against Luther with a broken hand is still being talked of by New York fans.

* * *

Eddie Johnson, who recently held Frankie Whitney to a draw, was matched yesterday to box Bobby Waugh in a 10-round affair at Denver, May 21.

* * *

Johnny Lore is after Willie Ritchie. Lore's manager, Walter Burke, says that the St. Nicholas Club of New York, will stage the event June 7, if Ritchie agrees to the match.

* * *

Frank Loughrey, the Philadelphia fighter, will leave June 3 for Australia, where he is signed for five fights.

* * *

The Garden Club of New York will stage two 10-round bouts Friday night. Mike Gibbons and Tommy Connors meet in one and Tommy Gibbons and Young Mike Donovan in the other.

* * *

Soldier Kearns and Boer Rodel will clash in a 10-round battle in New York on May 23. They meet in the semi-final to the Jim Flynn-Jim Coffey encounter.

* * *

George Carpentier has been guaranteed $10,000 to box Bombardier Wells at Paris, June 28. The bout has been clinched.

* * *

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, started training yesterday for his 10-round go with Frank Klaus at Indianapolis, May 29. This will be the third meeting between the pair. Frank holds a 20-round decision over Dillon on the coast while Jack is said to have shaded the Pittsburg boy in a short scrap at New York.

Jack Britton, who has received nearly $15,000 for 29 fights in the past eight months, was matched yesterday to box Gil Cross in a 10-round set-to at New York on May 21.

FODDER FOR FANS

Mike Donlin, the slugging outfielder, who has just completed a vaudeville engagement, wafted into New York and announced that he'd like to play with the Giants again. He is on the reserve list of the Phillies.

Milan, of the Senators, is after the American League pilfering record again. To date he has stolen sixteen bases.

* * *

Two doubles a triple and a homer were the contributing factors in the Giants' 5 to 1 victory over the Cubs.

* * *

"Smoky" Joe Wood, who led the American League pitchers last year, went in against the Tigers yesterday in the closing rounds and the Detroiters promptly batted the wadding out of him.

* * *

"Lefty" Russell, of the White Sox, held the Athletics to three hits yesterday, but failed to win.

* * *

The Brooklyn ball club's receipts to date for the 23 regular and four exhibition games are estimated at slightly over $100,000. Last season the receipts up to this time were about $25,000.

* * *

Manager Dahlen, of the Dodgers, sort of sassed Umpire Rigler yesterday and was sent to the bench.

* * *

"Bobby" Groom was at his best yesterday and the Senators scored a shutout victory over the Browns.

* * *

Edgar Willett says that after a runner has knocked the ball over the fence he should not waste his time rounding the bases but should return to his seat and save time. That's the idea—save the time. The cooks are clamoring for early suppers—so let's have 'em.

* * *

This is a joyous day for New York sport writers. The Giants, Yankees and Brooklyns won yesterday, and no alibis were necessary.

* * *

John Evers, manager of the Cubs, voiced his objections to a decision made by Umpire Orth yesterday, was chased from the field and may draw a long suspension.

GLAD DAYS.

The melancholy days have gone,
The saddest of the year.
The wrestling game is pale and wan—
Its final gasp is near.

The wrestler now will give us peace,
And sail across the main;
His manager also will cease
From giving us a pain.

Soon we can hie to yonder park
And see a baseball game,
While wintry winds from noon till dark
Coagulate our frame.

Several newspapers inform us that the Tigers have acquired Pipp. A study of recent box scores leads to the same conclusion.

Finis Wilson is the name of a youthful pitcher sent to the Southern League by the Naps. He may be a promising young man, but that is no name for a beginner.

Still, if George Stovall loses his job in St. Louis he will be welcomed by Spitzbergen in the Polar League.

J. Jeffries arises to remark that he will not be anybody's sparring partner. Having once enacted the role of a punching bag, he knows how it feels.

While those Sox and Giants are touring the universe it behooves them to pause in Africa so as to compare the American and African brands of ivory.

RASSLING.

You may pan, you may hammer the game if you will,
But thousands of suckers will fall for it still.

Hugh Jennings will now take up the education of Mr. Pipp where Charles Dana Gibson left off.

The consensus of opinion is that Billy Smith is suffering from a compound fracture of the disposition.

TOM M'CAREY'S PET PRESERVES TO BE INVADED

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Tom McCarey, who has been operating as a boxing promoter in this section of the country for years without opposition, to-day confronts a rival organization.

Harry Gilmore, fight promoter, fight manager and handler of the knights of the padded mitt, is to be his rival.

Backed by big money powers and assured by the Vernon authorities every right that McCarey enjoys, Harry will soon begin to lay plans for the erection of an open air arena down by the beach.

Gilmore will throw open his new club to the public on July 4. A certified check of $20,000 has been placed in the bank here to enable him to work out his plans. Harry is matchmaker of the organization, with William Aldrich president. None but high class matches will be staged.

A contest between Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers for the world's lightweight championship is the opening card desired.

A flat offer of $17,000 has been telegraphed to Ritchie. Negotiations will be taken up with Rivers immediately.

"That covers the situation," said Gilmore. "Our hats are in the ring and they are going to stay there."

Articles of incorporation will be filed inside the next three days.

BATTERS CAN BE DEVELOPED SAYS MEYERS

By John (Chief) Meyers.

BATTING ability is the high art of baseball. True skill with the stick hides many a minor fault. Brilliancy in all other lines pales into nothingness if not backed by at least average hitting power.

There is a so-called axiom in our profession that "batters are born, not made." I disagree with such logic. There is the same opportunity for improvement in batting as in fielding or base running.

Not every one, of course, no matter how studious, may become a Ty Cobb or a Honus Wagner. And it is a mighty good thing for the pitchers and catchers that this is so. Few athletes have the lightning speed of Cobb, which enables him to beat plenty of infield taps which would be easy outs against average runners. Few again have the muscular power of Wagner, which enables him to drive the ball with rifle-like velocity.

300 Notch Real Feat.

When one stops to consider conditions, a .300 batting average strikes home as real achievement. It means hitting safely three times in every ten chances.

The batsmen, single-handed, must fight an army of obstacles.

In the first place he has a perfectly round stick with which to change the direction and propel a perfectly round ball thrown from a distance of 65 feet with all the force of human power.

He has approximately half a second from the time the ball leaves the pitcher's fingers until it is up to him. In that half-second he must swing his bat so that the curved surfaces of the two objects (bat and ball) meet fairly in the middle of their respective lines of flight.

Now there are nine agile and active opponents so distributed throughout the playing field that any sort of high fly means certain retirement.

If the batter hits a fraction of an inch over the ball he sends it down to the ground where the speed is checked, and where it is generally quite easy for one of the infielders to intercept it.

Add to these complications a skilled pitcher who can make the ball vary many ways in its flight to the plate, and that little half second of grace dwindles almost into an infinity. The wonder then is that so many reach the select class.

Chief Tells Secret.

Still there are certain principles of batting science that will help to overcome these obstacles. The most important, to my mind, is that of meeting the ball in front of the body. This is no more than the swing of the player who is termed the natural hitter. Zimmerman, Wagner, Lajoie, Doyle and Cobb all employ the style.

Some of them may do it all unconsciously. I know I did for several years before I joined the Giants. McGraw pointed out to me the reason. He drills and drills this idea into his men.

Al Bridwell is a player that I would term a "made" hitter. In a pinch he was one of our most trusty batsmen, for he was sure to play every shade in his own favor. Bridwell became proficient by learning to meet the ball in front of himself.

Uppercutting Is Fatal.

In the old days great hitters, like McGraw and Jennings, used to run out to meet the ball before it broke. The present rule about staying in the batters' box prevents this. But the principle may be applied through the medium of the natural swing.

The swing should be made in a horizontal arc. The bat naturally has a tendency to propel the ball directly in its course.

An "uppercutter" is a batsman whose thrust ascends after the fashion of fungo hitters. This style of hitter usually raises high flies or pop-ups, and can never hope to become proficient.

A downward stroke is practically as weak, for by it it is practically impossible to hit the ball with speed along the ground.

MAY BATTLES BRING HEAVIES TO LAST ROUND

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—In the balance of his journey toward the championship goal Gunboat Smith will have to do principally with cowboys. The rough riders he has to work past are Luth McCarty and Jess Willard and if he can escape being thrown, roped and branded he will be in a position to write champion heavyweight of the world after his name.

At least that is the way the heavyweight outlook looms at present. That the Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard bout at Coffroth's Eighth Street arena on May 17 will be the semi-final in the blue ribbon tourney is universally admitted. But that Luther McCarty will be the man the winner will meet is not so sure. Luther is to hook up with Arthur Pelky at Calgary on May 24 and while it does not look as though McCarty is endangering his title, you can't always tell.

Pelky is the big husky who recently held his own with Tommy Burns and vanquished Andy Morris. That may not be much, to be sure, but it suggests that Mr. Pelky is "a buildin' up."

There are no really finished products among latter day white hopes and the sporting world is apt at any time to ring with the praises of some new heavyweight who was scarcely known twenty-four hours before.

Willard Defeated Pelky.

It's strange how Pelky's fortunes have been linked with those of Jess Willard and Lute McCarty. Willard defeated Pelky in New York. At another time Pelky was to box Luther McCarty and failed to put in an appearance. Willard took his place at short notice and, in the opinion of Eastern sport writers, outboxed McCarty. Now McCarty and Pelky are to meet at Calgary.

The month of May will surely clear the way for a decisive championship encounter. The Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard and Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky bouts are only a week apart and there should be little difficulty in signing the two victors for a Fourth of July match. It is understood that Promoter Coffroth has his eye on the attraction and it is to be hoped he lands it, for it will be the biggest thing that has happened in pugilistic circles for a long time.

O'CONNOR IS TICKLED; HE WINS HIS LAW SUIT

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Jack O'Connor, veteran ball player, was happy to-day over the court's ruling yesterday that the St. Louis American League club must pay him the $5,000 salary which he claimed was due him. O'Connor was demoted as manager of the club before the expiration of his contract.

Heisman Ranks Alabama Second Dobson Works Miracle at Clemson

By J. W. Heisman.

THE first two games of the Tech-Georgia series were the big noise in college circles last week. They did not have much bearing on the championship no matter how they came out, but they were of special interest to all Georgians and of some interest to all Southerners, nevertheless.

No matter how grand a record either of these teams may make or how punk, up to the time when they don the gloves for each other, everybody has come to understand that it is going to be a battle to the frayed and frazzled finish between the two despite any seeming disparities.

Over and over again this has happened in the past, and the apparently weaker team has overthrown the stronger to the bewilderment of all followers of the college game in the South. And realizing this to be a fact, as they more and more are doing, people in larger and larger numbers each year find it well worth while to cut out some other attraction and arrange their affairs so they can go and see the Tech-Georgia games, whether they take place in Athens or in Atlanta. That is the explanation of the huge crowds that last Friday and Saturday witnessed these contests in Athens. On these two days all previous Athens records for baseball attendance were badly shattered, notwithstanding it appeared to the man without bias that Georgia was bound to make a runaway affair of both games. Those who remembered their baseball history, though, couldn't see it that way, and made sure of being on hand when the factory whistle blew.

Nor were they disappointed, for if ever there were two hard-fought and evenly-contested games anywhere, these were they. Both games were lost by Georgia by a margin of one run only, and in both the Athenians had men on bases when their last batter was retired in the last half of the ninth inning.

What now about the comparative strength of the two teams? Before these games the records of the two teams seemed to have settled that matter pretty thoroughly. But when it comes to the all-around effectiveness and playing ability of the two teams right now—as they played yesterday and as they would play to-day—that may be a very different matter.

Despite the promising nature of the new material on hand this spring at Tech, it early became evident that seven new men on the team meant a badly balanced organization, and one that was bound to get some bad bumps from first to last before the season was over. With this fact recognized, high aims for a whole season's record were ruthlessly abandoned, and every word and plan and step of action was bent toward whipping the green team in such condition of preparedness and fitness as would result in their giving a good account of themselves in the Georgia series alone. That result has, seemingly, been attained by the Yellow Jackets, and that is the season why they appear to-day to be a match for the Red and Black, whereas a month ago they would have been mince pie for their rivals.

* * *

BUT do not be misled into believing that the tables are turned to any such extent as to make of Georgia mince, or any other kind of pie for Tech. Far, very far, from it.

Tech won the first games by a hair's breadth only; and perhaps they have good old side pal Mr. O'Confidence to thank for helping them to even this much margin.

* * *

PRAISE, more praise, and yet again praise, is what is overdue the Clemson team and Coach Dobson for the way they have fought their way to the light out of dark wilderness and triumphed over teams that were whole laps ahead of them in form and condition when the season opened. Two out of three from Auburn on the latter's own playground is a glorious finish to a game, up-hill season. And I cannot forbear to cite the fact, unknown to many in this section, that besides winning ten straight from the colleges of South Carolina, the Tigers wrested a 4-3 victory from the University of North Carolina and played Trinity a 14-inning 3-3 game at Durham. This certainly puts them up in the running in the estimation of all fair-minded fans.

By Way of Aftermath

A few points that neither the box scores, nor yet the detail of the games, show of the recent Tech-Georgia battles may be worth jotting down.

* * *

I never saw amateur pitchers who can wheel and throw to second any quicker or more accurately than do Corley and Morris. They must have put in hours and hours of practice to have acquired this precision; it was very fine.

* * *

* * *

Wootten, the Tech freshman, grandly justified my judgment in putting him back into the game as a varsity man in spite of his failure to get a single hit in the entire first eight college games in which he played. Who shall say how much his home run (the only one of the series) the first time he stepped to the plate didn't have to do with the winning of both games by Tech?

* * *

Ginn is the fastest and most finished base runner I have seen in the colleges in many, many years. He gets away with it at any old stage of the game, and no matter how we lay for him.

* * *

On Friday Tech had six men in the game who were playing their first year of varsity ball, and on Saturday they had seven such in the line up. All but one of the ten who played are due to be back next year, and also every last one of the present scrub players; so that Tech men think they have little cause to worry over next year's troubles if not even a single new man comes in.

* * *

To my mind, the umpiring of both the officials was splendid work. I am thoroughly convinced that the final outcome of neither game was affected, or would have been affected, by the changing of any close decisions that came up. Messrs. Harmon and Holland are two fine umpires, two clever gentlemen, two absolute sportsmen: they typify the best traditions of college life and college athletics.

* * *

In another year Amazon should size 9 to thoroughly fill Holliday's shoes at first base. This youngster has even more natural reach and stretch than Holliday, and he is fast picking up in every way. Had McWhorter not been playing unusually deep for him, every one of his three terrific drives to center in Friday's game should have been good for a home run. As he himself puts it, though, all he accomplished was to give Bob a chance to be a hero. (Never mind, "Amy," I am sure Bob appreciates the courtesy.)

* * *

Bob McWhorter is surely one good base runner, and he is as sure and graceful in his handling of fly balls as the cleverest professionals.

* * *

During the past three seasons Fax Montague has made a success of every position in which he has been placed. Now he is a second baseman, and a good one. "Fax" is also a real captain; one of the very best Tech has ever had.

* * *

You'll have to hand it to both Pitts and Eubanks for pulling themselves up from positions of only mediocre reputation to where they have earned the undying gratitude of their college mates. With both it was a case of tightening their belts and their courage up to the very last hole, then "up and at 'em," and, finally, of "staying" with the opposition till the cows came home.

JOHNSON STICKS FINE ON TWO MORE PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 13.—President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has fined Catcher Nunnamaker, of the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Olson, of Cleveland, $25 each for their fist fight in Cleveland last week.

President Johnson said the reports of the fight were greatly exaggerated, and that these two players were the only ones involved in the trouble. He said he obtained a straight story of the trouble from the two players themselves.

SWEDES WILL SEND TEAM TO 1915 MEET

NEW YORK, May 13.—A letter received here from Sweden to-day stated that the Swedes will be represented at the Panama-Pacific games in 1915. They will send over a strong team.

MATTY HAS PITCHED 47 INNINGS WITHOUT ALLOWING FREE PASS

NEW YORK, May 13.—Running along with Walter Johnson in his efforts to pitch a record number of scoreless innings is Christy Mathewson, who is setting a mark for perfect control that may never be equaled.

The star twirler of the New York Giants finished his forty-seventh inning yesterday afternoon without a base on balls. Matty has given only two passes this year. That was in the first game he pitched against Boston on April 17.

Matty has won five games and lost one so far this season. He was beaten by the Phillies on May 3, the score being 3 to 2, two men being out when the winning run was scored.

Willard Is Hard Man to Handle Nervousness May Wreck Chances

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 13.—Unless Jess Willard curbs his inclination to extreme nervousness as the day of an important ring battle draws nigh, he is apt to wreck all of the good chances he has of getting to the top of the heap of white hopes that are struggling for recognition at the present time. This is the straight opinion of Charley Cutler, Willard's old friend, and the man who is chiefly responsible for getting the elongated Kansas fighting proposition a good start on the pugilistic sea. Cutler knows the tall Westerner better than anybody else in the world, and while he is still friendly with Willard and eager to see him win, which would justify all of the nice things Cutler has said about him, he fears his one weakness will be his undoing.

* * *

TOM JONES has the Willard affairs in hand right now, and is training him in person for the affair with Gunboat Smith in Jim Coffroth's arena a week from Tuesday. Coast critics are saying some nice things about Jess and the form he is showing out there in his preparation, and that is what moved Cutler to speak at this time. "Knowing Willard as well as I do, I can speak freely of him," the big wrestler-fighter told me the other day. "There is one weakness that he will have to overcome. That is his extreme nervousness the day before a battle and on the day of the event. I wouldn't call it fear exactly, because I have seen some of the gamest men in the world quake as if they had the ague just before stripping to go into the ring. It is merely a high-strung condition, and unless he gets over it his chances of becoming a real star will go glimmering.

* * *

"IT is my honest opinion that Willard is as game, if not gamer, than any of them among the big fellows right now. At heart he knows he can defeat all the Gunboat Smiths they can lead to him, but the fact remains that Willard is a terrible fretter. He gets morbid and morose as the fight draws near, and this is followed by a state of acute nervousness that is apt to completely unfit him for a hard battle. Once he is in the ring and the real work begins, Willard is all right.

* * *

"UNLESS Smith gets him quick and gets him in the right spot, I believe Willard will whip him nicely. Further, it is my opinion that if he does this, he is apt to enter the ring with Luther McCarty at a later date and be made an equal favorite with the big man from Nebraska. I wouldn't venture an opinion on that fight right now, preferring to see how Willard comes out with Smith. If he can whip the Gunboat he will have a lot of confidence, and then he will be a mighty hard man to beat."

CRACKERS CAN HOLD MEMPHIS EVEN—J. AGLER

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 13.—"King" Brady will be the selection to twirl the second game for the Crackers, with Graham receiving. Bernhard will probably use Kissinger and Seabaugh.

The Crackers lost the opener here. The Turtles come from rear and overcame five runs obtained by us.

Chappelle made his debut in a Cracker uniform and was knocked off of the rubber. Furchner, who succeeded him, was treated very roughly by the Turtles.

The Crackers hit the ball hard, but it seems lately that the luck breaks with the other team. The Crackers scored all the runs in one inning and was not able to score again. The necessary wallop could not be produced.

Chappelle had everything at first, but weakened, and the Turtles romped on him, which will win many ball games for them.

"King" Brady should win his game to-day with his steadiness and control. He is the kind of a pitcher that will win from this club.

The Turtles are drawing well. They have big crowds and are supporting a good team. We should at least break even here, and that would give us an even chance to keep above the .500 mark on this road trip.

The Return of Grandmother's Hat

Described by Olivette, The Georgian's Fashion Expert

THE hat of grandmother's day is with us again, with all the charm of modern improvements.

If you have an old leghorn, cut it down and bind the edge of the brim with wide shadow or burgundy lace.

Tilt the hat to the proper angle with one of the "halos" we have so long discarded and bank the flat crown with forget-me-nots or any dainty little flower.

Here and there a wee bunch of roses in contrasting color add an effective touch, and the soft taffeta streamers pendant from beneath the brim sound the final not of becomingness and follow the latest Persian fancy.

A Fetching Model.

The top picture shows a fetching model developed in black satin, with a tiny cord of pale gray satin at the edge of the slightly rolled brim.

At the left of the back are two graceful, long-fronted plumes of uncurled ostrich.

Black satin ribbon tied in a loose knot holds the brim in front, encircles the sloping crown and falls in two "follow-me-lads" streamers from the even loops of a large bow directly at the base of the plumes in the center of the back.

In these days of bright coloring the home milliner may copy this becoming hat at small expense if she owns two feathers long useless because of the popularity of black and white.

UNCLE JOHN'S PROPHECY

To-day's Short Story

"UNCLE JOHN always did have luck with him," said the man with the big black cigar. "Don't tell me that a man can prophesy disaster and always get away with it unless there is some supernatural agency of evil helping him.

"I've always been fond of Uncle John and his aversion to automobiles has pained me deeply since I own three, and with the purchase of each one his bewildered wrath at me has increased. Each time a machine was added to my garage the mails have sizzled with the letters from Uncle John remonstrating with me. His idea of an automobile is that it is a diabolical contrivance straight from the regions below, and that those who risk their lives in one should be restrained in an asylum for the feeble minded.

Nearly Wept.

"The last time I went East on business I hired a touring car and a driver in order that I might cover ground quickly, and as Uncle John lived in the city I was visiting, I naturally went up to see him. The first time I called he nearly wept over me because he had witnessed my arrival in the big red car. He had visiting him his brother from Maine, whose ideas of automobiles were even more primitive than Uncle John's—but Uncle Henry had some excuse, for he lives in a region where there aren't any automobiles.

"Each of them called upon the other to witness that I was a reckless young thing and probably would meet my doom before I left the city.

"I resolved to put an end forever to such foolishness and to show Uncle John that automobiles were harmless things that would eat out of one's hand if properly approached. So the next day I came again in my big red car and with an expression of firmness and resolve.

"'Uncle John,' I said, without any preliminaries, 'I have come to take you and Uncle Henry out for a ride in my machine. Get on your things.'

"After they had fainted and been revived we thrashed the matter out. They had been strong men in their youth, but they were no match for me now, so I won out. I really felt sorry for Uncle Henry as he went trembling out to the machine.

"'Remember, George,' he said, 'that my will and other valuable papers are down in the trust vaults. I have the feeling that something dreadful is going to come of this, but it is all due to your persistence. I am going because I can't help myself. I never expect to return to my comfortable fireside, but I suppose I have lived the allotted span, and perhaps the good Lord chooses to have me go this way. It seems hard, though.'

"'Of course, I laughed at him. I told him airily that positively nothing could happen and that I expected that he and Uncle Henry would be buying a car themselves by another week.

"'Well, I started out with those two timorous old men, honestly resolved to give them the time of their lives and banish their absurd fears. I know all about cars, and my driver was an extra good one, so I guess what happened was my fault.

"I told him to turn a corner an instant later than I should have told him. The steering gear locked, I think, or else it was just that little imp of bad luck. My lovely red car choked, gurgled and then shot straight at the curb, which it skimmed over as lightly as a bird. Then it absent-mindedly hit the coping between the sidewalk and the lawn, and as it was only an imitation stone coping, it merely brushed it aside without breaking it.

Snapped the Tree.

"Continuing our program, we gouged across a fine lawn and aimed at a choice tree that apparently had been recently set out, because its throat was still tied up in burlap. We snapped that tree in two as though it were a straw, and with the top part dangling coquettishly above Uncle John and Uncle Henry and the radiator of the machine perched rakishly on the mangled stump we came to a pause.

"'About a million people surrounded us at once. I didn't even look at Uncle John and Uncle Henry. I just faded out of that car. They were on the street car traveling back home before the driver and I got the car off the tree stump. I had to hunt them up, though, to see how their nerves stood the shock.

"'Did you do anything in reparation for the frightful damage you created?' Uncle Henry asked me in awful tones.

"'Yes, uncle,' said I, 'I pushed the coping back into place and stuck it down with a postage stamp, and as the people who lived in the house were not at home to receive my apologies I went to the corner florist and got a bunch of flowers, which I tied to the mangled tree stump.'

"But wasn't it just Uncle John's luck to have his prophecies come true? He ought to get a job as a weather man!"

BEAUTIFUL HAIR DO YOU WANT IT?

You Can Surely Have It By Using Parisian Sage.

Who does not love a beautiful head of hair? You may think it is a gift, that some women are born that way. The fact is, beautiful hair is largely a matter of cultivation, just as you would water the plants in your garden and fertilize the soil.

Parisian Sage is a scientific preparation which the hair and scalp readily absorb. It removes dandruff at once, it puts a stop to itching scalp and makes your whole head feel better—as if your hair had had a square meal.

One application will astonish you—it will double the beauty of the hair. If used daily for a week you will be simply delighted with the result—you will want to tell all your friends that you have discovered Parisian Sage. You should see the number of enthusiastic letters we receive from delighted users.

All doubts settled at one stroke—your money back if you want it.

Parisian Sage is a tea-colored liquid—not sticky or greasy—delicately perfumed, that comes in a fifty-cent bottle. The "Girl with the Auburn Hair" on the package. Get a bottle to-day—always keep it where you can use it daily.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrinse and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town. unless they get out of town. Irwin, the lawyer of General Hastings, whom Aggie Lynch is suing for breach of promise, calls on Mary. He attempts to corner Mary and Aggie, but the girls are too wise for him.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically, but with returning cheerfulness, since he saw the end of his quest in visible form before him. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary who, with a swift movement, caught and held it.

"Not quite yet, Mr. Irwin, I'm afraid," she said, calmly.

The lawyer barely suppressed a violent ejaculation of annoyance.

But there's the money waiting for you," he protested, indignantly.

The rejoinder from Mary was spoken with great deliberation, yet with a note of determination that caused a quick and acute anxiety to the General's representative.

"I think," May explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, there's no need for all that formality," Irwin urged, with a great appearance of bland friendliness.

"I Thought You Would."

"Just the same," Mary persisted, unimpressed, "I'm quite sure you would better see Mr. Harris first." There was a cadence of insistence in her voice that assured the lawyer as to the futility of further pretense on his part.

"Oh, I see, he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned, and now she smiled in a kindly manner, which, nevertheless, gave no pleasure to the chagrined man before her. As he rose she went on crisply: "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris, Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letter. * * * Good-afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow, which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door. But he was arrested before he reached it by the voice of Mary, speaking again, still in that imperturbable evenness which so rasped his nerves, for all its mellow resonance. But this time there was a sting, of the sharpest, in the words themselves.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled, and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word, after a long moment in which he perceived intently the delicate, yet subtly energetic, loveliness of this slender woman, he walked back to the desk, picked up the money, and restored it to the billcase. This done, at last he spoke, with a new respect in his voice, a quizzical smile on his rather thin lips.

Aggie Ends the Silence.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And with that laudatory confession of her skill, he finally took his departure, while Mary smiled in a triumph she was at no pains to conceal, and Aggie sat gaping astonishment over the surprising turn of events.

It was the latter volatile person who ended the silence that followed on the lawyer's going.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently, "letting all that money go out of the house. * * * Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied, blandly; "but it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it? Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters, and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

Aggie's innocent eyes rounded in an amazed consternation, which was not at all assumed.

"Gee!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned, apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There, he will pay over that same marked money. Then, he will get the letters he wants so much. And, just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics——"

"What's legal ethics?" Aggie demanded, impetuously. "They sound some tasty!" With the comment, she dropped weakly into a chair.

Mary laughed in carefree enjoyment, as well she might after winning the victory in such a battle of wits.

"Oh," she said, happily, "you just get it legally, and you get twice as much!"

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused. She was doing her best to get a clear understanding of the matter, though to her it was all a mystery most esoteric.

Mary reviewed the case succinctly for the other's enlightenment.

"Yes, it's the same game precisely," she affirmed. "A shameless old roue makes love to you, and he writes you a stack of silly letters."

The pouting lips of the listener took on a pathetic droop, and her voice quivered as she spoke with an effective semblance of virginal terror.

"He might have ruined my life!"

Mary continued without giving much attention to these histrionics.

"If you had asked him for all this money for the return of his letters, it would have been blackmail, and we'd have gone to jail in all human probability. But we did no such thing—no, indeed! What we did wasn't anything like that in the eyes of the law. What we did was merely to have your lawyer take steps toward a suit for damages for breach of promise of marriage for the sum of ten thousand dollars. Then his lawyer appears in behalf of General Hastings, and there follow a number of conferences between the legal representatives of the opposing parties. By means of these conferences, the two legal gentlemen run up very respectable bills of expenses. In the end, we get our ten thousand dollars, and the flighty old General gets back his letters. * * * My dear," Mary concluded vainglioriously, "we're inside the law, and so we're perfectly safe. And there you are!"

MOTHER

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are only a few certainties in life. One is Mother. You can always depend on her.

Make Mother a present and it pleases her most when it is something that will divide equally among the children.

It frequently happens that Mother has better health than father and the children because she doesn't have time for sickness or any other recreation.

When a child excels its father, he is teased about it, but when it excels its Mother it pleases her almost to death.

Photographs of Mother never look like her, for the reason that she seems to have been idle when they were taken.

The children are sick, Mother is up with them all night; father is sick, and Mother is up with him; but when Mother is sick does anybody know of it but the Lord?

A hen never tries to spread her wings over a rooster-sized son to protect him, but Mothers do it.

When a child has a pain, father's sympathy is dependent on his memory of a similar pain, but Mother's sympathy is independent of all experience.

When Mother prays it is for something she wants for her children, and when father prays it is for something he wants for himself.

A really fine Mother never lets her children see her cry or show cowardice. There are certain qualities that are splendid to remember in connection with Mother, and courage is one of them.

From the time Mother gets up in the morning till she goes to bed at night every one in the household, from her husband to the children and the laundress, takes complaints to her and lays them on her shoulders. It is a task too great for any statistician to enumerate how many complaints a woman hears from the day she enters her home, showered with rice, till the day she leaves it in a box covered with flowers.

There are some bright spots in Mother's life. A great and shining one is when she picks up the stocking bag and finds a stocking that doesn't need darning.

The only human being in the world whose duties and obligations are not bound by the clock is Mother.

And the great sorrow that confronts us, her children, and that will make heaven an unhappy place for her, is that when St. Peter lines us all up and passes out the crowns he will not take our Mother's word for it.

Slave to Fashion.

A butcher in a certain town recently received from a friend abroad a number of small alligators which he proudly displayed in an aquarium in his shop.

A customer came into the shop one afternoon and stood for some time gazing at the reptiles.

Having turned the matter over in his mind, the customer approached the butcher and exclaimed:

"I suppose a body might as well be dead as out of style. Gimme a couple of pounds of alligator!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"But, no—mothers always ask so many questions."

CHAPTER III.

WHEN Jennie got in the house that night and found her motherly boarding house keeper waiting up for her hot tea, she evaded her old friend's look and questions, saying she was tired and had a headache—hurried up stairs to her room, where she could be alone and THINK.

Why had she so long put up with this sordid way of living—no good times, dresses or theaters, such as other girls have. All she ever did was to hurry down to work every morning, a hurried little lunch with the other girls at noon and then back to work till evening, when she would hurry home to supper and then maybe to see some of her girl acquaintances or to the "movies" with girl and boy friends.

How shallow and sordid and monotonous it seemed to Jennie, who had just had dinner in one of the best cafes in town and came home in a taxi-cab for the first time.

What if she hadn't been introduced to the man and what difference did it make if her mother or father didn't know him or approve of him?

Hadn't he been just as nice and polite—a lot more so than some of the boy friends she knew—and hadn't he asked her to "call him up" the next day? But shouldn't she tell her old friend all about the nice time she had that evening?—but no—old woman always asked so many questions—what if THE MAN was a great deal older than she—hadn't he told her that he had a little daughter just her age, but his family was away on a trip to Europe, and he was so lonesome since they were gone, and wouldn't she be his little pal and meet his wife and daughter when they arrived home—and she must bring her mother, too, when his family got back—no, it wouldn't do to tell her mother till then, for she might not understand it like he and Jennie did, didn't she like him just a little bit?

But Jennie went to sleep that night, thinking of a great big, bright restaurant, with its beautifully gowned women, heavenly music, thick carpet, a fountain playing in the center and the "taxi" ride home that was so different from the pokey old street cars she was used to riding in.

She was sound asleep and didn't hear her old friend noiselessly open the door and come into see if there was anything she could do before she went to bed—or hear the murmur "poor little girl—if she just didn't HAVE to work so hard," as she went out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T GIVE HER UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a girl 20 years of age, and she loves me, but there is one thing out of the way with me; I have six fingers on my right hand. So her parents say that it is unlucky to get married. What shall I do with a case like this, as I am worried that I will have to give this girl up. LOVESICK.

Her parents are unfair. If your habits are good, one finger more or less is immaterial, and I regret they haven't the good sense to know it.

You love each other; that is "good luck" enough to banish all the bad.

GIVE HIM UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am just 18 years old and love a man of 25. I have been keeping steady company with him for the past two months, before which time I had heard many wrong things about him, and find that he has an awful reputation among people that know him. He has been a perfect gentleman toward me, and I have learned to love him very dearly, but the way my friends talk bothers me.

N. B. D.

I am sure they would not accuse him without reason, and that it will be for your greater happiness to heed them and give him up.

His First Mistake

ONE of the first tasks they set the curate, who was handicapped by youth and inexperience, was to investigate the bona fides of a "widow woman" who had applied to the church for help. He departed nervously on his errand and knocked, as ill-luck would have it, at the wrong door.

"How long has your poor husband been dead, my good woman? What number of children have you? Are any of them working? If so, what amount of money are they earning, altogether?" were the questions he fired, like shots from a revolver, at the slatternly woman who answered his summons. "I presume I am addressing Mrs. Harriet Smith?" he added, noticing, with alarm, that she looked angry.

"No you ain't," answered the woman snappishly. "My name is Seline Jackson, my bairns go to school, and my 'usband's doin' what is necessary to a plateful of steak and onions at this very moment. Would you like to know anything else? Where I was born? When I was christened? At what age I started courtin'? Perhaps," she concluded, sarcastically, rolling her tattered sleeve up above the elbow, 'you'd like to see my vaccination mark before you go?"

But the bashful curate, redder in the face than a poppy, was already in full flight.

Fry Fish in Cottolene

You can fry fish in Cottolene, and use the remaining fat for frying potatoes or other food. The odor of the fish will not be imparted to the other fried food.

Cottolene is not alone economical for the reason that it can be used over and over, but also because it is richer than butter or lard, and one-third less is required. It is twice as economical as butter; much more economical than lard.

Cottolene makes rich, digestible, tasty, healthful food. Does not make food greasy, and is free from indigestion.

Cottolene is never sold in bulk—always in air-tight tin pails, which protect it from dirt, dust and odors. It is always uniform and dependable.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HUSBAND, sed ma, did you reed that peece in the paiper the other day wich sed that a prominent sientist sed that baseball was the curse of the United States?

No, I dident see that artikel, sed Pa, but the way it sounds I bet it was in a Sunday paiper. How offen have I toald you, sed Pa, that you mussent beleeve everything you see in the Sunday paipers? I guess I will have to stop bringing the Sunday paipers hoam, sed Pa. All you read in them is freek stories like the one you was jest telling about or else the ads. After you reed the freek stories you talk about them & think about them all the week, & after you reed the ads you cry all the afternoon & say you cud be perfeekly happy if you jest had a few thousand dollars to go shopping with.

That isent so, sed Ma. You know it isent so. All I sed I wanted to go shopping with was a few hundred not a few thousand, & beesides, this artikel about baseball was the truth, beekaus I happen to know the great sientist wich gaiv the interview to the paiper. He & his wife is cumming up to the house to dinner tonite. You will have a chanst to meet him. He is a reely grate man, Ma sed, beekaus eeven his wife thinks so.

Another Scientist.

Oh deer, sed Pa, & so we have got to feed another sientist. I havent forgot yet, sed Pa, the sientist wich caim to see us last fall, the one wich was trying to prove that fishes breethed thru thare scales & not thru thare gills. He didn't talk anything else except fish, & we had fish for dinner that day, too. I saw fish in my sleep that nite, sed Pa.

Oh, this sientist is different, sed Ma. He is interested in man, not fish. He beleeves that every man shud have the fizeek of a old Roman gladitor & wud have it if he observed the proper rules of hy-geen. That is why he thinks that baseball is the curse of the United States. He will explain it all to you wen he cums tonite.

Well, that nite the sientist & his wife caim to dinner. He was a littel bit of a man & his wife was a fine big woman. She looked as if she cud have been a White Hope if she didn't happen to be a woman insted of a man. Her husband squeeked like a mouse wen he talked, & his hands was thin like birds feet. If I was a man I wud like to marry his wife, but if I was a lady I wuddent like to marry the sientist.

The sientist dident talk about sience during the dinner. I thought from what Ma sed about hy-geen that he wud be vary careful about what he ate, but he wasent. I nevver seen a man eet so much. I guess the way his wife looked at him he had forgot what she toald him about over-eeting beefoar thay left hoam to cum to our house. But after dinner Pa started rite in on him.

I was to the ball gaim to-day, sed Pa. I was sorry old Matty had to lose that gaim. He pitched one of the grandest gaims of his career.

He Detested It.

I detest baseball, sed the sientist. It is the curse of the country. Jest think of it, sum days thare are maybe twenty thousand men watching a gaim of ball wen thay ought to be exercising themselfs insted of watching 18 men that are doing the exercising. If they were all out exercising themselfs, thay mite be trained athleets too.

Do you exercise? ser Pa.

Indeed I do, sed the sientist, three hours a day.

What kind of a trained athleet are you? sed Pa.

That is neether here nor thare, sed the sientist. He saw his wife laffing & he was gitting mad.

I nevver exercise much, sed Pa, & I nevver mis a ball gaim wen my bizness will let me git away, but I feel as fine as silk & I guess I cud give Sam Langford quite a fite as long as my wind lasted. Baseball is not the curse of the United States, sed Pa. with all due deference to yure opinyun. Baseball is the grandest gaim that was evver invented. It is loved by oaver a milyun men & boys & is getting grater evvery year. Ladies can go to ball gaims & fergit thare shopping, Pa said, & men can go & fergit thare creditors. Long live baseball, sed Pa, & three cheers for McGraw.

I think Pa is rite, but he is a raw person sumtimes.

How to Tell the Bite of a Venomous Snake

IF you should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so-called harmless variety, look at the injury.

If there are four punctures, or even three, the chances are that it was not a venomous snake; but if there are only two punctures it is probable that you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake.

While this does not always hold good, as a non-poisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake's deadly fangs are but two—generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should, whenever possible, be kept for identification.

If, as generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more bands—above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next, wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available, suck the wound, then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now, wash the wound well, and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution; or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely, not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whisky, if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whisky than by snake bite.

When positively certain that the poison has been removed from the wound, loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them, so they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical care, and the wound should be kept open by packing with wet antiseptic gauge, as sepsis and local gangrene often follow a snake bite.

Weak Sickly Ailing Women

What more can we do to convince you that you positively can find perfect health and relief from your suffering by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? Read What These Women Say!

Bluffton, Ohio.—"I wish to thank you for the good I derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sometime ago. I suffered each month such agony that I could scarcely endure, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely cured.

"Then I had an attack of organic inflammation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am cured. I thank you for what your remedies have done for me and should anything bother me again, I shall use it again, for I have great faith in your remedies. You may use my testimonial and welcome. I tell every one what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs Rhoda Wingate, Box 395, Bluffton, Ohio.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. Alice Darling, R. F. D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

THE PROBLEM OF THE RED MAN

An Interesting Discussion of a Vigorous Article on the American Indian in Hearst's Magazine for May

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

WE do not see ourselves as others see us, and that is as true of nations as of individuals.

To our eyes the red man has practically sunk out of sight. To European eyes he is still the most picturesque figure in the Western world. If you doubt that statement, then, the next time you are in Europe fall into conversation with any intelligent Frenchman, German or other native of the Old World, about life in America, and you will be likely to discover that he is much more deeply interested in Indians than in fifty-story buildings. Even the wonders of the Panama Canal appeal to him with far less force than do the history and the fate of those unique tribes which owned this continent in fee simple for centuries before our ancestors landed upon its shores.

If you have imbued yourself with the notion that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian," you may be a little vexed to find that our contemporaries abroad, with their bird's-eye view of things on this side of the water, persist in regarding the American red man as a personage quite as interesting to the philosophical observer as the American white man, and infinitely more romantic.

In Hearst's Magazine.

Then you might with advantage turn to an article in this month's number of Hearts's Magazine, where Mr. Francis E. Leupp, recently Indian Commissioner, explains his ideas about the way we have heretofore treated the red men and the way we ought to treat him.

A great-brained European once said to me: "I am a friend of your country and an enthusiastic admirer of its ideals, but I most respectfully protest against the manner in which you have dealt with one of the most interesting races that ever existed on this earth. Pardon me for saying that I think you have done very wrong. You might have kept him and made a good citizen of him, instead of driving him into extinction, or, what is even worse, into racial abasement."

A Similar View.

Mr. Leupp appears to take a similar view. He has ideas about the capacity of the Indian for civilization, and about the best way to develop that capacity, which ought to command the attention of a liberty-loving and fair-dealing people.

The sole idea of our Government seems to have been to make a farmer of every Indian. "Give him a farm and make him work it," has been the slogan. And when the poor Indian, ignorant of the white man's science and the white man's methods, fails to become a successful farmer in a single generation or less he is condemned as good for nothing and treated with contempt and with renewed injustice.

Disregarding the fact that he has neither the capital to develop his farm nor the experience to enable him to compete in agriculture with men of European origin, whose ancestors were trained in that kind of industry long before America was discovered, the red man is required to devote himself exclusively to work for which, in many cases, he is racially and constitutionally unfitted, or else to become a drunkard and a pauper.

Some Indians make good farmers. Some of them have the gift and the ancestral tendency. Every reader of our history knows what the Iroquois Indians did in the fertile valleys of Central and Western New York. When General Sullivan mercilessly raided the lake region of New York he destroyed farms and stores of grain, of which any industrious European agricultural community might have been proud. That was a war measure and, as such, perhaps, excusable at the time. But suppose that an enlightened government had taken pains to develop the skill of the Indians in cultivation after peace had been established.

It may be replied that the Indians ran away and refused to be civilized. True, in part; but at last they could no longer run beyond the white man's reach. As Red Jacket once eloquently expressed it, "We are become a small island in the bosom of the great waters. We are encircled; we are encompassed. The waters rise; they press upon us; and the waves once settled over us, we disappear forever!"

Made Him a Brute.

Taking advantage of the terrible effect that "fire-water"—whisky!—had upon the unimmunized red man, his white enemies pressed it upon him, as they press it upon him still, until he became a brute in spite of himself.

The Indian has many useful capacities which he would develop if he had a proper opportunity, but the opportunity is refused to him. Read what Mr. Leupp has to say about the multitude of red men who take naturally to mechanic arts and to various trades, and the hopelessness of their struggle against the immense agricultural units that his white competitors, with comparatively unlimited capital, are developing around him, and you may be led to exert your influence to have the doors of opportunity opened wider to this long-cheated race.

We may consistently keep out Japanese, but the Indian was here before we were, and the principles of eternal justice demand that he shall not have the door shut in his face.

The Poet's Plea

IT was all over. They were in the the carriage at last, man and wife, driving back to the wedding breakfast. But suddenly, without warning, the youthful bride burst into heartrending sobs.

"Oh-o!" she cried. "Oh-o! Oh-o!"

"My dearest dear!" breathed the new-made hubby. Why does my pet weep so on her wedding day? Tell her hubsie-wubsie all about it, then!"

"Marmaduke, I've hidden something from you. I've not told you all. Alas! What shall I do?"

Marmaduke's heart stood still for what seemed to him a century, but was, in reality, a second; then:

"Tell me"—and his voice was hoarse—"tell me what you mean at once! I can not bear this suspense!"

"I c-can not c-ook!" sobbed the little wife.

"Oh, lovey, is that all?" the young man cried, as his heart beats slowed to normal time. "You frightened me! But worry not. I am a poet, and there will be precious little to cook!"

Are Children a Duty?

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

I.

BEFORE beginning these three short plain talks it may be well to warn the idealist who allows sentimental tradition to preclude honest and independent thought to read no further lest he or she be shocked—possibly scandalized. Yet one should bear in mind also the fact that there is a sentimentality sometimes degenerating into a selfishness that amounts almost to cruelty. Such cruelty unpremeditated and unrecognized.

Bearing this truth in mind one may almost dare to reply in the negative to the question asked above.

For that question is not, Are children a joy, a comfort, a privilege? but, Are they a duty?

Race Would Die Out.

Doubt comes often to one's mind in reading the opinions of certain writers who discourse on the sin of childlessness, the evils of race suicide, the selfishness of unfruitful marriages. Right here one may pause to acknowledge that the arguments in favor of child-bearing to perpetuate the race are irrefutable. One cannot erect a building without material, and the race would die out were there no children born. So, for the purpose of continuing the species, children are certainly essential.

But of those who inveigh against the iniquity of childlessness only a few look at the matter from the standpoint of the good of their kind. I think I am safe in asserting that not one parent in one thousand has sons or daughters for the express purpose of perpetuating the race. So we will leave that aspect of the question out of consideration.

Some expressions become so common that we take them at their face value without analyzing them. Some opinions have been voiced for so long that their very age confers upon them a seeming stability which we seldom thing of disputing.

"I am glad to see that you are one of the women who fulfills her mission in life," was said to a mother of eight children. "You have been conscientiously doing your duty in having a goodly number of sons and daughters."

"Yes," assented the pale-faced mother, "through all privations and self-denials I have had the comforting assurance that I was doing my duty."

Surely Not Herself.

To whom? Surely not to herself, for she is a semi-invalid whose frequent attacks of illness are a menace to her life and to the happiness of husband and children; certainly not to the husband who works in a poorly-lighted, ill-ventilated office all day and burns the midnight oil in the effort to make both ends meet, and is always conscious that they never do; assuredly not to the children, the oldest of wrom—a bright lad of sixteen—has had to surrender all hopes of a college education, as his earnings in a shop are required to help support the little brothers and sisters, and to pay the bills of the doctor needed with appalling frequency by the delicate mother. To whom then was the duty performed?

Recently I heard a heated altercation between a mother and her modern and irreverent daughter. At last the mother, losing all patience, burst forth with:

"You girls of the present day do not appreciate all that your mothers did for you! You seem to forget that you owe a debt of gratitude to me, the woman who braved death itself to bring you into the world!"

The twentieth century girl shrugged her broad shoulders.

"I consider it no debt," she declared. "I did not ask to come. Then why should I thank you for bearing me?"

A coarse and vulgar way of stating a truth. Mothers seldom consider whether their children will find the gift of life itself a positive blessing. And after we have brought our children here the least we can do for them is to give them as good an education and as cultivated an environment as possible so that they may start even with their associates. This is one of the few ways in which we can "make up" to them for their having been born.

Some of Us Are Happy.

Does this sound like pessimism? It is not that. Some of us who are glad that we are alive and to whom life has meant much that is joyful and good would not care to live it over again if we had to learn the same lessons, make the same mistakes, suffer the same penalties that we have already known. Now that we are here we love life and want to say as long as we can. Some of us are very happy, others very necessary, others have a natural curiosity to see how it is all going to turn out. But as one cannot miss that which one has never had, we would have missed none of these things had we never been born.

Put the question to any one as to whether he would care to go back and begin life once more as a tiny child, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the reply will be: "Perhaps I would," or "Yes," always coupled with the proviso—"If I could remember the mistakes I have made and profit by them."

But, unfortunately for our children, they will not or cannot profit by the mistakes of their parents. Each one must fight the battle for himself, and win out or fail for himself.

A Cow's Rights

"IT is about time," said the farmer to the hostler, as the two stood passing the time of day, "for these sportsmen to act more sportsmanlike. They ought to quit shooting cattle.

"Nearly all the farms are posted in our part of the county, and we are going to forbid shooting along roads and waterways also.

"I tell you, there is entirely too much cattle shooting.

"A fellow starts out for a week-end hunt. He takes along about forty rounds of ammunition, which gets heavier and heavier during the day. Seeing nothing else to shoot, he shoots a cow, simply to get rid of a shell that costs five cents and weighs a pound.

"I suppose, too, he wants to see the cow jump and run. That is fun for the hunter, but not for the cow nor for the farmers, either. We hate to have a cow come lumbering into the house and crawl under the bed when we are discussing the crop reports.

"Nor is it any fun to get up out of a warm bed and take the broom and jab under a bed or a sofa to chase out a cow that has been shot at and scared. It isn't a bit of fun.

"When it comes to milking that cow it is no easy job. She thinks that every one who comes along has a shooting iron and that she is going to get stung again. Poor, patient animal. She never did any harm except for an occasional thinness in her product.

"Cows, I admit, do not look as graceful and dainty as minuet dancers when they exhibit speed mania characteristics, but there are so many other funny things nowadays that it is unsportsmanlike to shoot cows in order to get this kind of entertainment.

"The cow has a perfect right to graze in her owner's pasture unmolested except at milking time, which comes often enough. Besides the responsibilities of the dirty she has flies and lots of other things to worry her.

"A man who would shoot a cow or even shoot at her would welcome campaign contributions from any source and root for the opposing team in a world's series."

The "Breach of Promise" Suit, Its Use and Abuse

By DOROTHY DIX.

IN a recent article in this column I expressed the opinion that a man is just as much entitled to a change of mind and a change of heart in matters of the affections as a woman is, and that if a man found out before marriage that he was tired of the woman to whom he was engaged, and no longer wanted her for a wife, he had a perfect right to break the engagement and withdraw from a bargain that would bankrupt his life.

These sentiments have brought a howl of protest from a large number of my feminine readers, who accuse me of being a traitor to my sex, and berate me for encouraging perfidious man to trifle with the tender affections of trusting maidens.

I confess that I don't quite catch the point of view of my correspondents, nor do I grasp their ideal of matrimony. If their theory of marriage is the sordid one of marrying for a home and a meal ticket, and that it is easier for a woman to work a husband than it is to work a typewriter or a sewing machine, or stand behind a counter, then I can see why they think that a man should be compelled to carry out a matrimonial engagement, no matter how loathsome it had become to him, nor how he dreaded the prospect of having to spend the balance of his life with a woman who had lost her every vestige of charm for him.

This argument would have been a good one in the old days when no gainful occupations were open to women, and the only way a lady had of getting a home was to marry it; but we have changed all of that. Any able-bodied and intelligent girl can support herself quite as well as a husband is likely to do it, and in consequence marriage has become a sentimental luxury and not a bread-and-butter necessity, as it used to be.

If you should suggest to the average high-spirited and independent girl of to-day that she should coerce an unwilling and protesting man into marching to the altar with her she would overwhelm you with her scorn. She would say that in her opinion the woman who married for a living earned it in the hardest way on earth, and that she thanked God she didn't have to make hers that way.

She would also remark that she was not a confidence woman who ran a skin game on any sentimental Tommy, nor was she a Lady Shylock who would exact the last drop of blood in a man's heart in payment of a little indiscreet love-making. Further, she would add, as did one girl that I knew, that if any man could get tired of a love affair sooner than she did and change his mind quicker he would certainly be a marvel of rapid action.

Admitting that few young women in this day are willing to marry a man just solely for the sake of the loaves and fishes that he can provide, on what ground can my correspondents advocate the holding of an unwilling man to a matrimonial engagement he has made?

Certainly no one who knows anything of life can hope that such a marriage will bring any happiness to the woman, or result in anything but misery for both parties. Malignity itself could devise no more cruel fate than the long-drawn-out years of torture that are the portion of an unloved and undesired wife. She drinks the very dregs of the cup of humiliation.

Even in the ordinary marriage, where the swain is romantically and passionately in love, and when he counts impatiently the hours to the wedding day, the ardor of the man cools off soon enough. It is not long before he ceases to take any interest in holding his wife's hand, and when he goes to sleep of an evening when she tries to talk to him, and begins to have business that keeps him downtown of evenings. You could count on the fingers of one hand every husband you know who is still a lover after five years of married life.

What prospects of domestic felicity has a woman, then, if she forces a man to marry her who does not want to, who is not in love with her, and who is already tired of her before the long matrimonial journey begins? To say that he will fall in love with her after marriage, and that she will win his heart by her devotion and her goodness, is to talk idiotic nonsense. The whole tendency of matrimony is to disillusion. It thrusts people together in a relationship where their personalities clash, and where they strike fire out of each other's temper and temperament.

Brings Out Faults.

Matrimony brings out every fault in a woman as exaggerated as if it were under a magnifying glass, and the woman who could not win a man, nor hold him, when she had all the allure of distance, of always being primped up, and on her best behavior, can never do it in close quarters of domesticity, where her husband sees her in her everyday clothes and surrounded with an aura of bills and boiled dinners.

Canaries have been bred in cages so many generations that they are perfectly satisfied to live in cages. Women have been bred for so many centuries to put up with whatever domestic lot they draw in life that they endure an unhappy marriage with stoic fortitude, and many of them put up a pretty good bluff at loving a husband they actually hate.

But men have no such finesse, no such patience, no such amiable hypocrisy. When a man is married to a woman of whom he has grown tired, and who bores him, he frankly neglects her, if he is forced to marry a woman after he has ceased to care for her he makes her pay for it by his brutalities to her, so it is incomprehensible why any one should think it better for a woman to compel a man to marry her when he doesn't want to than to be jilted.

In reality such a marriage is the substitution of a gnawing agony that never ends for a scratch that hurts for a moment and then heals. A woman may not even collect a debt of honor from the man who has compromised her without being far worse off than if she had wiped the slate clean and blotted out his score against her.

MORE NUTRITIOUS FOOD AT A LOWER PRICE.

Most people eat too much meat. It is the one big item in our high cost of living. We go to this meat excess under the mistaken belief that it is necessary to nourish our bodies.

You can get food more nutritious at one-tenth the cost by buying Faust Macaroni.

Faust Macaroni is made from Durum Wheat, the cereal extremely rich in gluten, the bone, muscle and flesh builder. A 10c package of Faust Macaroni contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef—ask your doctor.

IMPORTS SHATTER ALL FISCAL MARKS

Manufacturers' Materials Brought in at an Unprecedented Rate, Hides and Wool Excepted.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A statement given out by Secretary of Commerce Redfield indicates the quantities of manufacturers' materials imported into the United States during the present fiscal year will greatly exceed the imports of last year and the mark of any previous year if the figures for the nine months ended March, 1913, be any criterion.

Of the ten important articles forming the bulk of the imports of such materials, cotton, wool, fibres, silk, tin, copper, rubber, hides, lumber and tobacco—the imports will, with but two exceptions, exceed the former high record mark.

The quantity of raw cotton imported during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was over 100,000,000 pounds, as compared with 66,000,000 pounds the same months last year; 163,000,000 pounds of wool as against 126,000,000 last year; 318,900 tons of fibers, against 231,000; 20,000,000 pounds of raw silk against 16,000,000; 91,000,000 pounds of pig tin against 82,000,000; 234,000,000 pounds of copper pigs, bars, etc., against 206,000,000; 87,000,000 pounds of crude India rubber against 81,000,000; 453,000,000 pounds of hides and skins against 374,000,000; 818,000,000 feet of boards, planks and deals against 645,000,000 feet and 48,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco against 37,000,000 pounds.

The only cases in which the imports for the corresponding period of any previous year exceeded the imports for nine months ended March this year were when the imports of hides and skins amounted to 48,000,000 pounds in 1910, as against 453,000,000 pounds for this year and when in 1896, 1897, 1905, 1909 and 1910 the imports of wool slightly exceeded the imports of the current year.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 97 @105
Corn—No. 2 ..... 59½
Oats—No. 2 ..... 36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 13.—May wheat was firm at 89⅝@89¾c, as the offerings were small at the opening, and there was some demand from shorts. The more deferred months were off ¼@⅝c and were under some pressure.

Liverpool reported the larger world's shipments and favorable European crop prospects as offset by smaller Manitoba offerings and the stronger feeling for Indian and Plate wheat. Northwestern receipts were considerably in excess of a year ago, also the receipts at Winnipeg. The European visible supply showed a small increase.

There was little change in corn and oats, but both of these markets were the smallest fraction lower. The markets of the Old World were quite dull for corn.

There was a stronger feeling for hogs at the yards, but the provision situation was dull and without any change early.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: The short interest has not decreased to any great extent and this should tend to sustain prices.

Miller & Co.: Unless conditions turn for the worse, we look for lower prices.

Logan & Bryan: General conditions are not of a nature to create enthusiasm on the long side of cotton.

Atwood, Violett & Co.: We would avoid the short side of July at present. Later months, however, we believe should be sold on any further rally.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Until good rains come in the Atlantics there will be nothing to induce short selling.

STOCKS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Central Railroad of New Jersey was again the weakest feature of the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, declining 1 point to 295 on continued reports of a threatened Government suit. This was a drop of 25 points since the close Saturday.

Most of the other stocks were up. Amalgamated Copper began ¼ higher, but soon lost the gain. Southern Pacific acted similarly, commencing with a gain of ⅜, but losing it and making a fractional decline within a half hour. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which has been under pressure for some time, lost ⅞. Union Pacific commenced at 148⅜, for a fractional gain, but soon declined, losing ⅜.

Canadian Pacific lost 1⅜, although it was strong in London on earnings reports. New York, New Haven and Hartford and Northern Pacific gained fractionally. United States Steel common opened at 55⅛, unchanged from Monday. Pennsylvania road shaded ⅛. Erie lost the same amount.

The curb market was steady.

MINING STOCKS.

BOSTON, May 13.—Opening: Alaska 11, Granby 62, Fruit 154½, Wolverine 61, North Lake 1.

BAR SILVER.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Commercial bar silver 61c. Mexican dollars 48c.

LONDON, May 13.—Bar silver steady at 28 3-16d. Up 3-16d.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Unsettled, showery weather will continue to-night over Western half of the country except from New York through the Carolinas, where there probably will be little or no rain. It will be somewhat cooler in the lower lake region and New England.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Showers to-night and Wednesday.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

J. P. Morgan has succeeded his father on two Vanderbilt roads. The financing of the Central system is a harder task to-day than it used to be. The New York Central no longer occupies a proud place at the pinnacle of American railroad properties. Its stock is below par. And its treasury is gapingly empty. It will require all the Morgan firm's ingenuity to devise ways and means of raising the scores of millions needed to put the road on its financial feet.

* * *

There is more money in being banker for an impecunious road than an opulent one. Any one could float Lackawanna securities, but a good banking name is needed to dispose of second rate stuff. The Morgan house made millions from reorganizations—Wall Street used to call him Doctor Morgan, so many operations did he perform on sick railroads. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., also did well in financing Mr. Harriman's restoration of Union Pacific and other roads.

COTTON

NEW YORK, May 13.—Firm cables, coupled with bullish weather reports, caused an upturn of from 3 to 4 points at the opening of the cotton market to-day. After the call, however, traders sold and in consequence of the orders, most of which came from profit-takings, the list dropped several points.

Sentiment was mixed.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: May, 11.52; July, 11.67; August, 11.43; October, 11.08; January, 11.07.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: May, 12.28; July, 12.07; August, 11.65; October, 11.21.

Estimated cotton receipts:

	Tuesday.	1912.
New Orleans	3,500 to 4,500	916
Galveston	2,000 to 3,000	1,855

The early strength in the market was attributed to short covering by Wall Street operators. This buying was based upon the failure of the map to show rains. The official weather map showed a few rains in Georgia, the other Atlantics and Alabama and much lower temperatures in North Carolina. This caused rather free offerings from the ring and selling by recent buyers, which was said to be profit-taking. Prices dropped 3 to 5 points from the opening range, with the exception of May, which held steady at the opening quotation.

It is said those who covered short lines during the past few days will put out these short lines again if there are rains in the Eastern belt within the next twenty-four hours. The bears express the belief that the dry May makes it apparent that the crop will have a good start and they are not inclined to put much confidence in the talk of damage of the excessive dry weather.

The weekly weather report issued at noon, was construed as bearish, with the exception of Georgia, which shows the lack of moisture. Texas shows the effect of cold nights, but not seriously.

During the afternoon session the market was under heavy selling pressure, based upon the weather report and May dropped 6 points, July 7, October 8, December 9 and January 7 points from the initial level. The buying was light and scattered.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Europe apparently was treated to bad crop news which led to a strong Liverpool, with futures 3 to 4 points better than due. Political news is worse, reporting that almost a state of war exists between Greece and Bulgaria, with actual fighting, the Bulgarians attacking Greek posts and wounded arriving at Saloniki.

Correspondence from Liverpool shows bearish views as to the ultimate course of prices, but opinion is in favor of waiting around 6 pence for a while until more is known about the crop development. The strength of July in New York is still pulling the New Orleans market up, but lack of confidence is shown by restricted support. Current damage reports are regarded as accessory to professional attempts at the short interest and faith in the established record of the benefits of a dry May will predominates.

The greater part of Alabama has had enough rainfall to start the replant, and official records show that sufficient showers fell over a considerable territory of Georgia. The Savannah district shows seven stations with an average of half-inch over night.

The contract market is dull but steady around 11.18 for October.

COTTON GOSSIP

According to P. S. Sullivan, of Morris H. Rothschild & Co., the conditions in the eastern belt are exactly the reverse of those of last year. Mr. Sullivan has just returned from a six weeks' trip throughout the eastern belt.

"I arrived in the belt a year ago this time to the day and made my tour over the same ground, so I am in an exceptional position to compare conditions with those of last year. Last year the ground was hardly broken and farm work was so late that in Georgia farmers sowed their seed right after the plow without taking the time to break up the ground properly," he says. "That fact accounts for the poor crop. This year I found the ground thoroughly prepared wherever I went, and, as a rule, farmers were two weeks ahead of last year. With the exception of North Carolina, planting is well advanced and in the extreme South a good deal of cotton is up. Possibly excluding North Carolina, where farmers are not planting yet, the eastern States of the belt have increased their acreage. Everywhere I went farmers estimated that the acreage is 5 per cent larger than last year. I estimate that Georgia has planted 3 to 5 per cent more land in cotton than the previous season."

* * *

Shorts are becoming more nervous owing to the cool weather and insufficient rains in the eastern belt and talk of delayed germination, which has become one of the leading factors in stimulating the market. Yesterday July sold up as high as 11.68. This was the highest that option has sold since the latter part of April, when it sold at 11.32.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Clear and cool. Oklahoma—Generally clear and pleasant."

* * *

Good rains were reported at Knoxville, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala.

* * *

Norden & Co. says: "Unless there is a change in the weather in the immediate future, we think a further sharp upturn is to be expected."

* * *

Washington announces that the cotton condition report will be issued June 2, at noon, Eastern time. It will give condition of the crop to May 25.

THE PONY CONTEST IS JUST STARTING

This Is a Good Time To Enter

Timid boy and girl contestants are asking us, every day, if it is too late to enter this contest for free Shetland pony outfits. Our answer is that now is the right time. The "too late" period will be here before we realize it, though, and every boy and girl who wants to compete for one of these splendid outfits is urged to send in a nomination blank by to-day's mail.

New Enterprises in South Listed

Activity Along Industrial Lines Reflected in Compilation Made by Trade Journal.

BALTIMORE, May 13.—Among the many Southern enterprises in this week's issue of the Manufacturers' Record are the following:

Arkansas & Memphis Railway Bridge & Terminal Co., awarded contract at about $125,000 for grading proposed bridge across Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.; company's plans include construction of freight terminals, wagon tracks, warehouses, etc., to cost about $1,000,000; will also construct two subways to cost about $100,000 each.

New Orleans Railway & Light Co., New Orleans, La., contemplates construction of gas-holder costing $350,000, and to have capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet.

Forest Hill Cemetery Co., Birmingham, Ala., plans to expend $125,000 for improvements to Woodlawn Cemetery Company's property which it has acquired with additional land; plans to construct dam to form miniature lakes, arrange fountains, drives, flower beds, etc., to cost $50,000, and build stone mausoleum to cost $75,000.

Locke Cotton Mills, Concord, N. C., increased preferred stock from $200,000 to $500,000.

Hollingsworth Candy, Co., Augusta, Ga., will expend $20,000 to erect factory and store building for the manufacture and sale of candy.

Composite Brick Co., Jacksonville, Fla., will alter building at cost of $2,000 and install equipment for the manufacture of about 40,000 common and face bricks daily.

Nelsetts Lumber Co., Statesville, N. C., was incorporated with $125,000 capital stock.

Calhoun Hosiery Co., Penrose, N. C., was incorporated with capital stock of $25,000 to manufacture hosiery.

Oglethorpe Oil & Fertilizer Co., Athens, Ga., was incorporated with capital stock of $25,000 to establish cotton seed oil mill.

Sumter Stave Co., Sumter, S. C., was incorporated with $20,000 capital stock to manufacture staves; will erect stave mill to cost $20,000.

Auto Racer Loses Elopement Chase

RACINE, WIS., May 13.—Joe Jorgesberger, automobile racer, lost the most important road race of his career to-day. Jorgesberger, Dan Cupid and Miss Amanda Olles comprised one team. Angry father, the long-distance telephone and the police of Waukegan, Ill., were the other.

In front of the home of a wealthy foundryman, Jorgesberger stopped his racing car shortly before dawn. A girl, with a suitcase, ran to the racing car and jumped in. Jorgesberger and his 17-year-old heiress bride-to-be started for Waukegan.

A few minutes later a car puffed out of the Olles garage. Miss Olles' father was at the wheel. He overtook the elopers as they reached Waukegan and were halted by the police.

'Boy,' 72, on Visit to His 'Dad,' 103, Jailed

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., May 13.—James M. Goldsberry, 72 years old, arrived in Leavenworth to visit his father, Herman Goldsberry, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who is 103 years old. The son, however, began drinking and was arrested. When arraigned before Judge Stewart Brewster in police court he told his age and explained the reason for being here.

Goldsberry unhesitatingly admitted that his grandfather was dead, but that he lived to be 100 years old. Goldsberry was discharged.

Burns Assured of Dynamiting Reward

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—The $10,000 reward offered by the State two years ago for apprehension of the persons responsible for the dynamiting of The Times building in Los Angeles is about to be paid. A bill appropriating that amount to satisfy the claim of Detective William J. Burns passed the Assembly 42 to 14, and was sent to the Governor, having already passed the Senate.

San Francisco members all voted against the bill.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Practical Points in Care of Poultry

Successful Chicken Breeders Look Closely to the Little Things.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

About two weeks before weaning time, put the old hen and her brood in a good roomy brood coop, large enough to accommodate the youngsters until cold weather without crowding. It is so easy to make the change while the hens are with their chicks and so difficult after they are weaned.

If you are trying to raise a lot of young chicks and your time is limited so that you are inclined to throw your youngsters a lot of feed at most any time, having no fixed time or regular amount of feed, better adopt the hopper plan. Keep the hopper full of good mixed grain and another with good beef scraps and a third with grit and oyster shell. A large self-feeding water fountain to be filled once a day. These conveniences, with a good clean roosting coop, and chicks will do better and grow faster than they will as cared for by many hurried people.

The poultry house, either for young chicks or grown fowls, should be so arranged as to allow thorough airing and sunshine. Nothing is so conducive to health as sunshine and fresh air, and nothing will cause more troublesome diseases than a dark and damp house with the air and sunshine kept out. Stick a pin here and prevent wholesale trouble.

It is a good plan to protect your young and growing broods from rats and vermin of all kinds by the dexterous use of a little one-inch mesh poultry wire. It is a much more economical way than to wait until you have one or two broods all broken up by these night raiders, and then go to work to prevent it. Better make the first move yourself than to wait for the rats.

Look out for lice and mites these warm days. Do not let them get the upper hand of you. Keep the house clean, especially the roost poles, and at the points at which they rest upon the support. These are the breeding places. A quart-sized oil can with a small spout, filled with kerosene, can be used to drown them out effectually, running it right along over the roost pole, so that it becomes thoroughly saturated. To rid the fowls of what they have upon their bodies, use a good ready-prepared lice powder of some reliable make and dust the feathers thoroughly of each specimen. Night is a good time to attend to this part of the business.

A good chick feed for small and growing chicks may be made as follows, although it is usually cheaper to buy it ready-mixed: Fine cracked corn, 50 pounds; cracked wheat, 20 pounds; cut hulled oats, 20 pounds; cracked kaffir corn, 7 pounds; broken rice, 5 pounds; millet, 5 pounds; whole flax seed, 1-2 pound. Mix thoroughly and feed dry.

Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me where I can buy some Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks? I have been raising them for a number of years, and now I want to get some new blood. I may buy either the eggs or some cockerels to mate with what I have on hand. I have never seen them advertised anywhere, but thought you would know all about them.

I will certainly appreciate some information about them.

Seneca, S. C. R. B. JACKSON.

Answer.—There is no such breed as the Rose Comb Barred Rock. You are either breeding the old American Dominique, which is colored almost the same as the Barred Rock, but has a rose comb, or you have Wyandotte blood mixed in with Plymouth Rock, and by selecting the Rock color with the rose comb you have what you thought was a Rose Comb Rock.

The American Dominique is a much older breed than the Plymouth Rock, but has never been very popular or extensively bred. It is a good one, nevertheless. It is, however, about two pounds lighter in weight than the Rock and for that reason has not taken the place as a general purpose fowl. If you are really anxious to have a rose comb barred fowl, we would advise you to get the pure Dominique and breed it in its purity, unless that is what you have already. We could not tell without seeing what you have.

Ducks.

FOR SALE—Five ducks, one drake, fawn and white Indian Runners, Harshbarger white egg strain, now laying. Drake matches ducks perfectly in coloring. These fine birds for $15. Should be prize-takers if exhibited. G. Embry, 24 Trotti Street, Kirkwood, Ga. 32-13-5

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Druid Hills Parcel Brings $100 a Foot

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun Buys and Will Build—Peachtree Road Residence—Other Notes.

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun purchased to-day from Druid Hills a large lot on Ponce DeLeon Avenue for $21,400, and will build a handsome home on it. Forrest Adair, Jr., of the Forrest & George Adair agency, handled the transaction. The front foot rate was over $100.

This property is east of S. H. Venable's palatial stone house at the northeast corner of Oaddale Road and Ponce DeLeon Avenue and is known as the old Arkwright place. Mr. Arkwright picked it some time ago to build, but went to another location and swapped his old lot to Druid Hills for the new one. The dimensions of Dr. Calhoun's lot are 214x450 feet. Dr. Calhoun now resides on the north side of West Fifth Street, between the Peachtrees. He expects to keep his present home.

G. Arthur Howell will also soon be a resident of Druid Hills, having started recently a home on Fairview Road to cost $7,500.

J. Clark McMichael has decided to go out Peachtree Road. He broke ground yesterday for his $15,000 two-story residence on the west side of Peachtree just south of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate, half a mile south of Buckhead.

Deeds Gone to Record.

Dr. W. J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National Bank, has sold as executor of the L. F. Blalock estate a triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Whitehall and Humphries Streets to Alex Reeves for $13,750, $3,000 of which was cash. The dimensions are 121 by 200 by 170 feet.

Deeds have also gone to record in the transfer of 385 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to James Morgan from Mrs. Cecelia B. Wallace for a consideration not named. Mrs. Wallace bought this property April 15 from W. J. Brown, Sr., who had acquired it August 3, 1912, from W. J. Brown, Jr., and Milton Strauss for $9,000.

J. J. West has sold to Mrs. Jessie L. Thrash a 50 by 190-foot lot on East Tenth Street, 50 feet east of Bedford Place, for $6,750.

Confirms Brookhaven Sale.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton Superior Court, has confirmed the sale made last Tuesday of the Brookhaven Club to the Brookhaven Estates at $90,000.

This was one of the details which had to be cleared up before a transfer could be made to the Capital City Club, and the said transfer is expected to be made in a few days. The terms of the sale, it is said, have already been agreed on. Possession can be had within two weeks, and it is expected that the Capital City Club will make substantial improvements.

Hotel Planned for Decatur.

Decatur will soon have a hotel costing $100,000, if plans of the Decatur Board of Trade do not go awry. Robert W. Ramspeck, secretary of the board, is in correspondence with Eastern capitalists who have become interested in the project, and a definite announcement is expected to be made in the course of a few weeks.

Who Will Head Realty Board?

There is considerable gossip in Atlanta realty circles as to who will head the Atlanta Real Estate Board this year. The election will be held in July, following the annual outing Saturday, June 14. Among names suggested are those of Harris G White, now vice president; W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and Carlos Lynes, of the Thomson & Lynes Agency. Other names will probably find their way into the list of nominations. Ralph O. Cochran was the first president of the organization, and he served two terms. Then came Charles P. Glover, the incumbent. A ruling now in effect makes it impossible to stand for re-election, and this will bring out new candidates.

Saturday, June 14, is the date fixed for the annual outing of the real estate men. The outing will be in the nature of a barbecue, and the place will be Cold Springs, where "Jack" Slaton's barbecues are usually held. Mr. Glover and M. C. Kiser, chairman of the entertainment committee, are busy arranging the details of the barbecue, and they expect a record crowd to attend.

R. D. Dorsey's New Home.

R. D. Dorsey, former Buckhead grocer and now connected with the W. E. Treadwell Real Estate Agency, is building a handsome home on the east side of the Ivey Road, 600 feet north of Piedmont Road. This place is north of the recently completed home of W. J. Stoddard. The house will have a stone front, the stone having been taken from Mr. Dorsey's back yard. Mr. Dorsey recently exchanged his former home on Piedmont Road, near Roswell Road, for several lots on Fifteenth Street.

COUNTRY PLACE

TEN ACRES, 6-room cottage, chicken runs for 1,000 hens, spring branch of pure water; house wired for electricity, has bath and sewerage; fine growing crop of oats, corn and sweet potatoes; land in good state of cultivation, only 900 feet from Marietta car line, in one of the best neighborhoods in Georgia. Will sell on terms or exchange for renting property; has quantity of young fruit trees, grape vines and fig trees.

184 SOUTH AVENUE, between Grant Street and Cherokee Avenue, near churches, school and car line; will sell for $2,200; $1,000 cash, balance payable in 2 1-2 years, 5 per cent. This is a bargain house; has 5 rooms.

300 WEST FOURTEENTH, for $1,050 cash. This is second door east of Clarke Street. Property worth $1,350; owner must have money.

Fourteenth Street Residence For Sale or Exchange---$3,000 to $5,000 Sure Profit

ON FOURTEENTH STREET, WEST, just a few doors from Peachtree, we own a strictly modern, up to date and practically new residence of nine rooms. This place also has a cement driveway, a garage, and the lot is 50 by 180 to an alley, and is on the south side of the street. The house itself is attractive, has all conveniences. The street, as everyone knows, is one of the most select North Side residence streets. We will sell this property $2,000 under value. On this basis, $6,000 cash will be required, balance of $6,500 will be divided into seven or eight annual payments if desired. $3,000 to $5,000 profit here sure in next three years. Several parties have applied for lease at $75 per month. This means about 7 per cent net on the investment.

Or we will exchange the property for well located income city property; accept or pay difference.

OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY
Requires Forty-Eight Battleships by 1915 to Hold Its Place of Safety.

England carries an unsolved and serious difference with our country over the free passage of American coastwise vessels through our own Panama Canal.

It is impossible to see how our country, in dignity and honor, can meet England's demands along this line.

Japan has sprung a serious issue with our country over the right of California to protect the interests of race and the safety of the citizen by a law regulating the alien and in time hostile ownership of her lands.

Neither England nor Japan would be willing all alone to precipitate a conflict with the United States over the impossible issues they have raised. But with England upon the eastern and Japan upon the western coast of our country in simultaneous demand, and in co-operative menace, the tension becomes both probable and startling.

In the Far East the myriads of Russia and the millions of Austria and Germany front each other behind the gathering antagonism of Pan-Slavism and Germanism.

Western Europe has just emerged from one of the fiercest and bloodiest wars of history in the Turko-Balkan struggle.

Italy has recently concluded a blood-fought peace with the armies of the Sultan.

The war spirit is in the spirit and blood of nations on both sides the sea.

And yet the American Congress, with an apathy that is blind and with a parsimony that is worse than narrow, refuses to equip the American Navy with strength and power to keep the peace in these tremendous times. Every officer and soldier of the American Navy demands two battleships every year. The American Senate demands two battleships every year!

The General Navy Board, without a dissenting voice, makes public its declaration that not one of our thirty-three battleships is ready for war if war should be declared. Germany could put to sea forty-one battleships now. France is ready to-morrow with thirty-eight battleships, and Japan holds in instant readiness thirty-six battleships, while England's mighty navy overshadows them all.

For a hundred years no nation has initiated war with England—because of England's awe-compelling navy.

THAT ENGLISH NAVY IS THE MIGHTIEST PEACE-MAKER AND PEACE-KEEPER THAT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

One hundred years ago it sailed up the Chesapeake and Potomac and burned our capital at Washington. To-day it is great enough to batter our battleships on all the seas and ride once more in destroying insolence to reduce Washington to ashes.

The Georgian is as ardent an advocate of disarmament and universal peace as any newspaper published in America.

But The Georgian has held, and holds to-day, that as long as other nations build big navies we must build a big navy to keep ourselves sufficiently formidable to discourage attack and to protect ourselves if we are assailed. We do not believe in having a large navy one moment longer than a large navy is necessary—any more than we believe in carrying a gun unless a gun is necessary to protect our lives. This newspaper would have welcomed the acceptance of Winston Churchill's proposition for England and Germany to lead the movement for all nations to stop building battlehsips for a single year of peaceful experiment.

But the proposition went unheeded. England and Germany and Japan are building battleships, and the United States must build battleships, too.

The naval experts that we select and pay to tell us what our country needs tell us explicity that to hold its place of safety OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY REQUIRES TO HAVE FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS IN 1915.

THEREFORE, THIS NEWSPAPER, WHICH IS ABOVE ALL THINGS AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, UNHESITATINGLY PLANTS ITSELF IN WHOLE HEARTED AND PERSISTENT ADVOCACY OF FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS BY 1915.

CHEER UP
By M. E. MURRAY.

LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

How Do You Think This Would Look?

This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.

Rev. John E. White Writes on "Was Pierpont Morgan a Christian?"

He Was as Good a Christian, He Says, as His Circumstances Permitted, But His Training and Environment Were Against Him.

Written for The Georgian
By REV. JOHN E. WHITE.
Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE editor of an influential religious paper in Missouri has raised the question about the Christianity of J. Pierpont Morgan.

It may be regarded a venture upon ground of doubtful delicacy to question publicly the religious status of one recently deceased, and particularly to suggest a doubt about the Christianity of a man who made the confession of his personal Christian faith the most conspicuous feature of his last will and testament.

But this editor deals quite fairly and gently with Mr. Morgan and advances no severe judgment against the great financier. He only indicates the perplexity of reconciling the difficulties and contrasts of what Mr. Morgan believed and his life and career implied.

He simply asks whether the Morgan of absolutely orthodox creed, emphatic of humble dependence and devotion and attachment to the Saviorhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ can be harmonized with the character and career of the Morgan who was a man of the world known among men as "cold, severe, austere, indomitable, Ceaserish" and whose life was absorbed in financial ambitions, in personal self-assertion and in laying up treasures on earth for himself and those who helped him in his plans.

It is easier to criticise this editor for raising such a question on the ground of bad taste, than to deny the point of his question on the ground of Christianity itself.

The Rich Man's Religion.

The absolute standard of Christianity is in its founder. The record of whose life and teachings is in the New Testament. He incarnated, defined and illustrated the ideal Christian character.

In the New Testament Christianity took up the case of the rich man and dealt with it in a way to warn and alarm those who had great possessions. That Christianity, according to its founder and its first followers raised solemn questions in the path of every rich man and dealt of his soul, is a matter of open knowledge.

But the state of mind in modern Christianity is far from encouraging explicit and personal applications of these early principles to the rich Christians of to-day. Orthodox Christianity ordinarily does not take itself quite seriously on this subject, and to apply the message of Jesus to modern men of wealth consistently would risk a serious resentment.

Imagine a great monarch of Mammon in Jerusalem "who gave no public impression of being deeply in love with its fellows and showed no positive evidence of being sorely troubled over the awful hurt of the world, nor sympathized expressly with the stress and strain and struggle of the poor, nor offered his powerful hand directly to the oppressed and the distressed; who accumulated a private fortune twenty times as great as Croesus over in bulk of it not for education, not for sending the gospel of the Atonement to the uttermost parts of the earth, not for printing Bibles, not for feeding, clothing and housing the poor; but to his son to perpetuate the great house of Mammon and its power in the world of finance and make to itself other millions."

One cannot help wondering how Jesus Christ would have fitted that situation into his scheme of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how he would have dealt with one of his disciples who insisted on playing that ambitious role. We know at least that the rich men of Jerusalem were not entirely comfortable about the Sermon on the Mount. Nicodemus was a magnate of money at that time.

Perhaps Nicodemus is the luminous exposition of our question, though Mr. Morgan was a more pronounced champion of Christ than ever Nicodemus dared to be, and his creed was as correct as Peter's, and his personal conduct as irreproachable as the rich young ruler's, who had kept the commandments from his youth up.

Mr. Morgan as a Symbol.

There is nothing new or strange in Mr. Morgan's relation to Christianity. He symbolizes to extraordinary advantage the type of the modern millionaire Christian. In his creed and private piety he was in possession of all the Christianity his circumstances would permit.

So far his example is a distinguished one and stands as a rebuke to many with far less fortune who profess Christianity with far less to show for it.

But the issue relating to Mr. Morgan personally in fairness deserves this conclusion: He was as good a Christian as his training and environment made possible.

The remarkable words of personal confession in his will may be indeed his confession rather than his creed. When we read them we may well wonder if he had not realized deeply the pathetic imperfection of a multimillionaire's Christianity.

He threw himself wholly upon the grace of God. He was no longer rich, but poor, no longer great, but small, no longer masterful, but humble.

That confession was the next best thing for a multimillionaire, who desired to inherit Eternal

Winifred Black Writes on "In Love With Love and Not With Anybody"

Being a Little Talk With a Girl Who Thinks That There Is No Joy in Life Because a Certain Young Man Has Ceased to Care For Her.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NOW, my dear girl, why don't you face the truth, the disagreeable, embarrassing truth; look it fairly in the face, and be done with it once and for all?

The man does not care for you. Put all idea that there may be some "misunderstanding," etc., out of your puzzled little head. A man who loves a woman doesn't let any misunderstanding come between him and the girl he loves.

He's tired of you and wants to get rid of you. Why do you pursue him? He is free, white and more than twenty-one. He has a right to love whom he pleases.

He acted as if he loved you? Well, if he did he certainly does not love you now, and what are you going to do about it?

Don't Run After Him!

Write to him again; go and see him? Never, never, never again. You are miserable without him you say. Well, if you run after him you will be miserable also and lose your own self-respect in the bargain.

Don't lose that, whatever happens. Don't do anything that will make the girl you see in the glass ashamed to look you straight in the eyes.

Your heart is broken? No it isn't. It isn't even cracked. Just twenty, poor thing, and "nothing to live for!" Why, it's a joke, a pitiful little joke, but a joke nevertheless. In a year from now you'll laugh at it yourself.

Twenty and a broken heart! Wait till you're forty and see what a tough, ready-to-wear heart you really have, and be glad of it.

This man you are sighing for, ten to one you'd be perfectly miserable with if you did get him. Almost any woman of thirty and past can tell you strange tales of the queer specimens she loved, or thought she loved, when she was twenty.

I remember a dark-browed youth with mournful eyes. I thought him a regular heart-breaker. I used to be afraid to desperate secret in my embarrassed glance.

When I heard the dark-browed youth had asked my dearest friend to marry him I thought I'd never live through it, but I did, and danced at the marriage supper, too, and rather gayly at that.

I met the dark-browed youth just the other day. He looked to me rather more than commonplace, and how I had ever admired those hollow eyes and that sallow, stupid face I can't imagine.

You'll Get Over It.

His wife was with him and she did not seem seraphically happy. They say she is a bit of a nagger. I believe I'd have been more than a bit of a nagger if I had been tied up for life to that melancholy failure of a man. So much for dark eyebrows and mournful eyes.

No, my dear, you are not in love with this poor man that you want to follow and write to and call up on the 'phone. You aren't in love with love, that's all. You'll get over it and smile to think it over some sane, comfortable day.

You're just twenty, little girl; only twenty. What on earth do you know, even about yourself? Get acquainted, get acquainted with that little person you see every day in the mirror. How do you know what she may turn out to be?

What! Throw her at some runaway man's head; let her make a goose of herself over some one who can't appreciate her? Don't you do it, little girl. Don't even think of doing it.

And, whisper, don't even hint your secret to a soul. Keep it to yourself, whatever you do, and have it to think of when the moon shines and there's soft music playing somewhere. Hug your foolish story to your breast and be nice and miserable for a while. It will do you good.

She Cried, Too.

Your mother! Oh, you haven't hinted this to her? Why not?

She wouldn't understand? What makes you think that? She's probably the one person on earth who would understand perfectly.

Would it astonish you to learn that when your mother was twenty, before she met your father, she had her romance? Get her to tell you about it to-night when you two are alone and the house is still. You'll be surprised to find that she's really a human being, this mother of yours.

Oh yes, she cried too, and beat her breast and wished to die, and the man didn't look at all like the one she married, either.

Come, come, you are not the only human being who ever was "hopelessly in love" at twenty. Millions of others have lived through it, like yourself. It isn't so important to be happy—it is important to be sensible. Make up your mind to that and some day you'll be astonished to find that you can't remember whether that heart-breaking wave of his hair was on the right or the left side of the part.

Pouf, it's over, the heart-ache and the misery and the folly. All over, and you are all the better

250 SHRINER VOTES OUT OF 460 PLEDGED TO ATLANTA

"TAG DAY" SECURES LARGE SUMS FOR UNFORTUNATE CHILDREN

MORE THAN HALF OF SHRINE VOTE PLEDGED FOR ATLANTA; BOOSTERS SURE OF VICTORY

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 12.—Atlanta now claims, as pledged, 250 of the 460 votes in the Imperial Council for the 1914 meeting place. Memphis still is alive and the fight has seemingly narrowed down to the two cities.

If Atlanta should lose the committee's recommendation the Georgians will carry the fight to the convention floor.

Potentate Forrest Adair declares it is all over but the shouting. "Atlanta will be the Shrine Mecca in 1914, unless I am very badly mistaken," he said.

The first cheering news received by Atlanta when the delegation arrived Sunday morning was that the seventeen votes of Texas are "sewed up" for Georgia. Then followed Oklahoma, New York, Pennsylvania, Oregon, British Columbia and Honolulu to the Georgia standard.

Memphis, however, still is a menace to Atlanta's chances. The Tennesseeans claim that they were first in the field for the meeting, and they are using this argument constantly.

Memphis' tactics may result in

U. S. to Prosecute Firms Cutting Pay As Tariff Revenge

'They'll Land Behind Bars if They Try to Intimidate Congress,' Says Senator Williams.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The criminal clauses of the Sherman anti-trust act and the prosecuting powers of the Department of Justice will be used in defense of the reductions in duty prescribed by the Underwood tariff bill.

If combinations are found among employers to restrain trade and intimidate Congress by cutting wages and closing factory doors, criminal suits will be instituted.

This is the frank intimation to-day of Senator John Sharp Williams, of the Senate Finance Committee.

"The protected interests are coming to us with the same old plea that they are threatened with ruin," said Senator Williams. "They threaten to cut wages or assert that it will be necessary to cut them. This is plainly intended to intimidate Congress. If it should be discovered the interests are combining to this purpose, the Sherman anti-trust act is sufficiently broad to cover such acts, and we may land some of these gentlemen behind the bars."

TAG DAY RECEIPTS CERTAIN TO ESTABLISH NEW RECORD; ATLANTA GIVES LIBERALLY

Atlanta capitulated Monday to an irresistible force of the city's fairest young women. It was a willing, but costly surrender.

Each of the thousands of captives, as a token of surrender, gave up some part of his or her hard-earned money and received a tag which indicated the money was for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Orphans' Home.

One of these tags was supposed to insure the "tsggee" against being surrounded again by a group of the fair soldiers and submitting to another depletion of his exchequer.

But it didn't.

The person who had any appearance of prosperity was a marked man.

Mayor Declares He Earns Pay Watching Council Politicians

Makes Hot Reply to New Attack by Thomson—Breach Continues to Grow.

"If I did nothing more than watch the Council I would more than earn my salary," declared Mayor Woodward Monday in answer to Albert Thomson's charge that the Mayor's office had become a nonenity in the city government.

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Woodward, "the charges are not worth the waste of breath in answering them, still I want to assure the people of Atlanta that I have my hands full watching the politicians, and I am going to continue to watch them and their activities."

Councilman Thomson's attack on the Mayor, the second he has made within a fortnight, has been much more discussed than his first, because it follows Council's vindication of the officials accused of graft.

Politicians assert that the breach between the Mayor and a number of the Councilmen is beyond hope of reunion.

CALL DETECTIVE BURNS TO UNRAVEL PHAGAN MYSTERY; HURRIES BACK FROM EUROPE

William J. Burns, the world-famed detective, probably will take charge of the Phagan case.

The man who unearthed the dynamite outrages and brought the McNamara brothers to justice, will in all probability come to Atlanta within the next few days and lend his efforts toward clearing up the mystery of the death by strangulation of Mary Phagan.

This information was made public Monday following correspondence between Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Mr. Burns since the discovery of the body in the pencil factory.

Mr. Burns is now on his way from Europe, and will arrive on Tuesday or the following day. Upon his arrival in New York he will confer with detectives there and then proceed to Atlanta.

Credit Largely Due Felder.

The services of Mr. Burns have been secured largely through Mr. Felder's efforts, it has developed. Upon Mr. Felder's retention by the citizens of Marietta and relatives of the slain girl to work on the case he journeyed to New York for a conference with

CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON JAPANESE LAND LAW

Democratic Leaders Decide on Referendum Following President Wilson's Request for Johnson's Veto.

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—Referendum of the anti-alien bill to the people of California has been determined on by the Democratic leaders of the State.

This was learned to-day following the receipt of a telegram from President Wilson to Governor Johnson asking him to veto the measure.

The bill was scheduled to reach Governor Johnson to-day from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, where it has been held up.

The session of the Legislature ends to-day, and under the provisions of the constitution 30 days ensue during which time the Governor may sign or veto the bill. At the end of that time if it receives no action at the hands of the Executive it becomes a law.

Wilson Asks Johnson To Veto Anti-Alien Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Navy Short of Coal, Battleships and Men.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Alarming developments at the State Department and the White House following the delivery of Japan's protest against the California alien land bill, regarded practically as an ultimatum, has called attention to the unpreparedness of the two offensive and defensive arms of the Government.

Summarized, the unpreparedness of the United States, as obtained from these sources, consists in the following detail:

First. There is only a deceptive preponderance of fighting strength in ships as between Japan and the United States.

Second. There is not coal enough in the Pacific coaling stations to maintain a battle fleet for one month on cruise.

Third. No preparation has been made by the Navy Department since the Japanese situation became acute to remedy the fatal negligence by establishing a sufficient coaling base anywhere outside the limits of the United States proper.

Fourth. The United States will be forced, in case of hostilities in the Pacific, to make its base at San Francisco or at Puget Sound, and it has not one-fifth the coal there that should be there.

Fifth. The Navy Department has a working arrangement with five transcontinental railroads by which they could be utilized in emergency, but, so far, no specific contract for the shipment of coal to the Pacific Coast has been made.

Sixth. The total coal on hand in the navy on July 1 last was 361,757 tons. There were contracted for 63,499 tons. Since that time, according to officials of the Navy Department competent to know, there has been no effort to get larger deliveries or to get options on coal steamers or to make preparation for the rush of material to the Pacific Coast.

Seventh. There are at least eighteen vessels of the battleship type which have been held in reserve and others in ordinary which would be necessary to put in complete commission in case the Atlantic fleet of battleships now equipped were sent to the Pacific. These battleships in reserve need about 10,000 men to fill up their complements, and Congress has not been asked for authority to recruit sufficient men for a fleet. The law limits the enrollment of the navy to 51,500 men. The present enrollment is about 47,000, and if completed up to 51,000 men would scarcely be more than sufficient to equip the emergency fleet of battleships which would have to be sent to the Pacific.

The condition of the Navy Department, as summarized above, was obtained to-day from three of the experts in the Navy Department upon whom the Government would have to depend in case there were a call to arms.

Senators Applaud Plea for Bigger Navy.

NEW YORK, May 12.—"Any man who will put in the way of the United States the slightest obstruction, either by his voice or vote, to a progressive national defense program, who can see that our safety, the peace we love so much and the peace of the world depends on a navy larger than the navies of Europe, is lacking in true patriotism."

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs, sitting at luncheon on Vincent Astor's yacht, Noma, at West Point, heard this statement from the lips of Representative Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana. The committee, just about to land on the rocky slope of the war academy on annual inspection, applauded Broussard to the echo. He continued:

"International peace—yea, even the solid establishment of international arbitration will never be realized until the United States adopts a naval program that will push our navy ahead of the navies of Europe and keep it there. And that President who adopts and prosecutes such a policy will be heralded by the country and the world as a greater world benefactor than either Washington or Lincoln.

"I have just listened to Senator Johnson, of Alabama, a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, declare that he was not in favor of a larger army, but in favor of a larger and better trained militia, that might combine at a moment's notice with the regular army.

Wants Cadet Corps Enlarged.

"I quite agree with him, provided we so train our militiamen to work harmoniously with the regulars. Likewise, with the committee whose guest I have the honor to be now, I agree that the cadet corps here at West Point should be enlarged, whether we need them or not. It is well to be prepared. No greater insurance of peace may be found than preparedness for war.

"But how about the navy? Such a policy will do nothing to help the navy. It comes to my notice always that the men in Congress who show the greatest opposition to provisions for an adequate navy are the first in an emergency to cry for war, war, war.

"I saw men at Baltimore oppose a greater navy plank and I now hear them demand that we go to war. They talk with the wisdom of Bourke Cockran, who, once when a member of the House, declared the United States need fear no invasion because right in his city were men who with cobblestones could repel any invading army of aliens.

"Block Navy; Cry for War."

"This idea of blocking the navy and then clamoring for the defense of our national honor was well exemplified recently in Congress when one of my colleagues, a man very dear to me and a sterling American citizen, made a fiery demand that we gird up our loins in defense of our honor. Yet this same man was opposed to a progressive battleship building policy.

"For ten consecutive terms I have been selected secretary of the American group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for International Arbitration. This will bear me out, I think, when I claim for myself a love of peace."

TAGGERS BUSY; ALL ATLANTA IS EAGER TO HELP

Few escaped without the signs of repeated surrender. Many proudly wore as many as a half dozen of the lavender tags.

Records Sure to Go.

Before the Tag Day campaign was in progress long it became known that all records would be broken. The record last year was $5,100. By noon Monday the girls were bringing in buckets full of nickels, dimes and dollars to headquarters in the Peters Building. The huge display of wealth was soon tied up in bags and the offices began to take on the appearance of the Bank of England.

The campaign was well organized. Before the average business man had finished his breakfast, the girls were being mobilized at headquarters. By the time that this same business man was in the street car or in his automobile en route to his office, the maidens armed with hundreds of tags were in waiting for him.

Few Able to Escape.

There was no escape. On every corner there was one or more of the attractive, smiling girls stationed. If a person succeeded in getting by one of them without buying a tag it was only to be repeatedly stopped until he finally gave in.

The girls stood at the doors of all the public buildings. They swarmed into the offices in droves. Not many attempted to make any resistance. He who did was not wise. He spent an uncomfortable day. They even invaded the Capitol, tagging everyone from Governor Brown down to the most humble attache.

BURNS CALLED ON TO CAPTURE PHAGAN SLAYER

Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, on the case with a view to getting the great detective to come here.

At that time the elder Burns was in Europe investigating the disappearance of Wilberforce Martin, and upon being cabled of Mr. Felder's desires replied that he would return immediately.

Monday it was announced that Burns was on his way to America and that Colonel Felder would take up the Phagan case with him. Felder, it is understood, will give up his own fee to employ Burns and will assist in raising funds for the purpose.

Mr. Burns' warm personal friendship for Mr. Felder has served in a large measure to draw the wizard into the local mystery investigation. The history of their acquaintance leads back to the South Carolina dispensary graft case, which Mr. Felder prosecuted and on which the detective was employed. It was there the two met.

When the Phagan murder was committed and its baffling details confronted Atlanta police, Mr. Felder lost no time in communicating with his friend. That the man who has struck terror to the hearts of criminals by his marvelous knowledge of their ways and his wonderful deductive powers will quickly clear up the mystery is declared certain by those who have followed his work.

With the final rounding up of the evidence against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee nearing completion, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday began the process of elimination of unimportant matter and the shaping of the case for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Waits to Arrange Evidence.

Whether the case will be ready for that tribunal this week is a matter of doubt. The great mass of testimony presents a tangle which will require some time before it is straightened out and arranged properly. Solicitor Dorsey declared Monday morning that he would not present the matter to the Grand Jury until it has been put into a clear, concise form and can be easily handled.

Quick disposition of the cases of the accused men is assured once the matter is placed before the Grand Jury. Should that body find the evidence sufficient to hold Frank and Lee to trial, their cases will be taken up immediately before Judge L. S. Roan, who will open the Criminal Court division of the Fulton County Superior Court on next Monday.

The evidence against both men will be placed before the Grand Jury simultaneously, according to Mr. Dorsey.

Sleuth Leaves Mysteriously.

Much importance is attached to the departure of Solicitor Dorsey's detective Monday morning for parts unknown. While the Solicitor, when questioned as to the destination and purpose of the detective's trip, would give no direct answer, it is believed that the mission is in connection with some clew in the Phagan case which has been unearthed by the mysterious investigator.

The fact that a large number of "character witnesses" are now being interrogated in Brooklyn, N. Y., the former home of Frank, and in other parts of the country bears out this supposition.

That the detective has not confined himself to the theory followed by city police officials in their accumulation of evidence against Frank and Lee, however, was admitted by Solicitor Dorsey and also the possibility that he has stumbled upon an important clew.

Wife Sees Frank in Tower.

While police are exhausting every available source of information to unravel the mystery, Frank and Lee remain in their cells in the Tower chafing with impatience.

Mrs. Frank went to the Tower on Sunday afternoon, paying her first visit to her husband since his arrest nearly two weeks ago. Mrs. Frank was accompanied to the jail by her father, Emil Selig, of 68 East Georgia Avenue. They remained in consultation with the prisoner for nearly an hour.

It was definitely learned Monday that Chief Lanford had not completely eliminated Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the pencil factory, and that there still exists a suspicion that he may know something of the crime.

In fact, the night watchman has come to be regarded as the real puzzle in the case.

Chief Lanford is not satisfied as to Lee and any possible part he may have played in the tragedy. He declared he had lain awake at night trying to figure out satisfactorily the negro's position.

First Words Still Puzzle.

The point that prevents detectives from eliminating Lee is his first statements to officers following his discovery of the dead girl's body. When he first called the police station, he said he had found a "white woman dead in the basement." The officers who hastened to the factory declared it would have been impossible for him to have discerned whether the girl was white or black from his position when he found her.

When the officers arrived, Lee told them the girl was lying flat of her back. They went into the basement and found the dead girl lying face downward. Lee also told them that the girl had a wound in the back of the head.

Detectives say it is possible that the negro, in the excitement of finding the body, may have been honestly mistaken as to its position, but, at the same time, they find these statements a stumbling block.

Facts Hard to Explain.

"Whenever I figure on eliminating Lee these contradictory statements always bob up," said Chief Lanford.

"There are many apparently little things in this case that become veritable mountains when we try to get over them. Newt Lee's statements may have been entirely innocent—if they were, they are hard to explain and get out of the way."

The Chief smilingly added:

"If a fellow doesn't care to become gray-haired or land in the insane asylum, he'd better not spend too much time trying to figure out the truth of this mystery and reconcile all of its varied phases and features."

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

Urge Diligent Search.

"Find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Work in co-operation with the police, work with anyone, work any way that might lead you to success; let your chips fall where they may. You are employed to hunt the murderer until he is found and convicted. It matters not who is guilty."

Five men from the detective agency are working on the case, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Harry Scott. Through City Detective Black the Pinkertons work in connection with the city police.

Leo M. Frank was visited by Mr Rosser at his cell in the Tower Sunday. They were together only a short while. Mr. Rosser stated he had only paid a "social visit" and had not discussed the case.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Monday that he was satisfied with the progress of the case so far. He said that the investigation unavoidably had been slow and burdened with a mass of evidence, much of which would have to be eliminated in the final consideration of the case. He was pleased with the new developments which he said added much strength to the line of evidence his men are building up.

Heard Farmer Slain; Lynching Is Feared

Sheriff to Rush Negro From County. Killing Results From Cow Trade.

FRANKLIN, GA., May 12.—To prevent possible mob violence, Sheriff Lee Taylor plans this afternoon to take Sam Owensby, a negro, to either Atlanta or Newnan for safekeeping. Owensby to-day shot and killed Brooks Lane, a prominent young farmer, on his plantation three miles from Franklin. The trouble resulted from a trade for a cow.

The negro claims self-defense.

Sheriff Taylor when informed of the killing hurried to the scene and brought the negro to Franklin, where he was lodged in the Heard County jail. There is a large crowd in Franklin and feeling against the negro is strong.

dark horse selection. The committee on the next meeting place will make its selection Tuesday and inform the Imperial Council of its action either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Make Big Noise for Atlanta.

If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here, and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf, dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gathering most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"Atlanta Spirit" Helps.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them that we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however, they get away from that hotel doubt in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.

And I believe it.

Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 in twelve hours for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

BULL MOOSERS ASK G. O. P. TO CONVENE FOR REUNION

Hadley and Cummins Lead Fight for Reorganization of Progressives and Republicans.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Representatives of the Progressive forces of the Republican party meeting in Chicago to-day voted to ask the Republican National Committee to call a national convention at as early a date as practicable to consider matters of party reorganization.

The resolution was voted through, following its advocacy by former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and other Progressive leaders. Senator William D. Borah, of Idaho, opposed the resolution.

After the resolution was adopted a formal statement was issued by State Senator James S. Trautman, of Kansas, a member of the program committee. The statement follows:

Move Is Explained.

At an informal conference of Republicans from eleven States, held in Chicago May 12, 1913, it was voted that it be submitted to the National Republican Committee as the opinion of those present that a national convention of the party should be held this year at as early a date as may be practicable for the purpose of considering the expediency of changing the basis of representation at future conventions so that delegates shall proportionately represent Republican voters and not the general population to the end that the will of the members of the party may be more accurately determined; also for the purpose of changing the rules relating to delegates and members of the national committee so that the primary election laws of the various States shall be recognized and have full force, and also for the purpose of making such other changes in the method of conducting national conventions and campaigns as shall conduce to giving the utmost possible effect to the principles and policies of the party.

For Reuniting the Party.

It was further the opinion that such a convention might properly and usefully take any other action desirable to reunite the party and to give assurance that it stands for constructive and progressive activity in the affairs of government to the end that the common welfare may be advanced.

It was the unanimous belief of those present that the changes suggested should be made forthwith and that the National Committee be strongly urged to take steps to such an end.

Six Republican Senators who opposed the nomination of President Taft last year are attending the conference, which began yesterday in the Congress Hotel, in the same room where six Governors met and signed letters to Colonel Roosevelt, asking that he become a presidential candidate.

Seventy-five other Republicans who favor a reorganization of the party also attended the first session.

The Senators are Sherman, Illinois; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Borah, Idaho; Crawford, South Dakota, and Gronna, North Dakota.

First Lieutenant T. P. Gordon, Troop B, McIntosh.

First Lieutenant W. E. Williamson, Troop K, Augusta.

First Lieutenant Cecil Neal, Troop F, Gainesville.

First Lieutenant H. C. Ashford, Troop L, Atlanta.

Second Lieutenant H. C. Norman, Troop B, McIntosh.

Second Lieutenant M. S. Levy, Troop K, Augusta.

The officers selected will report to the commanding officer of the post the morning of June 10.

DANIELS RETURNS EAST AFTER SAVANNAH VISIT

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in Savannah yesterday afternoon from Port Royal, completing an inspection of the navy yards on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. He left at midnight for Washington via Raleigh, N. C., his home. The party was entertained informally in Savannah.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue

Sure One Would Reconcile Blease and His Foes

Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, Guest of Honor at Open Air Feast.

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

Disastrous Floods Sweeping Scotland

Crops Badly Damaged and Much Stock Killed by Waters in Perthshire Section.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowrie on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Working on Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple iron case has been entered.

Cafe Manager, Cut By Boy, Near Death

Physicians Say Several Days Must Elapse Before Crisis in Gilbert's Condition Is Past.

The condition of Owen Gilbert, manager of Scherrer's cafe, who was seriously stabbed Saturday afternoon in a Peachtree Street pool room by Arthur Bridwell, is reported practically unchanged.

At Grady Hospital, where the wounded man was taken immediately after the affray, it was said his condition is critical and that it will be several days before they can say if he will survive.

Arthur Bridwell, the 18-year-old youth who stabbed Gilbert, following an altercation that arose over some remark Gilbert is said to have made about Bridwell's mother, is being held by the police, charged with assault with intent to murder.

SINGING LESSONS BY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 12.—Steps were taken to-day to stop the practice of using the telephone for instructing pupils in singing and the hearing of recitations in languages. The discovery of these uses of telephones was made by a city telephone expert who is helping the telephone companies to cut down their expenses in order to increase the wages of girl operators.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

Bill as Outlined Provides for Emergency Notes Issued Against Commercial Paper.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Plan for Regional Banks.

Division of the entire country into fifteen clearing house districts, each district to have its own reserve association, or regional bank, is contemplated in currency reform legislation at the present session.

President Wilson, Representative Underwood and Representative Carter Glass, who will be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, have reached an agreement as to the main features of this proposed legislation. They are to have further conferences to settle the details.

In the message to be sent to Congress shortly after June 1 there will be outlined the general principles of currency reforms he will favor, but will not specify details. No legislation for the Federal control of stock exchanges will be sanctioned by the President, although three members of the Banking and Currency Committee will strive to have this reform included in the bill. Glass is opposed to such legislation.

The members of the committee who favor Federal control of the Stock Exchange will seek an alliance with radical Republicans on this question and force a vote on it. They are believed to be hopelessly in the minority, but will rely on the report of the money trust investigating committee to sustain them.

Features of Reform Plan.

The general reform principles agreed to by Underwood and the President include:

Establishment of fifteen reserve associations, or regional banks under boards of control, the operation of each association to be under the clearing house system.

Each board of control to consist of nine members, three to be of local selection, three to be designated by the President and three others, one each to represent the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Each association may transact a general banking business under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each association to circulate its notes under prescribed conditions, the basis for these notes to be commercial securities of a recognized stability as well as Government, State and municipal bonds. All national banks may obtain membership in the associations and such other banks as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller may prescribe.

The allotment of territory to each of these associations will be left in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senators See Free Wool and Sugar Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sugar and wool Senators confidently predict that these two schedules would not be free on the tariff bill finally passed by the Senate. To-day they said enough Democrats had been lined up to defeat the Underwood program with regard to both these commodities, naming Senators Newlands and Pittman, Nevada; Shafroth, Colorado; Chamberlain, Oregon; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell and Thornton, Louisiana, as among those who would vote against free sugar and wool.

The fight, it was declared, would come on the floor of the Senate, the Underwood bill being scheduled to go through the Senate Finance Committee without a change in either of the commodities.

It was also expected to-day that changes would be made in tariff rates on cattle, wheat, oats and many other commodities. The Democratic majority believes that cattle, wheat and oats should be put on the free list.

Manufacturers Heard In Secret on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Members of the Senate Finance Committee have had private conferences with representatives of manufacturers on practically all of the 600 paragraphs of the Underwood tariff bill.

The privacy that has attended these conferences will be made the subject of Republican attack in the Senate.

Republicans continued to assert they will have enough Democratic support to compel the committee to listen to the pleas of manufacturers.

Wilson Predicts No Changes in Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson is not worrying about the passage of the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate. He told the members of the "newspaper cabinet" at the semi-weekly meeting to-day there was no "rough water ahead," as reported from the upper house of Congress and that he anticipated the adoption of the bill in its present form after comparatively little argument.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

SAVANNAH.—The State Convention of the Knights of Columbus will meet here Tuesday morning. The convention will be in session only one day.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

Evelyn Carter Carrington, Too Pretty for Role, Wins Suit Against Producer.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

House Begins Task of Naming Committees

President Is Expected to Express Preference Regarding Framers of Currency Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With practically the entire membership of the House clamoring for choice places, the Ways and Means Committee essayed to-day the gigantic task of making the committee assignments for the Sixty-third Congress.

The Banking and Currency Committee, which is to frame the kind of currency measure wanted by the President, will be among the first committees named by the steering committee. President Wilson himself is expected to express a preference regarding the formation of this committee.

There are 56 standing committees in the House, and of these only five have been organized.

Winner of 'Racer' Now in Competition for Beautiful Shetland Pony

Youngster is Spurred on By Success in Previous Contest

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PONY OUTFITS SHOWS NUMEROUS CHANGES

"I was a winner of one of your 'racers' last year, and hope to work hard now, and also to be a winner in this pony contest," writes one of the contestants for The Georgian and American pony outfits.

"We take your paper, and think it the best paper going. You shall hear from me again," the letter concludes.

Those who have won Georgian prizes in the past are pleased with them, it is plain. They have no misgivings as to the quality of the rewards offered now—they know The Georgian and American keep faith with their readers.

Meanwhile, the votes roll in.

The standing of contestants is published again today, and those in the race can see how their rivals are faring. It is plain that many are "holding back" votes. This is poor policy, for the "other fellow" can do the same thing.

Besides, nothing succeeds like success, and the fact that your name in the published list is followed by a big total of votes encourages your friends to help you. No use backing a straggler at the tailend, you know.

WOODBERRY HOLDS FINALS THIS WEEK

Exercises Begin Friday and Last Through Monday—Commencement Sermon by Dr. Pise.

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

Color Adopted by Burleson to Conform With International Union Idea.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

Alaska Miner Accuses His Former Fiancee of Stealing $5,000 in Gold Dust.

TACOMA, WASH., May 12.—Traveling afoot night and day, Ben Dahl, a Koyukuk miner of Hammond, reached Fairbanks, 600 miles away, in time to cause the arrest of Norah Moore, whom he accused of stealing $5,000 in gold dust.

He said she had promised to marry him and invest the money in real estate. Instead she decamped in the night for Fairbanks with a fast dog team.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"My sister's husband had an attack of rheumatism in his arm," writes a well-known resident of Newton, Iowa. "I gave him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, which he applied to his arm, and on the next morning the rheumatism was gone." For chronic muscular rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

Good Home Made Bread

Put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoon salt in large bowl. Pour on 1 pint boiling water and 1 pint scalded milk, when luke warm add 1 dissolved yeast cake and 1 quart of flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Add 2 quarts of flour, mix and turn on floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic and until bubbles appear under the surface. Cover and set in a warm place to raise. Cut down, knead, shape into loaves, place in greased pans, cover and let raise to double bulk. Bake in hot oven.

A good recipe, closely followed and good materials will give you good, sweet, wholesome, fine grained, tender bread.

Straighten That Lame Back

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

There's help for weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought relief to thousands. Here's Atlanta testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

Strike in Cincinnati Stops Every Trolley

Mayor Threatens to Revoke Franchise Unless Traction Company Agrees to Arbitrate.

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Completely crippled and paralyzed by the strike of its motormen and conductors, no attempt was made to-day by the Cincinnati Traction Company to operate a single car. The company is preparing to break the strike with imported men.

Mayor Hunt is still waiting for his reply to the letter sent to W. Kesley Schoepf, president of the company, demanding that the company arbitrate the differences with the men. If the company does not answer by 6 o'clock this afternoon, the Mayor will begin court proceedings to annul the franchise.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

BALKAN WAR IS ENDED; PEACE TREATY DRAWN

Combatants Officially Promise to Cease Hostilities—Arbiters to Meet in London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 12.—The war between Turkey and the states of the Balkan Confederation is at an end. The only thing which remains to be done now is the formulation of a treaty of peace.

The reply of the Balkan allies to the recent representations of the powers was handed in to-day and it contains a definite promise on the part of the Balkan states and Greece to cease all hostilities until a peace treaty can be drawn up.

Notification was sent to the powers from Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens that peace plenipotentiaries will be dispatched immediately to London.

It is expected that the peace negotiations will be renewed in London within a fortnight.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which will make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

WOMEN'S PAPER LOSES IN FIGHT FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The long fight of the Lewis Publishing Company, of St. Louis, to have the Woman's Magazine placed on a par and accorded similar privileges with other newspapers by the Postoffice Department, was lost to-day by a final decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Woman, 93, Races in Auto and Wins

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

Members of the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, have been sent the following notice by Mrs. W. S. Coleman, recording secretary:

"On account of the recent floods in Kentucky, the home of Mrs. Roy McKinney, recording secretary general, of Paducah, Ky., has been inundated and her papers confused and damaged. She will send out the certificates for membership just as soon as she is able to resume business."

Delegates Here for Assemblies Come From All Parts of World

Missionary Conference Is First

Top—Dr. W. S. Kendrick, medical adviser. Below—Dr. Marion M. Hull, chairman of the hospitality committee of the Presbyterian Assemblies of Atlanta.

Canvass Shows "Elect Infant Clause" Change Has Been Defeated by Presbyterians.

From every State in the Union and practically every country in the world delegates are arriving in Atlanta to attend the great joint Presbyterian Assembly. The first "long distance" delegate reached here Monday in the person of Rev. Thomas G. Albert, commissioner from Salem, Oreg. Before night the number is expected to swell to several hundred, and from now until Thursday morning every train will bring in its quota.

Dr. B. P. Fullerton, of Philadelphia, field secretary of the U. S. A. Church in the South, has arrived and is particularly busy arranging for the Pre-Assembly Missionary Conference, which will take up the entire day Wednesday. This will be one of the most important meetings of the joint gathering. The morning session begins at 9 o'clock and the afternoon meeting at 2:15 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, while the evening session will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

Notables to Give Talks.

Several world-famous missionaries and clergymen will make addresses at this conference. Two of the most noted are the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, of New York, and the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Alaska. Of particular discussion will be the simultaneous church-wide every-member campaign which the representatives of the United Presbyterian Church will present.

Among other prominent arrivals this morning was Rev. E. R. Sterretts, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the board of education. Like Dr. Fullerton, he found himself a busy man as soon as he reached Atlanta.

Real work of the joint assembly begins Thursday. There will be three distinct conventions with joint meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. Meetings of the U. S. A. Church will be held in the Baptist Tabernacle; the Southern Presbyterians will gather in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, while the United Presbyterians will meet in the Central Presbyterian Church.

Big Meeting Wednesday.

Special interest attaches to the all-day conference of the Permanent Committees of Foreign Missions from the various Presbyteries, including the committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This conference will be held in the First Presbyterian Church.

The meeting of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Wednesday will be one of marked importance from more than one point of view. This meeting will mark the sixth anniversary of the Laymen's Movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Business sessions will be held during the morning and afternoon, the Laymen's Movement joining with the pre-assembly conference on foreign missions; and in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock a banquet will be held in connection with the closing business session. An inspirational meeting will follow the banquet and close the all-day conference.

Facts on Southern Church.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, will be the meeting place of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will convene Thursday morning. Everything is in readiness in this church for the entertainment of the highest court of Southern Presbyterians.

There are fourteen synods in the territory of the Southern Presbyterian church, 83 Presbyteries, 465 candidates for the ministry, 41 licentiates, 1,734 ministers, 3,392 churches, 61 licensures. During last year there were 50 ordinations, 231 installations, 231 ministers died, the pastoral relations between 186 ministers and churches were dissolved, 31 ministers were received from other denominations and 11 ministers were dismissed to other denominations.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

RELATIVES TO CONTEST WILL OF MRS. DODD

Fight Over $100,000 Fortune Left to Mercer Will Cause Executor Currier to Quit.

Relatives of the late Mrs. Barbara E. Dodd will contest her will which bequeathed the bulk of her fortune, approximately $100,000, to Mercer University. Charles E. Currier, executor, has been informed of the proposed contest by Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York, sister of Mrs. Dodd.

A breach with her relatives several years ago caused Mrs. Dodd, widow of the late Philip Dodd, a wealthy Atlantan, to destroy a will executed in 1906, in which a considerable sum was set aside for her brother and sister and their children. It is said a disagreement following the establishment of a sanitarium at Mrs. Dodd's old residence on Whitehall Street, by the sons of Henry S. Dibble, her brother, led to the estrangement.

Attorney C. P. Goree, who drew the last will, said it was clearly Mrs. Dodd's intention that little be left her relatives.

"Mrs. Dodd had considerable trouble with her nephews about a loan on a sanitarium established some years ago," said Mr. Goree. "In fact, she had to take the matter into the courts for a settlement.

"That is why the Mercer bequest was not in the form of an endowment, but as a fund to be loaned deserving young men. I have not been informed of any intention to contest the will and I can not see what grounds the contest will be based upon."

It is recalled that Mrs. Dodd bequeathed to her brother, Henry S. Dibble, $5,000 to be held in trust; that he was to receive only the proceeds from its investment, and that at his death the amount was to revert to the Mercer fund. To her sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, was left a similar sum, without incumbrance.

Charles E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, executor of the will, said Monday that if a contest is made he will quit.

Carnegie Aids Ghent Memorial Project

Agrees to Help Pay Expense of Preserving Room in Which Treaty Was Signed.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Andrew Carnegie, in Washington as conferee on the treaty of Ghent centenary, has agreed to bear a portion of the expense of setting aside as a permanent peace memorial the room in the Carthusian Monastery in Ghent in which the famous treaty was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. Portraits of the participants, famous facsimiles and historic paintings and other objects are to be placed in the room.

Mr. Carnegie is the guest of Mrs. Oliver Ricketson here. Lord Weardale, Neil Primrose, M.P., son of Lord Rosebery, and Sir George Reed, the British conferees, also are in the city.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood upon the belief that he will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 2-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 minutes accomplished the following:

1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

2.—Painted the front of the house in yellow streaks. Painted the rear same color; different design.

3.—Emptied kerosene can in the kitchen. Scattered garden seed in the parlor.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

Valdosta Thief Caught.

BAPTISTS LOSE IN MEMBERSHIP RACE

Defeated Sunday School Preparing to Give Picnic to Christians. Other Contests Planned.

Preparations are under way for the great picnic to be given the First Christian Sunday School by the Second Baptist, the loser in the membership campaign that closed Sunday. The final score of the two schools was First Christian, 60,358; Second Baptist, 52,074.

At the First Christian Church Sunday morning Superintendent C. V. LeCraw, of the winning school, introduced to his audience the superintendent of the Second Baptist, John S. Spalding, who spoke on "What I Think About the First Christian Sunday School."

"You have beaten us," said Mr. Spalding, "but you had to break a world's record to do it. I want to offer the most cordial congratulations of the entire Second Baptist Sunday School."

The contest standing the closing day was:

	Second Baptist.	First Christian.
Attendance	1,253	1,673
Points scored	3,988	5,014
Final standing	52,074	60,358

It is probable that both contestants will enter another campaign with other schools in similar races for membership. To discuss this a meeting of Baptist pastors and superintendents was held Sunday afternoon.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,519 cars.

Charles Smith Butts Tree While Looking to See How Far Chief Was Behind.

If Charles Smith, a negro, had not become possessed with an inane curiosity to see how far behind him Chief of Detectives Lanford was Sunday night, when that officer was giving chase to him, he might have escaped. Smith did turn his head, however, rammed a tree and fell unconscious.

Now he is at police headquarters awaiting trial for careless driving.

Smith, in a two-horse rig, while dashing down Hunter Street, nearly collided with the chief, who was driving home. Lanford gave pursuit to the negro, who abandoned his buggy and took to his heels, with Chief Lanford after him.

Lightning Kills Five In Oil Field Tornado

Great Damage to Wells and Plants Is Done by Wind Storm Near Tulsa, Okla.

TULSA, OKLA., May 12.—At least five men were killed by lightning, many oil tanks and wells set on fire, power plants damaged and other havoc wrought by a terrific electrical and wind storm that swept over the Tulsa oil district early to-day.

At Collinsville, 20 miles north of here, five pipe line builders, employed by the Texas company, were killed when a bolt of lightning struck their vehicle, en route to oil fields. The wagon was demolished and horses killed.

THREW BRICK AT NEGRO HE MISTOOK FOR PUGILIST

CHICAGO, May 12.—Mistaking a negro in a lunch room for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, on trial for violating the white slave law, Amos Geiger hurled a brick through the plate glass front of the restaurant. Geiger was taken to a police station, where he begged the police to release him that he might "get" Johnson.

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or morning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the perfect one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young, expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in those mental distresses which ill prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is preserved in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 133 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

MISS MARY ROBERTA STEADWELL, of Nashville, who will entertain "newsies" at banquet.

MONEY REFUNDED WITH A SMILE

Leading Drug Store Will Give Money Back Should There Ever Be a Case Where Dodson's Liver Tone Fails.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a mild vegetable Liver Tonic which operates so successfully in cases of constipation, torpid liver or biliousness that it has practically taken the place of calomel—the drug which is so often dangerous. All druggists who sell Dodson's Liver Tone recommend it as a reliever of constipation, sour stomach, biliousness and sluggish liver. It works gently, surely and harmlessly. If a bottle should ever fail to give satisfaction any dealer will refund the price paid without question.

The price of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents per bottle. Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone and not some medicine put up in imitation that is not backed up by a guarantee and that may contain harmful drugs.

The Summer Garden

A Unique and Attractive Display of Summer Furniture

Second Floor—Furniture Store

You are invited to enjoy The Summer Garden of Summer Furniture that we have transformed the second floor of our Furniture Store into.

Those planning to make their homes as comfortable as possible against the warm weather will find this display their first aid.

The splendid Crex Furniture—for which we hold the exclusive agency in Atlanta—is here in great variety, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings, in green and the baronial brown that blends so well with mahogany and that therefore can be used after the summer season in living rooms.

—Natural finished maple chairs and rockers for porches, at $1.25 to $5.00.

—French willow furniture in green and baronial brown, upholstered richly, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings.

—And the new Barnegat Cedar Summer Furniture, new this season. The posts of the chairs, rockers, settees and tables are bark-covered, sweet-smelling cedar. More fitting furniture could hardly be found for the porch of a rustic summer home.

But see all the different kinds—that is your privilege here.

Make Summer Dresses With Aid of

Pneu Form

The Pneumatic Dress Form

PNEU FORM is the only Dress Form that shows you exactly as you are. It will stand for you while you study your own figure, create new designs, make alterations, change trimmings, drape or redrape last year's gown. Women who possess a Pneu Form, and who have their dressmaking done at home or at the dressmaker's, need not stand for hours, nor dress and undress forty times a day at the request, "Just let me try this once more, please."

Pneu Form is the only Dress Form in existence which will reproduce absolutely any figure. There is no guesswork about it. It duplicates your exact figure by means of an individual lining made to fit you. This lining is fitted snugly over the corset, reproducing faithfully any variation in size of shoulders or hips. Pneu Form is inflated within this lining.

If your dress fits your Pneu Form it will fit you. The air is contained in a rubber cloth bag, having the general curves, etc., of the human form.

Pneu Form is a skirt form, as the lining is made well down over the largest part of the hips, giving an exact model over which skirts may be fitted and draped. Adjustable rod gives skirt length.

It is the most helpful and satisfactory dress form we have ever seen.

Ask at the pattern counter to have it demonstrated to you.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

Damage Already Reaches Into Millions—Golf Links Are Protected Against Loss.

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Militants Start Week By Burning Boat Club.

LONDON, May 12.—Another week of violence was to-day ushered in by suffragettes. Militant women burned the building of the Nottingham Boat Club, damaging a number of boats. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

The police found evidences of incendiarism. A copy of the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, The Suffragette, was discovered near by.

Game Warden Plans 'Transplanting' Quail

Birds Trapped Where They're Plentiful Will Be Turned Loose in Counties Where There Are Few.

State Game Warden Jesse E. Mercer Monday took up the "transplanting" of quail as his latest activity.

He hit upon the novel scheme as a means of equalizing the distribution of partridges through the State. In some counties there are few of the birds. From others complaints are pouring into the game warden's office that quail are pulling up corn almost as rapidly as it is planted.

When he found in his mail Monday morning a letter signed by three farmers from Seville, Wilcox County, who said they had been compelled to make three plantings of corn because of voracious quail, Mr. Mercer at once dictated a letter giving them permission to trap as many as they wished.

"Trap them," he said, "and I shall take them to other parts of the State."

CITY'S RIGHT TO REQUIRE PURE MILK TESTS UPHELD

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always, worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seconth birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little bouttonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Macon Union Depot Prospects Brighter

Central and Southern to Decide by May 27 on Joint or Separate Terminals.

Prospects are that Macon will get a union passenger station.

Officials of the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways went over the situation at length with the Georgia Railroad Commission on Monday.

The Central submitted blue prints and terms under which it is willing to join with the Southern in building a union station.

The Southern officials asked for fifteen days in which to submit the proposal to the heads of the system in Washington. This was granted, with the proviso that if the Southern does not answer definitely on May 27, both sides shall have ready plans for individual stations.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

Stenographer for Curtiss Aeroplane Company Inherits Fortune, But Likes 'Job.'

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

Employees of Hotel Testify for O'Hara

Senate Hears Denials That Illinois Lieutenant Governor Was Member of Party in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Denials that Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara was a member of a party of four at the Hotel Sherman for three days in January were made to-day to the Senate's sub-committee investigating charges of immorality against the Lieutenant Governor.

Employees of the hotel told of serving drinks and food to a party of three, two women and one man, in a suit there. Members of the Chicago Press Club testified that they saw O'Hara at the club on the night of January 17 and the two subsequent nights.

ESTHETIC THIEF IN BEAUTY SHOP RAID

Mr. "Nancy" Burglar Shows a Fondness for Hair Nets, Rouge and Nail Bleach.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit us to introduce Mr. "Nancy" Burglar.

He is conspicuous among the crowd by his powdered face, his curled hair, rouged cheeks and manicured nails. If you see him, notify the police, as he is wanted for rifling the Bookhammer hair-dressing parlors, 71½ Whitehall Street, Sunday night.

This is his first appearance in Atlanta and police are bewildered by his queer tastes.

Secures Beautifying Outfit.

Here is what he secured in his raid on Bookhammer's:

One gross of hair nets; a box of eyebrow pencils; one dozen orange sticks; eight jars of cuticle ice; one dozen boxes of face powder; ten brilliant bandeaux; two bottles of brilliantine; four fancy barettes; several jars of rouge; manicure sets; cuticle knives; a gas hair-curling stove, and a large quantity of nail bleach.

Robbery Puzzles Chief.

Police Chief Beavers, when informed of the amazing robbery, scratched his head and thought for a long time.

"Now who would have thought that a thief could stoop so low as to raid a hair-dressing establishment?" he finally exclaimed in disgust. "No doubt he's going to get all 'dolled up' and parade down Peachtree Street. Will wonders never cease?"

ZANDERO AND CHRISTIE TO MEET IN 10-ROUND GO

CHICAGO, ILL., May 12.—Ernie Zanders, globe-trotting middleweight star of this city, has grabbed off a nice match at last. He clinched up a 10-round contest with Gus Christie of Milwaukee last night, the affair to be decided in the baseball park at Madison, Wis., on the night of May 20. There is to be no decision if the men are both on their feet at the finish. The weight has not yet been decided upon but probably will be 156 pounds at 3 in the afternoon. There is a big convention there at the time.

BRYAN TO SPEAK AT AUBURN.

AUBURN, ALA., May 12.—Secretary of State Bryan will be one of the speakers at the home-coming week at Alabama Polytechnic Institute on June 2.

CLERGYMAN PRAISES ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of lagrippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and midday chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

"Gentlemen: I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial."

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES, Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

DELAY IN CHURCH UNION COUNSELED

Dr. Matthews, Northern Presbyterian Moderator, Fights Merger Move in Assemblies Here.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12. "I do not think the question of a union of the several branches of the Presbyterian Church should be broached at this time, as our assembly is to be the guest of the Southern Presbyterians," said Dr. Mark Allison Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern Division), here to-day. "We have always stood for closer co-operation, but we do not want to be indelicate and present the question when we are the guests of our Southern friends."

Dr. Matthews came here from Dalton, Ga., where he preached yesterday to a former congregation. He will go to Atlanta Wednesday.

"No doctrinal controveries whatever will come before our assembly," said Dr. Matthews. "The elect infant clause will not be an issue with us, as our doctrine is that every infant dying in infancy is saved. Our questions will be mostly administrative and constructive.

"We shall consider the increase of missionary efforts, enlarging the scope of the college work, larger endowments for colleges, ministerial relief, extension of the home mission work and establishing and building new churches.

"This year we plan to raise a $10,000,000 permanent endowment for ministerial relief, so that every aged minister of the echurch may receive at least $500 to $600 a year, and that widows and orphans of ministers may be provided for."

OVER $2,000 AN ARISTOCRAT.—"If your pay exceeds $2,000 you are an aristocrat," said Professor T. S. Adams, of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, at Madison, in discussing the proposed income tax. He would lower the tax exemption to a $2,000 limit.

$30,000,000 FIRM BARS 'CIGS.'—Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, new president of the Rumeley Company, a reorganized $30,000,000 farm implements manufacturing concern, announced that his firm would not employ young men who had the cigarette habit.

Diplomas Needed to Avoid Teachers' Test

High School Instructors Not Having Degrees Must Take Exams Under New System.

A large number of Georgia's 1,500 high school teachers are squirming uncomfortably on the anxious seat as a result of the new system of certification that will become operative with the new school year.

M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, said Monday that many teachers were inquiring as to their status under the new regulations, which for the first time require examinations for high school teachers.

The fears of some of the teachers will be allayed by the information that the degrees from accredited institutions will be accepted in lieu of examinations. Most of the others will have to submit to tests.

DIAGNOSES HIS OWN CASE.—Diagnosing his ailment as an attack of appendicitis, Dr. Murray B. Kirkpatrick, of Trenton, N. J., drove his automobile to a hospital and then ordered a quick operation upon himself. It was successful.

3 Railroads Fined $1,300 in U. S. Court

Violations of Sixteen-Hour and Safety Appliance Acts Charged in Federal Indictments.

Fines amounting to $1,300 were imposed Monday in the United States District Court on the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railway Companies, lessees of the Georgia Railroad, and the Southern Railway Company for violating the sixteen-hour and safety appliance laws.

Nineteen causes of action were included in the indictment of the Georgia Railroad lessees. The charge was that employees were forced to work more than eighteen hours. The total fine was $950.

It was shown that five Southern employees worked 22 hours. This company was fined $250.

The Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville were fined $100 for violating the safety appliance act.

To-morrow Brings One of Our Notable Twice-a-Year Events, The Semi-Annual

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Maybe you have been awaiting this event---well you might. It is the "Grand Prix" of all millinery sales.

Nothing Atlanta knows approximates it. The hats it offers are those accepted as fashionable this season; correct, smart in unusual ways. The greater part---about all of them---comes from the little shop, Estelle Mershon, in the very center of fastidious New York, 20 E. 46th St.

Included are

Street, Traveling and Dress Hats

Until Now $12.00 to $30.00

Now $6.00 to $15.00

Some one hundred and fifty in all---no describing them---but so varied are the shapes and trimmings that it will be like choosing from regular stock and paying just half.

Is the first spring hat beginning to look a little faded, are you going away this summer, does a newly acquired suit or dress call for a hat to match? Here are splendid affirmative answers for these questions.

The selling begins at eight o'clock when the store opens.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

Makeshift Written Into Wilson-Underwood Bill Arouses Bitter Opposition.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the WilsonUnderwood bill, Senators believe, will e demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson.

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhorff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees today; 2:30 and 4.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Negroes Threaten to Take Black Slayer of Negro Boy From Three County Officers.

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eyewitnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

Throngs Wear Flowers and Attend Special Services—Donations to Old Women's Home Generous.

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apepared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Throngs attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

Called From Bride By 'Irritable Papa'

Costa Rican, Parting From Canadian Girl, Explains, 'Father Kills Men When He's Angry.'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP OUT VICE

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assemblies, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission shoud be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

Phone Report Inconclusive.

VALDOSTA.—The committee from the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce which went to Atlanta to investigate the claims of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company relative to an increase in telephone rates here has returned and has made an inconclusive report.

Quick Thinking Wins

Is your thinker fed right for prompt action?

At a dinner not long ago Thomas W. Lawson was talking on the subject of success.

"Success in finance," said Mr. Lawson, "is due in a great measure to prompt action. The doubting, hesitating, Hamlet type of man had best keep out of finance. He is quite sure to be swamped."

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

"Alcohol Is Death to Woman's Good Looks," Says the Noted Beauty.

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 59 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarships and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Douis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

WASHINGTON ATTRACTS EUROPE AS ART CENTER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Washington's advancement as an art center has brought it to the attention of Europe strongly in the past few years, according to Seymour J. Thurber, a collector of Chicago. The masterpieces of the Old World adorn Washington salons, and the capital now is considered one of the most prominent art markets, he says.

'Private John' Allen Explains His Title

Cited War Record(Too, When Political Opponent, a General, Asked Veterans' Vote in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Private John Allen, who for many years represented Mississippi in the House, has explained how he got his title. He declared that when he first was a candidate for Congress he was opposed for nomination by a Confederate general.

The general and he addressed a crowd at a town around which a battle of the war had been fought. The general told how he had fought and won that engagement and appealed for votes on that score.

Allen then spoke and declared he, too, had fought there, but as a private. He added that after the battle he had stood sentinel while the general slept. He asked that all generals vote for his opponent and all privates for him. They did so.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Toasley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:

Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.
Durham Jewelry Co.—Silver cup.
Elyea-Austell Co.—Silver cup.
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Fisk Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Republic Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Studebaker Corporation—Silver Cup.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—Auto speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One barrel Triple "E" oil.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—$15.00 raincoat.
New South Rubber Co.—232x3 1-2 Southern red tubes.
Auto Supply Co.—One pair $3.50 gloves.
Motorcycle Events—
Alexander-Seawald Co.—One pair motorcycle gloves and leggins.
Elyea-Austell Co.—One Troxel motorcycle saddle.
U. S. Tire Co.—Two motorcycle tires.
Hendee Mfg. Co.—One electric motorcycle horn.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—One pair motorcycle leggins.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—One motorcycle speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One-half barrel Triple "E" oil.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes

Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

WHERE are the ring "sluggers" of yesterday—the men who could drop a right against the chin, or drive a left to the body and call it a day's work?

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the derailing switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

* * *

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty rounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight championship titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can use "Yankee Doodle" on an opponent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 138-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packy is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hopes for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Bud" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can win with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

* * *

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

Luther McCarty won the heavyweight championship by mussing Jim Flynn and Al Palzer. In both these contests Luther left his punch at home on the piano.

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the club now, which is a reflection of the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants immensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram. "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

John Robinson, manager of Bat Nelson, is spending a few days in Chicago. Kenosha promoters are after Bat to meet Rudy Unholz.

* * *

Kid Young is a frequent visitor at George Gaelelis' shoe shining parlors. Young is busy telling the various fight fans what he will do to the next boy who musters up enough courage to meet him in the roped arena.

* * *

Illinois boxing fans are clamoring louder than ever for a boxing bill. Recently Mayor Harrison, Barrett O'Hara and other officials witnessed several sparring exhibitions at Springfield and were loud in their praise for the manly art.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White, writes from Chicago that his protege is getting into fine shape for his return match with Joe Thomas at New Orleans, May 19. Lewis says White is sure to beat Thomas again. White will go after Jack Britton if he succeeds in defeating Thomas.

Fight Referee Usually Correct

Floto Defends Charley Eyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

* * *

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knockout and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

FOUR MOTORCYCLE RIDERS ARRIVE FOR THE BIG MEET

Four of the speed merchants who will compete on Jack Prince's motorcycle track on the old circus grounds arrived in the city Sunday, and were on the roads around Atlanta all during the day, tuning up their racing machines.

The one-quarter-mile saucer will be in readiness for them to practice on by Friday. Mr. Prince announced last night that he would have the track proper completed by that time and would then start work on the seating.

Most of the famous motorcycle riders of this country will be in Atlanta for the race meet, and some fine sport is promised. Records are also sure to go glimmering.

Mr. Prince estimates that the riders will average 90 miles an hour on the saucer.

SHERIDAN DECIDES TO GIVE UP ALL ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—Because it interferes with his job, Martin Sheridan, policeman, former champion discus thrower, has decided to drop out of athletics.

"You can state positively for me," Sheridan is accredited with saying, "that I am through with competition for good. I would like to take part in the games, but I find it interferes with my job, so I have decided to cut it out. There is no doubt I could go back into competition and do as well as I did. I went out to Celtic Park the other day and threw the discus 13 feet with all my clothes on. I will probably go out there sometimes for exercise, but that will be all.

EDDIE M'GOORTY SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH HOUCK

DENVER, COLO., May 12.—Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, has signed to meet Leo Houck, of Boston, in a 10-round bout May 27. The weight agreed upon is 160 pounds at 3 o'clock. Rudy Unholz is working with McGoorty at the Arvada training quarters.

Evans Writes of Eyesight in Golf

Most Players Depend On One Optic

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 10.—There has been a great deal of discussion of late in the British golf magazines and newspapers concerning what is called the "master eye in golf." This phrase seems to indicate that each player has one eye which serves better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball. British periodicals therefore discourse at length upon the subject and advise a study of one's best optic. An unintentional experiment was made in England a short time ago during a team match by a member of the Cambridge University team. One eye of the gentleman had been undergoing medical treatment and at the time of the competition was bandaged closely. In spite of this handicap he halved the match with his opponent and played splendid golf at times; on occasion, however, he found difficulty in judging distances.

* * *

BEING interested in the subject I made a few experiments myself to determine which was my master eye, and I have concluded that it is my left. Perhaps I cock my head back a little on the back swing and on the down swing to the actual hitting; at any rate, I seemed in my experiment to make a greater use of my left eye. I think Valle's weight testing machine could be used profitably in this discussion, because if a player sways backward the line from his left eye to the ball is shorter and less oblique. In any inclination there is a tendency to shorten the line from the left eye to the ball. Of course, I am arguing from the standpoint of a right-handed golfer. I should think the right eye would be more important to the left-handed player.

In the execution of the longer shots the ball is played so far away from the body that one can not get both eyes immediately over the ball and allow the club to lie naturally, which, by the way, is one of the most important things to be borne in mind. In cases where there is a marked discrepancy in the strength of the eyes the stronger must be necessarily most favored.

* * *

ONE of my great little rules has always been to keep my eyes in such a position that lines of equal length drawn from each eye will meet at a certain point on the ball. In this case, of course, no eye can be called the master eye. In putting, the hardest shot of the game, I try to keep my eyes directly over the ball. The stroke is so short that it would be hard for me to tell which eye is the better one. Maybe I could do better with only one eye; that seems to be the only thing I have not tried in my fruitless efforts to learn how to putt.

Those players who wear glasses must have special difficulties to overcome when playing golf, and it would be enlightening to know what these are and how they are surmounted; for the whole subject of the application of sight to golf playing is an interesting one.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Boys High and Tech High will meet for the second time this season on Wednesday. The last game resulted in a win for Boys High and the chances are that the team will repeat.

* * *

The race for second place in the local Prep League now lies between Marist and Tech High, with the percentage of games won and lost slightly in favor of the Culverites. They have won four and lost two games. Marist has won three and lost two.

* * *

There were no games played Saturday by local prep teams. A number of the members of the Boys High nine journeyed to Athens to see the second game of the Tech-Georgia series.

* * *

Meyers, of Tech High, proved a sensation in the pole vault in the Prep meet last Friday. He had been practicing for this event only two weeks and never tried to vault before. He just barely missed winning the event Friday.

* * *

A tennis tournament between the winners of the Peacock meet and the winners of the Boys High tournament will be held at East Lake some time next week. Starr, Harris, Candler and Jones are the crack players at Boys High. Sims, Sams and Black are the champions at Peacock.

* * *

The G. M. A. Cadets who were encamped at Lakewood are planing on a water polo team. The boys have been swimming during the past week and Coach Griffin says there are a number of expert swimmers in the camp.

* * *

Marist College will hold its annual field day exercises the first week in June. A medal will be given to the highest point winner. The fight for this honor will be a lively one between Allen, Lewis and Fowler.

* * *

If an all-prep track team is picked this season Marist will have its share of men on it. Allen, Lewis and Fowler are all good men and would give any prep school athlete a hard job to beat them.

* * *

There are about twenty-nve amateur baseball teams in this city and many of them play good ball. The city has provided an ample number of diamonds on which these teams can play.

* * *

Over two thousand school children took part in the exercises held at Ponce de Leon Park Saturday. These exercises lasted throughout the day and many prizes were given to the winners in the different contests.

* * *

The Marist Specials, a nine made up of boys attending the grammar school and all under 16 years of age, won the championship of the city Public School League Thursday from the Formwalt Street School by the score of 7 to 3. Wrigley, Adair and Lidell were the star performers on the Specials.

M'CARTY THINKS LITTLE OF FIGHT WITH PELKEY

CHICAGO, May 12.—Luther McCarty's bout with Arthur Pelkey at Calgary on May 24, will be nothing more than a training stunt, according to the champion, who is in Chicago with Manager McCarney.

On his arrival here, McCarney found telegrams awaiting him from Promoters Coffroth and McCarney of the Pacific Coast clubs asking the champion to meet the winner of the "Gunboat" Smith-Jess Willard fight to be staged in San Francisco, May 17. McCarney said he thought Smith no great attraction on the coast, and that of the two fighters he preferred to have his man meet Willard.

A CHILD SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH

LITTLE ANNIE DONALDSON, AGE 8 YEARS, NO. 7 RICHARDS ST., CORNER TOMBLIN ST., LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. S. P. DONALDSON, AFTER 3 YEARS' BATTLE SAVED AS IF BY A MIRACLE.

Words can not describe or express the supreme feeling of joy and happiness which to-day fills the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Donaldson, who reside at No. 7 Richards Street, New Era division, this city. Little Annie, 8 years old, not larger than an ordinary child of 5 years, was saved from death and restored to perfect health in a seemingly miraculous manner. For three years this little child has been suffering from some inexplainable cause. Her stomach would at times bloat to immense proportions, high fevers would frequently attack her, followed by dreadful chills or bilious attacks, her mind was clear, but her memory weak, her sleep restless, sometimes screaming out, almost frightened to death. Her breath, especially in the mornings, was very foul, dark circles under the eyes, very nervous, her appetite was changeable, ravenously hungry at times, at other times the sight of food was nauseating. All the careful attention which loving parents could bestow was given to her, and all modest attempts were resorted to, but the child's condition grew worse. The mother did what hundreds of other people were doing. She called at Coursey & Keating's drug store and obtained a treatment of the Quaker Extract. With anxious mind she watched for results, after the child began taking the wonderful remedy, and what were the results? To the amazement of the whole family, the child expelled a monster tapeworm, head and all complete, alive and squirming. It is hard to believe this monster is 41 feet in length. How many children and people are being tortured by parasites, and how they go on for years dosing and doping for what they think is some form of stomach trouble when it really is worms of some kind that is causing all your trouble! If it is worms, Quaker Extract will expel them. If it is caused from other causes, such as catarrh, indigestion, constipation, the Quaker Extract will do more for you than any other remedies on the market to-day.

This case is so remarkable that many people will doubt it, yet all are at liberty to investigate, write, phone, wire or call at the child's residence, the above address. The father is a carpenter by occupation, was born and lived most of his life here in Atlanta, and he has a host of friends and they will vouch for his word. The Health Teacher said the people would soon realize the power of the Quaker Remedies, and such cases as this should certainly convince every sensible person. Once more the Health Teacher recommends the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm to any person who may suffer with rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder or blood trouble, and will expel worms.

So call to-day at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta Street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Remedies. We prepay express charges on all orders of $3 or over.

Court "Graft" Temptations

ONLY those who have had the privilege to serve in King George of England's household can realize the temptation that is thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected officially with the court. To the credit of the members of the royal staff it has to be said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department were implicated, shows, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than can be resisted.

Punishment in such a case is swift and severe. So soon as any one joins the royal household it is made perfectly plain to him or her that any attempt to gain personal profit by reason of their position means instant dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no mater how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the mere fact that the confidence of the sovereign has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from the court.

No Orders From the Palace.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes that any one known to be connected in any way with the royal household, or possessed of any influence there, is not approached with suggestions that he might benefit his own pocket by falling in with schemes propounded to him. It is not many months since one of the best known officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department was offered a check for $3,000 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply a certain article to the King.

It was known, of course, to those who made this offer that the official in question had access to the blank forms upon which these warrants are drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of the least difficulty to get one of these signed by the then Lord Chamberlain among his daily pile of documents. The offer was indignantly rejected and the whole matter reported to Viscount Knollys, his majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm which made the proposal is still without the royal patronage and is probably wondering why no orders from Buckingham Palace come its way.

It is not always money that is the bribe offered to court officials. Social advancement is often the bait dangled before them. A case in point may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the master of the horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with the suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting young ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the political world, and openly promised the official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme he was then threatened with the lady's grave displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from his position. His retort was prompt and surprising. He went direct to his official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the household and the lady in question no longer receives invitations to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how popular one is until one is appointed to a position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from people of whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from all quarters upon those whose good fortune it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story may be told in this connection. About this time last year an extremely well dressed lady went up to an official of the Lord Chamberlain's department in Piccadilly one morning, addressed him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for having "neglected her for so long," and made him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. This done, she tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and has not to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

King Edward's Champagne.

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few months ago. He was written to by a firm of cigarette merchants hailing from America, forwarding him samples of their goods, together with the cool intimation "that they were well aware that the cigarettes were just the thing the King could smoke and enjoy," and that for every 1,000 that His Majesty ordered the official approached could have 60 per cent of the account repaid.

The reply was curt, but deserved. It was to the effect that the samples had been handed by the courtier to his chauffer, who pronounced them rubbish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in pressing them upon his sovereign.

It was due to the late King Edward, one of the finest connoisseurs of wine who ever lived, being served with a very indifferent brand of champagne one morning that the gravest case of corruption that has ever been proved against the officials of the British court was brought to light. He asked the name of the firm who supplied it and what on earth it was doing in his cellars. He pursued this matter to some length, and ultimately found that one of his most trusted servitors had been substantially bribed to introduce this wine into the bins of the then Prince of Wales preliminary to an application for the royal warrant in the ordinary course. It is on record that the offender in this case was continued in his position just under half an hour after King Edward was informed of his identity.

Didn't Mention Names.

A number of enthusiasts, returning from an important match in New York, were playing cards in a railway carriage. Among the number was a rather shady individual who had lost one eye, but seemed to be winning freely, and time after time he scooped in the money, put down by his less fortunate comrades.

This continued for some time, when the man at the head of the table felt he could stand it no longer; so he rose in a fearful temper and remarked:

"Look ye 'ere, boys, someone here is cheatin'. Now, I don't want to mention any names, but if he does it again I'll knock his other eye out."

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

Fear of "Squeeze" and of Bullish Weather Report Cause of Lively Demand.

NEW YORK, May 12.—As the result of bullish weather reports the cotton market opened firm to-day, first prices ranging from unchanged to 7 points higher. Brown and Hayne, the big traders of New York and New Orleans, were on the floor of the exchange, but traders did not attribute the ruling strength in certain months to their presence.

There was no market in Liverpool, this being a holiday there.

Trading was light on and after the call. The principal feature was the strength of July. There was suspicion of bull operations against the short interest and a bullish weekly report on the weather, especially on the Eastern belt, where rains are badly needed, was expected.

The market during the forenoon trading was steady with July 10 points higher; May and other positions 4 to 5 points higher than the initial level.

Prominent operators from the South are in New York and they are bulls.

Offerings were light and scattered, said to be profit-taking.

July continued under persistent demand by the same brokers who have been absorbing July contracts daily, believed to be for McFadden and other large spot interests. Shorts were nervous and the impending "squeeze" in at option is becoming more obvious day after day. The local stock is being depleted daily.

Some scattered rains fell over the eastern belt last night, but not so much as first predicted. Indications point to more showers.

Owing to the holiday in Liverpool, business was extremely light. The buying was aggressive, while the selling was light and scattered. During the afternoon session the market maintained the advancing tendency and each option increased its gain over the previous close. May was 8, July 9, October 12, December 11, and January 9 points higher than Saturday's final.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 4 to 5 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—General showers fell over Arkansas during the past forty-eight hours and scattered showers occurred in the Atlantics. Indications are for continued showery weather in the eastern States. Dry, warm weather continued in the western half of the belt. Temperatures were right in the eastern half of the belt also, except in Northeast Tennessee and North Carolina, which had a cold spell, but the weather will become warmer there soon. Showers have been general in the dry eastern belt since the date of Habersham King's circular.

New York dry goods reports are better, a broader demand and steadier prices being reported.

Our market opened slightly lower, but showed no selling pressure and ruled very steady. It is thought that to-morrow's weekly weather report might be bullish in the eastern States, owing to the dry weather, and apprehension exists of bullish operations directed against the technical condition of the market, prevailing opinion being that the short interest is large.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: Weather will be the dominating influence.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is too bearish.

Miller & Co.: We believe it will require decidedly bad crop news to sustain any advance.

STOCKS ARE DULL THROUGHOUT DAY

Market Entirely Professional Affair—Awaits Important News Before Making Stand.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Sentiment was mixed at the opening of stock market to-day and the list had an irregular appearance. Union Pacific was one of the firmest issues on the list, advancing ½ to 149. American Can preferred was about the weakest, declining a point to 92⅜.

The market was without outside influences, the Stock Exchange in London and the Bourses in Berlin and Paris being closed.

Amalgamated Copper began ¼ lower, but recovered its loss and gained fractionally. Reading also began lower, but made up its loss of ⅜ and within half an hour ruled fractionally above Saturday's final.

United States Steel common was ¼ lower on first sales, but subsequently recovered. Southern Pacific, Erie, Lehigh Valley and American Can common were fractionally lower. Canadian Pacific advanced ¼, but soon lost its gain.

The curb was dull, but steady.

The market was irregular during the forenoon, with many of the leading issues on a downward movement. New Haven advanced ½ to 104. Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Copper and Steel were off ⅛. Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¾.

Stocks receded fractionally in the last hour. Amalgamated Copper ruled around 74⅜c for the loss of ½ from the midday level. Union Pacific was sold in considerable quantity, losing a point. United States Steel sold under 69 but later rallied. Reading was 1¼c under its midday price. Fractional declines were also scored by Lehigh Valley and St. Paul.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged. Other bonds dull.

Condition of Oats Bad; Season Late

Unless Soaking Rains Fall Soon the Greater Part of the Crop Will Suffer Seriously.

CHICAGO, May 12.—B. W. Snow says:

"During the past week I covered the principal oats district in Central and Eastern Illinois and West Central Indiana. These sections include the important territory in both States. Practically all of the crop was seeded late, went into ground that was wet and as a result the plant is very small and condition bad. The surface of the ground is rough and cloddy, leaving it full of cracks through which the air and drying winds draw moisture from around the roots of the plant.

"There has been no drouth and there is plenty of subsoil moisture, but the rough top is drying badly and roots of the plant not developed enough to reach the moisture, and as a result the plant is standing still in growth, losing color and getting an unthrifty start.

"Unless there is good rainfall very soon, the situation will quickly become serious."

DRY GOODS TRADE REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

Sales and shipments for the month up to date indicate conditions better than normal in the dry goods trade. Future business continues to show an increase over that of a year ago. Seeding conditions have been excellent in practically all sections of the country and there are very few spots from which any but the best reports have been heard. The status of growing crops is such as to inspire confidence in trade. Merchants' stocks are turning satisfactorily and reorders on most lines promise to leave wholesale stocks in good condition for the turn of the year.

Salesmen are finding buyers responsive to the offerings in wool dress goods for Fall and sales are well ahead of the corresponding period in 1912. On the most desirable worsteds, mills have sold their output and in many cases are oversold and have been obliged to cut down original orders and reorders can not be placed except for October and November delivery.

Merchants are buying worsted yarns for home knitting purposes freely. Proposed changes in the tariff schedule have already been anticipated in the wool market. Wools in this country of medium and fine grades are on practically a London basis and a tariff change will simply transfer this staple from a ...al to a world market.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

(By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.)

Cattle receipts are heavier than usual. The market is 25 to 50 cents lower on the middle grades, with a heavy supply. Tops and choice in good demand and market steady.

One load of the E. T. Comer cattle were on the market this week and brought $7.37½ per cut, this being the top price for the week. These were mixed highbred Short Horn and Hereford young steers, fat and prime, bred and raised on the Comer farm at Millhaven, Ga., and would do credit to any beef producing section.

With the exception of this load and two loads of Short Horn steers from A. N. Brown at McDonough, all of which were sold to the Atlanta packer, the run was badly mixed, consisting principally of country pick up bunches of all sizes and kinds, which sold at prices fully as irregular as were the cattle.

Hogs continue to come freely. Market has ranged lower in symphty with the Western markets.

Quotations based on actual purchases during the current week:

Choice to good steers, 1,000 to 1,200, 5.75@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,000, 5.50@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, 5.00@5.75; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, 4.50@5.00; good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, 4.75@5.75; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, 4.25@4.75; good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, 4.75@5.75.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.50; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, 4.25@5.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, 3.25@4.00; good butcher bulls, 3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200 average, 8.30@8.50; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, 8.10@8.20; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, 7.75@8.00; light pigs, 80 to 100, 7.00@7.50; heavy rough hogs, 200 to 250, 7.50@8.25.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs, mash and peanut-fattened hogs, 1 to 1½c under.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The metal market was firm to-day. Copper, spot and May, 15¾; June-July, 15.40@15.75; lead, 4.30 bid; spelter and zinc, 5.45@5.55; tin, 49.95@50.25.

Augusta, Ga., wires: "Good rains Saturday night; now clear."

* * *

It is said the strength in July option is due to the reduction of the local stock and fear of a "squeeze" in that option. Shorts are not inclined to be caught with many large lines and they have been covering heavily during the past week or two.

* * *

It is believed the English operators will be strong for a bull card. It is a known fact that Liverpool has tried over and over to bull the market. From the New York stock, 12,000 bales were shipped out Thursday and 6,000 bales were exported Friday. This made the short end holders believe that there was danger and they covered.

* * *

The Fall River Iron Works Mills will close for an indefinite period, beginning May. This will reduce stocks about 70,000 pieces weekly. Other curtailment is under consideration.

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy in the eastern half of the belt, generally fair in the western half, rather general light showers in the southwestern quarter. There was a good rain in the Montgomery, Ala., section and it still is raining there. There were no rains in the west. It is warm everywhere except in North Carolina, where it is unseasonably cool. Indications are for continued unsettled and showery weather in Alabama and the South Atlantics; generally fair elsewhere.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "West of the Mississippi River generally fair weather; east of the river local thundershowers the first half of the week, generally fair the second half. Normal temperatures."

* * *

Selma, Ala., says light but general rains fell throughout Central Alabama and have proven of great benefit to the cotton and corn crops.

* * *

Habersham King's latest circular: "Facts show that temperatures have been favorable to the entire belt, while rains were in excess of needs in Western States and practically absent in Eastern belt, they were just about right in the Middle States, and the week's developments have been favorable over the entire belt. Showers have been general in the dry Eastern belt, since the date reached by this circular."

GRAIN RISES ON LIGHT OFFERINGS

Absence of Cables and Bull Circular on Oats Cause Advance in Chicago.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	103½@105
Corn—No. 2	59
Oats—No. 2	36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 12.—Coarse grains helped the wheat market this morning and the entire list was stronger and higher. Rains are needed in Kansas in the wheat belt and the bears are slow to attack the situation in consequence. There were no cables to-day, the markets of the Old World being closed in observance of Whitmonday.

The routine statistics were about as expected and there were heavier receipts of wheat both at the Northwestern as well as Winnipeg markets. World's shipments were 12,500 bushels, against 11,700 bushels a year ago. Later prices show advances over the resting spots of Saturday of ¼c to ½c.

Shorts were buyers of corn.

Provisions were weak in sympathy with lower hog market.

Wheat closed at the lowest prices reached to-day, but the May was ½c higher, while the more deferred months were ⅛@¾c lower. When May reached 90⅜, July 90¼@90¼ and September 90, the chutes of the longs were opened and the crowd in the pit was filled up with all the wheat that it cared to absorb. Omaha reported Minneapolis as again buying hard winter wheat there for milling purposes, and Duluth was reported as a buyer of July wheat at Minneapolis.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 1,590,000 bushels and Chicago stocks increased 200,000 bushels for the week. The visible supply of corn decreased 1,457,000 bushels and Chicago stocks decreased 230,000 bushels. The oats visible decreased 599,000 bushels and there was a decrease in Chicago stocks of 300,000 bushels.

Cash transactions were small at 65,000 bushels wheat, 115,000 bushels corn and 175,000 bushels oats.

Corn closed ⅛@⅜c higher to ¼c better.

Oats were ½@1¼c better.

Provisions were a trifle higher.

Cotton Stands Poor; Expect Short Yield

Reports From Georgia to Agricultural Department Indicate Total Crop Will Show Decrease.

Reports from all over Georgia to the State Department of Agriculture show that the stands of cotton are unusually poor this year. This condition indicates that the first estimates of the cotton crop in Georgia for 1913 did not allow for a sufficient decrease.

J. J. Connor, head of the department, thinks the decrease in acreage this year would amount to more than the 3 per cent estimated by agricultural journals. This fact, taken in connection with the prosp

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Serious Mistakes Of the Beginner in Poultry Business

Safe Road as Well as the One To Be Avoided—Pure Stock Necessary.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

A great many serious mistakes are being made by beginners in the poultry business from ignorance. True, experience is a very good and safe teacher, but often very expensive in both time and money.

It is for this reason we desire to point out the safe road as well as the one to be avoided.

An idea prevalent with beginners in starting with thoroughbred stock is that all that is necessary is that stock be pure, so-called. In other words, they purchase stock of a neighbor who says his stock is pure, but when an expert breeder or judge looks at this stock he finds that it is anything but what high-class standard bred stock should be.

But you ask, if it is pure what can be the matter with it? A great many things can be the matter with it. The most common mode of breeding where carelessness [illegible] is in letting all classes of the breed run in the breeding pen.

For example, take the Barred Rock which is quite familiar, in a certain way, to almost everyone. Upon the premises of this careless breeder we find hens of forty different shapes and shades of color; from light to almost solid black. These are running promiscuously with a half dozen roosters, all different in color and type of make-up. If you stop to think for a moment, can't you imagine what such a combination would produce, or as the Dutchman said, "what it would not produce?" We can not hope for anything in the shape of uniformity of the young stock we raise when all sizes, shapes and colors were allowed to run together and form the breeding stock.

Culls Bound to Come.

That the best and selected stock will breed some culls no experienced breeder of any breed will deny. They are bound to come. That the tendency is downward instead of upward, if no culling is done, will also be readily admitted by the experienced. Consequently, if we expect to improve or even maintain a high standard of excellence, we must breed from only the choicest specimens, putting those of uniform color and breeding types into the same pens. This plan, and this alone, will prove satisfactory.

Eggs at $2 and $3 seem unreasonable and too high to the average farmer or villager who has made no study of the conditions, and the temptation to buy the cheapest eggs he can get is generally more than he can stand. If he be at all progressive in his make-up, and has any idea of eventually getting the best, the change will come sooner or later when this cheap stock will be disposed of and a fresh start made. But this is expensive in both time and money wasted. True, a man might take quite a low-grade of stock and with years of patient culling and breeding get to where it would make a pretty good showing. But my, what a long and tedious road to travel!

Now, friends, you who are starting or getting ready to invest in pure bred stock and have an eye to the beautiful and the best, take my advice and open your purse wide enough to get something good. If you do not get just what you thought you would, try it again and keep on until you succeed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Highland Avenue Sales Net $20,200

Three Brick Stores Change Hands. Workmen Demolish 301 Peachtree for Improvements.

The Realty Mortgage Company sold to a client of the Charles P. Glover real estate agency to-day the southwest corner of Highland and Greenwood Avenues, three brick stores, for $15,000, and two 20x90-foot lots adjoining the stores on Highland Avenue for $2,000, and two 80x102-foot lots adjoining the stores on Greenwood Avenue for $3,200, making a total in the three parcels of $20,200.

Peachtree Home Demolished.

Workmen began to-day tearing down 301 Peachtree Street to make way for business improvements. This property has had an interesting history in the real estate market. Luther Z. Rosser bought it several years ago for $20,000 and the Forrest & George Adair agency sold it for Mr. Rosser in the middle of March to J. S. Floyd for $100,500, or at the rate of $1,605 a front foot.

The frontage is 62 feet on Peachtree and 74 feet on Ivy Street, and the depth is 260.5 feet. The Peachtree dwelling is two stories and has been used as a boarding house. The property is on the east side of the street, half a block north of Baker Street.

OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY
Requires Forty-Eight Battleships by 1915 to Hold Its Place of Safety.

England carries an unsolved and serious difference with our country over the free passage of American coastwise vessels through our own Panama Canal.

It is impossible to see how our country, in dignity and honor, can meet England's demands along this line.

Japan has sprung a serious issue with our country over the right of California to protect the interests of race and the safety of the citizen by a law regulating the alien and in time hostile ownership of her lands.

Neither England nor Japan would be willing all alone to precipitate a conflict with the United States over the impossible issues they have raised. But with England upon the eastern and Japan upon the western coast of our country in simultaneous demand, and in co-operative menace, the tension becomes both probable and startling.

In the Far East the myriads of Russia and the millions of Austria and Germany front each other behind the gathering antagonism of Pan-Slavism and Germanism.

Western Europe has just emerged from one of the fiercest and bloodiest wars of history in the Turko-Balkan struggle.

Italy has recently concluded a blood-fought peace with the armies of the Sultan.

The war spirit is in the spirit and blood of nations on both sides the sea.

And yet the American Congress, with an apathy that is blind and with a parsimony that is worse than narrow, refuses to equip the American Navy with strength and power to keep the peace in these tremendous times. Every officer and soldier of the American Navy demands two battleships every year. The American Senate demands two battleships every year!

The General Navy Board, without a dissenting voice, makes public its declaration that not one of our thirty-three battleships is ready for war if war should be declared. Germany could put to sea forty-one battleships now. France is ready to-morrow with thirty-eight battleships, and Japan holds in instant readiness thirty-six battleships, while England's mighty navy overshadows them all.

For a hundred years no nation has initiated war with England—because of England's awe-compelling navy.

THAT ENGLISH NAVY IS THE MIGHTIEST PEACE-MAKER AND PEACE-KEEPER THAT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

One hundred years ago it sailed up the Chesapeake and Potomac and burned our capital at Washington. To-day it is great enough to batter our battleships on all the seas and ride once more in destroying insolence to reduce Washington to ashes.

The Georgian is as ardent an advocate of disarmament and universal peace as any newspaper published in America.

But The Georgian has held, and holds to-day, that as long as other nations build big navies we must build a big navy to keep ourselves sufficiently formidable to discourage attack and to protect ourselves if we are assailed. We do not believe in having a large navy one moment longer than a large navy is necessary—any more than we believe in carrying a gun unless a gun is necessary to protect our lives. This newspaper would have welcomed the acceptance of Winston Churchill's proposition for England and Germany to lead the movement for all nations to stop building battlehsips for a single year of peaceful experiment.

But the proposition went unheeded. England and Germany and Japan are building battleships, and the United States must build battleships, too.

The naval experts that we select and pay to tell us what our country needs tell us explicity that to hold its place of safety OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY REQUIRES TO HAVE FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS IN 1915.

THEREFORE, THIS NEWSPAPER, WHICH IS ABOVE ALL THINGS AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, UNHESITATINGLY PLANTS ITSELF IN WHOLE HEARTED AND PERSISTENT ADVOCACY OF FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS BY 1915.

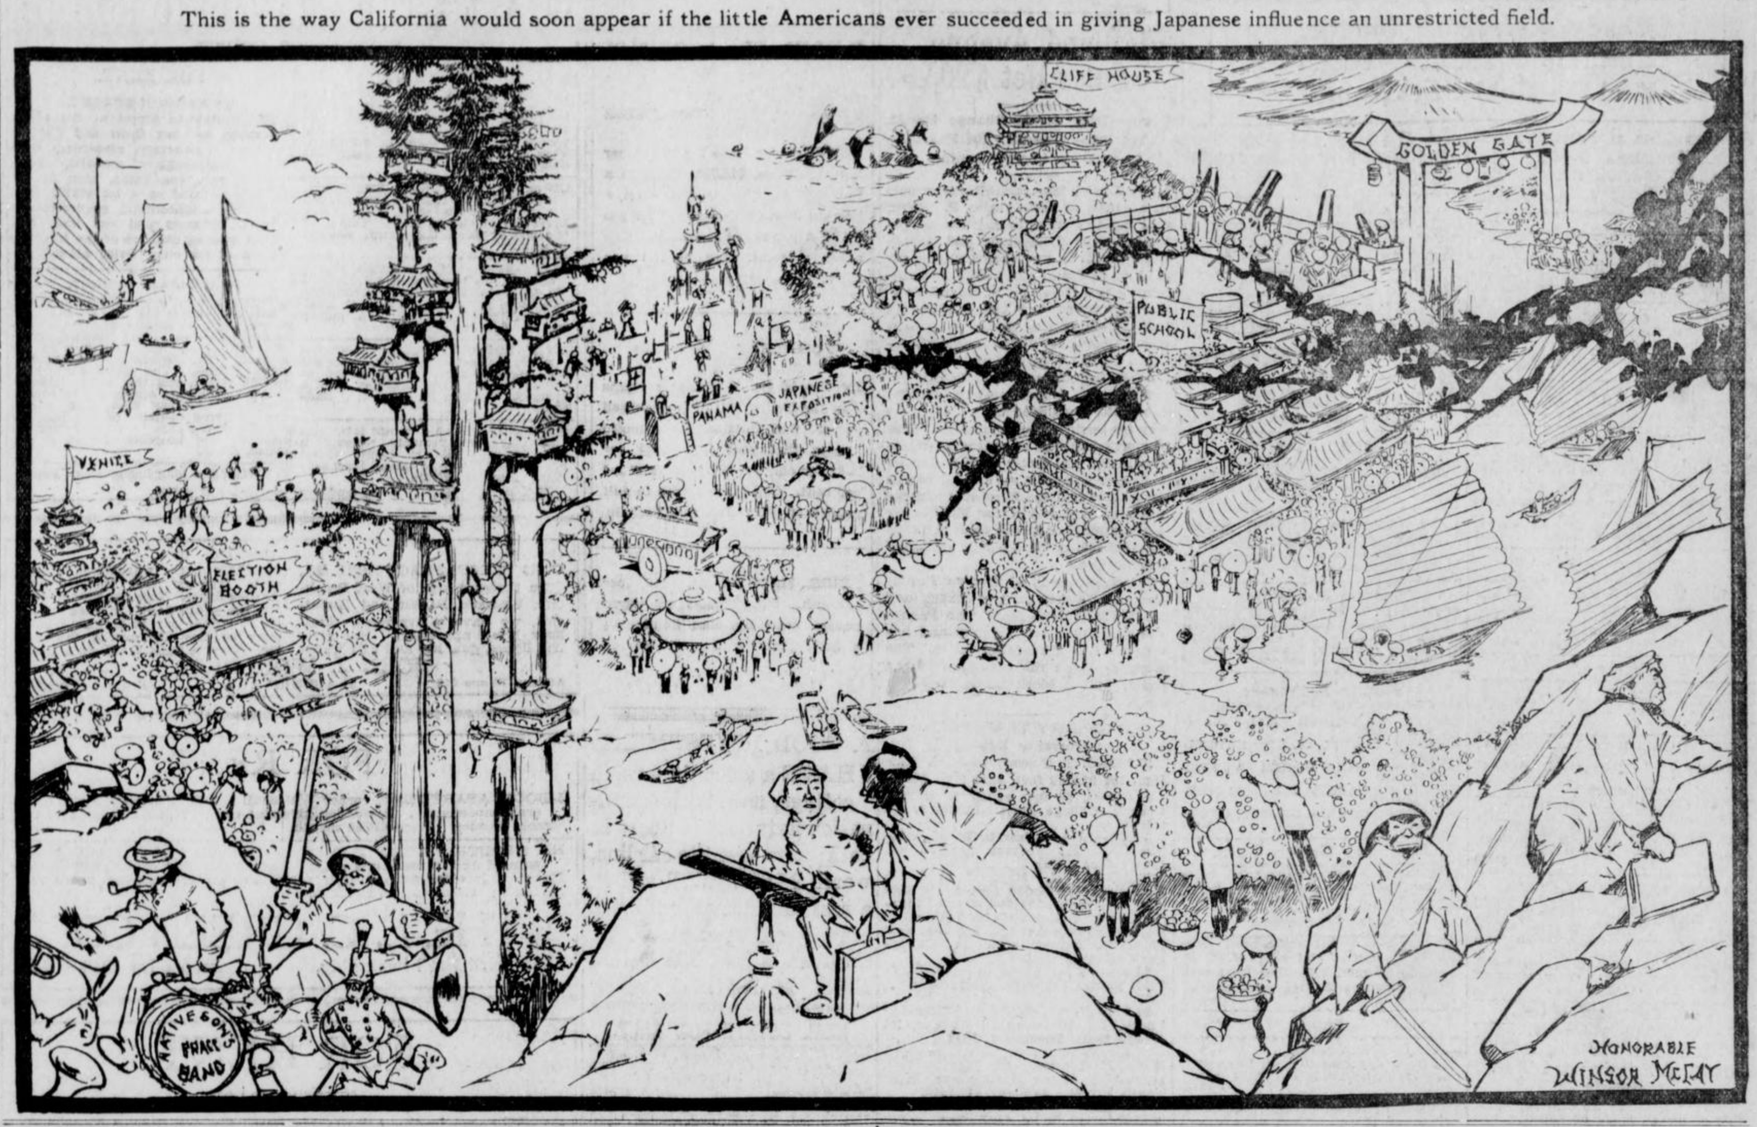
CHEER UP
By M. E. MURRAY.

LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

How Do You Think This Would Look?
This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.



Rev. John E. White Writes on "Was Pierpont Morgan a Christian?"
He Was as Good a Christian, He Says, as His Circumstances Permitted, But His Training and Environment Were Against Him.

Written for The Georgian
By REV. JOHN E. WHITE.
Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE editor of an influential religious paper in Missouri has raised the question about the Christianity of J. Pierpont Morgan.

It may be regarded a venture upon ground of doubtful delicacy to question publicly the religious status of one recently deceased, and particularly to suggest a doubt about the Christianity of a man who made the confession of his personal Christian faith the most conspicuous feature of his last will and testament.

But this editor deals quite fairly and gently with Mr. Morgan and advances no severe judgment against the great financier. He only indicates the perplexity of reconciling the difficulties and contrasts of what Mr. Morgan believed and his life and career implied.

He simply asks whether the Morgan of absolutely orthodox creed, emphatic of humble dependence and devotion and attachment to the Saviorhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ can be harmonized with the character and career of the Morgan who was a man of the world known among men as "cold, severe, austere, indomitable, Ceaserish" and whose life was absorbed in financial ambitions, in personal self-assertion and in laying up treasures on earth for himself and those who helped him in his plans.

It is easier to criticise this editor for raising such a question on the ground of bad taste, than to deny the point of his question on the ground of Christianity itself.

The Rich Man's Religion.

The absolute standard of Christianity is in its founder. The record of whose life and teachings is in the New Testament. He incarnated, defined and illustrated the ideal Christian character.

In the New Testament Christianity took up the case of the rich man and dealt with it in a way to warn and alarm those who had great possessions. That Christianity, according to its founder and its first followers raised solemn questions in the path of every rich man and dealt with him faithfully for the sake of his soul, is a matter of open knowledge.

But the state of mind in modern Christianity is far from encouraging explicit and personal applications of these early principles to the rich Christians of to-day. Orthodox Christianity ordinarily does not take itself quite seriously on this subject, and to apply the message of Jesus to modern men of wealth consistently would risk a serious resentment.

Imagine a great monarch of Mammon in Jerusalem "who gave no public impression of being deeply in love with its fellows and showed no positive evidence of being sorely troubled over the awful hurt of the world, nor sympathized expressly with the stress and strain and struggle of the poor, nor offered his powerful hand directly to the oppressed and the distressed; who accumulated a private fortune twenty times as great as Croesus over in Rome, and who dying, left the bulk of it not for education, not for sending the gospel of the Atonement to the uttermost parts of the earth, not for printing Bibles, not for feeding, clothing and housing the poor; but to his son to perpetuate the great house of Mammon and its power in the world of finance and make to itself other millions."

One cannot help wondering how Jesus Christ would have fitted that situation into his scheme of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how he would have dealt with one of his disciples who insisted on playing that ambitious role. We know at least that the rich men of Jerusalem were not entirely comfortable about the Sermon on the Mount. Nicodemus was a magnate of money at that time.

Perhaps Nicodemus is the luminous exposition of our question, though Mr. Morgan was a more pronounced champion of Christ than ever Nicodemus dared to be, and his creed was as correct as Peter's, and his personal conduct as irreproachable as the rich young ruler's, who had kept the commandments from his youth up.

Mr. Morgan as a Symbol.

There is nothing new or strange in Mr. Morgan's relation to Christianity. He symbolizes to extraordinary advantage the type of the modern millionaire Christian. In his creed and private piety he was in possession of all the Christianity his circumstances would permit.

So far his example is a distinguished one and stands as a rebuke to many with far less fortune who profess Christianity with far less to show for it.

But the issue relating to Mr. Morgan personally in fairness deserves this conclusion: He was as good a Christian as his training and environment made possible.

The remarkable words of personal confession in his will may be indeed his confession rather than his creed. When we read them we may well wonder if he had not realized deeply the pathetic imperfection of a multimillionaire's Christianity.

He threw himself wholly upon the grace of God. He was no longer rich, but poor, no longer great, but small, no longer masterful, but humble.

That confession was the next best thing for a multimillionaire, who desired to inherit Eternal Life, could do for his fellow men

Winifred Black Writes on "In Love With Love and Not With Anybody"
Being a Little Talk With a Girl Who Thinks That There Is No Joy in Life Because a Certain Young Man Has Ceased to Care For Her.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NOW, my dear girl, why don't you face the truth, the disagreeable, embarrassing truth; look it fairly in the face, and be done with it once and for all?

The man does not care for you. Put all idea that there may be some "misunderstanding," etc., out of your puzzled little head. A man who loves a woman doesn't let any misunderstanding come between him and the girl he loves.

He's tired of you and wants to get rid of you. Why do you pursue him? He is free, white and more than twenty-one. He has a right to love whom he pleases.

He acted as if he loved you? Well, if he did he certainly does not love you now, and what are you going to do about it?

Don't Run After Him!

Write to him again; go and see him? Never, never, never again. You are miserable without him you say. Well, if you run after him you will be miserable also and lose your own self-respect in the bargain.

Don't lose that, whatever happens. Don't do anything that will make the girl you see in the glass ashamed to look you straight in the eyes.

Your heart is broken? No it isn't. It isn't even cracked. Just twenty, poor thing, and "nothing to live for!" Why, it's a joke, a pitiful little joke, but a joke nevertheless. In a year from now you'll laugh at it yourself.

Twenty and a broken heart! Wait till you're forty and see what a tough, ready-to-wear heart you really have, and be glad of it.

This man you are sighing for, ten to one you'd be perfectly miserable with if you did get him. Almost any woman of thirty and past can tell you strange tales of the queer specimens she loved, or thought she loved, when she was twenty.

I remember a dark-browed youth with mournful eyes. I thought him a regular heart-breaker. I used to be afraid to look at him for fear he'd read my desperate secret in my embarrassed glance.

When I heard the dark-browed youth had asked my dearest friend to marry him I thought I'd never live through it, but I did, and danced at the marriage supper, too, and rather gayly at that.

I met the dark-browed youth just the other day. He looked to me rather more than commonplace, and how I had ever admired those hollow eyes and that sallow, stupid face I can't imagine.

You'll Get Over It.

His wife was with him and she did not seem seraphically happy. They say she is a bit of a nagger. I believe I'd have been more than a bit of a nagger if I had been tied up for life to that melancholy failure of a man. So much for dark eyebrows and mournful eyes.

No, my dear, you are not in love with this poor man that you want to follow and write to and call up on the 'phone. You aren't in love with him at all. You are in love with love, that's all. You'll get over it and smile to think it over some sane, comfortable day.

You're just twenty, little girl; only twenty. What on earth do you know, even about yourself? Get acquainted, get acquainted with that little person you see every day in the mirror. How do you know what she may turn out to be?

What! Throw her at some runaway man's head; let her make a goose of herself over some one who can't appreciate her? Don't you do it, little girl. Don't even think of doing it.

And, whisper, don't even hint your secret to a soul. Keep it to yourself, whatever you do, and have it to think of when the moon shines and there's soft music playing somewhere. Hug your foolish story to your breast and be nice and miserable for a while. It will do you good.

She Cried, Too.

Your mother! Oh, you haven't hinted this to her? Why not?

She wouldn't understand? What makes you think that? She's probably the one person on earth who would understand perfectly.

Would it astonish you to learn that when your mother was twenty, before she met your father, she had her romance? Get her to tell you about it to-night when you two are alone and the house is still. You'll be surprised to find that she's really a human being, this mother of yours.

Oh yes, she cried too, and beat her breast and wished to die, and the man didn't look at all like the one she married, either.

Come, come, you are not the only human being who ever was "hopelessly in love" at twenty. Millions of others have lived through it, like yourself. It isn't so important to be happy—it is important to be sensible. Make up your mind to that and some day you'll be astonished to find that you can't remember whether that heart-breaking wave of his hair was on the right or the left side of the part.

Pouf, it's over, the heart-ache and the misery and the folly. All over, and you are all the better for having lived through it.

ASSEMBLIES FACE SPLIT ON SOCIAL SERVICE

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

Will the Southern Presbyterian Assembly organically unite with one Presbyterian denomination and cut off fraternal relationships with all other protestants?

This is the question which its commissioners probably will be compelled to answer while the Assmebly is in session in Atlanta.

There is little doubt that the Southern Assembly will combine with the United Presbyterian Church, but it is possible that it will sever its connection with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The Federal Council includes practically the combined Protestant forces of the United States, representing 30 different denominations which have a communicant membership of 16,000,000. One of the chief reasons given by those who favor the separation is their objection to the social service platform adopted by the Federal Council.

Platform of Council.

Here is the platform of the Council to which exception has been taken:

The Church must stand:

1. For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

2. For the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage and proper housing.

3. For the fullest possible development for every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.

4. For the abolition of child labor.

5. For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

6. For the abatement and prevention of poverty.

7. For the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.

8. For the conservation of health.

9. For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases and mortality.

For Aiding Workers.

10. For the right of all men to the opportunity of self-maintenance, for safeguarding this right against encroachment of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment.

11. For suitable provision for the old age of the workers, and for those incapacitated by injury.

12. For the right of employees and employers alike to organize for adequate means of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

13. For a release from employment one day in seven.

14. For the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and for that degree of leisure for all, which is a condition of the highest human life.

15. For a living wage as a minimum in every industry, and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

16. For a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

This platform has in substance been

Advertising Agents Honor Massengale

St. Elmo Massengale, head of the Massengale Advertising Agency and one of the best known publicity men in the country, was to-day elected director at a meeting in Chicago of general advertising agents from throughout the country. Plans were perfected for forming a permanent organization.

Mr. Massengale probably will make arrangements to open a branch office of the Massengale Advertising Agency in Chicago. This step is made necessary by the rapid growth of the agency which handles some of the largest advertising accounts in the United States.

Smith Reported in Custody at El Paso

Report that J. Wylie Smith, formerly head of the Commercial Loan and Discount Company, of Atlanta, is being held at El Paso, Tex., for return to this city to answer forgery charges, reached here to-day.

A dispatch from Austin, Tex., telling of the arrest, stated Governor Colquitt already had honored a requisition for the extradition of Smith and that T. H. Hamilton, the agent of the Fulton County, Georgia, authorities, was en route to El Paso to take charge of the prisoner.

Smith departed suddenly from Atlanta two years ago, leaving the affairs of the Commercial company in a chaotic condition. It is alleged that he secured large sums of money from clients of the organization.

Reports of his capture were denied in El Paso.

SHRINE MEET CONCEDED TO ATLANTA BOOSTERS

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 13.—Forest Adair filed with the Imperial Council to-day official invitations from Atlanta for next year's session from Governor Brown, Governor-elect Slaton, Mayor Woodward, the Capital City, Transportation, University and Piedmont Driving Clubs and many other social and business organizations and persons in Atlanta.

There seems to be nothing left that might have been done to insure Atlanta's winning the big prize of the session in Dallas. About the hotels and streets it generally is conceded that Atlanta will win.

The parade of the patrols to-day, escorting the Imperial Council to its opening session, was beautiful and served to jam the streets with spectators almost to suffocation. There were about 100 patrols in line, averaging 50 men each; 20 brass bands, and a civic procession of something like 150 filled automobiles. Every patrol was uniformed differently and gorgeously.

Great Parade for To-night.

That parade, bigger and better, for already it is predicted that the attendance in Atlanta next year is to be much heavier than it is here, will look mighty attractive along Whitehall and Peachtree next year. The big parade of the session takes place to-night, when it is expected that about 15,000 Shriners will march in line under the glitter of 100,000 electric lights.

No patrol in to-day's parade attracted more applause and attention than the Yaarab patrol, under Captain J. O. Seamans and Lieutenants Cuts Vandiver and Ashford.

Atlanta's fight was given a big boost to-day when Colonel Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, arrived and plunged headlong into the contest to put Atlanta over. He is one of the best known Shriners in America, and has been of vast help to the Atlanta workers.

Fred Houser, of Atlanta, has the

Borden Heiress in West With Mother

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Ramona Borden, daughter of Gail Borden, millionaire New York milkman, who startled her family and friends a few weeks ago by disappearing from an Eastern sanitarium, to-day arrived in Los Angeles with her mother.

The girl ran away because she wanted to live in the country instead of hotels and sanitariums.

Dr. Neill Leaves U. S. Labor Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Dr. Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor since 1905 and recently made commissioner of labor statistics in the new Department of Labor, resigned to-day to take a position outside the Government service. He was prominently identified with the arbitration of many noted wage disputes under the Erdman act.

FIRST WOMAN IS INDICTED AS SLAYER IN MUSCOGEE

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—The May term Grand Jury of Muscogee Superior Court has indicted Mrs. Jennie Mae Radcliff and Bill Creen, both white, on murder charges.

Mrs. Radcliff, the first white woman ever indicted in Muscogee County for murder, is charged with the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff, a merchant, April 19. Creen is indicted for killing Otis D. Kitchens, an insurance agent.

NEW THEORY IS OFFERED IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Detectives Not Centering All Their Efforts on Frank and Lee Now.

Detectives in the Phagan mystery are not centering all their efforts upon Frank and Lee. New theories have been advanced, new clews examined and every possible theory is being investigated.

It was because of these rumors on the streets to-day that a report was spread that an entirely new lead was being followed by Solicitor Dorsey that might eliminate both Frank and Lee.

Solicitor Dorsey paid very little attention to the reports.

"There are no developments so far," he said, "which would tend to swerve the prosecution from its present course. The cases of the two men held will be placed before the Grand Jury as soon as the evidence against them can be properly shaped, unless other developments justify a change."

New Theory Investigated.

The new theory alluded to has been submitted by a private detective employed by the Solicitor's office. The man, whose identity has not been revealed, has been working along lines entirely at variance to those pursued by the prosecutor. Mr. Dorsey stated that while as yet no evidence had been produced to substantiate the proposed solution, that his investigators have taken the matter up and will go to the bottom of it. Every available means will be used to prove or disprove the detective's theory.

An important affidavit was added Tuesday to the great mass of evidence already collected by Solicitor Dorsey.

Another affidavit considered of importance was that made by Miss Maggit Wyatt, 44 Pickett Street, who formerly was employed at the pencil factory.

Miss Willie M. Ross, 259 Crew Street, who is said to have heard screams in the pencil factory at 4:30 on the afternoon of the tragedy, appeared at Mr. Dorsey's office in the morning and made an exhaustive statement which she signed.

Dorsey Will Welcome Burns.

When asked later what she knew of the case, Miss Ross declared she had absolutely no knowledge of it.

Solicitor Dorsey, when asked about the report that Detective Burns was coming to Atlanta to take charge of the investigation, declared that he would welcome Mr. Burns.

Colonel Felder, whose correspondence with the great detective gave rise to the report that he would enter the investigation, stated Tuesday morning that he would know positively by Wednesday whether Burns would comply with his request. Mr. Burns is due to arrive in New York from Europe some time Tuesday.

The Grand Jury probably will hold an extra session this week to "clean up" the routine docket in order that there will be nothing to interfere with the Phagan case when it is presented by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey.

Consider Extra Session.

The Solicitor and his assistant, E. A. Stephens, discussed Monday the advisability of an extra session for one day before Friday, the regular meeting day, and may issue a call to the jurors to assemble Wednesday.

The Solicitor explained, however, that it probably would take the two sessions this week to dispose of the routine, and the Phagan case might not reach the jury until Friday of next week, or an extra session to be called the first part of the week.

Mrs. Rudolph Frank, mother of Leo Frank, was seen for the first time at her home in Brooklyn Monday by the newspaper reporters. She de-

H. M. Flagler Dying; Plans for Funeral Already Under Way

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Word was received here this afternoon from West Palm Beach that Henry M. Flagler is rapidly growing weaker and is now unable to take nourishment. Arrangements for his funeral are being made in St. Augustine. He is not expected to live through the day.

Dr. Alfred S. Badger, pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, in St. Augustine, Mr. Flagler's pastor, now is in Atlanta to attend the Presbyterian Assembly.

Movie Men, Perhaps Edison, to Visit Here

Charles M. Seay, general manager of the Thomas A. Edison Company, New York, and possibly the electrical wizard himself, will arrive in Atlanta Thursday with a party of eight for a short visit, according to a dispatch received Tuesday by Benjamin S. Barker, commercial agent of the Southern Railway.

The party will stop at the Georgian Terrace Hotel and make scenic views of the city for the Edison Company.

The telegram intimates that Mr. Edison is desirous of coming if he can arrange business matters in New York.

clared her belief in her son's entire innocence. She has been greatly affcted by the shadow which is hovering over her son's life, but had said nothing of his plight to her neighbors until Monday, as she had been hoping against hope that he would be liberated by the Coroner's jury.

Mother Thinks He Is Innocent.

"My son is entirely innocent," she is quoted as saying. "But it is a terrible thing that even the suspicion should fall on him. I have every confidence that he will be proved guiltless of the terrible crime.

"He is suspected merely because he was the last one who is known to have seen her on the day she was killed. I know it will be shown that he had no knowledge of who put the girl to death."

Mrs. Frank has not seen her son since nearly three years ago when she and her husband came to Atlanta to attend the marriage of young Frank to the daughter of Emil Selig. It is understood that she is planning to return to Atlanta to be with Frank in the event that he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

She always has been proud of her son and happy at his rapid rise in the business world. Although only 29 years old he has been the superintendent in charge of the National Pencil Company's plant for several years. Before coming to Atlanta about five years ago he was with the National Meter Company, of Brooklyn. He is a Cornell graduate.

Burns Leaves New York.

The arrival of William J. Burns is expected in New York Tuesday afternoon. As announced in The Georgian Monday the great detective has been engaged to work personally upon the Phagan mystery. He is expected to come here at the solicitation of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who is representing the friends and relatives of the slain girl.

Colonel Felder interviewed Raymond Burns, son of the famous detective, in New York, and a cable was at once dispatched to England, where Burns had been looking for J. Wilberforce Martin, the wealthy Memphian whose mysterious disappearance stirred two continents. Burns quickly found that Martin was safe and unharmed and withdrew from the case. The detective will be in Atlanta Thursday on his way to Macon, where he has been invited to speak before the Georgia State Bankers' Association.

Chief of Detectives Lanford just smiles when Solicitor Dorsey's "mysterious sleuth" is mentioned. Mr. Dorsey announced several days ago that he had the best detective in the world on the job.

Who Is "Mysterious Sleuth?"

"The sleuth is either Detective John Starnes or Patrick Campbell," said Chief Lanford. "Both of these men are attached to the local staff and are working under the solicitor."

The solicitor continued to deny that the man was a local detective.

"I intend to withhold his name until the proper time," he said. "He is out of the city at present working on several new phases of the Phagan case. Upon his return I may be able to give out some startling information."

Frank's Life in Tower; Scores Try to See Him.

Of the many prisoners confined in the Tower, Leo M. Frank stands far above them all as the central figure in the public eye while the exhaustive investigation into the death of Mary Phagan continues.

Hundreds of curious persons apply daily at the prison in a futile effort to see the man now being held in the Phagan mystery. The jailers are beset with thousands of questions pertaining to his life during the two weeks that he has spent behind the bars.

Only Frank's attorney, his immediate relatives and a few friends have been permitted to see him. The man on other occasions has refused point blank to be interviewed or questioned. He has maintained an unbroken silence on the accusations made against him by the State.

Cheerful With Friends.

To his friends, however, Frank presents an amazingly bright countenance. Frequently his laughter is heard ringing through the dismal corridors of the Tower. Despite his cheery disposition, however, he has grown pale under his confinement.

Arises at 7 o'clock each morning; shaves with a safety razor brought him by a jailer and dresses for breakfast. Morning meal is brought to him at 7:30 and he partakes of it from a low bench in lieu of a table. Frank's meals are all prepared at his home and sent to the Tower. He is permitted to have any food that he may desire. So far, the prison life has not affected his appetite, which is one of a healthy man.

Reads Papers Carefully.

After breakfast Frank is handed the morning papers, which he peruses carefully, especially with reference to his own case. Despite what the printed pages may contain about him, though, the prisoner has never been known to comment on the newspaper articles.

Frank is a great reader. As the single electric lamp in the corridor does not furnish sufficient light to read by in the cells adjacent, the prisoner has secured a candle and under its flickering flame reads magazines and other periodicals.

Friends of the prisoner begin to arrive about 9 o'clock. He converses with them through the bars. At 2 o'clock he is served with dinner. During the afternoon Frank receives more of his friends and whiles away the idle hours in reading.

Wife Embraces Him.

When his wife called for the first time since his confinement Sunday afternoon, Frank was allowed to receive her in the "consultation room." The meeting between the husband and wife was affecting.

Tearfully Mrs. Frank clasped her arms about her husband's neck and kissed him as they met. Following the visit, which was of an hour's duration, Frank was returned to his cell.

The prisoner is served with supper at 6:30 o'clock and retires at about 11 o'clock. He sleeps on a regulation prison cot.

Mother Thinks Police Are Doing Their Best.

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of little 14-year-old Mary Phagan, prostrated with grief for sixteen days following the tragic slaying of her child, took up her household duties Tuesday for the first time, resigned to the calamity that has befallen her home, and relying on the law to avenge the death of her child.

"It was such a beautiful morning," said Mrs. Coleman to a Georgian reporter, "and I have been able to rest now for three nights, so I felt like doing my work again. My house has been in such a turmoil since this dreadful tragedy. I feel I am helpless and have resigned myself to the sad lot that has befallen us. All we can do is wait, and waiting is a hard task.

No Complaint of Police.

"Don't misunderstand me. I am not complaining about what the officers are doing. It is far better to go slow and be sure that we are doing right than to hurry and make a mistake. I believe that the police and the solicitor are doing everything they can to find the guilty man. They ought to do it; such a crime ought to be punished. But I do not want them to make a mistake.

"I heard that feeling was very strong last week, but I am glad that no hasty action was taken. It might have been all wrong, and I think I would have been grieved as much as anybody.

"We have made many inquiries among our friends and acquaintances and have not found one who saw Mary after 12 o'clock Saturday, when she went to the factory to get her pay. So much seems to depend on that point, and if anyone did see her, he certainly ought to tell about it. It does look like if Mary were on the streets Saturday afternoon, as many friends as we have, some of them would have seen her. We do not believe she ever left the factory.

Has Read No Reports.

Mrs. Coleman, since her nervous collapse, has not been allowed to read the newspapers, her husband realizing the seriousness of her condition. Since last Wednesday she has had absolute quiet, and Tuesday she resumed her duties with the hope, as she expressed it, "to make home like it used to be, if possible." She declared that only the strength and vigor that has always been hers enabled her to withstand the blow that had befallen her.

"Mary and I were very much alike," she said, "strong and healthy. Mary would have been 14 years old on June 1, but she was very large and robust for her age. She often passed for 16. Her birthday is nearly here, but it will be so different this year."

South Backs Gate City in Fight for 1914 Council—Decision To-morrow.

publicity end of the Atlanta campaign in hand and has handled it splendidly. The Dallas papers are full of Atlanta and its enterprise to-day. They all pick the Gate City for a winner in to-morrow's balloting.

Irwin Named Potentate.

At the Texas session, the only thing done of interest to the public was the election of William W. Irwin, of Wheeling, W. Va., to be imperial potentate next year. He will preside in Atlanta and he told me to-day that the fact was particularly gratifying to him.

He has been outspoken in his support of Atlanta for the honor of entertaining the Shrine in 1914. He and Forrest Adair are great cronies, and have been at many sessions of the Imperial Council. The other Imperial Council members were advanced in rotation, as is customary in the order.

There was a mighty careful checking up of names and counting of noses along somewhere after midnight last night. The Yaarab workers did not quit talking Atlanta until the rest of creation out here had gone to bed. Along about daylight Forrest Adair figured that Atlanta had it on Memphis by about two to one. Maybe it is more than that, but two to one looks good enough anyway.

Memphis is putting up the gamest sort of fight. The Tennessee city has a big bunch of rooters here and the town has been flooded with literature. However, Atlanta has been right there with the literature, and in the matter of pure unadulterated talk and hard work the Georgia city has made Memphis hard to locate.

John Hynds, Joe Greenfield and Claude Hutcheson have been Potentate Adair's right hand men in the fight for Atlanta, and when the credit is slid up and passed around, likewise the glory, they will come in for a large share of both, along with Mr. Adair.

Mr. Adair expressed himself to me to-day as particularly gratified with the help extended the Atlanta movement by the Hearst newspapers.

"I hear from Mr. Hearst's personal appeals and his newspapers' work for next year's big meeting at all turns. His publications, especially in the West, have helped tremendously in bringing support to Atlanta. If Atlanta wins, as I expect, we will owe much to Mr. Hearst."

In the hotel lobbies one sees Atlanta newspapers everywhere. One hears Atlanta talk everywhere. The great 12 hours' hustle Atlanta made to raise that entertainment fund of nearly $100,000 is talked of by everybody. Whenever I buttonhole a Shriner and ask him how about that Imperial Council meeting next year, and I have done that about 100 times since I landed here, I never get a reply that does not make some reference to that great financial stunt. The impression seems to be that a town capable of doing anything, no matter how big.

"Don't Worry, Atlanta."

In the matter of taking care of the Imperial Council next year, I should say to Atlanta, "Don't worry." Whatever this town of Dallas can do footloose and free, Atlanta can do with one hand tied behind her back and a hobble skirt draped around her ankles. Not that Dallas is not a great little town, either, for it is, but still it is not Atlanta. Dallas simply is bulging with Shriners. It is packed and jammed and it is acting handsomely toward the visitors.

"The city is profusely and beautifully decorated. Free automobiles stand around and invite fez wearers to get in and ride to their hearts' content, which many of them do. The hotels and boarding houses are playing fair, and there is no gouging.

For its size, Dallas is a wonder. It, however, is only about one-half the size of Atlanta. If Dallas can entertain 25,000 visitors—and it is entertaining approximately that many to-day—then Atlanta can handle 50,000 and never mind it or find it the least uncomfortable.

Somehow, too, the Dallas newspapers seem to feel and hope that Atlanta will win out in its fight, and the news they print carries a pro-Atlanta color.

The Imperial Council is holding its first session to-day. Yesterday was given over to handshaking, Shrineresque kidding, merrymaking and getting things under way. All one hears as one walks along the streets of Dallas to-day is "Morning, Silas." That's the greeting, and everybody hands it to you, whether he ever saw you before or not. It's the same friendly, happy, good-natured greeting that the Elks' "Hello, Bill" is.

The voting on next year's meeting place will be held some time during Wednesday's session. The big parade, one of the annual events people come hundreds of miles to see, occurs to-night, and Dallas has fixed her streets for the glittering spectacle in such wise that they will be as bright as day when the parade is passing.

To-day's session of the Imperial Council began at 9 o'clock, but its proceedings were secret in the main. To-morrow's session will be the one to tell the big story.

East Aids Gate City.

One most gratifying thing about Atlanta's big fight for the Imperial Council next year is the way Shriners from all over the East and Southeast are rallying to her support. There is not a member of the imperial organization from a State that touches Georgia, except Tennessee, that is not for Atlanta. Whatever little jealousies there may be or may have been between Atlanta and other cities of the South, they are all for Atlanta in the movement to make Atlanta the next year's meeting place, and it is more than half way suspected that Memphis will swing into line before the ballot is spread and make it unanimous for the Gate City of the South.

"The Shriners want to go to Atlanta and they are going," The Dallas Times-Herald quotes Forrest Adair as saying. "Many of them have already visited the Georgia city and have seen for themselves that we have the hotels. Every temple knows that we have the money for the entertainment, too. You just can't get away from the fact that Atlanta pledged $75,000 in less than one day. If it will take more than $75,000 the amount needed will be there. The Shriners will have everything they want and more than they can ask when they go to Atlanta."

Atlantans All Optimistic.

This feeling of optimism is reflected in every Atlanta visitor in Dallas to-day. The magnificent campaign the Gate City has made for next year's meeting is destined to win out, or Adair and his men are the worst fooled lot that ever were, and the betting is 1,000 to 1 that they have not been fooled for a minute.

And don't forget Mrs. Shriner and the Misses Shriner are here in all their freshness and loveliness—5,000 or so of them. Believe me, they are on hand and everybody notices them and approves of their presence. A prettier lot of girls I never saw than these Texas specimens. Southern beauty is more or less running riot in Dallas to-day.

ELKS DANCE TO-NIGHT.

A subscription dance will be held at the Elks' Home to-night for the benefit of the organ fund. Tickets may be had of any of the committee in charge at $1, or at the home to-night.

Gambler Who Shot Detective Uncaught

Detectives Tuesday had positive evidence that Hamby Lester, a negro living in an alley just off Alexander Street, between the Peachtrees, is the man who shot and seriously wounded Detective Sam Webb Saturday night in a gambling raid in Lester's home.

The negro gamesters bagged in the raid testified before Judge Broyles Monday that they saw Lester fire point blank toward the door as the detectives entered. Lester still is at large.

Judge Broyles held nine negroes for trial in the State courts on a charge of gaming.

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss Alien Law; Johnson Will Sign

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Japanese situation was discussed for the greater part of two hours at the meeting of the President with his Cabinet, but at the conclusion of the conference absolute silence was maintained regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—A reply by Governor Johnson to the message of Secretary of State Bryan, advising against hasty action in the California anti-alien law legislation was expected to-day. The Governor announced that he would not discuss the subject until he had replied to Secretary Bryan, which likely would be to-day.

He intimated that he would sign the Webb anti-alien land bill, but that he would delay action out of respect to President Wilson's wishes.

In his farewell message to the Legislature Governor Johnson said:

"I would like to have mentioned the land bill with the others that I consider worthy accomplishments in legislation this season, but I refrained from so doing because it would not be courteous to say anything in advance of my reply to Mr. Bryan's telegram."

PHOENIX, ARIZ., May 13.—A slight amendment by the Senate to the House anti-alien land bill makes it necessary for the measure to be passed on by a conference between the two houses before it is sent to the Governor. It was predicted the conference would agree on the bill this afternoon. The Governor's attitude is not known, although his closest friends say he will sign it.

Four hundred Japanese residents of the State will appeal to the Governor to veto the bill.

Rams Grizzly Bear To Death With Auto

WALDEN, COLO., May 13.—When a huge grizzly bear rushed at Dr. J. A. Dungan, of this city, as he was making a visit in the mountains Sunday, he saved himself from possible death by throwing a laprobe over the animal's head and then ramming it with his automobile. The bear was instantly killed.

The doctor was at the end of a road at the foot of a steep hill and was about to stop the car to go to a ranch farther up the valley when the bear charged him. It got only a mouthful of laprobe.

The doctor wrapped the rest of the robe around the bear's head, and while it wrestled with the robe in the dirt he ran over it.

FEARS TO PUNISH RIVAL HE SAYS STOLE BRIDE

Edward Brown, Angry but Small, Swears Vengeance, Then Calls Police.

An angry husband waited for three hours at the Terminal Station Tuesday morning determined to wreak vengeance upon the man who, he said, had enticed his 17-year-old bride of four months from his home and gone with her to Macon, Ga., her former home. Then he notified the police and now awaits developments.

The husband is Edward M. Brown, of 20 Hayden Street. He appeared at the station at 7:50 o'clock, when a train is due into Atlanta from Macon, but the man he claimed he was after, J. G. Reeves, a real estate operator, did not appear. Brown waited. About 10 o'clock Reeves strode into the station from the train platforms.

Brown started toward Reeves and stopped before he reached him. Brown is a little man, and he surveyed the well-built real estate man dubiously. Then he returned to his seat.

Daunted by His Size.

"He's pretty big," he said. "I won't whip him; I'll have him arrested."

Brown asserts that Reeves has showered attentions upon his wife, Mrs. Amelia Brown, for the past three weeks, and yesterday afternoon, he claims, he induced her to leave her husband and go to Macon. Brown declares that Reeves met Mrs. Brown and her mother, Mrs. Sally Bryant, at the station and purchased their tickets to Macon, buying one for himself also.

"We were married in Macon four months ago," said Brown, "and until this Reeves appeared on the scene we were happy. About three weeks ago I decided to buy a lot and this man was sent to sell it to me. He came out to the house to see me about it, and after that he kept coming. I hurried the purchase of the lot and told my wife to keep away from Reeves.

Threatened To Go Home.

"Even after I had bought the lot he kept coming around and taking my wife out in an automobile. I told him to keep away, and he began sneaking around when I wasn't at home. When I came home yesterday afternoon my wife said she was going home with her mother, and said that if I wouldn't give her any money she had a friend who would.

"I went downtown on some business last night, and when I got home I was told that my wife had gone. A girl who lives in the house said she had gone to the station with my wife and her mother, and that Reeves had met them there. Reeves took my wife's grips, the girl told me, and went to the train with them.

She said she saw him get on the train, and he didn't get off. I hurried to the station to stop them, but the train had gone. Then I went to the police station, and they told me to get a gun and shoot Reeves.

Claims Former Marriage.

"I'm going to have Reeves and my wife arrested, and I'm going to get a divorce. I learned yesterday I'm not the only husband she has. She told me when we were married she had been married before, but said her other husband was dead. I found out he is not dead."

Miss Thelma Bigby, the girl who accompanied Mrs. Brown to the Terminal Station, corroborated Brown's story Tuesday morning.

"Reeves met Mrs. Brown at the corner of Luckie and Harris Streets late yesterday afternoon, before Mr. Brown got home," she said. "They talked a long time, and then Mrs. Brown came in and had a talk with her mother. Then she asked us to tell her husband when he came home that she had gone to her old home with her mother and was not coming back.

Reeves Didn't Return.

"I went to the station with her, and Mr. Reeves met them there. He took their grips and told her not to worry. 'I'll fix everything so we can be together in a few days,' I heard him say.

"Mr. Reeves went to the train with them, telling me he would return in a minute. I waited almost half an hour after the train had gone, and he didn't come back."

BABY, KIDNAPED BY AN INSANE NEGRESS, FOUND

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 13.—Lucile Arbed, the eighteen-months-old baby kidnaped by an insane negress yesterday, was found in a pitiable condition to-day near an abandoned race track just outside the city, still in custody of the woman. The baby's muffled cries directed the searchers to a stall where the woman was trying to hush it. The child was almost starved, and showed evidence of abuse, but it was not maimed.

GAME WARDEN AND DEPUTY ON WAY TO MILLTOWN POND

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—Accompanied by his son, W. C. Westcott, Deputy Game Warden Charles B. Westcott leaves to-night for Milltown to take charge of the fish situation there. He is acting under instructions from State Game and Fish Commissioner Jesse E. Mercer, who will meet Westcott in Milltown Thursday and map out a plan of campaign.

SENATORS CLASH ON TARIFF; BILL IN BALANCE

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The fate of the Underwood tariff bill in the Senate was in the balance to-day while the Republicans and Democrats debated on the Penrose motion to instruct the Senate Finance Committee to hold open hearings on the measure. The clash also tended to show the real strength of the supporters of the administration measure.

It is on the sugar and wool schedules that the fight will come, and Democratic leaders anxiously watched the debate to see how far the defection started by Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana had influenced Senators from the sugar and wool-producing States.

It already had been agreed to refer the Underwood bill to the Finance Committee without public hearings when that measure was brought from the House Friday. Senator Simmons, chrairman of the committee, made a motion to this effect, followed immediately by a motion by Senator Penrose for public hearings.

So critical was the situation raised by the Penrose motion that a call was issued for every Democratic Senator to be in his seat. The Republicans also marshaled their entire strength to fight for open hearings.

LaFollette to Draft A New Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator LaFollette will not confine his tariff-making efforts to the wool and cotton schedules. He intends to draft practically a complete bill. This measure will be offered in the Senate, probably as a substitute for the Underwood bill. He regards many of the Democratic rates as too low.

BIBB GRAND JURY PROBES VICE DISTRICT IN MACON

MACON, GA., May 13.—The Grand Jury is this week investigating the restricted district, as the result of a complaint made by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, former president of Wesleyan College. On account of the spreading of the district, a negro church was forced to abandon its place of worship, and this fact aroused the ire of the white clergyman, who appealed to the Grand Jury for assistance.

ATLANTA CALLED MODEL CITY BY PRESBYTERIAN THOUSANDS

Noted Temperance Lecturer Declares Vice Crusade Is Object Lesson to the World.

ALL TRAINS BEAR DELEGATES

Business Men Lay Down Work to Help Welcome Hosts Pouring in for Assemblies.

With the beginning of the influx of thousands of delegates and visitors to the Presbyterian Assembly which opens here Wednesday, Atlanta already is ringing with their praises as the cleanest city in the world—both morally and physically.

Experts from other and larger cities, who inspected the town Monday, have declared Atlanta is an object lesson to other cities of the nation in what can be done.

"The fact that such a large city as this could so effectively remove the scars from its social side is a great proof of the fact that so-called evil necessities are anything but necessary," declared the Rev. Charles Scanlon, of Pittsburg, the noted temperance lecturer, who arrived Monday.

While few delegates were expected to arrived before Wednesday, early trains Tuesday brought in their quota and several hundred are expected to come in during the day.

From now until Thursday afternoon it is doubtful if any train entering Atlanta will be minus a corps of ministers and elders coming to Atlanta to participate in the convention. Several special trains are scheduled to arrive Wednesday morning. There will be two from New York, one from Chicago, one from St. Louis bringing in the Western delegates, one from Ohio and one from Philadelphia. These are the special trains of which the local committee has received notice. It is possible there will be others.

Registration Bureau Opens.

Tuesday morning found headquarters on the fifth floor of the Empire Building opening with as busy a rush as characterized the place Monday. Rev. Jere Moore, who is secretary of the local convention committee, has been the busiest man in Atlanta for the past week and is right up to his ears in work now. Assisting him are a large number of ministers and business men, grinding away in the effort to make everything run smoothly. In the list are a number of men of heavy business interests who have laid aside everything in the entertainment of the mammoth joint convention.

Rev. Mr. Scanlon, who will be one of the principal speakers at the great temperance service Sunday night in Wesley Memorial chapel, is much interested in Atlanta, especially in connection with the vice crusade campaign which Chief of Police Beavers has waged.

"Of course, I know nothing personally of what Atlanta has done in cleaning up the city, but I have heard much of it," he said to a Georgian reporter, "I suppose the vice crusade in Atlanta has attracted more attention than any single city campaign ever carried on in this country, and there has been much discussion of it. When a city like Atlanta decides to make itself good and succeeds in doing so, it is indeed an object lesson to every other city in the world, for certainly what has been done here can be done elsewhere."

Another prominent arrival was Rev. T. P. Junkin, president of the Daniel Baker College, of Brownwood, Texas. "Well, I'm with you and glad to be here, too," was his greeting as he introduced himself to Rev. Jere Moore. "The joint assembly here has been all the talk among Presbyterians down my way, and I suppose this mammoth meeting will be talked of for many years to come."

Missionary Meeting Sunday.

In addition to the mammoth temperance meeting to be held Sunday night, there will be a Sunday school missionary meeting Sunday afternoon in the Central Presbyterian Church. It will be one of the most interesting features of the convention.

The meeting will be unique in that its object is somewhat different from that of the ordinary missionary meeting. It will be an actual demonstration of platform missionary instruction in the Sunday school. Dr. A. L. Phillips, general superintendent of the Department of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will preside at this meeting.

There will be a brief address on "The Value of Missionary Education in the Sunday School," by the Rev. Charles R. Watson, of Philadelphia. This will be followed by a demonstration of "A Missionary Opening Exercise" for the Sunday school, entitled "America's Welcome." The theme of this address will be immigration, and it will be presented by a number of young people from the Central Presbyterian.

Often features of the work will be the demonstration of how, in five minutes or less, to present to a Sunday school a missionary book so as to insure its being read. There also will be instructions as to how to make a telling missionary speech and how to present a missionary map talk effectively.

Special Music Feature.

Among other prominent workers who will participate in this meeting are Mrs. D. E. Waid, New York; George Innes, Philadelphia, and the Rev. A. W. Halsey, New York. There will be a large chorus and special music under the direction of Professor Joseph MacLean, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Progress of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which section of the church includes a majority of the Presbyterian churches in the South, is interesting.

Statistics to be read in the assemblies show the number of ruling elders in the church to be 10,977; the number of deacons, 10,637; the number added to the church during the year on examination, 14,103; the number added on certificate, 12,077; the total number of communicants, 292,845. During the year 6,021 adults and 4,970 infants were baptized. The total Sunday school enrollment was 245,495.

Huge Sums Contributed.

The amount contributed last year to foreign missions was $501,412; to home missions, $125,787; to Christian education and ministerial relief, $97,143; to Sunday school extension and publication, $25,499; to Bible cause, $8,483; to orphans' home, $86,125; to pastors' salaries, $1,320,059; to congregational expenses, $1,493,234; to miscellaneous, $233,673, making a total of $4,293,044 contributed to all causes.

The vote of the presbyteries on the proposed amendments in the Confession of Faith and the Book of Church Order, handed down by the assembly of 1912, has been awaited with special interest, as every amendment must receive the approval of three-fourths of the presbyteries before the assembly can authorize the same.

With reference to the "elect infant clause" in the Confession of Faith, reports from the presbyteries to be presented to the assembly will show that 22 presbyteries voted against the amendment, making the three-fourths vote in favor of the same impossible. It will be necessary, therefore, for the assembly in Atlanta to consider overtures to omit the paragraph entirely from the Confession of Faith.

HAWKINSVILLE ELKS VOTE TO ABOLISH CLUB LOCKER

HAWKINSVILLE, GA., May 13.—The Elks voted last night to discontinue their locker adjunct and after June 15 no more liquors or beers will be dispensed in the club rooms. Public sentiment was averse to a locker club and the churches looked with displeasure upon their members affiliating with any fraternity or club maintaining a locker. The Elks voluntarily voted to discontinue it.

BANKERS' MEETING HERE UP TO HOTELS

There Will Be No Difficulty in Raising Funds to Entertain, Says Joseph McCord.

"Whether Atlanta gets the 1914 convention of the American Bankers' Association depends on two things—hotel accommodations and the guarantee of a satisfactory entertainment fund. The first is under consideration; the second is assured."

J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank, thus sums up the situation. With Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank, Mr. Ottley delivered Atlanta's invitation to the 1914 convention when the executive council met at Briarcliff, N. Y., last week.

"Proper accommodation of delegates and guests demands 2,000 hotel rooms. Atlanta has more than this," said Mr. Ottley. "The question is whether it is possible for hotel men to co-operate in setting aside that number of rooms. The Convention Bureau will discuss this with hotel men when its heads return from the Shriners' convention.

"If the Convention Bureau and the hotel men make a satisfactory reply, the information will be forwarded to the national secretary. He then will make a visit to Atlanta and will look over the situation.

"Detroit last year spent $40,000 entertaining the bankers. Boston this year has underwritten $100,000 for the same purpose. But the question of raising funds in Atlanta is not bothering us. If we can get the hotel rooms we can get the money."

MILITANT CHIEF, ILL, AVOIDS TRIAL

Successor to Mrs. Pankhurst, Sick From Hunger Strike, Gets Bail for Two Months.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—When the trial of the leaders of the militant suffragettes arrested in the police raid on the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union, was resumed to-day in Bow Street Court, Mrs. Flora Drummond, the "General," was not present.

The court was informed that Mrs. Drummond is still in a serious condition at a nursing home, where she was taken after collapsing in court last week.

Mrs. Drummond, who went upon a hunger strike after her arrest, has refused to eat in the nursing home. Her bail was extended for two months.

Testimony was adduced to show that the Women's Social and Political Union offered medals and other prizes for the militants who were able to accomplish the most destruction of property and think up new new forms of violence. Those who underwent punishment also were rewarded.

Militants Smash Shop Windows Worth $5,000.

NORWICH, ENG., May 13.—Vandal suffragettes smashed $5,000 worth of plateglass in dry goods store windows here to-day before they were driven from the streets by policemen.

The women opened an organized campaign, going through the streets armed with hammers and missiles with which they smashed the windows.

OBSTACLES SEEN TO MERGER OF CHURCHES

Differences of Opinion on Social Service May Serve to Keep Presbyterians Apart.

adopted by most of the leading denominations in this country, some of them having accepted it long before the platform of the Federal Council had been drawn up.

The Federal Council's platform is, therefore, practically the expression of the Protestant forces of this country, with regard to social service.

As a matter of fact, most of the criticism that has been directed against the social service platform of the Federal Council is based upon the assumption that these are the only principles for which the council is contending, but the council spoke just as strongly with regard to "evangelism," "foreign missions," "temperance," "Sabbath observance," "the family and the home" and upon kindred subjects as it did upon social service.

At its last meeting in Chicago a strong evangelistic commission was appointed, which will no doubt in time be just as influential as the social service commission of the council. It simply happened that the men who were interested in social service became immediately active when they were appointed, so that they have got a better start than some of the other commissions.

Favored by Atlantans.

The report of the social service commission submitted at the Chicago meeting indicates that the men who framed it are warmly sympathetic toward evangelistic work and the evangelistic spirit. Following are some extracts from this much-maligned report:

"The church is not turning aside from her task, neither is she creating new forces; still further than this, we are happily discovering that the conservation of the evangelistic note is an essential to an effective social gospel, and are no longer disposed to rend asunder that which Christ has joined together.

"We are not to forget that we can have no kingdom of heaven on earth until our economic programs are fashioned in the light of spiritual ideals and with spiritual ends in view, and we are to remember that the world will come together in the consummation of sympathy, tenderness and brotherhood only when all men are brought to sit together at the feet of Christ."

It is impossible to tell how strongly developed is the feeling that the Southern Assembly should sever its connection with the Federal Council, but the men who have been fighting in Atlanta for the eradication of the social evil are strongly in favor of having the Southern Assembly retain its relationship to this interdenominational organization. This feeling also characterizes the attitude of the members of the Presbytery of Atlanta.

County Will Build A Home for Girls

Fulton County will erect a home for wayward girls and incorrigible women, the work to begin at once and the home to be completed within the year.

This announcement was made Tuesday following a conference between a committee from the County Commission and a committee from the trustees of the Harriet Hawkes Home. The latter agreed to deed to the county a 50-acre tract of land on Stewart Avenue, near Mt. Zion Church, and a fund of approximately $12,000 pledged for the erection of an institution.

The agreement reached Tuesday is the result of several conferences. Fulton County will have absolute title to the property and will be in complete control. It will be responsible for the home's maintenance. As a concession for the Harriet Hawkes donations, the home will bear this name. Several members of the former trustees will constitute an advisory board for the institution.

Following Tuesday's conference it was announced that work would begin immediately. A meeting of the Board of County Commissioners is expected to ratify the action of the committee, which comprises three members of the board—Shelby Smith, C. L. Anderson and Tull C. Waters. Henry Y. McCord represented the Harriet Hawkes trustees.

Here He Is Again; Man of Mystery Heralds a Story

Here he is again.

Just when you thought that The Georgian's "Man of Mystery," with the three ties ranging down his shirt front, had vanished as unaccountably as he first made his appearance, presto, up he bobs!

Returning, he explained that his appearance, disappearances and reappearances all are for the same purpose—that of exciting your interest and curiosity.

The picture of the "Man of Mystery" was published three days in The Georgian without any explanation or comment. There was not even a line to say whether he was a foreign nobleman or the latest suspect in some daring crime.

After the office of The Georgian had been deluged with letters asking the identity of the strange personage came the explanation. It was simply this:

The Georgian is about to publish a great serial story. It may be said with assurance that it is the most interesting story Atlantans have read in years. This picture typifies the story. The first instalment will appear in next Monday's Georgian.

What should be the title, judging solely from the picture? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title has already been selected. It is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be considered in awarding the prizes.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor," The Georgian, Atlanta. The contest closes Sunday night. No answers posted after midnight, May 18, will be considered.

Decatur and Atlanta

The corporate limits of Atlanta and Decatur are just two miles apart.

The center of Decatur is connected with the center of Atlanta by two street car lines, the Georgia railroad and by three public roads.

East Lake Drive, through Druid Hills to Oakhurst, thence by DeKalb avenue to Decatur, is at present an almost perfect automobile route from Decatur to Atlanta.

The straight shoot from Decatur to Atlanta is now DeKalb avenue, which eastward from Mayson avenue is now being paved with vitrified brick.

Ponce DeLeon avenue is being rapidly extended to the Court House at Decatur. A few months more of good weather will see the work completed.

By street car the distance from the center of Atlanta to the center of Decatur is 30 minutes; by the Georgia railroad the distance is about 10 minutes.

Hundreds of telephones, both Bell and Atlanta, connect Atlanta with Decatur, and residents of Decatur have exactly the same use of these two telephone systems as the citizens of Atlanta.

The truth of the matter is, a resident of Decatur on the average is just as closely in touch with the business in Atlanta as the residents of the best residence sections of the city of Atlanta.

Think of these things, and find out for yourself how much more cheaply you can build a home in Decatur than in Atlanta.

FACTORY EXPENSE IN U. S. CHEAPEST

Other Nations, Though, Pay Lower Wages and Smaller Prices, Commerce Report Says.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That United States industries are carried on at a higher degree of efficiency than those of other nations is indicated by a report issued by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to-day.

The report shows that in the United Kingdom one-sixth more power and two and one-half times as many wage-earners are required to produce a net output of equal value.

In fifteen of the seventeen industries compared, the outlay for wages is higher in England than here for an equal output, the difference ranging from 8 per cent for linen, jute and hemp to 30 per cent for silks.

Prices in the United States are higher, however.

As to tariffs, the report states that German duties are not so high as generally supposed, but that this country is discriminated against in instances.

'U. S. Makes Me Sick' Says Departing Diva

NEW YORK, May 13.—America came in for a nice sizzling roast today at the hands of Marie Cavan, of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company, who sailed for Europe and may never, never come back.

"I would rather sing for $100 a week in Europe than $1,000 a week in America," said the diva. "America makes me sick."

It would seem that some "puritanical reformers" vexed the prima donna, for she gave them a left-handed uppercut for their efforts to "reform the—of course—terribly immoral stage."

KOREAN SEES WAR CLOUDS IN EAST

Greed of Great Nations Will Bring Dismemberment of China, Says Seek Hun Kimm.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—With a taste of republicanism, the Oriental peoples, particularly the Japanese, are beginning to grow restless and are exhibiting an inclination to throw off the old oligarchic rule, according to Seek Hun Kimm, president of the Korean Patriotic Association, in a statement published to-day.

The establishment of the Chinese republic has inspired the stirring of a new life, he says, and indicates that the situation in the Far East is delicate. Under the present order, the statement says, Japan wants complete control of Manchuria, Russia of Mongolia; Japan wants to preserve her alliance with England; Russia wants to keep England quiet, and therefore the last two understand each other as regards Persia and Thibet; Russia is aggressive and England stubborn. The result may be the dismemberment of China.

The commercial interests of Germany and the United States, says Seek Hun Kimm, demand the interest of those countries in the game. The United States holds the balance of power because England and this country are natural allies in the Far East, the statement says.

BEACHEY QUITS AIR REGRETS DARING

Noted Flyer Says He Feels That His Reckless Feats Led Others to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—With the announcement that he had quit the air and would never sail an aeroplane again, Lincoln Beachey to-day issued a statement in which he said he felt that he had committed murder. He blamed himself for the death of several birdmen, and said he could not be induced to enter an aeroplane again at "the point of a gun."

"There was only one thing that drew crowds to my exhibitions," said Beachey. "They wanted to see something happen. They predicted that I would be killed. They paid to see me die. They bet, the odds being greatly against my landing safely.

"In Chicago last September Horace Kearney's mother begged me not to teach him any more tricks. Kearney insisted on learning them all. Three months later he was dead. Welch's wife begged him to quit doing spirals. Welch replied 'Beachey does them.' Two weeks later he was killed when a wire snapped as he was doing a reverse spiral at Trenton, N. J. I felt I had murdered him. Some time ago I sent tickets to Mrs. Ely. She sent back the tickets, writing: 'Gene would be with me now if he had never seen you fly.'

"I have no fear that I would be killed, but I am in the grip of a great fear that I would make others kill themselves."

Jap Cherry Blossoms Disappoint American

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 13.—The cherry blossoms of Japan were disappointing to John Corbett, a Chicago contractor, who is in Berlin.

"We were in Japan in the cherry season," he said, "but all we saw were a few trees with a few small blossoms. California's cherry blossom show is far more beautiful."

Corbett was in Japan during the excitement over the California land law but he says that he was most courteously treated. The Japanese seemed to be anxious to make an impression for politeness.

Gambling Shown on Increase in France

PARIS, May 13.—The fallacy of the popular idea that gambling is on the decline in France is clearly shown by figures just issued on the revenue to the State from the tax on playing cards.

During 1912 this amounted to $587,898, an increase of $35,647 over 1911, and the largest amount realized since the imposition of the tax, which remained practically at the same figure between 1908 and 1910.

ARKANSAS PRISON BOARD ANSWERS GOV. FUTRELL

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., May 13.—In reply to Governor Futrell's open letter criticising certain actions of the new State Prison Board with regard to letting contracts, preparing vouchers, etc., members of the board have sent a pointed letter to the chief executive defending their actions in every particular and inviting the closest scrutiny." They declare that when they assumed office April 1, they found the old system of accounting in a chaotic condition. The Governor has the power of removal under the new law.

FACTORS BOOST PRICE OF ROSIN

First Move in New Selling Plan Is to Mark All Grades Except "M" at Higher Figures.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—That the prices obtaining on all grades of rosins are the lowest that will be quoted for many years to come, is the firm belief of those familiar with conditions centering about the naval stores markets and the industry in general.

The opening gun in the campaign for better prices was fired at the afternoon sale Thursday. K grade, and all grades below, were advanced on "asked" prices to the extent of 5 cents the barrel, while N and above were advanced 10 cents, with the exception of M, which was allowed to remain at quotations obtaining for several days.

Factors state that this is but the beginning of a gradual upward movement on all grades of rosins, which have ruled notoriously low in values for many months. In other words, the educational campaign now under way has for its purpose the establishment of equitable prices, and these will be slowly but surely advanced as may be deemed necessary by the factors.

Trading in large lots is a daily feature on the exchange, whereas for a month previously the market was practically dead. The creditors' committee of the American has at last secured money with which to carry on the business of that concern, but it has been announced that it will not again actively enter the market, and that its affairs will be wound up as rapidly as possible.

Naval stores receipts are increasing in volume. It is said that the stability of the market has induced many producers to abandon their intention of converting their orchards into other channels. The new crop is now beginning to show up.

GIRL'S MOTHER CALLS ELOPER BIGAMIST

J. L. Wimbish Admits Having Wife in Birmingham, but Denies Marrying Miss Mann.

Amazing marital complications have come to light with the arrest early Tuesday morning of J. L. Wimbish, 24 years old, of 777 Ashby Street, at the request of the mother of Miss Ella Kate Mann, 18 years old, of East Point. Mrs. Mann charges Wimbish with having committed a bigamous marriage with her daughter.

Wimbish eloped with Miss Mann last December. Since then a vain, country-wide search has been made by relatives of the girl. Not until Wimbish reappeared in Atlanta were the police called. Then Wimbish was arrested and confronted by Mrs. Mann, who demanded the whereabouts of her daughter. Wimbish refused to tell, but stated he knew where she was and would bring her to Atlanta as soon as he could disentangle himself from the meshes of the law.

Wimbish Denies Bigamy Charge.

While Wimbish denies he is married to Miss Mann, that charge has been placed against him by Mrs. Mann, who avers he has a wife in Birmingham. It was because of that fact which she declares Wimbish admitted to her last December, that she objected to his attentions to her daughter.

Wimbish Tuesday morning admitted again he had been married before he met Miss Mann. He declared, though, he had been separated from his wife two years, and, while they had never been divorced to his knowledge, she had remarried.

"I love Ella," said Wimbish, "and I'll marry her as soon as I can determine my marital status with my former wife."

"My former wife was Ola May Jones, of Atlanta. In 1909 I fell in love with her. Her parents objected to the marriage, so we eloped. Her folks had me arrested. Then I married her and we left the city, but separated May 13, 1909. She went to Birmingham and married again, I hear. Whether she got a divorce or not I don't know. I was never served with any papers.

Got in Trouble Again.

"Later I got into trouble with another girl and was again arrested. When released I came back to Atlanta and met Miss Mann. When I told Mrs. Mann I had a wife in Birmingham; that we had separated and I guessed were divorced by that time, she told me not to come about her daughter again.

"To do this was impossible. I loved Ella and she loved me. We met secretly and planned the elopement. I told her we would get married just as soon as I could find out how I stood with my wife; that I thought we were divorced.

Arrested on Return.

"Ella and I left Atlanta December 14, 1912. We traveled all around the State, but did not go outside of the Georgia boundaries. Later I decided to come back to Atlanta and see if I could not get work to support us until things could be straightened out. I had no sooner set foot in this city than I was arrested."

Wimbish says Miss Mann is happy and living in a nearby town, though not as his wife. According to G. N. Bullock, the policeman who took Wimbish into custody, the prisoner stated at first he had three wives. Wimbish denies this.

EARL PARKER, who was stolen by women in an auto. His father believes the mother has hidden the boy.

Lays Kidnaping of Son to Two Women

Telegrams sent to Birmingham and other cities by the police at the instance of J. M. Parker, 102 Jett Street, whose 3-year-old son, Earl, was mysteriously kidnaped in an automobile a few days ago, so far have failed to bring any clew as to the whereabouts of the missing boy.

Parker is confident that one of the two women in the auto was his wife, from whom he is seeking a divorce. He believes she is hiding the boy to prevent his being taken from her by the courts. Mrs. Parker has been living in Birmingham, and Parker is satisfied the boy is in that city or in some nearby town.

Made Millionaires But Left Only $363

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—The inventory of the estate of Professor Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, one of America's foremost men of science, and a man who had made many men millionaires, shows that he left property worth approximately $363.

Lowe at one time was many times a millionaire. He lost his fortune in building the Mount Lowe Observatory and incline railroad, which he hoped would enable himself and other astronomers to learn some new truth among the maze of suns, moons and planets.

Among his inventions are those of artificial illuminating gas by the "water gas" method now used in all commercial gas plants of the world. The artificial ice invention is believed to rank second. He is also credited with having been the pioneer dirigible balloon man.

California Cotton Tests Successful

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The experiment of growing Durango cotton in the Imperial Valley of California is proving successful, according to reports made by Argyle McLachlan, assistant in crop acclimatization, to the Department of Agriculture.

Durango cotton is a long staple upland variety of cotton apparently well adapted to conditions in California and Arizona. The experiments are in their third year.

Mother Loves 19, So She Adopts the 20th

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 13.—Nineteen children, seventeen of her own blood and two adopted, have been reared by Mrs. May C. Koch, yet she has undertaken the task of bringing up another.

A petition signed by Mrs. Koch for the adoption of an 18-month-old girl, Helen Shirley, was before the Superior Court to-day.

"While I believe I already have done my duty," said the petitioner, "I might just as well rear an even score of them."

'Pirated' Success Makes Shubert Sad

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—Lee Shubert almost wept when he learned that the London Opera House management was taking in about $32,000 a week from the American revue. He said the American copyright law was signally at fault. He added:

"Hereafter I propose to copyright my stuff in England previous to its production. I figure that I have lost thousands of pounds this year by my failure to do this."

WILSON TO URGE MONEY REFORM

President and Congress Leaders Draft Bill To Be Presented as Administration Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An administration-made currency bill will be the fruit of the numerous conferences this week between Senate and House leaders, the President and Cabinet members.

Representative Underwood said today the currency bill soon will be whipped into fairly definite shape. The President and the Senate and House leaders plan to present a bill upon which a practical agreement has been reached and to designate it as an administration bill.

Carter Glass, chairman of the next House Banking and Currency Committee, desires a non-partisan bill, upon which both the Republicans and Democrats of the new Banking and Currency Committee may agree.

Currency Reformers Seek Views of Bankers.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator Owen announced to-day that the subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee would formally begin the compilation of questions to be submitted to bankers and economy experts this week. These will be drafted with the intention of learning the attitude of those concerned on currency reform legislation.

Senator Owen said the Democratic members of his committee were in favor of enacting currency legislation at the present session.

Another Great Liner Will Use Oil Fuel

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 13.—More alterations are being made on the Olympic. She is being prepared to carry oil fuel between the inner and outer shells.

It is considered that the changes for this purpose will be more expensive than the installation of ordinary steam engines, as it will be necessary to place burners under the furnaces. However, if the installation proves to be a success a similar installation will be made on the Britannic, her sister ship.

Dr. Hinman for Rigid Dental Inspection

Declaring a great many diseases can be traced to defective teeth, Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, a leading Atlanta dentist, said he would recommend a rigid enforcement of dental inspection in public schools of the city when he spoke before the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Dr. Hinman quoted Dr. William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins University and now professor emeritus of Oxford University, England, in saying, "Mouth infections cause more injury to the human race than alcohol.

Goes to Europe to Buy a New Pet Dog

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Within forty-eight hours after "Trix," a pet Pomeranian of his daughter, Mrs. Bertram Townsend, broke its $1,000 neck by falling down an elevator shaft in the hotel and was buried at Atlantic City in a silver-handled rosewood casket, beneath a silken shroud, Mahlon W. Newton, owner of Green's Hotel, was on the ocean, bound for Switzerland to buy another toy dog.

By long-distance to the steamship office he engaged a reservation. The steamer sailed at noon. Mrs. Townsend received a wireless from her father.

"Don't worry about 'Trix.' Will have another Pom just as good," read the aerogram.

RESINOL CLEARS AWAY PIMPLES

And Blackheads. Restores Health to Unsightly Complexions.

Pimples and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear and velvety, and hair health and beauty usually follow the regular use of Resinol Soap and an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. These soothing, healing preparations do their work easily, quickly and at little cost, when even the most expensive and complicated "beauty treatments" utterly fail.

The nearest drug store is sure to have Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Why not get some to-day? You can't begin too soon to get rid of those ugly, embarrassing complexion blemishes. The Resinol medication is so gentle, yet so effective, that it can be used freely on the tenderest skin. Doctors throughout the country have prescribed Resinol for eighteen years. You can test it free by writing to Dept. 20-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a generous trial.

PIANO MAKERS STRIKE ON EFFICIENCY SYSTEM

CHICAGO, May 13.—"The efficiency experts must go or we will not come back to work."

This was the ultimatum handed to Lyon & Healy, piano manufacturers, to-day following a walk out of 200 men, who declared that they were compelled to turn out twice as much work under the efficiency system and that the bonus paid them was not sufficient.

Foods That Bind Little Children

Start Them Off Right with a Good Laxative and Then Watch Their Diet.

MARJORIE DARLING

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Many of America's foremost families are never without Syrup Pepsin, because one can never tell when some member of the family may need it, and all can use it. Thousands indorse it, among them Mrs. M. E. Darling, R. F. D. No. 4, Belleview, Pa., who writes: "I certainly think Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin saved my baby's life. Marjorie is a bottle baby and could not get her food to digest, but I found by giving her a small dose of Syrup Pepsin when she had colic it always cured her." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being bought by those who already know its value, and it contains proportionately more. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin, as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-griping and free from injurious ingredients.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

Another Remarkable Value in the May Sale

$3.50 Voile Flouncings at 98c

Imagine a sheer white voile flouncing 45 inches wide, embroidered in neat pin dots. The dots are in combinations—black with red, black with blue, black with green, black with violet, and black alone.

It would be hard to conceive anything daintier for pretty summer dresses and waists. At such little cost, too, for the flouncing is 45 inches wide.

This voile has sold over our counters for $2.50 a yard, so the $3.50 valuation is not guessed at. Extraordinary bargain, of course, at 98c; but remember, this is a week of wonderful values in our Lace and Embroidery Section. There are many other "plums."

A Clearaway of

New Neckwear

"New Neckwear" in the sense that every piece is of this Spring, having arrived since February.

The Halved Prices are accounted for by the fact that some pieces are counter-tossed, or show signs of handling. Other pieces are the tag ends of quick-selling lines. A little bit of everything is represented:

Sunshine collars, coat and collar sets, guimpes, yokes, jabots, Dutch collars, etc. Variously in lawn, linen and lingeries; embroidery, lace and embroidery trimmed. White and colors. The price tickets will read:

19c; values to 50c
49c; values to $1.25

Plenty of the higher-priced neckwear in each lot. (Main Floor, Right)

$4 Silk Shirt

Mannish silk shirts that fit as they should. Neat stripes on white grounds, attached flat collar, or detached turn-over collar. $2.98

(Second Floor.)

SILK PRICES Slashed to 49c

Former Prices up to $1.50, now

Snip! snip! Scissors have been working overtime the past two weeks. As a result, many lines have dwindled, color lines have become broken, price lots have been depleted. For one cause and another, then, we group the following silks to sell at 49c. Look them over, they tell of big savings:

$1.50 silk and wool crepes—silk warp, wool filling. Soft and crepey, drape delightfully. 44 in. wide. Gray, rose, tan, chasseur, violet 49c

59c to $1 kimono silks—splendid quality silk from one of America's best makers. Allover patterns and borders in pretty kimono and floral patterns. Leading colors. 30 in. 49c.

85c to $1.25 silks—odd lots of fancy taffetas and messalines in various colors and combinations, 49c.

85c foulards—spot proof, not to hurt by rain drops. Neat patterns, allover and spaced designs. Blues, greys, rose, Copenhagen, brown. In the same lot are a few solid color messalines in odd shades, 49c.

P. S.—While this is the best item in the May Silk Sale, it is by no means the only good value. There are almost a score of others, including the most fashionable silks. Savings generally are a fourth to a half.

(Ready at 8:30. Silk Annex—Main Floor, Left)

Half-Price Sale of Ribbon Remnants

Because of the busy ribbon season, many short lengths have accumulated. So to-morrow we speed them out at halved prices. Just about any kind of ribbon you want is represented. Variously 1-2 to 10 inches wide.

Formerly 5c to $2 a yd.
Now at 3c to $1 a yd.

(Main Floor, Right)

Large $27.50 Rugs at $17.50

Choice of two sizes—the regulation 9x12 or the larger 12x15 ft. Scotch weave, firm, closely woven, deep pile, handsome patterns to harmonize with almost any color scheme.

This is one of the best values in this Sale of Domestic Rugs. Almost every kind of rug is represented—Axminster, Wilton, Saxony, Body Brussels, Seamless Wilton, etc. All sizes. Savings run like this:

Were $11.00, $25.00, $35.00, $50.00, $80.00.

WHAT WONDER IF BOYS LEAVE THE OLD FARM?

They're Tired of Sharing None of the Advantages, Says Secretary Houston.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—While not a practical farmer, Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston has given the subject of agriculture years of careful study. He stands for education of the farmers. He believes that they have been sorely neglected in that respect; that their advantages have been few as compared to those enjoyed by city dwellers.

"Have you discovered any inducement to persuade young men on the farms to remain on them?" the Secretary was asked.

"It is a problem which cannot be easily solved," he replied. "You can't hold men on the farms unless you offer sufficient inducements. It is little wonder that farmers and their sons have flocked to the cities for more lucrative and congenial employment. For many years they have been contributing to the partially artificial upbuilding of our industrial centers, to the development of the cities as against their own communities—and what have they received in return? You cannot find the best educational advantages among farming communities. They are to be obtained only in the larger cities.

Why They Quit the Farm.

"Take a farmer with six small children, for whom he desires to provide an education. They will be sent to the country school as long as some one can be found to take charge of it, but at best the education received there is meager. If he would give them an education which will be of benefit to them, he must send them away to some institution of learning, entailing perhaps greater expense than he can afford. He must either maintain his farm at the expense of the education of his childen, or move to one of the large cities. So, education, among other things, is driving occupants of farms to the cities."

"If the high cost of living is the result of less production and greater demand, what remedies would you propose?"

Too Much Gold.

"Don't say 'high cost of living,' say, rather, the cause for high prices. One great contributing cause is the enormous increase in the production and supply of gold during the past eighteen years. There is more gold now than ever before in the history of our country. The greater the supply of gold the higher the prices, and so the greater the cost of living."

"Do you believe that the present tariff, or the tariff presented by the Democrats, has affected or will affect the high cost of living?"

"A lower tariff on the necessities of life should bring about reduced prices to the consumer; but, not being a tariff expert, I do not pretend to know just what effect the present Underwood Tariff bill will have. It should bring about reduced prices, but not all at once. You can not expect too much of such legislation. It must be given a fair trial. Take sugar in Louisiana. I believe that if the people of that State could produce it on a business basis there would be no need for a tariff on it such as the people of Louisiana and their representatives claim. But with a reduced tariff the railroads might retaliate by increasing their rates of transportation. That is one of the contingencies that might prevent a healthy and remunerative profit to the sugar producer in Louisiana."

No "Uplift" About It.

Recurring to the education of the farmer, Secretary Houston said:

"Don't think that the Department of Agriculture has any idea of a policy of 'uplift' among the farmers. What I have in mind, and what I believe will be for the best interests of all concerned, is education along the lines of better production and better marketing. Mere scientific methods must be devised to benefit both the producer and the consumer. The farmers, especially those in the South, must have better banking facilities; they must be able to secure loans at a lower rate of interest. A system of rural credits must be devised to give them equal advantages with city folk."

MACON MAN TO BE TRIED FOR SHOOTING NEIGHBOR

MACON, GA., May 13.—Mallary Bedingfield, mill supply agent, who shot Ferd Guttenberger, a musician, last December, will be tried in the Superior Court Monday for assault with intent to murder. Bedingfield says he thought Guttenberger, a neighbor, who had just returned home from the theater, was a burglar.

Tag Day Returns Near $5,000

Record Sales, but Gifts Are Small

Entire Fund Goes to Charity Work

Miss Tommie Perdue, one of the fair young taggers who helped raise the Sheltering Arms charity fund Monday.

Receipts Still Uncounted Because of Great Number of Nickels and Dimes Donated.

Between $4,500 and $5,000 was the sum obtained through Tag Day sales Monday for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Association, according to Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, president of the organization.

Owing to the vast amount of small change collected, the receipts have not all been counted, and will not be before Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Fraser said more tags were sold Monday than ever in the history of the organization, though premiums paid for them were unusually small.

"Instead of quarters and half-dollars, the people gave nickels and dimes," said Mrs. Fraser, "and therefore returns are not so large."

The greatest amount of money gathered at any one station was $230, secured in front of the Third National Bank building. Mrs. A. McD. Wilson was chairman of the committee at that station.

The entire fund will be devoted to the Sheltering Arms Association work, which includes the upkeep of four day nurseries and kindergartens.

Short Postage Loses U. S. Much Business

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Department of Commerce is receiving complaints in increasing numbers from business men in foreign countries against the short postage on letters received from the United States. These foreign merchants aver that the double postage which they are required to pay on letters from America is so annoying that it turns much trade away from our country.

Complaints have reached the department from France, Argentina, Africa, Australia and many other parts of the world, and the statement is usually added that short paid letters from the United States are beginning to be refused.

It has been suggested that the simple device of using a special colored envelope for foreign letters would prevent the oversight of short postage. Many firms have already adopted this method with success.

SENATORS AFRAID TO 'PLAY HOOKEY'

Wilson Wants Currency Reform, Lawmakers a Vacation, but Latter Fear Public Sentiment.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Does the United States need currency reform legislation worse than members of the Senate will need to go to seashore resorts, Europe and other vacation spots in August?

This is the real question that is posed before President Wilson.

The President has said that he wants such legislation at this session. A large part of the Senate believes it is entitled to a vacation when it has completed consideration of the tariff bill.

It is admitted that legislation could be passed during the latter part of the session that would give those affected by the tariff the advantage of a more elastic currency system, but Senators don't want to stay in Washington all through a hot summer. They privately admit that they fear public sentiment.

President Wilson has made no secret of the fact that he will appeal to the public in support of his demand.

BOYS OF BERRY SCHOOL TO ERECT FOUR BUILDINGS

ROME, GA., May 13.—Berry School boys are going to spend their vacation in building four buildings for the Berry School for Girls. The structures will cost $8,000.

All the buildings will be constructed of logs in harmony with the distinctive style of architecture which makes the school attractive. With the completion of the buildings, Miss Martha Berry, the founder, will be at the head of a plant worth more than $100,000.

'DAD' IN CABINET BUT GIRL LOSES U. S. JOB

Daughter of Secretary Wilson, Society Miss, Will Quit Drawing $2,000 a Year in June.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Miss Agnes Wilson, daughter of Secretary of Labor Wilson, is one of the House employees who probably will be dropped from the Government payroll when the reorganization of the committee is effected. Miss Wilson is still clerk to the Committee on Labor, although her father left the House March 4 to become a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

According to the Disbursing Clerk of the House, Miss Wilson still is drawing $2,000 a year and will continue to do so until June 1. She has been prominent in society here since her father entered the Cabinet circle and has acted as hostess at his receptions.

Another society girl who will be more fortunate than Miss Wilson is Miss Anne Ferris, who is clerk to the Committee on Public Lands. Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, chairman of this committee, probably will retain the position, and Miss Ferris will remain on the House payroll.

Cleveland to Have Shortcake Inspected

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—A city bureau to regulate the making of strawberry shortcake and pie, with inspectors, is in prospect in Cleveland as the result of recommendations made to the new city charter commission by George E. Murray, famous chef here.

"Restaurant and hotel cooking has fallen into the hands of Swiss cooks," said Murray. "They despise pies and shortcake and it is impossible to find cherry or berry pie that is not adulterated or strawberry shortcake worthy of the name."

'Bathhouse John' for Ban on Gown Rustle

CHICAGO, May 13.—"Bathhouse John" Coughlin, alderman, to-day began a campaign to have the rustle of silk gowns included in the list of noises prohibited by city ordinance.

This decision was reached after his poetry-trimmed ordinance "regulating women's dress and censoring same" won a host of friends in the City Council last night.

The ordinance was assigned to the health committee.

Famous "C" Ranch in Texas Cut Into Farms

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 13.—The famous "C" ranch in Texas, owned by the late Nelson Morris, will be broken up and sold to small settlers. The announcement that the big ranch, which comprises four counties and is larger than Montenegro, will be sold for about $2,000,000, was made here to-day by O. W. Kerr.

"C" ranch was the home of the herd of 20,000 Poll Angus cattle and it played a large part in changing the State of Texas from the home of the long horn to that of blooded stock.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

"ARE YOU A MASON?" IS GOOD.

Miss Billy Long and company, at the Atlanta last night, presented "Are You a Mason?" to a crowded house, and it was received with almost continuous laughter.

The play is a farce. For the past three weeks the company has been handling more or less serious plays, and for that reason the presentation of a pure farce in so capable a manner was a pleasant surprise.

The distinct surprise of the play was the work of Bert Gardner, who impersonated a female French costumers' assistant, and extracted quite a lot of humor from the scene where he assists Mrs. Perry (Miss Billy Long) to fit her waist, while the indignant husband (Edwin Vail) who is aware of the gender of the assistant—who is impersonating the female as a part of the plot and with the husband's sanction—looks on in impotent rage.

Ralph Marthy, as Hamilton Travers, an actor with a thirst, made his acting stand out as a real merit of the play.

Miss Long's part this week is more or less incidental, but was handled with the splendid skill of the very versatile star, and Miss Sheldon as the mother has another opportunity to show her splendid ability as a character artist.

"Are You a Mason?" is good for many a hearty laugh, and can be seen nightly (except Wednesday) and at matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

FINE BILL AT THE FORSYTH.

Cleverly plotted and written and a laugh from curtain to curtain, "The Come Back" has no difficulty in maintaining its headline position at the Forsyth this week. It is one of the really laughable college skits. Paul Dickey, programed as a former University of Michigan football star, gets more than his share of the limelight, being not only the hero, and a very good one, but the playwright and the impresario of the little company as well. He is well supported by pretty Miss Inez Plummer, Corbett Morris, Stewart Robbins and Clay Boyd.

Billy K. Wells, in his Yiddish oratoricals, is an invariable hit, and the bill has two excellent singing acts, those of Mayo and Allman and of Newhoff and Phelps. Two unusually meritorious athletic numbers are on the program this week. The Apollo Trio are well known in their bronze posing and reproductions of sculptural masterpieces. The McAleavey Marvels are comparatively new to the larger vaudeville circuits, but are making good with a clever jumping act. An amusing farce, "The New Scholar," is presented by Clarence Wilbur and a company of seven others.

ODDITIES —in the— DAY'S NEWS

EASIER TO SEE NICKEL.—A slight change has been ordered in the new nickel. The words "Five Cents" will be more clearly defined.

MORE VERSES FOR NEW TESTAMENT

Parts of Gospel Long Missing Discovered Among Ancient Manuscripts From Egypt.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, May 13.—Some long missing verses of the New Testament are included in manuscripts of the Gospel discovered in Egypt six years ago and purchased by Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Mich., according to a study made of the Freer manuscripts by The Times.

A facsimile of the writings has been presented to the British Museum by the University of Michigan, to which Mr. Freer assigned the task of publication, and according to The Times' study, there have been found in the gospel of St. Mark several verses which occur in no other known manuscript of the New Testament, although they were known to St. Jerome, who quotes part of them.

In the Freer manuscript, after the passage in which it is said that Jesus upbraided His disciples for their unbelief, the text continues as follows:

"And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, suffers not the true power of God to be apprehended.

"For because, said they unto Christ, reveal at once Thy righteousness.

"And Christ said unto them, The limit of the years of the powers of Satan is (not) fulfilled, but it draweth near. (The text here and elsewhere is corrupt.)

"For the sake of those that have sinned was I given up unto death that they may return unto the truth and sin no more, but may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven."

A number of variations in other portions of the New Testament are also pointed out by The Times in the Freer manuscripts.

DRINKS POISON, THEN ASKS FOR DOCTOR; DEAD

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 13.—Cornelius Clark, who registered at the Florence Hotel here a week ago, today telephoned the clerk to send for a doctor. When Dr. B. A. Fox responded he found the young man had taken carbolic acid. He died. Three notes, one addressed to his mother in Tupelo, Miss., one to his wife in Chicago and one "to whom it may concern but keep it from newspaper men," were found.

COLUMBUS, GA., May 13.—Declaring that the present methods of punishment do not reform criminals as they should, and that some other plan should be employed to make better people of those sent to the chain-gangs and penitentiaries, Judge S. P. Gilbert, of the Chattahoochee Circuit, has indorsed sterilization of criminals.

BARES LIFE FOR SISTER WHO SHOT HER BETRAYER

MUNCIE, IND., May 13.—Miss Doris Underwood, the school teacher accused of shooting with intent to kill Otis Fisher, displayed the first signs of emotion to-day when the prosecution exhibited the man's blood-stained necktie. Ada Underwood, eighteen-year-old sister of Doris, over whose alleged betrayal the school teacher shot Fisher, was sworn as a witness to-day. She will bare her life story to save her older sister.

CALLS BALKAN WAR BLESSING TO TURKS

Bucknam Pasha, American Admiral in Sultan's Navy, Sees Prosperity Ahead.

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, May 13. — Bucknam Pasha, the famous American, who is an Admiral in the Turkish navy, has been in London for two weeks. He has no hope that conditions in Turkey will straighten themselves out for at least a year. The various details in regard to the signing of the peace treaty, the delimitation of the frontiers and the arrangements for the payment of debts will take a least a year.

"So far as Turkey is concerned," he said, "it is a blessing in disguise for her to lose her European provinces, as they were a source of continual expense and trouble. The Turks are essentially Asiatics and their destiny now is the development of Asia Minor, which is rich in oil and mineral wealth, which simply needs intelligent working. Even on the European side close to Constinople the oil fields are of incredible richness. In fact, Turkey will be the coming oil country of Europe.

"Turkey needs money to straighten herself out," continued Bucknam Pasha, "and Europe will undoubtedly furnish it. I do not expect much from the present Turkish Government. It is essentially a military dictatorship. It answered the purpose for the time being, but must soon pass away.

"Now that peace has been restored one of the difficulties with which the Turks are confronted is that after the despotism they have not the development capacity of a government and it will be necessary to introduce trained Europeans to take charge of every department of State and teach the Turks the science of government. Financially, Turkey is in better condition than the people imagine. The entire funded debt is only about $40,000,000 and this comprises everything. There are practically no municipal debts. Constantinople, in 1912, for the first time in its history, borrowed $5,000,000, yet the borrowing capacity of the city, based on European standards, is equal to the entire funded debt of the Empire."

Mutiny Threatened by Montenegrin Soldiers.

VIENNA, May 13.—Seven thousand Montenegrin troops in and near Scutari, enraged at the decision of King Nicholas to give up the Albanian city at the demand of the powers, are threatening to mutiny and commence a massacre of Albanians.

Word to this effect was received to-day from Cattaro by the official newspaper, Neue Freie Presse.

The dispatch further stated that unless the troops from the international fleet arrive at Scutari within the next 48 hours the Montenegrins will probably be out of hands.

The arrival of the international force at Scutari has been delayed by bad weather, although the city has already been surrendered to Admiral Burney, commander-in-chief of the war fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast.

Company Stops Cars In Cincinnati Strike

CINCINNATI, May 13.—Not a street car moved in Cincinnati to-day, owing to the strike tie-up, and the officials of the Cincinnati Traction Company announced that until a decision is reached by the carmen as to whether they will agree to arbitration, proposed by Mayor Hunt and accepted by the company, no attempt will be made to run cars.

The union members are to take up the arbitration proposition at a meeting this afternoon.

The proposition is to end the strike pending the adjustment of differences by an impartial board.

Bells Put on Poison Bottles in Hospital

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Sleigh bells tinkled in all the wards of the City Hospital to-day. There was such a merry concert as the nurses moved from place to place that the curiosity of the patients was aroused. They foundn that the bells were chained around the necks of bottles containing poisonous drugs.

Dr. Wayne Smith, superintendent, issued an order to put bells on the poison bottles after Thomas Adams, an attendant, had ben indicted for giving carbolic acid to a patient by mistake. The patient died.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

He Wanted Cover And Took It.

One of the best known of Atlanta's younger physicians—it really would be mean to tell his name—is an enthusiastic motorcyclist.

Sunday he rode his machine to Marietta. It was late—very late—before he started on the trip home. So late, in fact, that when something went wrong with the engine a few miles out of town he waited in vain for assistance to come along.

Painfully he pedaled the heavy machine in to town, and dismounting before his boarding house, crept up to bed.

Heated by his exertions, he quickly fell asleep, only to awake in a few minutes, shivering with the cold. Failing to find any additional covers in his room, he arose in the darkness, quietly entered the "spare bedroom" made a hasty grab at the bedclothes and dragged them into his room.

There he wrapped himself up and blissfully sank into the arms of Morpheus.

It was not until the next morning at the breakfast table that he learned a young lady friend of the family missing the last car to her suburban home, had been placed in the "spare room" for the night.

The young lady's opinion is not of record.

Did You Ever Hear of Such Luck?

"Ever notice how some people have all the luck in the world at poker?" asked a gentleman who is noted for his love of poker.

"Coming down from New York not long ago a number of us got up a little game in the smoking room of one of the big boats. We were all old friends, but interest in the game grew until finally the stakes mounted in the hundreds.

"I was dealing one jackpot and only two men were drawing cards. The opener took one. The other hesitated—he had been lucky all evening. Then he spread his cards out face up. He had a split straight with a queen lacking.

"'Just deal me a queen, old man,' he said.

"The opener scoffed.

"'Great chance you have. I've got three of the ladies to come in on,' he said.

"'What's you bet I don't get my queen?' asked the lucky one.

"'All you want, at ten to one.'

"'Done, for a hundred.'

"I dealt. The two bet around cautiously for a minute, then the man with the split straight raised the opener $100.

"'Call your bluff,' said the opener, showing down his three queens.

"'And it's my pot,' said the other, flipping over a queen.

"That broke up the game."

He Sure Was Absent Minded.

"I've heard of absent minded persons," said the barber as he prepared his implements of torture and shoved a lather brush into his patron's mouth to hush his protests, "but the strangest case I ever knew of happened right here yesterday.

"One of our best known lawyers, who has been wearing a beard for several years, dropped in and ordered it taken off. After the operation——"

"Operation's good!" interrupted the customer, feelingly.

"——," proceeded the tonsorial sharp, unheeding. "I wouldn't have known him if I had met him in the street.

"But a stranger thing was that he didn't know himself. When he got out of the chair and looked at his face in the mirror he turned around to see who the strange chap was whose face he saw in the glass.

"Shampoo? Face massage? Cold cream? No? Thank you, Next."

Ten Cars of Cattle Killed in Explosion

FORT WAYNE, IND., May 13.—The explosion of a tank car filled with oil in a freight wreck near Fort Wayne to-day blew a brakeman from the top of a car and set fire to the train. Ten carloads of cattle were burned to death.

Their frantic bellowings were heard for miles, and farmers from the country around, attracted by the bedlam, helped the train crew battle the flames.

La Vida Corsets

The coming of Mrs. Marvin at this season is a new departure.

Until now her visits have been confined to two a year—in the fall and early spring.

To have her with us now for two weeks at the beginning of the summer season is good fortune.

The corset for the light and filmy summer dresses must be right, it must give the proper support to make such dresses "hang" gracefully. And what woman does not know that summer comfort is largely a matter of the right summer corset?

It is along these lines that Mrs. Marvin will help you—this is warranted not only by her corset knowledge, but by the splendid models of LaVida Corsets she has here at her command.

A Sparkling, Brilliant Sale of Jewelry

We Do Not Know That Prices Have Ever Been Treated in Any Such Fashion

A clearaway in the Jewelry Section to-morrow!

And such a clearaway it will be!

50c Belt Pins for 10c; $1.00 to $2.50 Brooches for 25c; $3.00 Vanities for 50c; $7.50 LaVallieres for $2.00, etc., etc., etc., including watches, watch fobs, hat pins, scarf pins, fan chains and the like.

But properly to advertise such a sale as this places us in a dilemma. To do full justice to the radical reductions, the really unheard of prices, it would seem that the jewelry is not right and desirable, so prone is the mind to judge events by past experiences.

In this instance you must not!

You see below what the prices are; the jewelry that they stand for is exquisite---good-taste jewelry, chosen because it possessed the qualities that appeal to a woman's refined sense of ornamentation.

True, there are some few pieces that are a bit damaged, but they are the rare exceptions; they figured but slightly in the causes of this sale.

It is a clearaway, a Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. clearaway—and so the prices!

This list below is not so long as it might be. There are others and other pieces all reduced on the same scale.

The sale gets under way with the opening of the store.

Court "Graft" Temptations

ONLY those who have had the privilege to serve in King George of England's household can realize the temptation that is thrown in the way of those who are known to be connected officially with the court. To the credit of the members of the royal staff it has to be said at once that these temptations are nearly always treated with contempt. A recent incident, in which two officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department were implicated, shows, however, that sometimes the temptations held out are more than can be resisted.

Punishment in such a case is swift and severe. So soon as any one joins the royal household it is made perfectly plain to him or her that any attempt to gain personal profit by reason of their position means instant dismissal, and this rule is never departed from, no mater how important their post may be. No mitigating circumstances are taken into consideration in such a case, and the mere fact that the confidence of the sovereign has been betrayed is regarded as sufficient to have the culprit removed from the court.

No Orders From the Palace.

It is safe to say that scarcely a day passes that any one known to be connected in any way with the royal household, or possessed of any influence there, is not approached with suggestions that he might benefit his own pocket by falling in with schemes propounded to him. It is not many months since one of the best known officials of the Lord Chamberlain's department was offered a check for $3,000 if he could get a royal warrant stating that the firm in question had been specially appointed to supply a certain article to the King.

It was known, of course, to those who made this offer that the official in question had access to the blank forms upon which these warrants are drawn up, and that it would not have been a matter of the least difficulty to get one of these signed by the then Lord Chamberlain among his daily pile of documents. The offer was indignantly rejected and the whole matter reported to Viscount Knollys, his majesty's principal private secretary, with the result that the firm which made the proposal is still without the royal patronage and is probably wondering why no orders from Buckingham Palace come its way.

It is not always money that is the bribe offered to court officials. Social advancement is often the bait dangled before them. A case in point may be quoted. One of the principal subordinates of the master of the horse was approached two or three years ago by a lady of title with the suggestion that she could obtain handsome fees for presenting young ladies at court if he would undertake that they should receive the necessary "commands." The lady in question possessed great influence in the political world, and openly promised the official a baronetcy if he would do this for her. When he declined to take any part in this scheme he was then threatened with the lady's grave displeasure, and was bluntly told that she would make it her business to see that he was removed from his position. His rétort was prompt and surprising. He went direct to his official chief and laid the whole incident before him, with the result that he continues to hold his position in the household and the lady in question no longer receives invitations to court.

Lord Stamfordham once remarked that "one never knows how popular one is until one is appointed to a position at court." This is certainly true, since invitations from people of whom one has had no previous knowledge simply pour in from all quarters upon those whose good fortune it is to serve either the King or the Queen. An amusing story may be told in this connection. About this time last year an extremely well dressed lady went up to an official of the Lord Chamberlain's department in Piccadilly one morning, addressed him by name, shook him warmly by the hand, reproached him for having "neglected her for so long," and made him promise he would call upon her on the following Thursday. This done, she tripped away, leaving the courtier gazing after her in amazement, since he had not, and has not to this day, the slightest idea of her identity.

King Edward's Champagne.

It is not often that an official of the court is so directly approached with an offer of monetary reward for his services in getting a royal warrant as was the case a few months ago. He was written to by a firm of cigarette merchants hailing from America, forwarding him samples of their goods, together with the cool intimation "that they were well aware that the cigarettes were just the thing the King could smoke and enjoy," and that for every 1,000 that His Majesty ordered the official approached could have 60 per cent of the account repaid.

The reply was curt, but deserved. It was to the effect that the samples had been handed by the courtier to his chauffer, who pronounced them rubbish, and that in those circumstances he did not feel justified in pressing them upon his sovereign.

It was due to the late King Edward, one of the finest connoisseurs of wine who ever lived, being served with a very indifferent brand of champagne one morning that the gravest case of corruption that has ever been proved against the officials of the British court was brought to light. He asked the name of the firm who supplied it and what on earth it was doing in his cellars. He pursued this matter to some length, and ultimately found that one of his most trusted servitors had been substantially bribed to introduce this wine into the bins of the then Prince of Wales preliminary to an application for the royal warrant in the ordinary course. It is on record that the offender in this case was continued in his position just under half an hour after King Edward was informed of his identity.

Didn't Mention Names.

A number of enthusiasts, returning from an important match in New York, were playing cards in a railway carriage. Among the number was a rather shady individual who had lost one eye, but seemed to be winning freely, and time after time he scooped in the money, put down by his less fortunate comrades.

This continued for some time, when the man at the head of the table felt he could stand it no longer; so he rose in a fearful temper and remarked:

"Look ye 'ere, boys, someone here is cheatin'. Now, I don't want to mention any names, but if he does it again I'll knock his other eye out."

The Social World

The largest affair of the week will be the annual reception and formal opening of the Piedmont Driving Club Tuesday evening. For a number of years these receptions have been among the most brilliant social events of the summer season. They assemble the entire club membership, with their wives or friends.

The election of officers will take place at 6 o'clock. During the late afternoon the women will assemble in groups on the terrace, and following the election will be joined by club members. Through the evening there will be music by an orchestra. Refreshments and dancing will follow dinner.

The presence of a number of visitors will add to the pleasure and brilliancy of the occasion.

Among the visitors present will be Miss Mary Gaut, Nashville, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun's guest; Miss Ruth Wilson, New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest; Miss Nelson Chambliss, Chattanooga, Miss Lula Dean Jones' guest; Mrs. Edward Echols, Richmond, Miss Constance Knowles' guest; Mrs. James Hook Spratling, Macon, Mrs. Roy Collier's guest; Miss Lorna Carr, St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, Arkansas, Mrs. Bates Block's guests; Miss Gwendolyn Barnes, Uniontown, Pa., Miss Alice Vandiver's guest; Miss Ruth Hull, Mexico City, Mrs. H. L. Manson's guest; Miss Ellen Meeks, Memphis, Mrs. Robert L. Cooney's guest; Miss Anne Selden, Washington, Mrs. George K. Selden's guest, and Miss Marion Phinizy, Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Dinner Dance at Club.

There will be the usual informal dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening, which will be a happy close to the week's gayeties.

For Mrs. Byrd.

Mrs. Henry A. Leonard entertained at auction-bridge Tuesday afternoon at her home in Merritts Avenue for her sister, Mrs. S. F. Byrd, who will leave June 1 for Birmingham to live. There were 16 guests. Appropriate souvenirs were given winners of the top scores.

Mrs. Block Entertains.

Thirty young women were guests of Mrs. Bates Block Tuesday afternoon at a bridge tea, given for her house guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Vari-colored sweetpeas adorned the apartments. Dainty pieces of hand-made lingeries were given for top score and for the honor guests. The score cards bore the monogram of the hostess. Following the game tea was served on the terraced garden at the rear of Mrs. Block's residence. Guests were grouped around a circular table, surrounding a great oak tree. Decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas. The hostess and honor guests wore white lingeries.

Luncheon for Miss Wilson.

Mrs. C. A. Wood will entertain ten guests at a luncheon Wednesday at the Georgian Terrace for Miss Helen Dargan's guest, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York.

For Mrs. King.

Mrs. Edward King, who was Miss Elizabeth McLaws, of Savannah, was given an informal tea Tuesday afternoon by Miss Nita Black. There were twelve guests.

Gayeties at Fort McPherson.

A bowling party was given at Fort McPherson Monday evening by officers of the post. It was one of a series of affairs enjoyed by the residents of the fort. After the bowling, Colonel and Mrs. Styer gave a supper party.

Captain and Mrs. Cochran will give a bridge party Tuesday evening.

Embroidery Club Meets May 21.

The meeting of the North Side Embroidery Club, which was to have been held Wednesday with Mrs. Emily Trotti McCarley, has been postponed until May 21, owing to the illness of Mrs. W. T. D. Wilson, mother of two club members.

For Miss Wilson.

Mrs. Ronald Ransome will entertain at bridge Friday afternoon for Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who is visiting Miss Helen Dargan.

Miss Stoney Hostess.

Miss Josephine Stoney entertained twelve guests Tuesday morning at bridge at her home in Peachtree Street for Miss Marion Phinizy, of Augusta, a guest of Mrs. A. W. Calhoun. Paul Neyron roses were used in decorating the rooms where the card tables were placed. The prize for top score was a pair of silver slipper buckles; the consolation, a spoon, and to the guest of honor was presented a silver picture frame.

Miss Cowles Hostess.

Miss Laura Cowles will be among those having tea on the Terrace at the Driving Club Friday. She will have as her guests Mrs. Bates Block and Mrs. Block's guests, Miss Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Miss Caroline Scott, of Arkansas.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The Piedmont Continental Chapter, D. A. R., will meet in the parlor of the Piedmont Hotel Thursday at 3:30 p. m. The regent's report of the national congress will be heard.

Woman's Club Elects Officers.

Mrs. A. P. Coles has been re-elected president of the Atlanta Woman's Club. Rodin's 'The Biplane' Called Remarkable

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—Details have just come out of a remarkable work of sculpture that Rodin is now engaged on, which he calls "The Biplane."

The sculpture consists of a tall, slender, unadorned shaft surmounted by what may be described as a lengthened sphere on which twin figures stand side by side, their bodies which almost touch, curving gracefully backward. Their faces are upturned. Only one foot of each rests on the sphere, which seems to spring from beneath them in the moment of flight, and their wings are only half opened.

The two figures, which seem to aid and support each other in flight, symbolize the two wings of the biplane.

Son's Dress Too Gay for Author Rostand

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 13.—A good deal of amusement has been caused by the difference of opinion between Maurice Rostand, son of Edmond, and the rest of the family on the subject of taste in dress.

During the whole of the time that Edmond Rostand has been staying in Paris he has not dared to be seen in the streets with his son, whose extravagant costumes and general appearance appal the shy Academician. "I'll go to wark with you," it is said he told him the other day, "but only on condition that you cut your hair and change your tailor."

MUCH EXCELSIOR MADE IN GEORGIA

Production of 6,805 Tons Is Ahead of All Southern States Except Virginia.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Georgia, producing 6,805 tons in nine plants, principally from yellow pine, next to Virginia leads all Southern States in the manufacture of excelsior.

The figures are for the year 1911, as compiled by the Bureau of the Census.

Total production for the United States in 1911 was 139,830 tons, of which Virginia's output was 25,160 tons, leading all states.

Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi the Carolinas, and Texas take unimportant rank with one and two plants each.

Excelsior has been manufactured in this country for more than fifty years. It was first placed on the market in 1860, but for the ten succeeding years it was not in great demand. Since then, it has become a staple commodity for many important uses, until now over 85,000,000 feet of forest material are needed each year to meet the demand.

Excelsior might be called ribbon veneer, since it is made by cutting wood into very thin strands. The size of the strand, with the kind and color of the wood, gauges the price and grade. The thinnest grades are called wood wool. The finish product is baled by a press such as is used for baling hay, and in this form it goes to market.

The first government record of the excelsior industry is contained in the reports of the Tenth Census (1880), only the value of the raw material, amounting to $150,800, being shown. Assuming the value of a cord at the time to have been $2.50, the amount of wood consumed would have been about 60,000 cords, as compared with 142,944 used in 1911.

Cottonwood is the favorite excelsior wood, contributing 43.3 per cent. of the total amount consumed.

Yellow pine, including scrub, shortleaf, and loblolly, was reported from 11 States. Virginia using more than all the others together. In that State scrub pine was probably the species most largely supplied.

The best grades of excelsior are made from basswood. That not more of this is used is due probably to its scarcity and to the high price of the stumpage.

Other woods which were used for excelsior were spruce, buckeye, cypress, butternut, soft maple, chestnut, birch, hemlock, beach, and white cedar.

NAPOLEON'S SPOOK DESPISES GLORY

Conqueror's Spirit, at Seance, Pained by Fickleness of Fame in Earthly Life.

PARIS May 13.—Napoleon the Great has learned in the other world that glory is a bubble, according to a communication from his shade, quoted to-day by one who heard it at a spiritist seance. Said the Conqueror's spook:

"It is very painful for spirits to note how all the evils caused by politics quickly disappear from the consciousness of people. The glory you have acquired is soon forgotten or only vaguely remembered; but you cannot be blamed for forgetting glory, because everything called glory is in reality only a great monstrosity toward humanity.

"Your monstrous earthly politics are nearly always inspired by the personal ambitions of a few individuals. It is unpardonable wickedness for men to warn people that their vitality in relation to liberty is at stake.

"These are only words used to influence great masses. Those uttering them know that nobody can deprive the world of what God created."

AMATEURS WILL HAVE 2 EVENTS IN HILL CLIMB

PERMISSION has been received, in the form of an official sanction from the American Automobile Association to the committee of the Atlanta Automobile Association, to include in the list of events which are to be held in the Stewart Avenue hill climb next Saturday one which will undoubtedly interest a large majority of motorists. It is the sanction for an amateur event, one in which any owner of a motor car may participate, be he a seasoned driver or not.

Two Classes for Amateurs.

The amateur event will be run in two classes. The first class provides for cars of a piston displacement up to 300 cubic inches and the second 301 and over. This will make, as far as the committee can judge, a fair and equitable adjustment.

The handsomest prizes of the entire event will be offered to the amateur drivers and all that is necessary to qualify in this event is for an aspirant to telephone E. H. Eleby at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. A special concession has been made to the amateur drivers of $3 entry fee and $2 license tax.

Officials Are Named.

The following officials have been named for the meet:

Technical Committee—Automobiles, Fred Steele, F. C. Skinner, A. R. Almond; motorcycles, H. Gilbert, Dove Wylie, Mr. Schulenberger.

Starters—K. T. McKinstry, L. S. Collier.

Referee—W. G. Humphrey.

Judges—L. E. Bissell, C. L. Elyea, T. H. Smart, R. S. Abbott.

Clerk of Course—E. H. Elleby.

Timers and Umpires—D. T. Bussey, R. N. Reed, R. J. Slear.

Gasoline Tester—Ed L. Wight, Jr.

M'GRAW ASKS WAIVERS ON OLD DOC CRANDALL

NEW YORK, May 13.—Word comes by the way of Cincinnati that John J. McGraw, who controls the destinies of the Giants, has asked for waivers on Otis Crandall, the Indiana farmer, who has prescribed so effectively in the past for many sick games, that he earned the name of "Old Doctor" Crandall.

The rescue pitcher extraordinary and sometimes great pinch hitter, has found it hard to get into condition this year, but the news that McGraw has decided to part with him will come as a shock to the fans who have a warm place in their hearts for the player who never quailed, no matter what the odds he was called on to face. It is just possible that McGraw has asked for waivers to rouse Crandall and will hold tight if some other club jumps at the chance to get him for $1,500.

For a Red Blotchy Skin

The Remarkable Action of a Famous Remedy and Some Facts About It.

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream and the influence of these properties is that of an antidote. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 127 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SCORING RULES SILLY

By Percy H. Whiting.

AT last, after a vast number of years, the scoring committee of the National Baseball Writers Association has met and taken some action—though I can't say I think so much of it, now that they have done it.

The committee appointed by the Baseball Writers' Association to clear up points in the scoring rules so as to bring about more uniformity has held its first meeting and adopted a number of recommendations to be presented to the National Commission and through that body to the playing rules committee of the big leagues for action.

The committee was unanimously in favor of the much discussed plan to giving a hit to the batsman who advances a base runner on an infield jab when the batsman reaches first and no error is made on the play. It is argued that the good points of this method of scoring will outweigh any defects it might have and that it was the logical and equitable way to score the play. Instructions already have been issued to National and American official scorers to record the play as a base hit.

The wording of several of the rules was clarified. One made it clear that one assist, and one only, shall be credited to a player who takes part in the run-down of an opponent. A fielder might have two assists in a double play.

Some scorers have been in doubt as to whether or not to charge an error in case a runner is caught napping but gets back to his base because the man who takes the throw drops the ball. The verdict was that in case the runner would have been out if the fielder had held the ball the latter should be charged with an error.

* * *

TAKE now this rule that gives a batter a base hit when he grounds to the infield and an attempt to force another man at second, third or home goes wrong.

In many cases the jab will be a feeble thing, on which the batter would be thrown out a mile if the play were made to first. But because of the happening that there is a runner on bases who draws the throw the batter gets a hit for it in the box score.

In other words a man can come up in the first inning, ground to third base and go out by three steps at first, getting a time at bat and nothing else. The next time up he can exactly duplicate the blow but the throw will be made to second, the other runner will beat the ball there—and the batter gets a hit. That's about as logical as——as,——as might be expected.

* * *

TAKE the matter of giving a player only one assist on a run-down. That's absolutely wrong. Every time a man handles a ball in such a run-down he takes the chance of making an error. Therefore he should get an assist if he performs the feat without making a bungle.

If you don't give the man an assist for every time he handles the ball you should not give him an error for any miscue he makes after his first handling of the sphere.

If that rule sticks a player will jump into a run-down, handle the ball once and then let George do it—for after that time he is in constant danger of acquiring an error without the slightest chance of getting any credit in the box scores for his further efforts.

More fine logic.

TINKER SAYS DODGERS WILL LAND NEAR TOP

NEW YORK, May 13.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, to-day predicted that the Dodgers would finish well up in the first division.

"They've got a team without a weak spot," declared Tinker, "and the game they are playing now isn't any flash in the pan work—it's just the sort of game they'll play all season, barring accidents."

BRADLEY-COULON GO IS EASY FOR JOHNNY

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—In one of the greatest contests seen in the city of Philadelphia, Johnny Coulon, bantam weight champion of the world, easily defeated Frankie Bradley, of Philadelphia, last night.

From the sound of the gong it was apparent that Coulon had the greater science and was far the stronger of the two. He defeated Bradley in every round of the six.

JOE BIRMINGHAM OUT OF BATTLE FOR MONTH

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 13.—Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps will not be seen in action for all of a month, if then, for he is suffering to-day from a broken bone in the right ankle, acquired while sliding for second base in the ninth inning of the game here yesterday. His right foot caught in the iron that holds the bag in place, and it bent, snapping the bone.

Birmingham will direct the Nap team on crutches for a month or more. "Buddie" Ryan will play center field in his place.

This is the Naps' second mishap of the New York series, as Larry Lajoie can not grip his bat to-day because of the two bones broken Sunday by Klepfere's shoot.

LLOYD BREAKS RECORD IN FIFTY-MILE CONTEST

LONDON, May 13.—The world's amateur running record for 50 miles was beaten yesterday by E. W. Lloyd, who ran the distance in 6 hours, 13 minutes and 8 seconds at the Stamford Bridge athletic grounds.

The former record was made in 1885 by J. E. Dixon and was 4 minutes and 15 seconds slower.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 13.—"What's the matter with the Giants?" friends and rooters inquired from me when the club returned from Philadelphia, after the unsuccessful series.

"We ran into good pitching, the best in the league right now, and some of the games were kicked away by thick-skulled playing," was my reply.

"Does John really say anything to the players when they make mistakes?" a man who calls McGraw by his first name only when he is not around asked me.

"He mentions them sometimes," said I. "For instance, an outfielder missed a foul fly in that Philadelphia series which would have won us a game if he had caught it. There was a man on second base at the time.

"'Why didn't you get that ball,' said McGraw to him when he came to the bench. 'You were slow going after it.'

"'Well,' replied the outfielder, 'I was trying to watch the runner on second out of the tail of my eye to see whether he started, and I thought I could get a double play.'

* * *

THERE were two out when he went after the ball. McGraw dwelt on the caliber of that player's intelligence for a minute or two. Yes, sometimes he speaks of little things like that when he feels talkative. He had many "a bone" to thrash over with the various players when he went into executive session with them in the clubhouse after those games, too. That is when he talks it over—in private.

The Giants are playing good ball now. They ought to climb, and climb rapidly—particularly on this Western diet, which for the first time in years should prove to be nutritious. It used to be the hardest in the league to swallow. The New York pitching staff was off for a time there. Tesreau has not really acquired his stride yet, although he was better in a game he started against Cincinnati last week until he banged out a three-bagger with the bases full and ran all the "pep" out of himself getting his big bulk around to third. After that, somebody had to be sent to pitch for him. Marquard is over his case of tonsilitis, and should be around in shape again very soon. He did pretty well against Philadelphia last week, except for one inning. The team was not hitting the ball hard in Philadelphia, but this was not due so much to weak batting as superior pitching. The men are all in good shape now, with the exception of John Murray, who caught a little cold and has a stiff neck. He will be able to turn his head again very soon now, and should be in the game this week. McGraw is plentifully supplied with substitute outfielders, but he refuses to let any of them go. Stallings is very anxious to get hold of "Josh" Devore because of his speed. "Josh" runs and hides every time he hears his name mentioned in connection with Boston. He says the climate up there does not agree with him.

* * *

AS I predicted, the Western clubs have found the Eastern brand of pitching very superior to that on exhibition in the West this year.

The Cubs had a tough time in Brooklyn, where they were unable to roll up the big scores to which they had grown accustomed in the West. They met good pitching. Pittsburg had trouble enough in Boston. I expect to see the Cubs start to drop very soon now. It is necessary for them to make too many runs to win a ball game, and the pitchers all around the league, like wine and shoes, will improve as the season ages. If you have observed the scores, you will find that Cheney has worked in more than twenty games already this spring. If Evers had a couple more good workmen in the box he would make a great fight for the pennant, because there is no fault to be found with the rest of the club. It is a team of hardened, shrewd veterans.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Joe Levy, manager of Joe Rivers, announced yesterday that he does not intend to let his protege box again until July 4. "I have got that date at Tom McCarey's Vernon arena for Joe," said Levy, "and I think I would be taking a big chance of losing it if I should match Rivers in the East and take a chance of being outpointed by one of those clever fellows."

* * *

Jack Britton is another crack Eastern lightweight who is going to California to try and force Willie Ritchie to meet him in a 20-round battle on July 4.

* * *

Britton and his manager, Danny Morgan will leave about May 30 for the coast where Morgan will have Britton box two men within two weeks, after which he will post a forfeit of $2,500 and issue a challange to match Britton against Ritchie.

* * *

"Digger" Stanley, the bantamweight champion of England, and Eddie Moran, the clever English bantam, are to fight after all for the English title.

* * *

They were matched a few days ago to battle for twenty rounds at the National Sporting Club of London on June 2 for $500 side bet, a purse of $1,750 and the Lord Lonsdale belt. They were to have fought on March 31, but Morgan could not make the weight and the match was called off.

* * *

* * *

While here he stopped Spider Britt and held Kid Young to a draw, despite the fact that Young outweighed him eight pounds. Grant expects to return here in about three weeks.

* * *

Buck Crouse, the Pittsburg middleweight, has started training for his 6-round bout with Blink McCloskey at Pittsburg, May 19.

* * *

With shrewd handling such as Frank Moran is sure to get, being that Dan Ketrick has him in charge, there will be big money for Moran during the next six months. McKetrick's protege has shown as much as McCarty or any other big fellow in the game to-day. His great exhibition against Luther with a broken hand is still being talked of by New York fans.

* * *

Eddie Johnson, who recently held Frankie Whitney to a draw, was matched yesterday to box Bobby Waugh in a 10-round affair at Denver, May 21.

* * *

Johnny Lore is after Willie Ritchie. Lore's manager, Walter Burke, says that the St. Nicholas Club of New York, will stage the event June 7, if Ritchie agrees to the match.

* * *

Frank Loughrey, the Philadelphia fighter, will leave June 3 for Australia, where he is signed for five fights.

* * *

The Garden Club of New York will stage two 10-round bouts Friday night. Mike Gibbons and Tommy Connors meet in one and Tommy Gibbons and Young Mike Donovan in the other.

* * *

Soldier Kearns and Boer Rodel will clash in a 10-round battle in New York on May 23. They meet in the semi-final to the Jim Flynn-Jim Coffey encounter.

* * *

George Carpentier has been guaranteed $10,000 to box Bombardier Wells at Paris, June 28. The bout has been clinched.

* * *

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, started training yesterday for his 10-round go with Frank Klaus at Indianapolis, May 29. This will be the third meeting between the pair. Frank holds a 20-round decision over Dillon on the coast while Jack is said to have shaded the Pittsburg boy in a short scrap at New York.

* * *

Jack Britton, who has received nearly $15,000 for 29 fights in the past eight months, was matched yesterday to box Jill Cross in a 10-round set-to at New York on May 21.

FODDER FOR FANS

Mike Donlin, the slugging outfielder, who has just completed a vaudeville engagement, wafted into New York and announced that he'd like to play with the Giants again. He is on the reserve list of the Phillies.

* * *

Maranville, the Brave's shortstop, was the hero of yesterday's game. It was his fielding and pinch hitting that enabled his team to win from the Cardinals.

* * *

Milan, of the Senators, is after the American League pilfering record again. To date he has stolen sixteen bases.

* * *

Two doubles a triple and a homer were the contributing factors in the Giants' 5 to 1 victory over the Cubs.

* * *

"Smoky" Joe Wood, who led the American League pitchers last year, went in against the Tigers yesterday in the closing rounds and the Detroiters promptly batted the wadding out of him.

* * *

"Lefty" Russell, of the White Sox, held the Athletics to three hits yesterday, but failed to win.

* * *

The Brooklyn ball club's receipts to date for the 23 regular and four exhibition games are estimated at slightly over $100,000. Last season the receipts up to this time were about $25,000.

* * *

Manager Dahlen, of the Dodgers, sort of sassed Umpire Rigler yesterday and was sent to the bench.

* * *

"Bobby" Groom was at his best yesterday and the Senators scored a shutout victory over the Browns.

* * *

Edgar Willett says that after a runner has knocked the ball over the fence he should not waste his time rounding the bases but should return to his seat and save time. That's the idea—save the time. The cooks are clamoring for early suppers—so let's have 'em.

* * *

This is a joyous day for New York sport writers. The Giants, Yankees and Brooklyns won yesterday, and no alibis were necessary.

* * *

John Evers, manager of the Cubs, voiced his objections to a decision made by Umpire Orth yesterday, was chased from the field and may draw a long suspension.

* * *

Charley Hemphill is batting .338—not bad for an old-timer.

GLAD DAYS.

The melancholy days have gone,
The saddest of the year.
The wrestling game is pale and wan—
Its final gasp is near.

The wrestler now will give us peace,
And sail across the main;
His manager also will cease
From giving us a pain.

Soon we can hie to yonder park
And see a baseball game,
While wintry winds from noon till dark
Coagulate our frame.

Several newspapers inform us that the Tigers have acquired Pipp. A study of recent box scores leads to the same conclusion.

Finis Wilson is the name of a youthful pitcher sent to the Southern League by the Naps. He may be a promising young man, but that is no name for a beginner.

Still, if George Stovall loses his job in St. Louis he will be welcomed by Spitzbergen in the Polar League.

J. Jeffries arises to remark that he will not be anybody's sparring partner. Having once enacted the role of a punching bag, he knows how it feels.

While those Sox and Giants are touring the universe it behooves them to pause in Africa so as to compare the American and African brands of ivory.

RASSLING.

You may pan, you may hammer the game if you will,
But thousands of suckers will fall for it still.

Hugh Jennings will now take up the education of Mr. Pipp where Charles Dana Gibson left off.

The consensus of opinion is that Billy Smith is suffering from a compound fracture of the disposition.

TOM M'CAREY'S PET PRESERVES TO BE INVADED

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Tom McCarey, who has been operating as a boxing promoter in this section of the country for years without opposition, to-day confronts a rival organization.

Harry Gilmore, fight promoter, fight manager and handler of the knights of the padded mitt, is to be his rival.

Backed by big money powers and assured by the Vernon authorities every right that McCarey enjoys, Harry will soon begin to lay plans for the erection of an open air arena down by the beach.

Gilmore will throw open his new club to the public on July 4. A certified check of $20,000 has been placed in the bank here to enable him to work out his plans. Harry is matchmaker of the organization, with William Aldrich president. None but high class matches will be staged.

A contest between Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers for the world's lightweight championship is the opening card desired.

A flat offer of $17,000 has been telegraphed to Ritchie. Negotiations will be taken up with Rivers immediately.

"That covers the situation," said Gilmore. "Our hats are in the ring and they are going to stay there."

Articles of incorporation will be filed inside the next three days.

BATTERS CAN BE DEVELOPED SAYS MEYERS

By John (Chief) Meyers.

BATTING ability is the high art of baseball. True skill with the stick hides many a minor fault. Brilliancy in all other lines pales into nothingness if not backed by at least average hitting power.

There is a so-called axiom in our profession that "batters are born, not made." I disagree with such logic. There is the same opportunity for improvement in batting as in fielding or base running.

Not every one, of course, no matter how studious, may become a Ty Cobb or a Honus Wagner. And it is a mighty good thing for the pitchers and catchers that this is so. Few athletes have the lightning speed of Cobb, which enables him to beat plenty of infield taps which would be easy outs against average runners. Few again have the muscular power of Wagner, which enables him to drive the ball with rifle-like velocity.

300 Notch Real Feat.

When one stops to consider conditions, a .300 batting average strikes home as real achievement. It means hitting safely three times in every ten chances.

The batsmen, single-handed, must fight an army of obstacles.

In the first place he has a perfectly round stick with which to change the direction and propel a perfectly round ball thrown from a distance of 65 feet with all the force or human power.

He has approximately half a second from the time the ball leaves the pitcher's fingers until it is up to him. In that half-second he must swing his bat so that the curved surfaces of the two objects (bat and ball) meet fairly in the middle of their respective lines of flight.

Now there are nine agile and active opponents so distributed throughout the playing field that any sort of high sky means certain retirement.

If the batter hits a fraction of an inch over the ball he sends it down to the ground where the speed is checked, and where it is generally quite easy for one of the infielders to intercept it.

Add to these complications a skilled pitcher who can make the ball vary many ways in its flight to the plate, and that little half second of grace dwindles almost into an infinity. The wonder then is that so many reach the select class.

Chief Tells Secret.

Still there are certain principles of batting science that will help to overcome these obstacles. The most important, to my mind, is that of meeting the ball in front of the body. This is no more than the swing of the player who is termed the natural hitter. Zimmerman, Wagner, Lajoie, Doyle and Cobb all employ the style.

Some of them may do it all unconsciously. I know I did for several years before I joined the Giants. McGraw pointed out to me the reason. He drills and drills this idea into his men.

Al Bridwell is a player that I would term a "made" hitter. In a pinch he was one of our most trusty batsmen, for he was sure to play every shade in his own favor. Bridwell became proficient by learning to meet the ball in front of himself.

Uppercutting Is Fatal.

In the old days great hitters, like McGraw and Jennings, used to run out to meet the ball before it broke. The present rule about staying in the batters' box prevents this. But the principle may be applied through the medium of the natural swing.

The swing should be made in a horizontal arc. The bat naturally has a tendency to propel the ball directly in its course.

An "uppercutter" is a batsman whose thrust ascends after the fashion of fungo hitters. This style of hitter usually raises high flies or pop-ups, and can never hope to become proficient.

A downward stroke is practically as weak, for by it it is practically impossible to hit the ball with speed along the ground.

MAY BATTLES BRING HEAVIES TO LAST ROUND

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—In the balance of his journey toward the championship goal Gunboat Smith will have to do principally with cowboys. The rough riders he has to work past are Luth McCarty and Jess Willard and if he can escape being thrown, roped and branded he will be in a position to write champion heavyweight of the world after his name.

At least that is the way the heavyweight outlook looms at present. That the Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard bout at Coffroth's Eighth Street arena on May 17 will be the semi-final in the blue ribbon tourney is universally admitted. But that Luther McCarty will be the man the winner will meet is not so sure. Luther is to hook up with Arthur Pelky at Calgary, on May 24 and while it does not look as though McCarty is endangering his title, you can't always tell.

Pelky is the big husky who recently held his own with Tommy Burns and vanquished Andy Morris. That may not be much, to be sure, but it suggests that Mr. Pelky is "a buildin' up." There are no really finished products among latter day white hopes and the sporting world is apt at any time to ring with the praises of some new heavyweight who was scarcely known twenty-four hours before.

Willard Defeated Pelky.

It's strange how Pelky's fortunes have been linked with those of Jess Willard and Lute McCarty. Willard defeated Pelky in New York. At another time Pelky was to box Luther McCarty and failed to put in an appearance. Willard took his place at short notice and, in the opinion of Eastern sport writers, outboxed McCarty. Now McCarty and Pelky are to meet at Calgary.

The month of May will surely clear the way for a decisive championship encounter. The Gunboat Smith-Jess Willard and Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky bouts are only a week apart and there should be little difficulty in signing the two victors for a Fourth of July match. It is understood that Promoter Coffroth has his eye on the attraction and it is to be hoped he lands it, for it will be the biggest thing that has happened in pugilistic circles for a long time.

Heisman Ranks Alabama Second Dobson Works Miracle at Clemson

By J. W. Heisman.

THE first two games of the Tech-Georgia series were the big noise in college circles last week. They did not have much bearing on the championship no matter how they came out, but they were of special interest to all Georgians and of some interest to all Southerners, nevertheless.

No matter how grand a record either of these teams may make or how punk, up to the time when they don the gloves for each other, everybody has come to understand that it is going to be a battle to the frayed and frazzled finish between the two despite any seeming disparities.

Over and over again this has happened in the past, and the apparently weaker team has overthrown the stronger to the bewilderment of all followers of the college game in the South. And realizing this to be a fact, as they more and more are doing, people in larger and larger numbers each year find it well worth while to cut out some other attraction and arrange their affairs so they can go and see the Tech-Georgia games, whether they take place in Athens or in Atlanta. That is the explanation of the huge crowds that last Friday and Saturday witnessed these contests in Athens. On these two days all previous Athens records for baseball attendance were badly shattered, notwithstanding it appeared to the man without bias that Georgia was bound to make a runaway affair of both games. Those who remembered their baseball history, though, couldn't see it that way, and made sure of being on hand when the factory whistle blew.

Nor were they disappointed, for if ever there were two hard-fought and evenly-contested games anywhere, these were they. Both games were lost by Georgia by a margin of one run only, and in both the Athenians had men on bases when their last batter was retired in the last half of the ninth inning.

What now about the comparative strength of the two teams? Before these games the records of the two teams seemed to have settled that matter pretty thoroughly. But when it comes to the all-around effectiveness and playing ability of the two teams right now—as they played yesterday and as they would play to-day—that may be a very different matter.

Despite the promising nature of the new material on hand this spring at Tech, it early became evident that seven new men on the team meant a badly balanced organization, and one that was bound to get some bad bumps from first to last before the season was over. With this fact recognized, high aims for a whole season's record were ruthlessly abandoned, and every word and plan and step of action was bent toward whipping the green team in such condition of preparedness and fitness as would result in their giving a good account of themselves in the Georgia series alone. That result has, seemingly, been attained by the Yellow Jackets, and that is the season why they appear to-day to be a match for the Red and Black, whereas a month ago they would have been mince pie fon their rivals.

* * *

BUT do not be misled into believing that the tables are turned to any such extent as to make of Georgia mince, or any other kind of pie for Tech. Far, very far, from it.

Tech won the first games by a hair's breadth only; and perhaps they have good old side pal Mr. O'Confidence to thank for helping them to even this much margin.

* * *

PRAISE, more praise, and yet again praise, is what is overdue the Clemson team and Coach Dobson for the way they have fought their way to the light out of dark wilderness and triumphed over teams that were whole laps ahead of them in form and condition when the season opened. Two out of three from Auburn on the latter's own playground is a glorious finish to a game, up-hill season. And I cannot forbear to cite the fact, unknown to many in this section, that besides winning ten straight from the colleges of South Carolina, the Tigers wrested a 4-3 victory from the University of North Carolina and played Trinity a 14-inning 3-3 game at Durham. This certainly puts them up in the running in the estimation of all fair-minded fans.

By Way of Aftermath

A few points that neither the box scores, nor yet the detail of the games, show of the recent Tech-Georgia battles may be worth jotting down.

* * *

I never saw amateur pitchers who can wheel and throw to second any quicker or more accurately than do Corley and Morris. They must have put in hours and hours of practice to have acquired this precision; it was very fine.

* * *

* * *

Wootten, the Tech freshman, grandly justified my judgment in putting him back into the game as a varsity man in spite of his failure to get a single hit in the entire first eight college games in which he played. Who shall say how much his home run (the only one of the series) the first time he stepped to the plate didn't have to do with the winning of both games by Tech?

* * *

Ginn is the fastest and most finished base runner I have seen in the colleges in many, many years. He gets away with it at any old stage of the game, and no matter how we lay for him.

* * *

On Friday Tech had six men in the game who were playing their first year of varsity ball, and on Saturday they had seven such in the line up. All but one of the ten who played are due to be back next year, and also every last one of the present scrub players; so that Tech men think they have little cause to worry over next year's troubles if not even a single new man comes in.

* * *

To my mind, the umpiring of both the officials was splendid work. I am thoroughly convinced that the final outcome of neither game was affected, or would have been affected, by the changing of any close decisions that came up. Messrs. Harmon and Holland are two fine umpires, two clever gentlemen, two absolute sportsmen; they typify the best traditions of college life and college athletics.

* * *

In another year Amason should size up to thoroughly fill Holliday's shoes at first base. This youngster has even more natural reach and stretch than Holliday, and he is fast picking up in every way. Had McWhorter not been playing unusually deep for him, every-one of his three terrific drives to center in Friday's game should have been good for a home run. As he himself puts it, though, all he accomplished was to give Bob a chance to be a hero. (Never mind, "Amy." I am sure Bob appreciates the courtesy.)

* * *

Bob McWhorter is surely one good base runner, and he is as sure and graceful in his handling of fly balls as the cleverest professionals.

* * *

During the past three seasons Fax Montague has made a success of every position in which he has been placed. Now he is a second baseman, and a good one. "Fax" is also a real captain; one of the very best Tech has ever had.

* * *

You'll have to hand it to both Pitts and Eubanks for pulling themselves up from positions of only mediocre reputation to where they have earned the undying gratitude of their college mates. With both it was a case of tightening their belts and their courage up to the very last hole, then "up and at 'em," and, finally, of "staying" with the opposition till the cows came home.

JOHNSON STICKS FINE ON TWO MORE PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 13.—President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has fined Catcher Nunnamaker, of the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Olson, of Cleveland, $25 each for their fist fight in Cleveland last week.

President Johnson said the reports of the fight were greatly exaggerated, and that these two players were the only ones involved in the trouble. He said he obtained a straight story of the trouble from the two players themselves.

MATTY HAS PITCHED 47 INNINGS WITHOUT ALLOWING FREE PASS

NEW YORK, May 13.—Running along with Walter Johnson in his efforts to pitch a record number of scoreless inning is Christy Mathewson, who is setting a mark for perfect control that may never be equaled.

The star twirler of the New York Giants finished his forty-seventh inning yesterday afternoon without a base on balls. Matty has given only two passes this year. That was in the first game he pitched against Boston on April 17.

Matty has won five games and lost one so far this season. He was beaten by the Phillies on May 3, the score being 3 to 2, two men being out when the winning run was scored.

Willard Is Hard Man to Handle Nervousness May Wreck Chances

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 13.—Unless Jess Willard curbs his inclination to extreme nervousness as the day of an important ring battle draws nigh, he is apt to wreck all of the good chances he has of getting to the top of the heap of white hopes that are struggling for recognition at the present time. This is the straight opinion of Charley Cutler, Willard's old friend, and the man who is chiefly responsible for getting the elongated Kansas fighting proposition a good start on the pugilistic sea. Cutler knows the tall Westerner better than anybody else in the world, and while he is still friendly with Willard and eager to see him win, which would justify all of the nice things Cutler has said about him, he fears his one weakness will be his undoing.

* * *

TOM JONES has the Willard affairs in hand right now, and is training him in person for the affair with Gunboat Smith in Jim Coffroth's arena a week from Tuesday. Coast critics are saying some nice things about Jess and the form he is showing out there in his preparation, and that is what moved Cutler to speak at this time. "Knowing Willard as well as I do, I can speak freely of him," the big wrestler-fighter told me the other day. "There is one weakness that he will have to overcome. That is his extreme nervousness the day before a battle and on the day of the event. I wouldn't call it fear exactly, because I have seen some of the gamest men in the world quake as if they had the ague just before stripping to go into the ring. It is merely a high-strung condition, and unless he gets over it his chances of becoming a real star will go glimmering.

* * *

"IT is my honest opinion that Willard is as game, if not gamer, than any of them among the big fellows right now. At heart he knows he can defeat all the Gunboat Smiths they can lead to him, but the fact remains that Willard is a terrible fretter. He gets morbid and morose as the fight draws near, and this is followed by a state of acute nervousness that is apt to completely unfit him for a hard battle. Once he is in the ring and the real work begins, Willard is all right.

* * *

"UNLESS Smith gets him quick and gets him in the right spot, I believe Willard will whip him nicely. Further, it is my opinion that if he does this, he is apt to enter the ring with Luther McCarty at a later date and be made an equal favorite with the big man from Nebraska. I wouldn't venture an opinion on that fight right now, preferring to see how Willard comes out with Smith. If he can whip the Gunboat he will have a lot of confidence, and then he will be a mighty hard man to beat."

CRACKERS CAN HOLD MEMPHIS EVEN—J. AGLER

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 13.—"King" Brady will be the selection to twirl the second game for the Crackers, with Graham receiving. Bernhard will probably use Kissinger and Seabaugh.

The Crackers lost the opener here. The Turtles come from rear and overcame five runs obtained by us.

Chappelle made his debut in a Cracker uniform and was knocked off of the rubber. Furchner, who succeeded him, was treated very roughly by the Turtles.

The Crackers hit the ball hard, but it seems lately that the luck breaks with the other team. The Crackers scored all the runs in one inning and was not able to score again. The necessary wallop could not be produced.

Chappelle had everything at first, but weakened, and the Turtles romped on him, which will win many ball games for them.

"King" Brady should win his game to-day with his steadiness and control. He is the kind of a pitcher that will win from this club.

The Turtles are drawing well. They have big crowds and are supporting a good team. We should at least break even here, and that would give us an even chance to keep above the .500 mark on this road trip.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HUSBAND, sed ma, did you reed that peece in the paiper the other day wich sed that a prominent sientist sed that baseball was the curse of the United States?

No, I dident see that artikel, sed Pa, but the way it sounds I bet it was in a Sunday paiper. How offen have I toald you, sed Pa, that you mussent beleeve everything you see in the Sunday paipers? I guess I will have to stop bringing the Sunday paipers hoam, sed Pa. All you read in them is freek stories like the one you was jest telling about or else the ads. After you reed the freek stories you talk about them & think about them all the week, & after you reed the ads you cry all the afternoon & say you cud be perfeckly happy if you jest had a few thousand dollars to go shopping with.

That isent so, sed Ma. You know it isent so. All I sed I wanted to go shopping with was a few hundred not a few thousand. & beesides, this artikel about baseball was the truth, beekaus I happen to know the great sientist wich gaiv the interview to the paiper. He & his wife is cumming up to the house to dinner tonite. You will have a chanst to meet him. He is a reely grate man, Ma sed, beekaus eeven his wife thinks so.

Another Scientist.

Oh deer, sed Pa, & so we have got to feed another sientist. I havent forgot yet, sed Pa, the sientist wich caim to see us last fall, the one wich was trying to prove that fishes breethed thru thare scales & not thru thare gills. He didn't talk anything else except fish, & we had fish for dinner that day, too. I saw fish in my sleep that nite, sed Pa.

Oh, this sientist is different, sed Ma. He is interested in man, not fish. He beleeves that every man shud have the fizeek of a old Roman gladitor & wud have it if he observed the proper rules of hy-geen. That is why he thinks that baseball is the curse of the United States. He will explain it all to you wen he cums tonite.

Well, that nite the sientist & his wife caim to dinner. He was a littel bit of a man & his wife was a fine big woman. She looked as if she cud have been a White Hope if she didn't happen to be a woman insted of a man. Her husband squeeked like a mouse wen he talked, & his hands was thin like birds feet. If I was a man I wud like to marry his wife, but if I was a lady I wuddent like to marry the sientist.

The sientist dident talk about sience during the dinner. I thought from what Ma sed about hy-geen that he wud be vary careful about what he ate, but he wasent. I nevver seen a man eet so much. I guess the way his wife looked at him he had forgot what she toald him about over-eeting beefoar thay left hoam to cum to our house. But after dinner Pa started rite in on him.

I was to the ball gaim to-day, sed Pa. I was sorry old Matty had to lose that gaim. He pitched one of the grandest gaims of his career.

He Detested It.

I detest baseball, sed the sientist. It is the curse of the country. Jest think of it, sum days thare are maybe twenty thousand men watching a gaim of ball wen thay ought to be exercising themselfs insted of watching 18 men that are doing the exercising. If they were all out exercising themselfs, thay mite be trained athleets too.

Do you exercise? ser Pa.

Indeed I do, sed the sientist, three hours a day.

What kind of a trained athleet are you? sed Pa.

That is neether here nor thare, sed the sientist. He saw his wife laffing & he was gitting mad.

I nevver exercise much, sed Pa, & I nevver mis a ball gaim wen my bizness will let me git away, but I feel as fine as silk & I guess I cud give Sam Langford quite a fite as long as my wind lasted. Baseball is not the curse of the United States, sed Pa, with all due deference to yure opinyun. Baseball is the grandest gaim that was evver invented. It is loved by oaver a milyun men & boys & is getting grater evvery year. Ladies can go to ball gaims & fergit thare shopping, Pa said, & men can go & fergit thare creditors. Long live baseball, sed Pa, & three cheers for McGraw.

I think Pa is rite, but he is a raw person sumtimes.

How to Tell the Bite of a Venomous Snake

IF you should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so-called harmless variety, look at the injury.

If there are four punctures, or even three, the chances are that it was not a venomous snake; but if there are only two punctures it is probable that you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake.

While this does not always hold good, as a non-poisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake's deadly fangs are but two—generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should, whenever possible, be kept for identification.

If, as generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more bands—above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next, wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available, suck the wound, then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now, wash the wound well, and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution; or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely, not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whisky, if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whisky than by snake bite.

When positively certain that the poison has been removed from the wound, loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them, so they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical care, and the wound should be kept open by packing with wet antiseptic gauze, as sepsis and local gangrene often follow a snake bite.

THE PROBLEM OF THE RED MAN

An Interesting Discussion of a Vigorous Article on the American Indian in Hearst's Magazine for May

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

WE do not see ourselves as others see us, and that is as true of nations as of individuals.

To our eyes the red man has practically sunk out of sight. To European eyes he is still the most picturesque figure in the Western world. If you doubt that statement, then, the next time you are in Europe fall into conversation with any intelligent Frenchman, German or other native of the Old World, about life in America, and you will be likely to discover that he is much more deeply interested in Indians than in fifty-story buildings. Even the wonders of the Panama Canal appeal to him with far less force than do the history and the fate of those unique tribes which owned this continent in fee simple for centuries before our ancestors landed upon its shores.

If you have imbued yourself with the notion that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian," you may be a little vexed to find that our contemporaries abroad, with their bird's-eye view of things on this side of the water, presist in regarding the American red man as a personage quite as interesting to the philosophical observer as the American white man, and infinitely more romantic.

In Hearst's Magazine.

Then you might with advantage turn to an article in this month's number of Hearst's Magazine, where Mr. Francis E. Leupp, recently Indian Commissioner, explains his ideas about the way we have heretofore treated the red men and the way we ought to treat him.

A great-brained European once said to me: "I am a friend of your country and an enthusiastic admirer of its ideals, but I most respectfully protest against the manner in which you have dealt with one of the most interesting races that ever existed on this earth. Pardon me for saying that I think you have done very wrong. You might have kept him and made a good citizen of him, instead of driving him into extinction, or, what is even worse, into racial abasement."

A Similar View.

Mr. Leupp appears to take a similar view. He has ideas about the capacity of the Indian for civilization, and about the best way to develop that capacity, which ought to command the attention of a liberty-loving and fair-dealing people.

The sole idea of our Government seems to have been to make a farmer of every Indian. "Give him a farm and make him work it," has been the slogan. And when the poor Indian, ignorant of the white man's science and the white man's methods, fails to become a successful farmer in a single generation or less he is condemned as good for nothing and treated with contempt and with renewed injustice.

Disregarding the fact that he has neither the capital to develop his farm nor the experience to enable him to compete in agriculture with men of European origin, whose ancestors were trained in that kind of industry long before America was discovered, the red man is required to devote himself exclusively to work for which, in many cases, he is racially and constitutionally unfitted, or else to become a drunkard and a pauper.

Some Indians make good farmers. Some of them have the gift and the ancestral tendency. Every reader of our history knows what the Iroquois Indians did in the fertile valleys of Central and Western New York. When General Sullivan mercilessly raided the lake region of New York he destroyed farms and stores of grain, of which any industrious European agricultural community might have been proud. That was a war measure and, as such, perhaps, excusable at the time. But suppose that an enlightened government had taken pains to develop the skill of the Indians in cultivation after peace had been established.

It may be replied that the Indians ran away and refused to be civilized. True, in part; but at last they could no longer run beyond the white man's reach. As Red Jacket once eloquently expressed it, "We are become a small island in the bosom of the great waters. We are encircled; we are encompassed. The waters rise; they press upon us; and the waves once settled over us, we disappear forever!"

Made Him a Brute.

Taking advantage of the terrible effect that "fire-water"—whisky!—had upon the unimmunized red man, his white enemies pressed it upon him, as they press it upon him still, until he became a brute in spite of himself.

The Indian has many useful capacities which he would develop if he had a proper opportunity, but the opportunity is refused to him. Read what Mr. Leupp has to say about the multitude of red men who take naturally to mechanic arts and to various trades, and the hopelessness of their struggle against the immense agricultural units that his white competitors, with comparatively unlimited capital, are developing around him, and you may be led to exert your influence to have the doors of opportunity opened wider to this long-cheated race.

We may consistently keep out Japanese, but the Indian was here before we were, and the principles of eternal justice demand that he shall not have the door shut in his face.

The Poet's Plea

IT was all over. They were in the the carriage at last, man and wife, driving back to the wedding breakfast. But suddenly, without warning, the youthful bride burst into heartrending sobs.

"Oh-o!" she cried. "Oh-o! Oh-o!"

"My dearest dear!" breathed the new-made hubby. Why does my pet weep so on her wedding day? Tell her hubsie-wubsie all about it, then!"

"Marmaduke, I've hidden something from you. I've not told you all. Alas! What shall I do?"

Marmaduke's heart stood still for what seemed to him a century, but was, in reality, a second; then:

"Tell me"—and his voice was hoarse—"tell me what you mean at once! I can not bear this suspense!"

"I c-can not c-ook!" sobbed the little wife.

"Oh, lovey, is that all?" the young man cried, as his heart beats slowed to normal time. "You frightened me! But worry not. I am a poet, and there will be precious little to cook!"

Are Children a Duty?

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

I.

BEFORE beginning these three short plain talks it may be well to warn the idealist who allows sentimental tradition to preclude honest and independent thought to read no further lest he or she be shocked—possibly scandalized. Yet one should bear in mind also the fact that there is a sentimentality sometimes degenerating into a selfishness that amounts almost to cruelty. Such cruelty unpremeditated and unrecognized.

Bearing this truth in mind one may almost dare to reply in the negative to the question asked above.

For that question is not, Are children a joy, a comfort, a privilege? but, Are they a duty?

Race Would Die Out.

Doubt comes often to one's mind in reading the opinions of certain writers who discourse on the sin of childlessness, the evils of race suicide, the selfishness of unfruitful marriages. Right here one may pause to acknowledge that the arguments in favor of child-bearing to perpetuate the race are irrefutable. One cannot erect a building without material, and the race would die out were there no children born. So, for the purpose of continuing the species, children are certainly essential.

But of those who inveigh against the iniquity of childlessness only a few look at the matter from the standpoint of the good of their kind. I think I am safe in asserting that not one parent in one thousand has sons or daughters for the express purpose of perpetuating the race. So we will leave that aspect of the question out of consideration.

Some expressions become so common that we take them at their face value without analyzing them. Some opinions have been voiced for so long that their very age confers upon them a seeming stability which we seldom thing of disputing.

"I am glad to see that you are one of the women who fulfills her mission in life," was said to a mother of eight children. "You have been conscientiously doing your duty in having a goodly number of sons and daughters."

"Yes," assented the pale-faced mother, "through all privations and self-denials I have had the comforting assurance that I was doing my duty."

Surely Not Herself.

To whom? Surely not to herself, for she is a semi-invalid whose frequent attacks of illness are a menace to her life and to the happiness of husband and children; certainly not to the husband who works in a poorly-lighted, ill-ventilated office all day and burns the midnight oil in the effort to make both ends meet, and is always conscious that they never do; assuredly not to the children, the oldest of wrom—a bright lad of sixteen—has had to surrender all hopes of a college education, as his earnings in a shop are required to help support the little brothers and sisters, and to pay the bills of the doctor needed with appalling frequency by the delicate mother. To whom then was the duty performed?

Recently I heard a heated altercation between a mother and her modern and irreverent daughter. At last the mother, losing all patience, burst forth with:

"You girls of the present day do not appreciate all that your mothers did for you! You seem to forget that you owe a debt of gratitude to me, the woman who braved death itself to bring you into the world!"

"I consider it no debt," she declared. "I did not ask to come. Then why should I thank you for bearing me?"

A coarse and vulgar way of stating a truth. Mothers seldom consider whether their children will find the gift of life itself a positive blessing. And after we have brought our children here the least we can do for them is to give them as good an education and as cultivated an environment as possible so that they may start even with their associates. This is one of the few ways in which we can "make up" to them for their having been born.

Some of Us Are Happy.

Does this sound like pessimism? It is not that. Some of us who are glad that we are alive and to whom life has meant much that is joyful and good would not care to live it over again if we had to learn the same lessons, make the same mistakes, suffer the same penalties that we have already known. Now that we are here we love life and want to say as long as we can. Some of us are very happy, others very necessary, others have a natural curiosity to see how it is all going to turn out. But as one cannot miss that which one has never had, we would have missed none of these things had we never been born.

Put the question to any one as to whether he would care to go back and begin life once more as a tiny child, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the reply will be: "Perhaps I would," or "Yes," always coupled with the proviso—"If I could remember the mistakes I have made and profit by them."

But, unfortunately for our children, they will not or cannot profit by the mistakes of their parents. Each one must fight the battle for himself, and win out or fail for himself.

A Cow's Rights

"IT is about time," said the farmer to the hostler, as the two stood passing the time of day, "for these sportsmen to act more sportsmanlike. They ought to quit shooting cattle.

"Nearly all the farms are posted in our part of the county, and we are going to forbid shooting along roads and waterways also.

"I tell you, there is entirely too much cattle shooting.

"A fellow starts out for a week-end hunt. He takes along about forty rounds of ammunition, which gets heavier and heavier during the day. Seeing nothing else to shoot, he shoots a cow, simply to get rid of a shell that costs five cents and weighs a pound.

"I suppose, too, he wants to see the cow jump and run. That is fun for the hunter, but not for the cow nor for the farmers, either. We hate to have a cow come lumbering into the house and crawl under the bed when we are discussing the crop reports.

"Nor is it any fun to get up out of a warm bed and take the broom and jab under a bed or a sofa to chase out a cow that has been shot at and scared. It isn't a bit of fun.

"When it comes to milking that cow it is no easy job. She thinks that every one who comes along has a shooting iron and that she is going to get stung again. Poor, patient animal. She never did any harm except for an occasional thinness in her product.

"Cows, I admit, do not look as graceful and dainty as minuet dancers when they exhibit speed mania characteristics, but there are so many other funny things nowadays that it is unsportsmanlike to shoot cows in order to get this kind of entertainment.

"The cow has a perfect right to graze in her owner's pasture unmolested except at milking time, which comes often enough. Besides the responsibilities of the dirty she has flies and lots of other things to worry her.

"A man who would shoot a cow or even shoot at her would welcome campaign contributions from any source and root for the opposing team in a world's series."

The "Breach of Promise" Suit, Its Use and Abuse

By DOROTHY DIX

IN a recent article in this column I expressed the opinion that a man is just as much entitled to a change of mind and a change of heart in matters of the affections as a woman is, and that if a man found out before marriage that he was tired of the woman to whom he was engaged, and no longer wanted her for a wife, he had a perfect right to break the engagement and withdraw from a bargain that would bankrupt his life.

These sentiments have brought a howl of protest from a large number of my feminine readers, who accuse me of being a traitor to my sex, and berate me for encouraging perfidious man to trifle with the tender affections of trusting maidens.

I confess that I don't quite catch the point of view of my correspondents, nor do I grasp their ideal of matrimony. If their theory of marriage is the sordid one of marrying for a home and a meal ticket, and that it is easier for a woman to work a husband than it is to work a typewriter or a sewing machine, or stand behind a counter, then I can see why they think that a man should be compelled to carry out a matrimonial engagement, no matter how loathsome it had become to him, nor how he dreaded the prospect of having to spend the balance of his life with a woman who had lost her every vestige of charm for him.

This argument would have been a good one in the old days, when no gainful occupations were open to women, and the only way a lady had of getting a home was to marry it, but we have changed all of that. Any able-bodied and intelligent girl can support herself quite as well as a husband is likely to do it, and in consequence marriage has become a sentimental luxury and not a bread-and-butter necessity, as it used to be.

If you should suggest to the average high-spirited and independent girl of to-day that she should coerce an unwilling and protesting man into marching to the altar with her she would overwhelm you with her scorn. She would say that in her opinion the woman who married for a living earned it in the hardest way on earth, and that she thanked God she didn't have to make hers that way.

She would also remark that she was not a confidence woman who ran a skin game on any sentimental Tommy, nor was she a Lady Shylock who would exact the last drop of blood in a man's heart in payment of a little indiscreet love-making. Further, she would add, as did one girl that I knew, that if any man could get tired of a love affair sooner than she did and change his mind quicker he would certainly be a marvel of rapid action.

Admitting that few young women in this day are willing to marry a man just solely for the sake of the loaves and fishes that he can provide, on what ground can my correspondents advocate the holding of an unwilling man to a matrimonial engagement he has made?

Certainly no one who knows anything of life can hope that such a marriage will bring any happiness to the woman, or result in anything but misery for both parties. Malignity itself could devise no more cruel fate than the long-drawn-out years of torture that are the portion of an unloved and undesired wife. She drinks the very dregs of the cup of humiliation.

Even in the ordinary marriage, where the swain is romantically and passionately in love, and when he counts impatiently the hours to the wedding day, the ardor of the man cools off soon enough. It is not long before he ceases to take any interest in holding his wife's hand, and when he goes to sleep of an evening when she tries to talk to him, and begins to have business that keeps him downtown of evenings. You could count on the fingers of one hand every husband you know who is still a lover after five years of married life.

What prospects of domestic felicity has a woman, then, if she forces a man to marry her who does not want to, who is not in love with her, and who is already tired of her before the long matrimonial journey begins? To say that he will fall in love with her after marriage, and that she will win his heart by her devotion and her goodness, is to talk idiotic nonsense. The whole tendency of matrimony is to disillusion. It thrusts people together in a relationship where their personalities clash, and where they strike fire out of each other's temper and temperament.

Brings Out Faults.

Matrimony brings out every fault in a woman as exaggerated as if it were under a magnifying glass, and the woman who could not win a man, nor hold him, when she had all the allure of distance, of always being primped up, and on her best behavior, can never do it in close quarters of domesticity, where her husband sees her in her everyday clothes and surrounded with an aura of bills and boiled dinners.

Canaries have been bred in cages so many generations that they are perfectly satisfied to live in cages. Women have been bred for so many centuries to put up with whatever domestic lot they draw in life that they endure an unhappy marriage with stoic fortitude, and many of them put up a pretty good bluff at loving a husband they actually hate.

But men have no such finesse, no such patience, no such amiable hypocrisy. When a man is married to a woman of whom he has grown tired, and who bores him, he frankly neglects her. If he is forced to marry a woman after he has ceased to care for her he makes her pay for it by his brutalities to her, so it is incomprehensible why any one should think it better for a woman to compel a man to marry her when he doesn't want to than to be jilted.

In reality such a marriage is the substitution of a gnawing agony that never ends for a scratch that hurts for a moment and then heals. A woman may not even collect a debt of honor from the man who has compromised her without being far worse off than if she had wiped the slate clean and blotted out his score against her.

The Return of Grandmother's Hat

Described by Olivette, The Georgian's Fashion Expert

THE hat of grandmother's day is with us again, with all the charm of modern improvements.

If you have an old leghorn, cut it down and bind the edge of the brim with wide shadow or burgundy lace.

Tilt the hat to the proper angle with one of the "halos" we have so long discarded and bank the flat crown with forget-me-nots or any daintly little flower.

Here and there a wee bunch of roses in contrasting color add an effective touch, and the soft taffeta streamers pendant from beneath the brim sound the final not of becomingness and follow the latest Parisian fancy.

A Fetching Model.

The top picture shows a fetching model developed in black satin, with a tiny cord of pale gray satin at the edge of the slightly rolled brim.

At the left of the back are two graceful, long-fronted plumes of uncurled ostrich.

Black satin ribbon tied in a loose knot holds the brim in front, encircles the sloping crown and falls in two "follow-me-lads" streamers from the even loops of a large bow directly at the base of the plumes in the center of the back.

In these days of bright coloring the home milliner may copy this becoming hat at small expense if she owns two feathers long useless because of the popularity of black and white.

UNCLE JOHN'S PROPHECY

To-day's Short Story

"UNCLE JOHN always did have luck with him," said the man with the big black cigar. "Don't tell me that a man can prophesy disaster and always get away with it unless there is some supernatural agency of evil helping him!

"I've always been fond of Uncle John and his aversion to automobiles has pained me deeply, since I own three, and with the purchase of each one his bewildered wrath at me has increased. Each time a machine was added to my garage the mails have sizzled with the letters from Uncle John remonstrating with me. His idea of an automobile is that it is a diabolical contrivance straight from the regions below, and that those who risk their lives in one should be restrained in an asylum for the feeble minded.

Nearly Wept.

"The last time I went East on business I hired a touring car and a driver in order that I might cover ground quickly, and as Uncle John lived in the city I was visiting, I naturally went up to see him. The first time I called he nearly wept over me because he had witnessed my arrival in the big red car. He had visiting him his brother from Maine, whose ideas of automobiles were even more primitive than Uncle John's—but Uncle Henry had some excuse, for he lives in a region where there aren't any automobiles.

"Each of them called upon the other to witness that I was a reckless young thing and probably would meet my doom before I left the city.

"I resolved to put an end forever to such foolishness and to show Uncle John that automobiles were harmless things that would eat out of one's hand if properly approached. So the next day I came again in my big red car and with an expression of firmness and resolve.

"'Uncle John,' I said, without any preliminaries, 'I have come to take you and Uncle Henry out for a ride in my machine! Get on your things!'

"After they had fainted and been revived we thrashed the matter out. They had been strong men in their youth, but they were no match for me now, so I won out. I really felt sorry for Uncle Henry as he went trembling out to the machine.

"'Remember, George,' he said, 'that my will and other valuable papers are down in the trust valuts. I have the feeling that something dreadful is going to come of this, but it is all due to your persistence. I am going because I can't help myself. I never expect to return to my comfortable fireside, but I suppose I have lived the allotted span, and perhaps the good Lord chooses to have me go this way. It seems hard, though.'

"Of course, I laughed at him. I told him airily that positively nothing could happen and that I expected that he and Uncle Henry would be buying a car themselves by another week.

"Well, I started out with those two timorous old men, honestly resolved to give them the time of their lives and banish their absurd fears. I know all about cars, and my driver was an extra good one, so I guess what happened was my fault.

"I told him to turn a corner an instant later than I should have told him. The steering gear locked, I think, or else it was just that little imp of bad luck. My lovely red car choked, gurgled and then shot straight at the curb, which it skimmed over as lightly as a bird. Then it absent-mindedly hit the coping between the sidewalk and the lawn, and as it was only an imitation stone coping, it merely brushed it aside without breaking it.

Snapped the Tree.

"Continuing our program, we gouged across a fine lawn and aimed at a choice tree that apparently had been recently set out, because its throat was still tied up in burlap. We snapped that tree in two as though it were a straw, and with the top part dangling coquettishly above Uncle John and Uncle Henry and the radiator of the machine perched rakishly on the mangled stump we came to a pause.

"About a million people surrounded us at once. I didn't even look at Uncle John and Uncle Henry. I just faded out of that car. They were on the street car traveling back home before the driver and I got the car off the tree stump. I had to hunt them up, though, to see how their nerves stood the shock.

"'Did you do anything in reparation for the frightful damage you created?' Uncle Henry asked me in awful tones.

"'Yes, uncle,' said I, 'I pushed the coping back into place and stuck it down with a postage stamp, and as the people who lived in the house were not at home to receive my apologies I went to the corner florist and got a bunch of flowers, which I tied to the mangled tree stump!'

"But wasn't it just Uncle John's luck to have his prophecies come true? He ought to get a job as a weather man!"

BEAUTIFUL HAIR DO YOU WANT IT?

You Can Surely Have It By Using Parisian Sage.

Who does not love a beautiful head of hair? You may think it a gift, that some women are born that way. The fact is, beautiful hair is largely a matter of cultivation, just as you would water the plants in your garden and fertilize the soil.

Parisian Sage is a scientific preparation which the hair and scalp readily absorb. It removes dandruff at once. It puts a stop to itching scalp and makes your whole head feel better—as if your hair had had a square meal.

One application will astonish you—it will double the beauty of the hair. If used daily for a week, you will be simply delighted with the result—you will want to tell all your friends that you have discovered Parisian Sage. You should see the number of enthusiastic letters we receive from delighted users.

All doubts settled at one stroke—your money back if you want it.

Parisian Sage is a tea-colored liquid—not sticky or greasy—delicately perfumed, that comes in a fifty-cent bottle. The "Girl with the Auburn Hair" on the package. Get a bottle to-day—always keep it where you can use it daily.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town. unless they get out of town. Irwin, the lawyer of General Hastings, whom Aggie Lynch is suing for breach of promise, calls on Mary. He attempts to corner Mary and Aggie, but the girls are too wise for him.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically, but with returning cheerfulness, since he saw the end of his quest in visible form before him. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary who, with a swift movement, caught and held it.

"Not quite yet, Mr. Irwin, I'm afraid," she said, calmly.

The lawyer barely suppressed a violent ejaculation of annoyance.

But there's the money waiting for you," he protested, indignantly.

The rejoinder from Mary was spoken with great deliberation, yet with a note of determination that caused a quick and acute anxiety to the General's representative.

"I think," May explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, there's no need for all that formality," Irwin urged, with a great appearance of bland friendliness.

"I Thought You Would."

"Just the same," Mary persisted, unimpressed, "I'm quite sure you would better see Mr. Harris first." There was a cadence of insistence in her voice that assured the lawyer as to the futility of further pretense on his part.

"Oh, I see, he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned, and now she smiled in a kindly manner, which, nevertheless, gave no pleasure to the chagrined man before her. As he rose she went on crisply: "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris, Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letter. * * * Good-afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow, which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door. But he was arrested before he reached it by the voice of Mary, speaking again, still in that imperturbable evenness which so rasped his nerves, for all its mellow resonance. But this time there was a sting, of the sharpest, in the words themselves.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled, and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word, after a long moment in which he perceived intently the delicate, yet subtly energetic, loveliness of this slender woman, he walked back to the desk, picked up the money, and restored it to the billcase. This done, at last he spoke, with a new respect in his voice, a quizzical smile on his rather thin lips.

Aggie Ends the Silence.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And with that laudatory confession of her skill, he finally took his departure, while Mary smiled in a triumph she was at no pains to conceal, and Aggie sat gaping astonishment over the surprising turn of events.

It was the latter volatile person who ended the silence that followed on the lawyer's going.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently, "letting all that money go out of the house. * * * Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied, blandly; "but it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it? Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters, and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

Aggie's innocent eyes rounded in an amazed consternation, which was not at all assumed.

"Gee!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned, apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There, he will pay over that same marked money. Then, he will get the letters he wants so much. And, just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics——"

"What's legal ethics?" Aggie demanded, impetuously. "They sound some tasty!" With the comment, she dropped weakly into a chair.

Mary laughed in carefree enjoyment, as well she might after winning the victory in such a battle of wits.

"Oh," she said, happily, "you just get it legally, and you get twice as much!"

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused. She was doing her best to get a clear understanding of the matter, though to her it was all a mystery most esoteric.

Mary reviewed the case succinctly for the other's enlightenment.

"Yes, it's the same game precisely," she affirmed. "A shameless old roue makes love to you, and he writes you a stack of silly letters."

The pouting lips of the listener took on a pathetic droop, and her voice quivered as she spoke with an effective semblance of virginal terror.

"He might have ruined my life!"

Mary continued without giving much attention to these histrionics.

"If you had asked him for all this money for the return of his letters, it would have been blackmail, and we'd have gone to jail in all human probability. But we did no such thing—no, indeed! What we did wasn't anything like that in the eyes of the law. What we did was merely to have your lawyer take steps toward a suit for damages for breach of promise of marriage for the sum of ten thousand dollars. Then his lawyer appears in behalf of General Hastings, and there follow a number of conferences between the legal representatives of the opposing parties. By means of these conferences, the two legal gentlemen run up very respectable bills of expenses. In the end, we get our ten thousand dollars, and the flighty old General gets back his letters. * * * My dear," Mary concluded vainglioriously, "we're inside the law, and so we're perfectly safe. And there you are!"

MOTHER

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are only a few certainties in life. One is Mother. You can always depend on her.

Make Mother a present and it pleases her most when it is something that will divide equally among the children.

It frequently happens that Mother has better health than father and the children because she doesn't have time for sickness or any other recreation.

When a child excels its father, he is teased about it, but when it excels its Mother it pleases her almost to death.

Photographs of Mother never look like her, for the reason that she seems to have been idle when they were taken.

The children are sick, Mother is up with them all night; father is sick, and Mother is up with him; but when Mother is sick does anybody know of it but the Lord?

A hen never tries to spread her wings over a rooster-sized son to protect him, but Mothers do it.

When a child has a pain, father's sympathy is dependent on his memory of a similar pain, but Mother's sympathy is independent of all experience.

When Mother prays it is for something she wants for her children, and when father prays it is for something he wants for himself.

A really fine Mother never lets her children see her cry or show cowardice. There are certain qualities that are splendid to remember in connection with Mother, and courage is one of them.

From the time Mother gets up in the morning till she goes to bed at night every one in the household, from her husband to the children and the laundress, takes complaints to her and lays them on her shoulders. It is a task too great for any statistician to enumerate how many complaints a woman hears from the day she enters her home, showered with rice, till the day she leaves it in a box covered with flowers.

There are some bright spots in Mother's life. A great and shining one is when she picks up the stocking bag and finds a stocking that doesn't need darning.

The only human being in the world whose duties and obligations are not bound by the clock is Mother.

And the great sorrow that confronts us, her children, and that will make heaven an unhappy place for her, is that when St. Peter lines us all up and passes out the crowns he will not take our Mother's word for it.

Slave to Fashion.

A butcher in a certain town recently received from a friend abroad a number of small alligators which he proudly displayed in an aquarium in his shop.

A customer came into the shop one afternoon and stood for some time gazing at the reptiles.

Having turned the matter over in his mind, the customer approached the butcher and exclaimed:

"I suppose a body might as well be dead as out of style. Gimme a couple of pounds of alligator!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"But, no—mothers always ask so many questions."

CHAPTER III.

WHEN Jennie got in the house that night and found her motherly boarding house keeper waiting up for her hot tea, she evaded her old friend's look and questions, saying she was tired and had a headache—hurried up stairs to her room, where she could be alone and THINK.

Why had she so long put up with this sordid way of living—no good times, dresses or theaters, such as other girls have. All she ever did was to hurry down to work every morning, a hurried little lunch with the other girls at noon and then back to work till evening, when she would hurry home to supper and then maybe to see some of her girl acquaintances or to the "movies" with girl and boy friends.

How shallow and sordid and monotonous it seemed to Jennie, who had just had dinner in one of the best cafes in town and came home in a taxi-cab for the first time.

What if she hadn't been introduced to the man and what difference did it make if her mother or father didn't know him or approve of him?

Hadn't he been just as nice and polite—a lot more so than some of the boy friends she knew—and hadn't he asked her to "call him up" the next day? But shouldn't she tell her old friend all about the nice time she had that evening?—but no—old woman always asked so many questions—what if THE MAN was a great deal older than she—hadn't he told her that he had a little daughter just her age, but his family was away on a trip to Europe, and he was so lonesome since they were gone, and wouldn't she be his little pal and meet his wife and daughter when they arrived home—and she must bring her mother, too, when his family got back—no, it wouldn't do to tell her mother till then, for she might not understand it like she and Jennie did, didn't she like him just a little bit?

But Jennie went to sleep that night, thinking of a great big, bright restaurant, with its beautifully gowned women, heavenly music, thick carpet, a fountain playing in the center and the "taxi" ride home that was so different from the pokey old street cars she was used to riding in.

She was sound asleep and didn't hear her old friend noiselessly open the door and come into see if there was anything she could do before she went to bed—or hear the murmur "poor little girl—if she just didn't HAVE to work so hard," as she went out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T GIVE HER UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a girl 20 years of age, and she loves me, but there is one thing out of the way with me; I have six fingers on my right hand. So her parents say that it is unlucky to get married. What shall I do with a case like this, as I am worried that I will have to give this girl up. LOVESICK.

Her parents are unfair. If your habits are good, one finger more or less is immaterial, and I regret they haven't the good sense to know it.

You love each other; that is "good luck" enough to banish all the bad.

GIVE HIM UP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am just 18 years old and love a man of 25. I have been keeping steady company with him for the past two months, before which time I had heard many wrong things about him, and find that he has an awful reputation among people that know him. He has been a perfect gentleman toward me, and I have learned to love him very dearly, but the way my friends talk bothers me.

N. B. D.

I am sure they would not accuse him without reason, and that it will be for your greater happiness to heed them and give him up.

His First Mistake

ONE of the first tasks they set the curate, who was handicapped by youth and inexperience, was to investigate the bona fides of a "widow woman" who had applied to the church for help. He departed nervously on his errand and knocked, as ill-luck would have it, at the wrong door.

"How long has your poor husband been dead, my good woman? What number of children have you? Are any of them working? If so, what amount of money are they earning, altogether?" were the questions he fired, like shots from a revolver, at the slatternly woman who answered his summons. "I presume I am addressing Mrs. Harriet Smith?" he added, noticing, with alarm, that she looked angry.

"No you ain't," answered the woman snappishly. "My name is Seline Jackson, my bairns go to school, and my 'usband's doin' what is necessary to a plateful of steak and onions at this very moment. Would you like to know anything else? Where I was born? When I was christened? At what age I started courtin'? Perhaps," she concluded, sarcastically, rolling her tattered sleeve up above the elbow, 'you'd like to see my vaccination mark before you go?"

But the bashful curate, redder in the face than a poppy, was already in full flight.

Fry Fish in Cottolene

You can fry fish in Cottolene, and use the remaining fat for frying potatoes or other food. The odor of the fish will not be imparted to the other fried food.

Cottolene is not alone economical for the reason that it can be used over and over, but also because it is richer than butter or lard, and one-third less is required. It is twice as economical as butter; much more economical than lard.

Cottolene makes rich, digestible, tasty, healthful food. Does not make food greasy, and is free from indigestion.

Cottolene is never sold in bulk—always in air-tight tin pails, which protect it from dirt, dust and odors. It is always uniform and dependable.

IMPORTS SHATTER ALL FISCAL MARKS

Manufacturers' Materials Brought in at an Unprecedented Rate, Hides and Wool Excepted.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A statement given out by Secretary of Commerce Redfield indicates the quantities of manufacturers' materials imported into the United States during the present fiscal year will greatly exceed the imports of last year and the mark of any previous year if the figures for the nine months ended March, 1913, be any criterion.

Of the ten important articles forming the bulk of the imports of such materials, cotton, wool, fibres, silk, tin, copper, rubber, hides, lumber and tobacco—the imports will, with but two exceptions, exceed the former high record mark.

The quantity of raw cotton imported during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was over 100,000,000 pounds, as compared with 66,000,000 pounds the same months last year; 162,000,000 pounds of wool, as against 126,000,000 last year; 318,900 tons of fibers, against 231,000; 20,000,000 pounds of raw silk against 16,000,000; 91,000,000 pounds of pig tin against 82,000,000; 234,000,000 pounds of copper pigs, bars, etc., against 206,000,000; 87,000,000 pounds of crude India rubber against 81,000,000; 453,000,000 pounds of hides and skins against 374,000,000; 818,000,000 feet of boards, planks and deals against 645,000,000 feet and 48,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco against 37,000,000 pounds.

The only cases in which the imports for the corresponding period of any previous year exceeded the imports for nine months ended March this year were when the imports of hides and skins amounted to 48,000,000 pounds in 1910, as against 453,000,000 pounds for this year and when in 1896, 1897, 1905, 1909 and 1910 the imports of wool slightly exceeded the imports of the current year.

CHICAGO, May 13.—May wheat was firm at 89⅝@89⅞c, as the offerings were small at the opening, and there was some demand from shorts. The more deferred months were off ¼@⅜c and were under some pressure.

Liverpool reported the larger world's shipments and favorable European crop prospects as offset by smaller Manitoba offerings and the stronger feeling for Indian and Plate wheat. Northwestern receipts were considerably in excess of a year ago, also the receipts at Winnipeg. The European visible supply showed a small increase.

There was little change in corn and oats, but both of these markets were the smallest fraction lower. The markets of the Old World were quite dull for corn.

There was a stronger feeling for hogs at the yards, but the provision situation was dull and without any change early.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: The short interest has not decreased to any great extent and this should tend to sustain prices.

Miller & Co.: Unless conditions turn for the worse, we look for lower prices.

Logan & Bryan: General conditions are not of a nature to create enthusiasm on the long side of cotton.

Atwood, Violett & Co.: We would avoid the short side of July at present. Later months, however, we believe should be sold on any further rally.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Until good rains come in the Atlantics there will be nothing to induce short selling.

STOCKS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Central Railroad of New Jersey was again the weakest feature of the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, declining 1 point to 295 on continued reports of a threatened Government suit. This was a drop of 25 points since the close Saturday.

Most of the other stocks were up. Amalgamated Copper began ¼ higher, but soon lost the gain. Southern Pacific acted similarly, commencing with a gain of ⅜, but losing it and making a fractional decline within a half hour. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which has been under pressure for some time, lost ⅛. Union Pacific commenced at 148⅝, for a fractional gain, but soon declined, losing ¼.

Canadian Pacific lost 1⅝, although it was strong in London on earnings reports. New York, New Haven and Hartford and Northern Pacific gained fractionally. United States Steel common opened at 59¼, unchanged from Monday. Pennsylvania road shaded ⅛, Erie lost the same amount.

The curb market was steady.

Americans in London showed a cautious tendency on the part of traders.

MINING STOCKS.

BOSTON, May 13.—Opening: Alaska 11, Granby 63, Fruit 154½, Wolverine 51, North Lake 1.

BAR SILVER.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Commercial bar silver 61c. Mexican dollars 48c.

LONDON, May 13.—Bar silver steady at 28 5-16d. Up 3-16d.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Unsettled, showery weather will continue to-night over Western half of the country except from New York through the Carolinas, where there probably will be little or no rain. It will be somewhat cooler in the lower lake region and New England.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Showers to-night and Wednesday.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

J. P. Morgan has succeeded his father on two Vanderbilt roads. The financing of the Central system is a harder task to-day than it used to be. The New York Central no longer occupies a proud place at the pinnacle of American railroad properties. Its stock is below par. And its treasury is gapingly empty. It will require all the Morgan firm's ingenuity to devise ways and means of raising the scores of millions needed to put the road on its financial feet.

* * *

There is more money in being banker for an impecunious road than an opulent one. Any one could float Lackawanna securities, but a good banking name is needed to dispose of second rate stuff. The Morgan house made millions from reorganizations—Wall Street used to call him Doctor Morgan, so many operations did he perform on sick railroads. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., also did well in financing Mr. Harriman's restoration of Union Pacific and other roads.

COTTON

NEW YORK, May 13.—Firm cables, coupled with bullish weather reports, caused an upturn of from 3 to 4 points at the opening of the cotton market to-day. After the call, however, traders sold and in consequence of the orders, most of which came from profit-takings, the list dropped several points.

Sentiment was mixed.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: May, 11.52; July, 11.67; August, 11.43; October, 11.98; January, 11.07.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: May, 12.28; July, 12.07; August, 11.65; October, 11.21.

Estimated cotton receipts:

	Tuesday.	1912
New Orleans	3,800 to 4,500	316
Galveston	2,000 to 3,000	1,855

The early strength in the market was attributed to short covering by Wall Street operators. This buying was based upon the failure of the map to show rains. The official weather map showed a few rains in Georgia, the other Atlantics and Alabama and much lower temperatures in North Carolina. This caused rather free offerings from the ring and selling by recent buyers, which was said to be profit-taking. Prices dropped 3 to 5 points from the opening range, with the exception of May, which held steady at the opening quotation.

It is said those who covered short lines during the past few days will put out these short lines again if there are rains in the Eastern belt within the next twenty-four hours. The bears express the belief that the dry May makes it apparent that the crop will have a good start and they are not inclined to put much confidence in the talk of damage of the excessive dry weather.

The weekly weather report issued at noon was construed as bearish, with the exception of Georgia, which shows the lack of moisture. Texas shows the effect of cold nights, but not seriously.

During the afternoon session the market was under heavy selling pressure, based upon the weather report and May dropped 6 points, July 7, October 8, December 9 and January 7 points from the initial level. The buying was light and scattered.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—Europe apparently was treated to bad crop news which led to a strong Liverpool, with futures 3 to 4 points better than ours. Political news is worse, reporting that almost a state of war exists between Greece and Bulgaria, with actual fighting, the Bulgarians attacking Greek posts and wounded arriving at Saloniki. Correspondence from Liverpool shows bearish views as to the ultimate course of prices, but opinion is in favor of waiting around 6 pence for 8 while unmore is known about the crop development. The strength of July in New York is still pulling the New Orleans market up, but lack of confidence shown by restricted support. Current damage reports are regarded as accessory to professional attempts at the set interest and faith in the established record of the benefits of a dry May as predominates.

The greater part of Alabama has had enough rainfall to start the replant, and official records show that sufficient showers fell over a considerable territory of Georgia. The Savannah district shows seven stations with an average of half-inch over night.

The contract market is dull but steady around 11.18 for October.

COTTON GOSSIP

According to P. S. Sullivan, of Morris H. Rothschild & Co., the conditions in the eastern belt are exactly the reverse of those of last year. Mr. Sullivan has just returned from a six weeks' trip throughout the eastern belt.

"I arrived in the belt a year ago this time to the day and made my tour over the same ground, so I am in an exceptional position to compare conditions with those of last year. Last year the ground was hardly broken and farm work was so late that in Georgia farmers sowed their seed right after the plow without taking the time to break up the ground properly," he says. "That fact accounts for the poor crop. This year I found the ground thoroughly prepared wherever I went, and, as a rule, farmers were two weeks ahead of last year. With the exception of North Carolina, planting is well advanced and in the extreme South a good deal of cotton is up. Possibly excluding North Carolina, where farmers are not planting yet, the eastern States of the belt have increased their acreage. Everywhere I went farmers estimated that the acreage is 5 per cent larger than last year. I should say that Georgia has planted 3 to 5 per cent more land in cotton than the previous season."

* * *

Shorts are becoming more nervous owing to the cool weather and insufficient rains in the eastern belt and talk of delayed germination, which has become one of the leading factors in stimulating the market. Yesterday July sold up as high as 11.68. This was the highest that option has sold since the latter part of April, when it sold at 11.32.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Clear and cool. Oklahoma—Generally clear and pleasant."

* * *

Good rains were reported at Knoxville, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala.

* * *

Norden & Co. says: "Unless there is a change in the weather in the immediate future, we think a further sharp upturn is to be expected."

* * *

Washington announces that the cotton condition report will be issued June 2, at noon, Eastern time. It will give condition of the crop to May 25.

Auto Racer Loses Elopement Chase

RACINE, WIS., May 13.—Joe Jorgesberger, automobile racer, lost the most important road race of his career to-day. Jorgesberger, Dan Cupid and Miss Amanda Olles comprised one team. Angry father, the long-distance telephone and the police of Waukegan, Ill., were the other.

In front of the home of a wealthy foundryman, Jorgesberger stopped his racing car shortly before dawn. A girl, with a suitcase, ran to the racing car and jumped in. Jorgesberger and his 17-year-old heiress bride-to-be started for Waukegan.

A few minutes later a car puffed out of the Olles garage. Miss Olles' father was at the wheel. He overtook the elopers as they reached Waukegan and were halted by the police.

'Boy,' 72, on Visit to His 'Dad,' 103, Jailed

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., May 13.—James M. Goldsberry, 72 years old, arrived in Leavenworth to visit his father, Herman Goldsberry, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who is 103 years old. The son, however, began drinking and was arrested. When arraigned before Judge Stewart yesterday in police court he told his age and explained the reason for being here.

Goldsberry unhesitatingly admitted that his grandfather was dead, but that he lived to be 100 years old. Goldsberry was discharged.

Burns Assured of Dynamiting Reward

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—The $10,000 reward offered by the State two years ago for apprehension of the persons responsible for the dynamiting of The Times building in Los Angeles is about to be paid. A bill appropriating that amount to satisfy the claim of Detective William J. Burns passed the Assembly 42 to 14, and was sent to the Governor, having already passed the Senate.

San Francisco members all voted against the bill.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Practical Points in Care of Poultry

Successful Chicken Breeders Look Closely to the Little Things.

About two weeks before weaning time, put the old hen and her brood in a good roomy brood coop, large enough to accommodate the youngsters until cold weather without crowding. It is so easy to make the change while the hens are with their chicks and so difficult after they are weaned.

If you are trying to raise a lot of young chicks and your time is limited so that you are inclined to throw your youngsters a lot of feed at most any time, having no fixed time or regular amount of feed, better adopt the hopper plan. Keep the hopper full of good mixed grain and another with good beef scraps and a third with grit and oyster shell. A large self-feeding water fountain to be filled once a day. These conveniences, with a good clean roosting coop, and chicks will do better and grow faster than they will as cared for by many hurried people.

The poultry house, either for young chicks or grown fowls, should be so arranged as to allow thorough airing and sunshine. Nothing is so conducive to health as sunshine and fresh air, and nothing will cause more troublesome diseases than a dark and damp house with the air and sunshine kept out. Stick a pin here and prevent wholesale trouble.

It is a good plan to protect your young and growing broods from rats and vermin of all kinds by the dexterous use of a little one-inch mesh poultry wire. It is a much more economical way than to wait until you have one or two broods all broken up by these night raiders, and then go to work to prevent it. Better make the first move yourself than to wait for the rats.

Look out for lice and mites these warm days. Do not let them get the upper hand of you. Keep the house clean, especially the roost poles, and at the points at which they rest upon the support. These are the breeding places. A quart-sized oil can with a small spout, filled with kerosene, can be used to drown them out effectually, running it right along over the roost pole, so that it becomes thoroughly saturated. To rid the fowls of what they have upon their bodies, use a good ready-prepared lice powder of some reliable make and dust the feathers thoroughly of each specimen. Night is a good time to attend to this part of the business.

A good chick feed for small and

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

growing chicks may be made as follows, although it is usually cheaper to buy it ready-mixed: Fine cracked corn, 50 pounds; cracked wheat, 20 pounds; cut hulled oats, 20 pounds; cracked kaffir corn, 7 pounds; broken rice, 5 pounds; millet, 5 pounds; whole flax seed, 1-2 pound. Mix thoroughly and feed dry.

Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me where I can buy some Rose Comb Barred Plymouth Rocks? I have been raising them for a number of years, and now I want to get some new blood. I may buy either the eggs or some cockerels to mate with what I have on hand. I have never seen them advertised anywhere, but thought you would know all about them.

I will certainly appreciate some information about them.

Seneca, S. C. R. B. JACKSON.

Answer.—There is no such breed as the Rose Comb Barred Rock. You are either breeding the old American Dominique, which is colored almost the same as the Barred Rock, but has a rose comb, or you have Wyandotte blood mixed in with Plymouth Rock, and by selecting the Rock color with the rose comb you have what you thought was a Rose Comb Rock.

The American Dominique is a much older breed than the Plymouth Rock, but has never been very popular or extensively bred. It is a good one, nevertheless. It is, however, about two pounds lighter in weight than the Rock and for that reason has not taken the place as a general purpose fowl. If you are really anxious to have a rose comb barred fowl, we would advise you to get the pure Dominique and breed it in its purity, unless that is what you have already. We could not tell without seeing what you have.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Druid Hills Parcel Brings $100 a Foot

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun Buys and Will Build—Peachtree Road Residence—Other Notes.

Dr. F. Phinizy Calhoun purchased to-day from Druid Hills a large lot on Ponce DeLeon Avenue for $21,400, and will build a handsome home on it. Forrest Adair, Jr., of the Forrest & George Adair agency, handled the transaction. The front foot rate was over $100.

This property is east of S. H. Venable's palatial stone house at the northeast corner of Oaddale Road and Ponce DeLeon Avenue and is known as the old Arkwright place. Mr. Arkwright picked it some time ago to build, but went to another location and swapped his old lot to Druid Hills for the new one. The dimensions of Dr. Calhoun's lot are 214x650 feet. Dr. Calhoun now resides on the north side of West Fifth Street, between the Peachtrees. He expects to keep his present home.

G. Arthur Howell will also soon be a resident of Druid Hills, having started recently a home on Fairview Road to cost $7,500.

J. Clark McMichael has decided to go out Peachtree Road. He broke ground yesterday for his $15,000 two-story residence on the west side of Peachtree just south of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate, half a mile south of Buckhead.

Deeds Gone to Record.

Dr. W. J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National Bank, has sold as executor of the L. F. Blalock estate a triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Whitehall and Humphries Streets to Alex Reeves for $13,750, $3,000 of which was cash. The dimensions are 121 by 200 by 170 feet.

Deeds have also gone to record in the transfer of 385 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to James Morgan from Mrs. Cecelia B. Wallace for a consideration not named. Mrs. Wallace bought this property April 15 from W. J. Brown, Sr., who had acquired it August 3, 1912, from W. J. Brown, Jr., and Milton Strauss for $9,000.

J. J. West has sold to Mrs. Jessie L. Thrash a 50 by 190-foot lot on East Tenth Street, 50 feet east of Bedford Place, for $6,750.

Confirms Brookhaven Sale.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton Superior Court, has confirmed the sale made last Tuesday of the Brookhaven Club to the Brookhaven Estates at $90,000.

This was one of the details which had to be cleared up before a transfer could be made to the Capital City Club, and the said transfer is expected to be made in a few days. The terms of the sale, it is said, have already been agreed on. Possession can be had within two weeks, and it is expected that the Capital City Club will make substantial improvements.

Hotel Planned for Decatur.

Decatur will soon have a hotel costing $100,000, if plans of the Decatur Board of Trade do not go awry. Robert W. Ramspeck, secretary of the board, is in correspondence with Eastern capitalists who have become interested in the project, and a definite announcement is expected to be made in the course of a few weeks.

Who Will Head Realty Board?

There is considerable gossip in Atlanta realty circles as to who will head the Atlanta Real Estate Board this year. The election will be held in July, following the annual outing Saturday, June 14. Among names suggested are those of Harris G White, now vice president; W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and Carlos Lynes, of the Thomson & Lynes Agency. Other names will probably find their way into the list of nominations. Ralph O. Cochran was the first president of the organization, and he served two terms. Then came Charles P. Glover, the incumbent. A ruling now in effect makes it impossible to stand for re-election, and this will bring out new candidates.

Saturday, June 14, is the date fixed for the annual outing of the real estate men. The outing will be in the nature of a barbecue, and the place will be Cold Springs, where "Jack" Slaton's barbecues are usually held. Mr. Glover and M. C. Kiser, chairman of the entertainment committee, are busy arranging the details of the barbecue, and they expect a record crowd to attend.

R. D. Dorsey's New Home.

R. D. Dorsey, former Buckhead grocer and now connected with the W. E. Treadwell Real Estate Agency, is building a handsome home on the east side of the Ivey Road, 600 feet north of Piedmont Road. This place is north of the recently completed home of W. J. Stoddard. The house will have a stone front, the stone having been taken from Mr. Dorsey's back yard. Mr. Dorsey recently exchanged his former home on Piedmont Road, near Roswell Road, for several lots on Fifteenth Street.

OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY Requires Forty-Eight Battleships by 1915 to Hold Its Place of Safety.

England carries an unsolved and serious difference with our country over the free passage of American coastwise vessels through our own Panama Canal.

It is impossible to see how our country, in dignity and honor, can meet England's demands along this line.

Japan has sprung a serious issue with our country over the right of California to protect the interests of race and the safety of the citizen by a law regulating the alien and in time hostile ownership of her lands.

Neither England nor Japan would be willing all alone to precipitate a conflict with the United States over the impossible issues they have raised. But with England upon the eastern and Japan upon the western coast of our country in simultaneous demand, and in co-operative menace, the tension becomes both probable and startling.

In the Far East the myriads of Russia and the millions of Austria and Germany front each other behind the gathering antagonism of Pan-Slavism and Germanism.

Western Europe has just emerged from one of the fiercest and bloodiest wars of history in the Turko-Balkan struggle.

Italy has recently concluded a blood-fought peace with the armies of the Sultan.

The war spirit is in the spirit and blood of nations on both sides the sea.

And yet the American Congress, with an apathy that is blind and with a parsimony that is worse than narrow, refuses to equip the American Navy with strength and power to keep the peace in these tremendous times. Every officer and soldier of the American Navy demands two battleships every year. The American Senate demands two battleships every year.

The General Navy Board, without a dissenting voice, ~~makes~~ public its declaration that not one of our thirty-three battleships is ready for war if war should be declared. Germany could put to sea forty-one battleships now. France is ready to-morrow with thirty-eight battleships, and Japan holds in instant readiness thirty-six battleships, while England's mighty navy overshadows them all.

For a hundred years no nation has initiated war with England—because of England's awe-compelling navy.

THAT ENGLISH NAVY IS THE MIGHTIEST PEACE-MAKER AND PEACE-KEEPER THAT THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

One hundred years ago it sailed up the Chesapeake and Potomac and burned our capital at Washington. To-day it is great enough to batter our battleships on all the seas and ride once more in destroying insolence to reduce Washington to ashes.

The Georgian is as ardent an advocate of disarmament and universal peace as any newspaper published in America.

But The Georgian has held, and holds to-day, that as long as other nations build big navies we must build a big navy to keep ourselves sufficiently formidable to discourage attack and to protect ourselves if we are assailed. We do not believe in having a large navy one moment longer than a large navy is necessary—any more than we believe in carrying a gun unless a gun is necessary to protect our lives. This newspaper would have welcomed the acceptance of Winston Churchill's proposition for England and Germany to lead the movement for all nations to stop building battlehsips for a single year of peaceful experiment.

But the proposition went unheeded. England and Germany and Japan are building battleships, and the United States must build battleships, too.

The naval experts that we select and pay to tell us what our country needs tell us explicity that to hold its place of safety OUR COUNTRY ABSOLUTELY REQUIRES TO HAVE FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS IN 1915.

THEREFORE, THIS NEWSPAPER, WHICH IS ABOVE ALL THINGS AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, UNHESITATINGLY PLANTS ITSELF IN WHOLE HEARTED AND PERSISTENT ADVOCACY OF FORTY-EIGHT BATTLESHIPS BY 1915.

CHEER UP

By M. E. MURRAY.

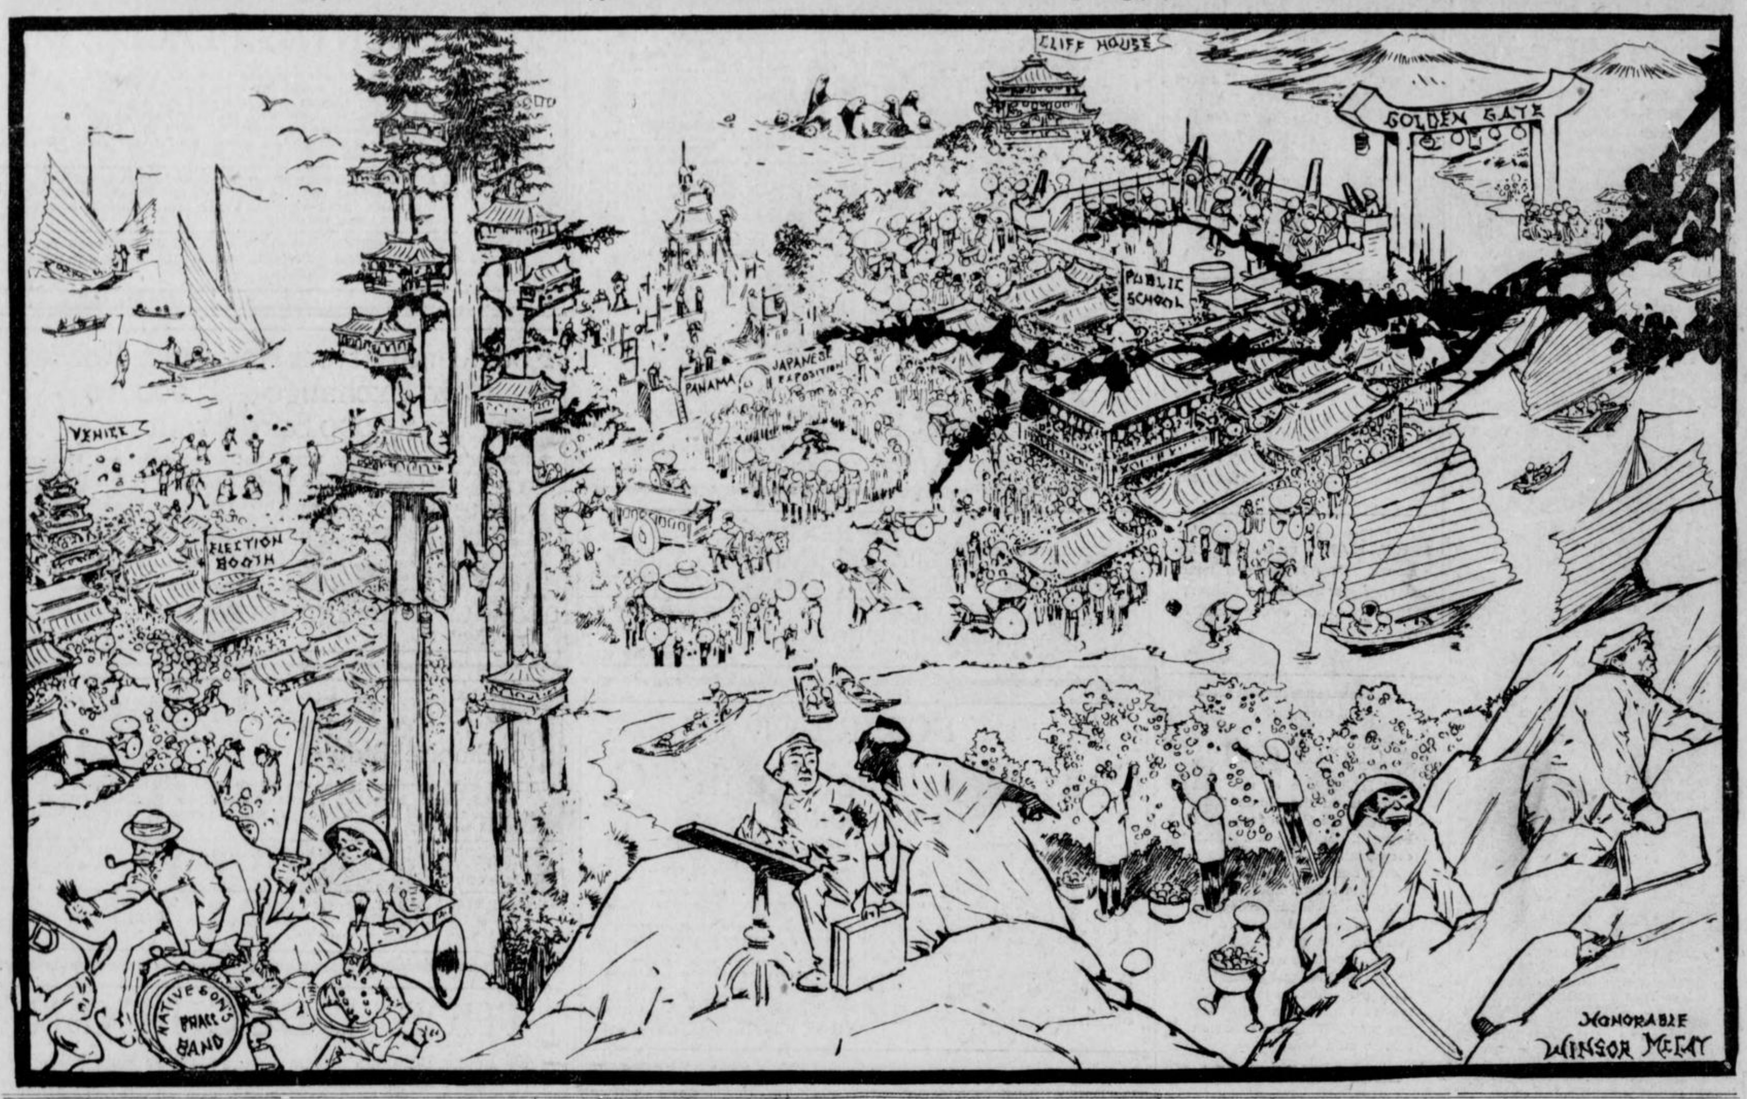
LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

How Do You Think This Would Look?

This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.



Rev. John E. White Writes on "Was Pierpont Morgan a Christian?"

He Was as Good a Christian, He Says, as His Circumstances Permitted, But His Training and Environment Were Against Him.

Written for The Georgian
By REV. JOHN E. WHITE.
Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE editor of an influential religious paper in Missouri has raised the question about the Christianity of J. Pierpont Morgan.

It may be regarded a venture upon ground of doubtful delicacy to question publicly the religious status of one recently deceased, and particularly to suggest a doubt about the Christianity of a man who made the confession of his personal Christian faith the most conspicuous feature of his last will and testament.

But this editor deals quite fairly and gently with Mr. Morgan and advances no severe judgment against the great financier. He only indicates the perplexity of reconciling the difficulties and contrasts of what Mr. Morgan believed and his life and career implied.

He simply asks whether the Morgan of absolutely orthodox creed, emphatic of humble dependence and devotion and attachment to the Saviorhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ can be harmonized with the character and career of the Morgan who was a man of the world known among men as "cold, severe, austere, indomitable, Ceaserish" and whose life was absorbed in financial ambitions, in personal self-assertion and in laying up treasures on earth for himself and those who helped him in his plans.

It is easier to criticise this editor for raising such a question on the ground of bad taste, than to deny the point of his question on the ground of Christianity itself.

The Rich Man's Religion.

The absolute standard of Christianity is in its founder. The record of whose life and teachings is in the New Testament. He incarnated, defined and illustrated the ideal Christian character.

In the New Testament Christianity took up the case of the rich man and dealt with it in a way to warn and alarm those who had great possessions. That Christianity, according to its founder and its first followers raised solemn questions in the path of every rich man and dealt with him faithfully for the sake of his soul, is a matter of open knowledge.

But the state of mind in modern Christianity is far from encouraging explicit and personal applications of these early principles to the rich Christians of to-day. Orthodox Christianity ordinarily does not take itself quite seriously on this subject, and to apply the message of Jesus to modern men of wealth consistently would risk a serious resentment.

Imagine a great monarch of Mammon in Jerusalem "who gave no public impression of being deeply in love with its fellows and showed no positive evidence of being sorely troubled over the awful hurt of the world, nor sympathized expressly with the stress and strain and struggle of the poor, nor offered his powerful hand directly to the oppressed and the distressed; who accumulated a private fortune twenty times as great as Croesus over in Rome, and who dying, left the bulk of it not for education, not for sending the gospel of the Atonement to the uttermost parts of the earth, not for printing Bibles, not for feeding, clothing and housing the poor; but to his son to perpetuate the great house of Mammon and its power in the world of finance and make to itself other millions."

One cannot help wondering how Jesus Christ would have fitted that situation into his scheme of the Kingdom of God on earth, and how he would have dealt with one of his disciples who insisted on playing that ambitious role. We know at least that the rich men of Jerusalem were not entirely comfortable about the Sermon on the Mount. Nicodemus was a magnate of money at that time.

Perhaps Nicodemus is the luminous exposition of our question, though Mr. Morgan was a more pronounced champion of Christ than ever Nicodemus dared to be, and his creed was as correct as Peter's, and his personal conduct as irreproachable as the rich young ruler's, who had kept the commandments from his youth up.

Mr. Morgan as a Symbol.

There is nothing new or strange in Mr. Morgan's relation to Christianity. He symbolizes to extraordinary advantage the type of the modern millionaire Christian. In his creed and private piety he was in possession of all the Christianity his circumstances would permit.

So far his example is a distinguished one and stands as a rebuke to many with far less fortune who profess Christianity with far less to show for it.

But the issue relating to Mr. Morgan personally in fairness deserves this conclusion: He was as good a Christian as his training and environment made possible.

The remarkable words of personal confession in his will may be indeed his confession rather than his creed. When we read them we may well wonder if he had not realized deeply the pathetic imperfection of a multimillionaire's Christianity.

He threw himself wholly upon the grace of God. He was no longer rich, but poor, no longer great, but small, no longer masterful, but humble.

That confession was the next best thing for a multimillionaire, who desired to inherit Eternal Life, could do for his fellow men.

Winifred Black Writes on "In Love With Love and Not With Anybody"

Being a Little Talk With a Girl Who Thinks That There Is No Joy in Life Because a Certain Young Man Has Ceased to Care For Her.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NOW, my dear girl, why don't you face the truth, the disagreeable, embarrassing truth; look it fairly in the face, and be done with it once and for all?

The man does not care for you. Put all idea that there may be some "misunderstanding," etc., out of your puzzled little head. A man who loves a woman doesn't let any misunderstanding come between him and the girl he loves.

He's tired of you and wants to get rid of you. Why do you pursue him? He is free, white and more than twenty-one. He has a right to love whom he pleases.

He acted as if he loved you? Well, if he did he certainly does not love you now, and what are you going to do about it?

Don't Run After Him!

Write to him again; go and see him? Never, never, never again. You are miserable without him you say. Well, if you run after him you will be miserable also and lose your own self-respect in the bargain.

Don't lose that, whatever happens. Don't do anything that will make the girl you see in the glass ashamed to look you straight in the eyes.

Your heart is broken? No it isn't. It isn't even cracked. Just twenty, poor thing, and "nothing to live for!" Why, it's a joke, a pitiful little joke, but a joke nevertheless. In a year from now you'll laugh at it yourself.

Twenty and a broken heart! Wait till you're forty and see what a tough, ready-to-wear heart you really have, and be glad of it.

This man you are sighing for, ten to one you'd be perfectly miserable with if you did get him. Almost any woman of thirty and past can tell you strange tales of the queer specimens she loved, or thought she loved, when she was twenty.

I remember a dark-browed youth with mournful eyes. I thought him a regular heart-breaker. I used to be afraid to look at him for fear he'd read my desperate secret in my embarrassed glance.

When I heard the dark-browed youth had asked my dearest friend to marry him I thought I'd never live through it, but I did, and danced at the marriage supper, too, and rather gayly at that.

I met the dark-browed youth just the other day. He looked to me rather more than commonplace, and how I had ever admired those hollow eyes and that sallow, stupid face I can't imagine.

You'll Get Over It.

His wife was with him and she did not seem seraphically happy. They say she is a bit of a nagger. I believe I'd have been more than a bit of a nagger if I had been tied up for life to that melancholy failure of a man. So much for dark eyebrows and mournful eyes.

No, my dear, you are not in love with this poor man that you want to follow and write to and call up on the 'phone. You aren't in love with him at all. You are in love with love, that's all. You'll get over it and smile to think it over some sane, comfortable day.

You're just twenty, little girl; only twenty. What on earth do you know, even about yourself? Get acquainted, get acquainted with that little person you see every day in the mirror. How do you know what she may turn out to be?

What! Throw her at some runaway man's head; let her make a goose of herself over some one who can't appreciate her? Don't you do it, little girl. Don't even think of doing it.

And, whisper, don't even hint your secret to a soul. Keep it to yourself, whatever you do, and have it to think of when the moon shines and there's soft music playing somewhere. Hug your foolish story to your breast and be nice and miserable for a while. It will do you good.

She Cried, Too.

Your mother! Oh, you haven't hinted this to her? Why not?

She wouldn't understand? What makes you think that? She's probably the one person on earth who would understand perfectly.

Would it astonish you to learn that when your mother was twenty, before she met your father, she had her romance? Get her to tell you about it to-night when you two are alone and the house is still. You'll be surprised to find that she's really a human being, this mother of yours.

Oh yes, she cried too, and beat her breast and wished to die, and the man didn't look at all like the one she married, either.

Come, come, you are not the only human being who ever was "hopelessly in love" at twenty. Millions of others have lived through it, like yourself. It isn't so important to be happy—it is important to be sensible. Make up your mind to that and some day you'll be astonished to find that you can't remember whether that heart-breaking wave of his hair was on the right or the left side of the part.

Pouf, it's over, the heart-ache and the misery and the folly. All over, and you are all the better for having lived through it.
