DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made

Beavers Seeks to Add Four Women To His Vice Squad

Women will be added to the vice squad of the Atlanta Police Department if the recommendations of Chief Beavers, as made in his report to the police board on his meeting with the police chiefs in Washington, are adopted.

From the paper read by the Chief of Police of Los Angeles in regard to women detectives and the effect in that city, Chief Beavers is firmly convinced they would be of help here.

The women—four in number—would be used to ferret out and report to the Chief the names of women and men who are engaged in the vice traffic in Atlanta, and in this way, the Chief believes, the department would be able to completely break up the business in this city.

Leading Citizens Urge Tracks on Ivy

Leading citizens called at the office of Mayor Woodward Monday to protest against the proposed plan not to replace the trolley car tracks on Ivy Street. V. H. Kriegshaber filed a formal protest as a property owner in which he urged that the tracks be put down on the regraded street. Others in the party were Judge Spencer Atkinson, Logan Bleckley, E. C. Peters and B. M. Willingham.

They declared the change of route would inconvenience persons using North Side cars.

Painter Analysis Mailed to Coroner

JACKSONVILLE, June 16.—Coroner C. D. Abbott has received word from Baltimore that the report of the analysis of E. O. Painter's stomach has been mailed. He expects to get it to-day.

Upon receipt of the report the Coroner will reassemble his jury and continue the inquest into the death of the wealthy fertilizer manufacturer, who drowned in the St. Johns River on May 22.

PRESIDENT IN PERSON TO SPUR HOUSE

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

General Principles Are His.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

In the conference to-day the President said that the complete currency measure will be "no one-man bill;" that the general principles of the measures will be his, but that the details and working out of the principles have been left in the hands of Senator Owen, of Oklahoma; Representative Glass, of Virginia, and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo; that there will be but one bill presented to Congress, and that the stamp of Presidential approval will be on that one.

No Hobble Skirt Bill.

The President concluded his discussion of the proposed legislation by saying that "the principle must be judged by the clothes it wears—and they certainly will not be of the hobble skirt variety."

The President declined to discuss any of the details of the bill, saying they had not all been decided on finally.

Man Running for Train Is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

Risque Books Most Sought by Readers

CHICAGO, June 14.—Books that twenty years ago were considered unfit for public circulation now are most eagerly sought, according to employees in the Chicago Public Library.

"The reading public has become broadened in its attitude toward discussions of problems of sex life until now these discussions are eagerly sought," one said.

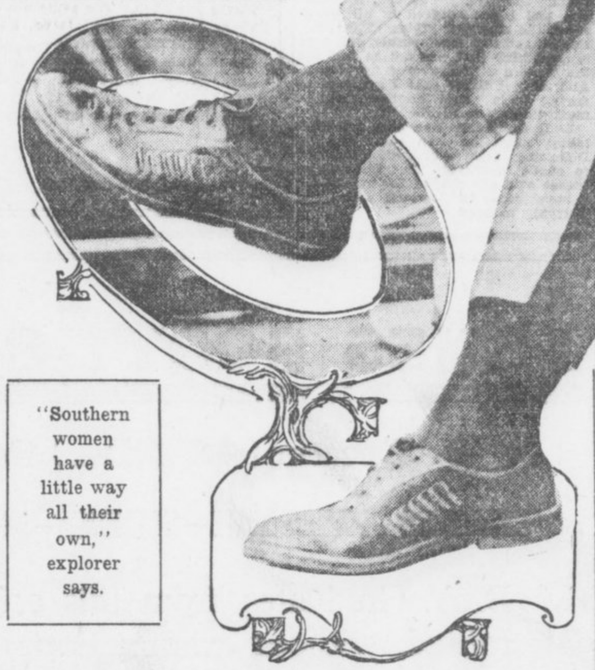
Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.

"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.



Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me."

4 Hurt in Wreck of Auto Near Midland

COLUMBUS, GA., June 16.—According to a long distance telephone message received here to-day, four persons were painfully hurt late Sunday afternoon when the automobile of Dr. F. E. Young, of Midland, turned turtle down an eight-foot embankment.

Miss Helen Coleman, of Columbus, who was driving the car, was caught under the steering wheel. Dr. Young's two children were pinned underneath the car. Dr. Young was thrown clear of the car. It is thought all will recover.

Ah, at Last, Women Are to Have 'Em

CHICAGO, June 16.—"Trouserines" will be offered by Chicago dressmakers to take the place of the popular, but abused, slashed skirt. Woman must pull 'em on over her feet, too, just like the men do it. Thus the dream of many decades is coming true.

The Chicago Dressmakers' Association has so decreed. The new style is to be a great flaring ankle-length pair o' something, draped so that on the street one will never stare.

Zoo Keeper to Raise Lion Cubs on Bottle

The birth of three lion cubs at the Gress Zoo has started a nursery at the park that might be a model to humans. The cubs were born Sunday night and the old lioness was extremely jealous of them, but the hot weather made her so restless she tossed against one and killed it.

"Blackie" Boyd, the zoo keeper, took the two remaining to his home, and announced he would raise them on a bottle.

FAMILY JARS CAUSE TRAGEDY.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Earl Scott, 18, fatally wounded his father-in-law, David Black, during a quarrel at Eddyville and then committed suicide. Family troubles caused the tragedy. Scott and his wife had separated.

DESPERADO, AT BAY UNDER HOUSE, FIRES UNTIL NEARLY DEAD

Patrolman Paul West Braves Death in Darkness to Club Slayer Insensible and Drag Him From Refuge---Crowd Becomes Menacing.

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half and hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, an aged negro, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had sated his prostrate body of Yancey and ran up bloody passion, he leaped from the the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers. Thrusting their weapons in under the house they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he was almost riddeld with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bones both above and below the knee. Another

FUND IS STARTED FOR YANCEY'S FAMILY

Court Deputy David Yancey is dead. He met a horrible fate. He was stabbed and hacked to death while endeavoring to serve his employer, the public of Atlanta and Fulton County. He died "with his boots on."

The whole city and the entire county will applaud this brave man's deed and mourn his death. Then they will turn again to their own homes and happy families and the humdrum of business. Court Deputy David Yancey will pass from their minds.

It remains for the dead man's unhappy family to bear the real burdens of consequences which its head met in serving the public. There is the widow, who idolized her big, strong husband. There are also eight children, bright-eyed boys and girls, not one of them over 16 years of age, who will romp no more about their father's knee.

Family in Need.

He has been snatched away from them. And now—what do they face?

With the overwhelming tragedy not yet fully realized by them, the family of Deputy Yancey has not thought of this. Their sorrow for their loved one drowns out all else.

But life has its toll which must be paid. There are eight children who have to live, as well as a widow. Their sole support has been taken from them. And now—they face life's problem.

Yancey's family was in straitened circumstances at the time of his death. Sickness had invaded the house and two of the children are now in a hospital.

Already friends of the dead man are thinking of this. The Georgian also has thought of this.

The Georgian has started a fund to care for the family whose head was cut off while serving the people of Atlanta and Fulton County.

Your Aid Needed.

This newspaper has headed the list with $25. The amount is small—not commensurate in any manner with the price paid by Yancey. But its smallness invites contributions from other sources—from the public whom Yancey served. The Georgian will gladly receive these contributions and see that they are put in the hands of the bereaved family as a poor substitute for what it has lost.

Friends of the deputy have already rallied to the fund. The following are the first to answer:

The Georgian	$25
Frank L. Harralson	5
Harry Latham	5
Newt Garner	5
John W. Moore	5

High praise was given the deputy by Sheriff Mangum, his superior officer.

"Yancey was a fine man," said the Sheriff. "He had always done his duty to the public faithfully."

groin and still others in his right side.

In spite of his many wounds, it was thought that he might live. None of them alone would have been fatal. Watson has been wanted for some time at Fayetteville for escaping from the chaingang, and Warden Harris has been in Atlanta several times trying to locate the negro. Failing, he detailed a negro to stay in the city in an effort to find him. It was known that Watson lived in the rear of 60 Orange Street, but he was shrewd enough not to go near his home.

An especial act of bravery during the siege of Watson, who was in the darkness under the house, was that of Policeman Paul West. Watson, crippled but still defiant, was in an obscure corner. The officers called upon him to surrender. He shouted his defiance at them. After the fire was resumed the negro saw there was no further use in resisting and yelled that he was ready to give up.

West Dares Death in Dark.

The officers waited, but the negro did not come out of the darkness. Policeman West, against the warnings of his fellow-officers, dropped to the ground and crawled under the house toward the negro. His comrades were expecting every instant to hear the crack of a shot which would tell that West, too, had fallen a victim to the crazed black man.

West, however, crept up on the negro and hit him over the head with the butt of his revolver. Then he took him by the feet and dragged him, senseless, out into the light.

At the sight of the negro the anger of the mob which had collected was redoubled. Inflamed beyond measure by the atrocious killing, they surged forward and would have borne Watson off had not the policemen hastily surrounded him and carried him to the waiting automobile.

His eyes glazed and staring, the negro appeared utterly unconscious as he lay in the car. Questions as to his identity were hurled at him as he was borne to the station house and later to the hospital, but he seemed not to hear them.

Woman Stands Guard.

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, Atlanta's woman detective, lives at 15 Woodward Avenue, just back of the yard on Windsor Street, where the bloody battle between Watson and Yancey took place. She heard the shots that Yancey fired at the negro and ran out to see the deputy lying on the grass, horribly gashed and mutilated, and the negro running up the street.

Snatching her revolver she ran out of doors and after the negro. When Watson took refuge under the house on Windsor Street, Mrs. Barnett stood guard until the wagon load of policemen and detectives under command of Assistant Chief Jett and Captain Poole dashed up in front of the house.

Irby Terry, of 294 Whitehall Street, a boy of 11 years, had a narrow escape at the hands of the negro. Terry was standing on the street corner when the negro dashed by after snatching the purse of Winn. Watson brandished his knife and as he came upon the boy he made a lunge which Terry narrowly dodged.

Family Left in Want.

One of the many pathetic features of the tragedy is the poverty of the family that Yancey leaves. They have had a hard struggle for existence in their little home at Lakewood Heights on the Jonesboro Road. Eight children are in the family, none of them above 16 or 17 years of age. One of the two older daughters recently was taken to the hospital, making an additional burden upon Yancey.

Only recently Yancey was made a bailiff in Judge Calhoun's court. The salary was $100 a month. Yancey was overjoyed when apprised of his appointment.

"Now everything will be fine sailing," he said. "That fixes me just right. I am tickled to death. One of my children is in the hospital and another is very sick. I can take care of them now."

Jesse Winn, the old negro from whom Watson stole the $4, lives in DeWald alley. Watson is said to have stayed at the Winn home on several occasions. Winn is an employee in the coal yards of the Southern Railway.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

I'LL KEEP PEACE, KAISER TELLS CARNEGIE

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Mr. Carnegie and his fellow commissioners presented the Kaiser with an address in the name of 44 American peace and conciliation societies. The address pointed out that William's reign of 25 years has been notable because of the maintenance of a quarter of a century of peace. In reply the Kaiser said, in part:

Hopes for Peaceful Reign.

"I hope to reign 25 years more in peace, and shall certainly do all I can in that direction."

Germans expressed great curiosity to see the American iron master and great crowds lined the streets when he departed from the Adlon Hotel, where he is stopping with his wife and daughter, Margaret. He was heartily cheered. This cordial demonstration pleased Mr. Carnegie, who waved his hand to the crowds.

Among those who were received with Mr. Carnegie by the Emperor were Robert S. Brookings, of St. Louis, and Jacob G. Schmidlapp, of Cincinnati.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Bands Play Martial Tunes.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here to-day that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1913 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it? Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

Atlanta Eagle Aerie Goes to Convention

Leaving the Terminal Station at 9:20 o'clock to-night the Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 150 strong, accompanied by its drum corps of 30, will start in special coaches for Jacksonville, where the annual convention of the organization begins to-morrow for a three-day session.

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

Vandals Chop Down His Whole Orchard

CAMDEN, N. J., June 16.—Aroused by the barking of his dogs, Martin Kahout, of Atco, rushed out of his house and was dumfounded when he discovered that not a tree in his peach orchard was left standing, each being chopped down close to the ground. He could advance no reason for the destruction.

Kahout expected to get $1,500 from the crop.

Americans to See Peeress Dance

Lady Richardson's Pay $10,000

Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

CITY TO SWELTER AS BREEZES FAIL

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

New York Heat Wave Will Continue Two Days.

NEW YORK, June 16.—New York City sweltered to-day under the first real heat wave of the season. At noon the temperature was 87, but the weather forecaster predicted that the same torrid weather would prevail two days longer.

DIES FROM STAB WOUND.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—Raymond Sheppard, a well-known resident of St. Andrews, Fla., died here at an infirmary from a stab wound. E. L. Matthews, a prominent citizen of Panama City, is locked up at St. Andrews, charged with inflicting the wound.

COLYAR RETURNS PROMISING SENSATION

A. S. Colyar is in Atlanta again, promising to spring some more sensations.

The investigator who engineered the dictographing of Thomas B. Felder and Mayor Woodward has been in Washington. He sent a letter to Atlanta before him, saying he objected to being made a goat.

It is believed Colyar saw George M. Gentry while in Washington and got from him an affidavit. This is said to be much the same as the one printed admitting that the dictograph records had been padded, as charged in Gentry's recent affidavit, but that the general charges were upheld.

Promises Story in Letter.

"He laughs best who laughs last. When you get tired publishing all of the lies the gang of political crooks are publishing on Lanford and myself I may be able to give you a story that will cause some people to sit up and take notice.

"It's indeed comforting to think one purchased affidavit can cause a certain man in Atlanta to consider himself vindicated completely. Whitewash is cheap, as we all know.

"Then there is Mayor Woodward. He says 'Colyar went to Mrs. Gentry's house and worried her.' Indeed, where did he learn this? It's news to me. But we all know the Mayor. He is the same Mayor Hon. R. F. Maddox defeated after he (Woodward) was nominated by his party, and all Atlanta knows why. Let them make a goat out of me and see what I publish in my own defense.

"The crooks got caught. And they sent Miles away to see if he could not fool the people. A. S. COLYAR."

Felder's Trip Causes Comment.

Speculation was rife Monday as to the nature of the trip of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who left Atlanta Sunday afternoon with the statement that he was bound for Cincinnati.

Rumors had it that Colonel Felder in reality is on his way to Washington, for the purpose probably of conferring with George Gentry, the missing stenographer in the recent dictagraph sensation. If this is Colonel Felder's intention, he kept it to himself.

It has been suggested that Colonel Felder would feel much safer in going to Washington by way of Cincinnati than through the State of South Carolina.

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address, and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studying the sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

Quality and Service Without Discrimination!

Because we have a large plant, and second to none in America for absolute completeness and modernism, is not an argument that we are looking only for the BIG things in PRINTING. The same element of price, quality and service is just as much an inseparable part of every small job we turn out as the most elaborate that leaves our shop. The same niceties in every small detail enter into every piece of work we do, no matter how small the size or quantity. SERVICE here is the monitor that governs our every movement. QUALITY the standard that measures every effort.

DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Defends Wife's Name In Newspaper Notice

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Because he heard things that gossips were saying about him and his wife, Robert C. Walsh, a druggist, inserted the following advertisement in the St. Louis newspapers:

"Please Take Notice—Notice is hereby given that I know my wife, Susie T. Walsh, to be a respectable, well-meaning woman in everything.

200-Mile Walk Marks Silver Wedding Day

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Dr. N. R. Hubbard and wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding by walking from their home in Williamsport, Pa., to this city, a distance of 200 miles.

The couple declare it was the best vacation outing they ever had.

All This Took Place On Friday, 13th, '13

DALTON, June 16.—Friday, the thirteenth, brought an unusual string of luck to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Alberson, tenants on the farm of D. B. Barrett, south of here.

On that day their thirteenth child was born, a fine Jersey cow gave birth to a calf, a prize sow produced a fine litter of pigs and the family cat brought in five woolly kittens.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 16.—William S. Coffield, 84 years old, veteran of the Mexican War, as well as two Indian wars and the Civil War, is the father of a girl baby, born last night. Coffield draws a pension of $55 a month from the Government.

Bud Fisher and Bride to Buy Chateau

They're Here in Vaudeville to Get Funds

Artist Reveals Dream of Happiness—Hopes Mutt and Jeff Will Survive Long Time.

Bud Fisher, creator of our old friends Mutt and Jeff, and his bride, formerly Pauline Welch, are spending a week in Atlanta while on their way to the southern part of France.

Neither Bud nor Mrs. Fisher knows when they will reach France and take up their abode in the chateau they have in mind, but both are looking forward to it. Bud says it will be "swell" and "easy," while Mrs. Fisher declares it will be "great." The fact that they are going was kept a jealously guarded secret until they reached Atlanta and told it to a Georgian reporter to-day.

Bud Fisher and Pauline Welch arrived in Atlanta at 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon and registered at the Piedmont. They are booked for a week's engagement at the Forsyth Theater, beginning with the matinee to-day. Bud will draw cartoons, while Mrs. Fisher, or Pauline Welch, has an act of her own.

Just Draws Mutt and Jeff.

"Just pictures of Mutt and Jeff and caricatures of people in the audience, all pantomime—that's all I do," said Bud in describing his act to the reporter. But "just pictures of Mutt and Jeff" is enough to elicit several thousand laughs a night from any audience; also to deposit several thousand simoleons per annum in the Fisher and Welch exchequer.

"Mutt and Jeff are six years old now," said Fisher. "But I hope they will become a great deal older, as old as I do, I trust."

"I never told anybody before, but Atlanta is about as good a place to let it out as I can find," he replied. "When I get enough money, I'm going to the south of France and buy me a chateau and live easy in the summer time; then come to America for four or five months every winter and appear in vaudeville.

"The southern part of France beats California, for $1 there goes as far as $20 in California. I can have a man making champagne for me, get a chauffeur for $8 a month, a butler for the same and a whole army of attendants for $100 a month. The next best thing to having a bunch of money is to live where it goes a long way. Me for the southern part of France when Mutt and Jeff grow stale. But I hope that will be many years yet."

Slaton's Client Is Fined for Ignoring Court's Injunction

"While it would be a difficult matter to insult me personally, you can get into trouble pretty easily by insulting this court," said Superior Judge John T. Pendleton Monday morning when he fined Edward Floding $50 for contempt of court, and threatened him with a jail sentence of 24 hours. Floding's attorney was Governor-elect John M. Slaton.

Floding is proprietor of the Floding Relagia Company. After he purchased it, the former owners obtained an injunction restraining him from using that firm name.

Accrding to the court, he disregarded the injunction.

Star in 'Eight Bells' Is Ordained a Priest

ALTOONA, PA., June 16.—Michael J. Byrne, one of the famous Byrne brothers who starred for years in the old comedy, "Eight Bells," was ordained into the priesthood at St. John's Cathedral this morning by Bishop A. E. Garvey. Father Byrne is 54 years of age.

Five years ago his wife died and he gave up the stage and entered St. Francis College, Loretto, where he prepared for holy orders.

Girl's Auto Death Dream Comes True

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Miss Kitty Howe, a pretty young chorus girl, dreamed that she would be killed in an automobile accident. Yesterday she leaped from a speeding car when it struck a rock. She landed in a pile of stones, fracturing her skull. Ten hours later she died in a hospital.

Lands in Jail While On a Vacation Spree

MACON, GA., June 16.—C. J. Williamson, of Panama City, Fla., came to Macon on a vacation. Saturday night he drank too much, and when he regained his senses he was in the parlor of the home of R. H. Plant, Jr., two miles from the city limits, with his shoes, hat and coat missing, and the owner of the house holding him at bay with a pistol.

Mr. Plant shot twice at the intruder, and narrowly missed him. He was jailed by Sheriff Hicks.

Black Handers Hurt By Their Own Bomb

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 16.—An attempt to destroy the home and kill the family of J. D. Trapani, a wealthy fruit dealer, to-day resulted in the serious injury of two young Italians who threw the bomb.

Trapani came here from New Orleans two years ago. He declared the Black Hand harassed him for nine years in New Orleans. The last demand received from the Black Hand, he said, was a demand for $300,000.

Strike Big Gas Flow In Abandoned Field

COFFEYVILLE, KANS., June 16.—A 27,000,000-foot gas well, the greatest in years, has been brought in south of Wann, Okla., by the Kasigan Gas Company.

The well has a rock pressure of 550 pounds. The field is an old one, long ago drilled up, but all wells had stopped.

Has Counted Nation's Wealth for 50 Years

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rounding out her fifty years of service in the Treasury Department, Miss Emma R. Graves, 84 years old, is the sunshine of the place.

For half a century Miss Graves has been steadily counting the nation's wealth. Billions of dollars have passed under her nimble fingers, and she has the record of never having made a mistake in the count.

She still occupies the position of an expert, counting notes which have been turned in to be destroyed.

Dynamite in Rescue Work Causes Strife

NEW YORK, June 16.—A hot controversy over the use of explosives in the search for the last two bodies of the ten men killed by a cave-in of granite in the new Lexington Avenue subway Saturday night has caused bitter feeling between Coroner W. H. Holtzhauser and Chairman E. E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission. The bodies were recovered.

The Coroner forbade the use of dynamite, and McCall opposed. McCall's authority won. Three separate inquiries are under way.

Artist to Live Like Stone Age Forbears

BOSTON, June 16.—To prove that twentieth century convention is needless, John Knowles, a local artist, will plunge into the wilderness of Northern Maine without clothing, food, matches, firearms or ammunition.

He declared he will live like the men of the Stone Age for three months.

MOROS ROUTED IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

In THE AMERICAN, Yesterday:

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

BEAVERS THINKS AFFIDAVIT GENUINE

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, just returned from Washington, said Monday that evidence was practically conclusive that George M. Gentry, the stenographer in the recent dictograph episode, did sign an affidavit that the records were padded.

The chief had attended the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, but had searched for Gentry, whose affidavit was attested by a Washington notary. The best detective in Washington, he said, was detailed to the hunt, but could not locate Gentry. He did, however, secure evidence that Gentry was in Washington and that the affidavit was genuine.

The signing of the affidavit, Chief Beavers said, took place in room 802 of the Westoria Building. This is the L. & N. Railroad office building, and room 802 is the private office of J. A. Ridgely, formerly of Atlanta, and a personal friend of E. O. Miles, the private detective who brought Gentry's affidavit from Washington.

W. M. J. Davis, the only man in Ridgely's office when the affidavit was signed, said that two men and a woman came in. One introduced himself as Mr. Miles, from Atlanta. Mr. Ridgely's friend. He did not state the identity of the others. Miles and his companions sent downstairs for Miss Jeannette Henning, a notary public, who came up to room 802 and attested an acknowledgment by the man who accompanied Miles to the room.

Davis afterward gave a description of the man who signed the affidavit. Miss Henning also described the man. Both descriptions, Chief Beavers said, tallied with the description of George M. Gentry.

Deaf-Mute's Note Better Than Speech

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, said Monday that a Chinese puzzle was simple compared with his duty of finding out the business of people who call at the Mayor's office. The constant reply he receives is:

"I want to see the Mayor on personal business."

After explaining to a deaf-mute today that it was impossible to let anyone see the Mayor on account of the large number of callers unless he knew the nature of their business, the deaf-mute wrote:

"Wife at home. Nothing to eat."

Mr. Hammond said the mute beat all callers in telling what he wanted.

FOOD EXPERTS TO MEET.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Association of Americap Dairy Food and Drug Officials will convene here to-night at 8 o'clock at the Battle House. No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels; He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels, "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

RAG PLAYERS WILL PROVE WHO'S WHO

Best Performers in Atlanta Will Enter Contest Against Weatherholt Player-Piano.

Who is the ragtime champion piano player of Atlanta?

That is the question that T. E. Weatherholt, president of the Weatherholt Piano Company, 72 North Broad Street, will try to solve Wednesday afternoon.

As a result of his extensive advertising recently in the interest of his player-piano club, Mr. Weatherholt has received hundreds of letters asking if his player-pianos can turn out ragtime in regulation style.

These letters have convinced Mr. Weatherholt the country is ragtime-mad. Everybody wants ragtime.

Hugh Cardoza, local theatrical wizard, said this long ago, and Mr. Weatherholt now thinks he is right. Mr. Cardoza says all that is necessary to prove this is to listen to the applause in the Forsyth after a ragtime act goes on.

Mr. Weatherholt has answered all his correspondents to the effect that a Weatherholt player-piano can turn out ragtime better than a professional, and to show folks this is true he has arranged the ragtime contest for Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the best performers on the piano have been secured, and they promise to play the best ragtime they know how to play.

The player-piano will do the same Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward and an expert judge of ragtime, will be the judge.

Mr. Hammond has made a study of ragtime. He is one lover of classical music who likes ragtime, and he has a large assortment at his home. He is a syncopatic sharp and has a trained ear for the music which sets feet to moving and shoulders to going up and down.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Bellton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

Roasted Town Will Sue Stage Jesters

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fusionists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

TURFMAN SUFFERS FIRE LOSS.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Two new automobiles, several other vehicles and the poultry houses burned at the Idle Hour Stock Farm of E. R. Bradley, millionaire New York-Chicago turfman, here to-day. The fire started by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

Crepe de Chine Underwear at Half Price

And not just a few odd pieces, but practically every crepe de chine garment of this wonderfully fine stock!

Half price!

And there is no denying that right now crepe de chine underwear is in the height of Fashion's favor.

Makers have been straining every point to make deliveries---the scarcity of crepe de chine that you have heard so much of this season is in a great measure due to the unprecedented use of this fabric for underwear.

And, in face of all these facts, we come forward now with a half-price sale!

It is hard to imagine a woman who will not be interested, who will not want to share the opportunities---and what a fine time this month's brides will have!

The sale begins with the opening of the store, and although the half price extends to every crepe de chine garment in this big, well-selected stock, excepting a few white petticoats and several sets, we do not believe quantities will last long as soon as women come to see just what this opportunity is.

The price range---

$5.00 Garments are	$2.50	$10.00 Garments are	$5.00
$6.00 Garments are	$3.00	$12.00 Garments are	$6.00
$7.50 Garments are	$3.75	$15.00 Garments are	$7.50
$8.00 Garments are	$4.00	$18.00 Garments are	$9.00
$8.50 Garments are	$4.25	A $36.00 Set is	$18.00
$9.00 Garments are	$4.50	A $40.00 Set is	$20.00

Drawers, including knickerbockers, gowns, petticoats, combinations, princess slips and a few negligees. Choose from pink, light blue, yellow and white—except the petticoats—no white petticoats.

The crepe de chine is always pure silk, heavy quality. As the prices mount the trimmings become more elaborate and beautiful—dainty rosettes and bows, sheer shadow laces, rich cream cluny laces, Irish crochet laces and round thread Valenciennes. A woman would search long and far for more exquisite garments—remember they are our own fine stock!

7 PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN TO CHILDREN

Seven of the best equipped playgrounds Atlanta has ever had were opened Monday morning for the season of 1913. This is a fewer number than heretofore, but Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, and Joe Bean, director of playgrounds, announce that they are better equipped than playgrounds of former years.

The opening Monday was auspicious. Crowds of children gathered at the five white playgrounds, Grant Park, Mims Park, Joyner Park, English Avenue and Pine Hill playgrounds. Two negro playgrounds are maintained, one at Stoer's School yard and another at Gray's School yard.

The playgrounds will be open every day in the week from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning and from 3:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In connection with the playground work Mr. Carey announced that the bathing hours at Piedmont Park lake had been changed. Hereafter no one will be admitted into the lake from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Carey said that between these hours it was too hot to go into the lake.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,690, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees to-day advanced Instructor R. C. Wilson to assistant professor of pharmacy. Professors W. O. Payne and S. M. Sallyer were each granted a year's leave of absence. A petition from students to permit a dance in the alumni hall was not granted. The branch colleges were requested to mail copies of all publications as soon as published to the general board of trustees. The Law School was given additional space, taking the rooms formerly occupied by Professor John E. Morris, who will use the class rooms vacated by Professor T. J. Woofter, removed to the new Peabody Hall. Professor Woofter was granted a leave of absence in 1914-15. A recommendation that the sophomore declamation be discontinued was disapproved.

This afternoon the military department's prize drill takes place on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Woman Made Forest Rider in California

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 16.—Miss Hallie Daggett, appointed forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve, is probably the first woman to hold that position in this country.

She was assigned to the Lookout post at Eddy's Gulch to watch for forest fires.

Pastor Lauds Movies As Agent for Good

CHICAGO, June 16.—One of the greatest influences for good is the moving pictures, according to Rev. Johnston Meyers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Dr. Meyers said in a sermon that he was a regular patron of the movies.

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store-filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come to-morrow. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces-- Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

*

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"Let the national department proceed. I would not object to egrets fashioned from roosters' tails—if the women folks like them as well, far be it from me to put in a word for the roosters."

Pupils' Recital.

The pupils of Mrs. Josephine Shideler gave a recital at Cleveland-Manning Concert Hall.

Piano pupils taking part in the program were Miss Priscilla Roberts, Miss Beatrice Turner, Miss Louise Bradley, Miss Bertha Clark, Miss Sarah Guthrie, Miss Addie Jones, Mr. Roy O'Quinn, Miss Willie May Coleman, Miss Lester Camp, Miss Fay Arnold, Miss Mamie Norton, Miss Marguerite Counts, Miss Ethel Hale, Miss Thelma Callaway, Miss Estelle Bradley and Miss Letitia Grant.

In addition to the pupils, Miss Nellie Landrum gave two vocal numbers. She was accompanied by Miss Miriam Landrum, piano, and Mr. Ralph Landrum, violin. Mr. William Terrell gave two selection on violin, accompanied on piano by Miss Victoria Ray.

Galloway-Brown.

Mrs. Walter G. Brown announces the marriage of her daughter, Mabel Claire, to Mr. Charles Galloway Thursday, June 19.

For Miss Abernathy.

Miss Grace Abernathy, a bride-elect, was honor guest at a domino luncheon Friday morning at Mrs. Charles A. Forrest's home in Gordon Street. The reception rooms were decorated with daisies and gladioli.

At the luncheon which followed the game a color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in detail. The guest of honor was given a silver-mounted hat brush. The guests were: Misses Maude Daniels, Julia Purser, Allie Purser, Lucile Quinn, Mrs. N. T. Pool, Mrs. R. H. Dobbs, Mrs. Rush Irwin, Miss Lucile Daniels, Mrs. Marion Hardwick, Mrs. James Markley and her guest, Miss Greer; Mrs. R. M. Hopkins, Miss Mildred Hardy, Miss Nora Goodman, Miss Daisy Smith, Mrs. W. A. Hartman, Mrs. R. H. Caldwell, Mrs. Benjamin J. Burton, of Lavonia, Ga., and Mrs. L. A. Tiller.

For Miss Baker.

Atlanta Girls in Athens.

A large number of Atlanta's younger set is in attendance on the University commencement in Athens this week. Misses Jane and Kate Cooper are guests of Miss Eugenia Ivey. Misses Virginia Lipscomb and Bertha Moore, accompanied by Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, motored to Athens Sunday. Miss Lipscomb will be with Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, and Miss Moore with Mrs. W. D. Hooper.

Miss Mary Rice is the guest of Mrs. John W. Morton. Miss Helen McCarty is with Miss Florence Hooper. Miss Wyckliffe Wurm is at the Georgian. Miss Van McKinnon is at the Georgian, chaperoned by Mrs. William McCarty. Miss Josephine Mobley, chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. J. R. Mobley, is at the Georgian.

Misses Adgate Ellis, Cora McCord Brown, Ruth Reid and Mary Murphy are other Atlanta girls who are to be guests at the many commencement festivities in Athens this week.

Misses Elizabeth Dunson and Eloise Gay are also there. Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley is chaperoning Miss Mamie Ansley at the Georgian, and Mrs. Arnold Broyles accompanied her daughter, Miss Louise Broyles, to attend the commencement gayeties and to witness the graduation of Mr. Edwin Broyles.

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

World Move to Stop Frauds in Medicine

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—That the "patent medicine" business and quackery has become so serious and widespread that a world-wide effort is being made to curtail it was the report of a committee at the sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical Association, which opened to-day.

The membership of the association last year increased from 34,283 to 37,913, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent State associations during the year grew from 70,021 to 70,538.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

LABOR PARADE TO ECLIPSE ALL PAST

The Atlanta Federation of Labor is planning the greatest Labor Day parade Atlanta has ever known. At a meeting Sunday afternoon, attended by representatives from every union in the city, it was decided to make this year's showing the greatest ever.

Following is the Labor Day committee named by President Brady:

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Millionaire at 86 Weds for 4th Time

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

ATLANTA BEATS EAST FOR TRADE

"Atlanta is the most cheerful spot on the map," says W. S. Lounsbury, vice president of the Travelers' Bank and Trust Company, just returned from a trip which included visits to Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, New Haven and small towns in the States of New York and New Jersey.

"I made it my business to call on the bankers in all the Eastern cities. It is a relief to get out of the atmosphere of the North and East back into the realm of confidence," he says.

"Atlanta is to be congratulated on being in the best shape of any city east of Chicago. Business is splendid here, compared to the East. Part of it, indeed, is at the expense of the East.

"One of the loudest wails I heard was from Baltimore. Atlanta jobbers are cutting deeply into Baltimore's trade, particularly in the Carolinas, and, to make it a little more painful to the Maryland dealers, the trade which is coming to Atlanta is the 'cream.'

"The trouble in the North is that the loans are based largely on Wall Street securities, instead of on the crops, as here. Consequently, Atlanta, looking to the fields for news, gets cheerful tidings, while the East, looking at Wall Street, is depressed."

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 139 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alteratives has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, stubborn Colds and in debilidting the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods. Try it!

The Social World

The tennis tourney for the State championship, which is on at the Driving Club this week, will attract large crowds to witness the games, and, of course, the inevitable dancing will follow. The popular club will be the scene of much informal entertaining during the week.

Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won the championship twice, and defends it in the present tournament. E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield hold the championship in doubles. A number of expert women players are to take part in the mixed doubles.

The Sunday assemblage at the Capital City Country Club was a large and representative one. Swimming was a favorite mode of recreation for the men, although only a few women braved the waters, for some reason or other. An informal air hovers over the charming Country Club, which will be fostered.

The large attendance at the week-end dinner dance of the Driving Club and the informal dance at East Lake shows that the summer exodus for Atlanta society has hardly begun.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Mell Wilkinson entertained informally at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday, in honor of Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, other guests including Mrs. J. M. VanHarlingen, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson and Mrs. Edward VanElnkle.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Bertram Norris entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

Copeland-Miller.

A wedding of interest throughout Georgia and Alabama was that on June 11 of Miss Mamie Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., to Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fort Valley.

Bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Smith, Atlanta; Carol Dean, Gainesville; Telete Scott, Canton; Janie Culpepper, Fort Valley. They were gowned in white meteor crepe with pointed trains and carried white sweetpeas. Groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the first in white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Mrs. Neil wore her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace. Both carried white sweetpeas. Flower girls were Marjorie Frown and Margaret McMillan. Mr. Seth Copeland was best man.

The bride wore a gown of crepe sylvia, draped with princess and rose point lace, made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. Her veil was of lace, arranged from a Dutch cap and caught with orange blossoms.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland will spend their honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolina.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, of Atlanta.

Morris-Huie.

Mrs. Robert S. Huie announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice Mae, to Mr. Robert Ernest Morris, of Atlanta. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, near Philadelphia Church, Clayton County, Thursday evening, June 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

For Miss Graves.

Mrs. Rix Stafford will entertain a few members of the schoolgirl set informally at bridge Thursday in honor of Miss LaGrange Katherine Graves, of Rome, a guest of Miss Louise Couper.

Memorial Association to Meet.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the assembly room of Carnegie Library.

For Miss Hughes.

In honor of Miss Mary Hughes, whose wedding to Mr. Ernest Osborne will take place Wednesday evening, there has been a series of parties.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Ollie May Osborne gave a reception. Thursday Miss Mae Richardson was hostess at luncheon and the same afternoon Miss Florence Dugger entertained the wedding party at the matinee. Mrs. Joseph Paulson invited twelve girls to meet Miss Hughes at bridge Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon Misses Wilt entertained at tea for her.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Ollie May Osborne, Lucy Windsor, Sarah Randall, Alma Downing, Kathleen Simpson, Jan Robinson, Emma and Rusha Wesley and Mrs. R. W. Wilt.

Miss Mamie Wilt wore pink chiffon with wreaths of pink rosebuds. Miss Etter Wilt was in white silk marquisette. Miss Hughes wore pink crepe embroidered in pink. Mrs. Wilt wore black lace with a corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley.

About 150 guests were present.

For Miss Arnold.

A heart dice party, at which Mrs. Charles A. Forrest entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Gordon Street, was for her young niece, Mary Ella Arnold. A profusion of daisies and gladioli formed the decoration of the attractive reception rooms, where the six tables were placed.

Trophies for top score and consolation were a dainty white fan, won by Virginia Collier, and a silver vanity box, cut by Elizabeth Wheeler. Guest of honor was presented with silk stockings. Punch was served by Martha Irwin and Elizabeth Merrideth. Guests were: Fay Spink, Marjorie Kurfees, Eva Stewart, Mary Nichols, Marie Colcord, Sara Colcord, Frances Stokes, Mary Brittain, Maude Foster, Lucile Price, Caroline Vickers, Kathryn Vickers, Catherine Hackett, Lois Verner, Annabeth Smith, Margaret White, Grace Cook, Marie Lester, Elizabeth Wheeler, Lucile Trimble, Cecil Trimble, Mary Tiller, Elizabeth Cofield, Helene Stewart and Virginia Collier.

For Miss Pearl Mobley.

Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys was hostess at a linen shower Thursday afternoon for Miss Pearl Mobley, a bride-elect.

In a game of heart-dice Miss Bernice Scott won a fan for top score, Miss Lillian Brooks received a picture as consolation, and Miss Mobley was presented with a hand-embroidered collar.

Those invited to meet Miss Mobley were Misses Lillian Brooks, Bernice Scott, Bernice Denton, Frances Lazear, Celia Hiers, Curd, Dora Hiers, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. M. H. Chandler, Mrs. A. T. Vandiver and Mrs. William L. Scott.

Mrs. Max Epstein gave a box party at the Forsyth Saturday afternoon for Miss Mobley. Guests were Misses Lillian Brooks, Dora Hiers, Frances Lazear, Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Joseph Lazear and Mrs. Sara Lazear.

Child's Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given for Frederick Lindley Beers, Jr. Pink sweetpeas were used as decorations. The pink birthday cake with its one candle, surrounded by pink sweetpeas, formed the centerpiece of the table. Pink ices and cakes were served, and at each place a tiny baby basket of pink mints decorated with sweetpeas was given as a favor.

Piano Recital.

Pupils of Mrs. Lillian Woodberry Johnson gave a piano recital at the music studio. Program numbers showed a wide range of style and selection. Mrs. Johnson received hearty congratulations.

Those taking part in the recital were Misses Margaret Snow, Sarah Snow, Leone Spinks, Louise Granade, Sarah Smith, Lillian Connor, Cecil Garrett, Jessie Lea Davenport, Josephine Smith, Maud Goodwin, Edith London, Annie Rose Kenimer, Mary Kenimer, Ruth Walker, Montine Jones, Mattie Lou Crenshaw, Florence Green, Lucile Little, Bessie Sorrow, Grace Davis, Lucy Swann, Minnie Pickler, Carrie Lee Featherstone.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Mr. and Mrs. David Patman Daniell announce a change in the plans of the marriage of their daughter, Vera Belle, to Mr. Homer Leon Wilson. The wedding will take place at Collins' Memorial Church, Bolton, Ga., at 6 p. m., June 19. It was previously planned at the home of the bride's parents in Bolton.

For Miss Daniell.

Misses Claudia and Bertha Hudson entertained with a shower for Miss Vera Daniell, a June bride-elect. Sweetpeas decorated the living and reception rooms. The prize was won by Miss Emmee Branham. The bride was presented with silk hose.

Those present were Miss Vera Daniell, Miss Grace Bell, Miss Ruth Gable, Miss Margaret Berge, Miss Montine Byrd, Misses Lucy and Susie Johnson, Misses Mary and Bertha Heins, Miss Ethel Rutherford, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Walker, Mrs. Lamar Ray, Misses Clara and Milly Loughry, Mrs. Gordon Stowers, Miss Nettie Summerlin, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, Miss Lilly Mae Adams, Misses Cassie and Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Emmee Branham, Miss Fae Bancroft and Miss Pearl Gary.

Miss Richardson's Recital.

A piano recital was given by Miss Kate Richardson Friday evening. Miss Richardson is a graduate of Miss Evelyn Jackson's school of music. She will receive her diploma at the closing recital Tuesday evening. Her program follows:

Sonata in C sharp minor, Beethoven.

(a) Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; (b) Prelude in D, Chopin; (c) "On the Mountains," Grieg.

Polonaise, Moszkowski.

(a) Gondolerie, Liszt; (b) Nachstucke, Schumann; (c) Silver Spring, Mason.

Rhapsodie, No. 2, Liszt.

Rondo, Chopin.

Owens-Hall.

The initial social event of the week and one in which is centered the interest of a host of friends will be the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward Buckinham Hall, of Morristown, N. J., Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

On account of illness in the bride's family the invitations to the church ceremony have been recalled and the ceremony will take place instead at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., and New York.

For Miss Buckner.

Miss Margaret Northen will entertain several young people at Highland Farm, the country place of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Northen, one afternoon this week for Miss Buckner.

Farmer's Wife Ends Life With a Pistol

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

Ship Limps on, Side Patched With Canvas

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—The steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth, a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

"September Morn"

HAND-PAINTED water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," fill one window of the Cole Book Company, and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth Avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterward Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the East to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde-haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

AFTER I get thru with this book of verses, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I want you to read it too. I paid a dollar & a half for it, Ma sed, & considering the fack that it is the first work of a new poet, I think I got it very cheep.

I doant think the first work of any poet is worth a dollar & a half, Pa sed. There was a time, Pa sed, wen I wud have paid almost any price for a good book, but owing to the present high cost of living things is different. The way I look at it now, Pa sed, a dollar & a half may not be much, but it is fifteen cool glasses of lager or five pounds of good substanshul steak. Who is the young nut that they are calling a new poet? sed Pa.

His name is Orland La Tosca, sed Ma. His hoam is in Californy & he nevver went to a college or eeven a high school. Him & his parents lived out among the redwood trees, Ma sed, & they was too poor to give him much educashun. But the boy cuddent be stopped. His Wunderful geenyus asserted itself wen he was only sixteen. Just lissen to this, one of his vary first poems. It is called Sunrise, & I think it is simply divine Lissen:

First comes a flush of pink so nearly white
That color seems a hint alone. Then comes
A bolder tint, as though the god of Dawn
Were flushing with some ungovernable rage,
A dew-damp bird sings in a gnarled tree
And then the morning dawns all glorified.

It was one of the vary first things, sed Ma. I shud think his parents wud be vary proud to have such a boy.

Oh, I doant know, sed Pa. I am a whole lot prouder of little Bobbie than I wud be of any almost-poet. I doant think much of the piece you jest red, sed Pa. "Dew-damp bird," sed Pa. Ha, Ha, that must have been sum bird. I have heard of cold birds and hot birds, Pa sed, & I have heard of wise birds & gay birds, but I doant think I wud know what to say to a dew-damp bird if I was interduced to one.

Oh, doant try to be cunning, sed Ma. You know rite down in yure heart that the poem I jest red to you is sure to be immortal.

Immortal rats, sed Pa. It is nothing but a bunch of junk. I guess thare must have been at leest ten thousand poems ritten about sunrise, sed Pa, moast of them by peepul that dident know enuff to get up in time to see a regular sunrise. & all of them poems sed the saim thing, sed Pa, about the first tint of dawn steeling into the sky & about a bird singing. Why can't a bird sing onst in a while without a poet beeing its press agent, Pa sed. Reed me sum moar of those dethless poems, sed Pa, I want to git a hed ake.

Then listen to this dainty littel love ballad, sed Ma.

Arabella, Arabella,
Tripping lightly through the meadow
Where the sunset throws its shadow,

Chapeau a la Parisienne

Three Models That You Can Copy

Mlle. Marcelle Praince.

By Olivette.

TO-DAY we are showing you three hats that express the latest manifestation of "le dernier cri" from Paris. The hats are worn by three charming French actresses, and are quite the latest thing from one of the smartest of the smart French hat shops.

Mlle. Marcelle Praince, of the "Varietes," shows us the new idea called the "cabriolet dip," and at the short brimmed side her hat does resemble the bowler with down drooping brim worn by the cabby of Paris. The brim rolls up a bit at the right. The model was bound at the edge with cerise satin ribbon and the crown is covered with a checker board made of interwoven cerise and white satin ribbon. A veil of soft white shadow weave adds a softening touch to this simple but fetching model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW CAN I TELL?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 19. A young man who calls at our office claims he loves me. He also asked me to write to him.

Please advise me whether he is serious about it. ANXIOUS.

My dear, you ask a question impossible for me to answer. If he is serious or not, you must learn for yourself. Watch him carefully for a few months, and keep a close guard on your heart while doing it.

IT WILL IN TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and in love with a man two years my senior. He has but one bad habit and that is smoking cigarettes. Do you think I should let this interfere with true love? J. D. E.

A man of 20 who is an inveterate cigarette smoker is not worth any woman's love, and she invites unhappiness by associating her life with his.

The habit will kill your love in time. Why not choose a quick death for your love now?

I AM SURE OF IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young lady, and when I tell her of my love she says that she loves me also, but she is constantly teasing me, and when I tell how she hurts my feelings, she just laughs and teases all the more. Do you think she cares for me? I have reason to think so, because she never keeps company with other boys. A. W.

She teases you, a sign of love; she never keeps company with others; another proof. My dear young man, what more do you ask?

YES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and engaged to a wealthy financier, but have heard that he is dissipated. There is no love between us. Should I give up position and wealth for love? NOVENA.

Love is worth every sacrifice, and in your case there would be no sacrifice, since there could be no happiness with a man who is dissipated, and no position and wealth if the dissipation lasts long.

SHE IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and draw a salary of $12 per week, with promise of an increase. I have been in love with a girl of my age for three years, but she has shown little affection until, lately, I proposed to her, but she said: "We are too young," and had better wait. L. J. A.

The girl has exceptionally good sense. If your age were right, your salary isn't. Do as the girl suggests, and some day you will realize what a great debt of gratitude you owe her.

LAST SENTENCE EXPLAINS IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, whom I have known for one year. I have every reason to believe she loves me also. Is it proper for her to let me kiss her when I arrive or when I leave her house? She has consented at times; at others she refuses. To what do you attribute this? It is understood between us that it is only a kiss of friendship. WARREN.

The kiss of friendship is not for those of opposite sexes. Tell her of your love, ask her to marry you, and if she consents you will have a right to ask for her kisses, and they will not be refused.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, "for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put is mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whisky, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't yer?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Like an Oyster.

Cain might have answered, "None of your damned business," but he didn't. He simply said:

"Some friends of mine came up from Atlanta to spend a few weeks in their summer camp and I just came up, too; that's all. Let's have another drink."

They drank silently. Cain spoke again.

"I asked you awhile ago where you came from. I take it you live around here somewhere. If you live on my property you can continue to do so for all of me. I only built this shack to have a place as headquarters to hunt and fish. I have never used it before and I don't believe I ever will use it again.

The stranger made no offer of thanks, but accepted another invitation to drink. He was not at all talkative, and the more Cain saw of him the less inclined he was to ask questions concerning his identity. He did venture one question. It was:

"Is your family up here with you?"

The mountaineer (and this word probably describes him best of all) arose abruptly from his chair without making answer. It was evidently not his day for answering questions from any man he did not know. They drank again, standing, and then Cain went into the shack and returned with the stranger to the edge of the road, which was only a few rods away, and, arriving there, he suddenly asked:

A Proposition.

"Do you want to make some money?"

There are few persons in the world who will not reply "yes" to this question. The mountaineer was not one of them. He intimated that he might be induced to make some. With that as a basis to work on, Cain engaged the stranger in earnest conversation for more than half an hour. Dusk settled and night came on ere they parted. The mountaineer disappeared in the darkness and Cain returned to the shack, where his man had a meal prepared for him.

Early next morning Cain returned to Atlanta, his man driving the car to Pew Creek. It was left there to be shipped later in the day by freight. In Atlanta the broken bones in Cain's right hand were set and the member put in a splint. Ten days later he went to the mountains again, but instead of taking a train for Pew Creek, he took the Knoxville line and landed at a station on what might be called the eastern side of the mountains. There he procured a horse and saddle and rode ten miles in a westerly direction, uphill all the way. When he reached a point where a huge knob of granite stuck up out of the ground like an inverted tin basin, he dismounted and walked directly into the woods on the opposite side of the road. A hundred yards in he stopped beside a massive oak tree.

Presently four men appeared, one of whom Cain recognized as the black-bearded mountaineer he had entertained at his shack. The others were dressed in the same kind of garb.

"Are you ready to do business?" demanded Cain.

Without more words, Cain drew a leather case from his pocket and counted out a sum of money to the four men. At that instant Cain became possessed of the fear that he might not be allowed to depart. But nothing of the sort happened. The four men received the money and disappeared in the forest.

CHAPTER XXXI.

GORDON KELLY was at the bridge a full hour ahead of time. Mildred had said 3 o'clock, but as early as 1 o'clock he had arrayed himself in a suit of light summer flannels (it was now early in the month of June), and after trying to kill time around the house he had, in his impatience, jumped into his automobile and rode to the meeting place.

The minutes that followed seemed ages to him. There was a sharp bend in the road, just before it reached the bridge, in the direction Mildred must come, and he had to trust to his ear rather than his eye to detect the approach of a vehicle. At last he heard a sound that he knew was made by the little runabout. When the car came in sight he was standing on the bridge. Mildred saw him, and raised a hand from the wheel she waved a gay salute. Gordon lifted his cap in answering greeting, but he had faced the crowd and the tumult and the opposing pitcher in the crisis of that last game in Atlanta with less trepidation than he faced the oncoming automobile.

Mildred stopped the runabout close to Gordon's car, switched off the magneto, put the lever in neutral and applied the emergency brake with business-like precision. Then, turning her head toward the young man, she favored him with a beaming smile and said:

"Here I am on time, Mr. Gordon Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly Again!"

At these words a look of dejection came into Gordon's face.

"Mr. Kelly again! I suppose as long as you call me Mr. Kelly I will have to call you Miss Deery, and I am dying to call you——"

"Mr. Bud, then, if you like that name better," said Mildred, with a little toss of her head.

Gordon smiled and held out his hand. She placed her fingers in it and jumped lightly to the ground.

"That certainly has a more familiar sound, but I would much prefer to have you call me Gordon," he said.

Mildred faced him squarely.

"But I want to know about this Mr. Bud and this Mr. Gordon Kelly business. Why is there such a mystery over it?"

"There's no mystery that cannot be very easily solved," replied Gordon. "Let us walk over to that big oak, where it is cool and shady, and I will tell you all about it."

They walked slowly and silently side by side until they stood beneath the spreading branches of the huge tree. At their feet flowed the purling brook. Gordon indicated a place where they might rest, but Mildred shook her head.

"Before we get too comfortable I want to know about Mr. Bud, or Mr. Kelly, or whatever his name is," she said.

Just a Nickname.

"That is the simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Bud is a nickname my father gave me. My mother also grew into the habit of calling me Bud. The people around the place never heard me called by any other name and naturally they addressed me as Mr. Bud."

Mildred let her eyes fall to the ground and began toying with the leaves with the toe of her shoe.

"I can readily understand that," she said, "but what I cannot understand is that no one in your home knows who Gordon Kelly is. When Elmer called your house on the telephone the other day your colored boy, Steve, said there was no Mr. Gordon Kelly there, no Mr. Kelly and no Mr. Gordon there. And when I called you this morning the person who answered the telephone said the same thing."

"That, too," is easily explained," declared Gordon. His face became very serious. "I meant to have told you. It has been on my mind ever since we met under the bridge over there. I—I—I will tell you now."

But he hesitated. Mildred brought her eyes to bear on his. He was looking off in the distance.

"Well" she said, quietly.

Gordon stooped and picked a twig from the ground. He broke it in small pieces and tossed them one by one into the rippling brook. Still he did not answer. Mildred, who had not taken her eyes off his face, saw the blood suddenly paint it crimson and she felt herself trembling slightly. Gordon turned his face toward hers and their eyes met.

They're Engaged.

"Mildred," he said, and his voice was hoarse and passionate, "God knows there is nothing to conceal and I want to tell you all about myself and my life. But there is something I want to tell you first. I MUST tell it to you first. It is that I love you, Mildred. Oh, how I love you! That is all I can say now; say it over and over again. From the very first day, Mildred. From the very instant you put your hand in mine and the rain beat down on us. How I love you! Will you take me, Mildred?" His blue-gray eyes were humid now and he, too, was trembling.

"You know it, Gordon," she murmured.

Their lips met and then her head nestled against his breast and she sighed contentedly. The merry brook raced on, the sun shone kind, a lazy breeze played with a stray wisp of her hair. She felt a strange peacefulness creep over her as she rested in his arms.

"Honeybunch," she repeated raising her head, "Oh, Gordon, what a sweet name you have for me. Where did you find it?"

"My mother called me that when I was a little boy. My mother, Mildred, was the sweetest woman, next to you, that ever breathed."

"She must have been, dear heart. And you will tell me all about her when the time comes."

Mildred gently released herself from Gordon's embrace and sat down on the ground. He threw himself by her side as close as he could get, reclining on his elbow. She gently stroked his hair.

What the Tease Said.

"Do you know what that little tease, Elmer, said to me when I left him to-day?" she asked.

"I never could guess," he replied, looking up in her eyes.

"He said"—Mildred leaned over and whispered the rest, blushing furiously.

"Mildred, you are certainly the sweetest girl in the world to tell me that. Why, the little beggar is quicker than I am."

"He has been with me more than you have, dear. He is a bright lad. In this case I think he was quicker than I was myself."

And so the talk of these two happy young people went on and on. The shadows lengthened and the sun sank behind the hills before they realized it.

"Oh, I must be going, Gordon; they'll think I'm lost or that something has happened to me," exclaimed Mildred springing to her feet.

"Something has happened to you, honeybunch and something has happened to me to make me the happiest man in the world."

"You are right, Gordon; something has happened and I am very, very happy."

They were walking toward the bridge when Mildred stopped suddenly.

"Oh Gordon, I want you to take me home in your car. I want to ride right next to you on the front seat. But if we do that what will become of the runabout?"

"Don't worry about that, sweetheart; come with me," and he led her along the edge of the brook until they came to the telephone in its box fastened to the tree.

"Steve," said Gordon as soon as his ring was answered, "take a car out of the garage, put a rope in it, bring Mose along with you and come down to the bridge. You will find a runabout there. I want you to tow it to Miss Deery's bungalow. Do you know where it is?"

"Yes, Mr. Bud."

"All right; hurry it along!"

"You are a regular Aladdin with his wonderful lamp, Gordon," said Mildred, slipping her arm through his. "I am just dying to see all that lies beyond those two great granite pillars."

"And I'm just crazy to have you see it all, sweetheart, for it's all yours now, and I hope you'll like it. I have lots to show you and lots to tell you. But I did want to tell you something else first."

"I want you to, Gordon."

With her head resting on his arm, they drove to her mountain home, he at the wheel. He had to switch on the electric headlights before they reached it. When they were within a few feet of their destination she made him stop the car.

"Quick," she whispered, "they can't see us behind the headlights." He folded her in his embrace.

"No more Mr. Kelly?" he said.

"No more Mr. Kelly," she replied.

"No more Mr. Bud?"

"No more Mr. Bud."

"Always Gordon?"

"Always Gordon," she repeated, softly.

"Hey!" yelled the voice of Elmer in the distance. "Breakaway there!"

YOU read the twenty-five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 26th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE telephone line from Pew Creek to Atlanta earned more money in tolls that night than it had earned in the previous six months. Mildred called up her mother and talked with her more than half an hour. This is the way she began:

"Oh, mother, won't you please come up to the mountains right away?—Hi? No indeed: I'm feeling simply great, but there's lots of things I want to tell you. . . . Oh, no; not over the telephone. . . . Of course not, mother dear. I am perfectly happy and contented up here, except that you are not with me and the way I feel to-night I never want to go back to Atlanta again. But you must come up right away."

And so on and so on. But not once in their long talk did Mildred mention Gordon Kelly's name to her mother. She wanted to hold her supreme secret all to herself, at least until her mother arrived. Nor did she tell of the trouble she had with Forrest Cain, deeming that a matter that would better not be spread on a public telephone wire. In the end, Mrs. Deery promised to come up for a few days, as she, too, needed rest after her labors in the household of Cain's sister.

Gordon Kelly called up Judge Barbee as soon as he reached home. He could not get him at his office, but reached him at his home. This is what he said:

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource.

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bid old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this ungodly man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passion, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real life, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight. On the train from Liverpool to London she meets a woman who directs her to a semi-fashionable boarding house. A great hue and cry is being raised over her disappearance. She is feeling somewhat secure, when suddenly Mildred Bankes, of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," finds her. Mary confesses all to her and begs for her help.

IF I had not been so wildly agitated I should have known that this was the wrong way with Mildred, and it was not until I had said it all in a rush of whispered words that I saw her eyes fixed on me as if they were about to start from their sockets.

"But, my dear, dear child," she said, "this is worse and worse. Your father and your husband may have done wrong, but you have done wrong, too. Don't you see you have?"

I did not tell her that I had thought of all that before and did not believe any longer that God would punish me for breaking a bond I had been forced to make. But when she was about to rise, saying that, after all it would be a good thing to send me home before I had time to join my life to his—whoever he was—who had led me to forget my duty as a wife, I held her trembling hands and whispered, "Wait, Mildred. There is something I have not told you even yet."

"What is it?" she asked, but already I could see that she knew what I was going to say.

"Mildred," I said, "if I ran away from my husband it was not merely because I loved somebody else, but because"——

I could not say it. Do what I would I could not. But holy women like Mildred, who spend their lives among the lost ones, have a way of reading a woman's heart when it is in trouble, and Mildred read mine.

"Do you mean that . . . that there are consequences . . . going to be?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"Does your husband know?"

"Yes."

"And your father?"

"No."

Mildred drew her hand away from me and crossed herself and said beneath her breath, "O Mother of God!"

I felt more humbled than I had ever been before, but after a while I said: "Now you see why I can never go back. And you will save me, will you not?"

There was silence for some moments. Mildred had drawn back in her chair as if an evil spirit had passed between us. But at length she said, "It is not for me to judge you, Mary. But the gentlemen will come up soon to know if you are the Mary O'Neill whom I knew at the Sacred Heart, and what am I to say to them?"

"Say no," I cried. "Why shouldn't you? They'll never know anything to the contrary. Nobody will know."

"Nobody?"

I knew what Mildred meant, and in my shame and confusion I tried to excuse myself by telling her who the other woman was.

"It is Alma," I said.

"Alma? Alma Lier?"

"Yes."

She Tells Mildred All About Martin.

And then I told her how Alma had come back into my life, how she had tortured and tempted me, and was now trying to persuade my husband, who was a Protestant, to divorce me that she might take my place.

And then I spoke of Martin again—I could not help it—saying that the shame which Alma would bring on him would be a greater grief to me than anything else that could befall me in this world.

"If you only knew who he is," I said, "and the honor he is held in you would know that I would rather die a thousand deaths than that any disgrace should fall on him through me."

I coud see that Mildred was deeply moved at this, and, though I did not intend to play upon her feelings, yet in the selfishnes of my great love I could not help doing so.

"You were the first of my girl friends, Mildred, the very first. Don't you remember the morning after I arrived at school? They had torn me away from my mother, and I was so little and lonely, but you were so sweet and kind. You took me into church for my first visitation and then into the garden for my first rosary—don't you remember it?"

Mildred had closed her eyes. Her face was becoming very white.

"And then don't you remember the day the news came that my mother was very ill, and I was to go home? You came to see me off at the station, and don't you remember what you said when we were sitting in the train? You said we might never meet again, because our circumstances would be so different. You didn't think we should meet like this, did you?"

Mildred's face was growing deadly white.

"My darling mother died. She was all I had in the world, and I was all she had, and when she was gone there was no place for me in my father's house, so I was sent back to school. But the Reverend Mother was very kind to me, and the end of it was that I wished to become a nun. Yes, indeed, and never so much as on the day you took your vows."

Mildred's eyes were still closed, but her eyelids were fluttering, and she was breathing audibly.

"How well I remember it? The sweet summer morning and the snow-white sunshine, and the white flowers and the white chapel of the Little Sisters, and then you, dressed as a bride, in your white gown and long white veil. I cried all through the ceremony. And if my father had not come for me then, perhaps, I should have been a nun like you now."

Her Passionate Appeal for Aid.

Mildred's lips were moving. I was sure she was praying to our Lady for strength to resist my pleading, yet that only made me plead the harder.

"But God knows best what our hearts are made for," I said. "He knows that mine was made for love. And though you may not think it, I know God knows that he who is away is my real husband—not the one they married me to. You will not separate us, will you? All our happiness—his and mine—is in your hands. You will save us, will you not?"

Some time passed before Mildred spoke. It may have been only a few moments, but it seemed to me like an eternity. I did not know then that Mildred was reluctant to extinguish the last spark of hope in me. At length she said, "Mary, you don't know what you are asking me to do. When I took my vows I promised to speak the truth under all circumstances, no matter what the consequences, as surely as I should answer to God at the great Day of Judgment. Yet you wish me to lie. How can I? How can I? Remember my vows, my duty."

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but, no! Duty—always duty! Love indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blazing fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both her hands covering her face and tears trickling through her fingers onto the linen of her habit.

The Final Moment and a Decision.

That conquered me in a moment.

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dare not do that, now, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, Sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me. . . . and that when he comes home he will find . . ." But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

During the silence that followed we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair, and stood with her back to the fireplace.

There was a knock at my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but my landlady came into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These gentlemen are making an examination of the house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching intently. The men made a pretense of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak, "Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence, and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her!—she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window.

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

"My dear child," said the mother, "not to know who the young lady is, where she comes from, why she is here, and whether she is married or single or a widow!—it is quite impossible to take her in."

The Loss of the Scotia.

I DID not know then, and it seems unnecessary to say now, why my father gave up the search for me in London. He did so, and from the day the milliner's clew failed him I moved about freely.

Then, from the sense of being watched I passed into that of being lost.

Sister Mildred was my only friend in London, but she was practically cut off from me. The Little Sisters had fixed her up (in the interests of her work among the lost ones) in a tiny flat at the top of a lofty building near to Piccadilly, where her lighted widow always reminded me of a lighthouse on the edge of a dangerous reef. But in giving me her address she warned me not to come to her except in case of urgent need, partly because further intercourse might discredit her denial, and partly because it would not be good for me to be called one of Sister Mildred's girls."

Oh, the awful loneliness of London!

I thought I could have felt at home in the smallest village, for though nobody had spoken to me there, I should have come to know everybody, while in London I had no time to know anybody, for the ever-flowing tides of human faces flashed past me and were lost in a moment like waves under the moon at sea.

Others just as friendless have wandered in the streets of the big city. I knew I was not the first, and I am sure I have not been the last to find London the most solitary place in the world. But I really and truly think there was one day of the week when, from causes peculiar to my situation, my loneliness must have been deeper than that of the most friendless refugee.

Nearly every boarder in our boarding house used to receive once a week or once a month a letter containing a remittance from some unknown source, with which he paid his landlady and discharged all his other obligations.

I had no such letter to receive, so to keep up the character I had not made but had allowed myself to maintain (of being a captain's wife) I used to go out once a week under pretense of calling at a shipping office to draw part of my husband's pay.

In my childish ignorance of the habits of business people I selected Saturday afternoon for this purpose, and in my fear of encountering my husband, or my husband's friends in the West End streets, I chose the less conspicuous thoroughfares at the other side of the river.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, you see," he went on in his heavy voice, yet very kindly, and with a sort of massive playfulness in his manner, "no one has hurt you—not even a little bit, after all. Now, you run right home to your mother."

The girl did not need to be told twice. On the instant, she sprang up joyously, and started toward the door, with a final ravishing smile for the pleased official at the desk.

"I'll go just as fast as ever I can," the musical voice made assurance blithely.

"Give my compliments to your father," Burke requested, courteously. "And tell him I'm sorry I frightened you."

"I will, Commissioner," she promised, with an arch smile. "And I know papa will be so grateful to you for all your kindness to me!"

It was at this critical moment that Cassidy entered from the opposite side of the office. As his eyes fell on the girl at the door across from him, his stolid face lighted in a grin. And in that same instant of recognition between the two the color went out of the girl's face. The little red lips snapped together in a line of supreme disgust against this vicissitude of fate after all her maneuverings in the face of the enemy. She stood motionless in wordless dismay, impotent before this disaster forced on her by untoward chance.

"Hello, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes started disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the ——t luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy and then back to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind. "She's little Aggie Lynch—con woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time in Burnsing."

With this succint narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience, the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly, rose from his chair, and walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely, then of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, 'kid,' you're a beaut'!"

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if, in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle
The Only Safe Hair Remover

Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. De Miracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a disagreeable odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad." Leach said. "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the inadvisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads sent together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

* * *

MOST OF THE EXPECTED nervous prostration in connection with the managerial performance of J. Evers seems to be on the side of his opponents.

* * *

IT MAY BE CONFIDENTLY predicted that Johnny Kilbane will soon lose the featherweight title. He insists on fighting somebody now and then, contrary to the basic law of modern ring champions.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Deming last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $350 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face.
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game.
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face.
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, June 16.—The Crackers triumphed over the Vols, 7 to 3 here this afternoon.

Tommy Long was the hero of the combat. His triple in the fourth cleared the bases and forced Fleharty to cover. Tommy also secured two other hits and stole two bases.

Gilbert Price twirled good ball for the locals.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Callahan grounded to Alperman, who made a great stop and threw the ex-Cracker out to Price. The latter covered first base. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley hit a scratch single through Smith and went out trying to steal second, Dunn to Alperman. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

SECOND INNING.

Perry was safe on Bisland's error of his grounder. Young grounded down the first base line and was tagged out by Price. Schwartz tripled to right and Perry tallied. Goalby bunted to Smith, who fielded the ball poorly, allowing Schwartz to score and Goalby to reach first. Gibson hit into a double play, Alperman to Agler. TWO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bailey singled to center. Smith walked. Bisland sacrificed, Perry to Goalby. Agler singled to left, scoring Bailey. Dunn grounded to Fleharty and Smith was out in a chase, Fleharty to Perry to Gibson to Perry. Agler went to third and Dunn to second on the out. Price walked, filling the bases. Long hit a weak pop to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Fleharty hit a Texas leaguer over short. Callahan singled to left and Fleharty went to second. Lindsey sacrificed, Dunn to Alperman. Daley grounded to Agler and Fleharty was caught at the plate to Dunn. Perry grounded to Bisland and was out to Agler. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

Welchonce out, Goalby to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Callahan. Bailey popped to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FOURTH INNING.

Young walked. Schwartz sacrificed to Agler. Goalby was hit by a pitched ball. Gibson grounded to Bisland and Goalby was out at second to Alperman. Fleharty flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith flied out to deep left field. Bisland singled past Schwartz. Agler singled to center and Bisland breezed down to second. Dunn grounded out, Perry to Schwartz, and Bisland went to third and Agler to second on the out. Price received a free pass, filling the bases. Long smashed out a triple to left, scoring Bisland, Agler and Price. Daley got his fingers on the ball after a great run, but was unable to hold it. Welchonce hammered a single past Goalby and Long registered. Alperman hit a single to right and Welchonce took second. When Young fumbled the ball Welchonce raced to third. At this juncture Fleharty was taken out and Dye went to the slab for Nashville. Bailey was out, Goalby to Schwartz. FOUR RUNS, FIVE HITS.

FIFTH INNING.

Callahan out, Price to Agler. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley walked and Perry popped to Bisland. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith was beaned. Bisland grounded to Schwartz, who made a fine stop, and retired the batter at first. Smith took second on the out. Agler fanned and Smith stole third. Dunn out, Lindsey to Schwartz. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SIXTH INNING.

Price fanned. Long beat out a grounder to Goalby. Welchonce flied to Callahan and Long swiped second. Alperman hit a Texas leaguer past Perry and Long raced home. Bailey fouled to Young, who made a sensational running catch. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Dye fanned. Callahan fanned, but Dunn dropped the third strike and Callahan took second on the error. Lindsey fanned. Daley out, Alperman to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Bisland was beaned. Agler fouled to Gibson. Dunn popped out to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Price bunted and was out, Perry to Schwartz. Long doubled to left and stole third. Welchonce fouled to Perry. Alperman doubled to left, scoring Long. Bailey walked. Smith grounded to Lindsey and Smith was forced at second to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

NINTH INNING.

Goalby popped to Long. Gibson doubled to left. Noyes, batting for Dye, singled to left, scoring Gibson. Callahan grounded to Bisland and Noyes was forced at second to Alperman. Lindsey walked. Daley out, Price to Agler. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

M'FARLAND PLANS TRIP TO EUROPE FOR FOLKS

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—Another big treat is in store for Packey McFarland's folks, and all at the fighter's expense. On Wednesday they sail from New York on the steamer Carpathia for Ireland, their native land, to be gone three months. All of this time, however, will not be spent in Ireland. London, Paris and Scotland will be some of the stops before they return to this country.

This is not the only treat Packey has given his folks. He purchased a home for them on Garfield Boulevard not so long ago and is allowing them the rent from one of his six-flat buildings. Packey plans to return to the ring shortly and has instructed his manager to get in touch with the various clubs.

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad

Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the liliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

Colt Hofer was 19 Saturday. As Colt has the smoke and all other pitching stuff, Pa Hill is excused for robbing the cradle.

All the Rabbits need is a little more pep in yelling. The noise helps with the fighting spirit.

Hyzer was released yesterday because he was minus the guts while at bat.

Ladies, no goo-goo eyes on Brown and Ker—they are married.

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

LEDOUX ARRIVES ON COAST; WILL MEET EDDIE CAMPI

Ledoux is matched to box Eddie Campi 20 rounds before the Pacific Athletic Club, at Vernon, a week from to-morrow night.

Johnny Dundee and Jack White, matched to box 20 rounds at Vernon to-morrow night, finished their training yesterday. Over 1,000 visitors saw Dundee finish his work with a whirlwind of boxing.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

GEORGIA tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, a branch of the A. A. U., have reinstated Hannes Kolehmainen, who was suspended Thursday for failing to send in a report of his expenses at a meet. The Finnish runner is now in Duluth, Minn.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dulled being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash or hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Shuptine Leads for Seat From Chatham

SAVANNAH, June 16.—Early indications are that Herman C. Shuptine will go to the Legislature as the Representative from Chatham County to succeed Pleasant A. Stovall, resigned. The morning vote was fairly heavy, J. J. Bauhan, the other candidate, is running a close second.

Shuptine is the administration candidate.

Count Goes to Work In New York Bank

NEW YORK, June 16.—Count Adolf VonBernstorff, son of the German Ambassador in Washington, is working in the banking firm of Speyer & Co. in Pine Street. He is studying finance in preparation for a diplomatic career.

FOUR DYING IN MINE BLAST.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited a keg of powder.

GENERAL BUYING BOOSTS COTTON

Old and New Crops Purchased Heavily on Bullish Report of Times-Democrat.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the initial levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report on the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

Memphis and some Wall Street houses were reported good buyers of the new crops. Spot people were noticeable buyers of the old crop. New Orleans was a good buyer, based on The Times-Democrat report.

Weather and crop advices were most favorable. The Memphis Commercial summary of the crop was bearish, but offering continued light and scattered.

Interests now seems to be centered on the consumption rather than crop news.

During the afternoon session the market was inflexible; prices recorded further gains, being 10 to 13 points over the opening quotations.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing a net gain of 14 to 24 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.10, August 12.01, October 11.47, January 11.41.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.30, August 12.01, October 11.50, January 11.52.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—This market was due to open 1½ points higher on August and ½ point higher on other positions, but opened quiet, at a net advance of 1 to 1½ points. At 12:15 p. m., the market was quiet but steady, at a net advance of 1½ to 2 points.

Spot cotton steady and in good demand at 2 points advance; middling 6.75d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 9,500 American; imports 15,000 bales, of which all were American.

At the close the market was firm with prices showing a net gain of 4½@7½ points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Weather conditions and changes over Sunday were distinctly favorable. Dry weather prevailed over most of the belt. The only precipitation of consequence occurred in South Texas, where it was needed. Minimum temperatures are 10 to 20 degrees higher than on Friday and are now entirely normal. Indications are for continuation of generally fair and warm weather, except in the coast districts of Louisiana and Texas, where it will be cloudy and possibly showery.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary for the week is very favorable. Other crop reports are mostly favorable.

The Liverpool market was about as due on the opening; spot sales continue large, 10,000 bales to-day, at 2 points higher. Our market showed strength this morning and advanced to 12.06 for August and 11.58 for October, principally owing to the renewed strength and activity of July in New York. The weekly weather report to-morrow is expected to be bullish, as it covers the spell of last week. New York says that the strained conditions in July dominate the market and a decline in new crops does not seem probable until the summer positions are liquidated.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 16.—New York seems inclined to work more to the bull side to-day, and, selling being scarce, no great volume of demand has been necessary to bring an advance. Weather over Sunday was ideal and crop accounts are good, but strength in summer months and fair demand in spot markets influences sentiment strongly. It is impossible to tell how far this swing will go, but short interest has been greatly reduced.

RENEWED SELLING PUTS STOCKS OFF

Transactions Attributed Mainly to Professionals — Reactionary Tendency Expected.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ⅛, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ¾. Pressure was directed against Union Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 100 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

Among the other losses were Reading ¾, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Great Northern preferred ½ and Atchison ⅛.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅞, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

After a few minutes of active trading the market began to waver and fractional losses were recovered in several of the leading issues. Union Pacific suffered the most, falling 1¼ to 145¼. Steel was off ¾ from the opening. Copper and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Canadian Pacific continued its downward movement, reaching 219, a fall of 1¾.

Southern Pacific was off 1¼. Other issues suffered slight losses.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—J. M. Anderson: "Some of the ring crowd were aggressive sellers on and after the opening and their sales found ready purchasers. It was evident that a lot of cotton was wanted. Memphis reported a good buyer of new crop; also some of the Wall Street houses. This started a wave of short covering and a rapid advance followed. After the first hour there seemed to be very little cotton for sale. The new crop option was much stronger than the old in the beginning, but spot people were noticeable buyers of old crops. Selling was scattered. The Times-Democrat was out with a bullish report, which brought some buying from New Orleans. However, Turner's report was bearish. Weather was favorable and private wires reported good conditions in some sections. The bears are very limited. Interests now seem to be entered on consumption, which, of course, must be recognized as the rise or fall, until there are further developments."

* * *

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

Memphis wires under date of June 14: "Reports received at the Cotton Exchange to-day say farmers in and around Kilmichael, Miss., are plowing up acres of cotton because the boll weevil has appeared in swarms."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.33d; good middling, 6.99d; middling, 6.75d; low middling, 6.59d; good ordinary, 6.23d; ordinary, 5.89d."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, generally clear and warmer."

* * *

So far as weather news is concerned, there is very little incentive to support the new crops.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, although local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion points to the folowing results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.
2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.
3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.
4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.
5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

Wheat—No. 2 red	97 @98
Corn—No. 2	62½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat closed strong around the best prices reached and at advances of 1¼@1½. The bull fever seemed to be more in evidence today than was the case during several of the strong sessions of last week. While there were rains in the spring wheat country, they were reported as inadequate, and where additional moisture is wanted and the weather was cloudy, it was reported late that it was clearing up. This was the case, especially at Grand Forks, N. D. Export clearances were 774,000 bushels and for the month of May were 11,151,000 bushels compared with 4,385,000 for a like period last year.

Corn closed with gains of 1½@1¾ and oats were up 2⅛@2¾.

Provisions were higher all around.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give us a little more easier tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

DRY GOODS REVIEW.

"Total sales in dry goods show a gain for the first two weeks in June in comparison with those of the corresponding period of a year ago. This is true both of our wholesale and retail. Current business through the mails and from the men on the road has kept up remarkably well following the preinventory sale and in view of the low temperature during the early part of the week. Collections continue better than normal.

"Our representatives traveling through the Southeastern States report very favorable crop prospects and good business is coming from that section.

"Much enthusiasm is apparent among merchants of the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States in consequence of good immediate retail business and the excellent outlook for abundant crops."

Receivership for Guarantee Trust Is Opposed by 600

Four hundred bondholders, representing $193,815, and 200 stockholders, representing 1,715 shares of the Guarantee Bank and Trust Company, petitioned the Superior Court Monday morning not to appoint a receivership for the company.

The case was reopened before Judge John T. Pendleton and will take three or four days before a decision is reached.

The petitioners asked that they be allowed to intervene as defendants in the litigation. Their attorneys are Rosser & Brandon, Napier, Wright & Wood and Tye, Peeples & Jordan.

Grocer Sprints When Attacked by Robbers

Joseph Franklin, a prominent wholesale grocer, was attacked by three footpads Sunday night.

Three negroes stepped in front of him, near his home at 151 Washington Street, and, pointing a pistol at his head, ordered him to hold up his hands. One reached for a diamond which Franklin wore in his shirt. Franklin caught him by the throat and bore him to the ground. Another negro pounced upon the grocer's back. He shook loose from this one and broke into a sprint, followed by three shots from the highwaymen.

Boxing Girl Makes Suitors Take Count

Miss Morrell, on board ship, challenged every suitor to a three-round bout in the gymnasium. Only one managed to get a draw.

One ardent suitor assured Miss Morrell he would not hurt her. One blow sent him down for the count.

Nun Killed in Auto; Joy Riders Blamed

FRESNO, CAL., June 16.—Police to-day were investigating the report that joy riders caused an auto accident in which Sister Alsoque, mother superior of St. Augustine's Academy, was killed. Sister Agnolia was seriously injured and two other Sisters and a Japanese chauffeur were slightly hurt.

It was reported that the joy-riding party forced the machine occupied by the Sisters into a ditch.

One-Man Filibuster To End Lobby Probe

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Owing to the effective one-man filibuster conducted in the Senate by Senator Jones, the investigation of the alleged "insidious" lobby will be terminated as soon as the tariff bill is introduced in the Senate. The presence of the three Democrats on the committee—Senators Overman, Walsh and Reed—may be required to maintain a quorum.

In the meantime the committee will have an opportunity to conclude the probe of the sugar and wool lobbies.

HEAD OF FARMER UNION PRAISES W. R. HEARST

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—"The Hearst newspapers have been steadfast friends of the Farmers' Union, and have given us invaluable assistance. The personal interest of Mr. Hearst and the splendid editorial and other help of John Temple Graves have done much to enable us to accomplish what we have done."

This was the assertion of Charles S. Barrett, of Union City, Ga., president of the great and rapidly growing Farmers' Union, who in ten years has become one of the most potent personalities in American life. Mr. Barrett was in Los Angeles Sunday. He will leave this evening for San Francisco, on his way to Basin, Wyo., and Bismarck, N. Dak., to attend farmers' conventions.

Mr. Barrett is the guiding genius of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which has 38,000 local lodges and 3,000,000 members.

Union Awakened Dixie.

"Our organization is built on the principle of education and co-operation among farmers," said Mr. Barrett yesterday. "The South was backward in agricultural development, but there has been a great awakening and the Farmers' Union, in many ways, has been the greatest financier in the change. The union was first mainly a Southern organization, but our greatest growth now is in the Middle West.

"The South has depended almost wholly on cotton. The union taught the farmers the necessity of growing other things; raising their own hay, grain and meat, and this diversity of production is one of the foundation stones of our new prosperity.

"My own State of Georgia was far down in the list of States, but so remarkable has been the progress made that the Government reports place it fourth in agricultural products now.

Educate the Farmers.

"We try to educate the farmers and then to bring them into co-operation in any direction feasible. We have not started many stores. In the South the lodges built and operate warehouses; in the West, packing plants and elevators.

"We do not run for office or nominate candidates. We have not a thing to do with partisan politics, but we retire a man now and then to private life just by way of example."

Columbus Ready for Red Men of Georgia

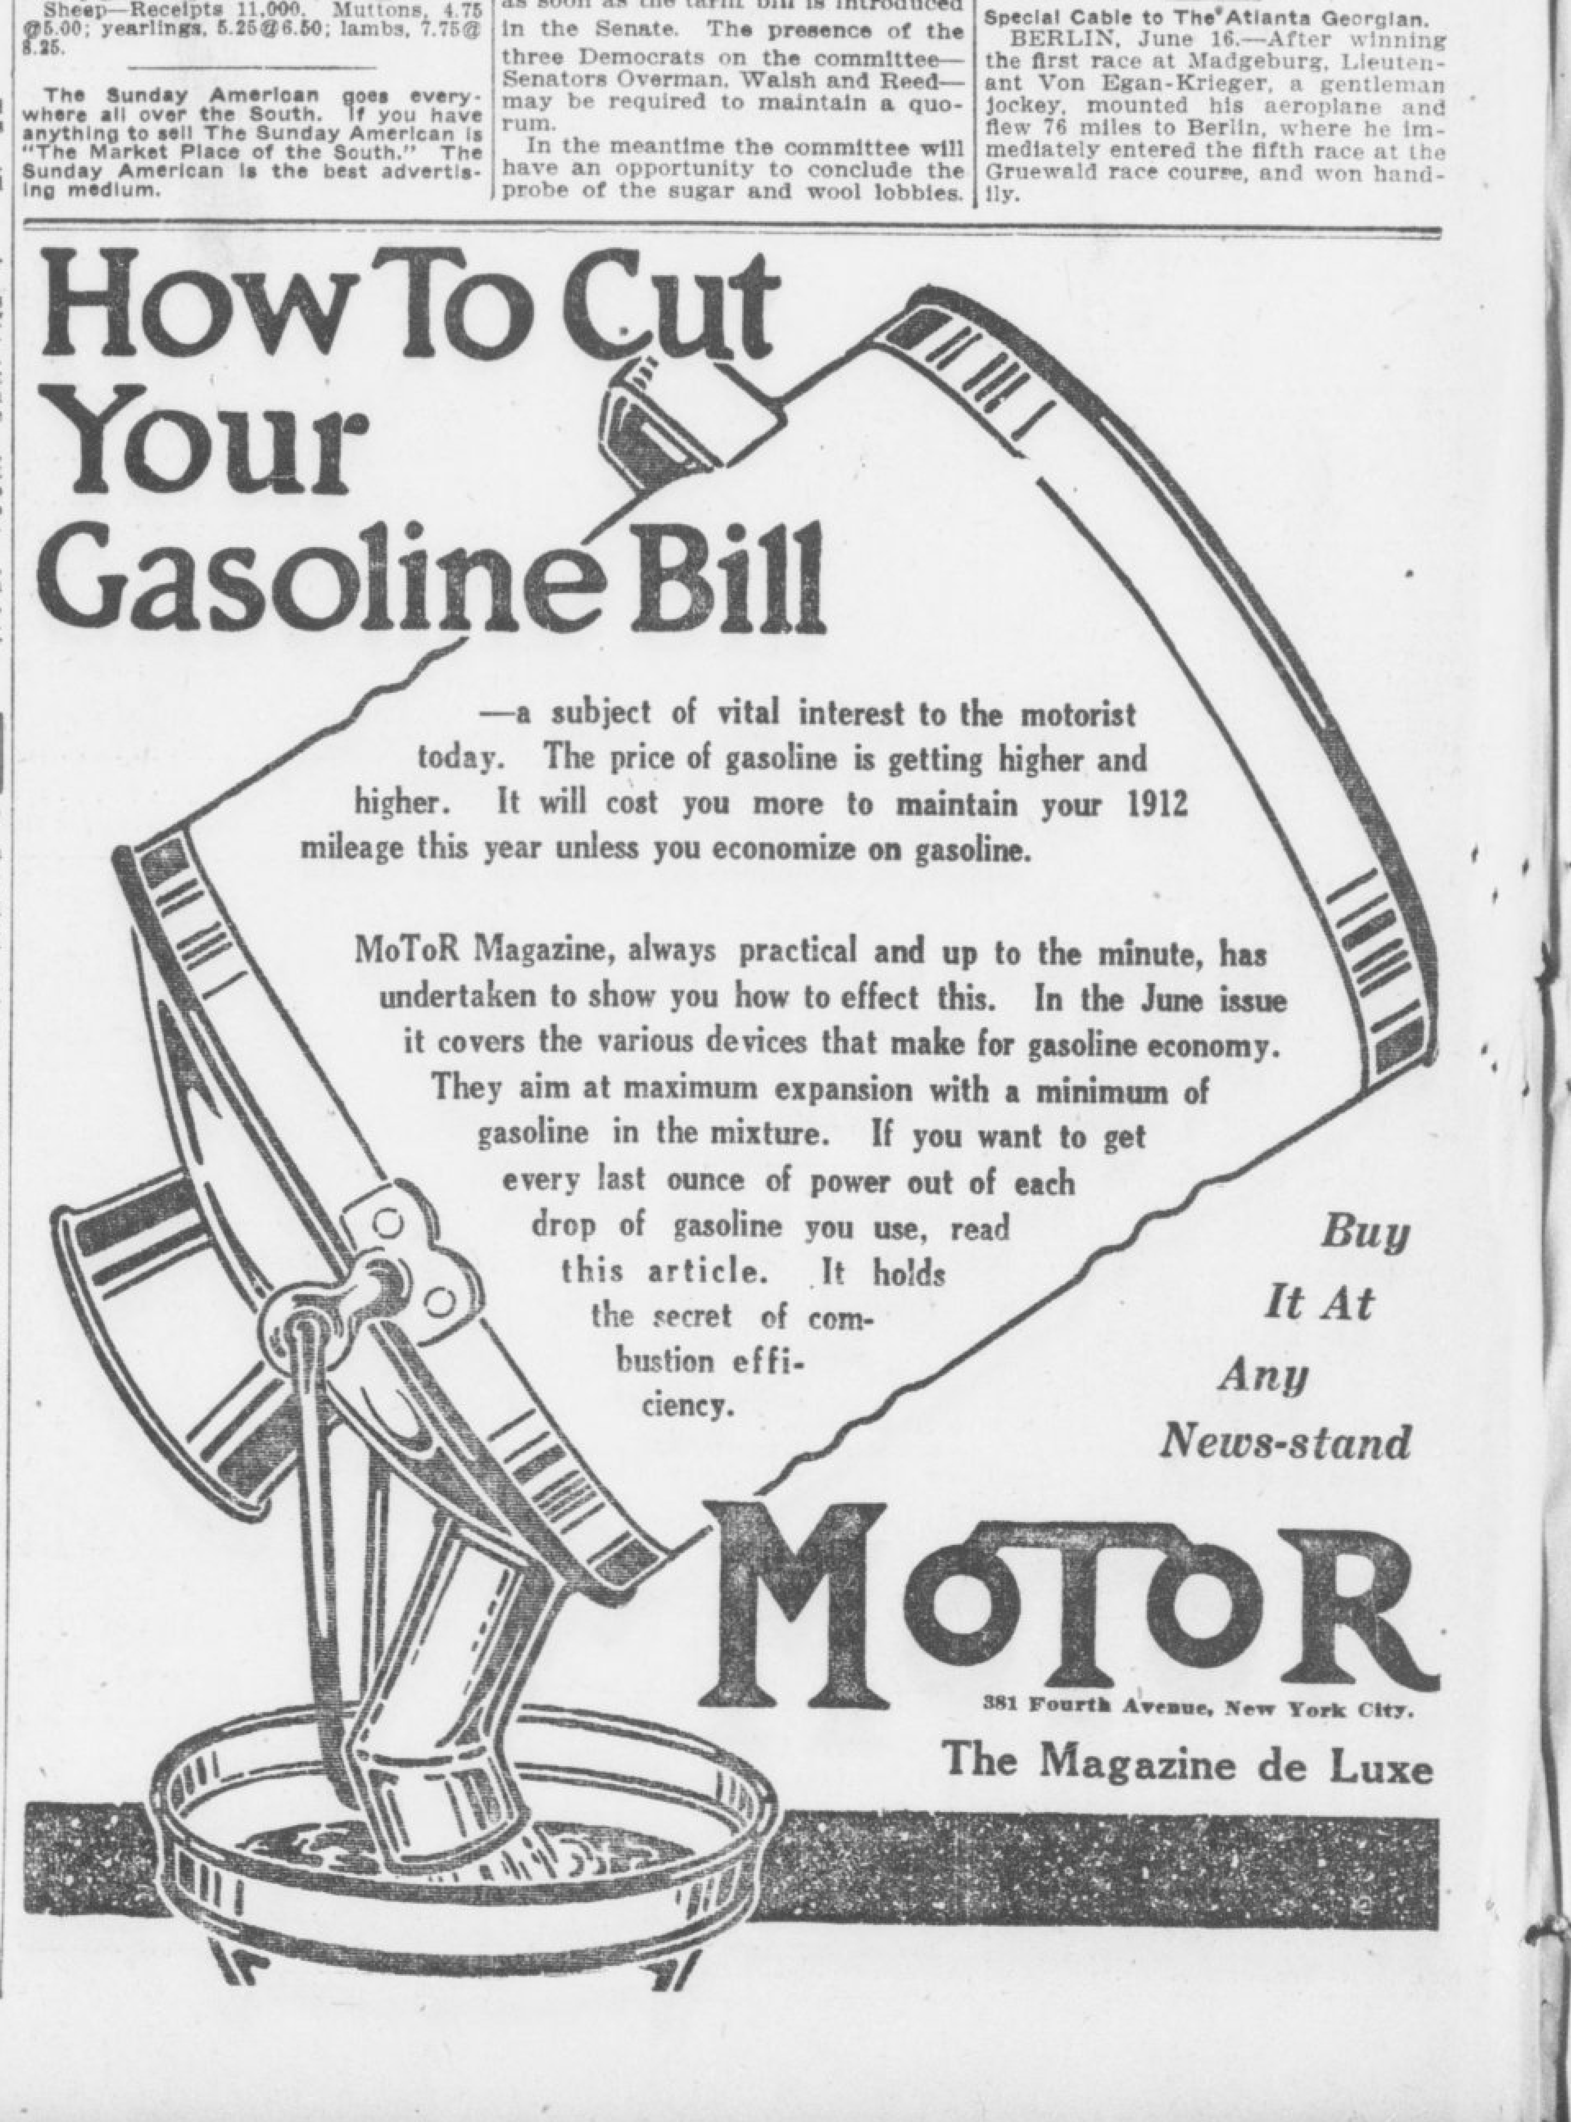
COLUMBUS, GA., June 16.—Columbus tribes of Red Men have completed all details for entertaining the Great Council of Georgia Red Men, which meets here Wednesday for a two-day session.

The first delegates are expected tonight to get work started for the opening on Wednesday. This is the eighth and probably the largest State gathering in Columbus this year.

Wins Race, Flies 76 Miles, Wins Another

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—After winning the first race at Madgeburg, Lieutenant Von Egan-Krieger, a gentleman jockey, mounted his aeroplane and flew 76 miles to Berlin, where he immediately entered the fifth race at the Gruewald race course, and won handily.



CREMATORY PUT UP TO COUNCIL BY MAYOR

In notifying Council of his approval of the June budget and the purchase of the $260,000 crematory, Mayor Woodward Monday "washed his hands" of that part of the old crematory contract providing a $100,000 electric power plant in connection with the incinerator.

The Mayor notified Council he would take no action whatever on the resolution of Alderman Nutting and Councilman Mason calling for an option from the Destructor Company on the electric feature. Because he took no action the resolution automatically goes into effect.

"I return the accompanying three resolutions passed at your session of June 2, 1913, without my signature of approval or disapproval.

"The whole subject matter contained in all three of the resolutions can be carried out by the framing of a contract with the Destructor Company incorporating the different matters contained in the resolutions.

"By careful reading of the different resolutions it will be noted that your honorable body has repeatedly mentioned the contract entered into in 1912, which the Supreme Court of this State has decided illegal and void and ordered an injunction against the further carrying on of the Destructor plant under the provisions of that contract. Under that condition of things, I feel that I am enjoined against any measure that may be looking to the fulfillment of that contract. All of the provisions specified in the different resolutions can be placed in a new contract to be entered into by your general body.

"In returning these papers to the General Council in this manner, I hope that my position is fully understood. While I do not believe that the city has received full benefit from this transaction, yet I do not feel disposed to interfere further if the new contract is so constructed as to give the city the benefit of all of the concessions enumerated."

Rites To Be Simple at Mrs. Bryan's Burial

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil War. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis, and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

OBITUARY.

J. J. Kaesser, 46 years old, died at his home, 32 West Peachtree Place, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was a lieutenant of Fire Company No. 3, and had been a member of the department 16 years. Surviving him are Mrs. Kaesser and a son, W. G. Kaesser. Funeral at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's funeral chapel, corner of Ivy and Baker Streets.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon. Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, 44 years old, of 34 Norcross Street, died at a private sanitarium at 9:30 o'clock Sunday night. The body was taken to-day to Keysville, Va. Mrs. Watkins is survived by her husband, Sam T. Watkins; four sons, Kirby J., Elmer O., Sam T., Jr., and Howard H. Watkins, and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Madden, of Selma, Ala.

M. D. Campbell, sixty-four years old, died at the residence, 9 Jennings Street, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by two sons, T. M. and J. F. Campbell, and four daughters, Mrs. H. K. Gordon, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jessie Campbell. Funeral from the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment at Greenwood.

Mrs. Sarah A. Martin, 44 years old, died at her home in Buckhead at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, H. T. Martin. Funeral at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from Barclay & Brandon's undertaking parlors. Interment at Atlanta Heights.

John H. Carr, the 8-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carr, of 315 West Third Street, died at the residence at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Funeral services were held from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 9:30 Monday morning. Interment at Sandy Springs.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious affairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prominent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

Militants Must Pay For Broken Windows

LONDON, June 16.—A judgment for $7,000 damages for window smashing was awarded to-day in the King's bench division against a number of leaders of militant suffragettes in favor of 93 westend merchants whose property suffered in suffrage raids.

Among the defendants in the case were Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Flora Drummond.

SOCIAL SURVEY WILL FOLLOW DIAGNOSIS

Shelby M. Harrison, director in the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, in an interview with The Georgian Monday outlined the work he and his two associates are doing in Atlanta by invitation of a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"We are making a preliminarydiagnosis and pathfinder's survey," he said, "and in our report to the committee we will make certain specific recommendations which probably will lead to a social survey. We are not making the social survey now."

Mr. Harrison and his two associates, Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter, are doctors of the body politic. They emphasize the fact they are not fault-finders. They go to a city, study sociological conditions from an entirely disinterested and unbiased angle and make a report. If the report makes the city or members of the city's sociological organizations see themselves as others see them, then they have accomplished their purpose. It is up to the city, then, to improve condtions and make the place a little better to live in.

"All Cities Have Problems."

"The last 25 years have brought many changes in social and personal relationships," Mr. Harrison said, outlining the basic principles behind the Sage foundation. "As cities grow, and factories come in, conditions change. The factories bring immigrants, and that brings new conditions. The entrance of women into industry and new methods of production all change conditions. I am just citing these as examples. Every advance and progress brings on changed conditions.

"Every change means a new problem. These problems are sociological. It is our business to diagnose these problems and make specific recommendations. In Atlanta we shall make detailed recommendations which may involve a social survey. The survey will point out the exact problems the city has to solve, and offer further suggestions and such help as may be desirable or desired. Then the credit for solving them will go to your local civic organizations, for it is they who must lead in the actual work."

For a week, now, Messrs. Harrison, Schneider and Potter have studied housing and living conditions in Atlanta; recreation, problems of education and of poverty, and the sanitary and penal systems. Mr. Harrison will go to New York to-morrow. Messrs. Schneider and Potter will continue the investigations through the week. They will leave the city with their data, and after a few weeks submit their findings, together with recommendations.

Will Suggest Improvement.

"Of course, I can't reveal the nature of this report in advance," Mr. Harrison said. "But I will say this much. We will be specific in recommending things to be taken in the survey. On a few subjects we will be able to outline suggestions for immediate improvement."

The spirit in which the Sage investigators enter upon their work was described by Mr. Harrison as follows; "Our attitude is thoroughly sympathetic with local agencies. We are not coming in Atlanta as iconoclasts trying to break down what you are doing. As distinterested parties, we naturally are capable of making detached observations. Then the social survey, as it always does, will bring together the instrumentalities for solving such problems as you may have. The social survey applies scientific methods to the solution of modern community problems.

"Such diagnoses as we are making and such social surveys as will probably follow in Atlanta are designed to stimulate a healthy public opinion. The object is to solve the city's social problems rather than to palliate them."

During the last year the Sage Foundation has received requests for diagnoses and surveys from 100 cities, most of them in the East and Middle West. Atlanta is the first Southern city to call for the preliminary pathfinder's survey.

"We felt the survey was a very progressive move on the part of your Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Harrison said. "Your Chamber of Commerce members are up on their toes, doing everything possible to make the city even more desirable to live in and a better commercial center. There are not a lot of chambers of commerce in the country, you know, that have seen it is a good thing to improve the place they live in, although this is the fundamental thing in making the city a good commercial center."

Important Events From All Over the Old World Told in a Few Short Lines.

English Marquis Dies.

LONDON, June 16.—William G. S. S. Compton, fifth marquis of Northampton, died to-day in Italy, where he had gone for his health. He served in Parliament from 1889 to 1897.

London Brokers Suspend.

LONDON, June 16.—Announcement of the suspension of the Malcolm Cooke Company, brokers, dealing largely in American stocks, was made on the Stock Exchange to-day. This was the fourth failure in less than a week.

China Also Seeks Suffrage.

BUDAPEST, June 16.—Prediction was made to-day in the convention of the International Woman's Suffrage Congress that, in the 1916 election in the United States, every woman in the 48 States will have equal voting rights with men. China was enrolled in the congress to-day, bringing the representation up to five continents and 25 nations.

4 STATES WIN IN RATE FIGHTS; ONE LOSES

Supreme Court Decisions Against Railroads Over Whole West. Missouri Victory Partial.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Four States won victories and one lost to-day in railroad rate decisions rendered by the United States Supreme Court.

In the Missouri cases the State won a partial victory. Six of nine decisions were against the railroads.

There was no decision in the Nashville grain case.

The 2-cent passenger rate law of 1907 of the State of West Virginia was declared valid. The Chesapeake and Ohio sought an injunction on the same grounds as those relied on by railroads in other States that have unsuccessfully fought the law.

Oregon Rates Upheld.

The Oregon rate cases, brought by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, were decided in favor of the State.

The Arkansas State rate was declared constitutional.

The Kansas law fixing a minimum rate for the transportation of oil and fixing severe penalties for excess charges was held unconstitutional.

The six roads which will have to abide by maximum rates fixed by Missouri are the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; the Sante Fe; Kansas City Southern; Missouri, Kansas and Texas; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, including the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado and the St. Louis and San Francisco.

Three Cases Lost.

In three Missouri cases the rates were held to be confiscatory, the St. Louis and Hannibal, the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield and the Chicago and Great Western.

The decision in the Missouri cases follows the principles laid down by the Minnesota cases. The right of the State to regulate intrastate commerce is upheld. The rates so fixed were held not to be confiscatory, except in the cases of the smaller roads.

U. S. Has No Special Jurisdiction on Sea.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The civil rights act of 1875, giving the United States jurisdiction in the District of Columbia, in Territories and over vessels on the sea, to-day was declared invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Individual Can Prevent Pollution of Streams.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rights of a private individual to bring suit to prevent the pollution of streams was upheld to-day by the Supreme Court in the caseo f the Arizona Copper Company against W. A. Gillespie.

New Trial Granted Man Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

A new trial was granted by the Supreme Court Monday morning to Warren Clements, given a life sentence for killing E. J. Griffin in Lowndes County. The Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in making his charge.

Clements and several other men were on an automobile trip with Griffin when the killing took place. Clements fired a pistol and Griffin charged him with shooting at the automobile. This was denied and a quarrel resulted. Evidence in the case showed that the two men had stood at opposite ends of the automobile and shot at each other. Griffin received a wound from which he died later.

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscious-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business, at Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evangelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning The Turkey Tribe

The Turkey the Only Fowl Extensively Bred in a Domestic State That Was Previously Wild.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The turkey is the only fowl that is extensively bred in a domestic state that was previously wild. With this in view, it is really essential that we should know something of its habits while in the wild state. In the first place, it very naturally secured a great deal of exercise while doing its foraging for its daily rations. All this foraging served a two-fold purpose; it not only gave them the much-needed food for maintenance, but the exercise they got made them very hardy and thrifty. It enabled them to make the flight that was absolutely necessary that they might keep out of the reach of the Indians' bow and arrow or the white man's gun. This great vigor has, to a great extent, been carried down through generations to the present time, but in a very much modified form. In fact, every turkey that is raised in close quarters and used as a breeder is helping just that much to sound the death roll of the turkey. It weakens its constitution, and this weakness is transmitted to the next generation. Many people who attempt to raise turkeys in that way are really ignorant of the real harm they are doing the race of turkeys by such a course. But, thank fortune, not very many ever reach maturity over this route. Then there are so many persons working with turkeys who do not recognize one of the turkey's natural food lines. They fail to remember, if they ever knew, that the turkey's food in its wild state consisted chiefly of insects, interspersed with wild seeds, beech nuts, berries, etc., but little or no corn. The average poultry keeper who has not really studied the conditions as he should, feeds too much corn and corn-meal. Corn fed exclusively, or nearly so, is too rich a food and tends to pack the crop and the result is liver trouble. You will notice one going a little slow with a sort of measured tread. This will be about the only symptom noticed, but is enough to lay out many a promising half-grown turkey. Wheat, where it can be had, is one of the safest foods one can use. Used in the whole grain and its various millings, such as good bran, middlings and low-grade flour.

Middlings moistened with skim milk makes an ideal feed for the morning and then the evening feed may be of cracked corn and wheat, about half and half. Into the mash should be cut onion tops of about one-third inch lengths and mixed through. This is relished and at the same time is a great health promoter. Where low-grade flour is to be procured and not the shorts or middlings, it should be mixed half and half with good bran by measure. This is to be used as the shorts with milk. Turkeys should be induced to stay on the range as much as possible. To encourage this, one can scatter a little cracked corn out from the buildings in a trail to the woods and fields for a few times. This will get them to hunting in good shape if they are not fully inclined otherwise. Do not feed at noon time before they get to be of some size. When they find that they must stay out on the range to secure their living they will be but little trouble. If they seem to get a good supply of food in the fields, being satisfied, it is a good practice to give them but a very small feed at night, simply to encourage them to come home to roost. After they have gone to roost it is a good plan to put out their morning feed so they can get it at daybreak and go.

As a general thing, everything and everybody eats too much, so if they are doing fairly well on the range, let them alone until you notice that they are really hungry when they come home. It will then be evidence that foodstuff is getting scarce out there and it must be forthcoming from another source.

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. Try it and see.

ROOMS WANTED.

WE want for one of our clients a good five or six-room cottage or bungalow in Inman Park, near Georgia Railway round house. Brown, Strauss & Ward Co., 112 Candler Bldg. Phone Ivy 3234. 6-16-34

FURNISHED room, cheap; near Five Points; permanent; state particulars. Bachelor, care American. 26-15-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as atorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

Many New Houses Rented.

All Civilized Nations Should Unite in Defense of Civilization

THE GEORGIAN prints on this page to-day the well-known prophetic cartoon of the Emperor of Germany, published some years ago, in which the Archangel Michael is shown warning the Powers of Europe against a threatened Oriental invasion.

This cartoon showed the concern of the Kaiser of Germany for the Christian and civilized nations of Europe. We assume that the Kaiser and Germany generally are concerned for Christianity and civilization throughout the world. We can hardly believe, then, that Count Reventlow voices the sentiment of the Kaiser and the sentiment of the people of Germany when he sees only a possible trade advantage to Germany in a Buddhist Oriental nation occupying the western slopes of the North American continent.

Are not the German Kaiser and the German people concerned more for Christianity and civilization than they are for a fancied, and purely fancied, trade advantage? Does the Kaiser's favorite cartoon apply only to the Christian and civilized nations of Europe, and not the Christian and civilized nations of America and Australasia and elsewhere?

We can say with confidence that the view of the Kaiser and of the German people as a whole is not so narrow and so venal.

Count Reventlow's utterances are both brutal and bigoted, both selfish and shortsighted. No good can come to Christianity and civilization anywhere by the weakening of the power and progress of Christianity and civilization in any nation, in any section of the globe.

If the struggle is in behalf of Christianity and civilization, of human progress and human liberty, then all the nations of the world which believe in these ideals should unite to further them and to oppose any influence which threatens them.

No petty prejudice, no small selfishness, no baser passions of envy or jealousy or greed, should cause distrust and defection, with the possibility of defeat and disaster to the common cause.

Let the Kaiser modify his cartoon to make it include the United States and Canada and Australasia, to make it include all Christian and civilized nations everywhere, and he will make it more worthy of himself, more worthy of his people, more worthy of the Christian spirit he is seeking to express, the civilized conditions he is seeking to preserve.

On such a broad and lofty platform the Christian and civilized nations of the world could be united, and should be united, for the advancement and advantage of all humanity.

Why Women Should Vote

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY.

The Stranger and "Small Town" Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyrighted, 1913, by the Star Co.)

THE menu in your home may be the best in the world; yet, because you are accustomed to it, you find a new zest in food placed before you when you visit other homes, or sit at hotel tables.

The eye, the ear, the mind, the taste all find a keener pleasure in the unaccustomed at certain intervals, even when that which is offered is less admirable.

In an interesting letter which discusses to some length the follies of my own sex, the weakness of his, a question of interest is propounded by a man of culture. After reviewing the numerous tragedies which have occurred from time to time as the result of infatuation of young women in villages and interior towns through love affairs with strangers, the correspondent says:

Dreams of Sweetheart.

"It has always been a great mystery to me why the stranger within our gates has such fascinating attractions for some of our American girls. I shall eschew the engagements and marriages of American heiresses to foreigners. Every one knows the reasons. But the question is a subtle and far-reaching one. Let a total stranger, of good appearance and polite address, come to a town and at once he is the favorite with the girls at the prayer meeting and picnic. The actor, the drummer, the ball player, yes, even the prize fighter, in competition for the hand and heart of the reigning belle, will nearly always outdistance the Georgies and Charlies and Willies of the town. Is it hero worship, or what is it?"

To the man or woman who understands what the imaginative and romantic temperament means this question would suggest its own answer.

While familiarity does not always or often breed "contempt," it does destroy, as a rule, romantic illusions.

The average young girl—God bless her!—is possessed of a good share of sentiment and romance in her thoughts of the lover waiting for her somewhere in the world.

She invests him with the qualities most desirable in her estimation and perhaps drawn to some extent from the novels she has read. He is a creature of her dreams and meditations, and it is not to be supposed that she will readily clothe the youth with whom she has played "tag" and "I spy" in the garments of her dreams.

The boy who has been repeatedly punished at school or whipped by an older brother in her presence or who has been the cause of disagreeable neighborhood criticisms because of his oversupply of youthful vitality; the boy who has teased and tormented her and shown all the unattractive traits of the average growing lad is not liable to become her ideal by any sudden transformation.

The stranger who comes to town has passed through all these unattractive phases in his own village, and he may be far less worthy of her admiration and much further removed from the standard of her ideal than her old playmate, but she sees in him the object of her dreams, free from all crudity, and he seems to her a wholly superior being.

Whatever he may have been in the process of evolution, she finds him her finished ideal when they meet.

He has come into her life suddenly, and by the will of kind Providence she believes.

There is a novelty in all he says and does; he has a new trick of pronunciation, or a new set of phrases and he brings the atmosphere of a new world into her monotonous life. He tells her of new scenes, new people.

It is as if she had listened all her life to one air, and now a new melody is sounded. Harmonies undreamed of become perceptible to the ear of her heart. She listens to his recital of boyish days and pranks, and while the tales he relates differ little from the actions of the boys with whom she has been reared, they are surrounded with a halo of charm in her mind which places his past in a realm quite apart from the commonplace; and it is this commonplace association of neighborhood life which has stood between her dreams and her boy lovers.

Whatever affairs of the heart the stranger may have passed through in his evolving period, she has not been a witness thereof nor a confidant of the other maidens in the case, as she has been with her childhood's companions.

When he tells her that he loves her, she does not recall the fact that two or three years ago he was the devoted cavalier of her sister, or her cousin, or her rival in the high school.

Blessed Is She.

And the accident of their meeting, the day they first looked into each other's faces, the hour they first spoke—all these incidents are thrilling and wonderful and food for hours of happy memories.

Blessed is she to whom such memories and dreams remain forever surrounded by a romantic halo! For never in any ordinary association of childhood and never in the more commonplace development of friendship into love can there be found quite the depth of joy and sentiment which results from the sudden advent of a great and inspiring love.

The Back Yard Stock Farm

By WEX JONES.

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I used to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew.
For rent was high, and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of ham,
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.

*For whalebone. Corsets, you know.

Inspiring Line Versus Firing Line

TO THE BOSS:

EVERY business organization possesses its misfits.

What can be done with them?

The easiest solution of the problem is to discharge them, shut your eyes and draw again.

The economic way is to open your eyes and study the situation and develop them.

There is some trouble involved in this. But no more than a carpenter encounters when he has to cut and plane a piece of wood to make it fit a certain place. He might overhaul a million feet of lumber before finding exactly the piece he needs.

It is his ready skill for altering the length and shape of lumber, for adjusting it to his purposes that makes him a carpenter.

A quick eye, an observing mind, a few tools by the help of which he can carry out his ideas and he can adjust means to ends without trouble, delivering a solid and efficient job.

Misfits in business are rough timber. Everyone is good for something. They may not make good tops for mahogany tables, but they are useful somewhere.

(II)

TO THE WORKER:

THE business organization in which you work can use all your thought and strength.

A certain amount of shaping and fitting is necessary to make you and the job balance perfectly.

Your own intelligence, plus the demands of your work, plus the directions you receive from the Boss, should result in an adjustment that will make you indispensable.

This is the secret of all the Getting-on-in-Life that everybody is so anxious to attain.

Many a man will cheer himself red in the face to see a second baseman play good ball. He is cheering efficiency. By watching that man he will learn the whole philosophy of doing teamwork in his own shop.

Take the second baseman from his place and put in a minister, or a shoemaker, and the game may be humorous, but it will not be efficient.

(III)

TO BOTH OF YOU:

WHEN two people have signed up for the purpose of doing one thing as well as it can be done, both must travel in the same direction and keep step to the music of the business. One can not lag behind when the double-time march begins.

The man who doesn't feel like marching at a double-time gait must either change his feelings or get out of line. But wherever he goes he must remember this: When a lot of men get together without purpose or leadership, they make up a Crowd. When they get together with a purpose, keep step and march straight on, they make a Procession.

And about all a crowd is fit for is to stand around and see the procession march by.

: The Lesson From Flag Day :

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"Hats off!"
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles and the sound of drums—
A flash of color beneath the sky—
"Hats off!"
The flag is passing by!

THE youth of a republic are its strength and hope. The decision of each man's destiny involves, in part, the common weal. The sentiments of youth make the policies of men. The State supplants the school, the student merges into the citizen. The schoolroom of yesterday is the forum of to-day, the playgrounds of to-day are the battlefields of to-morrow. The spirit planted in the bosoms of youth blossoms into the ballots or bayonets of manhood, and a mother-er's whisper in her children's ears may be the boom of cannon in the years to come.

It is well that Flag Day has become a national holiday. There was never a nobler or a wiser movement than to give one day of our national life to the national flag. Our Star Spangled Banner is the symbol of our country, and all policy and all patriotism unite in the effort to teach our country's children to love and to revere it.

It Is Inspiring.

As a thing symbolic, splendid, inspiring, it should be honored throughout the land.

The flag was George Washington's individual Declaration of independence—his personal pioneer defiance of England and the King. He made it first, he waved it first. Six months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, on July 4, 1776, and nearly eighteen months before the Continental Congress, on June 14, 1777, formally adopted the flag George Washington floated over his headquarters at Cambridge the Stars and Stripes. If the Revolution had failed, that flag alone and that flag's defiance would have condemned him to death.

Even so Charles Carroll, signing the Declaration, was reminded "There are other Carrolls," and swiftly the brave Marylander added, "Of Carrollton"—which was Carroll's dauntless acceptance of personal responsibility and his defiance of the King.

The spirit of Washington and the spirit of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was the spirit of individual responsibility and of individual and dauntless devotion. It should be the spirit of to-day. The Republic is verging to its zenith and patriotism should be at its prime. Our country is greater and stronger than it has ever been before, and the spirit of love and devotion in its people had never more to inspire it than now.

In every schoolhouse, in every public hall, in every home and in every hand, native or foreign born, the flag of our country should be displayed on Flag Day every year.

Not only in our splendid and inspiring youth, but in our stalwart and grateful manhood, should this spirit be expressed. Every great and noble sentiment that wraps our country's present and its future should rally around the colors of the republic.

More than ever before to the children of the republic and to its men and women should these stripes and stars from "Old Glory" stand for the essentials of power, protection and progress.

The Spirit of the Country.

The flag must stand for a constructive policy and for an ample navy to sustain it. It should stand in every instance for the right of our country to manage its own affairs. It should stand for clear treaties and every just advantage which is ours—even if it takes new treaties to secure it—for the right to fortify its great canal and to regulate its commerce.

It should stand for the right of its separate States to regulate their own affairs under the Federal Government in matters vital to the interests of its people.

The flag should stand for a constructive, and not a destructive, policy in business—regulated by a reduced but reasonable tariff for the protection of our industries and by reciprocal agreements to protect our international trade.

The flag should wave over a magnificent merchant marine. It should redeem the desolate harbors in which its glorious colors are rarely seen, and float above our country's commerce in its own ships on every sea.

It should stand for a constructive policy of durable and universal peace by being duly and fully prepared for war.

Above all present things, the flag should stand for the power to back its policies with argument in peace and with the ample equipment of a powerful navy for defense and for offense in war.

The Glory of the Flag.

The glory of our flag was made by the power and the glory of a strong and dauntless navy. It must be sustained by the power of a strong and ample navy. So long as other nations front the world with battleships and armed battalions our country must front the world with battleships and battalions. And because we are richer and more isolated than other nations we must see to it that our battleships are as many and as strong as those of any nation that may menace us upon either of our ocean coasts.

PROSPERITY IN SOUTH HERE TO STAY

Two Great Railroads Show Immense Earning Increase Over Last Year.

Striking confirmation of the truth of the reports about the solidity of the financial situation of the South is furnished to-day in the following dispatch to The Georgian:

LOUISVILLE, June 17.—That the South is enjoying a period of great prosperity is indicated by the earnings of her railroad systems. The report of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad shows that the gross earnings for the fiscal year, which ends July 1, will show an increase of more than $3,000,000 over the same period last year.

The statement of the Southern Railway, whose fiscal year ends July 1, shows that the gross earnings to the first week in June have been $64,439,404, an increase of the same period last year of $4,589,377.

This makes it certain that, for the current fiscal year, these two great railroad systems of the South will show increases in earnings over last year that will exceed $7,500,000.

Also, James J. Hill, the empire builder, deciares in an interview in The Georgian to-day that the pessimism of Wall Street is not well founded; and he points out that the United States will derive $10,000,000,000 of new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum to exceed the world's gold production for ten years.

The Georgian during the past week published interviews with many business men of Atlanta, and on Sunday The Sunday American published an elaborate interview with Asa Candler, in which they all declared that the financial situation in the South is strong, and they warned against the pessimistic writers of Wall Street.

Hill Says All Is Well.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 17.—James J. Hill, who is attending the convention of the New York State Bankers' Association here, has taken keen interest in recent Wall Street developments. Speaking of the general financial situation, he said to a correspondent:

"What is the matter with Wall Street anyway? Are they going crazy there? Every one is as blue as indigo, and half the people do not know what they are blue about. All that people have to do in times like these is keep a clear head and avoid getting rattled; then everything will come out all right.

Money Hard to Get.

"Yes, I know money is hard to get. I alluded some time ago to the difficulty the railroads were experiencing in obtaining loans at a time when time-money rates were apparently easy. Selling short-term note issues is apt to occasion inconvenience when the notes happen to mature in a disagreeable money market. But the railroads have probably done the best they could do in a situation where it has been difficult to sell bonds, even in cases where the borrowing road has had the security to offer.

"The money market is a good deal of a problem, but it will work out all right.

"Why, those nervous fellows in Wall Street, who get worked up because money rates are going up or because the stock market is going down, ought to realize the United States will derive ten billion dollars new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum which exceeds the world's gold production for ten years.

"I want to say, too, that the Washington situation is all right. To hear some people talk, you would suppose that the Administration was bent upon upsetting things. That is perfect foolishness."

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

Lightning Rings Bell; Saves 2 From Fire

SANDUSKY, OHIO, June 17.—Lightning struck the dinner bell on the kitchen of Thomas Morrow's home, in Milan, this morning and awoke Stanley Morrow, a son, and Bert Scott, a farm hand. They found the house a-fire and escaped in their night clothes, after being severely burned.

UPPER SANDUSKY, OHIO, June 17.—The family of Joseph Shively is in a serious condition as the result of their home being struck by lightning three times during a seven-hour electrical storm this morning.

MARION, OHIO, June 17.—Henry Nenzeler, 20, of Waldo, was killed by lightning last night.

FOND DU LAC, WIS., June 17.—August Schaefer, aged 65, was killed by lightning as he ran for shelter when caught in a storm while plowing.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—As a result of complaints from shippers as to the weights charged for by railroads the Federal Bureau of Standards expects to begin, soon after July 1, the inspection of railroad scales, starting with Eastern roads.

The railroads annually collect approximately $2,200,000,000 from the shippers of the country on scales which belong to and are operated entirely by the roads, and over which neither the shipper nor the Government has any control of any information as to the correctness of the scales.

Slayer Fights Posse All Night; Kills Self

FRANKLIN, PA., June 17.—After holding a Sheriff's posse at bay all night, Edward Batholomew, 60 years old, slashed his throat with a razor early this morning in an old shanty in which he had barricaded himself.

Bartholomew yesterday afternoon quarreled with Sam Crowther superintendent of Dicks & Co. Crowther fled, but Bartholomew caught him. Laborers and farm hands, cowed with fear, looked on while the superintendent begged for his life. The angry man, deaf to his pleadings, shot him through the head and took refuge in the shanty.

SENSATIONS IN PHAGAN CASE AT HAND

Frank A. Hooper, associate counsel with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the prosecution of the Phagan murder mystery, left Atlanta Monday for a trip to Indianapolis. Attorney Hooper was the third man closely connected with the Phagan case to leave town within a space of three days.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who took an active part in the hunt for the slayer of Mary Phagan until the dictograph controversy arose, left Sunday, saying that he was going to Cincinnati. He said that it was a business trip and intimated that it was related either to his quarrel with Chief of Detectives Lanford or directly with the Phagan case.

Solicitor Dorsey left the previous afternoon. He gave out that the prosecution entirely had completed its preparation of the Phagan case and that he was going away for a week's rest at Atlantic City and New York.

Deny Mystery.

At the Hooper home Tuesday it was admitted that Mr. Hooper's trip was on business, but denial was made that it was in connection with the Phagan case or that there was any significance in his departure practically at the same time as that of Solicitor Dorsey and Colonel Felder.

Rumors are circulating, however, that material witnesses in the case have been uncovered and that their testimony may have a most important bearing in determining the person who strangled Mary Phagan. It is said that the sudden trips out of town of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Attorney Hooper, may not be unrelated to these new developments.

The prosecution has been aware for some time that the attorneys for the defense have been weaving a strong net of damaging evidence around the negro sweeper, Jim Conley.

But Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, following his custom of silence, has let neither the public nor the prosecution in on the secret of the source of this important evidence. He has scores of affidavits. That much is known by the prosecution, but by whom they are signed will probably remain a deep mystery until the Frank trial begins.

Report New Evidence.

Recent reports that new and startling evidence against the negro has been turned up by investigators for the defense are held responsible in some quarters for the sudden out-of-town trips of the Solicitor and his associate. It is explained that they are looking into some of the stories which have come to their ears.

They have heard, it is said, that the defense is in possession of statements from reputable and unquestionably reliable persons which place an overwhelming weight of circumstantial evidence upon the shoulders of the negro. These statements are said to have been overlooked or refused by the detectives working on the case.

Conley meanwhile sticks to the story told in his latest affidavit, He insists that the only part he had in the crime was assisting Frank to dispose of the body.

Chief Lanford and Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, continue to express their belief in the absolute truth of the latest story of the negro, although he admittedly uttered a series of lies and misstatements and perjured himself in two other affidavits before he signed the one which the authorities now believe.

Reunion Sponsor Sues for $10,000

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 17. Mrs. Bessie H. Williams, of Caddo, Okla., has filed suit in Circuit Court here for $10,000 against J. H. Tuck, of this city.

Mrs. Williams, who was sponsor to the Caddo Camp, U. C. V., alleges she was hurt by an automobile of the defendant during the recent Confederate reunion.

Fleet Wins First Match of Second Day's Tennis Play

Fleet took the opening match of the second day's play from Matthews in the Georgia State tennis championship tournament at the Piedmont Driving Club. Play began at 10:30 a. m. with a large crowd in attendance. The score was 6-8, 6-2, 9-7.

Hallman and Williams were matched against Carter and Middlebrooks when the doubles began at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon. Hallman and Williams winning 6-3, 6-2. This was followed by Hall and Crenshaw against Carter and Bill Matthews, while A. W. Smith was matched against Tom Watson in the singles.

Burglar Fires at Couple in Bed as Man Yells at Him

Firing two shots, then leaping out the window, taking sash and all with him, was the reply a negro burglar gave to the demand, "What are you doing in here?" by A. H. Hall, of 14 Markham Street, when he discovered the burglar in his room early Tuesday morning.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Mr. Hall was awakened by a noise. He found the negro standing near the foot of his bed. He did not have a pistol near and yelled at the negro, who replied with two shots. Both struck the bed, narrowly missing the heads of Mr. and Mrs. Hall.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 17.—Marcel G. Brindejone des Moulianis, French aviator, arrived here at noon to-day, having completed a 1,600-mile flight from Paris in three laps. The first was from Paris to Warsaw, with stop at Johannisthal, Germany; the second was from Warsaw to Dvinsk, and the third from Dvinsk to this city.

The last 300 miles were traveled in three and a half hours against a strong wind. The Russian Aero Club presented him with a silver cup.

SCORES DEAD FROM HEAT WAVE IN NORTH

Hot and dry weather is the forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday.

The thermometer reached 90 Tuesday and is due to repeat Wednesday. It was 92 Monday and day before.

"But even at that Atlanta has no right to complain," said Forecaster Von Herrmann Tuesday. "Chicago had 98 degrees of heat yesterday, Baltimore had 98. Louisville, St. Louis and Washington suffered 96 degrees of heat. Atlanta is lucky with only 92 Monday and two degrees less Tuesday."

The mercury mark never was as high as 98 in Atlanta in June except on three occasions—June 30, 1890; June 2, 1898, and June 4, 1911.

Although Monday was the hottest day of the summer, the night brought alleviating temperature when the thermometer dropped to 69.

No storms are reported anywhere; hence there will be no rain.

12 Die in Two Days From Heat in Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Three more deaths were recorded in Chicago today from the heat. This brought the total for two days to twelve. There were few prostrations to-day relief having reached the city in a cool breeze off Lake Michigan.

7 Die From Excessive Heat in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—While yesterday was the hottest day recorded here since July 3, 1911, to-day is expected to far exceed it. The thermometer registered 83 in the shade at 8 o'clock and some thermometers at street levels recorded as high as 95.

Seven deaths have resulted from the heat so far.

Death List Totals 4 in New York.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The heat casualty list was four dead and more than a score prostrated up to noon to-day. Relief finally came in the shape of a cool northwest breze.

At noon the thermometer stood at 85, but the heat was not felt so keenly as yesterday. The weather bureau promised a break in the wave to-morrow.

Two Babies Heat Victims at Gary, Ind.

GARY, IND., June 17.—Two babies, Mary Kender and John Shuster, are dead here to-day as the result of the heat wave that descended upon Gary.

Showers to Relieve East and Lake Region.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Widely scattered thundershowers this afternoon promise to bring some relief for sweltering residents of the Middle Atlantic States and the upper Ohio Valley, according to the weather bureau.

Slightly lower temperatures are predicted for to-night and Wednesday in the Middle Atlantic States, Southern New England, upper Ohio Valley and the southern portions of the lake region.

Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River there will be little change in temperature and clear skies will prevail during the next 36 hours.

Forecast Until 8 p. m, Wednesday.

Georgia: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; not so warm in East and Central portions Wednesday.

North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Louisiana: Fair in northern; showers in southern portion to-night or Wednesday.

East Texas: Scattered showers to-night or Wednesday.

West Texas: Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Eagles Leave for Annual Convention

With fife and drum and garbed in Oriental dress that would have set the Sultan's harem a-flutter, Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, Fraternal Order of Eagles, paraded the streets last night prior to entraining for Jacksonville. The delegation will attend the annual convention of Eagles and left for the Florida city bubbling over with the real Atlanta spirit.

The parade moved along Forsyth Street to Peachtree, down Peachtree to Mitchell and up Mitchell to the Terminal Station. The streets were thronged with people at the time and cheers were given all along the route.

English Polo Stars Praise Americans

NEW YORK, June 17.—The defeated English polo stars to-day made preparations for sailing for their homes on Thursday. They were given a farewell banquet at the Meadowbrook New York Club last night by August Belmont.

About 45 men who have figured prominently in polo in the last generation were seated around the horseshoe-shaped table. The Englishmen gave a toast to President Wilson, to King George, to their erstwhile polo rivals, and then said that "defeat has left no wound; the better team won."

Chinese at Peaceful Picnic Talk Suffrage

NEW YORK, June 17.—Chinatown held its first outing to-day and there was not a shot fired. This phenomenal feature of the Chinatown's recreation resulted from the fact that the rival tongs recently signed a treaty of peace. One thousand Chinese paraded.

They boarded a boat and went to College Point, Long Island, where they gravely discussed the woman suffrage movement in China and the devastation of the hop industry.

Mrs. Philip Hichborn To Return to Capital

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mrs. Philip Hichborn, Jr., the former Washington society belle who eloped to Europe with Horace Wylie, will return to the National Capital, it is rumored.

Mrs. Hichborn and Wylie returned to Washington from their first elopement and a reconciliation was brought about between Wylie and his wife. They disappeared again and went to Europe.

Philip Hichborn, Jr., killed himself three months after filing suit for divorce.

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss R. R. Merger

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Discussion of the new plan for the dissolution of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific merger consumed most of the time of the Cabinet and President Wilson today. The Cabinet spent more than two hours considering the railroad problem.

No decision was reached and the matter will be taken up again at the Friday session.

MRS. PANKHURST ILL, SUFFRAGE MARTYR

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the union, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday for the second time since being sentenced to three years for conspiracy, because of illness brought on by a hunger strike, was reported to-day to be in a serious condition.

So ill is Mrs. Pankhurst said to be from self-starvation that defendants in Old Bailey Court predicted she would be the second "martyr" of the "cause."

A society event was made out of the final day of the trial of the six militant suffragette leaders and male adherent, all charged with malicious destruction of property, in Old Bailey Court.

A great throng of fashionably dressed women struggled with militants and non-militants for seats. Among those present were Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Premier, and Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

The defendants were allowed to address the court in their own behalf, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the "business agents" of the Women's Social and Political Union, made an impassioned and dramatic appeal.

In conclusion she raised her fists above her head and shouted: "If I have got to die to get the vote, then I am willing to die right now."

Mrs. Astor to Visit Vincent at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., June 17.—For the first time in five years Mrs. Astor and her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, will come to Beechwood, the Astor residence here, as guests for the summer of her son Vincent.

SCORES HAVE GIVEN TO YANCEY MARTYR FUND---HAVE YOU?

Tuesday saw the beginning of the flow of silver from the pockets of generous Atlanta citizens into The Georgian's fund for the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who met his death at the hands of a crazed negro Monday while doing his duty.

Hundreds of persons are opening their hearts and their pocketbooks for the bereaved family. The contributions are small, still they are coming in in great numbers.

Atlanta is not half-hearted in doing for those who have done for it. There is a home to be paid for—$900 is due on it—in order that the bereft Yancey family can continue to live; and there is also a poultry business to be established on this farm home.

Trifle in Gate City.

To the rich and prosperous Gate City such things are a mere trifle. To the widow of Dave Yancey and her six orphaned children, however, they spell everything that the future holds for them.

Following is the list of those who have subscribed to The Georgian's fund and to other funds. Examine it, reader, and see if your name is there. If it is not, make haste to put it there with a quarter or a half dollar, or more if you can spare it, and surely you can, for the cause is a noble one:

Those Who Have Given.

CRIME WAVE ON, ASSERTS CHIEF LANFORD

Needs More Detectives to Cope With Situation, He Thinks. Wants Women Sleuths.

Chief of Detectives Lanford, declaring a wave of crime is sweeping Atlanta, Tuesday announced his intention to appeal for six more detectives that his department may better cope with the situation. He said he expected to take up the matter at once with Chief of Police Beavers.

Chief Lanford will ask for at least two women detectives. Like Chief Beavers, he believes women sleuths would be able to do effective work in trailing of certain criminals.

"The wave of crime in Atlanta literally has swamped the detective department, and we are sorely in need of extra men," said Chief Lanford. "The number of hold-ups, burglaries, thefts and other crimes is so great that we are unable to properly handle all cases. Six extra men would put the department in much betetr shape. We need them at once."

As to the proposed women detectives, the Chief said:

"I think at least two women detectives would be valuable to the department. There are certain cases in which the yimght do better work than a man. Of course, we would have to be careful and pick the right kind of women. I intend to discuss this proposition thoroughly with Chief Beavers."

"Atlanta's Success Due to Its People's Progressiveness"

Robert S. Sharp, who until March 4 was chief postoffice inspector of the United States, paid a high compliment to Atlanta before leaving for an Eastern tour Tuesday afternoon.

"Every one who knows anything at all knows Atlanta is always on the job," Mr. Sharp said. "The city is wide awake, and its civic organizations never overlook an opportunity to advertise it and boost it as a commercial center and home location. It is one of the best cities in the country, and its success is due to the progressiveness of its people."

Mr. Sharp was an appointee of President Taft. After the last national election he tendered his resignation to take effect March 4, the date of President Wilson's inauguration.

Leader of Madero Death Squad in U. S.

MOBILE, ALA., June 17.—Captain G. Giaomeneodia, an officer of the Mexican army, who is supposed to have been in charge of the squad that killed the late President Francisco Madero, of Mexico, and who was afterward hounded and made his escape, is in Mobile trying to make his way to Mexico again.

B. Sanders Walker's Widow Gets $50,149

MACON, GA., June 17.—There will be no contest over the payment of the $232,000 insurance carried by the late B. Sanders Walker. This was indicated to-day when the Union Central paid Mrs. Walker a check for $50,149.50. This is the first of the large policies carried by Walker to be paid. It was taken out last December, and a premium of $1,200 was all that had been paid on it.

It is announced that policies for $81,000 and $60,000 will also be paid this week.

Prefers Husband as Her Platonic Friend

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—Mrs. Joseph Lander Eastland, wife of the Venezuelan Consul at San Francisco, and a society leader there, who is suing for divorce at San Diego, today said:

"I hope to restore through divorce the beautiful friendship which my husband and I lost in marriage. That's why I'm suing him now."

Mail Order Houses Accused As Menace

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Small country merchants of the United States are gradually being ruined by the monstrous mail order houses of the country, according to statements made in a speech before the House by Representative William H. Hinebaugh, of Illinois. Mr. Hinebaugh said that the distribution of commodities in the country districts was rapidly being confined to billion dollar concerns.

Atlanta Relieves Need of Slain Deputy's Family

Fund for Yancey Widow and Six Children Grows

Plea Made for Helpless Ones Left by Martyr to Duty. Slayer Dies.

Atlanta's generosity is beginning to flow in a deep, broad stream toward the little home of the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who was slain by a crazed negro Monday.

The contributions are small, but they are coming in from all over the city. Those who knew the brave deputy have mingled their small sums with those who did not in a universal endeavor to repay to the bereaved family that which it lost.

The Georgian's fund for Yancey is mounting upward, slowly but steadily, as Atlanta realizes the debt which it owes.

Atlanta will do its duty. This city will stand forth and meet the vast obligation which it contracted when it sent its servant to his death while preserving peace.

Little Boy Among Donors.

Out in the lonely little cottage on the Jonesboro road the widow and six children of Court Deputy Yancey will thank their creator that their husband and father served such a generous and noble master.

Touching among the contributions which have been received was that sent in by a little boy. The amount was $1 and the note accompanying it stated that the donor was "a little kid just like those who have lost their daddy."

Contributions have also been started by the police and detective departments of Atlanta. Headed by the names of Police Chief Beavers and Detective Chief Lanford, the list of contributions coming in from the police is constantly growing as the officers of the law step forward to aid one of their own kind who met a fate which they themselves are ever in danger of meeting.

Eugene Watson, the negro who slew the brave deputy and devastated his home, died at the Grady Hospital Monday night. Death despoiled the law of its duty.

In a small, bare cottage on the Jonesboro road, where, until yesterday, a family had struggled hard for an existence and good fortune had never smiled, to-day the utter hopelessness of the poverty is emphasized.

Through the night a widow, broken in health and spirit, and six children, none of them able to work, knelt by the form of the murdered Dave Yancey, court deputy, weeping for the life that was sacrificed to duty and for the dark days ahead when there will be no one to provide.

Once or twice in his life Yancey had prospered. Shortly after he came to Atlanta he was a bailiff for a Justice of the Peace. He earned money then to take care of his wife and children. He held the position a short while, when the justice died. For several months he was unable to find employment.

About four years ago he secured a position as a court bailiff under Sheriff Mangum. His salary depended on the number of days he worked, which was never over two weeks each month. On other days he would substitute as a deputy and serve subpenas. During the summer months, when court was not in session, his income was practically nothing.

On the day he was stabbed to death he had virtually secured the position as a regular bailiff in the court of Judge Calhoun. It would have paid him $100 monthly. This news was to be a surprise to his wife and children when he returned home.

Lived Life of Farmer.

Although he lived in the shadow of a great city the life of Yancey and his family was that of the farmer. About a year ago he secured the place on the Jonesboro Road, on which he had made two payments. Nine hundred dollars are still to be paid. He called it a truck farm, but the few acres were almost barren, and it was with the greatest difficulty that enough vegetables were raised to supply the needs of the family.

About six months ago his oldest daughter, Lois, was taken seriously ill and had to be taken to the hospital. It cost Yancey more than $400, and during the time his family was often without food.

He had lived at the house on the Jonesboro Road for about a year, but he lived in that section of the county the fifteen years since he came here from Grayson, in Gwinnett County.

He was raised on a farm, and when he secured enough money to make the first payment on his little home with the few acres of untilled soil he had hopes of making it a productive truck farm and later acquiring more land.

Family Worked the Farm.

His wife and children tilled the soil. They had no horse to draw a plow and the work was difficult. From early morning until late in the evening Mrs. Yancey worked in the field and directed the work of the children.

Yancey usually came home at about 6 o'clock every evening. As he trudged up the long hill from the end of the car line his wife and children left the field and came to the house to prepare the scant supper. By 8 o'clock in the evening the house was in darkness and the family asleep.

Only when little Lois was in the hospital did any of them venture into the city. Usually they walked the entire way. They saw little of their neighbors except an occasional conversation as one would pass the house in the early morning, or after work in the evening.

Where they have lived and struggled for an existence together Mrs. Yancey and her children want to continue to live. They declined to consider returning to Gwinnett County, where Yancey's relatives live.

Outlook Is Gloomy.

There is some hope of the little farm being made successful, enough so to pay the monthly installments on the home, and there is some possibility of Mrs. Yancey's idea of a small poultry farm becoming a reality, but these are things that are almost out of the question this year.

The farm is an absolute failure this season. It is impossible to start a poultry farm without money, and unless money can be secured the home will have to be given up, and the family, more destitute than ever, return to worse conditions in Gwinnett County.

Fellow Deputies to Act as Pallbearers At Yancey Funeral

The funeral of Dave Yancey, the court deputy stabbed to death by a negro Monday, will be held at the family residence on Jonesboro Road Wednesday at noon. Interment wil be in Forest Park Cemetery, just across the County line in Clayton County. One of the Yancey children is buried in this cemetery.

A squad of deputies will escort the body to the cemetery. Hundreds of friends and admirers of the dead officer, who gave his life in the performance of his duty, will attend the funeral.

The pallbearers will be Sheriff C. W. Mangum and Deputies J. F. Owen, J. P. Miner, J. M. Suttles, C. A. Haygood and E. T. Stanley.

ATLANTA'S BOOKS ARE WELL KEPT, SAY EXPERTS

But Mild Criticisms Are Made of Systems in Few Departments by Special Audit.

A report of a special audit of all the city departments by the Audit Company of the South was made to Mayor Woodward Tuesday. But mild criticisms of any of the departments are made and the general business system of the city is praised, especially the work of the Comptroller's department. Mayor Woodward said he would transmit the report to the Council Finance Committee, which authorized the audit.

"We found the records of the Comptroller's office for the year 1912 in better shape than for preceding years," states the report.

"In our opinion the work of this office can and should be simplified and also amplified.

"One of the things to be approved about the City of Atlanta is that all collections are made by one department, the Tax Collector.

Tax Map Taken Up.

"Whereas we found all moneys properly accounted for in the Marshal's office yet the accounting methods are deficient and should be materially improved.

"It is our pleasure to report the accounts of the Police Department are better kept than any other of the public accounts. But much useless work can be eliminated.

"The cost of forage in the sanitary and construction departments seems high. It might be well for the city to receive bids for the feeding and caring for the live stock of these two departments.

Construction Department Lax.

"The records of the construction department for the years 1911 and 1912 do not appear to have been as well kept as for the year 1910. We understand this has been due to various changes in the office.

"Examination of the water department shows it to be well managed. The accounting methods should be revised.

"The bookkeeping of the park department can be greatly simplified. Cyclorama receipts are not properly safeguarded.

"The statements transmitted herewith show the city to be in first-class financial condition. The city has a borrowing ability now, under the State Constitution, of approximately $6,000,000.

"In our opinion, the city and county governments should be consolidated."

The report goes into the details of the various departments, concluding with the following tabulated statement of Atlanta's financial condition:

Assets.

Current Assets	$ 403,561.02
Special Assessments	484,659.92
Trust Fund	35,000.00

BIRMINGHAM AND ATLANTA BURY HATCHET

Ideas for Co-operative Work for Better South Propounded by Leaders of Both Cities.

The time-worn tomahawk, raised from time immemorial almost in the little war of rivalry between the Gate City and the Magic City, otherwise known as Atlanta and Birmingham, has been buried at last—at least an informal treaty of peace has been made verbally, pending completion of plans whereby the civic bodies of the two cities will eventually get together, not only for a bigger and better Atlanta and a bigger and better Birmingham, but for a bigger and better South.

Wilmer Moore, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, and "Big Chief" Oscar Turner, as he is familiarly known in Birmingham, who came to Atlanta Monday night, are the peace envoys.

Mr. Moore and Mr. Turner, the one president and the other the "livest wire" of two of the largest civic bodies in the South, are of one accord—they want to see a spirit of co-operation exist between the two cities as a substitue for the present tendency to pull apart, or, rather, the failure to pull together.

Moore's Ideas.

Mr. Moore has a number of good ideas to which he gave expression freely when seen Tuesday morning.

"I think the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham may well get together and find out more about each other than they know now to good advantage," said he. "When we become firmly established in our new home I hope to see the inauguration of a plan whereby the two bodies may extend certain courtesies to each other, such as exchange of visits when Atlantans are in Birmingham and vice versa.

"There is a great deal more to be done also; for instance, the 'exchange of speakers' idea is a very good one. Anything we may do along this line is only a small part of a larger plan whereby the people of the Southern cities may learn all about the South—what each city is doing, in other words."

Mr. Turner, who called on Mr. Moore Monday afternoon, also had much to say. He wants to inaugurate a "system" whereby the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham will exchange speakers among other things. In this way Mr. Turner says he believes the two cities can learn many valuable things about each other and at the same time create a spirit of "pull-together" which will result in a bigger Atlanta and a bigger Birmingham.

"Going one step farther, the Birmingham "live wire" hopes to see perfected a league or association of civic bodies which shall pull together for a bigger and more prosperous South.

'Get Fresh Air' Dan Carey's Main Happiness Hint

Tells Tads How to Enjoy Life and Keep Health

Happy group at play in Park.

"People of Atlanta Not Yet Awake to the Value of Playground," Says Director.

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, whose bright smile and jolly manner have marked him as the possessor of the true secret of happiness, has given The Georgian some hints of happiness to children that were inspired by the opening of the playgrounds Monday.

Viewing a throng of children at play in Joyner Park playground, he denied that there was any secret to happiness.

"There is a composite picture of happiness," he declared. "Is there anything more simple or natural? Look at their beaming faces. Listen to their spontaneous laughter and shouts. My hints to happiness to children would be something like these:

"Get out in the sunshine, in the fresh air, and there won't be so much cause to complain at the heat of summer.

"Drink lots of water. You see our sanitary drinking founts in the playgrounds provide flowing water that children may drink as fairies.

"Get children together, then have a director over them to see that all their outbursts are in a wholesome direction.

Appeal to Imagination.

"Inspire activities and morals in them by getting them interested in specific things.

"You seldom have to even scold children when they are treated right, but they have lots of pent-up energy which must be directed rightly or they will go wrong.

"Teach them to love the flag of our country. They demand things that appeal to their imagination.

"When they are tired at night from a long day of play let them sleep lots."

Mr. Carey explained that providing happiness for children was a business just like running a store, and that it required the same sort of systematic thought from grown-ups.

While he was talking in his office the telephone rang.

"You want me to say something funny about the birth of the lion cubs at the zoo for your paper?" he asked. "That is like a newspaper man," he continued. "His question is typical of the attitude of most people to parks and playgrounds. But the spirit of humor and play are not quite so spontaneous. There is work and study back of both."

Value of Grounds Not Realized.

Then he revealed a copy of a letter he had written to a city official explaining why the number of playgrounds had been reduced this year and touching on the object of playground work in general.

"The people of Atlanta have not yet realized exactly what the playgrounds mean," he had written.

Heretofore Atlanta has operated its grounds merely as a place for the children of the neighborhood to play and no attention has been paid to the more serious side of the work. One member of the park board said he could see no advantage to the city in hiring a young woman to act as nurse for the neighborhood.

Recorder's Removal Rouses Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 17.—Throughout the city to-day discussions have been warm anent the mass meeting held Sunday, which packed the Jefferson Theater to protest against the summary removal of Clement Wood as Recorder by the city commission, and to comment on the city commission in general, as well as the incidents connected with the alleged "railroading out of the city" of an organizer who came here to form a union of motormen and conductors of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company.

So successful was the meeting that White Gibson, attorney for the labor unions, to-day announced that another would be held.

GEORGIA CREATES ALUMNI BUREAU

New Department Will Do Publicity Work of University—Eugene Black Orator.

ATHENS, June 17.—This is alumni day of the University of Georgia commencement week.

At a largely attended meeting of the Alumni Association this morning Fred T. Myers, of Pensacola, was selected as the alumni orator for next year. The class of 1908 decided to establish an alumni library fund, to be used in purchasing new books for the library. A tribute of respect to Rev. M. J. Coker, who had died since the last meeting, was adopted.

The board of trustees to-day created an alumni bureau and publicity department of the university, and appropriated sufficient funds to maintain it. A compilation will be made of the alumni and a general publicity department established.

The alumni address to-day was delivered by Eugene Black, of Atlanta.

Juniors Deliver Orations.

This afternoon the junior orations were delivered and the sophomore cup was presented. The junior speakers to-day were: Victor Victor, Atlanta; D. E. Macamy, Dalton; G. Harrison, Atlanta; C. I. Funkenstein, Athens; L. Michael, Athens; T. T. Lew, China.

The law hop takes place to-night.

At the prize drill of the cadet regiment Private John Nicholson, of Athens, won the medal for the best drilled man, while Company B, captained by Z. S. Cowan, of Atlanta, won the company prize.

Military Appointments.

Appointments in the military department for the next session were announced as follows:

Bentley Chappelle, Columbus, and S. T. Brawton, Claxton, cadet majors; L. Michael, Athens; C. Pope, Athens; J. T. Hines, Augusta; J. B. Conyers, Cartersville; R. H. Patterson, Athens; Frank Cheney, Athens; H. H. Whelchel, Comer; J. T. Collins Jackson; R. D. Short, Athens, and J. H. Moss, Athens, company captains.

Court Holds Food Seller No Peddler

Peddlers of chickens, eggs and butter are not subject to the peddlers' tax of 50 under the decision of the Georgia Supreme Court, handed down Tuesday. The ruling was made in the case of E. M. Latham against County Tax Collector A. P. Stewart.

The general tax act of 1909 provides a tax on peddlers of stoves, tinware, soaps, drugs and other commodities and merchandise.

The Supreme Court held that the intent of the act was not to place a tax on peddlers of foodstuffs. Two members of the Supreme Court dissented from the decision.

The advisability of calling a State convention to discuss the future of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, and to aid the State Legislature in its disposal, will be considered at a mass meeting of Atlanta citizens at the Auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. No conclusion will be reached as to the disposal of the property, which has an estimated value of $25,000,000. The meeting is a preliminary one, and probably will be the first of a number.

In calling the meeting Chamber of Commerce officials declare they are moved not only by the fact that the proper disposal is of the utmost importance to the State, but because the road is an important part of the freight rate situation, and the citizens of Atlanta have an especial interest in it.

Coroner Refuses To Pay Bill for Painter Analysis

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 17.—The analysis of the stomach and other organs of the late E. O. Painter reached here this afternoon and is now in the Barnett National Bank. Just what it contains is unknown. There is a bill for $2,000 chemists' fees attached to the package. It was sent C. O. D. Coroner C. D. Abbott refuses to pay the bill.

Representatives of the Painter family ordered the autopsy and Coroner Abbott took charge of the examination, when he found that the vital organs had been sent to Baltimore for analysis. Mr. Abbott has some information which he refuses to give out.

SINCLAIR'S FORMER WIFE TO REMARRY

NEW YORK, June 17.—Friends of Mrs. Meta Fuller Sinclair, divorced wife of Upton Sinclair, the writer, learned to-day of her engagement to Hugh B. Halliwell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Mrs. Sinclair and Halliwell met in a sanitarium in Newburg, N. Y., where both were patients, and it was a case of love at first sight.

Incidentally Halliwell, whose father was a rich jeweler, increases his income from $3.50 a week to $150 a week by his marriage, according to a clause in his father's will.

Mrs. Sinclair, who called her ex-husband "an essential monogamist without the qualities to hold a woman," declares that she has at last found her ideal. Halliwell, who is barely 26, has also been divorced.

Upton Sinclair divorced his wife two years ago, naming Harry Kemp, the "hobo poet of Kansas," as co-respondent. Kemp met Mrs. Sinclair while she was a patient in a Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium. Sinclair remarried several weeks ago, and will reside in Holland.

Three Debtors File Petitions in Court

Three voluntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed Tuesday in the United States District Court.

J. S. Saul, 383 Central Avenue, formerly a member of the bankrupt firm of Springer, Simon & Saul, submitted assets of $50 and liabilities amounting to $35,775.29.

J. H. Dudley submitted liabilities of $299.45 and assets of $50, with conditional assets of $1,500 in a life insurance policy.

Doctor to Report On City's Milk Supply

Atlanta's milk supply will be discussed at a luncheon next Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Hotel. A report will be made by Dr. S. A. Visanska, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on milk supply.

B. M. Hood, director of the Chamber of Commerce division of health, will deliver an address. President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside at the luncheon.

WOMAN SUICIDE AFTER SLAYING PHYSICIAN

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Dr. Guy O. Brinkley and Mrs. Eugene H. Whisnant are dead as the result of a double tragedy in the offices of Dr. Brinkley, a prominent young physician, late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Whisnant killed Dr. Brinkley and immediately committed suicide with a .32 caliber automatic revolver. She fell dead across the body of the slain physician with a bullet through her brain. She fired six shots at him, chasing him from room to room of his suite, the fifth and sixth bullets taking effect in the brain and heart. One more shot ended her own life.

It developed to-day that Mrs. Whisnant was infatuated with the physician. She is said to have declared she would kill any man she loved who refused to marry her. What took place between her and the physician is unknown. She left a note on her dresser, addressed to her mother, asking forgiveness for what she intended to do, but she did not say what her intentions were.

The woman's marriage to Whisnant was romantic. In 1906 he was suffering with typhoid fever in Charlotte and telegraphed her to come to him. She was married to him on his deathbed. After his death five days later she returned to her mother here.

That the murder was premeditated is shown by the fact that Mrs. Whisnant purchased bullets for her revolver yesterday and got the clerk to show her how to use the weapon.

Mrs. Whisnant was a member of a prominent South Georgia family and a talented musician. She was 37 years old. Dr. Brinkley was equally as prominent in Virginia, from which State he came to Savannah several years ago. He was 45.

Vacation Don'ts Are Offered By Expert

NEW YORK, June 17.—Health Commissioner Lederle has made public his annual "health hints for vacationists." He gives the following list of don'ts":

Don't eat food exposed to flies.

Don't neglect to be vaccinated against typhoid.

Don't wear heavy clothing.

Don't stay too long in the sun.

U. S. Seeks to End $60,000,000 Hog Loss

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Stimulated to action by the $60,000,000 loss of last year as the result of hog cholera, the Department of Agriculture has determined to send out experts in an attempt to educate the farmers up to a point where the malady can be prevented. A serum which is preventive rather than curative will be put to use by the department.

Government agents will be sent out to co-operate with State veterinarians. An appropriation of $75,00 will become available July 1.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

As Governor Joseph M. Brown draws near the end of his term his mail grows heavier and heavier with letters of congratulation upon the record he has made in office.

Besides these missives by mail the Executive offices are daily crowded with callers, all bent upon expressing their good will and friendship to the retiring Governor.

The Governor is kept pretty busy thanking folks and assuring them of his appreciation of their evident interest in him, but upon the absorbing question of his future he remains as silent as the Sphinx.

There is a distinct impression abroad, however, that the Governor by no means intends disappearing from public view.

While he has made no statement as to his purpose in the game of politics hereafter, every day one hears in the hotel lobbies rumors of his intention to try for the United States Senate in next year's primaries.

Whether he elects to try for other honors or retire to dignified and unobtrusive private life, it is a generally accepted fact that Governor Brown has made a deep impression upon the people of Georgia as their Governor, and it is doubtful whether any Executive ever assembled a more devoted or loyal following.

The Governor's retiring message is about ready to transmit to the Legislature, and he is ready to turn over the affairs of his high office to his successor, John M. Slaton, at any moment.

It is said that one of the very first bills to go on the House calendar will be one providing the same amendments to the State prohibition laws as were provided in the late Tippins bill.

The impression is, however, that it will have a long, rough and rugged road to travel before it gets on the statute books, if it ever does.

The legislative program as tentatively mapped out, is as follows, immediately after the two Houses are called to order:

Wednesday, June 25, organization of the two Houses. Qualification of members and election of presiding officers.

Thursday, reception and reading of the retiring Governor's message.

Saturday, inauguration of the new Governor.

It is likely that a bill providing for the election of a Senator to succeed Senator Bacon will be introduced upon the first roll call of counties for the introduction of bills.

This will call for the first election of a Senator by the people to be held under the new Federal amendment. Senator Bacon will be named as his own successor without opposition.

While the percentage of inexperienced membership in the new House is about up to the average, it is a fact that the percentage of the new membership coming over from the last House is very small.

An unusual number of new members have had legislative experience all the way from four to ten years back, but not many immediately familiar faces will be seen when the House is called to order.

On the other hand, a very heavy percentage of membership in the last House has been transferred to the new Senate.

Most of the old floor leaders in both the last House and the last Senate will be missing from the new General Assembly.

For a few brief and glorious moments on Wednesday, June 25, Charles "Stump" Northen, Secretary of the Georgia Senate, will be the only duly and legally authorized presiding officer of the Senate and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of the State.

That's an awful weight of dignity and responsibility for "Stump" to have to stagger around under, even for a flitting and all-too-brief moment, but he will have to make out as best he may, nevertheless.

It is written in the Constitution that the Secretary of the late lamented Senate, and no one else, shall call the Senate to order and hold it tight under the lid until it has chosen a president.

"What I want to know is," said a well-known member of the new Legislature, discussing the situation today, "whether, in the event of a long deadlock in the Senate, and the possible resignation, death, or disqualification of the then Governor, 'Stump' Northen, wouldn't, by operation of law, become Acting Governor of the commonwealth?

"I declare, I rarely have had a problem to weigh so heavily upon me. There is not one chance in a million of its arising for solution, but just suppose it did? Wouldn't 'Stump' be stumped to know what on earth to do in the circumstances?

"Suppose the Senate never should elect a president, but remain in perpetual deadlock, the newly elected Governor could not qualify, of course. If 'Little Joe' should get mad, or disgusted, and quit, where would that leave 'Stump' Northen?

"To be sure, 'Stump' would be perfectly satisfactory to me as a Governor, but the thing that worries me is, How would 'Stump' himself like the job?"

When asked whether he had said that he would, in such a situation, accept the responsibilities of the Executive office, Secretary Northen declined either to affirm or deny the report.

PRINCESS WRITES AND ACTS MOVIE

A report says Princess Mary wrote and took part in acting a sketch for a film, which was shown after a dinner party at the palace the other night. It is a humorous sketch, a five-character child's piece. The action is laid in a school room and the dining room of the palace, where the pictures were actually taken.

The Princess wrote the play a few months ago, but her mother, Queen Mary, refused to allow it to be played until she had read it, which she did only recently. She made several alterations and deletions in the Princess's MS. and struck out one character altogether, that of an irritable uncle, who in the Queen's opinion was too likely to be taken for the Kaiser, to be allowed to remain in the sketch.

Salvation Army Is Raising Picnic Fund For Mill Children

Members of the Atlanta post of the Salvation Army Monday began soliciting funds for an outing at Piedmont Park June 26 for 300 mill children. Under the direction of the Army the children will be taken to the park on special trolley cars and treated to a swim. Ice cream and other light refreshments will be provided for them.

The plan is to get the children who work in cotton mills and have no chance for real recreating such as the water and grass and sunshine at Piedmont Park will afford.

Away from the din of the mills they are to enjoy a day of wholesome freedom. And the Salvation Army officers report that they are receiving liberal contributions.

Judge Calls Court's Tail of Political Kite

CHICAGO, June 17.—In announcing his retirement from the bench, after thirteen years' service, Judge Charles S. Cutting said:

"Under the present system the judiciary is tied to the tail of the political kite."

SEGREGATION ACT READY FOR MAYOR

Ashley Ordinance Regulating the White and Negro Districts Is Passed by Council.

With the signature of Mayor Woodward, the Ashley race segregation ordinance will become a law. It provides that present conditions shall not be disturbed, but that in future a majority of the residents in any block in Atlanta shall determine whether the residents on the block shall be exclusively white or exclusively negro.

The passage of the ordinance is the result of a long fight by Councilmen Claude L. Ashley and Albert Thomson, of the Fourth Ward, a part of whose ward is seriously troubled with negroes and whites living side by side.

The ordinance has been up for consideration for many months. Monday, on the motion of Alderman James W. Maddox, it was referred to a new committee of ten. Later in the meeting a motion to reconsider the action carried and the ordinance was passed.

Crematory Up To Aldermen; Mayor Says He Will Sign

Only the action of the Aldermanic Board is required to close the $260,000 crematory contract. The contract was approved by the lower branch of Council Monday afternoon and, after the action of the Aldermanic Board, Mayor Woodward has signified he will sign it.

The question of whether Atlanta is to have a municipal electric plant in conjunction with the crematory, as provided by the old contract, is a matter of doubt. Mayor Woodward's disapproval of a resolution asking for an option from the Destructor Company was overridden at the meeting, but Councilman W. G. Humphrey and several others supported the Mayor.

When it comes to putting up $100,000 for this plant, which will not be attempted until next year, the fight over a municipal electric power plant will be gone through again.

Parson Stuttered As He Married Them

POLICE NET SET FOR 3 NEGRO BANDITS

The police dragnet was thrown out Tuesday morning to capture the three negro highwaymen who stabbed Railway Mail Clerk W. S. Ware, of 82 West Baker Street, Monday night about 10 o'clock.

The police think the negroes are the trio who have terrorized pedestrians in various parts of the city for the past several weeks. They have connected Ware's assailants with the attempted robbery of Joseph Franklin, a groceryman, on Crumley Street between Washington and Pulliam, Sunday night, the description of one of the negroes given by Ware fitting that given by Franklin of one of the men who held him up.

Tuesday morning Ware was in a serious condition at Grady Hospital, where he was taken after he staggered into fire headquarters, but if no complications develop it is thought he will recover. He was stabbed twice. The knives inflicted a wound seven inches long across the back of his neck and another almost two inches deep in his right shoulder. Ware lost much blood during the encounter and Tuesday morning was so weak he could not talk.

Robbers Got Valuable Letters.

So far detectives have learned that six registered letters Ware was carrying from his train to the postoffice was all the booty the robbers got. Ware's watch and some money were in his pockets when he was taken to the hospital. Federal authorities probably will take a hand in the case Tuesday. They hope to trace the negroes by the stolen letters.

The attack on Ware was made within two blocks of Whitehall Street, almost in the heart of the downtown district. The police declare the robbery was extraordinarily bold. Ware has the mail run between Atlanta and Chattanooga on the Southern Railway, and it is his custom, each night when his train gets in to carry all registered mail to the postoffice in person instead of sending it by messenger. Monday night he is said to have noticed three negroes hanging around the mail car when he left the train, but paid no attention to them. He placed the letters in his inside coat pocket and started to the Federal Building, going no faster than usual.

Leaped From Doorway.

Nothing occurred until he turned the corner and started up Alabama Street. As he pased a dark doorway just below fire headquarters, three men sprang upon him from a doorway. He was knocked down, and before he could rise or shout one of the negroes grabbed him by the throat. The negro jerked Ware to his feet, still gripping his throat, and another of the negroes stood in front of the mail clerk brandishing a knife. The third negro plunged his hand into Ware's coat pocket and took the letters.

After the negro got the letters the one gripping Ware's throat momentarily released his hold, and Ware screamed for help. The negro with the knife leaped upon him. He stabbed Ware in the neck, and, as he plunged again with his knife Ware jerked his head to one side and the blade was buried in his shoulder.

The mail clerk fell to the ground, screaming, and the negro with the knife started to leap upon the prostrate body. His companions restrained him, however, and they fled into the railroad yards.

Ware, with blood streaming from his wounds and barely able to stand, tottered into fire headquarters, a few feet away, and collapsed on the floor. The firemen notified the police and called the ambulance.

Queen Mary Forbids Poker and Baccarat

LONDON, June 17.—When Queen Mary's guests at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races assemble at the card tables after dinner they will find printed notifications that baccarat and poker are barred and that stakes at bridge must not exceed half a crown a hundred points.

Heretofore baccarat has been the favored gambling game and high stakes have been played for.

Betting on the races among the royal servants is also prohibited, but it nevertheless goes on.

Friedmann, Richer, Calls Visit Failure

NEW YORK, June 17.—Following four months of unsuccessful effort to establish his turtle vaccine in the United States as a recognized cure for tuberculosis, Dr. Frederick F. Friedmann, of Berlin, sailed to-day for Germany.

Although Dr. Friedmann is much better off financially than he was upon his arrival in February, he declared he felt his mission had been a failure.

New Law Wipes Out Restricted Sections

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 17.—The laws passed at the recent session of the Legislature are said to have already resulted in obliterating the restricted districts of some of the smaller cities.

The women's minimum wage commission to be appointed by the Governor is expected to begin hearings in a short time to obtain data for the fixing of the lower limit of wages.

San Francisco Out For World Congress

GHENT, Belgium, June 17.—At the closing meeting of the Tenth International Congress of Agriculture, the American delegate, Dr. Alfred C. True, of Washington, proposed that the next congress in 1915 should be held in San Francisco.

An international commission will consider the question.

Lion Cubs Brought Up on Bottle

Sultana Kills One, Ignores Others

Forces Zoo Keeper to Adopt Them

Keeper E. T. Boyd feeding disowned lion cub with bottle at Grant Park Zoo.

A tragedy at the Zoo was responsible for the unusual picture which The Georgian photographer caught.

Then she calmly and without any evidences of maternal remorse paced about her cage, only pausing occasionally to glare or snarl at some visitor before her bars.

"If I'm not careful she may make way with the other two," observed Keeper E. T. Boyd, in some alarm. "I don't approve of her race suicide tendencies."

Forthwith he eliminated the opportunity for another infanticide by removing the remaining two cubs to safety outside the cage. The problem of feeding was easy of solution. The camera clicked when one of the cubs, in perfect contentment, was partaking of its Tuesday breakfast.

Nature fakers who maintain that dumb animals are incapable of facial expression should have seen their statements disproved by the expression of supreme ecstasy pictured on the cubs' faces when they were given their morning meal.

Both are blind, of course, but this is only a temporary inconvenience. They are as playful as kittens—which they really are—and as yet they are as harmless as the family cat.

They roll and tumble over each other and call each other jungle names, all in play to be sure. They are a little uncertain on their feet and stagger about blindly when they assay locomotion, but their keeper says that within a few days they will begin to take on the dignified airs of their parents.

Among the other babies that have been born at the Atlanta Zoo are a baby leopard, three deer, a llama and a zebu.

BIG CROWDS AT ISLE OF PALMS

Edward P. Passailaigue, advertising manager for the Isle of Palms, is in Atlanta on business and incidentally is telling his friends he is anxious to get back where the breezes from the ocean are cool.

He says this resort promises to be the most popular on the Atlantic coast this summer and that he has many reasons for thinking so.

The hotel property recently was purchased by James Sottile, who is operating the hotel himself. In order to make the Isle of Palms more popular than ever Mr. Sottile has expended $350,000 in improvmnts and has spared no expense to make this resort the best on the coast.

Every attraction has been provided for guests, including a military band with frequent concerts during the week and dancing every night. There is an excellent bathing beach—Mr. Passailaigue says it is the finest on the Atlantic coast—and a large corps of expert life guards. Mr. Passailaigue says there has not been an accident there in seven years.

An hourly trolley schedule has been provided from Charleston. The hotel opened Sunday with a large number of guests. Mr. Sottile also owns the New Charleston hotel in Charleston. The Isle of Palms Hotel is under the management of W. J. Hanlon, a well-known hotel man.

Senator Has Been Lobbied All His Life

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Senator Lebaron Colt, of Rhode Island, examined by the Overman lobby inquiry committee to-day, was unable to give the investigators any information about a lobby in Washington.

The annexation of Cuba by the United States and the admission of sugar and other products free of duty in this country were advocated by Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan. He insisted everyone has the right to attempt to influence legislation if he is respectful and honest, and said he had been "lobbied" all his life.

Negro Physician's House Dynamited

ANNISTON, ALA., June 17.—The house of H. F. Harris, a negro physician, located in a neighborhood occupied by whites, was dynamited today, though no great damage was done. Harris says he will not move. There is no clew to the dynamiters.

The house was recently sold to Harris by a local attorney.

GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS URGED

"Can the Golden Rule be followed in business?

"Must it be 'doing unto others as ye would they should do unto you,' or will it be David Harum's rule, 'Do others or they'll do you, and do it first'?" asks George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in The Christian Endeavor World. He says:

For my part, I do not want to wait either for the co-operative commonwealth or for the millennium, but in the name of God and righteous dealing and suffering humanity I want to get the Golden Rule right here and now. Begin at once to make conditions what they ought to be, no matter if they have been otherwise since the days of Methuselah. There is nothing inherently adverse to brotherliness in a simple business transaction like giving something you have in exchange for something you want. Is it not good business to get your competitor's trade, and keep him from getting yours, if you can do it without lying or misrepresenting?

But does the Golden Rule mean that you are at liberty to get your competitor's trade, because you are willing that he should get yours, if he can. The biggest and most successful business men will tell us that where they have put in effect in their business the principles of the Golden Rule it has turned out generally to be good business as well as good morals. Whatever may be the rule of the Standard Oil Company in dealing with its competitors, with the public, and with the Government, it has been a past master in developing the application of the Golden Rule to its employees.

Germans Beg for Carnegie Millions

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 17.—Worn out by the strain of the festivities attending the marriage of her daughter, Princess Victoria Luise, and the Kaiser's quarter centennial jubilee, the Empress was indisposed to-day and was unable to take part in the ceremonies.

That the Germans are interested in Andrew Carnegie is shown by the begging letters addressed to him. A special postoffice had to be rigged up in one of the hotel rooms to care for them. It was estimated that the bequests aggregated $5,000,000.

The steel master's most important engagement for to-day was attending at the imperial banquet. To-morrow he, Mrs. Carnegie and their daughter, Miss Margaret Carnegie, will leave for Switzerland.

Centenarian Pastor Weds 10th Grandson

NEW YORK, June 17.—Forty-two grandchildren and thirty great grandchildren assembled at Central Palace Hall, No. 66 Sheriff Street, to watch the Rev. Zangwill Schreiber, who claims to be a hundred years old, perform the tenth marriage ceremony for one of his grandchildren.

Mr. Zangwill, who is pastor of the Congregational Bnei Rabire, on Willett Street, married his own children and nine grandchildren before starting on a recent trip to the Holy Land.

QUEEN BARS SLIT SKIRT AT ASCOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ASCOTHEATH, ENGLAND, June 16.—Fearing another such outrage as almost spoiled the Derby, when Emily Wilding Davison threw herself under the hoofs of King George's horse Anmer, scores of police and detectives thronged the course here to-day when the four-day race meet, the most fashionable turf event of the season, opened.

From a purely sporting angle the Derby is the premier classic of the turf; from the standpoint of a society function the Ascot meeting compares favorably with the Auteuil and Chantilly meetings in France.

Not alone was the course thoroughly policed, but detectives moved among the crowds in the paddock and grandstands, prepared to prevent any demonstration that suffragettes might attempt.

King George and Queen Mary attended the meet and were greeted vociferously as they entered the royal box. There were also many American tourists in the private boxes in the stand.

Although no sartorial censor stood guard at the entrance to the royal inclosure, the word had gone forth that women appearing in scandalizing or freak dresses would do so at the risk of being barred next year.

This applied particularly to the slashed skirt which showed the wearer's stockings to the knees. Queen Mary was simply dressed in white and wore a straw hat with flowers on it.

Ten Dead Men Share Film With Roosevelt

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Aviator Andrew Drew, of St. Louis, killed when his aeroplane caught fire at Lima, Ohio, was the tenth man to die of those who appeared in the famous motion picture "death film," taken in St. Louis in October, 1910.

The others who have died are: Arch Hoxsey, Ralph Johnstone, P. O. Parmalee, A. C. Welsh, Howard Gill, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, Jacques Faure, Theodore Schreck and "Tony" Von Phul.

Of the others, Theodore Roosevelt was shot at Milwaukee, Alfred Le Blanc was disabled for life and Walter De Mumm was shot.

Shuptrine Takes Stovall's Place

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Herman C. Shuptrine, the administration candidate, was elected Representative in the Legislature yesterday over John J. Bouhan by a majority of 766.

Shuptrine succeeds Pleasant A. Stovall, who has been named by President Wilson for Minister to Switzerland and who recently resigned.

Napoleon's Hat and Gun Sold at Auction

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—A cosmopolitan crowd of buyers attended the sale of Napoleon relics at Sotheby's, yet while duly authenticated, they brought only $7,007.

Spink paid $1,750 for a portrait in oils of Napoleon by Rene-Theodore Berthon, a pupil of David, and $425 for Napoleon's hat worn when he was First Consul, with an original document certifying its genuineness.

Permain paid $675 for Napoleon's gun, a flint-lock sporting rifle, which belonged for many years to Egg, the famous gunmaker.

ATLANTA ARCHITECT WINS.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 17.—P. Thornton Marye, of Atlanta, has been selected as the architect for the new Wake County court house, to cost $200,000. He won this contract in a spirited competition.

BIGAMY CHARGE SPITE, HE SAYS

Following his arrest Tuesday morning on a bigamy charge preferred by the Chief of Police of Unadilla, Ga., H. G. Wade, a machinist, attributed his trouble to "spite work" by a Unadilla man, who has had a grudge against him two years.

Wade is 24 years old. He said he came to Atlanta a week ago to work for the American Bridge Company, steel contractor on the Healey Building. He admitted have married a Unadilla girl, the daughter of a prosperous Georgia planter, a year ago, as the Unadilla Chief charges. He said she knew where he was and that she is his only wife. His wife was Miss Sannie Lokaman.

Two years ago, Wade said, a young man in Unadilla was about to wed. Wade knew he had a wife from whom he had not been divorced and he so informed the prospective bride. That broke up the marriage, of course, and Wade said the other man had made him trouble ever since.

"A year ago when I was in Macon this man slipped up behind me when I was at work one night and struck me over the head," Wade said. "We had a fight, and I took his pistol from him and shot him. He said then he would get even with me. He is out for revenge."

Wade said he never had the slightest trouble with his wife.

NEAR-BEER MEN WIN 2 STRIKING VICTORIES

Court Rules Railroads Can't Be Forced to Reveal Shipments. Single Tax Allowed.

Near-beer men won two important victories Tuesday when the Supreme Court of Georgia decided that railroad companies can not be required to furnish police departments with information regarding shipments of intoxicants, and wholesalers in near-beer can not be required to pay the annual $1,000 tax on each brand of near-beer handled by them.

The first decision applies directly to the Atlanta law, commonly known as the "McClelland Ordinance," requiring railroads to furnish the police department with full information regarding all shipments of intoxicants of more than three gallons. It was held to be "repugnant to the fifteenth section of the act of Congress known as the interstate commerce act, as amended June 18, 1910." A fine of $200 or a sentence of 30 days was the penalty provided for failure of railroad companies to furnish the information.

Railway Agent Convicted.

O. M. Ezell, agent for the Central of Georgia, declined to furnish the information and was placed under arrest March 19, 1912. He was convicted and appealed to the Supreme Court. A voluminous mass of testimony and citations was laid before the higher court.

In conclusion the decree read, "It was suggested in the brief of counsel for the city, since this case arose, what is known as the 'Webb Act' has been passed by Congress. Whatever may be the extent or effect of that act—as to which we express no opinion—it has no effect upon the present case."

Demand Can't Be Made.

The Supreme Court held that demand for such information was not derived from the fact that a crime had been committed, but that the officers were simply seeking information which might lead to the discovery of violations of the law.

Ruling on the near-beer tax of $1,000 on each brand handled by wholesalers was handed down in the case of J. H. Morgan, of Brunswick. His arrest was made under section 5 of the General Tax Act, Civil Code 983.

The court held that the tax only could be applied to the particular place of business and not to each specific brand of near-beer handled.

Three Charged With Court Irregularity

MACON, GA., June 17.—Justice of the Peace J. H. Brown, his constable, Leo Davis, and E. W. Howard, who appeared in Brown's court as a prosecutor of Edgar Elias, a negro, have been indicted by the Bibb Grand Jury for alleged irregularities in the case against the negro. It is claimed that Elias was made to pay $14 costs for his release from jail, in violation of the law.

J. A. Flournoy, who had the negro employed at the time of his arrest, is prosecuting the three indictments.

Lane Urges Law to Drain Swamp Lands

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary Lane has submitted a recommendation to Congress for the drainage and reclamation of public swamp and overflowed lands in any State or Territory.

Mr. Land authorized an agreement with Oregon to co-operate in the construction of the Tunlo irrigation project, comprising 35,000 acres, to cost $900,000.

DR. COOK AGAIN TO EXPLORE ARCTICS

Dr. Cook, of Polar fame, is going polaring again—in other words, he has an "itching of the feet and a trembling of the hands, real signs of wanderlust," according to a statement at the Hotel Aragon Monday afternoon.

"Yes, the fever has me again," said the genial doctor. "It always strikes me about this time of the year, but I'm in for it in real dead earnest this time, and just as soon as I get the Polar matter cleaned up satisfactorily I am going on another expedition to the North Polar regions, where there remains much work to be done. I will make an expedition also to Mount Everest, about which there is a great deal to be learned."

Dr. Cook said he would like to get on the way even sooner, but could not do so until the Polar controversy had been settled, as he owes this debt to his family and to his good name.

Loses His Countess Because of Religion

BIARRITZ, June 17.—The Marquis de Alcedo, of Spain, announces that there will be no marriage between his daughter, Ysabel, Countess Bannelos, and Maurice Burke-Roche, of New York. The Marquis states that religious differences make such a union impossible.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago.

Wants Divorce; Kin Kidnaped Her Son

Mrs. Julia Cleo Clarke, who figured in a sensational kidnaping case last March, when she had her mother-in-law, Mrs. G. S. Clarke, indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of abducting her son to Chicago, Tuesday filed a suit for divorce against her husband, A. H. Clarke.

In the first part of March Mrs. Clarke appeared before the Grand Jury and said that her mother-in-law had persuaded her husband to desert her and that the two had gone to Chicago with her 2-year-old son. The child was returned to the mother shortly after the indictment and it was understood there would be no prosecution of the kidnaping case.

Reweds First Wife; Alimony for Second

CHICAGO, June 17.—W. D. Boyce, a wealthy published and traveler, remarried his first wife, Mary J. Boyce, in Ottawa, Ill. They are here on the way to a honeymoon in Alaska.

Boyce was divorced in 1908. He married Miss Virgina Lee, of Oak Park, Ill., and went to South America. A year ago Mrs. Boyce got a divorce with $100,000 alimony.

Boyce attracted attention in 1906 by an offer to take over the postal business of the United States, guaraneeing 1-cent postage.

Parcel Stamp Sale in 3 Months $7,076,517

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Postmaster General Burleson to-day announced $7,076,517 was received by the Postoffice Department from the sale of parcel post stamps between January 1 and March 31. During the three months more than 150,000,000 packages were handled by the system.

Chicago led all citiese in the sale of stamps, with a total sale amounting to $1,254,469. In New York City the sale of stamps totaled $818,138.

Dr. Landrum Likely To Be Mercer Head

MACON, June 17.—It is believed now that Dr. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., a native of Macon and graduate of Mercer, former pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta and one of the most eminent divines of the South, will be offered the presidency of Mercer University.

A meeting of the trustees will be held at an early date to elect a successor to Dr. S. Y. Jameson.

BOILERMAKERS ON STRIKE.

MOBILE, ALA., June 17.—On account of trouble with a foreman, fifteen boilermakers, employed in the repair shops of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, went on strike to-day. The matter has been referred to the officials of the Boilermakers' Union for settlement.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The Senate Committee on Territories today favorably reported the Jones-Chamberlain bill providing for a $40,000,000 bond issue to construct railroads in Alaska.

The measure was amended in committee, the clause providing for a commission being struck out and a paragraph leaving the supervision of the railroad construction up to the President being substituted.

Drug Slave Spends $100,000 in Decade

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Volmey Tilbert told Police Judge Sullivan that in eleven years he had spent $100,000, mostly for drugs, to which he is a slave, averaging nearly $30 a day. He was arrested for buying cocaine.

"I came from a wealthy family in Memphis," he said. "Eleven years ago I left college and inherited $100,000. Then I took to this. In the last month I spent my last $1,000. Can you send me to an institution?"

Judge Sullivan postponed action.

THE "BLUE TAG" FURNITURE SALE

A Message of Fine Savings on Every Little Blue Tag.

Atlanta has not known such a sale of furniture as this "Blue Tag" Sale! Such elegant furniture, such reckless reductions, make a rare combination and a rare opportunity---an opportunity that the housekeeper who is in any way interested in furniture is not going to overlook. It would be too expensive for her to overlook it.

Why, there is not a piece of furniture that goes into a home that can not be bought for a great deal less than at any other time of the year! We mean the most elegant home, where furniture must be in keeping with luxurious surroundings, and the home where simplicity rules and true, sturdy, long-life furniture is wanted.

Take, for instance, this

Dining Room Set

Perhaps one of the rarest examples of mahogany dining room furniture that was ever brought to Atlanta. You must see how richly the mahogany is marked and its wonderful color to appreciate the truth of this statement.

It is a Colonial set.

The Table is 60 inches, extension table.

The China Cabinet---properly it should be called a China "Press." It stands high, with mirrored back, plate glass shelves, paneled front, and with compartments below for holding quantities of wares.

This Set Was $946.00. Now the Blue Tag Shows $695.00

A Day For Her Who Would Be Her Own Milliner---

Untrimmed Hats That Were $2.50 to $7.50 Are

75c

But the quantity is limited to a number smaller, we know, than the number of women who would be their own milliners with such a tempting opportunity before them—there are eighty-five untrimmed hats in all. There are hemps, split Belgians and a few Milans in the darker colors so fine for traveling, for wear with suits. The shapes are those the style authorities demanded this season—small and medium, with brims and crowns turned and curved in wondrous ways and varied.

And at 75c, instead of $2.50 to $7.50.

Flower Trimmings That Were 50c to $1.50 Are

25c

A garden of flowers in full bloom. There are roses—ever so many—pink roses, red, red roses, dainty little clusters of French roses, carnations—all but fragrant—nodding poppies, rich dahlias and others. They were 50c to $1.50 a bunch—which may mean a single flower or a half dozen flowers. And now they are 25c!

The Social World

The wedding of Miss Charles Owens and Edward Buckingham Hall, Jr., of Morristown, N. J., which took place Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, was of broad social interest. While the invitations to the church ceremony had been recalled, on account of illness in the bride's family, there were present the relatives and intimate friends of the couple, and the wedding was characterized by unusually beautiful and elaborate decorations.

In the library, where the ceremony was performed by Dr. A. M. Hughlett, the bridal party were grouped before a bank of palms, extending to the canopy of smilax, which was fringed with valley lilies. On either side and in the center of the altar of greenery were great clusters of Easter lilies, th same flowers being banked on the mantl and bookcases. The white prieu dieu was garlanded with smilax and tied with clusters of Easter lilies, and the wide doorway leading into the apartment was festooned with ropes of Shasta daisies and smilax.

In the hall and other apartments Easter lilies with greenery were used, the entrance to the dining room being marked by clusters of garden flowers, and smilax forming a mural decoration throughout the house.

The wedding party included a group of little people, Theodore Owens, Harriet Shewmake, John Owens and Donovan Owens, who preclided Miss Marion Goldsmith, as maid of honor. Mrs. Jerome Simmons, Jr., and Miss Frances Connally held the ribbons.

The bride entered with her father, Mr. John S. Owens, who gave her away. She was very lovely in her bridal gown of white satin, the long court train being draped from the high waist line, and the corsage and sleeves formed of rose point lace. The tulle veil was adjusted with orange blossoms and worn over the face, and she carried a bouquet of wild roses, showered with valley lilies. Her ornaments were antique pearls, an heirloom in her family, and a diamond bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Owens wore white brocade satin, with overdress of shadow lace and a corsage bouquet of valley lilies. Mrs. Edward J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., the bridegroom's mother, wore lavender satin with tunic of brocade chiffon and a magnificent pearl necklace. Her flowers were lavender sweetpeas. Mrs. William Donovan, the bride's grandmother, wore lavender charmeuse veiled in shadow lace with pearl embroidery and valley lilies. Mrs. Claude Shewmake, her aunt, wore flesh-colored charmeuse satin and lace, with valley lilies. Mrs. Arthur Chapman, of Macon, wore pink chiffon and lace with pearl garniture. Miss Donovan, of Macon, wore blue satin veiled in lavender chiffon and lace.

Punch was served on the porch from a bowl embedded in garden flowers. Misses Elizabeth Shewmake, Lillian Stephens and Margaret Donovan presided, wearing white embroidered chiffon. The table in the dining room was adorned with a large basket filled with vari-colored field flowers, surrounded by smaller baskets of the same flowers—poppies, daisies, corn flowers, hollyhocks and feverfew.

A number of out-of-town guests were present, among them Mr. Wickerbotham, of Chicago.

The array of handsome presents received by the young couple, who are both members of prominent and wealthy families, bespoke their wide popularity, and included a magnificent collection of silver, china, Oriental rugs, cutglass and French prints.

Plan Swimming Party.

T. Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Frazier, Messrs. Wallace Draper, Westervelt Terhune, J. D. Osborne, Walter Dubard, Lewis Gregg, Ed Gay, Ellis Whiteley, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, Lynn Werner, Richard Thornton, Rucker McCarty, George McCarty, Neal Reed, Remsen King, Ernest Armistead, Clarence Knowles and Hal Hentz.

An al fresco supper will follow the swimming party, which will be one of a series of swimming parties enjoyed by the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Adair.

Rohl-Young.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Rohl and Mr. Frederick J. Young took place at the Church of the Ascension, Oak Park, Ill., on the afternoon of June 10.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor, Miss Lois Rohl, wore white lingerie and carried pink sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Young are at home at 100 Queen Street, West End.

For Miss Gaddy.

Miss Bayma Gaddy, a bride-elect, was tendered a linen shower by Mrs. Horace Mashburn. Daisies and nasturtiums formed the decorations, and Miss Sara Morris gave piano solos following the game of dominoes. Guests included the Misses Ison, Ruth Williams, Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Mrs. Ben Sheridan, Mrs. Walter Sparrow, Mrs. Paul Traber, Mrs. Percy Gardner, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Kreis and Mrs. Tippin.

For Misses Graves.

Lawn Party in West End.

The ladies of the Church of the Incarnation at West End will give a lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Pollard, corner of Holderness Street and Sells Avenue, Thursday evening, beginning at 6 o'clock.

There will be all sorts of entertainment for the guests, including an old-fashioned open-air dance on the grass. "The Virginia Reel" will be enjoyed and games will be conducted by the committee on entertainment.

A gypsy booth will furnish a glimpse into the future, and lemonade wells and ice cream and cake booths will supply refreshments.

Mrs. Pollard will be hostess for the occasion, assisted by Mrs. G. O. Jones and Mrs. H. A. Tripp, who will have charge of the refreshments.

A group of young people will provide popular songs, and other pleasures incident to a lawn party will be in order.

Mrs. James B. Fitch

Who was formerly Miss Eula Varnell, her marriage to James Briggs Fitch having been a recent interesting event. Mr. and Mrs. Fitch are now spending their honeymoon in Old Point Comfort and the mountains of Virginia. On their return to Atlanta next week they will be at home at the Georgian Terrace.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Frank Cundell entertained at bridge Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Royal Ingersoll. Sweetpeas and daisies decorated the house and the prizes were white silk hose.

A Dress Sale at Keely's

Summer Dresses $16.50 to $20 Values at $8.50

To-morrow a Sale of 678 dresses

This will be a welcome sale for the woman who has looked over so many "bargain offerings" this season, and failed to find the right thing.

These dresses are of the scarce materials. The color range is remarkable in its variety of strictly fashionable shades. You can anticipate your summer wants to-morrow, and at this low figure, will take two or three of the dresses offered. Here you will find grouped for you 678 dresses (we wish there were 2,000 of them)

189 Linen Dresses
152 Ratine Dresses
68 Eponge Dresses

At $8.50 Each

112 Crash Dresses
82 Voile Dresses
75 Tissue Dresses

678 Choice Summer Dresses Worth $16.50, $18.75 and $20

In the STYLES you will find about TWENTY MODELS
In COLORS you can secure any fashionable TINT
Every SIZE from Misses' 16 to Ladies' 44
And in VALUES you will find them worth $16.50, $18.75, $20

In the collection there are new Balkan Blouses, with crushed girdles and draped skirts, with colored collars and cuffs, high waist.

The French Linen Dress is bloused front and back; turn down collars and cuffs hand-embroidered; slashed skirt; finished with hand-made ornament buttons.

The one-piece strictly tailored dress has hand-embroidered bands down front; hand-embroidered collars and cuffs; high girdle; button trimmed.

There are also tailored suits of Linen Canvas, French linen and linen crash, in the new cutaway, Balkan Blouse and Norfolk Jacket effects; plain or draped skirts; high girdles.

The wise buyer, the keen-eyed shopper, the woman with an instinct for value, will find this sale the most alluring of the season.

Our buyer visited last week an upset suit market, and bought fresh from a prominent maker of dresses this great lot which goes on sale to-morrow. He discarded the original prices, and sold us the lot at one figure. He tells us that they are easily worth $15.00 each to make, without reference to the retail prices, which in most cases would be from $16.75 to $20.

These suits and dresses are offered because of unusual market conditions, and the manufacturer wanted to clear his stocks. It was easy for us to pick the best offering of the market, because of our inflexible rule of keeping CLEAN, FRESH STOCKS. We are never crowded with undesirable dresses, hence we are in a position to take advantage of just such conditions as these.

The center of our whole second floor will be given up to this sale, and the expected business of this occasion will require that we draft extra salespeople for promptly serving you.

DIXIE WOMAN IS A RIGID GAME WARDEN

MOBILE, June 17.—"I have already made two arrests for game violations. I had no trouble with the prisoners. I carried a revolver and a shotgun—and the pothunters knew that I could use either of them."

Which announcement goes to show that Mrs. Norma Frederic Gibboney didn't become game warden merely to wear a bright badge. Mrs. Gibboney was appointed warden recently by Governor Emmet O'Neal. She probably is the only woman in the United States with this sort of commission.

When the news of her appointment was made public, the pothunters in their huts along the Mobile Bay marshes thought it a good joke.

"She's one o' these society women," they laughed. "She never would come out on a rainy day, for fear of getting her feet wet."

They were fully convinced of their mistake when the handsome warden came upon two of their number slaughtering duck, and marched them in with one hand resting significantly on the black butt of the revolver at her hip.

Is a Crack Shot.

Her home is Aloha. It stands among acres of forest and foliage. Mobile Bay stretches away to the east and at the back is the Dog River. She is a deadly shot with a rifle and can bring down the mallards from behind a blind with the best shots in Mobile. It was her love for animals, and not the passion for hunting, that led her to become one of the Alabama game police.

"I have spent my life on the fringe of the beautiful waters of this bay," she said. "All its birds and animals are dear friends of mine. I have made a close study of them. Recently I found that the inroads of professional hunters were mowing them down at a rate that would soon mean their extinction. It hurts me to see the ducks slaughtered without regard to the law or to the decent ethics of sportsmanship.

"Here I was, right in the center of it, with nothing that I could do to stop it.

Idea a Good One.

"I wondered why I hadn't thought of that before. I had a good saddle horse, all the time I wanted—and my heart was in the work. I got the commission.

"It is the birds that I particularly want to protect. We seldom realize how much good they do. If they didn't prey constantly on the insects, we would be without vegetation before very long. I am familiar with every bird of Alabama. Ten years ago you could see flocks of beautiful white tarsus and blue cranes in the edge of the water out there. Now they are curiosities.

"I have recently fitted out a log cabin in the midst of ten acres of forest that is just as nature made it. I intend to spend the rest of my life there."

Mrs. Gibboney is well known over the entire South. She is a frequent visitor to New Orleans. She is a descendant of Zach Taylor, Patrick Henry and the Virginia Sheltons. She is prominent in society. From now on she won't see so much of receptions and pink teas.

"Women would be a lot happier and healthier," she said, "if they spent more time with nature and less at bridge parties and theaters."

High Education Worth $25,000 in 40 Years

CHICAGO, June 17.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by Northwestern University. For the first five years out of college the average earning power of the graduate was $867, and for the next five years, $1,862.

An estimate of the value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and the report of the Government census and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statistician considers a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

Marshalls "Borrow" Baby and Blues Go

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have borrowed a baby to enliven their Washington home. He is Thomas Marshall Sutherland, four-year-old son of the Vice President's pastor.

Young Thomas Marshall thinks "Papa Marshall" as he calls him, is the best chum ever. Mrs. Marshall says borrowing a baby is a sure cure for the blues which haunt a childless home.

Charlton to Be Tried in Italy Next Fall

ROME, June 17.—The formalities in regard to the extradition of Porter Charlton, who murdered his wife here some three years ago, and who, according to a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, must return here for trial, will not be tried before next fall.

Fisher Has All the Temperament

His Wife 'Just a Country Girl'

Artist's Bride Doesn't Believe in Suffrage and Wouldn't Vote if She Could.

Pauline Welch, the pretty singing comedienne who dislodged Mutt and Jeff from first place in Bud Fisher's heart, is just a "happy little country girl."

There are no frills and no fads in her private life—none of the Eva Tanguay stuff, with a carload of hats and a particularly colored gown for every hour of the day. If she has a hobby, she doesn't know it, and she wouldn't be a suffragette for the world.

Bud Fisher has an artistic temperament, she says; one of those troublesome temperaments that demand constant attention and explode without notice, and it's all one girl can do to live with it. If it wasn't for the fact that Bud Fisher, the man, is a perfectly lovely fellow who rises above his artistic eccentricities, Pauline Welch would have a really exasperating time at least 24 hours every day.

Miss Welch, or Mrs. Fisher, as she is now, was deeply meditative yesterday afternoon when a Georgian reporter interviewed her. And well she might be, for she was sitting in the Piedmont Cafe at the very same table where Bud Fisher began to spring all that foolish stuff about love and marriage just a year ago.

The Temperamental Bud.

"What do I do with it? I lock it up, put the key in my purse and go away and forget about it—that's what I do with it.

"Then when I think the artistic temperament has been imprisoned long enough, I go back and let it out. Then I say, 'Now, young man, such and such is the case.' And that always settles it.

"The artistic temperament is an awful thing. Bud has it bad."

Bud was coming back.

"Bless his heart, he's a dear fellow, and I love him better than anything in the world. He's the finest man in the world, and I'm perfectly happy."

Isn't that just like a woman?

Pauline No Suffragette.

Miss Welch says Bud is a fine dancer and would make a great hit doubling with her. He's a better judge of an act than she is, because he bet her $25 yesterday that she would get a reception at the Forsyth, and she bet she wouldn't—and she lost.

Miss Welch was asked if she was a suffragette. "I should say not," was the quick response.

"You almost insult me. Women are not made for such things. You ought to see the suffragettes in New York. They stand on the street corners and go crazy, or act just like men, which is the same thing. No voting for me."

CREDIT MEN IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—The eighteenth annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men opened its four-day session this morning with addresses of welcome by Governor James M. Cox and Henry T. Hunt, Mayor of Cincinnati.

Spanish Historian Calls Columbus Jew

PARIS, June 17.—Enrigue Arribas Y. Turull, Spanish historian, has published a brochure in which he gives as the conclusion of his latest researches among original documents that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not an Italian, Spaniard nor Corsican.

Eighteen documents dated 1413 to 1528 establish Columbus as a native of Pontevedra and the great discoverer merely posed as a Genoese from policy, says Turull.

In his mother's family, the Fonteresas, the men's names are Abraham, Eleazar, Jacob and Benjamin.

Insurance Injunction Decision Due Tuesday

MACON, June 17.—A decision will be rendered this afternoon on the petition of a number of minority stockholders for the appointment of a receiver for the Georgia Life Insurance Company and for an injunction to restrain the company from changing its name and reducing its capital stock from $500,000 to $300,000.

The company asks $50,000 damages from the stockholders who instituted the proceeding.

Club Women to Sell Posies for Hospital

MACON, June 17.—In pursuance of a campaign to raise money for the Macon Hospital, women and girls of the Sidney Lanier Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and Children of the Confederacy will on next Saturday sell flowers on the streets.

Miss Ida Holt, Miss Anna Bryant, Mrs. J. A. Selden, Mrs. T. A. Small, Sr., Mrs. S. C. Moore and Mrs. W. T. Morgan are prominent in the flower day plans.

Aim to Be Attorney Dead, She Ends Life

NEW YORK, June 17—Laid off because of the slack season, Pauline Rosen, 21, hurled herself from the top of eleven-story building. She died in an hour.

The girl, a Russian, came to America a year ago to study to become an attorney. Out of her slender earnings she sent money home to her family. Later she planned to have them come to America to join her.

Pauline studied in a night school. She earned $8 a week.

NEVER PASS UP A CHANCE, SAYS PONY MAN

Only One Way to Win in Contest, "Keep Everlastingly at It," He Advises.

CONTEST GINGER.

He laughs best who laughs after July 31.

Explain to your friends the special vote offers which impel haste.

Let them know they can help you more now than later, when the offers will be withdrawn.

Faint heart never won anything really worth while.

It takes two to get votes—the candidate and his friend. If you are the candidate, find the other half of the bargain.

A little concentration now will pay mightily.

You may get tired now, but you can find recreation with a pony after July 31.

"The wise candidate," remarked the contest manager, "goes to all prospects, the good and the unpromising alike. Occasionally he gets a surprise from both. The person he thinks almost 'landed' may disappoint him and the 'poor' prospect may subscribe for a year."

Many of the boys and girls who are striving for the twenty-odd ponies The Georgian and American are giving away August 1 come to the contest manager for advice. He has only one rule for success—"Keep everlastingly at it."

But if a boy or girl learns nothing else from the contest, there will be a big profit in it, for the "Keep everlastingly at it" precept holds good all through life in every line of work.

To lose the chance of a single subscription may be to lose the chance of winning a pony. It may make the difference between first and second place. Therefore, get every person you can, and you will have no cause for regrets.

It is better by far to find, after July 31, that you could have won on less votes than you had—than to find that you are 100 short of being the winner.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

AFTER I get thru with this book of verses, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I want you to read it too. I paid a dollar & a half for it, Ma sed, & considering the fack that it is the first work of a new poet, I think I got it very cheep.

I doant think the first work of any poet is worth a dollar & a half, Pa sed. There was a time, Pa sed, wen I wud have paid almost any price for a good book, but owing to the present high cost of living things is different. The way I look at it now, Pa sed, a dollar & a half may not be much, but it is fifteen cool glasses of lager or five pounds of good substanshul steak. Who is the young nut that they are calling a new poet? sed Pa.

His name is Orland La Tosca, sed Ma. His hoam is in Californy & he nevver went to a college or eeven a high school. Him & his parents lived out among the redwood trees, Ma sed, & they was too poor to give him much educashun. But the boy cuddent be stopped. His Wunderful geenyus asserted itself wen he was only sixteen. Just lissen to this, one of his vary first poems. It is called Sunrise, & I think it is simply divine Lissen:

First comes a flush of pink so nearly white
That color seems a hint alone. Then comes
A bolder tint, as though the god of Dawn
Were flushing with some ungovernable rage,
A dew-damp bird sings in a gnarled tree
And then the morning dawns all glorified.

It was one of the vary first things, sed Ma. I shud think his parents wud be vary proud to have such a boy.

Oh, I doant know, sed Pa. I am a whole lot prouder of little Bobbie than I wud be of any almost-poet. I doant think much of the piece you jest red, sed Pa. "Dew-damp bird," sed Pa. Ha, Ha, that must have been sum bird. I have heard of cold birds and hot birds, Pa sed, & I have heard of wise birds & gay birds, but I doant think I wud know what to say to a dew-damp bird if I was interduced to one.

Oh, doant try to be cunning, sed Ma. You know rite down in yure heart that the poem I jest red to you is sure to be immortal.

Immortal rats, sed Pa. It is nothing but a bunch of junk. I guess thare must have been at leest ten thousand poems ritten about sunrise, sed Pa, moast of them by peepul that dident know enuff to get up in time to see a regular sunrise, & all of them poems sed the saim thing, sed Pa, about the first tint of dawn steeling into the sky & about a bird singing. Why cant a bird sing onst in a while without a poet beeing its press agent, Pa sed. Reed me sum moar of those dethless poems, sed Pa, I want to git a hed ake.

Then listen to this dainty littel love ballad, sed Ma.

Arabella, Arabella,
Tripping lightly through the meadow
Where the sunset throws its shadow,
How I love to watch the meeting
When your lips the sun is greeting.
Sweetest nymph that ever walked here,
Loveliest sprite that ever talked here,
How I long to be yure fellow,
Arabella!

Chapeau a la Parisienne

Three Models That You Can Copy

Mlle. Marcelle Praince.

By Olivette.

TO-DAY we are showing you three hats that express the latest manifestation of "le dernier cri" from Paris. The hats are worn by three charming French actresses, and are quite the latest thing from one of the smartest of the smart French hat shops.

Mlle. Marcelle Praince, of the "Varietes," shows us the new idea called the "cabriolet dip," and at the short brimmed side her hat does resemble the bowler with down drooping brim worn by the cabby of Paris. The brim rolls up a bit at the right. The model was bound at the edge with cerise satin ribbon and the crown is covered with a checker board made of interwoven cerise and white satin ribbon. A veil of soft white shadow weave adds a softening touch to this simple but fetching model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW CAN I TELL?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 19. A young man who calls at our office claims he loves me. He also asked me to write to him.

Please advise me whether he is serious about it. ANXIOUS.

My dear, you ask a question impossible for me to answer. If he is serious or not, you must learn for yourself. Watch him carefully for a few months, and keep a close guard on your heart while doing it.

IT WILL IN TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and in love with a man two years my senior. He has but one bad habit and that is smoking cigarettes. Do you think I should let this interfere with true love? J. D. E.

A man of 20 who is an inveterate cigarette smoker is not worth any woman's love, and she invites unhappiness by associating her life with his.

The habit will kill your love in time. Why not choose a quick death for your love now?

I AM SURE OF IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young lady, and when I tell her of my love she says that she loves me also, but she is constantly teasing me, and when I tell how she hurts my feelings, she just laughs and teases all the omre. Do you think she cares for me? I have reason to think so, because she never keeps company with other boys. A. W.

She teases you, a sign of love; she never keeps company with others; another proof. My dear young man, what more do you ask?

YES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and engaged to a wealthy financier, but have heard that he is dissipated. There is no love between us. Should I give up position and wealth for love? NOVENA.

Love is worth every sacrifice, and in your case there would be no sacrifice, since there could be no happiness with a man who is dissipated, and no position and wealth if the dissipation lasts long.

SHE IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and draw a salary of $12 per week, with promise of an increase. I have been in love with a girl of my age for three years, but she has shown little affection until, lately, I proposed to her, but she said: "We are too young," and had better wait. L. J. A.

The girl has exceptionally good sense. If your age were right, your salary isn't. Do as the girl suggests, and some day you will realize what a great debt of gratitude you owe her.

LAST SENTENCE EXPLAINS IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, whom I have known for one year, I have every reason to believe she loves me also. Is it proper for her to let me kiss her when I arrive or when I leave her house? She has consented at times; at others she refuses. To what do you attribute this? It is understood between us that it is only a kiss of friendship. WARREN.

The kiss of friendship' is not for those of opposite sexes. Tell her of your love, ask her to marry you, and if she consents you will have a right to ask for her kisses, and they will not be refused.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, 'for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put is mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whisky, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't yer?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Like an Oyster.

Cain might have answered, "None of your damned business," but he didn't. He simply said:

"Some friends of mine came up from Atlanta to spend a few weeks in their summer camp and I just came up, too; that's all. Let's have another drink."

They drank silently. Cain spoke again.

"I asked you awhile ago where you came from. I take it you live around here somewhere. If you live on my property you can continue to do so for all of me. I only built this shack to have a place as headquarters to hunt and fish. I have never used it before and I don't believe I ever will use it again.

The stranger made no offer of thanks, but accepted another invitation to drink. He was not at all talkative, and the more Cain saw of him the less inclined he was to ask questions concerning his identity. He did venture one question. It was:

"Is your family up here with you?"

The mountaineer (and this word probably describes him best of all) arose abruptly from his chair without making answer. It was evidently not his day for answering questions from any man he did not know. They drank again, standing, and then Cain went into the shack and returned with the stranger to the edge of the road, which was only a few rods away, and, arriving there, he suddenly asked:

A Proposition.

"Do you want to make some money?"

There are few persons in the world who will not reply "yes" to this question. The mountaineer was not one of them. He intimated that he might be induced to make some. With that as a basis to work on, Cain engaged the stranger in earnest conversation for more than half an hour. Dusk settled and night came on ere they parted. The mountaineer disappeared in the darkness and Cain returned to the shack, where his man had a meal prepared for him.

Early next morning Cain returned to Atlanta, his man driving the car to Pew Creek. It was left there to be shipped later in the day by freight. In Atlanta the broken bones in Cain's right hand were set and the member put in a splint. Ten days later he went to the mountains again, but instead of taking a train for Pew Creek, he took the Knoxville line and landed at a station on what might be called the eastern side of the mountains. There he procured a horse and saddle and rode ten miles in a westerly direction, uphill all the way. When he reached a point where a huge knob of granite stuck up out of the ground like an inverted tin basin, he dismounted and walked directly into the woods on the opposite side of the road. A hundred yards in he stopped beside a massive oak tree.

Presently four men appeared, one of whom Cain recognized as the black-bearded mountaineer he had entertained at his shack. The others were dressed in the same kind of garb.

"Are you ready to do business?" demanded Cain.

Without more words, Cain drew a leather case from his pocket and counted out a sum of money to the four men. At that instant Cain became possessed of the fear that he might not be allowed to depart. But nothing of the sort happened. The four men received the money and disappeared in the forest.

Cain mounted his horse and rode back whence he came. An evil smile played on his lips.

CHAPTER XXXI.

GORDON KELLY was at the bridge a full hour ahead of time. Mildred had said 3 o'clock, but as early as 1 o'clock he had arrayed himself in a suit of light summer flannels (it was now early in the month of June), and after trying to kill time around the house he had, in his impatience, jumped into his automobile and rode to the meeting place.

The minutes that followed seemed ages to him. There was a sharp bend in the road, just before it reached the bridge, in the direction Mildred must come, and he had to trust to his ear rather than his eye to detect the approach of a vehicle. At last he heard a sound that he knew was made by the little runabout. When the car came in sight he was standing on the bridge. Mildred saw him, and raised a hand from the wheel she waved a gay salute. Gordon lifted his cap in answering greeting, but he had faced the crowd and the tumult and the opposing pitcher in the crisis of that last game in Atlanta with less trepidation than he faced the oncoming automobile.

Mildred stopped the runabout close to Gordon's car, switched off the magneto, put the lever in neutral and applied the emergency brake with business-like precision. Then, turning her head toward the young man, she favored him with a beaming smile and said:

"Here I am on time, Mr. Gordon Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly Again!"

At these words a look of dejection came into Gordon's face.

"Mr. Kelly again! I suppose as long as you call me Mr. Kelly I will have to call you Miss Deery, and I am dying to call you——"

"Mr. Bud, then, if you like that name better," said Mildred, with a little toss of her head.

Gordon smiled and held out his hand. She placed her fingers in it and jumped lightly to the ground.

"That certainly has a more familiar sound, but I would much prefer to have you call me Gordon," he said.

Mildred faced him squarely.

"But I want to know about this Mr. Bud and this Mr. Gordon Kelly business. Why is there such a mystery over it?"

"There's no mystery that cannot be very easily solved," replied Gordon. "Let us walk over to that big oak, where it is cool and shady, and I will tell you all about it."

They walked slowly and silently side by side until they stood beneath the spreading branches of the huge tree. At their feet flowed the purling brook. Gordon indicated a place where they might rest, but Mildred shook her head.

"Before we get too comfortable I want to know about Mr. Bud, or Mr. Kelly, or whatever his name is," she said.

Just a Nickname.

"That is the simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Bud is a nickname my father gave me. My mother also grew into the habit of calling me Bud. The people around the place never heard me called by any other name and naturally they addressed me as Mr. Bud."

Mildred let her eyes fall to the ground and began toying with the leaves with the toe of her shoe.

"I can readily understand that," she said, "but what I cannot understand is that no one in your home knows who Gordon Kelly is. When Elmer called your house on the telephone the other day your colored boy, Steve, said there was no Mr. Gordon Kelly there, no Mr. Kelly and no Mr. Gordon there. And when I called you this morning the person who answered the telephone said the same thing."

"That, too," is easily explained," declared Gordon. His face became very serious. "I meant to have told you, It has been on my mind ever since we met under the bridge over there. I—I—I will tell you now."

But he hesitated. Mildred brought her eyes to bear on his. He was looking off in the distance.

"Well" she said, quietly.

Gordon stooped and picked a twig from the ground. He broke it in small pieces and tossed them one by one into the rippling brook. Still he did not answer. Mildred, who had not taken her eyes off his face, saw the blood suddenly paint it crimson and she felt herself trembling slightly. Gordon turned his face toward hers and their eyes met.

They're Engaged.

"Mildred," he said, and his voice was hoarse and passionate, "God knows there is nothing to conceal and I want to tell you all about myself and my life. But there is something I want to tell you first. I MUST tell it to you first. It is that I love you, Mildred. Oh, how I love you! That is all I can say now; say it over and over again. From the very first day, Mildred. From the very instant you put your hand in mine and the rain beat down on us. How I love you! Will you take me, Mildred?" His blue-gray eyes were humid now and he, too, was trembling.

"You know it, Gordon," she murmured.

Their lips met and then her head nestled against his breast and she sighed contentedly. The merry brook raced on, the sun shone kind, a lazy breeze played with a stray wisp of her hair. She felt a strange peacefulness creep over her as she rested in his arms.

"Honeybunch," she repeated raising her head, "Oh, Gordon, what a sweet name you have for me. Where did you find it?"

"My mother called me that when I was a little boy. My mother, Mildred, was the sweetest woman, next to you, that ever breathed."

"She must have been, dear heart. And you will tell me all about her when the time comes."

Mildred gently released herself from Gordon's embrace and sat down on the ground. He threw himself by her side as close as he could get, reclining on his elbow. She gently stroked his hair.

What the Tease Said.

"Do you know what that little tease, Elmer, said to me when I left him to-day?" she asked.

"I never could guess," he replied, looking up in her eyes.

"He said"—Mildred leaned over and whispered the rest, blushing furiously.

"Mildred, you are certainly the sweetest girl in the world to tell me that. Why, the little beggar is quicker than I am."

"He has been with me more than you have, dear. He is a bright lad. In this case I think he was quicker than I was myself."

And so the talk of these two happy young people went on and on. The shadows lengthened and the sun sank behind the hills before they realized it.

"Oh, I must be going, Gordon; they'll think I'm lost or that something has happened to me," exclaimed Mildred springing to her feet.

"Something has happened to you, honeybunch and something has happened to me to make me the happiest man in the world."

"You are right, Gordon; something has happened and I am very, very happy."

They were walking toward the bridge when Mildred stopped suddenly.

"Oh Gordon, I want you to take me home in your car. I want to ride right next to you on the front seat. But if we do that what will become of the runabout?"

"Don't worry about that, sweetheart; come with me," and he led her along the edge of the brook until they came to the telephone in its box fastened to the tree.

"Steve," said Gordon as soon as his ring was answered, "take a car out of the garage, put a rope in it, bring Mose along with you and come down to the bridge. You will find a runabout there. I want you to tow it to Miss Deery's bungalow. Do you know where it is?"

"Yes, Mr. Bud."

"All right; hurry it along!"

"You are a regular Aladdin with his wonderful lamp, Gordon," said Mildred, slipping her arm through his. "I am just dying to see all that lies beyond those two great granite pillars."

"And I'm just crazy to have you see it all, sweetheart, for it's all yours now, and I hope you'll like it. I have lots to show you and lots to tell you. But I did want to tell you something else first."

"I want you to, Gordon."

With her head resting on his arm, they drove to her mountain home, he at the wheel. He had to switch on the electric headlights before they reached it. When they were within a few feet of their destination she made him stop the car.

"Quick," she whispered, "they can't see us behind the headlights." He folded her in his embrace.

"No more Mr. Kelly?" he said.

"No more Mr. Kelly," she replied.

"No more Mr. Bud?"

"No more Mr. Bud."

"Always Gordon?"

"Always Gordon," she repeated, softly.

"Hey!" yelled the voice of Elmer in the distance. "Breakaway there!"

YOU read the twenty-five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 26th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE telephone line from Pew Creek to Atlanta earned more money in tolls that night than it had earned in the previous six months. Mildred called up her mother and talked with her more than half an hour. This is the way she began:

"Oh, mother, won't you please come up to the mountains right away?—Ill? No indeed: I'm feeling simply great, but there's lots of things I want to tell you. . . . Oh, no; not over the telephone. . . . Of course not, mother dear. I am perfectly happy and contented up here, except that you are not with me and the way I feel to-night I never want to go back to Atlanta again. But you must come up right away."

And so on and so on. But not once in their long talk did Mildred mention Gordon Kelly's name to her mother. She wanted to hold her supreme secret all to herself, at least until her mother arrived. Nor did she tell of the trouble she had with Forrest Cain, deeming that a matter that would better not be spread on a public telephone wire. In the end, Mrs. Deery promised to come up for a few days, as she, too, needed rest after her labors in the household of Cain's sister.

Gordon Kelly called up Judge Barbee as soon as he reached home. He could not get him at his office, but reached him at his home. This is what he said:

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource.

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bit old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Elian may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this ungodly man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passion, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real life, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight. On the train from Liverpool to London she meets a woman who directs her to a semi-fashionable boarding house. A great hue and cry is being raised over her disappearance. She is feeling somewhat secure, when suddenly Mildred Bankes, of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," finds her. Mary confesses all to her and begs for her help.

"My dear child," said the mother, "not to know who the young lady is, where she comes from, why she is here, and whether she is married or single or a widow! —it is quite impossible to take her in."

IF I had not been so wildly agitated I should have known that this was the wrong way with Mildred, and it was not until I had said it all in a rush of whispered words that I saw her eyes fixed on me as if they were about to start from their sockets.

"But, my dear, dear child," she said, "this is worse and worse. Your father and your husband may have done wrong, but you have done wrong, too. Don't you see you have?"

I did not tell her that I had thought of all that before and did not believe any longer that God would punish me for breaking a bond I had been forced to make. But when she was about to rise, saying that, after all it would be a good thing to send me home before I had time to join my life to his—whoever he was—who had led me to forget my duty as a wife, I held her trembling hands and whispered, "Wait, Mildred. There is something I have not told you even yet."

"What is it?" she asked, but already I could see that she knew what I was going to say.

"Mildred," I said, "if I ran away from my husband it was not merely because I loved somebody else, but because"——

I could not say it. Do what I would I could not. But holy women like Mildred, who spend their lives among the lost ones, have a way of reading a woman's heart when it is in trouble, and Mildred read mine.

"Do you mean that . . . that there are consequences . . . going to be?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"Does your husband know?"

"Yes."

"And your father?"

"No."

Mildred drew her hand away from me and crossed herself and said beneath her breath, "O Mother of God!"

I felt more humbled than I had ever been before, but after a while I said: "Now you see why I can never go back. And you will save me, will you not?"

There was silence for some moments. Mildred had drawn back in her chair as if an evil spirit had passed between us. But at length she said, "It is not for me to judge you, Mary. But the gentlemen will come up soon to know if you are the Mary O'Neill whom I knew at the Sacred Heart, and what am I to say to them?"

"Say no," I cried. "Why shouldn't you? They'll never know anything to the contrary. Nobody will know."

"Nobody?"

I knew what Mildred meant, and in my shame and confusion I tried to excuse myself by telling her who the other woman was.

"It is Alma," I said.

"Alma? Alma Lier?"

"Yes."

She Tells Mildred All About Martin.

And then I told her how Alma had come back into my life, how she had tortured and tempted me, and was now trying to persuade my husband, who was a Protestant, to divorce me that she might take my place.

And then I spoke of Martin again—I could not help it—saying that the shame which Alma would bring on him would be a greater grief to me than anything else that could befall me in this world.

"If you only knew who he is," I said, "and the honor he is held in you would know that I would rather die a thousand deaths than that any disgrace should fall on him through me."

I coud see that Mildred was deeply moved at this, and, though I did not intend to play upon her feelings, yet in the selfishnes of my great love I could not help doing so.

"You were the first of my girl friends, Mildred, the very first. Don't you remember the morning after I arrived at school? They had torn me away from my mother, and I was so little and lonely, but you were so sweet and kind. You took me into church for my first visitation and then into the garden for my first rosary—don't you remember it?"

Mildred had closed her eyes. Her face was becoming very white.

"And then don't you remember the day the news came that my mother was very ill, and I was to go home? You came to see me off at the station, and don't you remember what you said when we were sitting in the train? You said we might never meet again, because our circumstances would be so different. You didn't think we should meet like this, did you?"

Mildred's face was growing deadly white.

"My darling mother died. She was all I had in the world, and I was all she had, and when she was gone there was no place for me in my father's house, so I was sent back to school. But the Reverend Mother was very kind to me, and the end of it was that I wished to become a nun. Yes, indeed, and never so much as on the day you took your vows."

Mildred's eyes were still closed, but her eyelids were fluttering, and she was breathing audibly.

"How well I remember it? The sweet summer morning and the snow-white sunshine, and the white flowers and the white chapel of the Little Sisters, and then you, dressed as a bride, in your white gown and long white veil. I cried all through the ceremony. And if my father had not come for me then, perhaps, I should have been a nun like you now."

Her Passionate Appeal for Aid.

Mildred's lips were moving. I was sure she was praying to our Lady for strength to resist my pleading, yet that only made me plead the harder.

"But God knows best what our hearts are made for," I said. "He knows that mine was made for love. And though you may not think it, I know God knows that he who is away is my real husband—not the one they married me to. You will not separate us, will you? All our happiness—his and mine—is in your hands. You will save us, will you not?"

Some time passed before Mildred spoke. It may have been only a few moments, but it seemed to me like an eternity. I did not know then that Mildred was reluctant to extinguish the last spark of hope in me. At length she said, "Mary, you don't know what you are asking me to do. When I took my vows I promised to speak the truth under all circumstances, no matter what the consequences, as surely as I should answer to God at the great Day of Judgment. Yet you wish me to lie. How can I? How can I? Remember my vows, my duty."

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but, no! Duty—always duty! Love indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blazing fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both her hands covering her face and tears trickling through her fingers onto the linen of her habit.

The Final Moment and a Decision.

That conquered me in a moment.

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dare not do that, now, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, Sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me. . . . and that when he comes home he will find . . ." But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

During the silence that followed we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair, and stood with her back to the fireplace.

There was a knock at my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but my landlady came into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These gentlemen are making an examination of the house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching intently. The men made a pretense of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak, "Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence, and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her! —she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window.

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

The Loss of the Scotia.

I DID not know then, and it seems unnecessary to say now, why my father gave up the search for me in London. He did so, and from the day the milliner's clew failed him I moved about freely.

Then, from the sense of being watched I passed into that of being lost.

Sister Mildred was my only friend in London, but she was practically cut off from me. The Little Sisters had fixed her up (in the interests of her work among the lost ones) in a tiny flat at the top of a lofty building near to Piccadilly, where her lighted widow always reminded me of a lighthouse on the edge of a dangerous reef. But in giving me her address she warned me not to come to her except in case of urgent need, partly because further intercourse might discredit her denial, and partly because it would not be good for me to be called one of Sister Mildred's girls."

Oh, the awful loneliness of London!

I thought I could have felt at home in the smallest village, for though nobody had spoken to me there, I should have come to know everybody, while in London I had no time to know anybody, for the ever-flowing tides of human faces flashed past me and were lost in a moment like waves under the moon at sea.

Others just as friendless have wandered in the streets of the big city. I knew I was not the first, and I am sure I have not been the last to find London the most solitary place in the world. But I really and truly think there was one day of the week when, from causes peculiar to my situation, my loneliness must have been deeper than that of the most friendless refugee.

Nearly every boarder in our boarding house used to receive once a week or once a month a letter containing a remittance from some unknown source, with which he paid his landlady and discharged all his other obligations.

I had no such letter to receive, so to keep up the character I had not made but had allowed myself to maintain (of being a captain's wife) I used to go out once a week under pretense of calling at a shipping office to draw part of my husband's pay.

In my childish ignorance of the habits of business people I selected Saturday afternoon for this purpose, and in my fear of encountering my husband, or my husband's friends in the West End streets, I chose the less conspicuous thoroughfares at the other side of the river.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, you see," he went on in his heavy voice, yet very kindly, and with a sort of massive playfulness in his manner, "no one has hurt you—not even a little bit, after all. Now, you run right home to your mother."

The girl did not need to be told twice. On the instant, she sprang up joyously, and started toward the door, with a final ravishing smile for the pleased official at the desk.

"I'll go just as fast as ever I can," the musical voice made assurance blithely.

"Give my compliments to your father," Burke requested, courteously. "And tell him I'm sorry I frightened you."

"I will, Commissioner," she promised, with an arch smile. "And I know papa will be so grateful to you for all your kindness to me!"

It was at this critical moment that Cassidy entered from the opposite side of the office. As his eyes fell on the girl at the door across from him, his stolid face lighted in a grin. And in that same instant of recognition between the two the color went out of the girl's face. The little red lips snapped together in a line of supreme disgust against this vicissitude of fate after all her maneuverings in the face of the enemy. She stood motionless in wordless dismay, impotent before this disaster forced on her by untoward chance.

"Hello, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes started disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the ——t luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy and then back to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind. "She's little Aggie Lynch—con woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time in Burnsing."

With this succint narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience, the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly, rose from his chair, and walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely, then of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, 'kid,' you're a beaut'!"

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle
The Only Safe Hair Remover

Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. De Miracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

NINE RACES SET FOR DECISION AT MOTORDROME

Facts About Races at Atlanta 'Drome.

Place—Old Show Grounds.
Time—8:30; gates open at 7 o'clock.
Tickets—On sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's cigar stores.
Events—Georgia sweepstakes, four heats; Motordrome purse, four heats; special match race, one heat; amateur events to be decided later.
Cars—Leave Five Points at short intervals.

THE last word in sensational sport, the very topmost pinnacle of thrills will be reached at the Atlanta Motordrome to-night when the first night motorcycle racing ever staged in the Gate City will be put on. The pleasing pastime of risking the neck at 90 miles an hour is great sport in the daytime. At night, with lights blazing, the band playing and a large yellow moon shining overhead it is a spectacle that would make the burning of Rome look like cheap vaudeville.

Nine races have been scheduled for to-night. And in addition, there may be three for amateurs, which will be put on early. These can not be scheduled, as the novice riders are not under contract, and it is necessary to make a race for them after they arrive and declare their willingness to risk their necks.

The opening professional event will be the Georgia sweepstakes. This will be decided with two-mile heats and a five-mile final. Then follows the second Motordrome purse. This will be raced with three-mile heats and a four-mile final.

The program will close with a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris, to settle the dead heat which they ran on Saturday afternoon.

The program for to-night's races follows:

Georgia Sweepstakes.

(Two-mile heats, five-mile final, winner of each heat and second in fastest heat to qualify for final.)

First heat, No. 5, "Tex" Richard, Dallas, Texas; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris, France; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 1, Morton Graves, Los Angeles. Third heat, No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth, Texas; No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn, of Atlanta. Final heat, Georgia sweepstakes.

Motordrome Purse.

(Three-mile heats, four-mile final; winner in each heat and two in the fastest heat to qualify for finals.)

First heat, No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse; No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn. Third heat, No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris; No. 5, "Tex" Richards; No. 1, Morth Graves. Final heat, Motordrome purse.

Special match race, to be announced.

Bettors on Baseball Fired From Grounds

NEW YORK, June 17.—A large number of men whom the management alleges have been laying odds on the baseball games at the Polo grounds were denied admission to the baseball park for the New York-Detroit American League game. It is estimated 150 of them were not permitted to pass the turnstiles and that 50 others who had evaded the watchfulness of detectives at the gates later were ordered from the grandstand.

The crusade against betting is a concerted one. It was started by Ban Johnson, and Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, and Hempstead, proprietor of the New York Nationals, and various other club owners will work actively for the abolition of the betting evil at ball games, it is said.

Ban Johnson Ready For Ball Trust Probe

NEW YORK, June 17.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, arrived here yesterday on a tour of inspection and paid his first visit to the Polo Grounds since Frank Chance's New Yorks began playing there. Asked about the talk of a Congressional investigation of the so-called baseball trust, he said:

"If an investigation is intended, we are ready. In fact, we have always been ready, for we have nothing to conceal. But, personally, I don't believe Congress will take action. Horace Fogel appears to be the only one eager to have baseball probed. If he has any evidence, we are not aware of the fact."

HOOSIERS GET TOM DOWNEY.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 17.—Tom Downey, instead of Fred Parent, will be the new Indianapolis second baseman. Downey was purchased by Kelley from Jack Dunn's Baltimore team. Kelley wanted Parent, but Dunn chose to keep Fred and send Downey here. Downey will report at once, and may be used at third base until Marty Krug is able to resume play.

BUD ANDERSON NOT STUCK ON BOXING GAME

By Bud Anderson.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—I'm not stuck on the boxing game. I may as well be frank and tell you truthfully that I'm in it for the money. I'm not fighting for the joy of the game, although I like to box.

Nature gave me the strength and stamina to fight, and I am going to use that gift to put me on a comfortable financial basis. Then I'll quit the game.

I'm not going to talk to you about boxing. I'm going to tell you about my ranch.

Ever since my first fight I have been saving my money toward establishing a good paying farm. The first $5 I earned by boxing was in a four-round contest in Portland.

I was happy as a lark when I got that five. I put it away, and that fiver, with the money I got in my following fights, started me on the road toward farmerville. I purchased a ranch near my home in Vancouver.

Farm work is one of the best methods of training I know of. I have four horses and three cows. When I want to limber up I curry them. The movements from side to side, running the currycomb up and down the animal's sides and over its back are great for the muscles—of man, not the horse.

Milking is another good training stunt. It improves the grip and limbers the wrists. Driving horses is also good for the grip. It strengthens the forearm.

FULL PAY AND RELEASE FOR INJURED INFIELDER

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 17. President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, stated to-day that Third Baseman Jimmy Gillespie, who was struck in the head by a pitched ball by Hardgrove, of Birmingham, will be released outright with full pay for the remainder of the season as soon as consent is received from the other clubs of the league. At present the injured third sacker is upon the ineligible list.

YOU HAVE TO GO TO England to get the true sporting spirit. The English papers gallantly concede the superiority of the American polo team, but they admit that England would have won if the umpire had been more severe on the Americans; if the Americans had "galloped wide," a well-known American "trick," and if the Americans had refrained from playing carefully when they were four goals to the good. Outside of this they have no fault to find. Fair play and Old England forever!

Manager Wahoo Gets Release at Waycross

WAYCROSS, GA., June 17.—Charles Wahoo is released as manager of the Waycross team, in the Empire League, and Catcher Hawkins, of the Jacksonville, South Atlantic League team, signed as local manager. Shamus O'Brien, recently of Charleston, and Morrison, of Pennsylvania, reported to-day.

On the grounds that Waycross is carrying more than three players who have played in class "C" league, Manager Dudley protested yesterday's game.

MORRIS RATH IS HONORED BY CHICAGO TEAMMATES

NEW YORK, June 17.—Members of the Chicago White Sox have picked Morris Rath, Sox second baseman, to represent the team in the baseball players' fraternity. The players held an executive session with President Dave Fultz of the players' organization while the White Sox were here. Fultz urged them to pull together for their own interests.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 17.—The National League race is practically just as it was two weeks ago. The Giants have not profited by their jaunt on the road, while the Phillies have failed to crack as we hoped and expected. The fact that Dooin caught Pittsburg going badly just after we had taken four straight from his club was a big steadier. If the Pirates had cleaned up on that series it would have pretty nearly crowded Philadelphiia out of the running. Then we ran into the Pirates when they are moving at something like their normal gait. It was due to bad baseball that we did not win four straight in Chicago.

The Philadelphia club is inevitably in the race to the finish unless it cracks wide open, which I do not expect now. It does not seem to me that Chicago and Brooklyn can hold up ahead of the Pirates much longer. Pittsburg will begin to climb and the other two start to sink. The Cubs looked very bad against us, although the best we made out of the series was an even break. Of course, we did not get a fair glimpse of Overall because he threw his arm out after pitching four balls in the game he started against us, but lately he has been Evers' winning card in the box with his newly-found spitball. He will be out of the game for a time now, and this will further reduce the efficiency of an already weak pitching staff. Then there is not the spirit behind the Cubs in Chicago which used to be evidenced in the old days. Some fans really roasted O'Day when he called Miller safe at the plate with the winning run in the tenth inning of the first game we played against the Chicago club on Sunday. That was an unheard of thing during the regime of Chance.

* * *

BROOKLYN'S pitchers are uncertain. The team has also lost the dash which the winning streak gave it for a time. Still it would not surprise me at all to see the Superbas finish in the first division ahead of Chicago. It is one of the best fighting clubs Brooklyn has ever possessed. The race will eventually narrow down to a triangular fight between the Pirates, Phillies and Giants, unless the Quakers get too far ahead to be overtaken, which I think unlikely. The championship will be won or lost by the outcome of the future series between these three clubs, with an occasional defeat of one of the three contenders having some influence on the standing. It is my opinion that it will be a very close race and a driving finish. The Pirates are great stayers. And I want to report that the Giants are still hopeful.

* * *

THEY tell me here in Cincinnati that Cleveland is baseball mad over the showing the club is making under Birmingham. The merchants have promised to give the players $100,000 if the team takes the pennant, and this may have something to do with the hustling of the Naps at present. They have experienced only a fairly successful road trip, however; fairly successful because the Athletics are going so well. The and the pitching staff is moving as Cleveland team is playing great ball, smoothly as a demonstration six-cylinder automobile, but they cannot win the pennant if the Athletics never lose.

Doyle Whiffed Hard But This One Got By

NEW YORK, June 17.—What Jack Doyle, the White Sox scout, does not know he makes a stab at. But he doesn't always get by.

Doyle and half a dozen others were sitting about the lobby of the hotel. Frank Fogarty, the actor man, joined the party and he grasped at a glance that there wasn't much jollity in the bunch. He's quite a friend of Cal's and he was there to do the cheering act.

"Say, you know," and he called the name of some mutual friend.

"Oh, very well indeed," answered Cal. "But what happened to him?"

"Oh, he graduated."

"He did?"

"Yes, went through the entire curriculum."

Cal turned to Doyle. "You know what he is talking about, don't you?" queried the manager.

"Oh, very well," answered Doyle. "You know what a curriculum is?"

"Even so," from Doyle.

"Then what is it?" demanded Cal.

"Oh, it's one of those things where a fellow," continued Doyle, and hesitated. "It's one of those—well, a fellow who does that is the kind of a fellow who makes up his mind to ride in an automobile and then walks."

Joe Jackson to Bat From Seat in Chair

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—Joe Jackson is planning a stunt to throw the harpoon of ridicule into the pitchers and managers who haven't the nerve to give him a whack at the ball when he comes to bat with runners on second and third base. He is saving this for one of the early home games in Cleveland, where the manager directs the pitcher to pass him on purpose.

The instrument of ridicule will be a camp stool or a small chair. As the quartet of pitchouts for the intentional pass is begun Joe will signal the bat boy to hurry out from the bench with aforesaid stool.

Joe will then take his seat at the plate and watch the wide ones go by while the crowd jeers the opposing team. Or if that shames the opposing side into putting them over he figures he can get to his feet and in position to hit it.

GERMANS TO PICK BOATS FOR MARBLEHEAD RACES

IN OTHER WORDS—

Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Secs not another ball yard fight begun.

We read in certain periodicals that the chief difference between the English and the Americans is that the Americans think more of winning than of sport. Another difference is that the English put up the louder howl if they lose.

Georges Carpentier has consented to do battle with Bomb Wells again, possibly on the theory that one good purse deserves another.

After digesting the dope of the polo experts, one deduces that the American team is outclassed, but plays better polo.

Speaking of ungrateful wretches, there is Jack O'Connor, who demands $25,000 for losing his job with the St. Louis Browns.

SHAKE 'EM UP.

Where are the chills of yesterweek
that ambled through my frame
And made me shiver as I sat at yonder baseball game?
I swelter now and yearn for winds
that long have beat it hence,
And if I want a chill to-day it costs
me 15 cents.

By hoisting a pennant, the Red Sox reminded us that they are champions of the universe. One would not suspect it from their playing.

Tony Caponi and Jack Dillon, having been matched to fight for the middleweight championship of Canada, it behooves the Giants and Pirates to play for the baseball championship of Siberia.

One of the most popular pastimes in Europe these days is to knock Bombardier Wells' block off.

If those English polo'ists take their defeat gracefully it is due to the fact that they have had a lot of practice at it.

LIGHTWEIGHTS POST FORFEIT FOR TITLE GO

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The treasury of the Tuxedo Club which is the right-hand pocket of Eddie Graney's vest, was bulging to-day with certified checks, bank notes, bank drafts and other evidences of money. Billy Nolan, for Willie Ritchie, and Joe Levy, for Joe Rivers, posted their forfeits for the twenty-round boxing contest on July 4, and Graney put up collateral for his agreement to hold the bout.

The boxers put up $3,750 apiece, two-thirds of this to be for weight and appearance, and the balance as a guarantee that they would be ready to box 25 minutes after weighing in, as stipulated in the articles of agreement. Should one of the fighters delay the game more than 25 minutes after weighing in, it's going to cost him a lot of money.

SCHWARTZ HAS WEIRDEST CLUB IN THE LEAGUE

By Percy Whiting.

THE opinion prevails in Atlanta that Bill Schwartz is the greatest manager in the world. He has to be to stick up around the top with that ball club of his.

To the Atlanta way of thinking Bill has the weirdest collection of cast-offs, misfits and comers that the league ever saw. And yet he sometimes wins games with it.

Of course it happened that yesterday wasn't one of the days, but barring Earl Fleharty's well known "bad inning," which proved to be the fourth, they had at least an even break with the Crackers all the rest of the way.

* * *

FLEHARTY'S "blow" was a profound and spectacular affair. Earl slid by for three innings, thanks to an efficacious prayer and the mystifying effect of a red flannel shirt. Then, beginning at the south end of the batting order, the Crackers all took a whack at him. Five hits were made, most notable of which was Tommy Long's three-sacker that scored three runs. This was a terrible poke, but even at that the ubiquitous Jud Daley all but nailed it. He got two hands on it, after a bit of dizzy aerial work, but the ball wrenched loose and continued on its course. Maybe if it had not been for Daley's tackle it would have gone for a home-run.

* * *

AFTER Fleharty was allowed to retire Dye went in. This lad had a snappy, twisty delivery and considerable pep. But he could not hold the Crackers, who nicked him for two more runs.

And in the meantime Gilbert Price was pitching good ball. An error made the first brace of Vol runs possible. In the ninth he really weakoned a bit, but by then the Crackers were so far ahead that nothing short of an earthquake mattered much.

* * *

WHAT might have been a fast, snappy game was dragged out interminably by the fact that the umpires allowed the players all the time they wanted for arguing. And the Nashville Club needed a good deal.

* * *

THE Crackers and the Vols mingle again this afternoon. Dent will probably work for the Crackers. Schwartz did not announce his battery performers. The Vol series closes here Wednesday afternoon and Thursday the Barons and President W. M. Kavanaugh will be here and the local club will be presented the cup for the largest attendance on opening day.

St. Louis Magnates Want Local Franchise

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 17.—The owners of the St. Louis Americans are anxious to break into the Southern League, according to Manager Dobbs, of the Montgomery Club, who confided the story to a Memphis friend.

Manager Dobbs intimated that President Hedges, of St. Louis, had made overtures to the owners of the Atlanta team with a view to purchasing the franchise from the trolley people, but nothing had come of the matter so far.

YANKEE TRAINING METHODS PRAISED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, June 17.—American race horse training methods are coming in for high praise in Germany again this season, owing to the excellent results accomplished by the stable of Baron Oppenheim, the Cologne banker and millionaire, under the direction of J. Hyland, formerly of Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

Although the season has just begun, Hyland's mounts already have won more than $50,000 in prize money.

CLEANS BLOOD THROUGH KIDNEYS

A Most Important Function and One To Be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Real Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through this capillary net work that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutriments obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.

Fight Managers Lose Ring Idols

Walsh and Jones Suffer Most

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—Where the fight manager was treading sweet clover a few short weeks ago, he's up to his neck in cactus now.

It looks like a hard summer for this natural enemy of the boxing promoter.

The affable Southern gentleman, Tommy Walsh, has been separated from three meal tickets in less than as many months. First he brought Frankie Burns to the coast only to have the pompadoured one neatly trimmed by little Eddi Campi. Frankie Russell dropped by the wayside and Walsh devoted all his cunning toward getting Joseph Mandot on the map again. When Mandot was beaten by Anderson a few nights ago, Tommy threw up both hands.

Morgan's Meal Ticket Punched.

"Dumb" Dan Morgan was another to have his bread-winner sent to the trash heap. For four years "Kayo" Brown brought in the coin while Dan indulged in the luxury of eating regularly. Brown was knocked out by both Rivers and Anderson, putting himself in the back row and dragging Morgan along. Dan still has Jack Britton on his hands, but the promoters do not seem to be rushing madly after Jack's services.

"Cherokee" Tom Jones lost a fortune builder when Wolgast surrendered to Ritchie. T. J. quickly shanghaied big Jess Willard, only to have him beaten by "Gunboat" Smith. The win was not decisive, however, and Tom may yet be able to work Willard into the "big money" bout.

The fatality at Calgary reduced Billy McCarney to the ranks again. After ten years of the "ten, twent and thirt" stuff McCarney finally landed a live wire in Luther McCarty. Billy's prospects were of the best until the unfortunate meeting with Pelky. Also this sad affair put the rollers under Tommy Burns. With his arena burned to the ground and the Canadian authorities up in arms against the boxing game it is not probable that Burns will continue as a prompter.

Harry Gilmore, Jr., the man that "made" Packey McFarland, and one of the cleverest managers in America, has not had a money maker since he and the classy Chicago welter split up. Harry's hopes now are to develop a heavyweight contender in the elephantine "Bull" Young.

Long Increases Lead Over Dave Robertson

Tommy Long, the Crackers' star batter, increased his lead yesterday over Dave Robertson, of Mobile, for the batting leadership of the Southern League. Tommy secured three hits out of five chances yesterday, giving him a batting average of .364 for the season.

Robertson succeeded in pounding out two safeties in his five trips to the plate, giving him a mark of .352 for the season. Kid Elberfeld continues to stay around the top, hitting at a .345 clip.

Here are the averages to date.

Atlantans Only in State Tourney

Fast Play on Piedmont Courts

THE tenth annual tennis tournament for the Georgia State championship, which is attracting much interest among the tennis enthusiasts, will be continued Tuesday afternoon on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club. No matches will be played in the mornings during the tournament, the playing beginning sufficiently early in the afternoons to allow enough time for playing them off. The men's consolation singles will be started this afternoon.

No out-of-town entries have been made in the tournament, those players who had intended entering having been kept away for various reasons. There are some classy local players, however, and the meet will by no means be a slow one.

First Round.

A. W. Smith won from A. Clarke, 8-6, 2-6, 6-0.

H. J. Hall won from Grover Middlebrooks by default.

S. C. Williams won from Henry Groves by default.

McLarty won from Sims, 6-4, 6-4.

Matthews won from Drummond Jones by default.

The following men drew byes:

L. D. Scott, G. A. Howell, E. R. Black, Jr., J. Draper, W. Colquitt, F. B. Green, J. B. Williams, C. Y. Smith, T. H. Williams, T. Perry, G. W. McCarty, H. M. Ashe, Jr., W. Nunnally, W. Griffith, Ramspeck, Abbott, Hallman, E. V. Carter, Jr., Martin, Porter, Jennings, Grant, J. Colquitt and V. R. Smith.

G. A. Howell won from L. D. Scott, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Draper won from E. R. Black, Jr., 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

F. B. Green won from W. Colquitt by default.

C. Y. Smith won from J. B. Williams, 6-0, 6-0.

T. H. Williams won from H. Perry by default.

G. W. McCarty won from H. M. Ashe, Jr., 6-4, 6-3.

W. Nunnally won from W. Griffith by default.

Abbott won from Ramspeck by default.

E. V. Carter, Jr., won from Hallman, 6-3, 6-0.

G. R. Porter won from Martin, 6-3, 6-2.

B. M. Grant won from Jennings, 6-3, 6-0.

Third Round.

C. Y. Smith won from F. B. Green, 6-1, 6-3.

HOFMAN MAY QUIT GAME; REFUSES TO JOIN K. C.

PITTSBURG, June 17.—It is said that Artie Hofman, of the Pittsburg National League club, will not go to the Kansas City club of the American Association, to which club he has been assigned by Barney Dreyfuss, the local club owner. Hofman, it is said, will quit baseball.

MADISON, 4; MONROE, 1.

MADISON, GA., June 17.—Madison defeated Monroe here yesterday, 4 to 1. The University of Georgia will be here with its strong aggregation for three games Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

DUNDEE MEETS JACK WHITE ON COAST TO-NIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 17.—Jack White, the Chicago featherweight, and Johnny Dundee will clash in a scheduled twenty-round battle here to-night. Both boys completed training yesterday and look to be in great shape for the fray.

Dundee needed but light work to fit him for the bout, as he had been training to take on Ad Wolgast two weeks ago. When Ad called off the match White at once asked Tom McCarey for a date with the Eastern boy. McCarey readily consented and secured Dundee's signature to a set of articles.

Although Dundee is a 10 to 8 favorite, White money is coming in fast and it would not be surprising to see the Chicago boy enter the ring to-night an even-money bet. White is well known out here as he has had four fights at McCarey's arena and has only been defeated by Joe Rivers. He holds victories over Owen Moran, Frankie Conley and Harry Thomas.

FELSH IS INJURED.

"STEEPLEJACK" IS COOL 360 FEET UP.

Offers to Pose on Head at Top of Flag Extending From Roof of Candler Building

It's hot down on the street—but how would you like to be perched on the flagpole which "tops" the seventeen-story Candler Building, where Old Sol's rays get in their fiercest work these days?

Take a squint up that way as you stroll down Peachtree Street and see W. C. Ficken, of 80 Ormond Street, a steeplejack by trade, thoroughly enjoying himself in his eagle's perch. He has been doing such "stunts" as this in and around Atlanta for the past twenty years.

Tuesday he reached what he terms the "climax" of his eventful career, for he has "sat upon" the top of the highest flagpole in the South, according to actual measurements. To be exact, at high noon Tuesday Mr. Ficken quietly viewed the surrounding country from an altitude of 360 feet.

"Don't you feel sort of queer away up there?" he was asked when he had capered down the pole on a rope the size of your little finger.

"Huh, not a bit," he replied between the puffs of his cigarette. "I feel better up there than I do here, by a long shot." And, to demonstrate his prowess in the art of steeplejacking, he offered to "skin" the pole and stand on his head for The Georgian photographer, who was after "cute" poses.

Mr. Ficken says he is the oldest steeplejack, in point of service, in Atlanta—"been at it twenty years and good for another twenty," he says.

Several times, he says, he has had some hair-raising expeirences, but has always come through safely. His most serious mishap was a fall of 40 feet in Madison, Ga., some years ago.

"Just a little Fourth of July celebration," he commented, dryly, in speaking of the incident, "for it happened on the Glorious Fourth."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

Nero, the smallsouled, the vainglorious Roman emperor who made a hell of his empire to find new thrills, lived a chapter of his life again in the wonderful production of Quo Vadis," which began a week's engagement at the Grand Monday night.

With the historical setting true in minutest detail, the wonderful photoplay carries the spectator back into a civilization that neither histories nor drama has adequately described.

For two hours the cinematograph clicked off a vivid picture, whose romantic interest vied with its historic perfection. The pomp of a pagan civilization, the splendor of a mighty nation were depicted in the novel. The pictures supply what in the book must be left to imagination.

An idea of detail to which the producers have paid such close attention may be gained from fact that even the poor ght of Nero was not overlooked. The emperor in the picture carries with him a lorgnette made from an emerald. Costumes, scenes—everything—were of that period nearly 2,000 years ago, when the early Christians were struggling to introduce the newest religion into heathen Rome.

The story as told by the novel is followed closely. And aside from spectacular scenes the story itself calls for closest attention. It runs easily, unfolding naturally as plot gives way to counterplot.

A few years ago the picture would have been impossible. Now, though, producers have learned to perfect setting. In pictures seen daily in the 5-cent houses wonderful illusions are shown; many similar to those in "Quo Vadis." But they can not hold like the play at the Grand. It has a background they lack.

Good Bill at Forsyth.

Augustus Mutt, Mrs. Lina Mutt (Mutt's boss), the two little Mutts and Little Jeff are at the Forsyth this week, and from the reception they got Monday night they are due for a very pleasant visit in the city. Of course, they are in the care of "Bud" Fisher. The American-Georgia cartoonist, which assures them a big week. Mr. Fisher is the headliner of a good bill—a bill that will reward you amply for braving the torrid weather.

Miss Pauline Welch (Mrs. "Bud" Fisher) takes second honors—that is, on the bill. She makes the biggest popular hit of the program with her dainty singing act. She is somewhat "stingy" with her encores—so Monday night's audience evidently thought—but there's quality if not quantity in her turn.

Other acts which go extremely well are Karl Emmy's Pets, a troupe of splendidly trained dogs; Bart McHugh's troup of kiddies in a singing and dancing act, a la Gus Edwards; the Three Leightons, minstrel songs and talk; Whitfield and Ireland, in a small town act, and Adonis and his dog, the former an acrobat.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

New Gas Joke; Read It and Laugh.

The Atlanta detective had just congratulated the West End housewife for bringing about the arrest of a sneak thief.

"Oh, I knew he was a crook the minute he opened his mouth," she replied smilingly.

"How did you spot him so quickly?"

"Why, he told me the gas company had sent him to examine our meter and see if we were not entitled to a rebate."

The Reason That She Gave.

The families of two neighboring houses on an Atlanta street that shall be nameless were playing 10-cent limit poker together. After the busting of a pot the opener drew one card and the mistress of the house where the game was played also drew one. She held, to start with, the deuce, trey, four and five of diamonds, and acquired the six of the same suit.

The opener bet a dime and the woman merely called. When the cards were spread, her husband went up in the air.

"Why didn't you raise that hand?" he exclaimed. "Didn't you know it was worth it?"

Advice as Given To a Tenderfoot.

"When I first went out West I did what nearly every other tenderfoot does—bought one of those broad-brimmed felt hats like the stage cowboys wear, and put it on at the first opportunity.

"Mine wasn't the only one in town, but I felt conspicuous just the same. Somehow or other I hadn't acquired the knack of wearing it. One windy day I was walking down the main street of the town holding onto my hat with one hand and my coat with the other. As I turned a corner the wind seemed to stop blowing, and I let go of the hat, when a sudden gust came, took it off my head and sent it rolling like a frightened hoop down the street.

"I started to give chase, when another hatless man—he was a sure-enough Westerner, too—took me by the arm and said:

"'Don't chase it, pardner; there'll be another one along in a minute.'"

GEORGIA RED MEN GO TO COLUMBUS

Great Council Meets Wednesday and Thursday for Thirty-fourth Annual Powwow.

COLUMBUS, June 17.—From every section of Georgia Red Men are en route to Columbus for the thirty-fourth annual powwow of the Great Council of the Great Rreservation of Georgia, to be in session here Wednesday and Thursday.

The committees that have charge of the entertainment expect between 175 and 200 chiefs to gather around the camp fires.

Appropriate exercises attendant upon the opening session have been arranged. Pawnee, Creek and Osceola Tribes of Red Men have arranged to give the visitors an enjoyable time.

Welcome From Mayor.

On Wednesday morning the first session will be called to order at 10 o'clock and will be opened with the invocation by Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of the First Baptist Church, followed by the address of welcome by Mayor L. H. Chappell on behalf of the city of Columbus, and by B. S. Miller, Senator from the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, in behalf of the Red Men of Columbus. The response will be made by T. H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, great junior sagamore of the Great Council of the United States.

The addresses will be followed by a brief business session, at which the opening business of the great council will be transacted, after which a luncheon will be served in the banquet room of the Masonic Temple.

Trolley and Boat Trips.

The business session of the afternoon will be short, to be followed by a trolley ride around the city. After a two-hour tour, the visitors will be taken by steamer down the Chattahoochee River on a boat excursion. The boat will return to the city about 7 o'clock, and after a brief rest, the visitors and members of the local tribes will have a short business session, after which will take place the Haymakers' parade, which will be led by the Red Men's Drum Corps from Atlanta and the Columbus City Band.

Thursday Morning.

On Thursday morning the business before the Great Council will be continued. There are a number of matters to be disposed of, including the election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place and disposing of numerous other matters.

Only a few visitors had arrived this morning, but it is expected that during the afternoon and evening that large numbers will come in, so they may be present at the opening session Wednesday morning.

Local Red Men are preparing to meet all trains and visitors will be assigned to hotels and given every possible attention in order that they may secure quarters as soon after arriving in the city as possible. The hotels have put forth special efforts for the accomodation of the visiting Red Men, and they will be given the very best to be had.

Biscuit Makers to Improve Crackers

CHICAGO, June 17.—It was decided at the convention of the Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of America that better crackers must be made in order to compete with English biscuits.

"The lower tariff is letting the English product in to compete with us," said Secretary W. H. Brownell. "It means that American manufacturers have got to improve the quality of their goods and raise prices."

Gas Kills Chicago Divorcee in London

LONDON, June 17.—That Mrs. Viola McKenna Hudson, of Chicago, found dead from gas asphyxiation in her apartments at St. Georges mansion Sunday, came to her death while temporarily insane, was the Coroner's verdict to-day. Mrs. Hudson, a divorcee, was 26 years old and pretty.

Among her effects was the bequest of $5,000 to an Oxford undergraduate.

L. & N.'S MACHINE RATE HELD UNFAIR

Commission Rules on Freight Charges of Several Roads—C. & A. Sugar Tariff Stands.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The rate of 53 cents per 100 pounds on machinery from Saginaw, Mich., to Milton, Fla., over the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was declared unreasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day. The commission held unreasonable the present rates on flour over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad from Dickson, N. Dak., to Kirby and Thermopolis, Wyo.

Rates on sugar and molasses from producing points in Louisiana to Slinton, Iowa, over the Chicago and Alton were held not discriminatory in comparison with rates to Chicago. An advance of 40 per cent in fertilizer rates from Wadesboro, S. C., to various local stations in that State were found to be unreasonable.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and ten other railroads to-day were ordered to accept shipments of flaxseed products from Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., to Galveston, Texas, when for export, notwithstanding their desire to decline such shipments owing to the low rates. The commission finds that the present rate of 16 1-2 cents is unreasonably low. It permits the railroads to impose a charge of 22 1-2 cents per 100 pounds.

HARVESTS ARE GOOD THERE WILL BE PLENTY OF GOLD

Give Calamity Howler Forbes a vacation and us a rest for the balance of the summer. We are tired of his pessimism.

Why fight the Administration, when he must use methods that are "below the belt?"

One day he claims that the banks of the country can't supply the West and South with money to move the splendid crops that are in sight. The next day he claims that the Administration will run all the gold to Europe because it has provided enough emergency currency to move these crops.

He knows you can't legislate gold into America, and that the only way to force it here is by sending our grain and cotton to Europe. This is the law of economics.

He knows that the grain of the West and the cotton of the South have brought gold to America whenever it was claimed that there was a shortage of gold. Neither the gamblers of Wall Street nor the political party in control of the Government ever forced the gold to come back.

If Mr. Forbes will "go way back and sit down" at some sanitarium, regulate his liver, and stay there until the crops are harvested and Europe's gold put on shipboard for America, then Mr. Forbes can go and count the yellow piles that are visible in the banks of America to the credit of our people, and reporting what he finds, he will become an optimist and a helper like other writers.

NEW CROP DEMAND SENDS COTTON UP

Spot Houses and Shorts Continue to Buy in Face of Extremely Bearish Sentiment.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Liverpool did not respond to our advance yesterday, resulting in the market opening barely steady, with first prices at a net decline of 1 to 5 points from Monday's final. But for overnight buying orders the initial quotations would have been much lower. The feeling around the ring is bearish and many expressed the belief that we should have a good reaction as weather continues favorable. Weather dispatches reported clear weather over the belt.

After the call offerings became scarce and scattered, resulting in a short covering movement. Spot houses also bought. All the loss was quickly recovered and prices during the late forenoon were some 2 to 15 points higher than the opening quotations. The advance was based chiefly on the rumor that the Government's weekly weather report would be very unfavorable, owing to the cold weather last week, but private reports say that no damage of consequence was done and temperatures over the entire belt are entirely normal.

The weather map indicated part cloudy in the western half, possibly more rain in the central, south and west Texas. This, coupled with the weekly weather report, being much better than generally expected, encouraged freer offerings during the early afternoon session, resulting in prices shading a few points from the early best, when July reached 12.22, August 12.19, October and December 11.75. However, there was too much steam behind the market and prices quickly retrieved the loss and rallied to the high point.

One broker was credited with buying 50,000 bales, which was believed to be short covering. It is generally believed that the short interest has been greatly eliminated and prices will recede on any further favorable weather or crop advices.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 1@8 points from the final quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—The continued decline in English consols during the past few days suggests some unfavorable political development. Liverpool came in rather disappointing, with futures only 2 to 3 points up; were due 6 to 7 points higher; spots 5 points higher; sales 8,000 bales. This shows that the advance has its origin and seat in New York and is of professional character, with an attempt to run in shorts as its sole basis. It may sound paradoxical, but it is nevertheless true that, owing to the fact that the general situation is bearish and crop prospects so good, the market advanced because of the short interest accumulated and the bearish outlook for the future, which gave the professionals a chance to work.

Weather conditions continue very good. There were some nice rains overnight in the southern part of Texas, while fair weather prevailed elsewhere. Warm night minimums throughout the belt. Indications are for a continuance of these favorable conditions. After the close of New York yesterday, our market jumped up on the execution of stop limits bringing in out of line with the others. This morning, therefore, prices dropped 10 to 20 points, but selling was timid, and New York again soon advised buying of July and August by spot interests and the market recovered in anticipation of a further advance, which soon appeared, October here selling to 11.75 to 11 o'clock.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 17.—It is believed that big short line was covered to-day, forcing prices up rapidly. Liverpool did not respond to our strength of yesterday, and cables said Continent was realizing on recent purchases. Soon as shorts are eliminated the market will lose steam, and with favorable weather should decline.

The weekly weather report is more favorable than expected and eased prices down from the top.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: "We favor a conservative attitude on buying side on all recessions."

A. Norden & Co.: "It looks as if still higher prices might be seen."

Miller & Co.: "We expect the market to gradually work higher."

Morris, Rothschild & Co.: "We do not advise the short side of the market."

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: "We have not changed our opinion any and still look for higher prices."

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Market Showed Better Tone Than for Some Time—Offerings Eliminated Considerably.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 17.—A bearish tendency marked the opening of the Stock Exchange to-day and prices of most of the issues were from ½ to 2⅜ lower, Canadian Pacific being the leader in the downward movement, with a loss of 2⅜. After a half hour, however, a rallying sentiment developed and most of the stocks which had suffered declines made partial recoveries. United States Steel common and Reading again were very active, the former losing ½ and the latter selling from 155⅞ to 156¼. This last quotation represented a gain of ⅛. Among the declines were Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Can, ½; American Smelting, ½; Atchison, ½; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅜; Union Pacific, 1; Southern Pacific, ⅝; Pennsylvania, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ⅜; Mexican Petroleum, ½; Lehigh Valley, ⅛; Erie, ½; Chino Copper, ½. California Petroleum gained ¼.

The curb market was heavy.

Americans in London lacked leadership and were lower. Canadian Pacific in London was weak on Continental selling.

Selling pressure developed in the last hour and, while a number of issues fell below the midday range, most of them held above or even with the best morning prices. Compared with the noon quotations, American Can was off ⅜; Atchison was ⅜ lower. Union Pacific was off ¼; Lehigh Valley was ⅞ under. St. Paul was ⅜ lower, and Cincinnati and Ohio declined ⅝. Banking interests involved with the interests of the Harriman system issued a statement that an adjustment of the dissolution of the Harriman merger would soon be brought about which would act as a strong bull factor in the market.

The market closed steady.

Governments unchanged; other bonds firm.

MONEY EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Money on call, 2½; time money easier; 60 days, 3¾; 90 days, 4¼@4½; six months 5¼@5½ per cent.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mean temperatures ranged from 2 to 14 below normal generally over the cotton belt, the greatest deficiency being in South Carolina and Northern Georgia. The weekly mean temperatures ranged from 60 to 76 over eastern, 68 to 74 over central and 66 to 78 over western part of the cotton States. The lowest weekly mean, 60 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 78 degrees, at San Antonio and Del Rio, Texas. Frost was reported from Pike County, Alabama, and Bentonville, Ark. Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region except in north central part and over a small area in Texas, where there was no rain.

The rainfall was generally light and unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Florida, Georgia and Oklahoma.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.60, occurred at Valdosta, Ga.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	97@98
Oats—No. 2	42@43

CHICAGO, June 17.—There was heavy and general selling of all grains to-day and resting spots showed loses of 1⅝@2c for wheat, ⅝@⅞c for corn and ¼@1c for oats. Nearly every commission house in the trade was a seller one time or another during the day and at one time heavy profit-taking by domestic longs, the foreigners were again on the selling side, which A. O. Slaughter & Co. lead in the latter movement.

Provisions were generally lower.

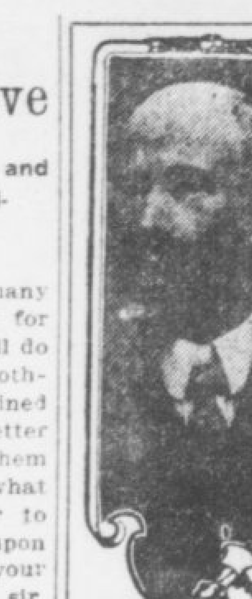
Poultry, Pet and Live Stock



EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Concerning Range Fowls Should Have

Free Range Has Its Advantages and Disadvantages. Read the Following Article Carefully.

JUDGE MARSHALL—I hear many conflicting opinions about range for fowl. Some contend that they will do but little good without it while others say that they are better confined to yards where one can have better control of them and manage them at will. I am at a loss to know what to do in the matter. Whether to arrange to have it or to depend upon the yards. I would like to have your opinion about it if you please, sir. Thanking you, I am, your truly, R. J. S., Covington, Ga.

ANSWER—Range is good and it is not good. Free range has its advantages and its disadvantages. For the quick growing of young stock free range is the very thing. They need all kinds of exercise for the exercise of their rapidly developing muscles.

In order to get the very best there is in these little but rapidly expanding bodies it is necessary that they shall be on the go from morning to night. There is no other way to get such exercise out of them but from the free range where they are jumping from one thing to another; first a bug on the spring and then the scratching out of the worm? and so it goes form morning to night. In addition to what they get in the shape of grain that is furnished them by the keeper they are filled up with bugs, worms, seeds and every conceivable thing that is intended by Nature to make them grow. They come in at night filled to the neck and are soon snugly asleep in their coops. Is it any wonder that they are on tip toe and ready to get out long before the old hens think of getting off the roost. They grow like weeds. How different they will be from the little fellows that are closely yarded, unless the yarded ones have had unusual attention. By unusual attention we mean that they have had all their little wants supplied from start to finish in a way that few persons attend to them. We have seen Brahmas and Cochins hatched in June and July large enough and good enough looking to take prizes at our best mid-winter poultry shows. It was no boy work, however.

It was accomplished by the best chicken raisers in this country. And the secret was free range of the very finest kind; apple orchards flowing with blue grass, meadows full of grasshoppers, grain fields of various kinds where they could find the stuff that stuck to the ribs at any time from dawn to dark. Nothing short of such conditions could have produced this phenomenal growth. For it really was a phenomenal growth when you think what it meant to grow an eight or nine-pound Brahma from June to the first of February. Aside from the great growth in avoirdupois they had the finest plumage that one could ever dream of seeing. Almost like silk velvet to the touch, and every feather in its place. For conditioning old hens or cocks for the coming breeding season the wide and good range is the very ideal place; nothing can take its place. They will not lay so many eggs while doing this kind of summer outing business. But next year's results in better and more fertile eggs, stronger chicks from those eggs all down the line will well repay for any lapse in the egg laying. Laying that is the con side of the question. If it is eggs you are after day in and day out avoid the unlimited range. Hens will not lay so many eggs where they have nothing to do but run over a hundred-acre farm from morning to night.

They will lay pretty well. Some of them will lay awhile others will take it up so that where a farmer has a hundred or so hens he will think he is getting about all the time and in goodly numbers, and so he will be but let him keep a record of his hens and the eggs laid and compare them with the fellow who lives in the village and is obliged to keep his hens yarded where they get quite a little exercise, but are not in a position where they are really running their legs off as it were. The village fellow will if he knows how to handle hens in confinement in a satisfactory manner beat him almost two to one. This has been tried many a time and the balance is usually in favor of the yarded hen.

So you see why we answered yes and no. The growing chicks need it while the hens for eggs will get down to business better in the yard. Then too it is so much better for the handling of eggs for the market to have the hens yarded that the eggs may all be laid in good clean nests rather than under the barn in the fence corners and brush piles and so on, as every one who has observed must know.

Leg Weakness.

Judge Marshall—I would like for you to tell me what ails my chicks and give me a remedy, if you please. I find them sitting or staggering around at first. Then they would get so they could not walk at all, but even then they would eat and seem well otherwise. They sometimes linger this way for several days, and toward the end they are perfectly helpless. I thought perhaps it was rheumatism, but did not know what to do for it. Respectfully,
Cope, S. C. MRS. G M. B.

Answer.—In old fowls we would call it rheumatism; in young ones it would more naturally be of the nature of leg weakness, and might be caused by a number of different things. Brooder chicks often show leg weakness from the brooder floor being too warm or the feeding of too much starchy food and not enough green food, causing an overgrowth of the body without sufficient bone development; or damp quarters, in connection with improper feeding, will cause a complication of leg weakness and rheumatism. Where there is much rheumatism you will notice the jerking of the limbs in walking, with evidences of pain. At times there is a swelling of the joints also. For immediate and quick relief about 10 grains of epsom salts to a teaspoonful of water for chicks 6 weeks old or older. Then add to the drinking water of the flock so affected 30 grains of bicarbonate of soda to the half-gallon of water. Every third day substitute 25 grains of salicylic acid to the same amount of water. But remember, surrounding conditions, with the proper feed in variety, will do much toward helping matters.

Eggs—All Varieties.

THE EGGS of different varieties of fowls will be found classified under their respective breeds in the future, instead of under the classification of "Eggs."

ONE or two gentlemen or married couple to room and board; private family. Main 2878-J. 6-12-23

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

This is the time of year when the mind turns to the green fields beyond the city and when one begins to look about for comfortable, easy-to-reach suburban homes and boarding places. If you have a room or two you would like to rent for the summer, or if you conduct a boarding house and want to obtain a desirable class of guests, the "Suburban Board" Columns of Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will fill your house. Try it and see.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Transferred On Marietta Street

The transfer of a lease on central property on Marietta Street was interesting in Tuesday's real estate news. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company has bought the stock of drugs and the lease of the Braselton Drug Company at the northeast corner of Marietta and North Forsyth Streets. The lease calls for the expenditure of about $6,000 a year and has about three years to run. The property is in the DeGive estate. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company now has eleven drug stores in the city.

Increase in Building.

The first sixteen days in June show a decided increase in building over the corresponding period during 1912. The figures are $412,501, as against $192,593, a gain of $219,908. Figures since January 1 give 1912 an advantage, however, with a difference of $365,291. This difference is explained by the fact that a number of large buildings were started during the period last year.

Deals in Postoffice Section.

Papers in the transfer of three valuable parcels in the postoffice section have gone to record. Mrs. Mary E. Barrow bought for $15,000 from the Georgian Realty Company a 20-by-60-foot lot on Poplar Street, 20 feet south of Fairlie, and from B. M. Grant and others a 20-by-73-foot lot on Walton Street, 110 feet southeast of Bartow Street, for a consideration that is withheld. A warranty deed has been given by James Stokes, of New Jersey, to Mrs. Lena Swift Huntley on the northwest corner of James and Fairlie Streets, 50 by 100 feet, for $12,000.

Effect of Segregation.

Real estate men are busy figuring out probable effects of the proposed segregation law. The opinion seems to be that this action will help some property and hurt other property. Fourth Ward people are elated, since the law is aimed especially at the negro sections in that locality. Many real estate men saved copies of the ordinance so they might know what course to pursue in renting houses.

Building at East Point.

Some 40 houses have been built at East Point since January 1, according to the estimate of Gid Hanna, a resident of that section and a well-known real estate dealer. Of these, Colonel I. N. Ragsdale built about twelve bungalows.

Smith Estate Sale.

The sale of parcels in the Peter Francisco Smith estate, which will occur at the court house door Tuesday, July 1, will be entirely technical, to remove titles from court. The Smith estate embraces the southeast corner of Peachtree Street and Forrest Avenue, the home place at the southeast corner of Forrest Avenue and Courtland Street, and other valuable pieces. The terms will be cash.

North Fulton Enhancement.

Probably no section around Atlanta has experienced more rapid enhancement in property values than the section about Buckhead. A comparison of prices will serve to illustrate.

When the Fulton County Almshouse property was put up at auction two or three years ago, lots along Piedmont Road near Roswell Road brought as little as $3 and $4 a front foot, and some "inside" acreage brought as low as $75 and $100. Now these same lots are in the market at $20 to $40 a foot, and the owners are not very anxious to sell; and the acreage is held at about $300. Lots which are now $100 a foot on Peachtree in the neighborhood of Mrs. Carrie L'Engle's and Colonel Walter P Andrews' homes changed hands about a year ago at $70, a clear advance of $30 a foot. A lot opposite James R. Gray's country home south of Buckhead was recently offered at $92 a foot, and the price of $65 a foot has been hung up at Buckhead for business lots. In fact, lots as far north as Piedmont Avenue have brought $60 and $65 a foot, and the prices promise to ascend steadily.

Peachtree values have never failed to rise. One or two lots in the Brookwood section have been offered at $200 a foot, but they are few and far between. Ten years ago a man with $5,000 cash could have bought enough land at Brookwood to have made him independent to-day. Some did, and they have had no cause to worry.

Fast Paving Peachtree.

The bitulithic paving which was started some weeks ago on Peachtree Road at Buckhead is now nearly done, and in a few more days automobilists will be able to drive over one of the finest stretches in the Southern States. The paving extends northeast to the DeKalb County line, a distance of about two miles.

In this section are some of the best highways to be found anywhere, other good roads being Piedmont Road, Roswell Road, Pace's Ferry Road and Wesley Avenue. The Welauca Road is undergoing extensive improvements, and the Ivey Road, leading off Piedmont Avenue at W. J. Stoddard's place, is due to be cherted and worked out this year. The county convict gang is encamped on McCullough Bros.' land on the Welauca Road and it has much more road work in prospect.

Lot Sales Aggregate $23,000.

L. C. Ball, associate sales manager of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency, reports lot sales aggregating $23,000 the past week. Most of these were in the Peachtree Highlands subdivision, at Piedmont Road. Paving and street work in this neighborhood have attracted a great many home-seekers of late.

Oglethorpe University Plans.

Funds for Oglethorpe University are said to be well in hand, and the erection of buildings at Silver Lake, DeKalb County, near the Capital City Country Club, will start about January 1, 1914. The establishment of this university is of special interest to real estate men on account of the influence it will have in the development of land tracts which will cluster about it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent on the buildings and the grounds, and many subdivisions are expected to start soon after the university has opened its doors.

THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN

All Civilized Nations Should Unite in Defense of Civilization

THE GEORGIAN prints on this page to-day the well-known prophetic cartoon of the Emperor of Germany, published some years ago, in which the Archangel Michael is shown warning the Powers of Europe against a threatened Oriental invasion.

The cross of Christianity is displayed above the nations of Europe, and amid the smoke and flames of the devastating invasion are shown the outlines of the statue of Buddha.

This cartoon showed the concern of the Kaiser of Germany for the Christian and civilized nations of Europe. We assume that the Kaiser and Germany generally are concerned for Christianity and civilization throughout the world. We can hardly believe, then, that Count Reventlow voices the sentiment of the Kaiser and the sentiment of the people of Germany when he sees only a possible trade advantage to Germany in a Buddhist Oriental nation occupying the western slopes of the North American continent.

Are not the German Kaiser and the German people concerned more for Christianity and civilization than they are for a fancied, and purely fancied, trade advantage? Does the Kaiser's favorite cartoon apply only to the Christian and civilized nations of Europe, and not the Christian and civilized nations of America and Australasia and elsewhere?

We can say with confidence that the view of the Kaiser and of the German people as a whole is not so narrow and so venal.

Count Reventlow's utterances are both brutal and bigoted, both selfish and shortsighted. No good can come to Christianity and civilization anywhere by the weakening of the power and progress of Christianity and civilization in any nation, in any section of the globe.

If the struggle is in behalf of Christianity and civilization, of human progress and human liberty, then all the nations of the world which believe in these ideals should unite to further them and to oppose any influence which threatens them.

No petty prejudice, no small selfishness, no baser passions of envy or jealousy or greed, should cause distrust and defection, with the possibility of defeat and disaster to the common cause.

Let the Kaiser modify his cartoon to make it include the United States and Canada and Australasia, to make it include all Christian and civilized nations everywhere, and he will make it more worthy of himself, more worthy of his people, more worthy of the Christian spirit he is seeking to express, the civilized conditions he is seeking to preserve.

On such a broad and lofty platform the Christian and civilized nations of the world could be united, and should be united, for the advancement and advantage of all humanity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"NATIONS OF EUROPE, GUARD YOUR PRECIOUS POSSESSIONS!"

The German Kaiser's cartoon on the Yellow Peril, representing the Archangel Michael warning the Western Powers against the threatened Oriental invasion, typified by the image of Buddha.

Why Women Should Vote

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY.

The Stranger and "Small Town" Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyrighted, 1913, by the Star Co.)

THE menu in your home may be the best in the world; yet, because you are accustomed to it, you find a new zest in food placed before you when you visit other homes, or sit at hotel tables.

The eye, the ear, the mind, the taste all find a keener pleasure in the unaccustomed at certain intervals, even when that which is offered is less admirable.

In an interesting letter which discusses to some length the follies of my own sex, the weakness of his, a question of interest is propounded by a man of culture. After reviewing the numerous tragedies which have occurred from time to time as the result of infatuation of young women in villages and interior towns through love affairs with strangers, the correspondent says:

Dreams of Sweetheart.

"It has always been a great mystery to me why the stranger within our gates has such fascinating attractions for some of our American girls. I shall eschew the engagements and marriages of American heiresses to foreigners. Every one knows the reasons. But the question is a subtle and far-reaching one. Let a total stranger, of good appearance and polite address, come to a town and at once he is the favorite with the girls at the prayer meeting and picnic. The actor, the drummer, the ball player, yes, even the prize fighter, in competition for the hand and heart of the reigning belle, will nearly always outdistance the Georgies and Charlies and Willies of the town. Is it hero worship, or what is it?"

To the man or woman who understands what the imaginative and romantic temperament means this question would suggest its own answer.

While familiarity does not always or often breed "contempt," it does destroy, as a rule, romantic illusions.

The average young girl—God bless her!—is possessed of a good share of sentiment and romance in her thoughts of the lover waiting for her somewhere in the world.

She invests him with the qualities most desirable in her estimation and perhaps drawn to some extent from the novels she has read. He is a creature of her dreams and meditations, and it is not to be supposed that she will readily clothe the youth with whom she has played "tag" and "I spy" in the garments of her dreams.

The boy who has been repeatedly punished at school or whipped by an older brother in her presence or who has been the cause of disagreeable neighborhood criticisms because of his oversupply of youthful vitality; the boy who has teased and tormented her and shown all the unattractive traits of the average growing lad is not liable to become her ideal by any sudden transformation.

The stranger who comes to town has passed through all these unattractive phases in his own village, and he may be far less worthy of her admiration and much further removed from the standard of her ideal than her old playmate, but she sees in him the object of her dreams, free from all crudity, and he seems to her a wholly superior being.

Whatever he may have been in the process of evolution, she finds him her finished ideal when they meet.

He has come into her life suddenly, and by the will of kind Providence she believes.

There is a novelty in all he says and does; he has a new trick of pronunciation, or a new set of phrases and he brings the atmosphere of a new world into her monotonous life. He tells her of new scenes, new people.

It is as if she had listened all her life to one air, and now a new melody is sounded. Harmonies undreamed of become perceptible to the ear of her heart. She listens to his recital of boyish days and pranks, and while the tales he relates differ little from the actions of the boys with whom she has been reared, they are surrounded with a halo of charm in her mind which places his past in a realm quite apart from the commonplace; and it is this commonplace association of neighborhood life which has stood between her dreams and her boy lovers.

Whatever affairs of the heart the stranger may have passed through in his evolving period, she has not been a witness thereof nor a confidant of the other maidens in the case, as she has been with her childhood's companions.

When he tells her that he loves her, she does not recall the fact that two or three years ago he was the devoted cavalier of her sister, or her cousin, or her rival in the high school.

Blessed Is She.

And the accident of their meeting, the day they first looked into each other's faces, the hour they first spoke—all these incidents are thrilling and wonderful and food for hours of happy memories.

Blessed is she to whom such memories and dreams remain forever surrounded by a romantic halo! For never in any ordinary association of childhood and never in the more commonplace development of friendship into love can there be found quite the depth of joy and sentiment which results from the sudden advent of a great and lasting love.

The Back Yard Stock Farm

By WEX JONES.

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I used to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew,
For rent was high, and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of ham,
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.

Inspiring Line Versus Firing Line

By THOMAS TAPPER.

TO THE BOSS:

EVERY business organization possesses its misfits.

What can be done with them?

The easiest solution of the problem is to discharge them, shut your eyes and draw again.

The economic way is to open your eyes and study the situation and develop them.

There is some trouble involved in this. But no more than a carpenter encounters when he has to cut and plane a piece of wood to make it fit a certain place. He might overhaul a million feet of lumber before finding exactly the piece he needs.

It is his ready skill for altering the length and shape of lumber, for adjusting it to his purposes that makes him a carpenter.

A quick eye, an observing mind, a few tools by the help of which he can carry out his ideas and he can adjust means to ends without trouble, delivering a solid and efficient job.

Misfits in business are rough timber. Everyone is good for something. They may not make good tops for mahogany tables, but they are useful somewhere.

(II)

TO THE WORKER:

THE business organization in which you work can use all your thought and strength.

A certain amount of shaping and fitting is necessary to make you and the job balance perfectly.

Your own intelligence, plus the demands of your work, plus the directions you receive from the Boss, should result in an adjustment that will make you indispensable.

This is the secret of all the Getting-on-in-Life that everybody is so anxious to attain.

Many a man will cheer himself red in the face to see a second baseman play good ball. He is cheering efficiency. By watching that man he will learn the whole philosophy of doing teamwork in his own shop.

Take the second baseman from his place and put in a minister, or a shoemaker, and the game may be humorous, but it will not be efficient.

(III)

TO BOTH OF YOU:

WHEN two people have signed up for the purpose of doing one thing as well as it can be done, both must travel in the same direction and keep step to the music of the business. One can not lag behind when the double-time march begins.

The man who doesn't feel like marching at a double-time gait must either change his feelings or get out of line. But wherever he goes he must remember this: When a lot of men get together without purpose or leadership, they make up a Crowd. When they get together with a purpose, keep step and march straight on, they make a Procession.

And about all a crowd is fit for is to stand around and see the procession march by.

: The Lesson From Flag Day :

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles and the sound of drums—
A flash of color beneath the sky—
"Hats off!"
The flag is passing by!

THE youth of a republic are its strength and hope. The decision of each man's destiny involves, in part, the common weal. The sentiments of youth make the policies of men. The State supplants the school, the student merges into the citizen. The schoolroom of yesterday is the forum of to-day, the playgrounds of to-day are the battlefields of to-morrow. The spirit planted in the bosoms of youth blossoms into the ballots or bayonets of manhood, and a mother-er's whisper in her children's ears may be the boom of cannon in the years to come.

It is well that Flag Day has become a national holiday. There was never a nobler or a wiser movement than to give one day of our national life to the national flag. Our Star Spangled Banner is the symbol of our country, and all policy and all patriotism unite in the effort to teach our country's children to love and to revere it.

It Is Inspiring.

As a thing symbolic, splendid, inspiring, it should be honored throughout the land.

The flag was George Washington's individual Declaration of Independence—his personal pioneer defiance of England and the King. He made it first, he waved it first. Six months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, on July 4, 1776, and nearly eighteen months before the Continental Congress, on June 14, 1777, formally adopted the flag George Washington floated over his headquarters at Cambridge the Stars and Stripes. If the Revolution had failed, that flag alone and that flag's defiance would have condemned him to death.

Even so Charles Carroll, signing the Declaration, was reminded "There are other Carrolls," and swiftly the brave Marylander added, "Of Carrollton"—which was Carroll's dauntless acceptance of personal responsibility and his defiance of the King.

The spirit of Washington and the spirit of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was the spirit of individual responsibility and of individual and dauntless devotion. It should be the spirit of to-day. The Republic is verging to its zenith and patriotism should be at its prime. Our country is greater and stronger than it has ever been before, and the spirit of love and devotion in its people had never more to inspire it than now.

In every schoolhouse, in every public hall, in every home and in every hand, native or foreign born, the flag of our country should be displayed on Flag Day every year.

Not only in our splendid and inspiring youth, but in our stalwart and grateful manhood, should this spirit be expressed. Every great and noble sentiment that wraps our country's present and its future should rally around the colors of the republic.

More than ever before to the children of the republic and to its men and women should these stripes and stars from "Old Glory" stand for the essentials of power, protection and progress.

The Spirit of the Country.

The flag must stand for a constructive policy and for an ample navy to sustain it. It should stand in every instance for the right of our country to manage its own affairs. It should stand for clear treaties and every just advantage which is ours—even if it takes new treaties to secure it—for the right to fortify its great canal and to regulate its commerce.

It should stand for the right of its separate States to regulate their own affairs under the Federal Government in matters vital to the interests of its people.

The flag should stand for a constructive, and not a destructive, policy in business—regulated by a reduced but reasonable tariff for the protection of our industries and by reciprocal agreements to protect our international trade.

The flag should wave over a magnificent merchant marine. It should redeem the desolate harbors in which its glorious colors are rarely seen, and float above our country's commerce in its own ships on every sea.

It should stand for a constructive policy of durable and universal peace by being duly and fully prepared for war.

Above all present things, the flag should stand for the power to back its policies with argument in peace and with the ample equipment of a powerful navy for defense and for offense in war.

The Glory of the Flag.

The glory of our flag was made by the power and the glory of a strong and dauntless navy. It must be sustained by the power of a strong and ample navy. So long as other nations front the world with battleships and armed battalions our country must front the world with battleships and battalions. And because we are richer and more isolated than other nations we must see to it that our battleships are as many and as strong as those of any nation that may menace us upon either of our ocean coasts.

SHIPPING TIE-UP IS THREATENED

Conference Over New Rules for Foreign Bills of Lading Expected to Develop Fight.

Cotton buyers, compress owners, bankers, railroad men, and the representatives of the ocean steamship lines meet in Birmingham Wednesday for a conference which will attempt to solve one of the most knotty questions which ever has arisen regarding the movement of the cotton crop in the South.

The steamship lines have announced that they will put into effect within a month strict regulations governing the baling and marketing of cotton. They intend to make notations on the bills of lading describing the condition of the cotton—whether get or not, properly covered, for instance. Their aim is to avoid the heavy claims for damages which have been made upon them in years past by consignees on the other side who received cotton in bad condition.

The railroads announce that if such notes are put on bills of lading, they will not issue through bills from interior points to destination in Europe, but will issue bills only to shipside.

The banks can not possibly finance the cotton crop unless through bills are issued. On the other hand, if the through bills contain notice of damage, the best authorities agree that they make the banks buying them liable for damages as parties to the merchandise transaction, when their real interest is only as bankers.

A. P. Coles, who has made a deep study of the question, sums it up by saying:

"Why should our bank, for the small profit there is in selling exchange, buy a lawsuit?"

One conference already has been held in Atlanta on the subject, at which the steamship interests were not represented.

In Birmingham a desperate effort will be made to get a compromise. It is admitted that the cotton trade of the South loses millions yearly by wasteful handling of the crop; careless baling, second-hand bagging, and so on.

It is pointed out, though, that these practices can not be reformed from the top. They must begin with the planter. Education of the cotton grower will require years, and no fiat of the steamship companies can bring about such a change in a few weeks.

TURKISH CRUISER REAPPEARS.

ADEN, ARABIA, June 17.—The Turkish will-o'-the-wisp cruiser Hamidieh, which during the Balkan war showed a mysterious faculty for disappearing, is lying off Kadin Island, northeast of Hodeida, in the Red Sea, for repairs. There are a number of Greek prisoners on board.

OBLITERATES EVIL HOUSES.

OLYMPIA, WASH., June 17.—The laws passed at the recent session of the Legislature are said to have already resulted in obliterating the restricted districts of some of the smaller cities.

The women's minimum wage commission to be appointed by the Governor is expected to begin hearings in a short time to obtain data for the fixing of the lower limit of wages.

BULGARS ACCEPT PEACE TERMS

SOFIA, June 17.—Bulgaria to-day formally accepted the demobilization proposals of Servia and Greece on condition that both parties submit their territorial controversy to Czar Nicholas of Russia for arbitration.

DEAD SHARE FILM WITH T. R.

ST. LOUIS. June 17.—Aviator Andrew Drew, of St. Louis, killed when his aeroplane caught fire at Lima, Ohio, was the tenth man to die of those who appeared in the famous motion picture "death film," taken in St. Louis in October, 1910.

The others who have died are Arch Hoxsey, Ralph Johnstone, P. O. Parmalee, A. C. Welsh, Howard Gill, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, Jacques Faure, Theodore Schreck and "Tony" VonPhul.

Of the others Theodore Roosevelt was shot at Milwaukee, Alfred Le Blanc was disabled for life and Walter DeMumm was shot.

SOME VACATION DON'TS.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Health Commissioner Lederle has made public his annual "health hints for vacationists." He gives the following list of don'ts:

Don't drink bad well water or impure milk.

Don't eat food exposed to flies.

Don't neglect to be vaccinated against typhoid.

Don't wear heavy clothing.

Don't stay too long in the sun.

Don't indulge freely in alcoholic beverages.

Alabama Widow Buys a Title

Mrs. Bishop To Be a Countess

Snapshot of Mrs. Marion Bishop, of Montgomery, Ala., fiancee of Count Lionel Moretti, taken on her arrival in New York from Europe.

NEW YORK, June 17.—So eager was Mrs. Marion Bishop, a young widow of Montgomery, Ala., who has just announced that she is to marry a titled foreigner, that after her husband's death she went to Italy and mingled with purchasable counts and princes.

Mrs. Bishop announced her engagement to Count Lionel Moretti, a retired lieutenant of the Italian army.

"It was a dream of my childhood to be a countess," said Mrs. Bishop. "When I first reached Italy I found quite an expensive selection of titles and I took my time in deciding on Count Moretti. It was more or less a business proposition with us both—he had a title and I had money. His price was high, but he was far superior to a Russian prince whose fingers were stained by cigarette smoking.

"The Count Moretti has snowy-white hands, as soft as a woman's. His nails are beautifully manicured and he creates a sensation every time he enters a cafe. So, as soon as I have settled my affairs here, I am going back to marry the Count in the fall."

Mrs. Bishop said the prices on counts fluctuate a good deal, but she would not say what Count Moretti has cost her. Her husband was an iron manufacturer.

MRS. ASTOR TO VISIT SON.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 17.—For the first time in five years, Mrs. Astor and her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, will come to Beechwood, the Astor residence here, as guests for the summer of her son Vincent.

Vincent will bring his mother and sister from New York on his yacht Noma after their arrival from England.

BRYAN TO CARRY LUNCH.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Secretary Bryan will carry a lunch basket to his desk in the State Department like any other workingman.

This basket will contain:

One bunch white radishes.

One man's size bottle of grape juice.

Three whole wheat biscuits.

And a piece of chewing gum.

SCORES ARE DEAD FROM HEAT WAVE

Weather Forecasters Predict Continued Hot Spell Throughout the Whole Country.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Three more deaths were recorded in Chicago today from heat. This brought the total for two days to twelve. There were few prostrations to-day, relief having reached the city in a cool breeze off Lake Michigan.

7 DIE IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—While yesterday was the hottest day recorded here since July 3, 1911, to-day is expected to far exceed it. The thermometer registered 83 in the shade at 8 o'clock and some thermometers at street levels recorded as high as 95.

Seven deaths have resulted from the heat so far.

4 DEATH LIST IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The heat casualty list was four dead and more than a score prostrated up to noon to-day. Relief finally came in the shape of a cool northwest breeze.

At noon the thermometer stood at 85, but the heat was not felt so keenly as yesterday. The weather bureau promised a break in the wave tomorrow.

SHOWERS ARE PREDICTED.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Widely scattered thunder showers this afternoon promise to bring some relief for sweltering residents of the Middle Atlantic States and the upper Ohio Valley, according to the weather bureau.

Slightly lower temperatures are predicted for to-night and Wednesday in the Middle Atlantic States, Southern New England, upper Ohio Valley and the southern portions of the lake region.

Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River there will be little change in temperature and clear skies will prevail during the next 36 hours.

LOSES HIS COUNTESS.

BIARRITZ, June 17.—The Marquis deAlcedo, of Spain, announces that there will be no marriage between his daughter, Ysabel, Countess Bannelos, and Maurice Burke-Roche, of New York. The Marquis states that religious differences make such a union impossible.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago.

LAW TO DRAIN LANDS.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary Lane has submitted a recommendation to Congress for the drainage and reclamation of public swamp and overflowed lands in any State or Territory.

Mr. Lane authorized an agreement with Oregon to co-operate in the construction of the Tunlo irrigation project, comprising 35,000 acres, to cost $900,000.

JOB-SEEKER WIRES BURLESON.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—"Albert Burleson, Washington:

"I wish to be Postmaster of St. Louis. Reference, twelfth verse, Second Epistle of John.

"SAM B. PAYNE."

Such was the telegram sent. The verse reads:

"I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face that our joy may be full."

Mr. Payne received a telegram to come to Washington.

TO IMPROVE CRACKERS.

CHICAGO, June 17.—It was decided at the convention of the Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of America that better crackers must be made in order to compete with English biscuits.

"The lower tariff is letting the English product in to compete with us," said Secretary W. H. Brownell. "It means that American manufacturers have got to improve the quality of their goods and raise prices."

Brooks Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president. Secretary Brownell was re-elected.

QUEEN FORBIDS GAMBLING.

LONDON, June 17.—When Queen Mary's guests at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races assemble at the card tables after dinner they will find printed notifications that baccarat and poker are barred and that stakes at bridge must not exceed half a crown a hundred points.

Heretofore baccarat has been the favored gambling game and high stakes have been played for.

Betting on the races among the royal servants is also prohibited, but it nevertheless goes on.

NEWS OF WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1913

DAUGHTER OF E. O. PAINTER HEADS FERTILIZER CONCERN

JACKSONVILLE, June 11.—Miss Okle Painter, daughter of the late E. O. Painter, was elected president of the E. O. Painter Fertilizer Company at a meeting of the stockholders held last night. At the same time it was decided to increase the capital stock of the company from $250,000 to $500,000, with the privilege of increasing the liabilities to an equal amount.

Reports submitted at the meeting declared the condition of the business of the company to be flourishing. A 10 per cent annual dividend was declared.

Miss Painter announced, after the meeting, that the business of the company would be conducted upon the same plans as heretofore under the presidency of her father, who was drowned in the St. Johns River May 22, the cause of which is still a mystery.

No one is better able to carry on the work of the dead man than Miss Painter. Since finishing school she has occupied a place in her father's office. Having no son on whom to depend, he trained his daughter to take his place. She is familiar with every detail of the business, both administrative and manufacturing. She has spent much of her time at the fertilizer plant, directing affairs for her father.

Another reason why the daughter is the logical person for president of the company is that she controls the major portion of the stock. Her father held $190,000 of the outstanding $250,000 issue. Under his will all of this, except $26,000 distributed in special bequests, goes equally to Miss Painter and her mother, Mrs. Martha Painter. The daughter retains the exclusive voting power of the $26,000, the beneficiaries to receive only the income therefrom. This $26,000 will eventually revert to Miss Painter or her heirs. She also represents her mother in the estate.

The action of the stockholders in doubling the capital stock is simply carrying out the plans made by Painter. He had worked out the details whereby small blocks of the stock would be sold to planters in Florida and South Georgia, who in turn would buy their fertilizer from the Painter company, thus increasing the volume of business done and give the planter-stockholders small rebates in the form of dividends.

And at the same time Painter saw how he could add to his own holdings by declaring a stock dividend, giving the old stockholders proportionate shares of the new issue. Painter, of course, planned to secure enough of the new stock to still give him a majority of the combined issue and retain full control of the business. Now the widow and daughter will come in on that distribution, making the daughter probably the only young woman in the South as the head and absolute dictator of a half-million-dollar corporation, doing an annual business said to exceed $750,000.

Since the death of Painter, State Senator J. B. Conrad, of Glenwood, has been nominally acting president of the company, but he spent two weeks of the time at Tallahassee attending the final days' sessions of the Florida Legislature, leaving the Painter business actually in the hands of Miss Painter, D. A. Morrison, Jr., secretary of the company, and G. C. Hamlin, general counsel.

BIGGEST LINER SAILS.

HAMBURG, June 11.—Gay with flags, the new Hamburg-American liner Imperator, the biggest passenger steamship afloat, sailed for New York to-day on her maiden voyage.

DIAZ WANTS TO RETURN.

PARIS, June 11.—A brother-in-law of ex-President Diaz started for Mexico to-day to discuss with the government there the question of the return of the former dictator.

General Diaz, replying to a delegation of Mexican friends who had come to request him to return to Mexico to assist by his cousnel in the restoration of tranquillity to that country, said:

"I should be pleased to return to reside in my country, but I am determined not to participate in its politics."

TO ATTACK MOROS.

MANILA, PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, June 11.—Brigadier General John Pershing, commander of the department of Mindanao, has made arrangements to engage in a decisive fight against the rebellious Moros entrenched at Bagdad, under the Sultan of Jolo.

A stubborn resistance to the advance of the American troops was expected, and a strong force had therefore been assembled.

"WORLD HAS AWAKENED."

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Cardinal Gibbons told the graduates of the Immaculate Seminary at their commencement exercises here that the world has awakened to the fact that it is morally sick.

"Despite the warnings of the church," the Cardinal said, "it continued to ignore its sickness until the cancer of open vice spread to such an extent that the realization of the seriousness of its condition had to come, and we see the result in the present general warfare being waged against white slavery and its allied vices.

"But with the awakening of the public conscience has come a better order of things and the world is advancing along moral lines that each day makes it a better world to live in."

MRS. JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, prominent in Washington society, who is active in campaign for eugenic marriages.

BOMBS FILLED WITH FLOUR IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, June 11.--A man sympathizer with the woman suffrage cause created a wild scene in the House of Commons this afternoon and was arrested after a struggle.

Armed with a number of "bombs" composed of paper bags filled with flour and a great sheaf of suffragette pamphlets, the man gained access to the spectators' gallery. He remained quiet until Premier Asquith started an address. Then he stood up and hurled an armful of pamphlets from the gallery.

The members of the House looked up in alarm at the cloudburst of literature, but while they were still open-mouthed the suffrage adherent threw a "bomb" at Mr. Asquith. The missile missed its mark but struck a parliamentary clerk in the face. He fell to the floor and arose like a ghost.

A member sitting near the ministerial bench shouted a protest. A bag of flour struck him in the mouth and he dashed, gasping and choking, to get a drink of water. By this time members were running toward the stairway to the gallery, screaming to the police to arrest the miscreant.

Flour bombs were dropping and popping all about. Premier Asquith was the target of the bombardment, but was not hit. Several others near him were nearly smothered by the deluge of flour.

Policemen rushed into the gallery and tried to arrest the "bomb" thrower, but it was over fifteen minutes before he submitted. He was put outside and warned not to enter the Parliament Building again.

PRESIDENT TO CELEBRATE.

No special plans have been made for the day. A family dinner party will be given in the White House that night.

The President won his bride in Savannah, Ga., according to the announcements in local papers at the time. Mrs. Wilson then rejoiced in the old-fashioned name of "Ellie Lou," which has reverted to Ellen Louise.

LESSON IN POLITENESS.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Miss Eleanor Wilson gave a lesson in street car politeness to-day to three Washington men when she gave up her seat to an old woman.

Miss Wilson, accompanied by Dr. Cary Grayson, White House aide, boarded the car at Connecticut and Florida Avenues. Two old women in shabby black got on at the next corner. Dr. Grayson immediately yielded his seat, but three other men were not as gallant. Miss Wilson, with an indignant look at the men, arose and pilotted the other old woman to her seat, while she swung on a strap the remainder of the way to the White House.

GRAND VIZIER OF TURKEY AND AIDE SHOT TO DEATH

LONDON, June 11.—Mahmud Shevket Pasha, Grand Vizier of Turkey, and his military aide were shot to death to-day by two assassins in the streets of Constantinople. News of the double assassination was first received here in private dispatches. Later it was officially confirmed.

Mahmud Pasha and his aide were automobiling to the Sublime Porte when the murderers, who stood near the entrance of the building, fired upon the motor car with deadly aim.

Mahmud Shevket Pasha, who came into power in February, has been exercising the prerogatives of military dictator. He was one of the chief leaders of the Young Turk party, and the closet adviser of Enver Bey, the commander-in-chief of the Turkish army.

The Grand Vizier was undoubtedly slain in revenge for the murder of Nazim Pasha, War Minister and commander-in-chief of the Ottoman army, who was shot down by Enver Bey last winter.

BRAZILIAN WELCOMED.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Dr. Lauro Muller, Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, was officially welcomed to Dashington to-day. He reached the capital accompanied by a distinguished official party, which welcomed him at sea.

Later Dr. Muller, escorted by a troop of cavalry, went to the White House and paid his respects to President Wilson.

This evening the President will give a reception to the visitor.

WON'T GO TO SPAIN.

BOSTON, June 11.—Miss Helen Keller's instructor and friend, Mrs. J. A. Macy, in reply to cabled rumors that she would go to Spain to teach a son of King Alfonso, who is afflicted as she was, said to-day:

"Miss Keller will not go to Spain. She will stay at my home here in Wrentham to rest and gain strength till August, when she will go to Bay View, Mich., to lecture at the chautauqua there. Then she will return here and stay till October, when her winter lecture tour begins."

WILL OPPOSE PLAN.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The railway's plan for the dissolution of the Southern Pacific merger will be opposed by Attorney General McReynolds in St. Paul, Minn., to-morrow, because he does not think that the mandate is met under the agreement reached by the railroad attorneys.

If a satisfactory agreement is not reached by July 1, the limit set by the court, McReynolds declares that he will ask for the appointment of a Federal receivership of the road, through which the stock will be liquidated.

ARRIVES BEFORE SEARCH.

SANDUSKY, OHIO, June 11.—Aviator Harry N. Atwood, who left Ecorse, Mich., at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a flight across Lake Erie in a hydro-aeroplane, arrived here at 1:13 o'clock this morning, having made practically all the trip traveling on the surface of the water. A searching party was being organized as he got in.

JOHN D. GIVES QUARTERS.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 11.--John D. Rockefeller at the Baptist Church heard the Rev. Arthur T. Brooks announce that the youngest member of the Sunday school was born yesterday in the parsonage.

Mr. Rockefeller congratulated the pastor and as he got into his automobile two little girls greeted him. He gave each a quarter, saying:

"Put these in your bank. Remember, I started my fortune on less than that."

THREE ARE KILLED.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 11.—Three men from Chicago were killed and George Bartel, a Springfield millionaire, was fatally injured late on Tuesday afternoon when an eastbound Wabash passenger train struck an automobile at a grade crossing at Riverton, a suburb of Springfield.

THEY TOOK A DARE.

TAMPA, June 11.—Miss Ruth Trice, daughter of John Trice, president of the Citizens' Bank and Trust Company and one of the wealthiest men in South Florida, eloped with George Booker, of the Sims Lumber Company, to-day. Rev. W. W. Dehart married them at the rectory.

The couple attended the wedding of Miss Helen Gunn and Paul Cameron Lindley, of Greensboro, Ga., last night and were joked by their friends about getting married. They took the dare.

DISPUTE NEAR CLIMAX.

VIENNA, June 11.—A climax in the dispute between Servia and Greece and Bulgaria is expected within 48 hours. Czar Nicholas has given a conditional offer to arbitrate the quarrel between Servia and Bulgaria, but he is believed to be too late. Russia is charged with secretly encouraging Servia.

Diplomats here are pessimistic. Dr. Daneff's Cabinet in Sofia is working for peace against great odds.

GIRARD POSTMASTER NAMED.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Josephine Carlisle has been nominated for postmaster at Girard, Ala., a suburb of Columbus, Ga.

TOWN SWEPT BY FIRE.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 11.—The business section of Cassandra, a small town 15 miles from here, was wiped out by fire to-day. The loss was estimated at $150,000.

BUSINESS THROUGHOUT SOUTH IS REPORTED GOOD

Business in Atlanta and the South is good, according to Atlanta business men. In some cases it is above last year's level.

There is some stringency of money, but well-established business houses, carrying on conservative operations, are getting their usual accommodations from the banks. The country banks in Atlanta territory have been supplied to the limits of their needs by their city agents.

The cotton crop promises well, and it will be made cheaper than any previous Georgia crop. A good crop means remarkable prosperity this fall.

These are the conclusions of Atlanta bankers, who, unwilling that the public should accept Wall Street's view of the situation as final, express their opinion of local conditions.

"Conditions in the South are all right. Business is good, and the demand for money is no greater than it usually is at this season of the year. From, say October, I look for great prosperity," says Colonel Robert J. Lowry, president of the Lowry National Bank.

"The information which reaches us is that the corp is in excellent shape. I talked with one well-informed man yesterday from a section in Georgia which grows a great deal of cotton, and he says he never saw a better crop, since the late rains.

"There is some nervousness, of course, with the tariff and the money reform questions unsettled. I am, as you know, a protectionist. I suppose, though, there are some things which need regulating. Some modification no doubt is desirable. The manufacturers are prepared to meet reductions to some extent.

"I believe it is more important to have the matter cleared up than it is to argue over the exact amount of the changes. It is the unrest, the uncertainty, which causes the nervousness. When the thing is determined one way or another, trade can proceed. Just now textile mills, for instance, can not make trades, because they do not know just what the future basis will be.

"Things are going to turn out all right. As I said, although I am and always have been a protectionist, I believe we could stand a moderate revision downward of the tariff. I believe in the income tax, too. I would make no exceptions, though. To my mind, the man who makes $100 ought to be willing to give his dollar to the Government, and the man who makes $100,000 ought to be willing to give his $1,000 for the benefits of the Government which he enjoys.

"I have known President Wilson since he was a young lawyer in Atlanta. He is a splendid American. I want to see him upheld.

"Those fellows in New York are a little too blue, I think. We of the South have no cause to fret. No man who is doing a conservative business is going ot be hurt in the least."

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, thinks the present conditions are good for the future welfare of the South.

NEWS OF THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1913

DRASTIC RULES PROPOSED FOR PAPER ADVERTISING

BALTIMORE, MD., June 12.—Members of the Atlanta Ad Men's Club, here attending the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, are all smiles Thursday morning over the reception accorded them by President Woodrow Wilson in Washington Wednesday afternoon. The President received the Atlantans in the east room of the White House.

A number of women, including Mrs. Albert S. Adams, Mrs. L. D. Hicks and Miss Eleanor Montgomery, of Richmond, Va., were in the party. Mrs. Adams, on behalf of the Atlanta delegation, presented Mr. Wilson with a handsome Atlanta badge, which the President smilingly promised to wear.

The Atlanta delegation was presented by Congressman Howard. Earlier in the day they entertained Mr. Howard, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Secretary of the Interior Franklin P. Lane at luncheon at the New Willard Hotel.

Drastic rules, by which it is proposed to reform newspaper advertising and drive crooked newspapers and crooked advertisers out of business, were formulated by the newspaper committee Wednesday, and will be presented to the convention for adoption or rejection Thursday. The rules require all newspapers and periodicals—

"To give the whole truth about their circulations—quantity, location and how secured.

"To print advertisements of reliable concerns only, censored to exclude manifest exaggerations, slurs or offensive matter of any kind.

"To refrain in the 'make-up' from putting advertising in a position to be injuriously affected by the neighborhood of incongruous or repellant reading matter.

"To adopt the flat rate plan, without secret rebate or concession.

"That bargain announcements be only of legitimate and truthful low price offerings, excluding fake comparisons and misleading claims of value.

"That advertising managers, while being held responsible for the truth of their business announcements, be empowered by their employers to command the truthful co-operation of those from whom they obtain advertising information."

It is generally understood that the majority of the delegates favor the adoption of these rules, and little opposition to them is expected to develop when they are put to a vote.

An address by S. C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, head of the publicity department of the Coca-Cola Company, on "Commerce Both a Fruit and a Force of Civilization," was one of the big features of Wednesday afternoon's session of the convention. Mr. Dobbs attacked the tariff in his speech, declaring the system practiced by the large nations is one of the most insiduous influences in the world's commerce. He declared the tariff a greedy and debasing scheme for turning commerce into selfish gain alone.

CAN DEATH BE CONQUERED?

NEW YORK, June 12.—Can death be conquered by transfusion of blood? This question to-day held the attention of New York's medical fraternity.

Dr. A. L. Soresi, of the Fordham Medical School, said:

"I have allowed a dog to bleed to death and have then connected the blood vessels of the animal with those of another dog. The blood transfused until there was a satisfactory return of life. A similar experiment was made with a pneumonia patient and it was successful."

FAMOUS CLOWN OWNS CAFE.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Marceline, the famous little clown who made thousands laugh at the Hippodrome a year ago, is now the owner of a cafe at Barrow and Washington Streets.

Begrimed, heavy-fisted men from the docks, the coal chutes and passing trucks come in to annihilate his free lunch. He expected fancy patrons. He now smiles sadly o'er the bar.

BELTS DRAG TWO TO DEATH.

SOUTH PITTSBURG, TENN., June 12.—Dave Gibson, of South Pittsburg, and Art Mickane, of Bridgeport, Ala., were dashed to death when their clothing got caught in belting of machinery at the cement plant at Richard City, Tenn., Wednesday.

WOMEN'S FEET ALL WRONG.

LA CROSSE, Wis., June 12.—Women's feet are all wrong and they've got to be corrected, is the opinion of the Young Women's Christian Association of La Crosse, and Miss Amanda Clement, physical director, has started out to do the job.

Miss Clement has taken diagrams of the feet of 75 girls, with shoes on and off. The diagrams will be placed on exhibition to illustrate the ills of women's feet.

In all the feet examined Miss Clement has found none perfect, all having been deformed to some extent by being improperly shod.

PREDICTS EXPEDITIONS.

LONDON, June 12.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, while presiding at the Evans lecture in Queens Hall, said:

"The warfare of the south is not yet over. Science demands it, and as surely as I stand here other expeditions will be going forward soon to those parts in the Faraway South."

These words are interpreted as an indication that Shackleton himself is contemplating another Antarctic expedition.

MAY LOSE BY FIGHTING.

LONDON, June 12.—If the Balkan allies begin fighting among themselves, they will run the risk of losing what they gained from Turkey. This announcement was made in Commons to-day by Foreign Minister Grey.

This was regarded as an open warning to Bulgaria and Servia.

DAVE YANCEY, MARTYR to duty, who was hacked to death in Atlanta by a crazed negro thief he had attempted to capture. A destitute family survive him. A fund has been started for their aid and many have responded.

SIX AMERICANS SLAIN IN BATTLE WITH MOROS

MANILA, P. I., June 12.—Six American soldiers were killed and twelve others wounded to-day in an assault on the defenses of the Sultan of Jolo's rebellious Moros near Bagsag.

The American force, which included a number of native troops, finally carried the works by storm, capturing a number of the Moro outlaws.

The killed were two privates of Company M, Eighth Infantry; three members of the Fifty-first Company of scouts and one member of the Twenty-ninth Company of scouts.

Lieutenant Edwin H. Rackley was shot in the leg

Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., commander of the Department of Mindanao, regarded the casualties as few in view of the stiff resistance put up by the Moros. He declared the campaign would go on until the island is pacified.

EVA ENTITLED TO $2,000.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Municipal Judge Scully has decided that Eva Tanguay is entitled to $2,000, the amount for which she sued Lew Fields.

Miss Tanguay testified that she had a verbal contract to act in "The Sun Dodgers" at a salary of $2,000 a week. She worked one week and quit, but Fields refused to pay her.

DIVES FROM HIS WINDOW.

DANBURY, CONN, June 12.—Dreaming that a friend was drowning, Harold Brew, aged 15, got up in his sleep and dived from a third-story window, landing 35 feet below.

His shoulder was fractured and he suffered internal injuries, but will recover.

GIVES STORES TO COLLEGE.

JACKSON, MISS., June 12.—The donation by Major R. W. Millsaps of a new six-story office building on Capitol Street and two adjoining stores to Millsaps College takes rank as the largest gift ever tendered by one man to an educational institution in this State, and has aroused much appreciation, especially among members of the two Mississippi conferences of the Methodist Church, by which the college is endowed and governed.

MILES OFF FOR BALKANS.

LONDON, June 12.—General Nelson A. Miles is in London for a week and will then go to Sofia, where his son, Major Sherman Miles, has been Military Attache with the Balkan allies since the outbreak of the war. In an interview he said:

"I shall visit my son for several weeks and expect to go over the battlefields, especially Lule-Burgas. I shall also visit Adrianople. The trip is unofficial, but I shall probably make a report to the War Department on my return."

JAPANESE SEIZE VESSEL OWNED BY AN AMERICAN

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs to-day will investigate the seizure by Japan of the American yacht Columbia in the port of Wakayama, if advices to the State Department show that J. Harvey Ladew, its owner, has been treated unfairly.

In no event will Japan be allowed to confiscate the yacht, said Chairman Flood, without an investigation by Congress.

TRUST SCHEME REPORTED.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Reports that the Beef Trust has secured control of the Argentine export cattle supply and of facilities for handling the export beef, in order to defeat cheaper meats contemplated by the free list of the tariff bill, caused Representative O'Shaunessy, Rhode Island, Wednesday to introduce a resolution in the House directing the Secretary of State to investigate American interest in the Argentine cattle business.

7-YEAR LOCUST IN NEBRASKA.

LINCOLN, NEBR., June 12.—This section of Nebraska is being overrun with seven-year locusts. Orchards and groves in the vicinity of Louisville, Nebr., have been hard hit.

TO LEAVE JUNE 28.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President Wilson probably will accompany his family to Cornish, N. H., June 28, it was announced at the White House to-day.

The President intends to remain at the summer White House over the Fourth of July, probably returning to Washington Monday, July 7.

MRS. ROOSEVELT ON OCEAN.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt is en route on the Hamburg-American steamship Victoria Luise to visit her sister, Miss Carow, who is ill at her villa near Naples.

It was said that unless Miss Carow's health improves Mrs. Roosevelt will remain with her during the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Archie and Quentin Roosevelt were at the pier to see their mother off.

SPANISH EMBASSY AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., June 12.—The Eldredge cottage on Ochre Point has been rented to the Spanish Embassy as its summer headquarters.

BOYS' ABDUCTORS SOUGHT.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—Police are searching to-day for the abductors of two small Cleveland boys who were lured to this city by two men and forced to rob and beg. Beside Frank Kessler's amazing story of thievery Dickens' famous tale faded into insignificance.

After spending the day at robbing, the boys were forced to live in an old shanty overlooking the Allegheny River.

OFFICIALS AROUSED OVER SALE OF DEADLY TABLETS

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt and other District and Federal officers are aroused against the widespread sale of deadly bichloride of mercury tablets in different colors on account of the increasing number of accidents here and elsewhere.

The Casualty Hospital here has the third case of the kind within a week, and the pathetic case of B. Saunders Walker, the Macon (Ga.) banker, is still fresh in mind.

Mrs. Maude Sandford, 23, 916 North Carolina Avenue, Southeast, reached into a medicine cabinet for some aspirin tablets. Mercury tablets of the same size and color were contained in another vial right alongside. She got these by mistake and swallowed three.

Experts in the Surgeon General's office are indignant over the laxity of most manufacturers of this deadly poison, and steps will be taken by the Government to compel them to conform to stricter regulations. The present law calls only for a poison label.

"All manufacturers should be required to color such tablets uniformly and also to distribute them in peculiar bottles of uniform size and color," said Coroner Nevitt. "At present only one manufacturer in the country, so far as I know, takes the trouble to do this. His tablets are of bluish color and are sold in peculiarly shaped vials of the same color."

ECHO OF FAMOUS TRIAL.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., June 12.—Echoes of the Rosenthal murder are heard in the Supreme Court here, the case of Henry Vallon against Charles Weber being set for trial this week. Vallon is suing to recover on a mortgage on the Weber summer boarding house at Fallsburg, Sullivan County.

This is the house in which the four gunmen are said to have been secreted several days after the shooting of Rosenthal.

SHE CAN AID HIM.

NEW YORK, June 12.—If Esther Quinn, stenographer, who sued Professor Harry Thurston Peck for breach of promise, will forgive him and withdraw her suit, he probably will recover his health sufficiently to take up lecturing within a year.

That assertion was made at Greenwich by Mrs. Peck, the divorced wife of the professor, who is nursing him back to health.

CYCLONE SINKS JUNKS.

HONGKONG, June 12.—Many junks were sunk and about 100 of their crews during a cyclone off the Portuguese Island of Macao. The Chinese were terrified and fired bombs and crackers to placate the gods.

T. R. TO VISIT ARGENTINA.

BUENOS AYRES, June 12.—It was announced here to-day that Theodore Roosevelt is coming to Argentina to lecture on the progress of the United States.

TO SAVE THE BABIES.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 12.—A conference on infant welfare that opened here to-day has for its object to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for the reduction of infant mortality.

The special public health commission appointed by Governor Sulzer advised that "each city with a population in excess of 10,000 should have an infant welfare station."

Commissioner E. Porter, health officer of the State, called attention to the fact that there had been a great saving in infant lives in the past three years.

MUST CHANGE BALING.

SCHEVENINGEN, June 12.—At the session of the International Cotton Federation here the American delegates said the system of baling American cotton must be altered on economic grounds as well as with a view to maintaining the quality of the staple.

They said despite the opposition of the cotton trust, headway had been made in this direction.

TITANIC LIFEBOAT SIGHTED.

BALTIMORE, June 12.—Almost on the exact spot where the Titanic foundered little more than a year ago, the lookout of the North German Lloyd steamship Eisenach sighted a barnacle-covered life boat, which, it is believed to-day, belonged to the ill-fated liner.

WHY HE SAID IT.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The real reason for the statement issued by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo last night, in which he declared $500,000,000 could be distributed throughout the country to prevent a panic, is that certain New York banks are trying to discredit the financial reform measures of the administration. The information came to-day from a source near to the secretary.

The direct announcement was made to-day from the Secretary of Treasury's office that last night's statement had no relation to stock market condition, but was made in response to numerous inquiries during the past few months as to what the treasury's attitude would be in case of application by banks for an issue of emergency currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act.

The department was informed, it is stated, by a number of bankers that some difficulty might be experienced in moving the large crops during the fall, and if they had the assurance that Government relief could be had they would meet the situation.

NEWS OF FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1913

WILL KEEP WATER OUT OF CANAL TILL WILSON ARRIVES

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Colonel W. E. Goethals, Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal, called at the White House yesterday to discuss the progress of work there. He told the President that water could be turned into the Canal shortly after October 1, but that he would not order it done if the President found it impossible to visit the Canal during September.

Colonel Goethals has been the Chief Engineer and supreme executive of the Canal organization since the project was put in the hands of army engineers.

These functions are not based on any law of Congress, but the direct admonition of President Roosevelt to the members of the commission when he appointed them. He told them there was no authority in law for making Colonel Goethals the head of the force to be employed on the Canal, but that his power of appointment would be used to enforce his decision not to ask Congress for further legislation and to make Colonel Goethals the supreme authority. Every member of the commission understood and accepted his appointment on that condition.

President Taft pursued the same method as his predecessor, and Colonel Goethals' direction of affairs met with no opposition until toward the end of the recent Presidential term.

Reports say that the disposition to resent the authority of Colonel Goethals has reached a critical stage, threatening to weaken the commission in the closing months of its task and possibly postpone the completion of the Canal beyond the time set for that consummation. Consequently much importance is placed on President Wilson's tentative selection of Richard L. Metcalfe of Nebraska for civilian member of the Isthmian Commission in place of Maurice H. Thatcher.

It is understood that Colonel Geothals is to be consulted freely by President Wilson on the whole situation.

Colonel Goethals does not want to have charge of the administration of the Canal. He does not want to remain on the Isthmus even long enough to see the big inauguration ceremonies that have been planned.

RULES FOR RAISING EGGS.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Department of Agriculture has offered five simple rules in the conduct of the egg industry, as follows:

Give the hens clean nests.
Gather eggs at least once daily.
Keep eggs in a cool, dry place.
Market eggs at least twice a week.
Kill or sell all mature male birds as soon as the hatching season closes.

PASTOR FORCED TO QUIT.

SCRANTON, PA., June 13.—The Rev. G. E. Barnes, pastor of the Elmhurst Presbyterian Church, has been forced to resign because of his zeal in supporting Wilson's candidacy for President last fall.

GIRLS ADVISED TO MARRY.

URBANA, ILL., June 13.—The young women of the graduating class of the University of Illinois were advised to marry instead of pursuing a professional career, by President James.

MUD BATHS FOR CZAR'S SON.

ODESSA, June 13.—It is announced that the Czar's only son, whose illness last autumn was surrounded by mystery, is to undergo a cure at Sakki, in the northern Crimea, where there is a salt lagoon and mud baths.

DIES WATCHING "MOVIES."

C. G. Maner of 386 South Moreland Street, a collector for the Elkin Drug Company, died in the Alcazar Theater Friday morning about 10:30 o'clock as he was watching a picture advertised as "hair-raising incidents, cleverly woven into an astounding story of jungle terror." Death is believed to have been due to heart failure, as Maner left his office Friday morning apparently in the best of health and spirits.

Maner took a seat in the theater in the third row, left, near the back. No one noticed anything unusual until 10:30 o'clock when a spectator, passing up the aisle, reported to the office that a man was "snoring" on the third row. The doorkeeper responded and shook the man to wake him up.

STARTS SENTENCE ON CREAM.

JOLIET, ILL., June 13.—Before Herman Coppes, aged 14, entered the State penitentiary here he was taken to an ice cream parlor, where he ate a chocolate sundae—probably the last he ever will have. Half an hour later he had entered on the first day of a life sentence for the murder of Mrs. Maude Sleep and her two children, of Elgin, Ill.

He was given his first long trousers—part of the convict uniform—and to-day he will be assigned to work.

KEPT TICKET MANY YEARS.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—A railway ticket dated San Francisco to Sacramento, dated on October 5, 1885, was presented to Conductor Jeff Gage on the Sacramento local, No. 32, out of Oakland.

The passenger was E. C. Smith, a San Diego real estate expert, formerly a traveling salesman.

VANDERBILT IS FINED.

TRENTON, N. J., June 13.—Reginald C. Vanderbilt, summoned for speeding his automobile last Saturday, failed to appear in court and a fine of $25 was imposed and taken from a cash bond of $50.

STATE FREES NEGRO SUSPECT BUT CITY REARRESTS HIM

James Conley, self-confessed accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan, Friday was discharged by Judge L. S. Roan entirely from the custody of the State on the petition of Solicitor Dorsey.

Technically free, Conley was at once rearrested and held by the police on suspicion in the murder mystery. The action of Judge Roan constituted a victory for Solicitor Dorsey, who was fighting to prevent the authorities returning Conley to the Tower, from which he had been taken on the representation of his attorney, William M. Smith, that the negro was threatened and intimidated in the Tower.

Luther Z. Rosser, attorney for Leo Frank, made a bitter protest against the liberation of the negro, which, in the opinion of Judge Roan, was the only legal alternative of returning him to the county jail. He made a still stronger protest in a formal written statement placed on file as a record in the case.

In this he charged that the negro's series of "gibbering and incoherent statements," together with the attendant circumstances of the crime and Conley's subsequent actions, pointed to him as guilty of the murder beyond any reasonable doubt.

Less than ten minutes was occupied in the disposal of the case. Judge Roan did not read either the statement of Attorney Rosser or that of Attorney Smith, who submitted the reasons he wished his client kept at the police station. The dispatch with which the petition was acceded to was a complete surprise. A protracted and hard fought legal battle had been expected.

Judge Roan said he was without authority to hold the negro in the custody of the State so long as he had no formal application from either side. The Solicitor, he said, was asking for the release of the prisoner, and Attorney Rosser had characterized his statement only as a "suggestion."

Attorney Smith's statement to the court charged intimidation, and that influences unfriendly to Conley and friendly to Frank were at the back of the movement to transfer Conley back to the jail. He alleged that neither the interests of justice nor the interests of Conley could be safeguarded by removing Conley from the police station.

Sheriff Mangum branded as an infamous lie the charge that the interests of Conley could not be safeguarded in the county jail, and had not been safeguarded. The only person involved in the charge of intimidating and threatening Conley characterized the accusation as absurd and grossly and wilfully exaggerated. He was present to testify at the hearing, but was not called.

The formality of releasing and rearresting Conley took place in front of the police station. The negro was brought to the sidewalk, where he had his freedom for about a second and was then again taken into custody.

ADELE RITCHIE A BRIDE.

STAMFORD, CONN., June 13.—Adele Ritchie was married here today by a Justice of the Peace to Charles N. Bell, a divorced man of New York City.

VANDERBILT WINS RACE.

LONDON, June 13.—A. G. Vanderbilt won first place in the coaching marathon at the Richmond Horse Show to-day. Mr. Vanderbilt drove his coach, Venture. Judge W. H. Moore, of Chicago, won in the private coach class.

UNWRITTEN LAW FOR GIRL.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., June 13.—It was declared to-day that the unwritten law would be the defense of Miss Lotha Mitchell, the 17-year-old girl who killed James Hendrick, the husband of her dead sister.

She says he wronged her on promise of marriage and that three weeks ago he married another.

PREISDENT GRANTS REPRIEVE.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—President Wilson to-day granted a 30-day reprieve to Tony Milano, sentenced to die to-day.

The reprieve was granted because of some doubt as to Milano's sanity.

Milano was convicted of killing a small boy, and afterward seeking to wipe out evidences of the crime by burning the building in which the deed was committed.

FLASH RESTORES POWER.

JAMAICA, L. I., June 12.—a flash of lightning and a loud peal of thunder gave Thomas W. Brown, aged 4, of Jamaica, the power to walk. His mother declares he was unable to walk up to that time.

WHAT PROTECTION COSTS.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 13.—One million dollars a day is the price paid by the United States for protection against enemies, said David Starr Jordan, former president of Leland Standford University.

LEFT VIA THE KITCHEN.

BOSTON, June 13.—To prevent a snapshot being made of baby John Jacob Astor, who has never had his picture printed, Mrs. Astor and her sister, Miss Katherine Force, escorted by maids, valets, porters, clerks, ets—eighten in all—escaped from the Copley-Plaza Hotel through the kitchen.

The baby was lugged out in his traveling basket by two porters.

SAYS MEN ARE GRACEFUL.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—Mrs. Lillian Stuart, a lecturer on dress and hygiene, in a response to a question why male birds and animals were more beautiful than the female of their species while the reverse was true of the human race said:

"Men have more beautiful figures than women and they are more graceful."

WILL TRY TO SAVE COTTON FROM PINK BOLL WORM

WASHINGTON, June 13.—To protect the cotton crop of the United States ,specifically from the pink boll worm, a pest discovered in Egypt and prevalent also in Hawaii and sections of India, the Secretary of Agriculture to-day issued a formal and final order forbidding "the importation into the United States of cotton seed of all species and varieties and cotton seed hulls from any foreign locality and country, excepting only the locality of the Imperial Valley in the State of Lower California, in Mexico.

"Cotton seed and cotton seed hulls from the Imperial Valley in the State of Lower California, Mexico, will be admitted into the United States only under special permit through the port of Calexico. Such cotton seed and cotton seed hulls shall not be entered or delivered to the importer or consignee until they have been examined at the port of entry by an inspector of the Department of Agriculture and found to be free from infestation."

ASTOR ATTENDS TONG DINNER.

DIDN'T LIKE TULIPS.

CHICAGO, June 13.—"Find out what your husband likes and what he does not like to try to please him," said Judge Uhlir. He was trying to smooth the domestic tangles of Mrs. Henry Klein.

"He came home intoxicated and scolded me because I had planted tulips in the garden," she said, "and I did it because I thought he would like them."

NEW BABY ARRIVES.

WEBSTER, MASS., June 13.—In the midst of the celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ostroski, on Goddard Street, their ninth baby arrived, a boy like his eight predecessors.

AIDED EACH OTHER.

BOONTON, N. J., June 13.—Theodore and John Ginder were best men for each other at their double wedding here. Their brides were also bridesmaids.

ALFALFA FOR BREAKFAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—Levi Chubbuck, expert of the Department of Agriculture, who has been at the Hotel Stewart for several days, insists that we are coming to alfalfa as breakfast food.

He has been arguing with the chefs of the St. Francis Hotel, forcing them to demonstrate in their culinary way that alfalfa, ground in a coffee mill, carefully stewed, and served like rolled oats or cracked wheat, with milk, makes a delicious breakfast food.

BURNING BOAT DOCKS.

SAVANNAH, June 13.—The Munson line steamer Olinda has docked here, having extinguished the fire in her hold. As soon as possible the vessel will proceed to her Cuban destination.

MAY DRIVE HIM MAD.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—If Porter Charlton pays the extreme penalty in an Italian prison for the murder of his beautiful and impetuous wife—and there now appears to be no hope of his escaping trial there—it is generally conceded that the highly-strung young man will be driven mad before he has been long within the gloomy walls.

Italy knows no death sentence. The Italian law does not exact one life for another. But the dread punishment that is inflicted is feared far more by the general run of criminals than the electric chair, the hangman's noose, the garrotte or any other form of execution.

SAID HE'D NEVER BE KILLED.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—Andrew Drew, the young aviator killed at Lima, Ohio, was a member of a prominent family in St. Louis. His father, the late Francis A. Drew, was a millionaire banker and glass manufacturer.

"I'll never be killed," said Drew recently to a crowd of his friends. "I never take chances."

FINDS THREE $100 BILLS.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Harry Tansey, deputy clerk in Judge Tuthill's court, found three $100 bills on the lawyers' table, as he was clearing away a pile of rubbish. He couldn't get rid of it. James McKeag, attorney, said he offered it to W. L. Martin, attorney for the other side, in a civil case, and that it had been accepted.

Martin said he didn't accept it and would not have it.

HUSBAND HANGED, SHE'LL WED.

BALTIMORE, June 13.—Now that her husband has been hanged for killing Ferdinand Salvator, in Greensburg, Pa., Mrs. Guilla Patrelli, a pretty Sicilian woman, 24 years old, will become the bride of her second love, Giuseppe Bruno, to whom she became engaged and wished to marry even before her husband had paid the penalty for his crime.

EDITOR GETS CUBAN POST.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—President Wilson to-day nominated William E. Gonzales, of South Carolina, to be minister to Cuba; Benjamin L. Jefferson, of Colorado, to be Minister to Nicaragua; Edward J. Hale, of North Carolina, to be Minister to Costa Rica, and William E. Vandiver, of Missouri, to be Assistant Treasurer of the United States at St. Louis.

Minister Gonzales is editor of The Columbia State. Aside from Senator Tillman and Governor Blease, he is doubtless the best known man in South Carolina.

WILSON'S WARNINGS ARE ATTACKED BY SENATOR

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, turned the lobby investigation into a political debate to-day when he declared that President Wilson's recent warning to business men not to cut wages unfairly or attempt to start a panic because of the tariff situation was "about the worst kind of influence I can imagine," and that the President's charge of an "insidious lobby" was "a species of lobby influence and most unfortunate."

Senator Reed asked him if the supply of inspired articles sent to the country press was not a species of lobbying. The Senator replied that it was sharp practice. He had previously upheld the right of the sugar interests to come to Washington to present their case. He did not regard this as lobbying if publicity or other legitimate means were employed.

"Then you believe that the sugar interests may make their arguments, but that the President should not?" inquired Senator Reed.

"I am sorry to see the Executive encroach upon the legislative powers," replied Senator Gallinger.

Senator Gallinger declared that anyone whose business is about to be injured has a right to protect himself. He also stated he knew of no particular case of coercion, and that he had no interest in the tariff bill.

WEDDED BESIDE COFFIN.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., June 13.—Standing beside the coffin in which lay the body of the bride's mother, Carl J. Bellard, of Arlington and Miss Alice O. Hazzard, of East Orange, N. J., were married in obedience to the dying wishes of Mrs. Hazzard.

JAPS CAN ACQUIRE LAND.

MADRID, June 13.—The commercial treaty replacing the recently expired treaty between Spain and Japan was ratified by the Senate. It expressly stipulates that Japanese may acquire land in Spain. The treaty already has been ratified by the Chamber of Deputies.

SAYS RICH ARE UNHAPPY.

LOS ANGELES, June 13.—"Thirty per cent of the marriages among the rich are unhappy. The poor, indolent rich! They have so much hurry scurry, theaters, teas and idle gossiping that they haven't time to occupy their minds with something beneficial," said Mrs. Lora Lloyd, former society woman of Chicago and New Orleans, and former wife of Norman P. Cummings, a Chicago millionaire.

"Only poor people live in every sense of the word," she asserts.

WILL MINGLE THEIR ASHES.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Adolph A. Thurman, who died here, left instructions that his body be cremated and kept in an urn until the death of his wife, and her ashes mingled with his. After that the ashes will be thrown to the four winds.

CAN STOP HUMAN HEART.

PARIS, June 13.—The human heart may be stopped for ten minutes without danger, according to Dr. Alexis Carrell, of the Rockefeller Institue for Medical Research, New York, who says the thorax can be opened and operations performed upon the heart, lungs and aorta by very simple methods.

"COVERED" WITH FORCEPS.

CHICAGO, June 13.—After a chase of eleven floors down a stairway and fire escape in the Masonic Temple, Dr. Arthur F. Selleck, a dentist, "covered" Ben Andrews with a pair of forceps and forced him to return a purse he had stolen.

PRESS ATTACKS BULGARIA.

BELGRADE, SERVIA, June 13.—Despite the fact that both Servia and Bulgaria have agreed to Russian arbitration in their territorial quarrel and that Servia has proposed a reduction of three-fourths of the Servian and Bulgarian armies to promote peace, the official press to-day insisted that the situation is unimproved.

These papers printed violent attacks against Bulgaria, charging that country with being a "robber," seeking the lion's share of Balkan war spoils.

GIVES $100,000 TO COLLEGE.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 13.—At the meeting of the Princeton University Board of Trustees J. O. H. Pitney of Newark, N. J., of the class of 1861, was elected a life member of the board to succeed the late Stephen S. Palmer.

A gift of $100,000 from Mrs. Russell Sage was announced, which will permit the construction of a magnificent dining hall provided the university raises $400,000 for the same purpose within six months.

SLAVER IS WOUNDED.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The police are seeking a mysterious blond man who is said to be a white slaver and who was wounded in a fight with Michael Wilson, night clerk in a downtown hotel. The police say the fugitive attempted to drag Charlotte Russell, aged 20, from her room in the hotel, having boasted that he would force her into a life of shame.

50,000 SUFFRAGETTES PAY TRIBUTE TO MARTYR

LONDON, June 14.—A demonstration unparalleled in size since the woman suffrage movement was inaugurated, took place here to-day in connection with the funeral of Emily Wilding Davison, the Derby victim and the first "martyr" of the cause.

A funeral procession nearly a mile long and containing nearly 50,000 women, according to the estimates of the leaders of the Women's Social and Political Union, marched through the streets, escorting the remains of Miss Davison from the railroad station to St. Georges Church, in Bloomsbury, where the rites were held.

There were fifteen bands in the procession. All the women wore mourning and many carried banners or flowers.

Militants rubbed shoulders with the most peaceful suffragettes. Hundreds of foot and mounted police guarded the route and soldiers were held ready to curb any outbreak.

Scotland Yard delegated hundreds of foot and mounted police to guard the route of march and to accompany the women to protect them from offensive actions on the part of the spectators. The women were warned that they must choose a route which would not interfere with traffic in the city's main arteries, but the leaders of the Women's Social and Political Union gave reply that they would abide by their original plans, let the consequences be what they might.

Home Secretary McKenna made preparations for any contingency by holding troops ready. He feared that if rioting began fanatics among the militants, worked up to a pitch of frenzy, might commit acts which would lead to actual bloodshed.

Scores of banners, set off with mourning and the suffrage colors, bobbed above the crowds in the streets. Each banner bore an instription and not a few of them were of a religious character.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst rose from a sick bed to take part in the parade, but was arrested on her way to the offices of the union. The police feared that her presence would stir the already excited women to extreme violence, perhaps a foolish sacrifice of human life.

"BRIDGEY" WEBBER STABBED.

NEW YORK, June 14.—"Bridgey" Webber, one of the most important witnesses against former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and the four gun men who assassinated Herman Rosenthal, is in St. Vincents Hospital, suffering from a stab wound in the back. He is not seriously hurt.

The police are convinced the attack was made by a friend of one of the men Webber helped convict. Webber refuses to throw any light on the affair. He has told a fanciful tale about a small boy darting out of a doorway in Third Avenue, near Astor Place, and playfully plunging a knife in his back.

SHIRE STOCK TO GET PRIZE.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—In the hope of advancing the breeding of Shire horses in the United States the Shire Horse Society of England informed the Bureau of Animal Industry that it would offer a series of prizes during the next five years for the best shire stallion and shire mare exhibited.

The prizes will be gold cups, valued at $250 each, and two will be awarded each year until 1917.

HAS NINE GRANDPARENTS.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, June 14.—Miss Jean Elizabeth Porter, aged ten months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Porter, of Conneaut, is believed to be the luckiest child in the world in the matter of grandparents.

She has four grandparents and five great grandparents.

BEEF SHORTAGE IN SOUTH.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—A prediction of a serious shortage in beef cattle throughout the United States, particularly in Southern pastures, is made in a statement issued to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Since February Western buyers have been scouring the South, the Secretary says, purchasing any and all kinds of cattle and shipping them West for breeding purposes. So great is the shortage in the grazing country that brood cows must be imported or meat prices next winter will reach the high record mark.

Reports from the South, the Secretary continues, declare Southern farmers are glad to sell their scrub cattle, believing that by cleaning out their present stock and later replenishing with new, they can eradicate the cattle tick. The Secretary advises them not to sell, but to breed up the native stock.

Forty carloads recently were shipped from one county in Florida. The shipment of Southern cattle is going on at this rate all over the South, says the Secretary.

MOROS RESIST ATTACK.

MANILA, P. I., June 14.—American soldiers and native constabulary fighting under the Stars and Stripes, made another attack to-day at Bagsag upon the rebellious Moros, whom Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., commander of Mindanao, is trying to subdue and disarm.

The Americans attacked the remaining fort held by the Moros, but met with stiff resistance.

The fighting has been going on for three days.

NOW SHE ASKS ALIMONY.

BOSTON, June 14.—Judge Braley on June 24 will decide whether alimony can be granted a woman twenty-nine years after she gets a divorce.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Waldo of Cambridge, has asked for an award.

D'Annunzio's Star Regales Paris

Spends $6,000 a Year on Lingerie

Actress Called Miracle of Loveliness by Those Who Have Seen Poem Play, "La Pisanella."

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

PARIS, June 14.—Ida Rubenstein, the Russian dancer, and "La Pisanella," the enigmatical poem play that Gabrielle D'Annunzio wrote about her, are more talked about than anything in the theaters, even Minutiae regaleus.

We read with pleasant thrills that the Rubenstein, whom many think a miracle of loveliness, has rented the royal suite at her hotel; that she spends fully $6,000 a year on her lingerie.

We have learned with deep emotion that D'Annunzio spent about $20,000 annually on perfumes and flowers until lately. If the success of his new play is what he hopes, he will be able to renew his outlay for sweet odors.

IDA RUBENSTEIN.

M'CRORY PLANS A FIGHT ON TEXT BOOK TRUST

War on the so-called school book trust will be declared in the Legislature this summer when Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley County, introduces a bill which he says will save the people of Georgia $600,000 in the purchase of text books.

Mr. Crory, who has made a special study of the matter, believes the patrons of schools are being robbed outright, and he advocates that the State should go into the publishing business and have printed by competitive bids and sold at actual cost all the books used in the common and high schools.

Discussing the matter, Mr. McCrory cites the case of Ontario, Canada, which had tried the system he advocates. Where $100 is spent in Atlanta for primers, he says, only $16 is the outlay in Ontario. For each $100 spent in Georgia for arithmetics, he says, you can buy the same number of better ones in Ontario for $25.

The arguments that differences in cost is a result of the payment of duty on paper in the United States is not good, Mr. McCrory says, because the very opposite is true—Ontario pays a duty, and we do not.

Mr. McCrory says he will wage an aggressive fight for the measure, which is timely, since the five-year contract with the school book publishers expires this summer.

BOOK PRICE BILL PASSED.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 14.—Senator Magill's County Text Book Bill, which provides that text book publishers shall file copies of their books with the State Superintendent and that the price of such books in Illinois shall be higher than that at which they are in other States was passed by the Senate.

TOWN FIGHTS FOREST FIRE.

PETOSKEY, Mich., June 14.—The town of Epsilon, Mich., near here, was threatened to-day by forest fires that have been raging for the last three days.

Heavy property damage has been done near Epsilon and the residents of the town have been working in relays fighting the fires day and night.

WOMAN SMOKER DIES AT 108.

BRYAN, Ohio, June 14.—Mrs. Elizabeth Maugherman, who died here at the age of 108, was the mother of seventeen children. She was an inveterate smoker.

LIVES WITH BROKEN NECK.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., June 14.—James Sebring, of Metamora, Ohio, is dead here after living several days with a broken neck. Sebring, an automobile race driver, was injured in a meet at El Paso, Texas.

PREACHES WITH PISTOL'S AID.

PAUL'S VALLEY, Okla., June 14.—One of the men recently arrested near Table Mountain, Darvin County, on a charge of horse stealing, is to be tried in the county court at Paul's Valley on a charge of disturbing public worship.

It is alleged that while church was in progress he entered and preached, holding his hearers with aimed pistol.

ATTEMPT MADE TO SHOW BAD FAITH BY PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Over the protest of Senator Reed, F. R. Hathaway, Sr., Secretary of the Michigan Beet Sugar Company, made public before the Overman lobby inquiry committee the following letter from A. J. Douglas, treasurer of the company, to W. H. Wallace, general manager, following an address by Woodrow Wilson in Detroit during the presidential campaign.

"After Mr. Wilson's address in the Armory last evening I had the opportunity of saying to him: 'The people of Michigan interested in the beet sugar industry stood ready to invest millions of dollars more in this industry, but before doing so wanted his reassurance toward this legitimate industry.

"His reply to this question, which was in a forceful and emphatic manner, was: 'You need not be one bit afarid of me, sir.'

"I don't believe that Mr. Wilson will take any steps that will annihilate or retard a legitimate industry as ours is. He impressed me with his earestness in this."

Mr. Hathaway testified that since the free sugar bill had been offered the preferred stock of his company had declined from par to 90, and the common from 90 to 30, with no purchasers.

Senator Nelson, who insisted that the letter be read, said that he merely wanted to show that the sugar interests had been led to believe that they had nothing to fear before the bill was drafted.

John H. Carroll, of St. Louis, general attorney for the Hill Railroad system, testified that his only activity in tariff matters was the filing of a brief with Senator Stone against placing a duty on creosote oil, which is used largely by railroads as a wood preservative.

He said that the Hill Railroads maintain no legislative agent in Washington, although they were formerly represented by Charles J. Faulkner. He said James J. Hill and L. C. Gilman, of the Hill system, had been in Washington, but not in connection with the tariff.

SPRATT RETAINS TITLE.

Captain W. T. Spratt, Jr., of Atlanta, inspector of rifle practice for the Fifth Regiment, won the State championship in the National Guard shoot at Camp Evans, making a score of 521 out of a possible 600 points. This is the second successive year he has taken the State championship, and the third time he has held the title.

MIKADO HONORS AMERICAN.

BOSTON, June 14.—The American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions to-day received word that the Emperor of Japan had conferred upon the Rev. Dr. Daniel Crosby Greene of Tokio, the board's senior missionary in the Empire, the decoration of the third order of the Rising Sun.

The official notice accompanying the decorations mentions Dr. Greene's valuable services in promoting relations between Japan and America.

STRIKERS ASSERT MINE GUARDS STARTED BATTLE

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 14.—Inquiry into the causes of the strike in the Paint Creek coal fields and the riotous conditions resulting occupied the entire time of the Senate subcommittee's investigation at last night's session and will be the main part of the investigation to-day. Some fifty miners were subpenaed.

The riotous conditions in the strike zone were laid at the door of the mine guards by the strikers who testified. Most of the witnesses were from Paint Creek proper and their testimony has reverted to the town of Mucklow, controlled by Scranton, Pa., capitalists.

Mucklow had been thrice "shot up" since the strike was ordered April 18, 1912.

For ten years Paint Creek proper had been quiet. It was unionized and not a mine guard had carried his Winchester to those mining camps. Last year the operators refused to grant the increase of 2½ cents a ton ordered by the Cleveland Miners' Convention and the agreement was discontinued. Many of the miners went on strike and early in May the first mine guards were brought into the district.

Until that time the mine leaders claim they had been peaceful. Armed guards evicted them from company property and reigns of terror ensued. There has been no complaint of short weights, store prices or the houses in which the miners lived.

Such was the story told to the Senate committee by the miners. Counsel for the operators tried to bring out on cross-examination that it was not until armed strikers were parading around the mining camps threatening men who remained at work that guards were imported to protect the coal properties.

Former Governor Glasscock was recalled. He read much correspondence between himself and the coal operators and the United Mine Workers. These showed that on two occasions the coal operators refused to arbitrate because it would be recognizing the Union, placing the operators and miners of other States in control of the coal industry of West Virginia.

SERVES TWO YEARS.

TOPEKA, Kans., June 14.—Convicted and imprisoned two years ago on a charge of robbery because a bloodhound seemed to direct suspicion to him, George Horton was released to-day from the State penitentiary.

Evidence found recently proved his innocence.

BISHOP JOINS BRICKLAYERS.

HAMMOND, Ind., June 14.—The Venerable Rt. Rev. John Hazen White, Bishop of the Northern Indiana Episcopal Diocese, joined the South Bend Brick Mason's Union to save himself trouble.

He laid a cornerstone at Gary, and the labor union there objected. He went to Peru to lay a cornerstone and had a union card.

LOCUST VOLUNTEERS READY.

KANSAS CITY, June 14.—Every ablebodied man and boy in Wyandotte County, between the ages of 18 and 65, may be ordered out to fight locusts if the ravages of these insects on the crops and orchards continue.

The grasshopper law provides that the trustees of any township must issue the order for war on grasshoppers or locusts if fifteen legal voters of the township make a written request for such action.

RATTLER BITES CIRCUS MAN.

Jones is a canvas man in a circus and while moving the rattlesnake cage was bitten on the left thumb.

SEES EASIER MONEY.

NEW YORK, June 14.—William A. Gardner, President of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, on a visit here, said he did not believe the present tightness of money would extend to next fall.

"Western banks," he said, "are already increasing their reserves for handling and moving crops."

KILLS WOMAN AND SELF.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 14.—Jealousy caused Robert White, a wireless operator, to kill his sweetheart, Miss Jennie Wade, here, after tracking her in an automobile. After a quarrel White went on a search for the girl. Finding her with two male escorts, he first warned them away, then shot the girl and himself.

The couple became engaged only a few days ago.

COOK STOVES POOR BANKS.

ELKINS, W. Va., June 14.—Thousands of people of the United States, still incredulous, bury their savings in the ground or hide them in the ovens of cook stoves for safe-keeping, according to United States Treasurer John Burke.

"Every fall," said Mr. Burke, "the Treasurer's office receives many fragments of burned paper money which had been stored in stoves during warm weather."

NEWS OF SUNDAY, JUNE 15, 1913

DEMOCRATS NOW BALKING AT WILSON'S MONEY PLANS

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Developments of the last week at both ends of the Capitol have indicated a growing determination on the part of Democratic leaders of Congress to pass a tariff bill and wind up the work of the extra session without action upon currency reform or any other important subject.

The tariff revision bill is to be pushed to completion and laid before the Democrats of the Senate, in caucus, before the end of this week. In the meantime, notwithstanding President Wilson's repeatedly expressed desire to see some positive action taken toward a reform of the nation's financial system, the controlling forces of the party in both houses are showing a disposition to defer action on monetary reform until the regular session opening next December.

A session of the Senate Currency Committee last week, and the open antagonism voiced by Representative Henry of Texas against present action have served to emphasize the opposition that has developed within the party ranks, against the President's program of immediate action. While the Senate Committee took no definite action, many members, including influential Democrats, openly expressed the opinion that no currency law would be enacted at this session.

The tariff is to come into the Senate for the second stage of revision within ten days.

The Senate Finance Committee will compete work upon it early this week and an immediate call will be issued for a Democratic caucus. It is believed the bill will be formally presented to the Senate, ready for debate in the body, by Wednesday, June 25.

The arbitration treaties sent in some time ago, extending existing agreements with Great Britain and several other countries, have not been touched in the Senate for nearly ten days. In the meantime the President and Secretary Bryan are understood to have urged Senators Chamberlain and O'Gorman to withdraw their opposition to the British treaty and allow its ratification.

TO FOLLOW MISSISSIPPI.

ST. PAUL, MINN., June 15.—Andrew Koehn, honorably discharged quartermaster of the United States navy, who intends to row the entire length of the Mississippi River, left Lake Itaska on his long journey today. He will re-enter the navy when he finishes his trip, which he expects will consume about ninety days.

The trip is being made in a galvanized steel boat. Koehn expects to cover the distance between here and Lake Itasca (about 500 miles), in 20 days. The undertaking has been approved by the navy department.

WOMEN POLICE AT NEWPORT.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 15.—For the first time in the history of the famous Newport Beach two women policemen were placed on duty there today. They wore as uniforms blue blouses with brass buttons, blue skirts and sailor straw hats. They are appointed at the request of the Newport Civic league, and will be on duty all summer.

BRYAN TOO BUSY TO SPEAK.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A busy week in prospect has caused Secretary Bryan to cancel speaking engagements at Charleston and Lowell, Mass., this week. The secretary will not leave Washington before July 1. Among the important business at the State Department will be considered the Japanese situation, appointments of American Ambassadors and ministers and foreign protests against administrative features of the pending tariff bill.

KILLS SELF IN BATH TUB.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Made desperate by ill health, Karl Hutter, millionaire clubman, who had amassed his fortune through the invention of a porcelain bottle stopper used by many big bottling establishments, shot and killed himself to-day in his apartments.

His body was found lying in a bath tub full of water in which he had seated himself before firing the fatal shot.

Mr. Hutter dismissed his nurse for the afternoon and while she was absent wrote a note saying the pain he had endured had driven him to this act. He was a bachelor 62 years old. His chief hobby was collecting rugs.

DECLARES WAR ON BUZZARD.

That the turkey buzzard is not the great public benefactor and friend of man that he has been credited with for a long time past is the conclusion reached by Representative D. C. Pickett, of Terrell County, who will introduce a bill into the House this summer looking to Mr. Buzzard's annihilation.

While war on hog cholera and not on the turkey buzzard will be the primary object of Mr. Pickett's measure, as the greatest promoter of hog cholera in the world, that scavenger bird must go, too.

Sinclair's Mother Reviles Kemp

'Southerner Would Have Shot Him'

Upton Sinclair, his mother (below), and wife to whom he was married after Harry Kemp, the tramp poet, stole his first.

Novelist and Family Sail for Germany to Study Factory Conditions There.

NEW YORK, June 14.—"If my son Upton had been a true Southerner, he would have killed Harry Kemp!"

This was the vindictive utterance of Mrs. Sinclair, mother of the novelist and Ardenite, as she and her son, his new wife and the latter's sister, Miss Dollie Kombrough, were about to leave for Germany to study factory conditions there.

"Upton's silent contempt for Kemp shows his great charity of mind," continued Mrs. Sinclair. She added that in spite of the many stories printed of her son's liberal views, he is not a believer in free love.

24 PERSONS ARE HURT IN TROLLEY CAR CRASH

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Twenty-four persons, mostly women and children, were injured in a rear-end trolley car collision on the Grove Couer Lake line in St. Louis County to-night. Two of them, Mrs. Dora Bingham and Mrs. Regina A. Carouthers, will probably die. A score of others were bruised and cut by falling glass, but refused to go to the hospital.

The accident occurred near Overland Park. Both were open-air cars, crowded with picnickers. The trolley of the first car came off as it rounded a curve, leaving the car in darkness and the second car, running 40 miles an hour, crashed into it.

The cars were interlocked, and both telescoped. A passenger ran a mile to telephone for a wrecker. Nineteen of the injured were taken to the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium and five were treated by physicians at Overland. The others helped each other bandage up their wounds and were brought into town on the wrecker.

The crash knocked women and children out from either side of the cars into the gulley beside the tracks.

The open-air cars were twice the length of the city street cars and had only awnings as roofs.

The forward end of one car and the rear half of the other were reduced to splinters. A similar accident occurred on the same curve two years ago.

STRICKEN BY FEVER.

LEWISBURG, W. Va., June 15.—DeWitt Gardner, auditor of the Sewell Railroad at Rainelle, Greenbrier County, disappeared yesterday and was found to-day in a woods suffering from an attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Gardner was delirious and ran for three miles through the woods before being captured by his friends. His condition is precarious.

FEDERAL BAN TO BE ASKED ON LABOR OF CHILDREN

NEW YORK, June 15.—A comprehensive plan for Federal prohibition of child labor will be proposed in a bill to be introduced in the House of Representatives in Washington on Tuesday by Congressman Ira C. Copley, of Illinois, was announced by the Progressive Party national service. The bill is based on the principles of former Senator Beveridge's original proposal in 1907, denying the right of interstate transportation to the products of child labor, manufacturers, producers, interstate carrier, jobbers and wholesalers are made responsible for unlawful shipments. By a provision similar to that of the Pure Foods and Drugs Act, commerce remains free to goods stamped or labeled "Registered Under the Federal Child Labor Act." Shipments from States having equivalent child labor laws are exempted from the operation of the proposed law.

AUSTRIA ORDERS AIRSHIPS.

VIENNA, June 15.—The visit to Vienna of Count Zeppelin in the dirigible airship Sachsen a few days ago, according to the report here, has impelled the Austrian government to order six Zeppelins for delivery after 1914. They are to be armed with machine guns.

TRAIN HITS CROWDED AUTO.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 15.—When a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile near Ooltewah, sixteen miles from this city to-day, Finis Plumlee, 43, well-known Chattanoogan, was killed. His wife received serious cuts and bruises about the face and head. Miss Willie Newton and Leo Chamberlain, the chauffeur, also were badly hurt. The dead and wounded were brought to this city.

The automobile in which the party was riding was thrown fifty feet and crushed to splinters. Chauffeur Chamberlain was found 100 feet from the track.

600 SCLDIERS LEFT DEAD OR WOUNDED ON FIELD

EL PASO, Texas, June 15.—Six hundred Federals were killed or wounded in a battle May 29, at Sansillo, according to reports reaching here to-day from Southern Chihuahua State.

After this victory over more than 1,200 Federals, the Insurgents, under Generals Villa Chae and Hernandez marched north toward the state capital, whence the Parral garrison had retrated. They are reported as having taken Cusihuirachio, a mining town, west of Chihuahua City.

The four hundred Federals, who Friday evacuated Madera, were met yesterday by Villa's men at Bustillos. The Rebels poured a hot fire into the Federal troop train, killing the engineer and fireman. The train retired.

General Mercado, acting military governor, has called in all other outlying garrisons to the defense of the capital. The Insurgents are manuevering to prevent these movements.

Some five hundred Federals at Juarez alone remain unaffected by the General's orders. Juarez is threatened by a movement of constitutionalists from the Ojinaga district below the Texas border, according to military reports received at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Practically every railway line in the State os out of commission, as a result of Rebel activities. There is no traffic on the Mexican Central north or south of the State Capital. The Mexican Northwestern Railway is operating below the border only as far as Cases Grandes.

The only armed force of consequence in the Casas Grandes district is led by Colonel Costello, a mutineer, from the Federal ranks. He has proclaimed for a Vasquez Gomez revolution, which is connected with the Constitutionalist movement.

After taking Pearson last week, Castillie was poined by Braulio Hernandez, who previously was reported executed. Hernandex, a former Secretary of State of Chihuahua, is said to be organizing a provisional government under the Vasquez Gomez banner in the Casas Grandes district, which was left unprotected by either Federals or Constitutionalists as far south as Madera.

REBELS DEMAND SURRENDER.

MEXICO CITY, June 15.—The Rebels have demanded the surrender of the town of San Luis Potosi, the key to communcation with Tampico and the old fields. There are said to be 4,000 Rebels between San Luis Potosi and Saltillo and to the east and northeast. Practically all of Tamaulipas, with the exception of Tampico, is at the mercy of the Rebels.

MARY E. BRYAN IS DEAD.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, the highest salaried woman of her day and author of forty-seven different books, died at her residence in Clarkston, Ga., at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night. Her death will be widely mourned by thousands who have read her books and grown to love her, as well as by the many personal friends all over the country who were privileged to know her.

WATER IN GATUN.

PANAMA, June 15.—Water was admitted yesterday for the first time to the Gatun locks. This was the purpose of testing the valves, and the test was considered completely satisfactory.

MORE BODIES RESCUED.

NEW YORK, June 15.—With the recovery to-day of two additional bodies making a total of eight, it is believed the roll of victims killed outright in last night's disastrous cave-in on the new Lexington Avenue subway construction, is completed. The condition of the two injured, however, is serious and they may die.

An investigation to fix responsibility for the accident has been begun by Coroner Holzhauser.

GOMEZ SAILS FOR FRANCE.

HAVANA, June 15. — Ex-President Gomez and his family sailed for France to-day on board the steamer Ecpagne. General Gomez intends to remain in Europe for several months.

BREAKS WORLD'S RECORD.

VIENNA, June 15.—The French aviator, Edmond Perreyon, who held the world's altitude record for an aeroplane, both for pilot and pilot and one passenger, broke the world's record carrying two passengers to-day. He reached a height of 15,480 feet. The record with one passenger is 16,368 feet.

ARRESTED AS ASSASSIN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 15.—A son of Kiamil Pasha, ex-grand vizier, was arrested to-day, charged with being implicated in the assassination of Mahmoud Schelket Pasha.

GREECE FOR DEMOBILIZATION.

SOFIA, June 15.—The Greek government has submitted to Bulgaria a proposal for demobilization similar to that proposed by Servia.

SERVIAN CABINET RESIGNS.

NEWS OF MONDAY, JUNE 16, 1913

LINING UP FOR BATTLES BEFORE STATE ASSEMBLY

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates, and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

COLONY IN PALESTINE.

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

QUEEN IN SANITARIUM.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

WOMAN IS FOREST GUARD.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 16.—Miss Hallie Daggett, appointed forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve, is probably the first woman to hold that position in this country.

She was assigned to the Lookout post at Eddy's Gulch to watch for forest fires

PREACHER PRAISES "MOVIES."

CHICAGO, June 16.—One of the greatest influences for good is the moving pictures, according to Rev. Johnston Meyers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Dr. Meyers said in a sermon that he was a regular patron of the movies.

NEGRO KILLS DEPUTY SHERIFF.

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half an hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

U. S. USES FILMS.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films, it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

CONFESSES TO KILLING.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

FORMER ACTOR IS PRIEST.

ALTOONA, PA., June 16.—Michael J. Byrne, one of the famous Byrne brothers who starred for years in the old comedy, "Eight Bells," was ordained into the priesthood at St. John's Cathedral this morning by Bishop A. E. Garvey. Father Byrne is 54 years of age.

Five years ago his wife died and he gave up the stage and entered St. Francis College, Loretto, where he prepared for holy orders.

Society to See Tribble Wedding

Atlantans to Go in Special Car

Miss Ruth Tribble, of Athens.

Prominent People From Throughout State to Witness Ceremony at Bride's Home June 19.

Atlanta society people are preparing to attend the wedding of Miss Ruth Tribble to Samuel Dick, of Atlanta, at the bride's home in Athens June 19. A large party will travel in a private car to Athens. A great throng of persons prominent in society from over the State will attend the wedding.

Miss Tribble is the daughter of Congressman Tribble. The wedding will be one of the most notable June marriages in Georgia. Both Miss Tribble and Mr. Dick are unusually prominent in society.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. E. L. Hill, assisted by Dr. J. W. Lynch, of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. S. J. Tribble, the mother of the bride, will be the matron of honor. Miss Callie Hoke Smith, of Washington, D. C., will be maid of honor.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, Pa.; Miss Ruth Barren, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Miss Martha Phinizy, of Athens.

Mr. Dick will be attended by his brother, Mr. Jackson Dick, as best man.

WARSHIPS PROTECT CITY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

REBEL FILIPINOS ROUTED BY AMERICAN SOLDIERS

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

FAMILY JARS CAUSE TRAGEDY.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Earl Scott, 18, fatally wounded his father-in-law, David Black, during a quarrel at Eddyville and then committed suicide. Family troubles caused the tragedy. Scott and his wife had separated.

BOMB THROWERS HURT.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 16.—An attempt to destroy the home and kill the family of J. D. Trapani, a wealthy fruit dealer, to-day resulted in the serious injury of two young Italians who threw the bomb.

Trapani came here from New Orleans two years ago. He declared the Black Hand harassed him for nine years in New Orleans. The last demand received from the Black Hand, he said, was a demand for $300,000.

C. S. BARRETT ATTENDS FARMERS' CONVENTION

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—"The Hearst newspapers have been steadfast friends of the Farmers' Union, and have given us invaluable assistance. The personal interest of Mr. Hearst and the splendid editorial and other help of John Temple Graves have done much to enable us to accomplish what we have done."

This was the assertion of Charles S. Barrett, of Union City, Ga., president of the great and rapidly growing Farmers' Union, who in ten years has become one of the most potent personalities in American life. Mr. Barrett was in Los Angeles Sunday. He will leave this evening for San Francisco, on his way to Basin, Wyo., and Bismarck, N. Dak., to attend farmers' conventions.

Mr. Barrett is the guiding genius of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which has 38,000 local lodges and 3,000,000 members.

"Our organization is built on the principle of education and co-operation among farmers," said Mr. Barrett yesterday. "The South was backward in agricultural development, but there has been a great awakening and the Farmers' Union, in many ways, has been the greatest financier in the change. The union was first mainly a Southern organization, but our greatest growth now is in the Middle West.

"The South has depended almost wholly on cotton. The union taught the farmers the necessity of growing other things; raising their own hay, grain and meat, and this diversity of production is one of the foundation stones of our new prosperity.

"My own State of Georgia was far down in the list of States, but so remarkable has been the progress made that the Government reports place it fourth in agricultural products now.

"We try to educate the farmers and then to bring them into co-operation in any direction feasible. We have not started many stores. In the South the lodges built and operate warehouses; in the West, packing plants and elevators.

"We do not run for office or nominate candidates. We have not a thing to do with partisan politics, but we retire a man now and then to private life just by way of example."

JUAREZ IS REINFORCED.

EL PASO, June 16.—Three hundred men under General Salazar and Colonel Porelli to-day joined the Federal garrison at Juarez. The arrival of the troops to reinforce the Huerta troops quartered there relieved the fear that 1,200 rebels encamped 30 miles from the city would attack it.

FARMER'S WIFE A SUICIDE.

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

LAKE STEAMER DAMAGED.

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—The steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth, a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

COLLEGE MEN WASH DISHES.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Of the 700 members of the San Francisco Dish Washers' Union, 100 are college graduates. This is a greater proportion of college men than can be found in any other labor organization.

MILLIONAIRE WEDS AT 86.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

SUITOR IS KNOCKED OUT.

Miss Morrell, on board ship, challenged every suitor to a three-round bout in the gymnasium. Only one managed to get a draw.

One ardent suitor assured Miss Morrell he would not hurt her. One blow sent him down for the count.

PRESENTS IDOLS TO COLLEGE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

VII.—MISSIONS.

A SERMON BY REV. W. H. FAUST, LEXINGTON, GA.

Text: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Mat. 28:19.

Take up any paper these days, whether it be secular or denominational, and you will see much space devoted to the general subject of world-wide evangelization. The spirit of missions is the spirit of Christ; the going spirit, the ransoming spirit, the helping spirit. And where even on a Jerusalem-Jericho road a man is spirit of the Good Samaritan spirit will meet the demands of the day. So thoroughly has the Christian spirit impressed itself upon the people everywhere that fraternal organizations and charitable institutions are everywhere prevalent for the purpose of alleviating human suffering and satisfying human need. So thoroughly do I believe in missions that if we had accomplished nothing in the past history of our missionary endeavor but enlist the activities of such a man as Adoniram Judson, it would have been worth to us in dollars and cents more than all our propaganda has cost us. Christ gave His life to missions. We, therefore, can make no mistake in consecrating ours to the same object. He came to bring life and that we thenceforth in Him might have it more abundantly. Had He no work for us to do at regeneration, He would take us home to be with Him forever in glory, away from the temptation and snares of a wicked and adulterous generation. Jesus has some purpose in view in allowing us to remain here. He wants us to become co-workers with Him in Kingdom-building. The obligation is upon every man to preach the Word. One need not sit down and begin to hunt up reasons after he is saved as to why he should go to China or elsewhere to preach, rather should be sit down and hunt reasons to justify him in staying out of China. The command is to go. The text in Acts tells us that they that were scattered abroad, went everywhere preaching the Word. Many believed and the Lord added to the church daily such as were saved. The obligation then is upon us as Christians to preach Christ. How, then, should we do it? How meet the situation and handle the difficult problem?

1. By Personal Effort.

And most men are so lazy by birth and practice that they would rather the other fellow did it. When you, my friend, go to church and some specially telling truth is presented by the preacher, why is it that you pass it on to your neighbor?. It is due primarily to the fact that you seek to shun individual responsibility and place the task of giving the blessed Gospel to the world upon other shoulders. Not very long ago the mother of one of our greatest preachers lay dying. Most of the children had gathered about her bedside. Her son, the preacher, was a long way off, but finally he came, and went in and put his arms about her and asked if she knew him. "Surely," said she, "I know my preacher boy." And then, drawing him down to her, she said: "Keep on preaching the glorious old Gospel until you come home to join me," and quietly passed away. Could that preacher fail to speak the Word in season, out of season? The dying request of his sainted mother continually comes before him—the personal request. So when our dear Lord faced the cross and before He ascended to the right hand of the Father, He commanded His disciples in His parting words to preach and teach the Gospel of the Kingdom to all men everywhere. Can men fail to respond to the dying command of their Lord and Master, who freely of His own good will lay down His life for them? Could love so marvelous, boundless and free meet with any other response than that of a mission spirit world-wide in its scope?

II. By Witnessing for Christ.

Ye shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Men can reason away learned theories and with ruthless hand push down logic and argument, but they can never get completely over the individual Christian who lives the Christ life. We are living examples, read and known by the whole world. When we walk with Christ men know it, and His ever-present, personal touch on our lives makes us live lives as gospel propagators.

It was a dark day in Peter's life when he acted and spoke as he did in the enemy's presence concerning his knowledge of Jesus. He afterward became a great witness for the Lord; but notice, if you please, that Peter did no great things while he was in such an attitude of mind and amidst such surroundings that he could stand up and witness as a true man for his Christ, "seeing that ye are compassed about by so great a crowd of witnesses." That is a fine incentive to run a great race. Just to think of the eyes upon you and know that the contest in which you are engaged is one so worthy that it engages the attention of all the best people in the world. He that is not ...Me is against Me. Reader, are ... Christ? Are you His witness, ... to His love and power far-away needy ones of earth, and health conditions and home and family surroundings may be such that he can not leave personally, but he can use money and thus send someone in his place. Money to him may become a means by which he can accomplish his cherished ambition and by its use he can spread the Gospel. If ever the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ, then surely money will play an important part. The women who cast in the two mites as Christ stood over against the treasury did a great thing. But there are numbers, nameless as she was, who are to-day giving of their money to help carry out the command of Jesus. The millions of dollars given by men in this materialistic age show to those who think that love is not dead and that the spirit of the Master has been handed down to His disciples, even in the present time, and if a cup of cold water properly given receives its reward, so will our missionary dimes and dollars be received and blessed.

IV. By Prayer.

Indeed, more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. When laborers were needed, Jesus said: "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest." Not go out and raise them up, nor yet go out and pay them to come, but simply pray the Lord. How many of us out of our own experience can speak with authority as to God's directly answering the prayers of His children? We have time and again seen a visible answer to prayer. I never hear that glorious old hymn, as it used to be sung so much in this section of Georgia, but what I was thrilled with the mission spirit:

"Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me;
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see.

"'Twas grace that taught my heart to fear,
And grace my fears relieved.
How precious did that grace appear,
The hour I first believed.

Through many dangers, toils and snares
I have already come.
'Twas grace that brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home.

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise
Than when we first begun."

5. By Co-operation.

What one can't do many can perform. The task that is too great for one man may be comparatively light for many. United, we can do great things for the Lord; for in unity there is strength. The millions of Christians all over our land can put their contributions together and secure men and women to go and evangelize the unsaved. My contribution would not succeed alone, neither would yours; but together great things can be done for the glory of God. And most blessed of all thoughts, in this work we are laborers with Christ, cooperators with Divinity. He furnishes the Gospel; He died to save. Ours it is to make known the plan of salvation to a lost world. Copartners with Him—wonderful thought! A great business man recently said that when he was away from his house the potent partner was still there. God to him was real and near. So, in the work of telling the old, old story of Jesus and His love, we have all power in heaven and on earth behind us—Christ with us, the Spirit to guide and empower, the love of the Father to proclaim, the sacrifice and service of the Christ to tell. And not only cooperation, but joint heirs with Him—colaborers and coheirs to all the glories of earth and heaven. In the face of such command and backed by such power, may we press forward until all people are taught the Saviour's dying love.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, 'for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bid old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

ARTIST AND WOMAN

A Short Story

There was no doubt about the calling of the gentleman who was ringing the doorbell of a cottage overlooking the beautiful park. Everything about him, his dress, his bearing, the way he wore his hat, bespoke the artist.

It was a long while before anyone answered the bell but at last light steps were heard inside and a fair-haired unusually pretty girl opened the door

"Does Miss Berger live here?"

"There are two Misses Berger—"

"Are there? But I mean Miss Julia Berger, the famous opera singer. Will you please give her my card, if she is at home and ask her if she will see me."

The young girl opened the door wider.

"Please, come inside. I am Miss Julia Berger."

"Oh, I beg your pardon, but how was I to recognize the divine Rosina of last night in cap and apron?"

"No of course, nobody would expect that," she laughed, "but I do not know your name yet. You forgot to give me the card."

"I am Professor Vincenti, editor of Munich Musical Times. I felt that I could not leave this town without personally expressing my admiration of your wonderful talent."

The young girl threw her apron on a chair and led her visitor into the drawing room. They were soon chatting like old friends.

"What amuses me most," said Vincenti, "is that I should find you dressed like a maid."

"Well, when I have no other work to do I love to do housework and cook for my mother and sister," she said, "I am really not a bad cook."

"And you are right, for to be a true artist a woman must first of all be a true woman."

He left and Julia once more put on her apron, when the doorbell rang again.

"This time I am not going to open it myself," she thought. "Emma the front door bell! I am not at home to anybody."

The maid opened the door and a young man walked inside despite her protests.

"Not at home! That is not meant to apply to me Emma. I must talk to Miss Julia immediately, but perhaps you don't remember my name."

"Oh, yes I do, Baron Dietenfeld."

"Then hurry and tell her I am here, like a good girl."

Two minutes later Julia came in.

"You were told, Baron, that I was not at home to anyone."

She sat down on the stool before the piano and opened a book of music.

"So I am Baron now," he said, "though it is several weeks since I was promoted to Konrad."

"Yes, but I don't like it. Things must be as they were before. You must admit it is better so, Baron."

"Not at all, Julia. Nothing in the world could make me see that."

"Why not Baron? You have lived without me for thirty-five years and you will find it very easy to go on living without me. What am I in your life? Nothing but an episode. Having courted highborn and aristocratic ladies for years it now amuses you to court an artist, that is all."

"I am able to see very clearly that you and I, Baron can never be anything to each other."

"He turned quite pale.

"Do you really mean that Julia."

"Yes, I do mean it. I can never be yours."

"And why? You must tell me the reason, Julia. Am I nothing, absolutely to you? You must tell me the truth."

"The truth—well, I confess I am very fond of you Konrad—"

"I do not understand you, Julia. You are very fond of me and I love you, what is there then to keep us apart? I am absolutely independert and except for Lucia, I am all alone in the world and my little sister already loves you through my description of you."

Julia shook her head.

"No, I will tell you frankly what stands between us. If you had learned to know me as an ordinary girl in her home, I should have been so happy to be yours. But I am a singer and it is the singer you love. You do not love poor Julia, but the gay Rosina, the unhappy Gilda, the lovely Julia, the dreaming Senta. You do not see me as I really am, but merely through my art. When the day comes, and it comes in every marriage, when you see I am only an ordinary human being, with all the ordinary shortcomings and faults, no longer in the glare of the footlights, then your love will disappear and we shall both be very unhappy. It is this I want to avoid, just because I love you as I do."

He tried to interrupt her, but she went on:

"We will have plenty of chances to talk this over. I cannot do it to-day. Emotion is bad for the voice. Leave me now my friend and come back the day after to-morrow. To-mormor I shall sing Michaela in Carmen. Shall you be in the opera?"

"I hardly think so, I expect a visitor."

"Well then au revoir."

* * *

On the stage singers and chorus people, mechanics and stage hands, smugglers, gypsies, women and children were talking and mingling.

The decorations, a wild cannon in the mountains, had already been set the leader gave a few final instructions and the third act of "Carmen" was about to begin."

Julia Berger slowly walked towards the curtain.

"He was not here during the first act," she said to herself, "that is the first time for many months. He has always been here when I have been singing. But that is so, he said he expected a visitor." She looked through the little peephole in the curtain at the audience below.

"A very good house," said her colleague Escamillo, "there is even somebody in the royal box."

Julia, however, looked only at the box where HE used to sit. "Caramba," she suddenly exclaimed and stepped back quickly.

"What is the matter," asked Escamillo. "Something extarordinary must have happened to change you, who are always so alm, into a real Spaniard.'

"Nothing! Nothing at all."

She stepped to the curtain again. There he was sitting way back in his box where nobody could see him except from the stage. Next to him sat a young lady with whom he talked eagerly. Suddenly he bent over and actually kissed her.

A bell rang and everyone left the stage as the overture began! Julia felt as if about to faint as she walked toward her room. Her "great scene" was to come a little later. Would she be able to sing to-night? She did not know, but she did not know that she could not give him up. This was clear to her the moment she saw another woman at his side.

While Frasquita and Mercedes lay up the cards and Carmen read in them the message of her death Julia recovered her calmness. She was once more the great singer and she felt it more than ever to-night. She had never been so conscious of her divine powers and she knew she would sing as never before.

Her great aria over the applause that shook the building, did not make her feel happier. What did those people out there know about sufferings?"

Finally reaching home it was nearly daylight before she was able to fall asleep.

It was bright day, when she awoke.

"What time is it, Emma?" she asked her maid.

"Half past ten."

"To-day I am not at home to anybody—not to anybody at all. Do you understand?"

"But the Baron has been waiting for you in the music room for half an hour, he has—'

"How annoying."

She dressed quickly and entered the drawing room. Yesterday he kissed another, to-day he comes to assure her of his love. She opened the door to the music room quickly. There he stood and next to him—the lady of yesterday.

"Good morning Julia, dear! Allow me to introduce my little sister to you."

Baroness Lucia walked towards Julia who didn't trust herself to speak. But when the brother took her right and the sister her left hand she felt happier than she had ever been on the stage.

"Julia—my own Julia!"

"Konrad, my darling Konrad."

And the curtains fell for two hearts that had found each other at last.

A minister who was not averse to an occasional toddy hired an Irishman to clean out his cellar. Pat soon discovered a multitude of empty bottles, and hope repeated its specialty of springing eternal in the human breast. As he was carefully examining each bottle by holding it to the light, the minister saw him, and called out:

"They are all dead ones, Pat."

'They are, are they?" replied the Irishman. "Well, there's one good thing about it; they all had the minister with them when they were dying."

A MOTHER'S WORK AND HER HOPES

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

WHY WOMEN SHOULD VOTE

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY,

Market Quotations For Week Ending June 17, 1913

REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

Continued buying of the old and new crop positions by the large spot houses, Wall Street shorts and the New York ring professionals has been the feature of the cotton market during the week. Interest was more plainly centered on the new crop than old crops. Spot houses have purchased July-August aggressively throughout the week.

The highest prices were reached Monday, when July and October was under persistent demand from every quarter of the belt, including Liverpool. The buying was the result of a bullish condition report made public in New Orleans. July sold as high as 12.20, August 12.15, September 11.72, October 11.62, December 11.62 and January 11.55. The largest gain of the day was recorded the last hour, when offerings became practically nil. The market closed steady, with prices only a shade lower than the high point.

Since the close of last Tuesday prices show a maximum advance of 11 to 28 points on the New York future contract market.

If the market had been void of the bullish report, evidently it would have shown a material decline from Saturday's close. Weather developments over Sunday were very favorable, and Washington promised a week of fine weather. Beneficial rains fell over Texas, where they were needed. This, coupled with a bearish summary of the crop for the week, issued in Memphis, and private reports, showed that the crop was in excellent shape.

The Times-Democrat's first report of its correspondents on the cotton crop of 1913 is as follows:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent, at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts, in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

The weather conditions throughout the cotton belt during the week have been very favorable, except during the first part of the week, when temperatures were unseasonably cool. Efforts were made to show that the cotton was damaged materially as a result of the low temperatures, but it seems unlikely that any serious injury has resulted.

"Good progress was made by the cotton crop west of the river and in Tennessee and Mississippi during the past week. Rains that visited practically all of this area proved of much benefit, coming when moisture was needed and when fields were clean. Cool weather retarded the best growth in the central valley, but no actual damage was done; even some progress was made—while in the west the plant made wonderful progress. Fields are in fine shape, both as to cleanliness and state of cultivation of soil. The week was about a stand-off in Alabama, while in Georgia and the Carolinas low temperatures and too much rain retarded growth and cultivation. However, the actual damage was small, and as fields were clean to begin with, grass has gained no great headway. The evil is rather threatened than actual, and whether the crop is permanently damaged depends largely on this week's weather. If favorable, fields will soon be clean and the check to growth will be overcome; if unfavorable, much permanent damage will be done the crop. As a whole, the benefit from general rains over the belt will far outweigh the check put upon the plant by the cool weather, while the excessive moisture has done little damage. The developments of the week have done much to place the plant where it will be in position to take advantage of good weather. Weather at the close of the week was much improved. There is little complaint of insect damage, Mississippi noting a large quantity of weevils and a few scattered grasshoppers were reported from Texas and Oklahoma, but no damage of consequence has been done by either.

"Demonstration agents are organizing farmers for the extinction of boll weevil and grasshoppers are said to have been leaving the fields."

There was certainly nothing in weather news to explain the strength of prices, as the majority of reports were of a favorable character, indicating that the crop is showing material improvement. Stress was laid to the better dry goods reports. As a whole, the talent seems to center its attention chiefly on the consumption of cotton. This was made plain Saturday when many traders were inclined to press their sales on fine weather and crop advices, but the Census Bureau's statement on the consumption of cotton held by manufacturers to the end of May made a bullish showing. This caused many to reverse their position and cover, especially as the renewed sharp advance in the stock market checked any further selling pressure from the bears on cotton in that locality.

The Censu Bureau report shows there was consumed by American manufacturers 510,416 bales during the month of May, against 503,677 bales during April. It further shows that cotton in manufacturing establishments May 31 aggregated 1,505,357 bales, and in independent warehouses it was 938,800 bales; imports 13,820, equivalent to 500-pound bales; exports 468,920 running bales; cotton spindles active during May, 30,559,943.

Liverpool continues to report sales of spot cotton and the English market follows the advance of the American market closely. Liverpool cables stated that Manchester was getting bare of cotton and would soon have to buy more freely, but a letter from Liverpool stated that a lockout was probable all over Lancashire around July 1, unless a labor dispute in a place called Nelson was settled.

The market at present with its large short interest is very susceptible to anything in the way of unfavorable reports on the crop. Much depends on the weather, but with a crop as spotted as it has been reported, many conservative operators are inclined to think that there must be exceptionally fine prospects for the future in order to make a crop that will satisfy requirements. It is evident that shorts have not finished covering, especially from the character of their buying of late. When Liverpool starts buying on this side they display nervousness and are cautious. Some of the bears are getting discouraged and many of them express the belief that it is no longer a matter of how large the crop may be, it is what the world needs, and that the consumption should be watched now more than crop prospects. Sentiment, however, in many quarters continues bearish. Many contend that the crop conditions will have to be very good from now on to insure a yield of 15,000,000 bales. On the other hand, there are many traders who believe a yield of 15,000,000 bales will be enough to satisfy requirements and prevent an advance in prices.

It is probable that the break in the stock market had much to do with the advance in cotton. Wall Street has been in a "whipsaw" of late and had to get out of its long cotton in order to protect itself in the stock market, where the worst break since 1907 has been in progress and naturally the market would move in contrary directions. But the fundamental cause of the strength of near positions is the same as it has been since the upward movement first started. Liverpool is said to have enough long contracts to absorb all of the New York stock if the foreign interests are favorable. Certificated stocks of the staple in New York are down to about 44,000 bales, against 109,000 on the first of May and 117,000 last year, which sets a low record for this season of the year.

TUESDAY'S REVIEW:

NEW YORK, June 17.—Liverpool did not respond to our advance yesterday, resulting in the market opening barely steady, with first prices at a net decline of 1 to 5 points from Monday's final. But for overnight buying orders the initial quotations would have been much lower. The feeling around the ring is bearish and many expressed the belief that we should have a good reaction as weather continues favorable. Weather dispatches reported clear weather over the belt.

After the call offerings became scarce and scattered, resulting in a short covering movement. Spot houses also bought. All the loss was quickly recovered and prices during the late forenoon were some 2 to 15 points higher than the opening quotations. The advance was based chiefly on the rumor that the Government's weekly weather report would be very unfavorable, owing to the cold weather last week, but private reports say that no damage of consequence was done and temperatures over the entire belt are entirely normal.

The weather map indicated part cloudy in the western half, possibly more rain in the central, south and west Texas. This, coupled with the weekly weather report, being much better than generally expected, encouraged freer offerings during the early afternoon session, resulting in prices shading a few points from the early best, when July reached 12.22, August 12.19, October and December 11.75. However, there was too much steam behind the market and prices quickly retrieved the loss and rallied to the high point.

One broker was credited with buying 50,000 bales, which was believed to be short covering. It is generally believed that the short interest has been greatly eliminated and prices will recede on any further favorable weather or crop advices.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 1@8 points from the final quotations of Monday.

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—The continued decline in English consols during the past few days suggests some unfavorable political development. Liverpool came in rather disappointing, with futures only 2 to 3 points up; were due 6 to 7 points higher; spots 5 points higher; sales 8,000 bales. This shows that the advance has its origin and seat in New York and is of professional character, with an attempt to run in shorts as its sole basis. It may sound paradoxical, but it is nevertheless true that, owing to the fact that the general situation is bearish and crop prospects so good, the market advanced because of the short interest accumulated and the bearish outlook for the future, which gave the professionals a chance to work.

Weather conditions continue very good. There were some nice rains overnight in the southern half of Texas, while fair weather prevailed elsewhere. Warm night minimums throughout the belt. Indications are for a continuance of these favorable conditions. After the close of New York yesterday, our market jumped up on the execution of stop limits bringing it out of line with the others. This morning, therefore, prices dropped 10 to 20 points, but selling was timid, and New York again soon advised buying of July and August by spot interests and the market recovered in anticipation of a further advance, which soon appeared, October here selling to 11.75 by 11 o'clock.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 17.—It is believed that big short line was covered to-day, forcing prices up rapidly. Liverpool did not respond to our strength of yesterday, and cables said Continent was realizing on recent purchases. Soon as shorts are eliminated the market will lose steam, and with favorable weather should decline

The weekly weather report is more favorable than expected and eased prices down from the top.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mean temperatures ranged from 2 to 14 below normal generally over the cotton belt, the greatest deficiency being in South Carolina and Nortnern Georgia. The weekly mean temperatures ranged from 60 to 76 over eastern, 68 to 74 over central and 66 to 78 over western part of the cotton States. The lowest weekly mean, 60 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 78 degrees, at San Antonio and Del Rio, Texas. Frost was reported from Pike County, Alabama, and Bentonville, Ark. Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region except in north central part and over a small area in Texas, where there was no rain.

The rainfall was generally light and unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Florida, Georgia and Oklahoma.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.60, occurred at Valdcsta, Ga.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....97@98
Corn—No. 2 63
Oats—No. 2 .....42@43

CHICAGO, June 17.—There was heavy and general selling of all grains to-day and resting spots showed loses of 1⅜@2c for wheat, ⅝@⅞c for corn and ¼@1c for oats. Nearly every commission house in the trade was a seller one time or another during the day and at one time heavy profit-taking by domestic longs, the foreigners were again on the selling side, which A. O. Slaughter & Co. lead in the latter movement.

Provisions were generally lower.

THE ART OF AGENTS

High Priced Ridging—Let Up on High Prices for Food.

By JOHN PLOWMAN.

Agents for the best and cheapest things are always with us. They have a way of making thoughtless farmers believe that it is their last and only chance to get a certain article. The lightning-rod agent was perfect in his day. He could deceive the most cautious of men. They generally rushed forth about the time the first thunderstorms broke over the country. They made the timid believe that their houses would be knocked to pieces before the summer was out. The almanac makers should change their weather forecasts so as to read: "About this time look out for thunderstorms and lightning-rod agents." These agents play on the credulity of the people and they have the most persuasive words showing the excellence of what they are offering Some of them preach the doctrine of friendship to the consumer. No middlemen get any profits. In some cases the manufacturers refuse to deal with wholesale merchants and propose to give the purchaser the advantage of all the profits. That sounds well, but as a general thing the wholesale men would not handle their goods, because they are unsalable. When one thing plays out another comes along and the agents make the same appeals to the people.

Some Farmer Humbugs.

Just as our cotton States were getting on their feet and when cotton was bringing a fair price, agents went through the country selling riding two-horse plows. They would get up a fine team, go out with their plow through the country and show the farmers how they could break the land and cultivate it and ride all the time under an umbrella when the sun was hot. In some communities several plows were sold. No money was needed. A note payable in the fall was all they wanted. These notes were discounted at a bank and the fine plows rotted in the fields or went to pieces under shelters.

There was another fraud so palpable that one could not have much sympathy for the man who invested. That was the wire woven slat fence, or rather the right to make it. Township or county rights were sold. Men also invested in that and no one ever saw, so far as we know, a rod of fence made of it. But the notes were collected by some bank when due. It is ignorance on the part of even intelligent farmers which causes them to invest in these worthless things. They read the papers for local news, but do not study suggestions and facts published as to the trickery of many of these smooth-talking agents. We may look for walking agents who go around at all seasons selling spectacles or books. Now and then the portrait man comes around and will take a photograph and furnish a life-size portrait. There is not much fraud in these transactions, for their deliver the goods and the purchaser knows what he gets.

Some Recent Frauds.

About two years ago the creamery agents invaded the South. Their headquarters were in Chicago, or some other Western city. Their plan was to form a joint stock company with about $6,000 capital. All the machinery and fixtures had to be purchased from their company. We do not know how many creameries were organized in South Carolina. These agents made the unsuspecting farmers believe that they could run a large creamery in a community where there were not a hundred milch cows, of which they had no control. In one of the lower counties of South Carolina the stockholders refused to pay in the assessments. While that fraud was going on some of the best agricultural papers explained what a creamery was and what was required to run one. Notwithstanding that information the farmers went ahead and established them. They are beginning to learn that a creamery is impossible without a large supply of milk or cream.

It is said that in some sections of the country agents are selling paints for houses and barns. The farmer is made to believe that he is getting it at factory price and cutting out all the profits of middlemen. It is said to be a low grade article and will not run or spread when kept several months before it is used. It is about the time of the year for the agents for patent churns to start on the road. They always have some new-fangled affair, with wheels and cogs, which will churn in half the time and make twice the amount of butter made by any other churn.

Every paper in the land might publish for a month that there are only two churns which the farmer should buy. One is the old-fashioned dash churn and the other and better one is the barrel churn. Several years ago the swing churn was popular, and it is as good as the barrel churn. These churns have no paddles or iron wheels about them. They are easily kept clean and sweet. When the milk is just right it may be churned in a barrel churn in fifteen to twenty minutes, and all the butter made that it is possible to get out of the milk.

Let Strange Agents Alone.

A farmer may be sure that these agents, with anything to sell on time or for notes, learns all about the responsibility of the farmer before he attempts to make a deal. The farmer should ask the agent for references. Let him give the name and address of his house. Before making an investment, go to a reputable hardware dealer and make some inquiry about the article offered for sale and the responsibility of the house manufacturing it. As soon as the farmer begins to probe into matters in that style the agent will leave to hunt up an "easier mark." Do not let this talk about the profits of middlemen influence you to buy from a traveling agent. The wholesale merchant buys from the manufacturer and he makes one profit. He sells to the retail man, who makes a second one. But both put together is not equal to the expense of the traveling agent. You may be sure that they do no hire or buy a team and drive over the country just for the fun of the business. They have to be paid and the pay has to come from their sales.

The High Price of Riding.

Much has been said about the high price of food. Even the Congressmen talk about it, and they have great sympathy for the poor man who makes from $6 to $10 a week and has to pay present prices for food. The Congressman, who receives more than $20 a day and many perquisites and favors and has some members of his family on the government pay roll, is always "chock full" of sympathy for the poor wage-earner, or the farmer, who is dependent on the seasons for his daily food. When one considers figures, it looks as if the high price of riding made a bigger hole in the purse than the high price of food. According to a recent estimate the automobiles of Georgia were set down as costing $23,000,000. Then when the motorcycles are added, the sum is increased. Besides these modes of travel the railways are crowded at every week-end with men and women riding for pleasure. In South Carolina the automobiles cost about $15,000,000. Then the cost of running these and keeping them up a year will cost three to four million dollars. Then the life of one does not exceed two years, so the expense of buying new up-to-date ones will have to be incurred again. When one gets the automobile habit he can not be broken off from it until he is "dead" broke. So it is not the high price of food which is the great trouble these days. The people have gradually fallen into extravagant ways of living. When $1 is added for the increased price of food, $4 is added for automobiles, pleasure jaunts on railways, all sorts of shows and light drinks, summer vacations and keeping up with the pace set by men and women who have money. There are all sorts of lecturers going over the country telling the people how they should do everything to make the world better and the people more contented, but all their teaching tends to increased expenses in living. The lesson for the farmer to learn from all this extravagance is economy in the home. Let the boys and girls be taught to make and save money and not spend it. Let them raise a surplus of this high-priced food and sell it to the men who have money. A farmer may have all the comforts and table luxuries at home at little cost and at the same time he can give his children a fair education. Let them be trained to reading best literature and papers and they will find more pleasure in the home than in automobile rides and vacation trips.

There is an economy which leads to niggardliness. That sort dwarfs and does not build up. By cutting off foolish and often hurtful amusements the family may have time and money to spend on lectures, concerts and all such social gatherings as tend to culture and refinement. That is the sort of economy for the farmer and his family. When he spends money to promote the best interest of the family and increase their real happiness it pays a hundredfold.

Do You Know That—

People are most liable to fever between the ages of 15 and 20; 209 out of every 1,000 cases occur at that age. There are only 10 per 1,000 under 5 and 2 per 1,000 over 55.

Laid by a Wyandotte hen belonging to Mr. A. C. Squier, of Ware, an egg 9½ inches in circumference lengthwise and weighing 7 ounces has been accepted by the authorities of the Natural History Department of the British Museum.

Previous to the sixteenth century every physician in Europe wore a ring on his finger as an indication of his profession.

The world's record in fires is not the great fire of London, but the Moscow fire of 1570, in which 200,000 people perished.

In St. Petersburg is the largest bronze statue in existence—that of Peter the Great, which weighs 1,000 tons.

There are more than 6,000 known languages and dialects.

Russia's export of eggs exceeds 1,500,000,000 a year.

PROSPERITY IN SOUTH HERE TO STAY

Striking confirmation of the truth of the reports about the solidity of the financial situation of the South is furnished to-day in the following dispatch to The Georgian:

LOUISVILLE, June 17.—That the South is enjoying a period of great prosperity is indicated by the earnings of her railroad systems. The report of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad shows that the gross earnings for the fiscal year, which ends July 1, will show an increase of more than $3,000,000 over the same period last year.

The statement of the Southern Railway, whose fiscal year ends July 1, shows that the gross earnings to the first week in June have been $64,439,404, an increase of the same period last year of $4,589,377.

This makes it certain that, for the current fiscal year, these two great railraod systems of the South will show increases in earnings over last year that will exceed $7,500,000.

Also, James J. Hill, the empire builder, declares in an interview in The Georgian to-day that the pessimism of Wall Street is not well founded; and he points out that the United States will derive $10,000,000,000 of new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum to exceed the world's gold production for ten years.

The Georgian during the past week published interviews with many business men of Atlanta, and on Sunday The Sunday American published an elaborate interview with Asa Candler, in which they all declared that the financial situation in the South is strong, and they warned against the pessimistic writers of Wall Street.

Hill Says All Is Well.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 17.—James J. Hill, who is attending the convention of the New York State Bankers' Association here, has taken keen interest in recent Wall Street developments. Speaking of the general financial situation, he said to a correspondent:

"What is the matter with Wall Street anyway? Are they going crazy there? Every one is as blue as indigo, and half the people do not know what they are blue about. All that people have to do in times like these is keep a clear head and avoid getting rattled; then everything will come out all right.

Money Hard to Get.

"Yes, I know money is hard to get. I alluded some time ago to the difficulty the railroads were experiencing in obtaining loans at a time when time-money rates were apparently easy. Selling short-term note issues is apt to occasion inconvenience when the notes happen to mature in a disagreeable money market. But the railroads have probably done the best they could do in a situation where it has been difficult to sell bonds, even in cases where the borrowing road has had the security to offer.

"The money market is a good deal of a problem, but it will work out all right.

"Why, those nervous fellows in Wall Street, who get worked up because money rates are going up or because the stock market is going down, ought to realize the United States will derive ten billion dollars new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum which exceeds the world's gold production for ten years.

"I want to say, too, that the Washington situation is all right. To hear some people talk, you would suppose that the Administration was bent upon upsetting things. That is perfect foolishness."

SENSATIONS IN PHAGAN CASE AT HAND

Frank A. Hooper, associate counsel with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the prosecution of the Phagan murder mystery, left Atlanta Monday for a trip to Indianapolis. Attorney Hooper was the third man closely connected with the Phagan case to leave town within a space of three days.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who took an active part in the hunt for the slayer of Mary Phagan until the dictograph controversy arose, left Sunday, saying that he was going to Cincinnati. He said that it was a business trip and intimated that it was related either to his quarrel with Chief of Detectives Lanford or directly with the Phagan case.

Solicitor Dorsey left the previous afternoon. He gave out that the prosecution entirely had completed its preparation of the Phagan case and that he was going away for a week's rest at Atlantic City and New York.

Deny Mystery.

At the Hooper home Tuesday it was admitted that Mr. Hooper's trip was on business, but denial was made that it was in connection with the Phagan case or that there was any significance in his departure practically at the same time as that of Solicitor Dorsey and Colonel Felder.

Rumors are circulating, however, that material witnesses in the case have been uncovered and that their testimony may have a most important bearing in determining the person who strangled Mary Phagan. It is said that the sudden trips out of town of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Attorney Hooper, may not be unrelated to these new developments.

The prosecution has been aware for some time that the attorneys for the defense have been weaving a strong net of damaging evidence around the negro sweeper, Jim Conley.

But Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, following his custom of silence, has let neither the public nor the prosecution in on the secret of the source of this important evidence. He has scores of affidavits. That much is known by the prosecution, but by whom they are signed will probably remain a deep mystery until the Frank trial begins.

Report New Evidence.

Recent reports that new and startling evidence against the negro has been turned up by investigators for the defense are held responsible in some quarters for the sudden out-of-town trips of the Solicitor and his associate. It is explained that they are looking into some of the stories which have come to their ears.

They have heard, it is said, that the defense is in possession of statements from reputable and unquestionably reliable persons which place an overwhelming weight of circumstantial evidence upon the shoulders of the negro. These statements are said to have been overlooked or refused by the detectives working on the case.

Conley meanwhile sticks to the story told in his latest affidavit. He insists that the only part he had in the crime was assisting Frank to dispose of the body.

Chief Lanford and Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, continue to express their belief in the absolute truth of the latest story of the negro, although he admittedly uttered a series of lies and misstatements and perjured himself in two other affidavits before he signed the one which the authorities now believe.

SCORES DEAD FROM HEAT WAVE IN NORTH

Weather Forecasters Predict Continued Hot Spell Throughout Country—Atlanta 90.

Hot and dry weather is the forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday.

The thermometer reached 90 Tuesday and is due to repeat Wednesday. It was 92 Monday and day before.

"But even at that Atlanta has no right to complain," said Forecaster Von Herrmann Tuesday. "Chicago had 98 degrees of heat yesterday. Baltimore had 98. Louisville, St. Louis and Washington suffered 96 degrees of heat. Atlanta is lucky with only 92 Monday and two degrees less Tuesday."

The mercury mark never was as high as 98 in Atlanta in June except on three occasions—June 30, 1890; June 2, 1898, and June 4, 1911.

Although Monday was the hottest day of the summer, the night brought alleviating temperature when the thermometer dropped to 69.

"The outlook is for fair weather and continued warm," Mr. Von Herrmann said.

No storms are reported anywhere; hence there will be no rain.

12 Die in Two Days From Heat in Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Three more deaths were recorded in Chicago today from the heat. This brought the total for two days to twelve. There were few prostrations to-day relief having reached the city in a cool breeze off Lake Michigan.

7 Die From Excessive Heat in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—While yesterday was the hottest day recorded here since July 3, 1911, to-day is expected to far exceed it. The thermometer registered 83 in the shade at 8 o'clock and some thermometers at street levels recorded as high as 95.

Seven deaths have resulted from the heat so far.

MRS. PANKHURST ILL, SUFFRAGE MARTYR

Militant Leader in Critical Condition After Second Release Following Hunger Strike.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the union, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday for the second time since being sentenced to three years for conspiracy, because of illness brought on by a hunger strike, was reported to-day to be in a serious condition.

So ill is Mrs. Pankhurst said to be from self-starvation that defendants in Old Bailey Court predicted she would be the second "martyr" of the "cause."

A society event was made out of the final day of the trial of the six militant suffragette leaders and male adherent, all charged with malicious destruction of property, in Old Bailey Court.

A great throng of fashionably dressed women struggled with militants and non-militants for seats. Among those present were Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Premier, and Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

The defendants were allowed to address the court in their own behalf, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the "business agents" of the Women's Social and Political Union, made an impassioned and dramatic appeal.

In conclusion she raised her fists above her head and shouted: "If I have got to die to get the vote, then I am willing to die right now."

Mrs. Astor to Visit Vincent at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., June 17.—For the first time in five years Mrs. Astor and her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, will come to Beechwood, the Astor residence here, as guests for the summer of her son Vincent.

Roosevelt May Take 2-Year World Trip

NEW YORK, June 17.—When Colonel Roosevelt goes to the Argentine Republic on a lecture trip in the fall, he may extend it to a trip around the world. That is the rumor going about.

If the Colonel takes the trip, he will not return until late in the fall of 1915, which is not many months before the time when candidates will be selected for the Presidency in 1916.

Bryan to Carry His Lunch in a Basket

NEW YORK, June 17.—Secretary Bryan will carry a lunch basket to his desk in the State Department like any other workingman.

This basket will contain:

One bunch white radishes.

One man's size bottle of grape juice.

Three whole wheat biscuits.

And a piece of chewing gum.

SCORES HAVE GIVEN TO YANCEY MARTYR FUND---HAVE YOU?

Tuesday saw the beginning of the flow of silver from the pockets of generous Atlanta citizens into The Georgian's fund for the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who met his death at the hands of a crazed negro Monday while doing his duty.

Hundreds of persons are opening their hearts and their pocketbooks for the bereaved family. The contributions are small, still they are coming in in great numbers.

Atlanta is not half-hearted in doing for those who have done for it. There is a home to be paid for—$900 is due on it—in order that the bereft Yancey family can continue to live; and there is also a poultry business to be established on this farm home.

Trifle in Gate City.

To the rich and prosperous Gate City such things are a mere trifle. To the widow of Dave Yancey and her six orphaned children, however, they spell everything that the future holds for them.

Following is the list of those who have subscribed to The Georgian's fund and to other funds. Examine it, reader, and see if your name is there. If it is not, make haste to put it there with a quarter or a half dollar, or more if you can spare it, and surely you can, for the cause is a noble one:

Those Who Have Given.

CRIME WAVE ON, ASSERTS CHIEF LANFORD

Needs More Detectives to Cope With Situation, He Thinks. Wants Women Sleuths.

Chief of Detectives Lanford, declaring a wave of crime is sweeping Atlanta, Tuesday announced his intention to appeal for six more detectives that his department may better cope with the situation. He said he expected to take up the matter at once with Chief of Police Beavers.

Chief Lanford will ask for at least two women detectives. Like Chief Beavers, he believes women sleuths would be able to do effective work in trailing of certain criminals.

"The wave of crime in Atlanta literally has swamped the detective department, and we are sorely in need of extra men," said Chief Lanford. "The number of hold-ups, burglaries, thefts and other crimes is so great that we are unable to properly handle all cases. Six extra men would put the department in much betetr shape. We need them at once."

As to the proposed women detectives, the Chief said:

"I think at least two women detectives would be valuable to the department. There are certain cases in which the yimght do better work than a man. Of course, we would have to be careful and pick the right kind of women. I intend to discuss this proposition thoroughly with Chief Beavers."

"Atlanta's Success Due to Its People's Progressiveness"

Robert S. Sharp, who until March 4 was chief postoffice inspector of the United States, paid a high compliment to Atlanta before leaving for an Eastern tour Tuesday afternoon.

"Every one who knows anything at all knows Atlanta is always on the job," Mr. Sharp said. "The city is wide awake, and its civic organizations never overlook an opportunity to advertise it and boost it as a commercial center and home location. It is one of the best cities in the country, and its success is due to the progressiveness of its people."

Mr. Sharp was an appointee of President Taft. After the last national election he tendered his resignation to take effect March 4, the date of President Wilson's inauguration.

Leader of Madero Death Squad in U. S.

MOBILE, ALA., June 17.—Captain G. Giaomeneodia, an officer of the Mexican army, who is supposed to have been in charge of the squad that killed the late President Francisco Madero, of Mexico, and who was afterward hounded and made his escape, is in Mobile trying to make his way to Mexico again.

Giaomeneodia is stopping at the leading hotel and seems supplied with money. He came here from Cuba. Numerous inquiries have been made concerning him.

B. Sanders Walker's Widow Gets $50,149

MACON, GA., June 17.—There will be no contest over the payment of the $232,000 insurance carried by the late B. Sanders Walker. This was indicated to-day when the Union Central paid Mrs. Walker a check for $50,149.50. This is the first of the large policies carried by Walker to be paid. It was taken out last December, and a premium of $1,200 was all that had been paid on it.

It is announced that policies for $81,000 and $60,000 will also be paid this week.

Prefers Husband as Her Platonic Friend

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—Mrs. Joseph Lander Eastland, wife of the Venezuelan Consul at San Francisco, and a society leader there, who is suing for divorce at San Diego, today said:

"I hope to restore through divorce the beautiful friendship which my husband and I lost in marriage. That's why I'm suing him now."

Atlanta Relieves Need of Slain Deputy's Family

Fund for Yancey Widow and Six Children Grows

Three of the six children surviving Court Deputy Dave Yancey, slain by negro resperado.

Plea Made for Helpless Ones Left by Martyr to Duty. Slayer Dies.

Atlanta's generosity is beginning to flow in a deep, broad stream toward the little home of the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who was slain by a crazed negro Monday.

The contributions are small, but they are coming in from all over the city. Those who knew the brave deputy have mingled their small sums with those who did not in a universal endeavor to repay to the bereaved family that which it lost.

The Georgian's fund for Yancey is mounting upward, slowly but steadily, as Atlanta realizes the debt which it owes.

Atlanta will do its duty. This city will stand forth and meet the vast obligation which it contracted when it sent its servant to his death while preserving peace.

Little Boy Among Donors.

Out in the lonely little cottage on the Jonesboro road the widow and six children of Court Deputy Yancey will thank their creator that their husband and father served such a generous and noble master.

Touching among the contributions which have been received was that sent in by a little boy. The amount was $1 and the note accompanying it stated that the donor was "a little kid just like those who have lost their daddy."

Contributions have also been started by the police and detective departments of Atlanta. Headed by the names of Police Chief Beavers and Detective Chief Lanford, the list of contributions coming in from the police is constantly growing as the officers of the law step forward to aid one of their own kind who met a fate which they themselves are ever in danger of meeting.

Eugene Watson, the negro who slew the brave deputy and devastated his home, died at the Grady Hospital Monday night. Death despoiled the law of its duty.

In a small, bare cottage on the Jonesboro road, where, until yesterday, a family had struggled hard for an existence and good fortune had never smiled, to-day the utter hopelessness of the poverty is emphasized.

Through the night a widow, broken in health and spirit, and six children, none of them able to work, knelt by the form of the murdered Dave Yancey, court deputy, weeping for the life that was sacrificed to duty and for the dark days ahead when there will be no one to provide.

Once or twice in his life Yancey had prospered. Shortly after he came to Atlanta he was a bailiff for a Justice of the Peace. He earned money then to take care of his wife and children. He held the position a short while, when the justice died. For several months he was unable to find employment.

About four years ago he secured a position as a court bailiff under Sheriff Mangum. His salary depended on the number of days he worked, which was never over two weeks each month. On other days he would substitute as a deputy and serve subpenas. During the summer months, when court was not in session, his income was practically nothing.

On the day he was stabbed to death he had virtually secured the position as a regular bailiff in the court of Judge Calhoun. It would have paid him $100 monthly. This news was to be a surprise to his wife and children when he returned home.

Lived Life of Farmer.

Although he lived in the shadow of a great city the life of Yancey and his family was that of the farmer. About a year ago he secured the place on the Jonesboro Road, on which he had made two payments. Nine hundred dollars are still to be paid. He called it a truck farm, but the few acres were almost barren, and it was with the greatest difficulty that enough vegetables were raised to supply the needs of the family.

About six months ago his oldest daughter, Lois, was taken seriously ill and had to be taken to the hospital. It cost Yancey more than $400, and during the time his family was often without food.

He had lived at the house on the Jonesboro Road for about a year, but he lived in that section of the county the fifteen years since he came here from Grayson, in Gwinnett County.

He was raised on a farm, and when he secured enough money to make the first payment on his little home with the few acres of untilled soil he had hopes of making it a productive truck farm and later acquiring more land.

Family Worked the Farm.

His wife and children tilled the soil. They had no horse to draw a plow and the work was difficult. From early morning until late in the evening Mrs. Yancey worked in the field and directed the work of the children.

Yancey usually came home at about 6 o'clock every evening. As he trudged up the long hill from the end of the car line his wife and children left the field and came to the house to prepare the scant supper. By 8 o'clock in the evening the house was in darkness and the family asleep.

Only when little Lois was in the hospital did any of them venture into the city. Usually they walked the entire way. They saw little of their neighbors except an occasional conversation as one would pass the house in the early morning, or after work in the evening.

Where they have lived and struggled for an existence together Mrs. Yancey and her children want to continue to live. They declined to consider returning to Gwinnett County, where Yancey's relatives live.

Outlook Is Gloomy.

There is some hope of the little farm being made successful, enough so to pay the monthly installments on the home, and there is some possibility of Mrs. Yancey's idea of a small poultry farm becoming a reality, but these are things that are almost out of the question this year.

The farm is an absolute failure this season. It is impossible to start a poultry farm without money, and unless money can be secured the home will have to be given up, and the family, more destitute than ever, return to worse conditions in Gwinnett County.

Fellow Deputies to Act as Pallbearers At Yancey Funeral

The funeral of Dave Yancey, the court deputy stabbed to death by a negro Monday, will be held at the family residence on Jonesboro Road Wednesday at noon. Interment wil be in Forest Park Cemetery, just across the County line in Clayton County. One of the Yancey children is buried in this cemetery.

A squad of deputies will escort the body to the cemetery. Hundreds of friends and admirers of the dead officer, who gave his life in the performance of his duty, will attend the funeral.

The pallbearers will be Sheriff C. W. Mangum and Deputies J. F. Owen, J. P. Miner, J. M. Suttles, C. A. Haygood and E. T. Stanley.

ATLANTA'S BOOKS ARE WELL KEPT, SAY EXPERTS

But Mild Criticisms Are Made of Systems in Few Departments by Special Audit.

A report of a special audit of all the city departments by the Audit Company of the South was made to Mayor Woodward Tuesday. But mild criticisms of any of the departments are made and the general business system of the city is praised, especially the work of the Comptroller's department. Mayor Woodward said he would transmit the report to the Council Finance Committee, which authorized the audit.

"We found the records of the Comptroller's office for the year 1912 in better shape than for preceding years," states the report.

"In our opinion the work of this office can and should be simplified and also amplified.

"One of the things to be approved about the City of Atlanta is that all collections are made by one department, the Tax Collector.

Tax Map Taken Up.

"The question of a proper tax map for the Tax Assessors should be considered.

"Whereas we found all moneys properly accounted for in the Marshal's office yet the accounting methods are deficient and should be materially improved.

"It is our pleasure to report the accounts of the Police Department are better kept than any other of the public accounts. But much useless work can be eliminated.

"The cost of forage in the sanitary and construction departments seems high. It might be well for the city to receive bids for the feeding and caring for the live stock of these two departments.

Construction Department Lax.

"The records of the construction department for the years 1911 and 1912 do not appear to have been as well kept as for the year 1910. We understand this has been due to various changes in the office.

"Examination of the water department shows it to be well managed. The accounting methods should be revised.

"The bookkeeping of the park department can be greatly simplified. Cyclorama receipts are not properly safeguarded.

"The statements transmitted herewith show the city to be in first-class financial condition. The city has a borrowing ability now, under the State Constitution, of approximately $6,000,000.

"In our opinion, the city and county governments should be consolidated."

The report goes into the details of the various departments, concluding with the following tabulated statement of Atlanta's financial condition:

Assets.

Current Assets	$ 403.561.02
Special Assessments	484,659.92

BIRMINGHAM AND ATLANTA BURY HATCHET

Ideas for Co-operative Work for Better South Propounded by Leaders of Both Cities.

The time-worn tomahawk, raised from time immemorial almost in the little war of rivalry between the Gate City and the Magic City, otherwise known as Atlanta and Birmingham, has been buried at last—at least an informal treaty of peace has been made verbally, pending completion of plans whereby the civic bodies of the two cities will eventually get together, not only for a bigger and better Atlanta and a bigger and better Birmingham, but for a bigger and better South.

Wilmer Moore, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, and "Big Chief" Oscar Turner, as he is familiarly known in Birmingham, who came to Atlanta Monday night, are the peace envoys.

Mr. Moore and Mr. Turner, the one president and the other the "livest wire" of two of the largest civic bodies in the South, are of one accord—they want to see a spirit of co-operation exist between the two cities as a substitue for the present tendency to pull apart, or, rather, the failure to pull together.

Moore's Ideas.

Mr. Moore has a number of good ideas to which he gave expression freely when seen Tuesday morning.

"I think the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham may well get together and find out more about each other than they know now to good advantage," said he. "When we become firmly established in our new home I hope to see the inauguration of a plan whereby the two bodies may extend certain courtesies to each other, such as exchange of visits when Atlantans are in Birmingham and vice versa.

"There is a great deal more to be done also; for instance, the 'exchange of speakers' idea is a very good one. Anything we may do along this line is only a small part of a larger plan whereby the people of the Southern cities may learn all about the South—what each city is doing, in other words."

Mr. Turner, who called on Mr. Moore Monday afternoon, also had much to say. He wants to inaugurate a "system" whereby the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham will exchange speakers among other things. In this way Mr. Turner says he believes the two cities can learn many valuable things about each other and at the same time create a spirit of "pull-together" which will result in a bigger Atlanta and a bigger Birmingham.

"Going one step farther, the Birmingham "live wire" hopes to see perfected a league or association of civic bodies which shall pull together for a bigger and more prosperous South.

'Get Fresh Air' Dan Carey's Main Happiness Hint

Tells Tads How to Enjoy Life and Keep Health

Happy group at play in Park.

"Direct their energies in right direction and they can't go wrong," Is Carey's theory.

"People of Atlanta Not Yet Awake to the Value of Playground," Says Director.

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, whose bright smile and jolly manner have marked him as the possessor of the true secret of happiness, has given The Georgian some hints of happiness to children that were inspired by the opening of the playgrounds Monday.

Viewing a throng of children at play in Joyner Park playground, he denied that there was any secret to happiness.

"There is a composite picture of happiness," he declared. "Is there anything more simple or natural? Look at their beaming faces. Listen to their spontaneous laughter and shouts. My hints to happiness to children would be something like these:

"Get out in the sunshine, in the fresh air, and there won't be so much cause to complain at the heat of summer.

"Drink lots of water. You see our sanitary drinking founts in the playgrounds provide flowing water that children may drink as fairies.

"Get children together, then have a director over them to see that all their outbursts are in a wholesome direction.

Appeal to Imagination.

"Inspire activities and morals in them by getting them interested in specific things.

"You seldom have to even scold children when they are treated right, but they have lots of pent-up energy which must be directed rightly or they will go wrong.

"Teach them to love the flag of our country. They demand things that appeal to their imagination.

"When they are tired at night from a long day of play let them sleep lots."

Mr. Carey explained that providing happiness for children was a business just like running a store, and that it required the same sort of systematic thought from grown-ups.

While he was talking in his office the telephone rang.

"You want me to say something funny about the birth of the lion cubs at the zoo for your paper?" he asked.

"That is like a newspaper man," he continued. "His question is typical of the attitude of most people to parks and playgrounds. But the spirit of humor and play are not quite so spontaneous. There is work and study back of both."

Value of Grounds Not Realized.

Then he revealed a copy of a letter he had written to a city official explaining why the number of playgrounds had been reduced this year and touching on the object of playground work in general.

"The people of Atlanta have not yet realized exactly what the playgrounds mean," he had written.

Heretofore Atlanta has operated its grounds merely as a place for the children of the neighborhood to play and no attention has been paid to the more serious side of the work. One member of the park board said he could see no advantage to the city in hiring a young woman to act as nurse for the neighborhood.

Recorder's Removal Rouses Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 17.—Throughout the city to-day discussions have been warm anent the mass meeting held Sunday, which packed the Jefferson Theater to protest against the summary removal of Clement Wood as Recorder by the city commission, and to comment on the city commission in general, as well as the incidents connected with the alleged "railroading out of the city" of an organizer who came here to form a union of motormen and conductors of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company.

So successful was the meeting that White Gibson, attorney for the labor unions, to-day announced that another would be held.

GEORGIA CREATES ALUMNI BUREAU

New Department Will Do Publicity Work of University—Eugene Black Orator.

ATHENS, June 17.—This is alumni day of the University of Georgia commencement week.

At a largely attended meeting of the Alumni Association this morning Fred T. Myers, of Pensacola, was selected as the alumni orator for next year. The class of 1908 decided to establish an alumni library fund, to be used in purchasing new books for the library. A tribute of respect to Rev. M. J. Coker, who had died since the last meeting, was adopted.

The board of trustees to-day created an alumni bureau and publicity department of the university, and appropriated sufficient funds to maintain it. A compilation will be made of the alumni and a general publicity department established.

The alumni address to-day was delivered by Eugene Black, of Atlanta.

Juniors Deliver Orations.

This afternoon the junior orations were delivered and the sophomore cup was presented. The junior speakers to-day were: Victor Victor, Atlanta; D. E. Macamy, Dalton; G. Harrison, Atlanta; C. I. Funkenstein, Athens; L. Michael, Athens; T. T. Lew, China.

The law hop takes place to-night.

At the prize drill of the cadet regiment Private John Nicholson, of Athens, won the medal for the best drilled man, while Company B, captained by Z. S. Cowan, of Atlanta, won the company prize.

Military Appointments.

Appointments in the military department for the next session were announced as follows:

Bentley Chappelle, Columbus, and S. T. Brewton, Claxton, cadet majors; L. Michael, Athens; C. Pope, Athens; J. T. Hines, Augusta; J. B. Conyers, Cartersville; R. H. Patterson, Athens; Frank Cheney, Athens; H. H. Whelchel, Comer; J. T. Collins, Jackson; R. D. Short, Athens, and J. H. Moss, Athens, company captains.

In the champion debate the Demosthenian Society triumphed over Phi Kappa on the Philippines question. The winning debaters were C. C. Davis, of Marietta, and V. E. Adams, of Covington.

Court Holds Food Seller No Peddler

Peddlers of chickens, eggs and butter are not subject to the peddlers' tax of $50 under the decision of the Georgia Supreme Court, handed down Tuesday. The ruling was made in the case of E. M. Latham against County Tax Collector A. P. Stewart.

The general tax act of 1909 provides a tax on peddlers of stoves, tinware, soaps, drugs and other commodities and merchandise.

The Supreme Court held that the intent of the act was not to place a tax on peddlers of foodstuffs. Two members of the Supreme Court dissented from the decision.

State Convention Is Planned to Discuss Disposal of W. & A.

The advisability of calling a State convention to discuss the future of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, and to aid the State Legislature in its disposal, will be considered at a mass meeting of Atlanta citizens at the Auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. No conclusion will be reached as to the disposal of the property, which has an estimated value of $25,000,000. The meeting is a preliminary one, and probably will be the first of a number.

In calling the meeting Chamber of Commerce officials declare they are moved not only by the fact that the proper disposal is of the utmost importance to the State, but because the road is an important part of the freight rate situation, and the citizens of Atlanta have an especial interest in it.

Coroner Refuses To Pay Bill for Painter Analysis

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 17.—The analysis of the stomach and other organs of the late E. O. Painter reached here this afternoon and is now in the Barnett National Bank. Just what it contains is unknown. There is a bill for $2,000 chemists' fees attached to the package. It was sent C. O. D. Coroner C. D. Abbott refuses to pay the bill.

Representatives of the Painter family ordered the autopsy and Coroner Abbott took charge of the examination, when he found that the vital organs had been sent to Baltimore for analysis. Mr. Abbott has some information which he refuses to give out.

SINCLAIR'S FORMER WIFE TO REMARRY

Engaged to Hugh B. Halliwell, Met in Sanitarium—Wedding Raises Groom's Income.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Friends of Mrs. Meta Fuller Sinclair, divorced wife of Upton Sinclair, the writer, learned to-day of her engagement to Hugh B. Halliwell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Mrs. Sinclair and Halliwell met in a sanitarium in Newburg, N. Y., where both were patients, and it was a case of love at first sight.

Incidentally Halliwell, whose father was a rich jeweler, increases his income from $3.50 a week to $150 a week by his marriage, according to a clause in his father's will.

Mrs. Sinclair, who called her ex-husband "an essential monogamist without the qualities to hold a woman," declares that she has at last found her ideal. Halliwell, who is barely 26, has also been divorced.

Upton Sinclair divorced his wife two years ago, naming Harry Kemp, the "hobo poet of Kansas," as co-respondent. Kemp met Mrs. Sinclair while she was a patient in a Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium. Sinclair remarried several weeks ago, and will reside in Holland.

Three Debtors File Petitions in Court

Three voluntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed Tuesday in the United States District Court.

J. S. Saul, 383 Central Avenue, formerly a member of the bankrupt firm of Springer, Simon & Saul, submitted assets of $50 and liabilities amounting to $35,775.29.

William F. Bragg, Jr., submitted liabilities of $177.52, with no assets.

J. H. Dudley submitted liabilities of $299.45 and assets of $50, with conditional assets of $1,500 in a life insurance policy.

Doctor to Report On City's Milk Supply

Atlanta's milk supply will be discussed at a luncheon next Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Hotel. A report will be made by Dr. S. A. Visanska, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on milk supply.

B. M. Hood, director of the Chamber of Commerce division of health, will deliver an address. President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside at the luncheon.

GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS URGED

George W. Coleman, Head of Advertising Clubs of Nation, Asks It Be Practiced.

"Can the Golden Rule be followed in business?

"Must it be 'doing unto others as ye would they should do unto you,' or will it be David Harum's rule, 'Do others or they'll do you, and do it first'?" asks George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in The Christian Endeavor World. He says:

For my part, I do not want to wait either for the co-operative commonwealth or for the millennium, but in the name of God and righteous dealing and suffering humanity I want to get the Golden Rule right here and now. Begin at once to make conditions what they ought to be, no matter if they have been otherwise since the days of Methuselah. There is nothing inherently adverse to brotherliness in a simple business transaction like giving something you have in exchange for something you want. Is it not good business to get your competitor's trade and keep him from getting yours, if you can do it without lying or misrepresenting?

But does the Golden Rule mean that you are at liberty to get your competitor's trade, because you are willing that he should get yours, if he can. The biggest and most successful business men will tell us that where they have put in effect in their business the principles of the Golden Rule it has turned out generally to be good business as well as good morals. Whatever may be the rule of the Standard Oil Company in dealing with its competitors, with the public, and with the Government, it has been a past master in developing the application of the Golden Rule to its employees.

Germans Beg for Carnegie Millions

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 17.—Worn out by the strain of the festivities attending the marriage of her daughter, Princess Victoria Luise, and the Kaiser's quarter centennial jubilee, the Empress was indisposed to-day and was unable to take part in the ceremonies.

That the Germans are interested in Andrew Carnegie is shown by the begging letters addressed to him. A special postoffice had to be rigged up in one of the hotel rooms to care for them. It was estimated that the bequests aggregated $5,000,000.

The steel master's most important engagement for to-day was attendance at the imperial banquet. To-morrow he, Mrs. Carnegie and their daughter, Miss Margaret Carnegie, will leave for Switzerland.

Centenarian Pastor Weds 10th Grandson

NEW YORK, June 17.—Forty-two grandchildren and thirty great grandchildren assembled at Central Palace Hall, No. 66 Sheriff Street, to watch the Rev. Zangwill Schreiber, who claims to be a hundred years old, perform the tenth marriage ceremony for one of his grandchildren.

Mr. Zangwill, who is pastor of the Congregational Bnei Rabire, on Willett Street, married his own children and nine grandchildren before starting on a recent trip to the Holy Land.

QUEEN BARS SLIT SKIRT AT ASCOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ASCOTHEATH, ENGLAND, June 16.—Fearing another such outrage as almost spoiled the Derby, when Emily Wilding Davison threw herself under the hoofs of King George's horse Anmer, scores of police and detectives thronged the course here to-day when the four-day race meet, the most fashionable turf event of the season, opened.

From a purely sporting angle the Derby is the premier classic of the turf; from the standpoint of a society function the Ascot meeting compares favorably with the Auteuil and Chantilly meetings in France.

Not alone was the course thoroughly policed, but detectives moved among the crowds in the paddock and grandstands, prepared to prevent any demonstration that suffragettes might attempt.

King George and Queen Mary attended the meet and were greeted vociferously as they entered the royal box. There were also many American tourists in the private boxes in the stand.

Although no sartorial censor stood guard at the entrance to the royal inclosure, the word had gone forth that women appearing in scandalizing or freak dresses would do so at the risk of being barred next year.

This applied particularly to the slashed skirt which showed the wearer's stockings to the knees. Queen Mary was simply dressed in white and wore a straw hat with flowers on it.

Ten Dead Men Share Film With Roosevelt

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Aviator Andrew Drew, of St. Louis, killed when his aeroplane caught fire at Lima, Ohio, was the tenth man to die of those who appeared in the famous motion picture "death film," taken in St. Louis in October, 1910.

The others who have died are: Arch Hoxsey, Ralph Johnstone, P. O. Parmalee, A. C. Welsh, Howard Gill, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, Jacques Faure, Theodore Schreck and "Tony" Von Phul.

Of the others, Theodore Roosevelt was shot at Milwaukee, Alfred Le Blanc was disabled for life and Walter De Mumm was shot.

Shuptrine Takes Stovall's Place

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Herman C. Shuptrine, the administration candidate, was elected Representative in the Legislature yesterday over John J. Bouhan by a majority of 766.

Shuptrine succeeds Pleasant A. Stovall, who has been named by President Wilson for Minister to Switzerland and who recently resigned.

Napoleon's Hat and Gun Sold at Auction

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—A cosmopolitan crowd of buyers attended the sale of Napoleon relics at Sotheby's, yet while duly authenticated, they brought only $7,007.

Spink paid $1,750 for a portrait in oils of Napoleon by Rene-Theodore Berthon, a pupil of David, and $425 for Napoleon's hat worn when he was First Consul, with an original document certifying its genuineness.

Permain paid $675 for Napoleon's gun, a flint-lock sporting rifle, which belonged for many years to Egg, the famous gunmaker.

ATLANTA ARCHITECT WINS.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 17.—P. Thornton Marye, of Atlanta, has been selected as the architect for the new Wake County court house, to cost $200,000. He won this contract in a spirited competition.

BIGAMY CHARGE SPITE, HE SAYS

Following his arrest Tuesday morning on a bigamy charge preferred by the Chief of Police of Unadilla, Ga., H. G. Wade, a machinist, attributed his trouble to "spite work" by a Unadilla man, who has had a grudge against him two years.

Wade is 24 years old. He said he came to Atlanta a week ago to work for the American Bridge Company, steel contractor on the Healey Building. He admitted have married a Unadilla girl, the daughter of a prosperous Georgia planter, a year ago, as the Unadilla Chief charges. He said she knew where he was and that she is his only wife. His wife was Miss Sannie Lokaman.

Two years ago, Wade said, a young man in Unadilla was about to wed. Wade knew he had a wife from whom he had not been divorced and he so informed the prospective bride. That broke up the marriage, of course, and Wade said the other man had made him trouble ever since.

"A year ago when I was in Macon this man slipped up behind me when I was at work one night and struck me over the head," Wade said. "We had a fight, and I took his pistol from him and shot him. He said then he would get even with me. He is out for revenge."

Wade said he never had the slightest trouble with his wife.

Here, Wednesday, Is a Sale That Will Take Atlanta Women Into an Entirely New Realm of Value-Giving. Pretty Summer Apparel---Dresses, Coats, Blouses, Skirts

At $3.85

Women who dread frequent and tiresome visits to the dressmaker can fairly revel in the freshness and charm of these garments which are priced for selling to-morrow at less than the cost of making.

'Tis a special event with very special advantages, which become more and more obvious as you examine, and try on the stylish, cool, becoming frocks, coats, etc., and realize their true values.

The 300 Dresses at $3.85

Delightfully cool, pretty Summertime Dresses of kinds, styles and fabrics too numerous to tell you of. They are just the kinds wanted, to slip into for morning, for street and afternoon wear. Charming little coat or Russian dresses of linen; white, pinks and blues; daintily fashioned frocks of sheer voiles in stripes and figured effects—some in wee Dresden patterns—with lace trimming and stylish girdle. Plenty of ratines and some exceptionally good dresses of Egyptian tissue and sheer madras cloths in blues, pinks and lavender.

We believe you have never before been invited to select from such Dresses as these at such a price—$3.85. Values up to $15 are included.

Girls' Dancing Frocks at $3.85

Sheer, pretty little dresses of white net, with trimming touches on bodice and skirt of pink, blue or yellow satin, and girdle of the same. Fascinating Caps to match, silk lined. This price is considerably less than the cost for making such a dress would be.

The Silk Dresses at $3.85

Think of buying a good Foulard Dress that will serve you all summer and into the fall, at such a price. These are in the most desirable colors, too, and all attractively made and trimmed: blues, browns and black-and-white figured effects. There are only 35 of these good dresses, for those who come for them early.

$5 to $6.50 Lingerie Waists at $3.85

Beautiful Waists by the scores and not mere quantity, but the immense variety that only quantity can assure. All pretty summery styles in daintiest effects. High or low neck, long or three-quarter sleeves.

$5.75 to $7.50 Skirts $3.85

New skirts, of distinctive styles. Smart black-and-white checks, serges in navy and black and many stylish mixtures.

NEAR-BEER MEN WIN 2 STRIKING VICTORIES

Court Rules Railroads Can't Be Forced to Reveal Shipments. Single Tax Allowed.

Near-beer men won two important victories Tuesday when the Supreme Court of Georgia decided that railroad companies can not be required to furnish police departments with information regarding shipments of intoxicants, and wholesalers in near-beer can not be required to pay the annual $1,000 tax on each brand of near-beer handled by them.

The first decision applies directly to the Atlanta law, commonly known as the "McClelland Ordinance," requiring railroads to furnish the police department with full information regarding all shipments of intoxicants of more than three gallons. It was held to be "repugnant to the fifteenth section of the act of Congress known as the interstate commerce act, as amended June 18, 1910." A fine of $200 or a sentence of 30 days was the penalty provided for failure of railroad companies to furnish the information.

Railway Agent Convicted.

O. M. Ezell, agent for the Central of Georgia, declined to furnish the information and was placed under arrest March 19, 1912. He was convicted and appealed to the Supreme Court. A voluminous mass of testimony and citations was laid before the higher court.

In conclusion the decree read, "It was suggested in the brief of counsel for the city, since this case arose, what is known as the 'Webb Act' has been passed by Congress. Whatever may be the extent or effect of that act—as to which we express no opinion—it has no effect upon the present case."

This decision removes one of the city's surest methods of getting "tips" on persons guilty of operating blind tigers.

Demand Can't Be Made.

The Supreme Court held that demand for such information was not derived from the fact that a crime had been committed, but that the officers were simply seeking information which might lead to the discovery of violations of the law.

Ruling on the near-beer tax of $1,000 on each brand handled by wholesalers was handed down in the case of J. H. Morgan, of Brunswick. His arrest was made under section 5 of the General Tax Act, Civil Code 983.

The court held that the tax only could be applied to the 'particular place of business and not to each specific brand of near-beer handled.

Three Charged With Court Irregularity

MACON, GA., June 17.—Justice of the Peace J. H. Brown, his constable, Lee Davis, and E. W. Howard, who appeared in Brown's court as a prosecutor of Edgar Elias, a negro, have been indicted by the Bibb Grand Jury for alleged irregularities in the case against the negro. It is claimed that Elias was made to pay $14 costs for his release from jail, in violation of the law.

J. A. Flournoy, who had the negro employed at the time of his arrest, is prosecuting the three indictments.

Lane Urges Law to Drain Swamp Lands

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary Lane has submitted a recommendation to Congress for the drainage and reclamation of public swamp and overflowed lands in any State or Territory.

Mr. Land authorized an agreement with Oregon to co-operate in the construction of the Tunlo irrigation project, comprising 35,000 acres, to cost $900,000.

DR. COOK AGAIN TO EXPLORE ARCTICS

Dr. Cook, of Polar fame, is going polaring again—in other words, he has an "itching of the feet and a trembling of the hands, real signs of wanderlust," according to a statement at the Hotel Aragon Monday afternoon.

"Yes, the fever has me again," said the genial doctor. "It always strikes me about this time of the year, but I'm in for it in real dead earnest this time, and just as soon as I get the Polar matter cleaned up satisfactorily I am going on another expedition to the North Polar regions, where there remains much work to be done. I will make an expedition also to Mount Everest, about which there is a great deal to be learned."

Dr. Cook said he would like to get on the way even sooner, but could not do so until the Polar controversy had been settled, as he owes this debt to his family and to his good name.

Loses His Countess Because of Religion

BIARRITZ, June 17.—The Marquis de Alcedo, of Spain, announces that there will be no marriage between his daughter, Ysabel, Countess Bannelos, and Maurice Burke-Roche, of New York. The Marquis states that religious differences make such a union impossible.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago.

Wants Divorce; Kin Kidnaped Her Son

Mrs. Julia Cleo Clarke, who figured in a sensational kidnaping case last March, when she had her mother-in-law, Mrs. G. S. Clarke, indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of abducting her son to Chicago, Tuesday filed a suit for divorce against her husband, A. H. Clarke.

In the first part of March Mrs. Clarke appeared before the Grand Jury and said that her mother-in-law had persuaded her husband to desert her and that the two had gone to Chicago with her 2-year-old son. The child was returned to the mother shortly after the indictment and it was understood there would be no prosecution of the kidnaping case.

Reweds First Wife; Alimony for Second

CHICAGO, June 17.—W. D. Boyce, a wealthy published and traveler, remarried his first wife, Mary J. Boyce, in Ottawa, Ill. They are here on the way to a honeymoon in Alaska.

Boyce was divorced in 1908. He married Miss Virgina Lee, of Oak Park, Ill., and went to South America. A year ago Mrs. Boyce got a divorce with $100,000 alimony.

Boyce attracted attention in 1906 by an offer to take over the postal business of the United States, guaranteeing 1-cent postage.

Parcel Stamp Sale in 3 Months $7,076,517

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Postmaster General Burleson to-day announced $7,076,517 was received by the Postoffice Department from the sale of parcel post stamps between January 1 and March 31. During the three months more than 150,000,000 packages were handled by the system.

Chicago led all citiese in the sale of stamps, with a total sale amounting to $1,254,469. In New York City the sale of stamps totaled $818,138.

Dr. Landrum Likely To Be Mercer Head

MACON, June 17.—It is believed now that Dr. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., a native of Macon and graduate of Mercer, former pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta and one of the most eminent divines of the South, will be offered the presidency of Mercer University.

A meeting of the trustees will be held at an early date to elect a successor to Dr. S. Y. Jameson.

BOILERMAKERS ON STRIKE.

MOBILE, ALA., June 17.—On account of trouble with a foreman, fifteen boilermakers, employed in the repair shops of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, went on strike to-day. The matter has been referred to the officials of the Boilermakers' Union for settlement.

Favors $40,000,000 For U. S. Alaska R. R.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The Senate Committee on Territories today favorably reported the Jones-Chamberlain bill providing for a $40,000,000 bond issue to construct railroads in Alaska.

The measure was amended in committee, the clause providing for a commission being struck out and a paragraph leaving the supervision of the railroad construction up to the President being substituted.

Drug Slave Spends $100,000 in Decade

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Volmey Tilbert told Police Judge Sullivan that in eleven years he had spent $100,000, mostly for drugs, to which he is a slave, averaging nearly $30 a day. He was arrested for buying cocaine.

"I came from a wealthy family in Memphis," he said. "Eleven years ago I left college and inherited $100,000. Then I took to this. In the last month I spent my last $1,000. Can you send me to an institution?"

Judge Sullivan postponed action.

THE "BLUE TAG" FURNITURE SALE

A Message of Fine Savings on Every Little Blue Tag.

Atlanta has not known such a sale of furniture as this "Blue Tag" Sale! Such elegant furniture, such reckless reductions, make a rare combination and a rare opportunity---an opportunity that the housekeeper who is in any way interested in furniture is not going to overlook. It would be too expensive for her to overlook it.

Why, there is not a piece of furniture that goes into a home that can not be bought for a great deal less than at any other time of the year! We mean the most elegant home, where furniture must be in keeping with luxurious surroundings, and the home where simplicity rules and true, sturdy, long-life furniture is wanted.

Take, for instance, this

Dining Room Set

Perhaps one of the rarest examples of mahogany dining room furniture that was ever brought to Atlanta. You must see how richly the mahogany is marked and its wonderful color to appreciate the truth of this statement.

It is a Colonial set.

The Table is 60 inches, extension table.

The Sideboard, a massive 7-foot affair, with many roomy compartments.

The China Cabinet---properly it should be called a China "Press." It stands high, with mirrored back, plate glass shelves, paneled front, and with compartments below for holding quantities of wares.

The Serving Table is 48 inches long.

This Set Was $946.00. Now the Blue Tag Shows $695.00

A Day For Her Who Would Be Her Own Milliner---

Untrimmed Hats That Were $2.50 to $7.50 Are

75c

But the quantity is limited to a number smaller, we know, than the number of women who would be their own milliners with such a tempting opportunity before them—there are eighty-five untrimmed hats in all. There are hemps, split Belgians and a few Milans in the darker colors so fine for traveling, for wear with suits. The shapes are those the style authorities demanded this season—small and medium, with brims and crowns turned and curved in wondrous ways and varied.

And at 75c, instead of $2.50 to $7.50.

Flower Trimmings That Were 50c to $1.50 Are

25c

A garden of flowers in full bloom. There are roses—ever so many—pink roses, red, red roses, dainty little clusters of French roses, carnations—all but fragrant—nodding poppies, rich dahlias and others. They were 50c to $1.50 a bunch—which may mean a single flower or a half dozen flowers. And now they are 25c!

The Social World

The wedding of Miss Charles Owens and Edward Buckingham Hall, Jr., of Morristown, N. J., which took place Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, was of broad social interest. While the invitations to the church ceremony had been recalled, on account of illness in the bride's family, there were present the relatives and intimate friends of the couple, and the wedding was characterized by unusually beautiful and elaborate decorations.

In the library, where the ceremony was performed by Dr. A. M. Hughlett, the bridal party were grouped before a bank of palms, extending to the canopy of smilax, which was fringed with valley lilies. On either side and in the center of the altar of greenery were great clusters of Easter lilies, th same flowers being banked on the mantl and bookcases. The white prieu dieu was garlanded with smilax and tied with clusters of Easter lilies, and the wide doorway leading into the apartment was festooned with ropes of Shasta daisies and smilax.

In the hall and other apartments Easter lilies with greenery were used, the entrance to the dining room being marked by clusters of garden flowers, and smilax forming a mural decoration throughout the house.

Miss Eda Bartholomew played the wedding march, and music was furnished by an orchestra for the reception.

The wedding party included a group of little people, Theodore Owens, Harriet Shewmake, John Owens and Donovan Owens, who precluded Miss Marion Goldsmith, as maid of honor. Mrs. Jerome Simmons, Jr., and Miss Frances Connally held the ribbons.

The bride entered with her father, Mr. John S. Owens, who gave her away. She was very lovely in her bridal gown of white satin, the long court train being draped from the high waist line, and the corsage and sleeves formed of rose point lace. The tulle veil was adjusted with orange blossoms and worn over the face, and she carried a bouquet of wild roses, showered with valley lilies. Her ornaments were antique pearls, an heirloom in her family, and a diamond bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Goldsmith wore a Watteau gown of chiffon with tunic of white chiffon, showing a design of tiny rosebuds. A sash of old blue, caught in front with a large bow of the same, and a tracery of old blue ribbons, caught with tiny rosebuds, finished the skirt, and she carried a large round old-fashioned bouquet of field flowers in a lace paper holder. The little girls wore hand-embroidered white mull frocks, with pink sashes, and carried similar old-fashioned bouquets of field flowers.

Mrs. Owens wore white brocade satin, with overdress of shadow lace and a corsage bouquet of valley lilies. Mrs. Edward J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., the bridegroom's mother, wore lavender satin with tunic of brocade chiffon and a magnificent pearl necklace. Her flowers were lavender sweetpeas. Mrs. William Donovan, the bride's grandmother, wore lavender charmeuse veiled in shadow lace with pearl embroidery and valley lilies. Mrs. Claude Shewmake, her aunt, wore flesh-colored charmeuse satin and lace, with valley lilies. Mrs. Arthur Chapman, of Macon, wore pink chiffon and lace with pearl garniture. Miss Donovan, of Macon, wore blue satin veiled in lavender chiffon and lace.

Punch was served on the porch from a bowl embedded in garden flowers. Misses Elizabeth Shewmake, Lillian Stephens and Margaret Donovan presided, wearing white embroidered chiffon. The table in the dining room was adorned with a large basket filled with vari-colored field flowers, surrounded by smaller baskets of the same flowers—poppies, daisies, corn flowers, hollyhocks and feverfew.

A number of out-of-town guests were present, among them Mr. Wickerbotham, of Chicago.

The array of handsome presents received by the young couple, who are both members of prominent and wealthy families, bespoke their wide popularity, and included a magnificent collection of silver, china, Oriental rugs, cutglass and French prints.

There will be all sorts of entertainment for the guests, including an old-fashioned open-air dance on the grass. "The Virginia Reel" will be enjoyed and games will be conducted by the committee on entertainment.

A gypsy booth will furnish a glimpse into the future, and lemonade wells and ice cream and cake booths will supply refreshments.

Mrs. Pollard will be hostess for the occasion, assisted by Mrs. G. O. Jones and Mrs. H. A. Tripp, who will have charge of the refreshments.

A group of young people will provide popular songs, and other pleasures incident to a lawn party will be in order.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Frank Cundell entertained at bridge Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Royal Ingersoll. Sweetpeas and daisies decorated the house and the prizes were white silk hose.

The guests were Misses Eda and Marguerite Bartholomew, Miss Wilmirth Gamble, Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mrs. Tom Weaver, Mrs. Oscar Pappenheimer, Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. R. J. A Dress Sale at Keely's

Summer Dresses $16.50 to $20 Values at $8.50

To-morrow a Sale of 678 dresses

This will be a welcome sale for the woman who has looked over so many "bargain offerings" this season, and failed to find the right thing.

These dresses are of the scarce materials. The color range is remarkable in its variety of strictly fashionable shades. You can anticipate your summer wants to-morrow, and at this low figure, will take two or three of the dresses offered. Here you will find grouped for you 678 dresses (we wish there were 2,000 of them)

189 Linen Dresses
152 Ratine Dresses
68 Eponge Dresses

At $8.50 Each

112 Crash Dresses
82 Voile Dresses
75 Tissue Dresses

678 Choice Summer Dresses Worth $16.50, $18.75 and $20

In the STYLES you will find about TWENTY MODELS
In COLORS you can secure any fashionable TINT
Every SIZE from Misses' 16 to Ladies' 44
And in VALUES you will find them worth $16.50, $18.75, $20

In the collection there are new Balkan Blouses, with crushed girdles and draped skirts, with colored collars and cuffs, high waist.

A dressy gown of dotted mull, in polka, coin and medium size dots; velvet girdle, draped skirt; short sleeves, scalloped net ruffle finish.

The French Linen Dress is bloused front and back; turn down collars and cuffs hand-embroidered; slashed skirt; finished with hand-made ornament buttons.

The one-piece strictly tailored dress has hand-embroidered bands down front; hand-embroidered collars and cuffs; high girdle; button trimmed.

There are also tailored suits of Linen Canvas, French linen and linen crash, in the new cutaway, Balkan Blouse and Norfolk Jacket effects; plain or draped skirts; high girdles.

The wise buyer, the keen-eyed shopper, the woman with an instinct for value, will find this sale the most alluring of the season.

Our buyer visited last week an upset suit market, and bought fresh from a prominent maker of dresses this great lot which goes on sale to-morrow. He discarded the original prices, and sold us the lot at one figure. He tells us that they are easily worth $15.00 each to make, without reference to the retail prices, which in most cases would be from $16.75 to $20.

These suits and dresses are offered because of unusual market conditions, and the manufacturer wanted to clear his stocks. It was easy for us to pick the best offering of the market, because of our inflexible rule of keeping CLEAN, FRESH STOCKS. We are never crowded with undesirable dresses, hence we are in a position to take advantage of just such conditions as these.

The center of our whole second floor will be given up to this sale, and the expected business of this occasion will require that we draft extra salespeople for promptly serving you.

Come Early, Come Promptly, Come Expectantly. You'll Not Be Disappointed

DIXIE WOMAN IS A RIGID GAME WARDEN

Mobile Bay Pothunters Chuckle at First, but Mrs. Gibboney Soon Curbs Them.

MOBILE, June 17.—"I have already made two arrests for game violations. I had no trouble with the prisoners. I carried a revolver and a shotgun—and the pothunters knew that I could use either of them."

Which announcement goes to show that Mrs. Norma Frederic Gibboney didn't become game warden merely to wear a bright badge. Mrs. Gibboney was appointed warden recently by Governor Emmet O'Neal. She probably is the only woman in the United States with this sort of commission.

When the news of her appointment was made pblic, the pothunters in their huts along the Mobile Bay marshes thought it a good joke.

"She's one o' these society women," they laughed. "She never would come out on a rainy day, for fear of getting her feet wet."

They were fully convinced of their mistake when the handsome warden came upon two of their number slaughtering duck, and marched them in with one hand resting significantly on the black butt of the revolver at her hip.

Is a Crack Shot.

Her home is Aloha. It stands among acres of forest and foliage. Mobile Bay stretches away to the east and at the back is the Dog River. She is a deadly shot with a rifle and can bring down the mallards from behind a blind with the best shots in Mobile. It was her love for animals, and not the passion for hunting, that led her to become one of the Alabama game police.

"I have spent my life on the fringe of the beautiful waters of this bay," she said. "All its birds and animals are dear friends of mine. I have made a close study of them. Recently I found that the inroads of professional hunters were mowing them down at a rate that would soon mean their extinction. It hurts me to see the ducks slaughtered without regard to the law or to the decent ethics of sportsmanship.

"Here I was, right in the center of it, with nothing that I could do to stop it.

"'Why don't you have yourself appointed game warden?' one of my friends suggested.

Idea a Good One.

"I wondered why I hadn't thought of that before. I had a good saddle horse, all the time I wanted—and my heart was in the work. I got the commission.

"It is the birds that I particularly want to protect. We seldom realize how much good they do. If they didn't prey constantly on the insects, we would be without vegetation before very long. I am familiar with every bird of Alabama. Ten years ago you could see flocks of beautiful white tarsus and blue cranes in the edge of the water out there. Now they are curiosities.

"I have recently fitted out a log cabin in the midst of ten acres of forest that is just as nature made it. I intend to spend the rest of my life there."

Mrs. Gibboney is well known over the entire South. She is a frequent visitor to New Orleans. She is a descendant of Zach Taylor, Patrick Henry and the Virginia Sheltons. She is prominent in society. From now on she won't see so much of receptions and pink teas.

"Women would be a lot happier and healthier," she said, "if they spent more time with nature and less at bridge parties and theaters."

HighEducationWorth $25,000 in 40 Years

CHICAGO, June 17.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by Northwestern University. For the first five years out of college the average earning power of the graduate was $867, and for the next five years, $1,862.

An estimate of the value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and the report of the Government census and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statistician considers a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

Marshalls "Borrow" Baby and Blues Go

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have borrowed a baby to enliven their Washington home. He is Thomas Marshall Sutherland, four-year-old son of the Vice President's pastor.

Young Thomas Marshall thinks "Papa Marshall" as he calls him, is the best chum ever. Mrs. Marshall says borrowing a baby is a sure cure for the blues which haunt a childless home.

Charlton to Be Tried in Italy Next Fall

ROME, June 17.—The formalities in regard to the extradition of Porter Charlton, who murdered his wife here some three years ago, and who, according to a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, must return here for trial, will not be tried before next fall.

Fisher Has All the Temperament

His Wife 'Just a Country Girl'

"Bud" Fisher, creator of "Mutt and Jeff," and his bride, Pauline Welch, whom he first met in Atlanta last year.

Artist's Bride Doesn't Believe in Suffrage and Wouldn't Vote if She Could.

Pauline Welch, the pretty singing comedienne who dislodged Mutt and Jeff from first place in Bud Fisher's heart, is just a "happy little country girl."

There are no frills and no fads in her private life—none of the Eva Tanguay stuff, with a carload of hats and a particularly colored gown for every hour of the day. If she has a hobby, she doesn't know it, and she wouldn't be a suffragette for the world.

Bud Fisher has an artistic temperament, she says; one of those troublesome temperaments that demand constant attention and explode without notice, and it's all one girl can do to live with it. If it wasn't for the fact that Bud Fisher, the man, is a perfectly lovely fellow who rises above his artistic eccentricities, Pauline Welch would have a really exasperating time at least 24 hours every day.

Miss Welch, or Mrs. Fisher, as she is now, was deeply meditative yesterday afternoon when a Georgian reporter interviewed her. And well she might be, for she was sitting in the Piedmont Cafe at the very same table where Bud Fisher began to spring all that foolish stuff about love and marriage just a year ago.

The Temperamental Bud.

"Evidently the artistic temperament is something fierce—what do you do with it?" asked the reporter.

"What do I do with it? I lock it up, put the key in my purse and go away and forget about it—that's what I do with it.

"Then when I think the artistic temperament has been imprisoned long enough, I go back and let it out. Then I say, 'Now, young man, such and such is the case.' And that always settles it.

"The artistic temperament is an awful thing. Bud has it bad."

Bud was coming back.

"Bless his heart, he's a dear fellow, and I love him better than anything in the world. He's the finest man in the world, and I'm perfectly happy."

Isn't that just like a woman?

Pauline No Suffragette.

Miss Welch says Bud is a fine dancer and would make a great hit doubling with her. He's a better judge of an act than she is, because he bet her $25 yesterday that she would get a reception at the Forsyth, and she bet she wouldn't—and she lost.

Miss Welch was asked if she was a suffragette. "I should say not," was the quick response.

"You almost insult me. Women are not made for such things. You ought to see the suffragettes in New York. They stand on the street corners and go crazy, or act just like men, which is the same thing. No voting for me."

CREDIT MEN IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—The eighteenth annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men opened its four-day session this morning with addresses of welcome by Governor James M. Cox and Henry T. Hunt, Mayor of Cincinnati.

Spanish Historian Calls Columbus Jew

PARIS, June 17.—Enrigue Arribas Y. Turull, Spanish historian, has published a brochure in which he gives as the conclusion of his latest researches among original documents that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not an Italian, Spaniard nor Corsican.

Eighteen documents dated 1413 to 1528 establish Columbus as a native of Pontevedra and the great discoverer merely posed as a Genoese from policy, says Turull.

In his mother's family, the Fonteresas, the men's names are Abraham, Eleazar, Jacob and Benjamin.

Insurance Injunction Decision Due Tuesday

MACON, June 17.—A decision will be rendered this afternoon on the petition of a number of minority stockholders for the appointment of a receiver for the Georgia Life Insurance Company and for an injunction to restrain the company from changing its name and reducing its capital stock from $500,000 to $300,000.

The company asks $50,000 damages from the stockholders who instituted the proceeding.

Club Women to Sell Posies for Hospital

MACON, June 17.—In pursuance of a campaign to raise money for the Macon Hospital, women and girls of the Sidney Lanier Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and Children of the Confederacy will on next Saturday sell flowers on the streets.

Miss Ida Holt, Miss Anna Bryant, Mrs. J. A. Selden, Mrs. T. A. Small, Sr., Mrs. S. C. Moore and Mrs. W. T. Morgan are prominent in the flower day plans.

NEVER PASS UP A CHANCE, SAYS PONY MAN

Only One Way to Win in Contest, "Keep Everlastingly at It," He Advises.

CONTEST GINGER.

He laughs best who laughs after July 31.

Explain to your friends the special vote offers which impel haste.

Let them know they can help you more now than later, when the offers will be withdrawn.

Faint heart never won anything really worth while.

It takes two to get votes—the candidate and his friend. If you are the candidate, find the other half of the bargain.

A little concentration now will pay mightily.

You may get tired now, but you can find recreation with a pony after July 31.

"The wise candidate," remarked the contest manager, "goes to all prospects, the good and the unpromising alike. Occasionally he gets a surprise from both. The person he thinks almost 'landed' may disappoint him and the 'poor' prospect may subscribe for a year."

Many of the boys and girls who are striving for the twenty-odd ponies The Georgian and American are giving away August 1 come to the contest manager for advice. He has only one rule for success—"Keep everlastingly at it."

But if a boy or girl learns nothing else from the contest, there will be a big profit in it, for the "Keep everlastingly at it" precept holds good all through life in every line of work.

To lose the chance of a single subscription may be to lose the chance of winning a pony. It may make the difference between first and second place. Therefore, get every person you can, and you will have no cause for regrets.

It is better by far to find, after July 31, that you could have won on less votes than you had—than to find that you are 100 short of being the winner.

Aim to Be Attorney Dead, She Ends Life

NEW YORK, June 17—Laid off because of the slack season, Pauline Rosen, 21, hurled herself from the top of eleven-story building. She died in an hour.

The girl, a Russian, came to America a year ago to study to become an attorney. Out of her slender earnings she sent money home to her family. Later she planned to have them come to America to join her.

Pauline studied in a night school. She earned $8 a week.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

AFTER I get thru with this book of verses, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I want you to read it too. I paid a dollar & a half for it, Ma sed, & considering the fack that it is the first work of a new poet, I think I got it very cheep.

I doant think the first work of any poet is worth a dollar & a half, Pa sed. There was a time, Pa sed, wen I wud have paid almost any price for a good book, but owing to the present high cost of living things is different. The way I look at it now, Pa sed, a dollar & a half may not be much, but it is fifteen cool glasses of lager or five pounds of good substanshul steak. Who is the young nut that they are calling a new poet? sed Pa.

His name is Orland La Tosca, sed Ma. His hoam is in California & he nevver went to a college or eeven a high school. Him & his parents lived out among the redwood trees, Ma sed, & they was too poor to give him much educashun. But the boy cuddent be stopped. His Wunderful geenyus asserted itself wen he was only sixteen. Just lissen to this, one of his vary first poems. It is called Sunrise, & I think it is simply divine Lissen:

First comes a flush of pink so nearly white
That color seems a hint alone. Then comes
A bolder tint, as though the god of Dawn
Were flushing with some ungovernable rage,
A dew-damp bird sings in a gnarled tree
And then the morning dawns all glorified.

Was that one of the first things he wrote? sed Pa.

It was one of the vary first things, sed Ma. I shud think his parents wud be vary proud to have such a boy.

Oh, I doant know, sed Pa. I am a whole lot prouder of little Bobbie than I wud be of any almost-poet. I doant think much of the piece you jest red, sed Pa. "Dew-damp bird," sed Pa. Ha, Hh, that must have been sum bird. I have heard of cold birds and hot birds, Pa sed, & I have heard of wise birds & gay birds, but I doant think I wud know what to say to a dew-damp bird if I was interduced to one.

Oh, doant try to be cunning, sed Ma. You know rite down in yure heart that the poem I jest red to you is sure to be immortal.

Immortal rats, sed Pa. It is nothing but a bunch of junk. I guess thare must have been at leest ten thousand poems ritten about sunrise, sed Pa, moast of them by peepul that dident know enuff to get up in time to see a regular sunrise. & all of them poems sed the saim thing, sed Pa, about the first tint of dawn steeling into the sky & about a bird singing. Why cant a bird sing onst in a while without a poet beeing its press agent, Pa sed. Reed me sum moar of those dethless poems, sed Pa, I want to git a hed ake.

Then listen to this dainty littel love ballad, sed Ma.

Arabella, Arabella,
Tripping lightly through the meadow
Where the sunset throws its shadow,
How I love to watch the meeting
When your lips the sun is greeting.
Sweetest nymph that ever walked here,
Loveliest sprite that ever talked here,
How I long to be yure fellow,
Arabella!

Whoa, sed Pa, that will do. I have my hed ake now, I'a sed, & you wont have to reed any moar to me tonite. I see the Crackers are getting into thare reglar form, Bobbie.

Chapeau a la Parisienne

Three Models That You Can Copy

Mlle. Marcelle Praince.

By Olivette.

TO-DAY we are showing you three hats that express the latest manifestation of "le dernier cri" from Paris. The hats are worn by three charming French actresses, and are quite the latest thing from one of the smartest of the smart French hat shops.

Mlle. Marcelle Praince, of the "Varietes," shows us the new idea called the "cabriolet dip," and at the short brimmed side her hat does resemble the bowler with down drooping brim worn by the cabby of Paris. The brim rolls up a bit at the right. The model was bound at the edge with cerise satin ribbon and the crown is covered with a checker board made of interwoven cerise and white satin ribbon. A veil of soft white shadow weave adds a softening touch to this simple but fetching model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW CAN I TELL?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 19. A young man who calls at our office claims he loves me. He also asked me to write to him.

Please advise me whether he is serious about it. ANXIOUS.

My dear, you ask a question impossible for me to answer. If he is serious or not, you must learn for yourself. Watch him carefully for a few months, and keep a close guard on your heart while doing it.

IT WILL IN TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and in love with a man two years my senior. He has but one bad habit and that is smoking cigarettes. Do you think I should let this interfere with true love? J. D. E.

A man of 20 who is an inveterate cigarette smoker is not worth any woman's love, and she invites unhappiness by associating her life with his.

The habit will kill your love in time. Why not choose a quick death for your love now?

I AM SURE OF IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young lady, and when I tell her of my love she says that she loves me also, but she is constantly teasing me, and when I tell how she hurts my feelings, she just laughs and teases all the omre. Do you think she cares for me? I have reason to think so, because she never keeps company with other boys. A. W.

She teases you, a sign of love; she never keeps company with others; another proof. My dear young man, what more do you ask?

YES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and engaged to a wealthy financier, but have heard that he is dissipated. There is no love between us. Should I give up position and wealth for love? NOVENA.

Love is worth every sacrifice, and in your case there would be no sacrifice, since there could be no happiness with a man who is dissipated, and no position and wealth if the dissipation lasts long.

SHE IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and draw a salary of $12 per week, with promise of an increase. I have been in love with a girl of my age for three years, but she has shown little affection until, lately, I proposed to her, but she said: "We are too young," and had better wait. L. J. A.

The girl has exceptionally good sense. If your age were right, your salary isn't. Do as the girl suggests, and some day you will realize what a great debt of gratitude you owe her.

LAST SENTENCE EXPLAINS IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, whom I have known for one year. I have every reason to believe she loves me also. Is it proper for her to let me kiss her when I arrive or when I leave her house? She has consented at times; at others she refuses. To what do you attribute this? It is understood between us that it is only a kiss of friendship. WARREN.

The kiss of friendship is not for those of opposite sexes. Tell her of your love, ask her to marry you, and if she consents you will have a right to ask for her kisses, and they will not be refused.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, 'for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put is mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whisky, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't yer?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Like an Oyster.

Cain might have answered, "None of your damned business," but he didn't. He simply said:

"Some friends of mine came up from Atlanta to spend a few weeks in their summer camp and I just came up, too; that's all. Let's have another drink."

They drank silently. Cain spoke again."

"I asked you awhile ago where you came from. I take it you live around here somewhere. If you live on my property you can continue to do so for all of me. I only built this shack to have a place as headquarters to hunt and fish. I have never used it before and I don't believe I ever will use it again.

The stranger made no offer of thanks, but accepted another invitation to drink. He was not at all talkative, and the more Cain saw of him the less inclined he was to ask questions concerning his identity. He did venture one question. It was:

"Is your family up here with you?"

The mountaineer (and this word probably describes him best of all) arose abruptly from his chair without making answer. It was evidently not his day for answering questions from any man he did not know. They drank again, standing, and then Cain went into the shack and returned with the stranger to the edge of the road, which was only a few rods away, and, arriving there, he suddenly asked:

A Proposition.

"Do you want to make some money?"

There are few persons in the world who will not reply "yes" to this question. The mountaineer was not one of them. He intimated that he might be induced to make some. With that as a basis to work on, Cain engaged the stranger in earnest conversation for more than half an hour. Dusk settled and night came on ere they parted. The mountaineer disappeared in the darkness and Cain returned to the shack, where his man had a meal prepared for him.

Early next morning Cain returned to Atlanta, his man driving the car to Pew Creek. It was left there to be shipped later in the day by freight. In Atlanta the broken bones in Cain's right hand were set and the member put in a splint. Ten days later he went to the mountains again, but instead of taking a train for Pew Creek, he took the Knoxville line and landed at a station on what might be called the eastern side of the mountains. There he procured a horse and saddle and rode ten miles in a westerly direction, uphill all the way. When he reached a point where a huge knob of granite stuck up out of the ground like an inverted tin basin, he dismounted and walked directly into the woods on the opposite side of the road. A hundred yards in he stopped beside a massive oak tree.

Presently four men appeared, one of whom Cain recognized as the black-bearded mountaineer he had entertained at his shack. The others were dressed in the same kind of garb.

"Are you ready to do business?" demanded Cain.

"We're here, I reckon," replied the bearded man.

Without more words, Cain drew a leather case from his pocket and counted out a sum of money to the four men. At that instant Cain became possessed of the fear that he might not be allowed to depart. But nothing of the sort happened. The four men received the money and disappeared in the forest.

Cain mounted his horse and rode back whence he came. An evil smile played on his lips.

CHAPTER XXXI.

GORDON KELLY was at the bridge a full hour ahead of time. Mildred had said 3 o'clock, but as early as 1 o'clock he had arrayed himself in a suit of light summer flannels (it was now early in the month of June), and after trying to kill time around the house he had, in his impatience, jumped into his automobile and rode to the meeting place.

The minutes that followed seemed ages to him. There was a sharp bend in the road, just before it reached the bridge, in the direction Mildred must come, and he had to trust to his ear rather than his eye to detect the approach of a vehicle. At last he heard a sound that he knew was made by the little runabout. When the car came in sight he was standing on the bridge. Mildred saw him, and raised a hand from the wheel she waved a gay salute. Gordon lifted his cap in answering greeting, but he had faced the crowd and the tumult and the opposing pitcher in the crisis of that last game in Atlanta with less trepidation than he faced the oncoming automobile.

Mildred stopped the runabout close to Gordon's car, switched off the magneto, put the lever in neutral and applied the emergency brake with business-like precision. Then, turning her head toward the young man, she favored him with a beaming smile and said:

"Here I am on time, Mr. Gordon Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly Again!"

At these words a look of dejection came into Gordon's face.

"Mr. Kelly again! I suppose as long as you call me Mr. Kelly I will have to call you Miss Deery, and I am dying to call you——"

"Mr. Bud, then, if you like that name better," said Mildred, with a little toss of her head.

Gordon smiled and held out his hand. She placed her fingers in it and jumped lightly to the ground.

"That certainly has a more familiar sound, but I would much prefer to have you call me Gordon," he said.

Mildred faced him squarely.

"But I want to know about this Mr. Bud and this Mr. Gordon Kelly business. Why is there such a mystery over it?"

"There's no mystery that cannot be very easily solved," replied Gordon. "Let us walk over to that big oak, where it is cool and shady, and I will tell you all about it."

They walked slowly and silently side by side until they stood beneath the spreading branches of the huge tree. At their feet flowed the purling brook. Gordon indicated a place where they might rest, but Mildred shook her head.

"Before we get too comfortable I want to know about Mr. Bud, or Mr. Kelly, or whatever his name is," she said.

Just a Nickname.

"That is the simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Bud is a nickname my father gave me. My mother also grew into the habit of calling me Bud. The people around the place never heard me called by any other name and naturally they addressed me as Mr. Bud."

Mildred let her eyes fall to the ground and began toying with the leaves with the toe of her shoe.

"I can readily understand that," she said, "but what I cannot understand is that no one in your home knows who Gordon Kelly is. When Elmer called your house on the telephone the other day your colored boy, Steve, said there was no Mr. Gordon Kelly there, no Mr. Kelly and no Mr. Gordon there. And when I called you this morning the person who answered the telephone said the same thing."

"That, too," is easily explained," declared Gordon. His face became very serious. "I meant to have told you. It has been on my mind ever since we met under the bridge over there. I—I—I will tell you now."

But he hesitated. Mildred brought her eyes to bear on his. He was looking off in the distance.

"Well" she said, quietly.

Gordon stooped and picked a twig from the ground. He broke it in small pieces and tossed them one by one into the rippling brook. Still he did not answer. Mildred, who had not taken her eyes off his face, saw the blood suddenly paint it crimson and she felt herself trembling slightly. Gordon turned his face toward hers and their eyes met.

They're Engaged.

"Mildred," he said, and his voice was hoarse and passionate, "God knows there is nothing to conceal and I want to tell you all about myself and my life. But there is something I want to tell you first. I MUST tell it to you first. It is that I love you, Mildred. Oh, how I love you! That is all I can say now; say it over and over again. From the very first day, Mildred. From the very instant you put your hand in mine and the rain beat down on us. How I love you! Will you take me, Mildred?" His blue-gray eyes were humid now and he, too, was trembling.

Her eyes had never left his. A flood of emotion was rushing through her. She raised her arms and Gordon crushed her to his heart.

"You know it, Gordon," she murmured.

Their lips met and then her head nestled against his breast and she sighed contentedly. The merry brook raced on, the sun shone kind, a lazy breeze played with a stray wisp of her hair. She felt a strange peacefulness creep over her as she rested in his arms.

"Honeybunch," she repeated raising her head, "Oh, Gordon, what a sweet name you have for me. Where did you find it?"

"My mother called me that when I was a little boy. My mother, Mildred, was the sweetest woman, next to you, that ever breathed."

"She must have been, dear heart. And you will tell me all about her when the time comes."

Mildred gently released herself from Gordon's embrace and sat down on the ground. He threw himself by her side as close as he could get, reclining on his elbow. She gently stroked his hair.

What the Tease Said.

"Do you know what that little tease, Elmer, said to me when I left him to-day?" she asked.

"I never could guess," he replied, looking up in her eyes.

"He said"—Mildred leaned over and whispered the rest, blushing furiously.

"Mildred, you are certainly the sweetest girl in the world to tell me that. Why, the little beggar is quicker than I am."

"He has been with me more than you have, dear. He is a bright lad. In this case I think he was quicker than I was myself."

And so the talk of these two happy young people went on and on. The shadows lengthened and the sun sank behind the hills before they realized it.

"Oh, I must be going, Gordon; they'll think I'm lost or that something has happened to me," exclaimed Mildred springing to her feet.

"Something has happened to you, honeybunch and something has happened to me to make me the happiest man in the world."

"You are right, Gordon; something has happened and I am very, very happy."

They were walking toward the bridge when Mildred stopped suddenly.

"Oh Gordon, I want you to take me home in your car. I want to ride right next to you on the front seat. But if we do that what will become of the runabout?"

"Don't worry about that, sweetheart; come with me," and he led her along the edge of the brook until they came to the telephone in its box fastened to the tree.

"Steve," said Gordon as soon as his ring was answered, "take a car out of the garage, put a rope in it, bring Mose along with you and come down to the bridge. You will find a runabout there. I want you to tow it to Miss Deery's bungalow. Do you know where it is?"

"Yes, Mr. Bud."

"All right; hurry it along!"

"You are a regular Aladdin with his wonderful lamp, Gordon," said Mildred, slipping her arm through his. "I am just dying to see all that lies beyond those two great granite pillars."

"And I'm just crazy to have you see it all, sweetheart, for it's all yours now, and I hope you'll like it. I have lots to show you and lots to tell you. But I did want to tell you something else first."

"I want you to, Gordon."

With her head resting on his arm, they drove to her mountain home, he at the wheel. He had to switch on the electric headlights before they reached it. When they were within a few feet of their destination she made him stop the car.

"Quick," she whispered, "they can't see us behind the headlights." He folded her in his embrace.

"No more Mr. Kelly?" he said.

"No more Mr. Kelly," she replied.

"No more Mr. Bud?"

"No more Mr. Bud."

"Always Gordon?"

"Always Gordon," she repeated, softly.

"Hey!" yelled the voice of Elmer in the distance. "Breakaway there!"

"The little rascal is only guessing," laughed Mildred.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE telephone line from Pew Creek to Atlanta earned more money in tolls that night than it had earned in the previous six months. Mildred called up her mother and talked with her more than half an hour. This is the way she began:

"Oh, mother, won't you please come up to the mountains right away?—Ill? No indeed: I'm feeling simply great, but there's lots of things I want to tell you. . . . Oh, no; not over the telephone. . . . Of course not, mother dear. I am perfectly happy and contented up here, except that you are not with me and the way I feel to-night I never want to go back to Atlanta again. But you must come up right away."

And so on and so on. But not once in their long talk did Mildred mention Gordon Kelly's name to her mother. She wanted to hold her supreme secret all to herself, at least until her mother arrived. Nor did she tell of the trouble she had with Forrest Cain, deeming that a matter that would better not be spread on a public telephone wire. In the end, Mrs. Deery promised to come up for a few days, as she, too, needed rest after her labors in the household of Cain's sister.

Gordon Kelly called up Judge Barbee as soon as he reached home. He could not get him at his office, but reached him at his home. This is what he said:

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 26th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource.

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bid old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this ungodly man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passion, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real life, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight. On the train from Liverpool to London she meets a woman who directs her to a semi-fashionable boarding house. A great hue and cry is being raised over her disappearance. She is feeling somewhat secure, when suddenly Mildred Bankes, of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," finds her. Mary confesses all to her and begs for her help.

"My dear child," said the mother, "not to know who the young lady is, where she comes from, why she is here, and whether she is married or single or a widow! —it is quite impossible to take her in."

IF I had not been so wildly agitated I should have known that this was the wrong way with Mildred, and it was not until I had said it all in a rush of whispered words that I saw her eyes fixed on me as if they were about to start from their sockets.

"But, my dear, dear child," she said, "this is worse and worse. Your father and your husband may have done wrong, but you have done wrong, too. Don't you see you have?"

I did not tell her that I had thought of all that before, and did not believe any longer that God would punish me for breaking a bond I had been forced to make. But when she was about to rise, saying that, after all it would be a good thing to send me home before I had time to join my life to his—whoever he was—who had led me to forget my duty as a wife, I held her trembling hands and whispered, "Wait, Mildred. There is something I have not told you even yet."

"What is it?" she asked, but already I could see that she knew what I was going to say.

"Mildred," I said, "if I ran away from my husband it was not merely because I loved somebody else, but because"——

I could not say it. Do what I would I could not. But holy women like Mildred, who spend their lives among the lost ones, have a way of reading a woman's heart when it is in trouble, and Mildred read mine.

"Do you mean that . . . that there are consequences . . . going to be?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"Does your husband know?"

"Yes."

"And your father?"

"No."

Mildred drew her hand away from me and crossed herself and said beneath her breath, "O Mother of God!"

I felt more humbled than I had ever been before, but after a while I said: "Now you see why I can never go back. And you will save me, will you not?"

There was silence for some moments. Mildred had drawn back in her chair as if an evil spirit had passed between us. But at length she said, "It is not for me to judge you, Mary. But the gentlemen will come up soon to know if you are the Mary O'Neill whom I knew at the Sacred Heart, and what am I to say to them?"

"Say no," I cried. "Why shouldn't you? They'll never know anything to the contrary. Nobody will know."

"Nobody?"

I knew what Mildred meant, and in my shame and confusion I tried to excuse myself by telling her who the other woman was.

"It is Alma," I said.

"Alma? Alma Lier?"

"Yes."

She Tells Mildred All About Martin.

And then I told her how Alma had come back into my life, how she had tortured and tempted me, and was now trying to persuade my husband, who was a Protestant, to divorce me that she might take my place.

And then I spoke of Martin again—I could not help it—saying that the shame which Alma would bring on him would be a greater grief to me than anything else that could befall me in this world.

"If you only knew who he is," I said, "and the honor he is held in you would know that I would rather die a thousand deaths than that any disgrace should fall on him through me."

I coud see that Mildred was deeply moved at this, and, though I did not intend to play upon her feelings, yet in the selfishnes of my great love I could not help doing so.

"You were the first of my girl friends, Mildred, the very first. Don't you remember the morning after I arrived at school? They had torn me away from my mother, and I was so little and lonely, but you were so sweet and kind. You took me into church for my first visitation and then into the garden for my first rosary—don't you remember it?"

Mildred had closed her eyes. Her face was becoming very white.

"And then don't you remember the day the news came that my mother was very ill, and I was to go home? You came to see me off at the station, and don't you remember what you said when we were sitting in the train? You said we might never meet again, because our circumstances would be so different. You didn't think we should meet like this, did you?"

Mildred's face was growing deadly white.

"My darling mother died. She was all I had in the world, and I was all she had, and when she was gone there was no place for me in my father's house, so I was sent back to school. But the Reverend Mother was very kind to me, and the end of it was that I wished to become a nun. Yes, indeed, and never so much as on the day you took your vows."

Mildred's eyes were still closed, but her eyelids were fluttering, and she was breathing audibly.

"How well I remember it? The sweet summer morning and the snow-white sunshine, and the white flowers and the white chapel of the Little Sisters, and then you, dressed as a bride, in your white gown and long white veil. I cried all through the ceremony. And if my father had not come for me then, perhaps, I should have been a nun like you now."

Her Passionate Appeal for Aid.

Mildred's lips were moving. I was sure she was praying to our Lady for strength to resist my pleading, yet that only made me plead the harder.

"But God knows best what our hearts are made for," I said. "He knows that mine was made for love. And though you may not think it, I know God knows that he who is away is my real husband—not the one they married me to. You will not separate us, will you? All our happiness—his and mine—is in your hands. You will save us, will you not?"

Some time passed before Mildred spoke. It may have been only a few moments, but it seemed to me like an eternity. I did not know then that Mildred was reluctant to extinguish the last spark of hope in me. At length she said, "Mary, you don't know what you are asking me to do. When I took my vows I promised to speak the truth under all circumstances, no matter what the consequences, as surely as I should answer to God at the great Day of Judgment. Yet you wish me to lie. How can I? How can I? Remember my vows, my duty."

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but, no! Duty—always duty! Love indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blazing fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both her hands covering her face and tears trickling through her fingers onto the linen of her habit.

The Final Moment and a Decision.

That conquered me in a moment.

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dare not do that, now, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, Sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me. . . . and that when he comes home he will find . . ." But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

During the silence that followed we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair, and stood with her back to the fireplace.

There was a knock at my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but my landlady came into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These gentlemen are making an examination of the house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching intently. The men made a pretense of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak, "Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence, and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her! —she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window.

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

But Sister Mildred was on her knees, with her face buried in my bed, praying fervently.

The Loss of the Scotia.

I DID not know then, and it seems unnecessary to say now, why my father gave up the search for me in London. He did so, and from the day the milliner's clew failed him I moved about freely.

Then, from the sense of being watched I passed into that of being lost.

Sister Mildred was my only friend in London, but she was practically cut off from me. The Little Sisters had fixed her up (in the interests of her work among the lost ones) in a tiny flat at the top of a lofty building near to Piccadilly, where her lighted widow always reminded me of a lighthouse on the edge of a dangerous reef. But in giving me her address she warned me not to come to her except in case of urgent need, partly because further intercourse might discredit her denial, and partly because it would not be good for me to be called one of Sister Mildred's girls."

Oh, the awful loneliness of London!

I thought I could have felt at home in the smallest village, for though nobody had spoken to me there, I should have come to know everybody, while in London I had no time to know anybody, for the ever-flowing tides of human faces flashed past me and were lost in a moment like waves under the moon at sea.

Others just as friendless have wandered in the streets of the big city. I knew I was not the first, and I am sure I have not been the last to find London the most solitary place in the world. But I really and truly think there was one day of the week when, from causes peculiar to my situation, my loneliness must have been deeper than that of the most friendless refugee.

Nearly every boarder in our boarding house used to receive once a week or once a month a letter containing a remittance from some unknown source, with which he paid his landlady and discharged all his other obligations.

I had no such letter to receive, so to keep up the character I had not made but had allowed myself to maintain (of being a captain's wife) I used to go out once a week under pretense of calling at a shipping office to draw part of my husband's pay.

In my childish ignorance of the habits of business people I selected Saturday afternoon for this purpose, and in my fear of encountering my husband, or my husband's friends in the West End streets, I chose the less conspicuous thoroughfares at the other side of the river.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, you see," he went on in his heavy voice, yet very kindly, and with a sort of massive playfulness in his manner, "no one has hurt you—not even a little bit, after all. Now, you run right home to your mother."

The girl did not need to be told twice. On the instant, she sprang up joyously, and started toward the door, with a final ravishing smile for the pleased official at the desk.

"I'll go just as fast as ever I can," the musical voice made assurance blithely.

"Give my compliments to your father," Burke requested, courteously. "And tell him I'm sorry I frightened you."

The girl turned at the door. • • • After all, too great haste might be indiscreet.

"I will, Commissioner," she promised, with an arch smile. "And I know papa will be so grateful to you for all your kindness to me!"

It was at this critical moment that Cassidy entered from the opposite side of the office. As his eyes fell on the girl at the door across from him, his stolid face lighted in a grin. And in that same instant of recognition between the two the color went out of the girl's face. The little red lips snapped together in a line of supreme disgust against this vicissitude of fate after all her maneuverings in the face of the enemy. She stood motionless in wordless dismay, impotent before this disaster forced on her by untoward chance.

"Hello, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes started disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the ——t luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy and then back to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind. "She's little Aggie Lynch—con woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time in Burnsing."

With this succint narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience, the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly rose from his chair, and, walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely, then of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, 'kid,' you're a beaut'!"

Aggie sniffed vehemently in rebuke of the gross partiality of fate in his behalf.

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle
The Only Safe Hair Remover

Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. De Miracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

NINE RACES SET FOR DECISION AT MOTORDROME

Facts About Races at Atlanta 'Drome.

Place—Old Show Grounds.
Time—8:30; gates open at 7 o'clock.
Tickets—On sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's cigar stores.
Events—Georgia sweepstakes, four heats; Motordrome purse, four heats; special match race, one heat; amateur events to be decided later.
Cars—Leave Five Points at short intervals.

THE last word in sensational sport, the very topmost pinnacle of thrills will be reached at the Atlanta Motordrome to-night when the first night motorcycle racing ever staged in the Gate City will be put on. The pleasing pastime of risking the neck at 90 miles an hour is great sport in the daytime. At night, with lights blazing, the band playing and a large yellow moon shining overhead it is a spectacle that would make the burning of Rome look like cheap vaudeville.

Nine races have been scheduled for to-night. And in addition, there may be three for amateurs, which will be put on early. These can not be scheduled, as the novice riders are not under contract, and it is necessary to make a race for them after they arrive and declare their willingness to risk their necks.

The opening professional event will be the Georgia sweepstakes. This will be decided with two-mile heats and a five-mile final. Then follows the second Motordrome purse. This will be raced with three-mile heats and a four-mile final.

The program will close with a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris, to settle the dead heat which they ran on Saturday afternoon.

The program for to-night's races follows:

Georgia Sweepstakes.

(Two-mile heats, five-mile final, winner of each heat and second in fastest heat to qualify for final.)

First heat, No. 5, "Tex" Richard, Dallas, Texas; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris, France; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 1, Morton Graves, Los Angeles. Third heat, No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth, Texas; No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn, of Atlanta. Final heat, Georgia sweepstakes.

Motordrome Purse.

(Three-mile heats, four-mile final; winner in each heat and two in the fastest heat to qualify for finals.)

First heat, No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse; No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn. Third heat, No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris; No. 5, "Tex" Richards; No. 1, Morth Graves. Final heat, Motordrome purse.

Special match race, to be announced.

Bettors on Baseball Fired From Grounds

NEW YORK, June 17.—A large number of men whom the management alleges have been laying odds on the baseball games at the Polo grounds were denied admission to the baseball park for the New York-Detroit American League game. It is estimated 150 of them were not permitted to pass the turnstiles and that 50 others who had evaded the watchfulness of detectives at the gates later were ordered from the grandstand.

The crusade against betting is a concerted one. It was started by Ban Johnson, and Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, and Hempstead, proprietor of the New York Nationals, and various other club owners will work actively for the abolition of the betting evil at ball games, it is said.

Ban Johnson Ready For Ball Trust Probe

NEW YORK, June 17.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, arrived here yesterday on a tour of inspection and paid his first visit to the Polo Grounds since Frank Chance's New Yorks began playing there. Asked about the talk of a Congressional investigation of the so-called baseball trust, he said:

"If an investigation is intended, we are ready. In fact, we have always been ready, for we have nothing to conceal. But, personally, I don't believe Congress will take action. Horace Fogel appears to be the only one eager to have baseball probed. If he has any evidence, we are not aware of the fact."

HOOSIERS GET TOM DOWNEY.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 17.—Tom Downey, instead of Fred Parent, will be the new Indianapolis second baseman. Downey was purchased by Kelley from Jack Dunn's Baltimore team. Kelley wanted Parent, but Dunn chose to keep Fred and send Downey here. Downey will report at once, and may be used at third base until Marty Krug is able to resume play.

BUD ANDERSON NOT STUCK ON BOXING GAME

By Bud Anderson.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—I'm not stuck on the boxing game. I may as well be frank and tell you truthfully that I'm in it for the money. I'm not fighting for the joy of the game, although I like to box.

Nature gave me the strength and stamina to fight, and I am going to use that gift to put me on a comfortable financial basis. Then I'll quit the game.

I'm not going to talk to you about boxing. I'm going to tell you about my ranch.

Ever since my first fight I have been saving my money toward establishing a good paying farm. The first $5 I earned by boxing was in a four-round contest in Portland.

I was happy as a lark when I got that five. I put it away, and that fiver, with the money I got in my following fights, started me on the road toward farmerville. I purchased a ranch near my home in Vancouver.

Farm work is one of the best methods of training I know of. I have four horses and three cows. When I want to limber up I curry them. The movements from side to side, running the currycomb up and down the animal's sides and over its back are great for the muscles—of man, not the horse.

Milking is another good training stunt. It improves the grip and limbers the wrists. Driving horses is also good for the grip. It strengthens the forearm.

YOU HAVE TO GO TO England to get the true sporting spirit. The English papers gallantly concede the superiority of the American polo team, but they admit that England would have won if the umpire had been more severe on the Americans; if the Americans had "galloped wide," a well-known American "trick," and if the Americans had refrained from playing carefully when they were four goals to the good. Outside of this they have no fault to find. Fair play and Old England forever!

IT IS HIGH TIME we were all sitting up to observe the Yankees. They have, since the season begun, won one series and split even on another, which is not bad considering the kind of a team they set out to be.

Manager Wahoo Gets Release at Waycross

WAYCROSS, GA., June 17.—Charles Wahoo is released as manager of the Waycross team, in the Empire League, and Catcher Hawkins, of the Jacksonville, South Atlantic League team, signed as local manager. Shamus O'Brien, recently of Charleston, and Morrison, of Pennsylvania, reported to-day.

On the grounds that Waycross is carrying more than three players who have played in class "C" league, Manager Dudley protested yesterday's game.

MORRIS RATH IS HONORED BY CHICAGO TEAMMATES

NEW YORK, June 17.—Members of the Chicago White Sox have picked Morris Rath, Sox second baseman, to represent the team in the baseball players' fraternity. The players held an executive session with President Dave Fultz of the players' organization while the White Sox were here. Fultz urged them to pull together for their own interests.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 17.—The National League race is practically just as it was two weeks ago. The Giants have not profited by their jaunt on the road, while the Phillies have failed to crack as we hoped and expected. The fact that Dooin caught Pittsburg going badly just after we had taken four straight from his club was a big steadier. If the Pirates had cleaned up on that series it would have pretty nearly crowded Philadelphiia out of the running. Then we ran into the Pirates when they are moving at something like their normal gait. It was due to bad baseball that we did not win four straight in Chicago.

The Philadelphia club is inevitably in the race to the finish unless it cracks wide open, which I do not expect now. It does not seem to me that Chicago and Brooklyn can hold up ahead of the Pirates much longer. Pittsburg will begin to climb and the other two start to sink. The Cubs looked very bad against us, although the best we made out of the series was an even break. Of course, we did not get a fair glimpse of Overall because he threw his arm out after pitching four balls in the game he started against us, but lately he has been Evers' winning card in the box with his newly-found spitball. He will be out of the game for a time now, and this will further reduce the efficiency of an already weak pitching staff. Then there is not the spirit behind the Cubs in Chicago which used to be evidenced in the old days. Some fans really roasted O'Day when he called Miller safe at the plate with the winning run in the tenth inning of the first game we played against the Chicago club on Sunday. That was an unheard of thing during the regime of Chance.

* * *

BROOKLYN'S pitchers are uncertain. The team has also lost the dash which the winning streak gave it for a time. Still it would not surprise me at all to see the Superbas finish in the first division ahead of Chicago. It is one of the best fighting clubs Brooklyn has ever possessed. The race will eventually narrow down to a triangular fight between the Pirates, Phillies and Giants, unless the Quakers get too far ahead to be overtaken, which I think unlikely. The championship will be won or lost by the outcome of the future series between these three clubs, with an occasional defeat of one of the three contenders having some influence on the standing. It is my opinion that it will be a very close race and a driving finish. The Pirates are great stayers. And I want to report that the Giants are still hopeful.

* * *

THEY tell me here in Cincinnati that Cleveland is baseball mad over the showing the club is making under Birmingham. The merchants have promised to give the players $100,000 if the team takes the pennant, and this may have something to do with the hustling of the Naps at present. They have experienced only a fairly successful road trip, however; fairly successful because the Athletics are going so well. The and the pitching staff is moving as Cleveland team is playing great ball, smoothly as a demonstration six-cylinder automobile, but they cannot win the pennant if the Athletics never lose.

Doyle Whiffed Hard But This One Got By

NEW YORK, June 17.—What Jack Doyle, the White Sox scout, does not know he makes a stab at. But he doesn't always get by.

Doyle and half a dozen others were sitting about the lobby of the hotel. Frank Fogarty, the actor man, joined the party and he grasped at a glance that there wasn't much jollity in the bunch. He's quite a friend of Cal's and he was there to do the cheering act.

"Say, you know," and he called the name of some mutual friend.

"Oh, very well indeed," answered Cal. "But what happened to him?"

"Oh, he graduated."

"He did?"

"Yes, went through the entire curriculum."

Cal turned to Doyle. "You know what he is talking about, don't you?" queried the manager.

"Oh, very well," answered Doyle. "You know what a curriculum is?"

"Even so," from Doyle.

"Then what is it?" demanded Cal.

"Oh, it's one of those things where a fellow," continued Doyle, and hesitated. "It's one of those—well, a fellow who does that is the kind of a fellow who makes up his mind to ride in an automobile and then walks."

Joe Jackson to Bat From Seat in Chair

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—Joe Jackson is planning a stunt to throw the harpoon of ridicule into the pitchers and managers who haven't the nerve to give him a whack at the ball when he comes to bat with runners on second and third base. He is saving this for one of the early home games in Cleveland, where the manager directs the pitcher to pass him on purpose.

The instrument of ridicule will be a camp stool or a small chair. As the quartet of pitchouts for the intentional pass is begun Joe will signal the bat boy to hurry out from the bench with aforesaid stool.

Joe will then take his seat at the plate and watch the wide ones go by while the crowd jeers the opposing team. Or if that shames the opposing side into putting them over he figures he can get to his feet and in position to hit it.

GERMANS TO PICK BOATS FOR MARBLEHEAD RACES

IN OTHER WORDS—

Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Sees not another ball yard fight begun.

We read in certain periodicals that the chief difference between the English and the Americans is that the Americans think more of winning than of sport. Another difference is that the English put up the louder howl if they lose.

Georges Carpentier has consented to do battle with Bomb Wells again, possibly on the theory that one good purse deserves another.

After digesting the dope of the polo experts, one deduces that the American team is outclassed, but plays better polo.

Speaking of ungrateful wretches, there is Jack O'Connor, who demands $25,000 for losing his job with the St. Louis Browns.

SHAKE 'EM UP.

Where are the chills of yesterweek
that ambled through my frame
And made me shiver as I sat at
yonder baseball game?
I swelter now and yearn for winds
that long have beat it hence,
And if I want a chill to-day it costs
me 15 cents.

By hoisting a pennant, the Red Sox reminded us that they are champions of the universe. One would not suspect it from their playing.

Tony Caponi and Jack Dillon, having been matched to fight for the middleweight championship of Canada, it behooves the Giants and Pirates to play for the baseball championship of Siberia.

One of the most popular pastimes in Europe these days is to knock Bombardier Wells' block off.

If those English polo'sts take their defeat gracefully it is due to the fact that they have had a lot of practice at it.

LIGHTWEIGHTS POST FORFEIT FOR TITLE GO

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The treasury of the Tuxedo Club which is the right-hand pocket of Eddie Graney's vest, was bulging to-day with certified checks, bank notes, bank drafts and other evidences of money. Billy Nolan, for Willie Ritchie, and Joe Levy, for Joe Rivers, posted their forfeits for the twenty-round boxing contest on July 4, and Graney put up collateral for his agreement to hold the bout.

The boxers put up $3,750 apiece, two-thirds of this to be for weight and appearance, and the balance as a guarantee that they would be ready to box 25 minutes after weighing in, as stipulated in the articles of agreement. Should one of the fighters delay the game more than 25 minutes after weighing in, it's going to cost him a lot of money.

SCHWARTZ HAS WEIRDEST CLUB IN THE LEAGUE

By Percy Whiting.

THE opinion prevails in Atlanta that Bill Schwartz is the greatest manager in the world. He has to be to stick up around the top with that ball club of his.

To the Atlanta way of thinking Bill has the weirdest collection of cast-offs, misfits and comers that the league ever saw. And yet he sometimes wins games with it.

Of course it happened that yesterday wasn't one of the days, but barring Earl Fleharty's well known "bad inning," which proved to be the fourth, they had at least an even break with the Crackers all the rest of the way.

* * *

FLEHARTY'S "blow" was a profound and spectacular affair. Earl slid by for three innings, thanks to an efficacious prayer and the mystifying effect of a red flannel shirt. Then, beginning at the south end of the batting order, the Crackers all took a whack at him. Five hits were made, most notable of which was Tommy Long's three-sacker that scored three runs. This was a terrible poke, but even at that the ubiquitous Jud Daley all but nailed it. He got two hands on it, after a bit of dizzy aerial work, but the ball wrenched loose and continued on its course. Maybe if it had not been for Daley's tackle it would have gone for a home-run.

* * *

AFTER Fleharty was allowed to retire Dye went in. This lad had a snappy, twisty delivery and considerable pep. But he could not hold the Crackers, who nicked him for two more runs.

And in the meantime Gilbert Price was pitching good ball. An error made the first brace of Vol runs possible. In the ninth he really weakened a bit, but by then the Crackers were so far ahead that nothing short of an earthquake mattered much.

* * *

WHAT might have been a fast, snappy game was dragged out interminably by the fact that the umpires allowed the players all the time they wanted for arguing. And the Nashville Club needed a good deal.

* * *

THE Crackers and the Vols mingle again this afternoon. Dent will probably work for the Crackers. Schwartz did not announce his battery performers. The Vol series closes here Wednesday afternoon and Thursday the Barons and President W. M. Kavanaugh will be here and the local club will be presented the cup for the largest attendance on opening day.

St. Louis Magnates Want Local Franchise

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 17.—The owners of the St. Louis Americans are anxious to break into the Southern League, according to Manager Dobbs, of the Montgomery Club, who confided the story to a Memphis friend.

Manager Dobbs intimated that President Hedges, of St. Louis, had made overtures to the owners of the Atlanta team with a view to purchasing the franchise from the trolley people, but nothing had come of the matter so far.

YANKEE TRAINING METHODS PRAISED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, June 17.—American race horse training methods are coming in for high praise in Germany again this season, owing to the excellent results accomplished by the stable of Baron Oppenheim, the Cologne banker and millionaire, under the direction of J. Hyland, formerly of Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

Although the season has just begun, Hyland's mounts already have won more than $50,000 in prize money.

CLEANS BLOOD THROUGH KIDNEYS

A Most Important Function and One To Be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Real Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through this capillary net work that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutriments obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.

Fight Managers Lose Ring Idols

Walsh and Jones Suffer Most

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—Where the fight manager was treading sweet clover a few short weeks ago, he's up to his neck in cactus now.

It looks like a hard summer for this natural enemy of the boxing promoter.

The affable Southern gentleman, Tommy Walsh, has been separated from three meal tickets in less than as many months. First he brought Frankie Burns to the coast only to have the pompadoured one neatly trimmed by little Eddi Campi. Frankie Russell dropped by the wayside and Walsh devoted all his cunning toward getting Joseph Mandot on the map again. When Mandot was beaten by Anderson a few nights ago, Tommy threw up both hands.

Morgan's Meal Ticket Punched.

"Dumb" Dan Morgan was another to have his bread-winner sent to the trash heap. For four years "Kayo" Brown brought in the coin while Dan indulged in the luxury of eating regularly. Brown was knocked out by both Rivers and Anderson, putting himself in the back row and dragging Morgan along. Dan still has Jack Britton on his hands, but the promoters do not seem to be rushing madly after Jack's services.

"Cherokee" Tom Jones lost a fortune builder when Wolgast surrendered to Ritchie. T. J. quickly shanghaied big Jess Willard, only to have him beaten by "Gunboat" Smith. The win was not decisive, however, and Tom may yet be able to work Willard into the "big money" bee.

The fatality at Calgary reduced Billy McCarney to the ranks again. After ten years of the "ten, twent and thirt" stuff McCarney finally landed a live wire in Luther McCarty. Billy's prospects were of the best until the unfortunate meeting with Pelky. Also this sad affair put the rollers under Tommy Burns. With his arena burned to the ground and the Canadian authorities up in arms against the boxing game it is not probable that Burns will continue as a promoter.

Harry Gilmore, Jr., the man that "made" Packey McFarland, and one of the cleverest managers in America, has not had a money maker since he and the classy Chicago welter split up. Harry's hopes now are to develop a heavyweight contender in the elephantine "Bull" Young.

Atlantans Only in State Tourney

Fast Play on Piedmont Courts

THE tenth annual tennis tournament for the Georgia State championship, which is attracting much interest among the tennis enthusiasts, will be continued Tuesday afternoon on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club. No matches will be played in the mornings during the tournament, the playing beginning sufficiently early in the afternoons to allow enough time for playing them off. The men's consolation singles will be started this afternoon.

No out-of-town entries have been made in the tournament, those players who had intended entering having been kept away for various reasons. There are some classy local players, however, and the meet will by no means be a slow one.

The results of Monday afternoon's matches were as follows:

First Round.

A. W. Smith won from A. Clarke, 8-6, 2-6, 6-0.

H. J. Hall won from Grover Middlebrooks by default.

S. C. Williams won from Henry Groves by default.

Mansfield won from Orr, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

McLarty won from Sims, 6-4, 6-4.

Matthews won from Drummond Jones by default.

The following men drew byes:

L. D. Scott, G. A. Howell, E. R. Black, Jr., J. Draper, W. Colquitt, F. B. Green, J. B. Williams, C. Y. Smith, T. H. Williams, T. Perry, G. W. McCarty, H. M. Ashe, Jr., W. Nunnally, W. Griffith, Ramspeck, Abbott, Hallman, E. V. Carter, Jr., Martin, Porter, Jennings, Grant, J. Colquitt and V. R. Smith.

HOFMAN MAY QUIT GAME; REFUSES TO JOIN K. C.

PITTSBURG, June 17.—It is said that Artie Hofman, of the Pittsburg National League club, will not go to the Kansas City club of the American Association, to which club he has been assigned by Barney Dreyfuss, the local club owner. Hofman, it is said, will quit baseball.

MADISON, 4; MONROE, 1.

MADISON, GA., June 17.—Madison defeated Monroe here yesterday, 4 to 1. The University of Georgia will be here with its strong aggregation for three games Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

DUNDEE MEETS JACK WHITE ON COAST TO-NIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 17.—Jack White, the Chicago featherweight, and Johnny Dundee will clash in a scheduled twenty-round battle here to-night. Both boys completed training yesterday and look to be in great shape for the fray.

Dundee needed but light work to fit him for the bout, as he had been training to take on Ad Wolgast two weeks ago. When Ad called off the match White at once asked Tom McCarey for a date with the Eastern boy. McCarey readily consented and secured Dundee's signature to a set of articles.

Although Dundee is a 10 to 8 favorite, White money is coming in fast and it would not be surprising to see the Chicago boy enter the ring to-night an even-money bet. White is well known out here as he has had four fights at McCarey's arena and has only been defeated by Joe Rivers. He holds victories over Owen Moran, Frankie Conley and Harry Thomas.

FELSH IS INJURED.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 17.—Shortstop Felsh, of the Wisconsin-Illinois League club here, for whom Detroit and Philadelphia clubs have offered a good price, has gone to Youngstown, Ohio, to have a sprained tendon in his shoulder treated.

"STEEPLEJACK" IS COOL 360 FEET UP.

Offers to Pose on Head at Top of Flag Extending From Roof of Candler Building

It's hot down on the street—but how would you like to be perched on the flagpole which "tops" the seventeen-story Candler Building, where Old Sol's rays get in their fiercest work these days?

Take a squint up that way as you stroll down Peachtree Street and see W. C. Ficken, of 80 Ormond Street, a steeplejack by trade, thoroughly enjoying himself in his eagle's perch. He has been doing such "stunts" as this in and around Atlanta for the past twenty years.

Tuesday he reached what he terms the "climax" of his eventful career, for he has "sat upon" the top of the highest flagpole in the South, according to actual measurements. To be exact, at high noon Tuesday Mr. Ficken quietly viewed the surrounding country from an altitude of 360 feet.

"Don't you feel sort of queer away up there?" he was asked when he had capered down the pole on a rope the size of your little finger.

"Huh, not a bit," he replied between the puffs of his cigarette. "I feel better up there than I do here, by a long shot." And, to demonstrate his prowess in the art of steeplejacking, he offered to "skin" the pole and stand on his head for The Georgian photographer, who was after "cute" poses.

Mr. Ficken says he is the oldest steeplejack, in point of service, in Atlanta—"been at it twenty years and good for another twenty," he says.

Several times, he says, he has had some hair-raising expeirences, but has always come through safely. His most serious mishap was a fall of 40 feet in Madison, Ga., some years ago.

"Just a little Fourth of July celebration," he commented, dryly, in speaking of the incident, "for it happened on the Glorious Fourth."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

Nero, the smallsouled, the vainglorious Roman emperor who made a hell of his empire to find new thrills, lived a chapter of his life again in the wonderful production of Quo Vadis," which began a week's engagement at the Grand Monday night.

With the historical setting true in minutest detail, the wonderful photoplay carries the spectator back into a civilization that neither histories nor drama has adequately described.

For two hours the cinematograph clicked off a vivid picture, whose romantic interest vied with its historic perfection. The pomp of a pagan civilization, the splendor of a mighty nation were depicted in the novel. The pictures supply what in the book must be left to imagination.

An idea of detail to which the producers have paid such close attention may be gained from fact that even the poor sight of Nero was not overlooked. The emperor in the picture carries with him a lorgnette made from an emerald. Costumes, scenes—everything—were of that period nearly 2,000 years ago, when the early Christians were struggling to introduce the newest religion into heathen Rome.

The story as told by the novel is followed closely. And aside from spectacular scenes the story itself calls for closest attention. It runs easily, unfolding naturally as plot gives way to counterplot.

A few years ago the picture would have been impossible. Now, though, producers have learned to perfect setting. In pictures seen daily in the 5-cent houses wonderful illusions are shown; many similar to those in "Quo Vadis." But they can not hold like the play at the Grand. It has a background they lack.

Good Bill at Forsyth.

Augustus Mutt, Mrs. Lina Mutt (Mutt's boss), the two little Mutts and Little Jeff are at the Forsyth this week, and from the reception they got Monday night they are due for a very pleasant visit in the city. Of course, they are in the care of "Bud" Fisher. The American-Georgia cartoonist, which assures them a big week. Mr. Fisher is the headliner of a good bill—a bill that will reward you amply for braving the torrid weather.

Miss Pauline Welch (Mrs. "Bud" Fisher) takes second honors—that is, on the bill. She makes the biggest popular hit of the program with her dainty singing act. She is somewhat "stingy" with her encores—so Monday night's audience evidently thought—but there's quality if not quantity in her turn.

Other acts which go extremely well are Karl Emmy's Pets, a troupe of splendidly trained dogs; Bart McHugh's troup of kiddies in a singing and dancing act, a la Gus Edwards; the Three Leightons, minstrel songs and talk; Whitfield and Ireland, in a small town act, and Adonis and his dog, the former an acrobat.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

New Gas Joke; Read It and Laugh.

The Atlanta detective had just congratulated the West End housewife for bringing about the arrest of a sneak thief.

"Oh, I knew he was a crook the minute he opened his mouth," she replied smilingly.

"How did you spot him so quickly?"

"Why, he told me the gas company had sent him to examine our meter and see if we were not entitled to a rebate."

The Reason That She Gave.

The families of two neighboring houses on an Atlanta street that shall be nameless were playing 10-cent limit poker together. After the busting of a pot the opener drew one card and the mistress of the house where the game was played also drew one. She held, to start with, the deuce, trey, four and five of diamonds, and acquired the six of the same suit.

The opener bet a dime and the woman merely called. When the cards were spread, her husband went up in the air.

"Why didn't you raise that hand?" he exclaimed. "Didn't you know it was worth it?"

Advice as Given To a Tenderfoot.

"When I first went out West I did what nearly every other tenderfoot does—bought one of those broad-brimmed felt hats like the stage cowboys wear, and put it on at the first opportunity.

"Mine wasn't the only one in town, but I felt conspicuous just the same. Somehow or other I hadn't acquired the knack of wearing it. One windy day I was walking down the main street of the town holding onto my hat with one hand and my coat with the other. As I turned a corner the wind seemed to stop blowing, and I let go of the hat, when a sudden gust came, took it off my head and sent it rolling like a frightened hoop down the street.

"I started to give chase, when another hatless man—he was a sure-enough Westerner, too—took me by the arm and said:

"'Don't chase it, pardner; there'll be another one along in a minute.'"

GEORGIA RED MEN GO TO COLUMBUS

Great Council Meets Wednesday and Thursday for Thirty-fourth Annual Powwow.

COLUMBUS, June 17.—From every section of Georgia Red Men are en route to Columbus for the thirty-fourth annual powwow of the Great Council of the Great Rreservation of Georgia, to be in session here Wednesday and Thursday.

The committees that have charge of the entertainment expect between 175 and 200 chiefs to gather around the camp fires.

Appropriate exercises attendant upon the opening session have been arranged. Pawnee Creek and Osceola Tribes of Red Men have arranged to give the visitors an enjoyable time.

Welcome From Mayor.

On Wednesday morning the first session will be called to order at 10 o'clock and will be opened with the invocation by Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of the First Baptist Church, followed by the address of welcome by Mayor L. H. Chappell on behalf of the city of Columbus, and by B. S. Miller, Senator from the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, in behalf of the Red Men of Columbus. The response will be made by T. H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, great junior sagamore of the Great Council of the United States.

The addresses will be followed by a brief business session, at which the opening business of the great council will be transacted, after which a luncheon will be served in the banquet room of the Masonic Temple.

Trolley and Boat Trips.

The business session of the afternoon will be short, to be followed by a trolley ride around the city. After a two-hour tour, the visitors will be taken by steamer down the Chattahoochee River on a boat excursion. The boat will return to the city about 7 o'clock, and after a brief rest, the visitors and members of the local tribes will have a short business session, after which will take place the Haymakers' parade, which will be led by the Red Men's Drum Corps from Atlanta and the Columbus City Band.

Thursday Morning.

On Thursday morning the business before the Great Council will be continued. There are a number of matters to be disposed of, including the election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place and disposing of numerous other matters.

Only a few visitors had arrived this morning, but it is expected that during the afternoon and evening that large numbers will come in, so they may be present at the opening session Wednesday morning.

Local Red Men are preparing to meet all trains and visitors will be assigned to hotels and given every possible attention in order that they may secure quarters as soon after arriving in the city as possible. The hotels have put forth special efforts for the accomodation of the visiting Red Men, and they will be given the very best to be had.

Biscuit Makers to Improve Crackers

CHICAGO, June 17.—It was decided at the convention of the Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of America that better crackers must be made in order to compete with English biscuits.

"The lower tariff is letting the English product in to compete with us," said Secretary W. H. Brownell. "It means that American manufacturers have got to improve the quality of their goods and raise prices."

Brooks Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president. Secretary Brownell was re-elected.

Gas Kills Chicago Divorcee in London

LONDON, June 17.—That Mrs. Viola McKenna Hudson, of Chicago, found dead from gas asphyxiation in her apartments at St. Georges mansion Sunday, came to her death while temporarily insane, was the Coroner's verdict to-day. Mrs. Hudson, a divorcee, was 26 years old and pretty.

Among her effects was the bequest of $5,000 to an Oxford undergraduate.

L. & N.'S MACHINE RATE HELD UNFAIR

Commission Rules on Freight Charges of Several Roads—C. & A. Sugar Tariff Stands.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The rate of 53 cents per 100 pounds on machinery from Saginaw, Mich., to Milton, Fla., over the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was declared unreasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day. The commission held unreasonable the present rates on flour over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad from Dickson, N. Dak., to Kirby and Thermopolis, Wyo.

Rates on sugar and molasses from producing points in Louisiana to Slinton, Iowa, over the Chicago and Alton were held not discriminatory in comparison with rates to Chicago. An advance of 40 per cent in fertilizer rates from Wadesboro, S. C., to various local stations in that State were found to be unreasonable.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and ten other railroads to-day were ordered to accept shipments of flaxseed products from Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., to Galveston, Texas, when for export, notwithstanding their desire to decline such shipments owing to the low rates. The commission finds that the present rate of 16 1-2 cents is unreasonably low. It permits the railroads to impose a charge of 22 1-2 cents per 100 pounds.

HARVESTS ARE GOOD THERE WILL BE PLENTY OF GOLD

Give Calamity Howler Forbes a vacation and us a rest for the balance of the summer. We are tired of his pessimism.

Why fight the Administration, when he must use methods that are "below the belt?"

One day he claims that the banks of the country can't supply the West and South with money to move the splendid crops that are in sight. The next day he claims that the Administration will run all the gold to Europe because it has provided enough emergency currency to move these crops.

He knows you can't legislate gold into America, and that the only way to force it here is by sending our grain and cotton to Europe. This is the law of economics.

He knows that the grain of the West and the cotton of the South have brought gold to America whenever it was claimed that there was a shortage of gold. Neither the gamblers of Wall Street nor the political party in control of the Government ever forced the gold to come back.

If Mr. Forbes will "go way back and sit down" at some sanitarium, regulate his liver, and stay there until the crops are harvested and Europe's gold put on shipboard for America, then Mr. Forbes can go and count the yellow piles that are visible in the banks of America to the credit of our people, and reporting what he finds, he will become an optimist and a helper like other writers.

NEW CROP DEMAND SENDS COTTON UP

Spot Houses and Shorts Continue to Buy in Face of Extremely Bearish Sentiment.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Liverpool did not respond to our advance yesterday, resulting in the market opening barely steady, with first prices at a net decline of 1 to 5 points from Monday's final. But for overnight buying orders the initial quotations would have been much lower. The feeling around the ring is bearish and many expressed the belief that we should have a good reaction as weather continues favorable. Weather dispatches reported clear weather over the belt.

After the call offerings became scarce and scattered, resulting in a short covering movement. Spot houses also bought. All the loss was quickly recovered and prices during the late forenoon were some 11 to 15 points higher than the opening quotations. The advance was based chiefly on the rumor that the Government's weekly weather report would be very unfavorable, owing to the cold weather last week, but private reports say that no damage of consequence was done and temperatures over the entire belt are entirely normal.

The weather map indicated part cloudy in the western half, possibly more rain in the central, south and west Texas. This, coupled with the weekly weather report, being much better than generally expected, encouraged freer offerings during the early afternoon session, resulting in prices shading a few points from the early best, when July reached 12.22, August 12.19, October and December 11.75. However, there was too much steam behind the market and prices quickly retrieved the loss and rallied to the high point.

One broker was credited with buying 50,000 bales, which was believed to be short covering. It is generally believed that the short interest has been greatly eliminated and prices will recede on any further favorable weather or crop advices.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 1@8 points from the final quotations of Monday.

Browne, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Heavy continental realizing; declining in advance not warranted."

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—The continued decline in English consols during the past few days suggests some unfavorable political development. Liverpool came in rather disappointing, with futures only 2 to 3 points up; were due 6 to 7 points higher; spots 5 points higher; sales 8,000 bales. This shows that the advance has its origin and seat in New York and is of professional character, with an attempt to run in shorts as its sole basis. It may sound paradoxical, but it is nevertheless true that, owing to the fact that the general situation is bearish and crop prospects so good, the market advanced because of the short interest accumulated and the bearish outlook for the future, which gave the professionals a chance to work.

Weather conditions continue very good. There were some nice rains overnight in the southern half of Texas, while fair weather prevailed elsewhere. Warm night minimums throughout the belt. Indications are for a continuance of these favorable conditions. After the close of New York yesterday, our market jumped up on the execution of stop limits bringing it out of line with the others. This morning, therefore, prices dropped 10 to 20 points, but selling was timid, and New York again soon advised buying of July and August by spot interests and the market recovered in anticipation of a further advance, which soon appeared, October here selling to 11.75 by 11 o'clock.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 17.—It is believed that big short line was covered to-day, forcing prices up rapidly. Liverpool did not respond to our strength of yesterday, and cables said Continent was realizing on recent purchases. Soon all shorts are eliminated the market will lose steam, and with favorable weather should decline

The weekly weather report is more favorable than expected and eased prices down from the top.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: "We favor a conservative attitude on buying side on all recessions."

A. Nomden & Co.: "It looks as if still higher prices might be seen."

Miller & Co.: "We expect the market to gradually work higher."

Morris, Rothschild & Co.: "We do not advise the short side of the market."

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: "We have not changed our opinion any, and still look for higher prices."

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Market Showed Better Tone Than for Some Time—Offerings Eliminated Considerably.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 17.—A bearish tendency marked the opening of the Stock Exchange to-day and prices of most of the issues were from ½ to 2⅜ lower, Canadian Pacific being the leader in the downward movement, with a loss of 2⅜. After a half hour, however, a rallying sentiment developed and most of the stocks which had suffered declines made partial recoveries. United States Steel common and Reading again were very active, the former losing ½ and the latter selling from 155⅞ to 156¼. This last quotation represented a gain of ¼. Among the declines were Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Can, ½; American Smelting, ½; Atchison, ½; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅝; Union Pacific, 1; Southern Pacific, ⅝; Pennsylvania, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ⅜; Mexican Petroleum, ½; Lehigh Valley, ⅛; Erie, ½; Chino Copper, ½. California Petroleum gained ¼.

The curb market was heavy.

Americans in London lacked leadership and were lower. Canadian Pacific in London was weak on Continental selling.

Selling pressure developed in the last hour and, while a number of issues fell below the midday range, most of them held above or even with the best morning prices. Compared with the noon quotations, American Can was off ¾; Atchison was ⅜ lower. Union Pacific was off ¼c; Lehigh Valley was ⅞ under; St. Paul was ⅞ lower, and Cincinnati and Ohio declined ⅝. Banking interests involved with the interests of the Harriman system expressed a statement that an adjustment of the dissolution of the Harriman merger would soon be brought about which would act as a strong bull factor in the market.

The market closed steady.

Governments unchanged; other bonds firm.

MONEY EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Money on call, 2¼; time money easier; 60 days, 3⅜; 90 days, 4¼@4½; six months 5¼@5½ per cent.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mean temperatures ranged from 2 to 14 below normal generally over the cotton belt, the greatest deficiency being in South Carolina and Northern Georgia. The weekly mean temperatures ranged from 60 to 76 over eastern, 68 to 74 over central and 66 to 78 over western part of the cotton States. The lowest weekly mean, 60 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 78 degrees, at San Antonio and Del Rio, Texas. Frost was reported from Pike County, Alabama, and Jonesville, Ark. Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region except in north central part and over a small area in Texas, where there was no rain.

The rainfall was generally light and unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Florida, Georgia and Oklahoma.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.60, occurred at Valdosta, Ga.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....97@98
Corn—No. 2 63
Oats—No. 2 .....42@43

CHICAGO, June 17.—There was heavy and general selling of all grains to-day and resting spots showed loses of 1⅜@2c for wheat, ⅝@⅞c for corn and ¼@1c for oats. Nearly every commission house in the trade was a seller one time or another during the day and at one time heavy profit-taking by domestic longs, the foreigners were again on the selling side, which A. O. Slaughter & Co. lead in the latter movement.

Provisions were generally lower.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Concerning Range Fowls Should Have

Free Range Has Its Advantages and Disadvantages. Read the Following Article Carefully.

JUDGE MARSHALL—I hear many conflicting opinions about range for fowl. Some contend that they will do but little good without it while others say that they are better confined to yards where one can have better control of them and manage them at will. I am at a loss to know what to do in the matter. Whether to arrange to have it or to depend upon the yards. I would like to have your opinion about it if you please, sir. Thanking you, I am, your truly, R. J. S., Covington, Ga.

ANSWER—Range is good and it is not good. Free range has its advantages and its disadvantages. For the quick growing of young stock free range is the very thing. They need all kinds of exercise for the exercise of their rapidly developing muscles.

In order to get the very best there is in these little but rapidly expanding bodies it is necessary that they shall be on the go from morning to night. There is no other way to get such exercise out of them but from the free range where they are jumping from one thing to another; first a bug on the spring and then the scratching out of the worm? and so it goes form morning to night. In addition to what they get in the shape of grain that is furnished them by the keeper they are filled up with bugs, worms, seeds and every conceivable thing that is intended by Nature to make them grow. They come in at night filled to the neck and are soon snugly asleep in their coops. Is it any wonder that they are on tip toe and ready to get out long before the old hens think of getting off the roost. They grow like weeds. How different they will be from the little fellows that are closely yarded, unless the yarded ones have had unusual attention. By unusual attention we mean that they have had all their little wants supplied from start to finish in a way that few persons attend to them. We have seen Brahmas and Cochins hatched in June and July large enough and good enough looking to take prizes at our best mid-winter poultry shows. It was no boy work, however.

It was accomplished by the best chicken raisers in this country. And the secret was free range of the very finest kind; apple orchards flowing with blue grass, meadows full of grasshoppers, grain fields of various kinds where they could find the stuff that stuck to the ribs at any time from dawn to dark. Nothing short of such conditions could have produced this phenomenal growth. For it really was a phenomenal growth when you think what it meant to grow an eight or nine-pound Brahma from June to the first of February. Aside from the great growth in avoirdupois they had the finest plumage that one could ever dream of seeing. Almost like silk velvet to the touch, and every feather in its place. For conditioning old hens or cocks for the coming breeding season the wide and good range is the very ideal place; nothing can take its place. They will not lay so many eggs while doing this kind of summer outing business. But next year's results in better and more fertile eggs, stronger chicks from those eggs all down the line will well repay for any lapse in the egg laying. Laying that is the con side of the question. If it is eggs you are after day in and day out avoid the unlimited range. Hens will not lay so many eggs where they have nothing to do but run over a hundred-acre farm from morning to night.

They will lay pretty well. Some of them will lay awhile others will take it up so that where a farmer has a hundred or so hens he will think he is getting about all the time and in goodly numbers, and so he will be but let him keep a record of his hens and the eggs laid and compare them with the fellow who lives in the village and is obliged to keep his hens yarded where they get quite a little exercise, but are not in a position where they are really running their legs off as it were. The village fellow will if he knows how to handle hens in confinement in a satisfactory manner beat him almost two to one. This has been tried many a time and the balance is usually in favor of the yarded hen.

So you see why we answered yes and no. The growing chicks need it while the hens for eggs will get down to business better in the yard. Then too it is so much better for the handling of eggs for the market to have the hens yarded that the eggs may all be laid in good clean nests rather than under the barn in the fence corners and brush piles and so on, as every one who has observed must know.

Leg Weakness.

Judge Marshall—I would like for you to tell me what ails my chicks and give me a remedy, if you please. I find them sitting or staggering around at first. Then they would get so they could not walk at all, but even then they would eat and seem well otherwise. They sometimes linger this way for several days, and toward the end they are perfectly helpless. I thought perhaps it was rheumatism, but did not know what to do for it. Respectfully,

Cope, S. C. MRS. G. M. B.

Answer.—In old fowls we would call it rheumatism; in young ones it would more naturally be of the nature of leg weakness, and might be caused by a number of different things. Brooder chicks often show leg weakness from the brooder floor being too warm or the feeding of too much starchy food and not enough green food, causing an overgrowth of the body without sufficient bone development; or damp quarters, in connection with improper feeding, will cause a complication of leg weakness and rheumatism. Where there is much rheumatism you will notice the jerking of the limbs in walking, with evidences of pain. At times there is a swelling of the joints also. For immediate and quick relief about 10 grains of epsom salts to a teaspoonful of water for chicks 6 weeks old or older. Then add to the drinking water of the flock so affected 30 grains of bicarbonate of soda to the half-gallon of water. Every third day substitute 20 grains of salicylic acid to the same amount of water. But remember, surrounding conditions, with the proper feed in variety, will do much toward helping matters.

Eggs—All Varieties.

THE EGGS of different varieties of fowls will be found classified under their respective breeds in the future, instead of under the classification of "Eggs."

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

This is the time of year when the mind turns to the green fields beyond the city and when one begins to look about for comfortable, easy-to-reach suburban homes and boarding places. If you have a room or two you would like to rent for the summer, or if you conduct a boarding house and want to obtain a desirable class of guests, the "Suburban Board" Columns of Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will fill your house. Try it and see.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Transferred On Marietta Street

The transfer of a lease on central property on Marietta Street was interesting in Tuesday's real estate news. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company has bought the stock of drugs and the lease of the Braselton Drug Company at the northeast corner of Marietta and North Forsyth Streets. The lease calls for the expenditure of about $6,000 a year and has about three years to run. The property is in the DeGive estate. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company now has eleven drug stores in the city.

Increase in Building.

The first sixteen days in June show a decided increase in building over the corresponding period during 1912. The figures are $412,501, as against $192,593, a gain of $219,908. Figures since January 1 give 1912 an advantage, however, with a difference of $365,291. This difference is explained by the fact that a number of large buildings were started during the period last year.

Deals in Postoffice Section.

Papers in the transfer of three valuable parcels in the postoffice section have gone to record. Mrs. Mary E. Barrow bought for $15,000 from the Georgian Realty Company a 20-by-60-foot lot on Poplar Street, 20 feet south of Fairlie, and from B. M. Grant and others a 20-by-73-foot lot on Walton Street, 110 feet southeast of Bartow Street, for a consideration that is withheld. A warranty deed has been given by James Stokes, of New Jersey, to Mrs. Lena Swift Huntley on the northwest corner of James and Fairlie Streets, 50 by 100 feet, for $12,000.

Effect of Segregation.

Real estate men are busy figuring out probable effects of the proposed segregation law. The opinion seems to be that this action will help some property and hurt other property. Fourth Ward people are elated, since the law is aimed especially at the negro sections in that locality. Many real estate men saved copies of the ordinance so they might know what course to pursue in renting houses.

Building at East Point.

Some 40 houses have been built at East Point since January 1, according to the estimate of Gid Hanna, a resident of that section and a well-known real estate dealer. Of these, Colonel I. N. Ragsdale built about twelve bungalows.

Smith Estate Sale.

The sale of parcels in the Peter Francisco Smith estate, which will occur at the court house door Tuesday, July 1, will be entirely technical, to remove titles from court. The Smith estate embraces the southeast corner of Peachtree Street and Forrest Avenue, the home place at the southeast corner of Forrest Avenue and Courtland Street, and other valuable pieces. The terms will be cash.

North Fulton Enhancement.

Probably no section around Atlanta has experienced more rapid enhancement in property values than the section about Buckhead. A comparison of prices will serve to illustrate.

When the Fulton County Almshouse property was put up at auction two or three years ago, lots along Piedmont Road near Roswell Road brought as little as $3 and $4 a front foot, and some "inside" acreage brought as low as $75 and $100. Now these same lots are in the market at $20 to $40 a foot, and the owners are not very anxious to sell; and the acreage is held at about $300. Lots which are now $100 a foot on Peachtree in the neighborhood of Mrs. Carrie L'Engle's and Colonel Walter P. Andrews' homes changed hands about a year ago at $70, a clear advance of $30 a foot. A lot opposite James R. Gray's country home south of Buckhead was recently offered at $92 a foot, and the price of $65 a foot has been hung up at Buckhead for business lots. In fact, lots as far north as Piedmont Avenue have brought $60 and $65 a foot, and the prices promise to ascend steadily.

Peachtree values have never failed to rise. One or two lots in the Brookwood section have been offered at $200 a foot, but they are few and far between. Ten years ago a man with $5,000 cash could have bought enough land at Brookwood to have made him independent to-day. Some did, and they have had no cause to worry.

Fast Paving Peachtree.

The bituulithic paving which was started some weeks ago on Peachtree Road at Buckhead is now nearly done, and in a few more days automobilists will be able to drive over one of the finest stretches in the Southern States. The paving extends northeast to the DeKalb County line, a distance of about two miles.

In this section are some of the best highways to be found anywhere, other good roads being Piedmont Road, Roswell Road, Pace's Ferry Road and Wesley Avenue. The Welauca Road is undergoing extensive improvements, and the Ivey Road, leading off Piedmont Avenue at W. J. Stoddard's place, is due to be cherted and worked out this year. The county convict gang is encamped on McCullough Bros.' land on the Welauca Road and it has much more road work in prospect.

Lot Sales Aggregate $23,000.

L. C. Ball, associate sales manager of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency, reports lot sales aggregating $23,000 the past week. Most of these were in the Peachtree Highlands subdivision, at Piedmont Road. Paving and street work in this neighborhood have attracted a great many home-seekers of late.

Oglethorpe University Plans.

Funds for Oglethorpe University are said to be well in hand, and the erection of buildings at Silver Lake, DeKalb County, near the Capital City Country Club, will start about January 1, 1914. The establishment of this university is of special interest to real estate men on account of the influence it will have in the development of land tracts which will cluster about it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent on the buildings and the grounds, and many subdivisions are expected to start soon after the university has opened its doors.

All Civilized Nations Should Unite in Defense of Civilization

THE GEORGIAN prints on this page to-day the well-known prophetic cartoon of the Emperor of Germany, published some years ago, in which the Archangel Michael is shown warning the Powers of Europe against a threatened Oriental invasion.

The cross of Christianity is displayed above the nations of Europe, and amid the smoke and flames of the devastating invasion are shown the outlines of the statue of Buddha.

This cartoon showed the concern of the Kaiser of Germany for the Christian and civilized nations of Europe. We assume that the Kaiser and Germany generally are concerned for Christianity and civilization throughout the world. We can hardly believe, then, that Count Reventlow voices the sentiment of the Kaiser and the sentiment of the people of Germany when he sees only a possible trade advantage to Germany in a Buddhist Oriental nation occupying the western slopes of the North American continent.

Are not the German Kaiser and the German people concerned more for Christianity and civilization than they are for a fancied, and purely fancied, trade advantage? Does the Kaiser's favorite cartoon apply only to the Christian and civilized nations of Europe, and not the Christian and civilized nations of America and Australasia and elsewhere?

We can say with confidence that the view of the Kaiser and of the German people as a whole is not so narrow and so venal.

Count Reventlow's utterances are both brutal and bigoted, both selfish and shortsighted. No good can come to Christianity and civilization anywhere by the weakening of the power and progress of Christianity and civilization in any nation, in any section of the globe.

If the struggle is in behalf of Christianity and civilization, of human progress and human liberty, then all the nations of the world which believe in these ideals should unite to further them and to oppose any influence which threatens them.

No petty prejudice, no small selfishness, no baser passions of envy or jealousy or greed, should cause distrust and defection, with the possibility of defeat and disaster to the common cause.

Let the Kaiser modify his cartoon to make it include the United States and Canada and Australasia, to make it include all Christian and civilized nations everywhere, and he will make it more worthy of himself, more worthy of his people, more worthy of the Christian spirit he is seeking to express, the civilized conditions he is seeking to preserve.

On such a broad and lofty platform the Christian and civilized nations of the world could be united, and should be united, for the advancement and advantage of all humanity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"NATIONS OF EUROPE, GUARD YOUR PRECIOUS POSSESSIONS!"

The German Kaiser's cartoon on the Yellow Peril, representing the Archangel Michael warning the Western Powers against the threatened Oriental invasion, typified by the image of Buddha.

Why Women Should Vote

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY.

The Stranger and "Small Town" Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyrighted, 1913, by the Star Co.)

THE menu in your home may be the best in the world; yet, because you are accustomed to it, you find a new zest in food placed before you when you visit other homes, or sit at hotel tables.

The eye, the ear, the mind, the taste all find a keener pleasure in the unaccustomed at certain intervals, even when that which is offered is less admirable.

In an interesting letter which discusses to some length the follies of my own sex, the weakness of his, a question of interest is propounded by a man of culture. After reviewing the numerous tragedies which have occurred from time to time as the result of infatuation of young women in villages and interior towns through love affairs with strangers, the correspondent says:

Dreams of Sweetheart.

"It has always been a great mystery to me why the stranger within our gates has such fascinating attractions for some of our American girls. I shall eschew the engagements and marriages of American heiresses to foreigners. Every one knows the reasons. But the question is a subtle and far-reaching one. Let a total stranger, of good appearance and polite address, come to a town and at once he is the favorite with the girls at the prayer meeting and picnic. The actor, the drummer, the ball player, yes, even the prize fighter, in competition for the hand and heart of the reigning belle, will nearly always outdistance the Georgies and Charlies and Willies of the town. Is it hero worship, or what is it?"

To the man or woman who understands what the imaginative and romantic temperament means this question would suggest its own answer.

While familiarity does not always or often breed "contempt," it does destroy, as a rule, romantic illusions.

The average young girl—God bless her!—is possessed of a good share of sentiment and romance in her thoughts of the lover waiting for her somewhere in the world.

She invests him with the qualities most desirable in her estimation and perhaps drawn to some extent from the novels she has read. He is a creature of her dreams and meditations, and it is not to be supposed that she will readily clothe the youth with whom she has played "tag" and "I spy" in the garments of her dreams.

The boy who has been repeatedly punished at school or whipped by an older brother in her presence or who has been the cause of disagreeable neighborhood criticisms because of his oversupply of youthful vitality; the boy who has teased and tormented her and shown all the unattractive traits of the average growing lad is not liable to become her ideal by any sudden transformation.

The stranger who comes to town has passed through all these unattractive phases in his own village, and he may be far less worthy of her admiration and much further removed from the standard of her ideal than her old playmate, but she sees in him the object of her dreams, free from all crudity, and he seems to her a wholly superior being.

Whatever he may have been in the process of evolution, she finds him her finished ideal when they meet.

He has come into her life suddenly, and by the will of kind Providence she believes.

There is a novelty in all he says and does; he has a new trick of pronunciation, or a new set of phrases and he brings the atmosphere of a new world into her monotonous life. He tells her of new scenes, new people.

It is as if she had listened all her life to one air, and now a new melody is sounded. Harmonies undreamed of become perceptible to the ear of her heart. She listens to his recital of boyish days and pranks, and while the tales he relates differ little from the actions of the boys with whom she has been reared, they are surrounded with a halo of charm in her mind which places his past in a realm quite apart from the commonplace; and it is this commonplace association of neighborhood life which has stood between her dreams and her boy lovers.

Whatever affairs of the heart the stranger may have passed through in his evolving period, she has not been a witness thereof nor a confidant of the other maidens in the case, as she has been with her childhood's companions.

When he tells her that he loves her, she does not recall the fact that two or three years ago he was the devoted cavalier of her sister, or her cousin, or her rival in the high school.

Blessed Is She.

And the accident of their meeting, the day they first looked into each other's faces, the hour they first spoke—all these incidents are thrilling and wonderful and food for hours of happy memories.

Blessed is she to whom such memories and dreams remain forever surrounded by a romantic halo! For never in any ordinary association of childhood and never in the more commonplace development of friendship into love can there be found quite the depth of joy and sentiment which results from the hidden advent of a [illegible]

The Back Yard Stock Farm

By WEX JONES.

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I used to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew,
For rent was high, and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of ham.
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.

*For whalebone. Corsets, you know.

Inspiring Line Versus Firing Line

By THOMAS TAPPER.

TO THE BOSS:

EVERY business organization possesses its misfits.

What can be done with them?

The easiest solution of the problem is to discharge them, shut your eyes and draw again.

The economic way is to open your eyes and study the situation and develop them.

There is some trouble involved in this. But no more than a carpenter encounters when he has to cut and plane a piece of wood to make it fit a certain place. He might overhaul a million feet of lumber before finding exactly the piece he needs.

It is his ready skill for altering the length and shape of lumber, for adjusting it to his purposes that makes him a carpenter.

A quick eye, an observing mind, a few tools by the help of which he can carry out his ideas and he can adjust means to ends without trouble, delivering a solid and efficient job.

Misfits in business are rough timber. Everyone is good for something. They may not make good tops for mahogany tables, but they are useful somewhere.

(II)

TO THE WORKER:

THE business organization in which you work can use all your thought and strength.

A certain amount of shaping and fitting is necessary to make you and the job balance perfectly.

Your own intelligence, plus the demands of your work, plus the directions you receive from the Boss, should result in an adjustment that will make you indispensable.

Getting-on-in-Life that everybody is so anxious to attain.

Many a man will cheer himself red in the face to see a second baseman play good ball. He is cheering efficiency. By watching that man he will learn the whole philosophy of doing teamwork in his own shop.

Take the second baseman from his place and put in a minister, or a shoemaker, and the game may be humorous, but it will not be efficient.

(III)

TO BOTH OF YOU:

WHEN two people have signed up for the purpose of doing one thing as well as it can be done, both must travel in the same direction and keep step to the music of the business. One can not lag behind when the double-time march begins.

The man who doesn't feel like marching at a double-time gait must either change his feelings or get out of line. But wherever he goes he must remember this: When a lot of men get together without purpose or leadership, they make up a Crowd. When they get together with a purpose, keep step and march straight on, they make a Procession.

And about all a crowd is fit for is to stand around and see the procession march by.

: The Lesson From Flag Day :

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"Hats off!"
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles and the sound of drums—
A flash of color beneath the sky—
"Hats off!"
The flag is passing by!

THE youth of a republic are its strength and hope. The decision of each man's destiny involves, in part, the common weal. The sentiments of youth make the policies of men. The State supplants the school, the student merges into the citizen. The schoolroom of yesterday is the forum of to-day, the playgrounds of to-day are the battlefields of to-morrow. The spirit planted in the bosoms of youth blossoms into the ballots or bayonets of manhood, and a motherer's whisper in her children's ears may be the boom of cannon in the years to come.

It is well that Flag Day has become a national holiday. There was never a nobler or a wiser movement than to give one day of our national life to the national flag. Our Star Spangled Banner is the symbol of our country, and all policy and all patriotism unite in the effort to teach our country's children to love and to revere it.

It Is Inspiring.

As a thing symbolic, splendid, inspiring, it should be honored throughout the land.

The flag was George Washington's individual Declaration of Independence—his personal pioneer defiance of England and the King. He made it first, he waved it first. Six months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, on July 4, 1776, and nearly eighteen months before the Continental Congress, on June 14, 1777, formally adopted the flag George Washington floated over his headquarters at Cambridge the Stars and Stripes. If the Revolution had failed, that flag alone and that flag's defiance would have condemned him to death.

Even so Charles Carroll, signing the Declaration, was reminded "There are other Carrolls," and swiftly the brave Marylander added, "Of Carrollton"—which was Carroll's dauntless acceptance of personal responsibility and his defiance of the King.

The spirit of Washington and the spirit of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was the spirit of individual responsibility and of individual and dauntless devotion. It should be the spirit of to-day. The Republic is verging to its zenith and patriotism should be at its prime. Our country is greater and stronger than it has ever been before, and the spirit of love and devotion in its people had never more to inspire it than now.

In every schoolhouse, in every public hall, in every home and in every hand, native or foreign born, the flag of our country should be displayed on Flag Day every year.

Not only in our splendid and inspiring youth, but in our stalwart and grateful manhood, should this spirit be expressed. Every great and noble sentiment that wraps our country's present and its future should rally around the colors of the republic.

More than ever before to the children of the republic and to its men and women should these stripes and stars from "Old Glory" stand for the essentials of power, protection and progress.

The Spirit of the Country.

The flag must stand for a constructive policy and for an ample navy to sustain it. It should stand in every instance for the right of our country to manage its own affairs. It should stand for clear treaties and every just advantage which is ours—even if it takes new treaties to secure it—for the right to fortify its great canal and to regulate its commerce.

It should stand for the right of its separate States to regulate their own affairs under the Federal Government in matters vital to the interests of its people.

The flag should stand for a constructive, and not a destructive, policy in business—regulated by a reduced but reasonable tariff for the protection of our industries and by reciprocal agreements to protect our international trade.

The flag should wave over a magnificent merchant marine. It should redeem the desolate harbors in which its glorious colors are rarely seen, and float above our country's commerce in its own ships on every sea.

It should stand for a constructive policy of durable and universal peace by being duly and fully prepared for war.

Above all present things, the flag should stand for the power to back its policies with argument in peace and with the ample equipment of a powerful navy for defense and for offense in war.

The Glory of the Flag.

The glory of our flag was made by the power and the glory of a strong and dauntless navy. It must be sustained by the power of a strong and ample navy. So long as other nations front the world with battleships and armed battalions our country must front the world with battleships and battalions. And because we are richer and more isolated than other nations we must see to it that our battleships are as many and as strong as those of any nation that may menace us upon either of our ocean coasts.

SENSATIONS IN PHAGAN CASE AT HAND

Out-of-Town Trips Believed To Be of Great Importance—Defense Has Strong Evidence.

Frank A. Hooper, associate counsel with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the prosecution of the Phagan murder mystery, left Atlanta Monday for a trip to Indianapolis. Attorney Hooper was the third man closely connected with the Phagan case to leave town within a space of three days.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who took an active part in the hunt for the slayer of Mary Phagan until the dictograph controversy arose, left Sunday, saying that he was going to Cincinnati. He said that it was a business trip and intimated that it was related either to his quarrel with Chief of Detectives Lanford or directly with the Phagan case.

Solicitor Dorsey left the previous afternoon. He gave out that the prosecution entirely had completed its preparation of the Phagan case and that he was going away for a week's rest at Atlantic City and New York.

Deny Mystery.

At the Hooper home Tuesday it was admitted that Mr. Hooper's trip was on business, but denial was made that it was in connection with the Phagan case or that there was any significance in his departure practically at the same time as that of Solicitor Dorsey and Colonel Felder.

Rumors are circulating, however, that material witnesses in the case have been uncovered and that their testimony may have a most important bearing in determining the person who strangled Mary Phagan. It is said that the sudden trips out of town of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Attorney Hooper, may not be unrelated to these new developments.

The prosecution has been aware for some time that the attorneys for the defense have been weaving a strong net of damaging evidence around the negro sweeper, Jim Conley.

But Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, following his custom of silence, has let neither the public nor the prosecution in on the secret of the source of this important evidence. He has scores of affidavits. That much is known by the prosecution, but by whom they are signed will probably remain a deep mystery until the Frank trial begins.

Report New Evidence.

Recent reports that new and startling evidence against the negro has been turned up by investigators for the defense are held responsible in some quarters for the sudden out-of-town trips of the Solicitor and his associate. It is explained that they are looking into some of the stories which have come to their ears.

They have heard, it is said, that the defense is in possession of statements from reputable and unquestionably reliable persons which place an overwhelming weight of circumstantial evidence upon the shoulders of the negro. These statements are said to have been overlooked or refused by the detectives working on the case.

Conley meanwhile sticks to the story told in his latest affidavit. He insists that the only part he had in the crime was assisting Frank to dispose of the body.

Chief Lanford and Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, continue to express their belief in the absolute truth of the latest story of the negro, although he admittedly uttered a series of lies and misstatements and perjured himself in two other affidavits before he signed the one which the authorities now believe.

DEAD YOUTH IDENTIFIED.

ANNISTON, ALA., June 17.—The youth killed at the Union passenger station here last Friday has been identified as Roy Malden. His brother came to Anniston from Atlanta and has carried the body to that city for interment.

"Atlanta's Success Due to Its People's Progressiveness"

Robert S. Sharp, who until March 4 was chief postoffice inspector of the United States, paid a high compliment to Atlanta before leaving for an Eastern tour Tuesday afternoon.

"Every one who knows anything at all knows Atlanta is always on the job," Mr. Sharp said. "The city is wide awake, and its civic organizations never overlook an opportunity to advertise it and boost it as a commercial center and home location. It is one of the best cities in the country, and its success is due to the progressiveness of its people."

Mr. Sharp was an appointee of President Taft. After the last national election he tendered his resignation to take effect March 4, the date of President Wilson's inauguration.

Red Sox Win First Game From Tigers

BOSTON, MASS., June 17.—This being Bunker Hill Day in the city of Boston, the Red Sox celebrated by defeating the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 4, in a morning game.

Moseley pitched moderately good ball, and though his support was erratic, he held the Tigers safe after the third inning.

The score by innings: R. H. E.

Detroit . . . .110 000 002—4 6 3
Boston . . . .102 112 00*—7 10 2

Batteries: Zamloch and McKee, Moseley and Carrigan. Umpires—Egan and Evans.

Illinois Suffragists To Celebrate July 4

CHICAGO, June 17.—The mammoth suffrage demonstration to have been held within 24 hours after Governor Dunne signs the bill enfranchising women will be held in Chicago on July 4. The measure will become a law on July 1.

Miss Jane Addams will return from Budapest, where she is representing this State at the suffrage conference, and suffragettes from every county in the State will take part in a big parade.

Leader of Madero Death Squad in U. S.

MOBILE, ALA., June 17.—Captain G. Giaomeneodia, an officer of the Mexican army, who is supposed to have been in charge of the squad that killed the late President Francisco Madero, of Mexico, and who was afterward hounded and made his escape, is in Mobile trying to make his way to Mexico again.

Giaomeneodia is stopping at the leading hotel and seems supplied with money. He came here from Cuba. Numerous inquiries have been made concerning him.

B. Sanders Walker's Widow Gets $50,149

MACON, GA., June 17.—There will be no contest over the payment of the $232,000 insurance carried by the late B. Sanders Walker. This was indicated to-day when the Union Central paid Mrs. Walker a check for $50,149.50. This is the first of the large policies carried by Walker to be paid. It was taken out last December, and a premium of $1,200 was all that had been paid on it.

It is announced that policies for $81,000 and $60,000 will also be paid this week.

Prefers Husband as Her Platonic Friend

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—Mrs. Joseph Lander Eastland, wife of the Venezuelan Consul at San Francisco, and a society leader there, who is suing for divorce at San Diego, today said:

"I hope to restore through divorce the beautiful friendship which my husband and I lost in marriage. That's why I'm suing him now."

Falls 20 Feet; Legs And Arms Broken

H. G. Hall was injured seriously when he fell from a 20-foot telephone pole at East Point Monday afternoon. Hall was engaged in splicing telephone cables. The bones of his legs and arms were broken and he suffered internal injuries.

Hall was taken to the Georgian Hospital by the auto ambulance of Greenberg & Bond Company.

SCORES DEAD FROM HEAT WAVE IN NORTH

Weather Forecasters Predict Continued Hot Spell Throughout Country—Atlanta 90.

Hot and dry weather is the forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday.

The thermometer reached 90 Tuesday and is due to repeat Wednesday. It was 92 Monday and day before.

"But even at that Atlanta has no right to complain," said Forecaster Von Herrmann Tuesday. "Chicago had 98 degrees of heat yesterday. Baltimore had 98. Louisville, St. Louis and Washington suffered 96 degrees of heat. Atlanta is lucky with only 92 Monday and two degrees less Tuesday."

The mercury mark never was as high as 98 in Atlanta in June except on three occasions—June 30, 1890; June 2, 1898, and June 4, 1911.

Although Monday was the hottest day of the summer, the night brought alleviating temperature when the thermometer dropped to 69.

"The outlook is for fair weather and continued warm," Mr. Von Herrmann said.

No storms are reported anywhere; hence there will be no rain.

12 Die in Two Days From Heat in Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Three more deaths were recorded in Chicago today from the heat. This brought the total for two days to twelve. There were few prostrations to-day relief having reached the city in a cool breeze off Lake Michigan.

7 Die From Excessive Heat in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—While yesterday was the hottest day recorded here since July 3, 1911, to-day is expected to far exceed it. The thermometer registered 83 in the shade at 8 o'clock and some thermometers at street levels recorded as high as 95.

Seven deaths have resulted from the heat so far.

Death List Totals 4 in New York.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The heat casualty list was four dead and more than a score prostrated up to noon to-day. Relief finally came in the shape of a cool northwest breze.

At noon the thermometer stood at 85, but the heat was not felt so keenly as yesterday. The weather bureau promised a break in the wave to-morrow.

Showers to Relieve East and Lake Region.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Widely scattered thundershowers this afternoon promise to bring some relief for sweltering residents of the Middle Atlantic States and the upper Ohio Valley, according to the weather bureau.

Slightly lower temperatures are predicted for to-night and Wednesday in the Middle Atlantic States, Southern New England, upper Ohio Valley and the southern portions of the lake region.

Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River there will be little change in temperature and clear skies will prevail during the next 36 hours.

Forecast Until 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Georgia: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; not so warm in East and Central portions Wednesday.

North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee: Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Louisiana: Fair in northern; showers in southern portion to-night or Wednesday.

East Texas: Scattered showers to-night or Wednesday.

West Texas: Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Burglar Fires at Couple in Bed as Man Yells at Him

Firing two shots, then leaping out the window, taking sash and all with him, was the reply a negro burglar gave to the demand, "What are you doing in here?" by A. H. Hall, of 14 Markham Street, when he discovered the burglar in his room early Tuesday morning.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Mr. Hall was awakened by a noise. He found the negro standing near the foot of his bed. He did not have a pistol near and yelled at the negro, who replied with two shots. Both struck the bed, narrowly missing the heads of Mr. and Mrs. Hall.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Four prominent Japanese are in Washington in pursuance of an inquiry to ascertain the real feeling in the United States regarding the relations between Japan and America, with special reference to the California land legislation.

During their stay in Washington the visitors will seek conferences with some of the higher officials of the Government as well as with members of Congress.

Burns Finds Woman Who Lifted $60,000

ROME, June 17.—W. J. Burns has located Mrs. Antonio Musica, wife of the head of the hair importing firm of New York. She has been shamming serious illness and hence has not been arrested by the Italian police.

She feared arrest because a complicity with her husband in fleecing a Naples bank out of $60,000.

"Hoboes" to Publish Newspaper for Clan

CHICAGO, June 17.—The International Brotherhood Welfare Association, Local No. 2, of which "Millionaire Hobo" J. Eads How is leader, will issue a journal for hoboes describing doings of the clan throughout the country.

The association announces the policy of The Hobo News will be socialistic and show the public that the "hobo" is the product of the present social system.

Bryan to Carry His Lunch in a Basket

NEW YORK, June 17.—Secretary Bryan will carry a lunch basket to his desk in the State Department like any other workingman.

This basket will contain:

One bunch white radishes.
One man's size bottle of grape juice.
Three whole wheat biscuits.
And a piece of chewing gum.

Mrs. Astor to Visit Vincent at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., June 17.—For the first time in five years Mrs. Astor and her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, will come to Beechwood, the Astor residence here, as guests for the summer of her son Vincent.

Vincent will bring his mother and sister from New York on his yacht Noma after their arrival from England.

Roosevelt May Take 2-Year World Trip

NEW YORK, June 17.—When Colonel Roosevelt goes to the Argentine Republic on a lecture trip in the fall, he may extend it to a trip around the world. That is the rumor going about.

If the Colonel takes the trip, he will not return until late in the fall of 1915, which is not many months before the time when candidates will be selected for the Presidency in 1916.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

MILITANTS' CHIEF NEXT SUFFRAGE MARTYR

Mrs. Pankhurst in Desperate Condition After Second Release Following Hunger Strikes.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—A verdict of guilty was returned this afternoon against the six militant suffragette leaders and one male adherent.

LONDON, June 17.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the union, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday for the second time since being sentenced to three years for conspiracy, because of illness brought on by a hunger strike, was reported to-day to be in a serious condition.

So ill is Mrs. Pankhurst said to be from self-starvation that defendants in Old Bailey Court predicted she would be the second "martyr" of the "cause."

A society event was made out of the final day of the trial of the six militant suffragette leaders and male adherent, all charged with malicious destruction of property, in Old Bailey Court.

A great throng of fashionably dressed women struggled with militants and non-militants for seats. Among those present were Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Premier, and Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

The defendants were allowed to address the court in their own behalf, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the "business agents" of the Women's Social and Political Union, made an impassioned and dramatic appeal.

In conclusion she raised her fists above her head and shouted: "If I have got to die to get the vote, then I am willing to die right now."

All R. R. Scales To Be Inspected by U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—As a result of complaints from shippers as to the weights charged for by railroads the Federal Bureau of Standards expects to begin, soon after July 1, the inspection of railroad scales, starting with Eastern roads.

The railroads annually collect approximately $2,200,000,000 from the shippers of the country on scales which belong to and are operated entirely by the roads, and over which neither the shipper nor the Government has any control of any information as to the correctness of the scales.

Slayer Fights Posse All Night; Kills Self

FRANKLIN, PA., June 17.—After holding a Sheriff's posse at bay all night, Edward Batholomew, 60 years old, slashed his throat with a razor early this morning in an old shanty in which he had barricaded himself.

Bartholomew yesterday afternoon quarreled with Sam Crowther superintendent of Dicks & Co. Crowther fled, but Bartholomew caught him. Laborers and farm hands, cowed with fear, looked on while the superintendent begged for his life. The angry man, deaf to his pleadings, shot him through the head and took refuge in the shanty.

Hermit's $20,000 Is Claimed by Cousin

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., June 17.—Eli Brown, of Benjaminville, left today for Eaton, Ohio, to claim an estate of $20,000 left by his cousin, Benjamin Bourne, a hermit who was slain recently.

Brown was the nearest known relative of the Ohio bachelor.

Public Aids Slain Deputy's Family

Yancey Fund Is Growing Steadily

Widow and Children in Dire Need

DAVE YANCEY, MARTYR TO DUTY, who was hacked to death by a crazed negro thief he had attempted to capture. A destitute family survives him. A fund has been started for their aid and you are asked to help.

Plea Made for Helpless Ones Left by Martyr to Duty. Slayer Dies.

Atlanta's generosity is beginning to flow in a deep, broad stream toward the little home of the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who was slain by a crazed negro Monday.

The contributions are small, but they are coming in from all over the city. Those who knew the brave deputy have mingled their small sums with those who did not in a universal endeavor to repay to the bereaved family that which it lost.

The Georgian's fund for Yancey is mounting upward, slowly but steadily, as Atlanta realizes the debt which it owes.

Atlanta will do its duty. This city will stand forth and meet the vast obligation which it contracted when it sent its servant to his death while preserving peace.

Little Boy Among Donors.

Out in the lonely little cottage on the Jonesboro road the widow and six children of Court Deputy Yancey will thank their creator that their husband and father served such a generous and noble master.

Touching among the contributions which have been received was that sent in by a little boy. The amount was $1 and the note accompanying it stated that the donor was "a little kid just like those who have lost their daddy."

Contributions have also been started by the police and detective departments of Atlanta, Headed by the names of Police Chief Beavers and Detective Chief Lanford, the list of contributions coming in from the police is constantly growing as the officers of

Needs More Detectives to Cope With Situation, He Thinks. Wants Women Sleuths.

Chief of Detectives Lanford, declaring a wave of crime is sweeping Atlanta, Tuesday announced his intention to appeal for six more detectives that his department may better cope with the situation. He said he expected to take up the matter at once with Chief of Police Beavers.

Chief Lanford will ask for at least two women detectives. Like Chief Beavers, he believes women sleuths would be able to do effective work in trailing of certain criminals.

"The wave of crime in Atlanta literally has swamped the detective department, and we are sorely in need of extra men," said Chief Lanford. "The number of hold-ups, burglaries, thefts and other crimes is so great that we are unable to properly handle all cases. Six extra men would put the department in much betetr shape. We need them at once."

As to the proposed women detectives, the Chief said:

"I think at least two women detectives would be valuable to the department. There are certain cases in which the yimght do better work than a man. Of course, we would have to be careful and pick the right kind of women. I intend to discuss this proposition thoroughly with Chief Beavers."

PROSPERITY IN SOUTH HERE TO STAY

Striking confirmation of the truth of the reports about the solidity of the financial situation of the South is furnished to-day in the following dispatch to The Georgian:

LOUISVILLE, June 17.—That the South is enjoying a period of great prosperity is indicated by the earnings of her railroad systems. The report of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad shows that the gross earnings for the fiscal year, which ends July 1, will show an increase of more than $3,000,000 over the same period last year.

The statement of the Southern Railway, whose fiscal year ends July 1, shows that the gross earnings to the first week in June have been $64,439,404, an increase of the same period last year of $4,589,377.

This makes it certain that, for the current fiscal year, these two great railraod systems of the South will show increases in earnings over last year that will exceed $7,500,000.

Also, James J. Hill, the empire builder, declares in an interview in The Georgian to-day that the pessimism of Wall Street is not well founded; and he points out that the United States will derive $10,000,000,000 of new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum to exceed the world's gold production for ten years.

The Georgian during the past week published interviews with many business men of Atlanta, and on Sunday The Sunday American published an elaborate interview with Asa Candler, in which they all declared that the financial situation in the South is strong, and they warned against the pessimistic writers of Wall Street.

Hill Says All Is Well.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 17.—James J. Hill, who is attending the convention of the New York State Bankers' Association here, has taken keen interest in recent Wall Street developments. Speaking of the general financial situation, he said to a correspondent:

"What is the matter with Wall Street anyway? Are they going crazy there? Every one is as blue as indigo, and half the people do not know what they are blue about. All that people have to do in times like these is keep a clear head and avoid getting rattled; then everything will come out all right.

Money Hard to Get.

"Yes, I know money is hard to get, I alluded some time ago to the difficulty the railroads were experiencing in obtaining loans at a time when time-money rates were apparently easy. Selling short-term note issues is apt to occasion inconvenience when the notes happen to mature in a disagreeable money market. But the railroads have probably done the best they could do in a situation where it has been difficult to sell bonds, even in cases where the borrowing road has had the security to offer.

"The money market is a good deal of a problem, but it will work out all right.

"Why, those nervous fellows in Wall Street, who get worked up because money rates are going up or because the stock market is going down, ought to realize the United States will derive ten billion dollars new wealth out of the ground this year, or a sum which exceeds the world's gold production for ten years.

"I want to say, too, that the Washington situation is all right. To hear some people talk, you would suppose that the Administration was bent upon upsetting things. That is perfect foolishness."

POWER MILLIONS ARE WASTED IN GEORGIA

Engineer Declares City Could Build Plant to Furnish Electricity to All for $1,000,000.

Warren E. Hall, district engineer of the United States Geological Survey, located in the Federal Building, Tuesday declared that approximately 6,000,000-horsepower of water power is going to waste per minute within a radius of 250 miles of Atlanta.

"The water power available to Atlanta is worth more than all the coal we can get," declared Mr. Hall, "because the water will be here when the coal is gone.

"None of this water is too far away to bring to Atlanta," continued Mr. Hall. "For approximately $1,000,000 a power plant could be built by this city which would furnish lights for the entire community for all purposes.

"Enough power can be developed to run all cotton mills, mines and manufacturing plants that locate here. I estimate that within the next fifty years the bulk of this great amount of wasted power will be taken up, harnessed and put in practical use.

Tremendous Profits.

"Already are the great power companies of this State reaping an enormous profit from their investment in water power plants. The Central Georgia Power Company has a large power plant. Columbus has three large ones. The Southern Power Company in North and South Carolina has five plants. The Alabama Power Company is now preparing to build several tremendous power stations. The Tennessee Power Company in Chattanooga has two mammoth plants and is preparing to build a third of greater proportions than the other two combined on the Tennessee River.

"The consumption of these plants I name does not include the amount of power that is being used by the hundreds of small corporations which have their own plants to supply their own properties.

"The total power consumed by all of the power companies in this State does not total 1,000,000 horsepower. Think what that means and how much power yet remains undeveloped. Enough power could in a short time be brought to Atlanta to furnish electric current for a score of electric railways which could network the entire State."

"Even then there would be an abundance of power left for the people who want it. The water power rights are by no means all bought up by the big companies, and this is something that can not be said of the coal lands or of any other sources of power."

Survey Measures Power.

The United States Government Geological Survey prepares data free for all who are interested in promoting power plants. Charts showing the average rainfall, the fall of water per second to every stream, the exact percentage of power obtainable and the horsepower per second from any given area, together with many other important facts and extensive data, are furnished to power companies.

Mr. Hall explained that at present his appropriation is limited to a total of $4,000 per year, which is insufficient fully to demonstrate to the public in general just what our natural resources in water power really amount to. Mr. Hall thinks that $40,000 would be more in proportion to what other States which have not the resources that Georgia has are spending along this line.

"The Western States, California more particularly, subscribe to the Government's appropriation for the geological survey. These States have not nearly as much to boast of as has Georgia. The great pity is we are a little slower to see it here," said Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall was born in Atlanta and is a graduate of Georgia Tech. He is a young man and has had charge of this department for about a year. He is much enthused over his work—in fact, so much so that it aggravates him to see a natural resource of such great importance as the water power of this State lying dormant.

State Commerce Men May Meet in Atlanta

C. J. Haden, chairman of the committee on organizing a State Chamber of Commerce, has called a meeting for Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The committee will consider the advisability of inviting representatives from commercial bodies all over the State to come here for a conference.

SCORES HAVE GIVEN TO YANCEY MARTYR FUND---HAVE YOU?

Tuesday saw the beginning of the flow of silver from the pockets of generous Atlanta citizens into The Georgian's fund for the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who met his death at the hands of a crazed negro Monday while doing his duty.

Hundreds of persons are opening their hearts and their pocketbooks for the bereaved family. The contributions are small, still they are coming in in great numbers.

Atlanta is not half-hearted in doing for those who have done for it. There is a home to be paid for—$900 is due on it—in order that the bereft Yancey family can continue to live; and there is also a poultry business to be established on this farm home.

Trifle in Gate City.

To the rich and prosperous Gate City such things are a mere trifle. To the widow of Dave Yancey and her six orphaned children, however, they spell everything that the future holds for them.

Following is the list of those who have subscribed to The Georgian's fund and to other funds. Examine it, reader, and see if your name is there. If it is not, make haste to put it there with a quarter or a half dollar, or more if you can spare it, and surely you can, for the cause is a noble one:

Those Who Have Given.

FUND IS GROWING FOR DEPUTY'S FAMILY

the law step forward to aid one of their own kind who met a fate which they themselves are ever in danger of meeting.

Eugene Watson, the negro who slew the brave deputy and devastated his home, died at the Grady Hospital Monday night. Death despoiled the law of its duty.

In a small, bare cottage on the Jonesboro road, where, until yesterday, a family had struggled hard for an existence and good fortune had never smiled, to-day the utter hopelessness of the poverty is emphasized.

Through the night a widow, broken in health and spirit, and six children, none of them able to work, knelt by the form of the murdered Dave Yancey, court deputy, weeping for the life that was sacrificed to duty and for the dark days ahead when there will be no one to provide.

The fate that had never been kind to Yancey was more than cruel to him yesterday when it called him to pursue Eugene Watson, negro desperado.

The hand that the arresting officer depended upon to accurately and steadily hold his revolver shook and trembled in the throes of a nervous disease with which he had been afflicted since he was a boy.

He knew as he ran after the negro that if it came to a fight it would be the merest accident if his aim were true. Three times he fired at the negro approaching him with the knife. One shot was at close range, but his hand veered widely to the right and the revolver was snatched from him before he could fire again.

Bad Luck Pursued Him.

Once or twice in his life Yancey had prospered. Shortly after he came to Atlanta he was a bailiff for a Justice of the Peace. He earned money then to take care of his wife and children. He held the position a short while, when the justice died. For several months he was unable to find employment.

About four years ago he secured a position as a court bailiff under Sheriff Mangum. His salary depended on the number of days he worked, which was never over two weeks each month. On other days he would substitute as a deputy and serve subpenas. During the summer months, when court was not in session, his income was practically nothing.

On the day he was stabbed to death he had virtually secured the position as a regular bailiff in the court of Judge Calhoun. It would have paid him $100 monthly. This news was to be a surprise to his wife and children when he returned home.

Lived Life of Farmer.

Although he lived in the shadow of a great city the life of Yancey and his family was that of the farmer. About a year ago he secured the place on the Jonesboro Road, on which he had made two payments. Nine hundred dollars are still to be paid. He called it a truck farm, but the few acres were almost barren, and it was with the greatest difficulty that enough vegetables were raised to supply the needs of the family.

About six months ago his oldest daughter, Lois, was taken seriously ill and had to be taken to the hospital. It cost Yancey more than $400, and during the time his family was often without food.

He had lived at the house on the Jonesboro Road for about a year, but he lived in that section of the county the fifteen years since he came here from Grayson, in Gwinnett County.

He was raised on a farm, and when he secured enough money to make the first payment on his little home with the few acres of untilled soil he had hopes of making it a productive truck farm and later acquiring more land.

Family Worked the Farm.

His wife and children tilled the soil. They had no horse to draw a plow and the work was difficult. From early morning until late in the evening Mrs. Yancey worked in the field and directed the work of the children.

Yancey usually came home at about 6 o'clock every evening. As he trudged up the long hill from the end of the car line his wife and children left the field and came to the house to prepare the scant supper. By 8 o'clock in the evening the house was in darkness and the family asleep.

Only when little Lois was in the hospital did any of them venture into the city. Usually they walked the entire way. They saw little of their neighbors except an occasional conversation as one would pass the house in the early morning, or after work in the evening.

Where they have lived and struggled for an existence together Mrs. Yancey and her children want to continue to live. They declined to consider returning to Gwinnett County, where Yancey's relatives live.

Outlook Is Gloomy.

There is some hope of the little farm being made successful, enough so to pay the monthly installments on the home, and there is some possibility of Mrs. Yancey's idea of a small poultry farm becoming a reality, but these are things that are almost out of the question this year.

The farm is an absolute failure this season. It is impossible to start a poultry farm without money, and unless money can be secured the home will have to be given up, and the family, more destitute than ever, return to worse conditions in Gwinnett County.

Mail Order Houses Accused As Menace

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Small country merchants of the United States are gradually being ruined by the monstrous mail order houses of the country, according to statements made in a speech before the House by Representative William H. Hinebaugh, of Illinois. Mr. Hinebaugh said that the distribution of commodities in the country districts was rapidly being confined to billion dollar concerns.

Mrs. Philip Hichborn To Return to Capital

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mrs. Philip Hichborn, Jr., the former Washington society belle who eloped to Europe with Horace Wylie, will return to the National Capital, it is rumored.

Mrs. Hichborn and Wylie returned to Washington from their first elopement and a reconciliation was brought about between Wylie and his wife. They disappeared again and went to Europe.

Philip Hichborn, Jr., killed himself three months after filing suit for divorce.

THE GREAT HEART OF ATLANTA has never yet failed to respond to a worthy case of need, once that case is properly brought to its attention. Amid all the magnificent prosperity of the Capital City of the South the voice of distress has never gone unheeded. That voice is appealing to Atlanta now, in the most pitiful, heart-stirrin gand terrible of tragedies—a tragedy that touches the heights and depths o fhuman emotion.

Six children, a wife and a mother lie prostrated in anguish while the man on whom they relied for the bare sustenance of life is cold in death, the victim of a maniac's murderous knife. The man is Dave Yancey, martyr to duty.

Will Atlanta listen to the silent plea of his loved ones? Will the great Capital of Georgia extend the practical sympathy of a generous heart to those terribly bereft women and children?

The Atlanta Georgian believes it will and has started a fund. Everyone is asked to aid. No contribution is too small, and from the responses that have already been secured success is in sight. Do not delay. Send your subscription to the Dave Yancey Fund of The Georgian and it will be acknowledged in the columns of this paper.

MANY CAPITAL CASES REVERSED

State Supreme Court Bench Upholds Lower Courts in Six Out of Fifty-six Instances.

Fifty-six capital cases were presented to the Supreme Court during the year of 1912, and of this number but six were reversed. Of the six cases sent back for a new trial, one man was freed, while practically the same verdict was returned in each of the other cases which have been tried. This information is contained in the report of Attorney General Felder, which is just nearing completion.

The six cases reversed were as follows:

J. Worley, Chatham County, given a life sentence for the murder of a negro. Worley and another man were charged with hiring an automobile from a negro chauffeur, and while in a lonely part of the country killed him. On his second trial he was acquitted.

Jeses Beach, Chatham, life sentence for murder, was granted new trial.

Will Thompson, Jefferson County, sentenced to be hanged, granted new trial and same sentence received on second trial.

Of the 56 cases brought before the Supreme Court twenty were of men who were given the death penalty, and most of whom have already paid the penalty.

Jerome Jones, Labor Editor, Recovering

The condition of Jerome Jones, editor of The Atlanta Journal of Labor, who has been ill for the past three weeks at his residence, 219 Oak Street, was reported much better Tuesday morning.

Mr. Jones caught a severe cold while addressing an open-air meeting in Chattanooga and complications resulted.

LYNN, IN APPEAL, RAPS GRAND JURY

Sentenced to Life, Declares That Entire Procedure of Indictment Jury Was Illegal.

Charging unlawful admission of evidence and the unlawful sitting of the grand jury at the time of the return of indictment, and other unconstitutional acts, S. P. New and George B. Davis, attorneys for Alonzo L. Lynn, will carry his case to the United States Court. Lynn was convicted and given a life sentence by the Dublin Superior Court for the killing of Frank M. Hightower, 82 years old, and, on appeal to the Supreme Court, the decision of the lower court was sustained.

The case was peculiar in that the person who confessed to committing the deed was freed. This was Mrs. Lynn, who declared that she had killed Hightower after he had made insulting proposals.

The State charged that the killing was the result of a conspiracy, and displayed several letters which had been written to Hightower inviting him to come out to the Lynn home and obtain kindling.

A dictograph statement, alleged to have been made in Lynn's cell, was part of the evidence used by the State.

Fellow Deputies to Act as Pallbearers At Yancey Funeral

The funeral of Dave Yancey, the court deputy stabbed to death by a negro Monday, will be held at the family residence on Jonesboro Road Wednesday at noon. Interment will be in Forest Park Cemetery, just across the County line in Clayton County. One of the Yancey children is buried in this cemetery.

A squad of deputies will escort the body to the cemetery. Hundreds of friends and admirers of the dead officer, who gave his life in the performance of his duty, will attend the funeral.

The pallbearers will be Sheriff C. W. Mangum and Deputies J. F. Owen, J. P. Miner, J. M. Suttles, C. A. Haygood and E. T. Stanley.

ATLANTA'S BOOKS ARE WELL KEPT, SAY EXPERTS

But Mild Criticisms Are Made of Systems in Few Departments by Special Audit.

A report of a special audit of all the city departments by the Audit Company of the South was made to Mayor Woodward Tuesday. But mild criticisms of any of the departments are made and the general business system of the city is praised, especially the work of the Comptroller's department. Mayor Woodward said he would transmit the report to the Council Finance Committee, which authorized the audit.

"We found the records of the Comptroller's office for the year 1912 in better shape than for preceding years," states the report.

"In our opinion the work of this office can and should be simplified and also amplified.

"One of the things to be approved about the City of Atlanta is that all collections are made by one department, the Tax Collector.

Tax Map Taken Up.

"The question of a proper tax map for the Tax Assessors should be considered.

"Whereas we found all moneys properly accounted for in the Marshal's office yet the accounting methods are deficient and should be materially improved.

"It is our pleasure to report the accounts of the Police Department are better kept than any other of the public accounts. But much useless work can be eliminated.

"The cost of forage in the sanitary and consiruction departments seems high. It might be well for the city to receive bids for the feeding and caring for the live stock of these two departments.

Construction Department Lax.

"The records of the construction department for the years 1911 and 1912 do not appear to have been as well kept as for the year 1910. We understand this has been due to various changes in the office.

"Examination of the water department shows it to be well managed. The accounting methods should be revised.

"The bookkeeping of the park department can be greatly simplified. Cyclorama receipts are not properly safeguarded.

"The statements transmitted herewith show the city to be in first-class financial condition. The city has a borrowing ability now, under the State Constitution, of approximately $6,000,000.

"In our opinion, the city and county governments should be consolidated."

The report goes into the details of the various departments, concluding with the following tabulated statement of Atlanta's financial condition:

BIRMINGHAM AND ATLANTA BURY HATCHET

Ideas for Co-operative Work for Better South Propounded by Leaders of Both Cities.

The time-worn tomahawk, raised from time immemorial almost in the little war of rivalry between the Gate City and the Magic City, otherwise known as Atlanta and Birmingham, has been buried at last—at least an informal treaty of peace has been made verbally, pending completion of plans whereby the civic bodies of the two cities will eventually get together, not only for a bigger and better Atlanta and a bigger and better Birmingham, but for a bigger and better South.

Wilmer Moore, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, and "Big Chief" Oscar Turner, as he is familiarly known in Birmingham, who came to Atlanta Monday night, are the peace envoys.

Mr. Moore and Mr. Turner, the one president and the other the "livest wire" of two of the largest civic bodies in the South, are of one accord—they want to see a spirit of co-operation exist between the two cities as a substitue for the present tendency to pull apart, or, rather, the failure to pull together.

Moore's Ideas.

Mr. Moore has a number of good ideas to which he gave expression freely when seen Tuesday morning.

"I think the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham may well get together and find out more about each other than they know now to good advantage," said he. "When we become firmly established in our new home I hope to see the inauguration of a plan whereby the two bodies may extend certain courtesies to each other, such as exchange of visits when Atlantans are in Birmingham and vice versa.

"There is a great deal more to be done also; for instance, the 'exchange of speakers' idea is a very good one. Anything we may do along this line is only a small part of a larger plan whereby the people of the Southern cities may learn all about the South—what each city is doing, in other words."

Mr. Turner, who called on Mr. Moore Monday afternoon, also had much to say. He wants to inaugurate a "system" whereby the civic bodies of Atlanta and Birmingham will exchange speakers, among other things. In this way Mr. Turner says he believes the two cities can learn many valuable things about each other and at the same time create a spirit of "pull-together" which will result in a bigger Atlanta and a bigger Birmingham.

"Going one step farther, the Birmingham "live wire" hopes to see perfected a league or association of civic bodies which shall pull together for a bigger and more prosperous South.

'Get Fresh Air' Dan Carey's Main Happiness Hint

Tells Tads How to Enjoy Life and Keep Health

Happy group at play in Park.

"Direct their energies in right direction and they can't go wrong," Is Carey's theory.

"People of Atlanta Not Yet Awake to the Value of Playground," Says Director.

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, whose bright smile and jolly manner have marked him as the possessor of the true secret of happiness, has given The Georgian some hints of happiness to children that were inspired by the opening of the playgrounds Monday.

Viewing a throng of children at play in Joyner Park playground, he denied that there was any secret to happiness.

"There is a composite picture of happiness," he declared. "Is there anything more simple or natural? Look at their beaming faces. Listen to their spontaneous laughter and shouts. My hints to happiness to children would be something like these:

"Get out in the sunshine, in the fresh air, and there won't be so much cause to complain at the heat of summer.

"Drink lots of water. You see our sanitary drinking founts in the playgrounds provide flowing water that children may drink as fairies.

"There is a composite picture of happiness," he declared. "Is there anything more simple or natural? Look at their beaming faces. Listen to their spontaneous laughter and shouts. My hints to happiness to children would be something like these:

"Get out in the sunshine, in the fresh air, and there won't be so much cause to complain at the heat of summer.

"Get children together, then have a director over them to see that all their outbursts are in a wholesome direction.

Appeal to Imagination.

"Inspire activities and morals in them by getting them interested in specific things.

"You seldom have to even scold children when they are treated right, but they have lots of pent-up energy which must be directed rightly or they will go wrong.

"Teach them to love the flag of our country. They demand things that appeal to their imagination.

"When they are tired at night from a long day of play let them sleep lots."

Mr. Carey explained that providing happiness for children was a business just like running a store, and that it required the same sort of systematic thought from grown-ups.

While he was talking in his office the telephone rang.

"You want me to say something funny about the birth of the lion cubs at the zoo for your paper?" he asked.

"That is like a newspaper man," he continued. "His question is typical of the attitude of most people to parks and playgrounds. But the spirit of humor and play are not quite so spontaneous. There is work and study back of both."

Value of Grounds Not Realized.

Then he revealed a copy of a letter he had written to a city official explaining why the number of playgrounds had been reduced this year and touching on the object of playground work in general.

"The people of Atlanta have not yet realized exactly what the playgrounds mean," he had written.

Heretofore Atlanta has operated its grounds merely as a place for the children of the neighborhood to play and no attention has been paid to the more serious side of the work. One member of the park board said he could see no advantage to the city in hiring a young woman to act as nurse for the neighborhood.

Recorder's Removal Rouses Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 17.—Throughout the city to-day discussions have been warm anent the mass meeting held Sunday, which packed the Jefferson Theater to protest against the summary removal of Clement Wood as Recorder by the city commission, and to comment on the city commission in general, as well as the incidents connected with the alleged "railroading out of the city" of an organizer who came here to form a union of motormen and conductors of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company.

So successful was the meeting that White Gibson, attorney for the labor unions, to-day announced that another would be held.

GEORGIA CREATES ALUMNI BUREAU

New Department Will Do Publicity Work of University—Eugene Black Orator.

ATHENS, June 17.—This is alumni day of the University of Georgia commencement week.

At a largely attended meeting of the Alumni Association this morning Fred T. Myers, of Pensacola, was selected as the alumni orator for next year. The class of 1908 decided to establish an alumni library fund, to be used in purchasing new books for the library. A tribute of respect to Rev. M. J. Coker, who had died since the last meeting, was adopted.

The board of trustees to-day created an alumni bureau and publicity department of the university, and appropriated sufficient funds to maintain it. A compilation will be made of the alumni and a general publicity department established.

The alumni address to-day was delivered by Eugene Black, of Atlanta.

Juniors Deliver Orations.

This afternoon the junior orations were delivered and the sophomore cup was presented. The junior speakers to-day were: Victor Victor, Atlanta; D. E. Macamy, Dalton; G. Harrison, Atlanta; C. I. Funkenstein, Athens; L. Michael, Athens; T. T. Lew, China.

The law hop takes place to-night.

At the prize drill of the cadet regiment Private John Nicholson, of Athens, won the medal for the best drilled man, while Company B, captained by Z. S. Cowan, of Atlanta, won the company prize.

Military Appointments.

Appointments in the military department for the next session were announced as follows:

Bentley Chappelle, Columbus, and S. T. Brewton, Claxton, cadet majors; L. Michael, Athens; C. Pope, Athens; J. T. Hines, Augusta; J. B. Conyers, Cartersville; R. H. Patterson, Athens; Frank Cheney, Athens; H. H. Whelchel, Comer; J. T. Collins, Jackson; R. D. Short, Athens, and J. H. Moss, Athens, company captains.

In the champion debate the Demosthenian Society triumphed over Phi Kappa on the Philippines question. The winning debaters were C. C. Davis, of Marietta, and V. E. Adams, of Covington.

Legislative Bribery Cases Up for Trial

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 17.—William S. Reymour Edwards, candidate for the United States Senate before the last West Virginia Legislature, will attend the trial of S. U. G. Rhodes and six other members of the Legislature indicted for accepting alleged bribes to vote for Edwards. The trial will begin at Webster Springs to-morrow.

Edwards has been ill in a Baltimore hospital. He will be accompanied by his physician. He has been subpenaed to produce his checkbook at the trial.

Telephone Result of Bell's Teaching Deaf

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Addressing a graduation class of the Western High School, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, scientist, gave his memories of his own graduation from the Royal High School of Edinburgh, more than 50 years ago.

"My dream as a youth was to become a musician," declared Dr. Bell. "But the plans of us all went awry, and because some members of my family were deaf and dumb I became a teacher of the deaf. It was my study of the mechanics of speech that led to the invention of the telephone."

Three Debtors File Petitions in Court

Three voluntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed Tuesday in the United States District Court.

J. S. Saul, 383 Central Avenue, formerly a member of the bankrupt firm of Springer, Simon & Saul, submitted assets of $50 and liabilities amounting to $35,775.29.

William E. Bragg, Jr., submitted liabilities of $177.52, with no assets.

J. H. Dudley submitted liabilities of $299.45 and assets of $50, with conditional assets of $1,500 in a life insurance policy.

Doctor to Report On City's Milk Supply

Atlanta's milk supply will be discussed at a luncheon next Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Hotel. A report will be made by Dr. S. A. Visanska, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on milk supply.

B. M. Hood, director of the Chamber of Commerce division of health, will deliver an address. President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside at the luncheon.

Voliva Does Flip-flop On Woman Suffrage

ZION CITY, ILL., June 17.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to John Alexander Dowie, who said recently, "I hope the good Lord calls us all home before the women get into Congress," announced to-day that he was converted to the cause of suffrage. He is a full believer, he declared, in the right of women to vote.

The woman suffrage law in Illinois will increase the vote of Voliva's party in Zion City between 600 and 700 ballots.

Richmond Suit Submitted.

AUGUSTA.—Briefs have been submitted to the State Supreme Court in the case of the Richmond County Commission against the Reformatory Institute for the recovery of $66,000 which the county has advanced to the reformatory in recent years.

PAINTER ANALYSIS LOST IN TRANSIT

Coroner Refuses to Hold Inquest Until Report Is Received From Baltimore.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 17.—Up to noon to-day nothing had been heard from the package containing the analysis of the contents of the stomach of E. O. Painter, the fertilizer king, who was drowned here May 22. Coroner C. D. Abbott said this morning he had no knowledge of the whereabouts of the package, although he had received a telegram from Dr. Charles Glaser, of Johns Hopkins, Saturday, that the package had been mailed.

Dr. Glaser was to mail the package to the Coroner in care of the Barnett National Bank. Mr. Abbott said this morning he had ordered the analysis mailed in care of the bank in order that he might open it there in the presence of a number of witnesses.

Representatives of the Painter family have asked that the inquest be held without further delay, but Coroner Abbott has refused to take any steps until he receives the report of Dr. Glaser. He said this morning that if he did not receive the report by night he would wire Baltimore and have a tracer started for the package.

French Aviator Flies 1,600 Miles in 3 Laps

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 17.—Marcel G. Brindejone des Moullanis, French aviator, arrived here at noon to-day, having completed a 1,600-mile flight from Paris in three laps. The first was from Paris to Warsaw, with stop at Johannisthal, Germany; the second was from Warsaw to Dvinsk, and the third from Dvinsk to this city.

The last 300 miles were traveled in three and a half hours against a strong wind. The Russian Aero Club presented him with a silver cup.

NEWS JOTTINGS ABOUT TOWN

WOMAN SUICIDE AFTER SLAYING PHYSICIAN

Young Widow Plays Principal Role in Double Tragedy at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Dr. Guy O. Brinkley and Mrs. Eugene H. Whisnant are dead as the result of a double tragedy in the offices of Dr. Brinkley, a prominent young physician, late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Whisnant killed Dr. Brinkley and immediately committed suicide with a .32 caliber automatic revolver. She fell dead across the body of the slain physician with a bullet through her brain. She fired six shots at him, chasing him from room to room of his suite, the fifth and sixth bullets taking effect in the brain and heart. One more shot ended her own life.

It developed to-day that Mrs. Whisnant was infatuated with the physician. She is said to have declared she would kill any man she loved who refused to marry her. What took place between her and the physician is unknown. She left a note on her dresser, addressed to her mother, asking forgiveness for what she intended to do, but she did not say what her intentions were.

The woman's marriage to Whisnant was romantic. In 1906 he was suffering with typhoid fever in Charlotte and telegraphed her to come to him. She was married to him on his deathbed. After his death five days later she returned to her mother here.

That the murder was premeditated is shown by the fact that Mrs. Whisnant purchased bullets for her revolver yesterday and got the clerk to show her how to use the weapon.

Mrs. Whisnant was a member of a prominent South Georgia family and a talented musician. She was 37 years old. Dr. Brinkley was equally as prominent in Virginia, from which State he came to Savannah several years ago. He was 45.

Vacation Don'ts Are Offered By Expert

NEW YORK, June 17.—Health Commissioner Lederle has made public his annual "health hints for vacationists." He gives the following list of don'ts":

Don't drink bad well water or impure milk.

Don't eat food exposed to flies.

Don't let attractive scenery outweigh proper sanitary surroundings.

Don't neglect to be vaccinated against typhoid.

Don't wear heavy clothing.

Don't stay too long in the sun.

Don't indulge freely in alcoholic beverages.

U. S. Seeks to End $60,000,000 Hog Loss

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Stimulated to action by the $60,000,000 loss of last year as the result of hog cholera, the Department of Agriculture has determined to send out experts in an attempt to educate the farmers up to a point where the malady can be prevented. A serum which is preventive rather than curative will be put to use by the department.

Government agents will be sent out to co-operate with State veterinarians. An appropriation of $75,00 will become available July 1.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

As Governor Joseph M. Brown draws near the end of his term his mail grows heavier and heavier with letters of congratulation upon the record he has made in office.

Besides these missives by mail the Executive offices are daily crowded with callers, all bent upon expressing their good will and friendship to the retiring Governor.

The Governor is kept pretty busy thanking folks and assuring them of his appreciation of their evident interest in him, but upon the absorbing question of his future he remains as silent as the Sphinx.

There is a distinct impression abroad, however, that the Governor by no means intends disappearing from public view.

While he has made no statement as to his purpose in the game of politics hereafter, every day one hears in the hotel lobbies rumors of his intention to try for the United States Senate in next year's primaries.

Whether he elects to try for other honors or retire to dignified and unobtrusive private life, it is a generally accepted fact that Governor Brown has made a deep impression upon the people of Georgia as their Governor, and it is doubtful whether any Executive ever assembled a more devoted or loyal following.

The Governor's retiring message is about ready to transmit to the Legislature, and he is ready to turn over the affairs of his high office to his successor, John M. Slaton, at any moment.

It is said that one of the very first bills to go on the House calendar will be one providing the same amendments to the State prohibition laws as were provided in the late Tippins bill.

The impression is, however, that it will have a long, rough and rugged road to travel before it gets on the statute books, if it ever does.

The legislative program as tentatively mapped out, is as follows, immediately after the two Houses are called to order:

Wednesday, June 25, organization of the two Houses. Qualification of members and election of presiding officers.

Thursday, reception and reading of the retiring Governor's message.

Friday, canvassing of the State election returns and declaration of results.

Saturday, inauguration of the new Governor.

Monday, reception and reading of the new Governor's first message. Qualification of the new State House officers.

It is likely that a bill providing for the election of a Senator to succeed Senator Bacon will be introduced upon the first roll call of counties for the introduction of bills.

This will call for the first election of a Senator by the people to be held under the new Federal amendment. Senator Bacon will be named as his own successor without opposition.

While the percentage of inexperienced membership in the new House is about up to the average, it is a fact that the percentage of the new membership coming over from the last House is very small.

An unusual number of new members have had legislative experience all the way from four to ten years back, but not many immediately familiar faces will be seen when the House is called to order.

On the other hand, a very heavy percentage of membership in the last House has been transferred to the new Senate.

Most of the old floor leaders in both the last House and the last Senate will be missing from the new General Assembly.

For a few brief and glorious moments on Wednesday, June 25, Charles "Stump" Northen, Secretary of the Georgia Senate, will be the only duly and legally authorized presiding officer of the Senate and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of the State.

That's an awful weight of dignity and responsibility for "Stump" to have to stagger around under, even for a flitting and all-too-brief moment, but he will have to make out as best he may, nevertheless.

It is written in the Constitution that the Secretary of the late lamented Senate, and no one else, shall call the Senate to order and hold it tight under the lid until it has chosen a president.

"What I want to know is," said a well-known member of the new Legislature, discussing the situation today, "whether, in the event of a long deadlock in the Senate, and the possible resignation, death, or disqualification of the then Governor, 'Stump' Northen, wouldn't, by operation of law, become Acting Governor of the commonwealth?

"I declare, I rarely have had a problem to weigh so heavily upon me. There is not one chance in a million of its arising for solution, but just suppose it did? Wouldn't 'Stump' be stumped to know what on earth to do in the circumstances?

"Suppose the Senate never should elect a president, but remain in perpetual deadlock, the newly elected Governor could not qualify, of course. If 'Little Joe' should get mad, or disgusted, and quit, where would that leave 'Stump' Northen?

"To be sure, 'Stump' would be perfectly satisfactory to me as a Governor, but the thing that worries me is, How would 'Stump' himself like the job?"

When asked whether he had said that he would, in such a situation, accept the responsibilities of the Executive office, Secretary Northen declined either to affirm or deny the report.

PRINCESS WRITES AND ACTS MOVIE

Films Are Shown at Buckingham Palace After Being Censored By Queen Mary.

A report says Princess Mary wrote and took part in acting a sketch for a film, which was shown after a dinner party at the palace the other night. It is a humorous sketch, a five-character child's piece. The action is laid in a school room and the dining room of the palace, where the pictures were actually taken.

The Princess wrote the play a few months ago, but her mother, Queen Mary, refused to allow it to be played until she had read it, which she did only recently. She made several alterations and deletions in the Princess's MS. and struck out one character altogether, that of an irritable uncle, who in the Queen's opinion was too likely to be taken for the Kaiser, to be allowed to remain in the sketch.

Salvation Army Is Raising Picnic Fund For Mill Children

Members of the Atlanta post of the Salvation Army Monday began soliciting funds for an outing at Piedmont Park June 26 for 300 mill children. Under the direction of the Army the children will be taken to the park on special trolley cars and treated to a swim. Ice cream and other light refreshments will be provided for them.

The plan is to get the children who work in cotton mills and have no chance for real recreating such as the water and grass and sunshine at Piedmont Park will afford.

Away from the din of the mills they are to enjoy a day of wholesome freedom. And the Salvation Army officers report that they are receiving liberal contributions.

Judge Calls Court's Tail of Political Kite

CHICAGO, June 17.—In announcing his retirement from the bench, after thirteen years' service, Judge Charles S. Cutting said:

"Under the present system the judiciary is tied to the tail of the political kite."

SEGREGATION ACT READY FOR MAYOR

Ashley Ordinance Regulating the White and Negro Districts Is Passed by Council.

With the signature of Mayor Woodward, the Ashley race segregation ordinance will become a law. It provides that present conditions shall not be disturbed, but that in future a majority of the residents in any block in Atlanta shall determine whether the residents on the block shall be exclusively white or exclusively negro.

City Attorney James L. Mayson has given his opinion that the ordinance is constitutional.

The passage of the ordinance is the result of a long fight by Councilmen Claude L. Ashley and Albert Thomson, of the Fourth Ward, a part of whose ward is seriously troubled with negroes and whites living side by side.

The ordinance has been up for consideration for many months. Monday, on the motion of Alderman James W. Maddox, it was referred to a new committee of ten. Later in the meeting a motion to reconsider the action carried and the ordinance was passed.

Crematory Up To Aldermen; Mayor Says He Will Sign

Only the action of the Aldermanic Board is required to close the $260,000 crematory contract. The contract was approved by the lower branch of Council Monday afternoon and, after the action of the Aldermanic Board, Mayor Woodward has signified he will sign it.

The question of whether Atlanta is to have a municipal electric plant in conjunction with the crematory, as provided by the old contract, is a matter of doubt. Mayor Woodward's disapproval of a resolution asking for an option from the Destructor Company was overridden at the meeting, but Councilman W. G. Humphrey and several others supported the Mayor.

When it comes to putting up $100,000 for this plant, which will not be attempted until next year, the fight over a municipal electric power plant will be gone through again.

Parson Stuttered As He Married Them

CHICAGO, June 17.—The marriage license records of Cook County were cluttered to-day with the information that at Gary, Ind., Miss Hariloos Sitoogeorgopulos became Mrs. Eugene Constandinidou. The wedding ceremony was elaborate.

POLICE NET SET FOR 3 NEGRO BANDITS

Blacks Who Stabbed and Robbed Mail Clerk Believed Same Who Assaulted Franklin.

The police dragnet was thrown out Tuesday morning to capture the three negro highwaymen who stabbed Railway Mail Clerk W. S. Ware, of 82 West Baker Street, Monday night about 10 o'clock.

The police think the negroes are the trio who have terrorized pedestrians in various parts of the city for the past several weeks. They have connected Ware's assailants with the attempted robbery of Joseph Franklin, a groceryman, on Crumley Street between Washington and Pulliam, Sunday night, the description of one of the negroes given by Ware fitting that given by Franklin of one of the men who held him up.

Tuesday morning Ware was in a serious condition at Grady Hospital, where he was taken after he staggered into fire headquarters, but if no complications develop it is thought he will recover. He was stabbed twice. The knives inflicted a wound seven inches long across the back of his neck and another almost two inches deep in his right shoulder. Ware lost much blood during the encounter and Tuesday morning was so weak he could not talk.

Robbers Got Valuable Letters.

So far detectives have learned that six registered letters Ware was carrying from his train to the postoffice was all the booty the robbers got. Ware's watch and some money were in his pockets when he was taken to the hospital. Federal authorities probably will take a hand in the case Tuesday. They hope to trace the negroes by the stolen letters.

The attack on Ware was made within two blocks of Whitehall Street, almost in the heart of the downtown district. The police declare the robbery was extraordinarily bold. Ware has the mail run between Atlanta and Chattanooga on the Southern Railway, and it is his custom, each night when his train gets in to carry all registered mail to the postoffice in person instead of sending it by messenger. Monday night he is said to have noticed three negroes hanging around the mail car when he left the train, but paid no attention to them. He placed the letters in his inside coat pocket and started to the Federal Building, going no faster than usual.

Leaped From Doorway.

Nothing occurred until he turned the corner and started up Alabama Street. As he pased a dark doorway just below fire headquarters, three men sprang upon him from a doorway. He was knocked down, and before he could rise or shout one of the negroes grabbed him by the throat. The negro jerked Ware to his feet, still gripping his throat, and another of the negroes stood in front of the mail clerk brandishing a knife. The third negro plunged his hand into Ware's coat pocket and took the letters.

After the negro got the letters the one gripping Ware's throat momentarily released his hold, and Ware screamed for help. The negro with the knife leaped upon him. He stabbed Ware in the neck, and, as he plunged again with his knife Ware jerked his head to one side and the blade was buried in his shoulder.

The mail clerk fell to the ground, screaming, and the negro with the knife started to leap upon the prostrate body. His companions restrained him, however, and they fled into the railroad yards.

Ware, with blood streaming from his wounds and barely able to stand, tottered into fire headquarters, a few feet away, and collapsed on the floor. The firemen notified the police and called the ambulance.

Queen Mary Forbids Poker and Baccarat

LONDON, June 17.—When Queen Mary's guests at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races assemble at the card tables after dinner they will find printed notifications that baccarat and poker are barred and that stakes at bridge must not exceed half a crown a hundred points.

Heretofore baccarat has been the favored gambling game and high stakes have been played for.

Betting on the races among the royal servants is also prohibited, but it nevertheless goes on.

Friedmann, Richer, Calls Visit Failure

NEW YORK, June 17.—Following four months of unsuccessful effort to establish his turtle vaccine in the United States as a recognized cure for tuberculosis, Dr. Frederick F. Friedmann, of Berlin, sailed to-day for Germany.

Although Dr. Friedmann is much better off financially than he was upon his arrival in February, he declared he felt his mission had been a failure.

New Law Wipes Out Restricted Sections

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 17.—The laws passed at the recent session of the Legislature are said to have already resulted in obliterating the restricted districts of some of the smaller cities.

The women's minimum wage commission to be appointed by the Governor is expected to begin hearings in a short time to obtain data for the fixing of the lower limit of wages.

San Francisco Out For World Congress

GHENT, Belgium, June 17.—At the closing meeting of the Tenth International Congress of Agriculture, the American delegate, Dr. Alfred C. True, of Washington, proposed that the next congress in 1915 should be held in San Francisco.

An international commission will consider the question.

Lion Cubs Brought Up on Bottle

Sultana Kills One, Ignores Others

Forces Zoo Keeper to Adopt Them

Keeper E. T. Boyd feeding disowned lion cub with bottle at Grant Park Zoo.

A tragedy at the Zoo was responsible for the unusual picture which The Georgian photographer caught.

Then she calmly and without any evidences of maternal remorse paced about her cage, only pausing occasionally to glare or snarl at some visitor before her bars.

"If I'm not careful she may make way with the other two," observed Keeper E. T. Boyd, in some alarm. "I don't approve of her race suicide tendencies."

Forthwith he eliminated the opportunity for another infanticide by removing the remaining two cubs to safety outside the cage. The problem of feeding was easy of solution. The camera clicked when one of the cubs, in perfect contentment, was partaking of its Tuesday breakfast.

Nature fakers who maintain that dumb animals are incapable of facial expression should have seen their statements disproved by the expression of supreme ecstasy pictured on the cubs' faces when they were given their morning meal.

Both are blind, of course, but this is only a temporary inconvenience. They are as playful as kittens—which they really are—and as yet they are as harmless as the family cat.

They roll and tumble over each other and call each other jungle names, all in play to be sure. They are a little uncertain on their feet and stagger about blindly when they assay locomotion, but their keeper says that within a few days they will begin to take on the dignified airs of their parents.

Among the other babies that have been born at the Atlanta Zoo are a baby leopard, three deer, a llama and a zebu.

BIG CROWDS AT ISLE OF PALMS

Edward P. Passallaigue, advertising manager for the Isle of Palms, is in Atlanta on business and incidentally is telling his friends he is anxious to get back where the breezes from the ocean are cool.

He says this resort promises to be the most popular on the Atlantic coast this summer and that he has many reasons for thinking so.

The hotel property recently was purchased by James Sottile, who is operating the hotel himself. In order to make the Isle of Palms more popular than ever Mr. Sottile has expended $250,000 in improvmnts and has spared no expense to make this resort the best on the coast.

Every attraction has been provided for guests, including a military band with frequent concerts during the week and dancing every night. There is an excellent bathing beach—Mr. Passallaigue says it is the finest on the Atlantic coast—and a large corps of expert life guards. Mr. Passallaigue says there has not been an accident there in seven years.

An hourly trolley schedule has been provided from Charleston. The hotel opened Sunday with a large number of guests. Mr. Sottile also owns the New Charleston hotel in Charleston. The Isle of Palms Hotel is under the management of W. J. Hanlon, a well-known hotel man.

Senator Has Been Lobbied All His Life

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Senator Lebaron Colt of Rhode Island, examined by the Overman lobby inquiry committee to-day, was unable to give the investigators any information about a lobby in Washington.

The annexation of Cuba by the United States and the admission of sugar and other products free of duty in this country were advocated by Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan. He insisted everyone has the right to attempt to influence legislation if he is respectful and honest, and said he had been "lobbied" all his life.

Negro Physician's House Dynamited

ANNISTON, ALA., June 17.—The house of H. F. Harris, a negro physician, located in a neighborhood occupied by whites, was dynamited today, though no great damage was done. Harris says he will not move. There is no clew to the dynamiters.

The house was recently sold to Harris by a local attorney.

GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS URGED

George W. Coleman, Head of Advertising Clubs of Nation, Asks It Be Practiced.

"Can the Golden Rule be followed in business?

"Must it be 'doing unto others as ye would they should do unto you,' or will it be David Harum's rule, 'Do others or they'll do you, and do it first'?" asks George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in The Christian Endeavor World. He says:

For my part, I do not want to wait either for the co-operative commonwealth or for the millennium, but in the name of God and righteous dealing and suffering humanity I want to get the Golden Rule right here and now. Begin at once to make conditions what they ought to be, no matter if they have been otherwise since the days of Methuselah. There is nothing inherently adverse to brotherliness in a simple business transaction like giving something you have in exchange for something you want. Is it not good business to get your competitor's trade and keep him from getting yours, if you can do it without lying or misrepresenting?

But does the Golden Rule mean that you are at liberty to get your competitor's trade, because you are willing that he should get yours, if he can. The biggest and most successful business men will tell us that where they have put in effect in their business the principles of the Golden Rule it has turned out generally to be good business as well as good morals. Whatever may be the rule of the Standard Oil Company in dealing with its competitors, with the public, and with the Government, it has been a past master in developing the application of the Golden Rule to its employees.

Germans Beg for Carnegie Millions

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 17.—Worn out by the strain of the festivities attending the marriage of her daughter, Princess Victoria Luise, and the Kaiser's quarter centennial jubilee, the Empress was indisposed to-day and was unable to take part in the ceremonies.

That the Germans are interested in Andrew Carnegie is shown by the begging letters addressed to him. A special postoffice had to be rigged up in one of the hotel rooms to care for them. It was estimated that the bequests aggregated $5,000,000.

The steel master's most important engagement for to-day was attended to at the imperial banquet. To-morrow he, Mrs. Carnegie and their daughter, Miss Margaret Carnegie, will leave for Switzerland.

Centenarian Pastor Weds 10th Grandson

NEW YORK, June 17.—Forty-two grandchildren and thirty great grandchildren assembled at Central Palace Hall, No. 65 Sheriff Street, to watch the Rev. Zangwill Schreiber, who claims to be a hundred years old, perform the tenth marriage ceremony for one of his grandchildren.

Mr. Zangwill, who is pastor of the Congregational Bnei Rabire, on Willett Street, married his own children and nine grandchildren before starting on a recent trip to the Holy Land.

QUEEN BARS SLIT SKIRT AT ASCOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ASCOTHEATH, ENGLAND, June 16.—Fearing another such outrage as almost spoiled the Derby, when Emily Wilding Davison threw herself under the hoofs of King George's horse Anmer, scores of police and detectives thronged the course here to-day when the four-day race meet, the most fashionable turf event of the season, opened.

From a purely sporting angle the Derby is the premier classic of the turf; from the standpoint of a society function the Ascot meeting compares favorably with the Auteuil and Chantilly meetings in France.

Not alone was the course thoroughly policed, but detectives moved among the crowds in the paddock and grandstands, prepared to prevent any demonstration that suffragettes might attempt.

King George and Queen Mary attended the meet and were greeted vociferously as they entered the royal box. There were also many American tourists in the private boxes in the stand.

Although no sartorial censor stood guard at the entrance to the royal inclosure, the word had gone forth that women appearing in scandalizing or freak dresses would do so at the risk of being barred next year.

This applied particularly to the slashed skirt which showed the wearer's stockings to the knees. Queen Mary was simply dressed in white and wore a straw hat with flowers on it.

Ten Dead Men Share Film With Roosevelt

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Aviator Andrew Drew, of St. Louis, killed when his aeroplane caught fire at Lima, Ohio, was the tenth man to die of those who appeared in the famous motion picture "death film," taken in St. Louis in October, 1910.

The others who have died are: Arch Hoxsey, Ralph Johnstone, P. O. Parmalee, A. C. Welsh, Howard Gill, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, Jacques Faure, Theodore Schreck and "Tony" Von Phul.

Of the others, Theodore Roosevelt was shot at Milwaukee, Alfred Le Blanc was disabled for life and Walter De Mumm was shot.

PLAGUE CLAIMS CHILDREN.

DEQUEN, ARK., June 17.—Ten children have died here of infantile paralysis in the last 48 hours, and State health authorities have taken charge.

Planer Tears Off Hand of Operator

E. S. Dickey, an employe of the Morrow Transfer Company, of No. 134 Elliott Street, lost his left hand while at work Tuesday morning.

Dickey was running a planer, when his hand caught in the machine and was completely torn off. He was taken to Grady Hospital.

Shuptrine Takes Stovall's Place

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Herman C. Shuptrine, the administration candidate, was elected Representative in the Legislature yesterday over John J. Bouhan by a majority of 766.

Shuptrine succeeds Pleasant A. Stovall, who has been named by President Wilson for Minister to Switzerland and who recently resigned.

Napoleon's Hat and Gun Sold at Auction

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—A cosmopolitan crowd of buyers attended the sale of Napoleon relics at Sotheby's, yet while duly authenticated, they brought only $7,067.

Spink paid $1,750 for a portrait in oils of Napoleon by Rene-Theodore Berthon, a pupil of David, and $425 for Napoleon's hat worn when he was First Consul, with an original document certifying its genuineness.

Permain paid $675 for Napoleon's gun, a flint-lock sporting rifle, which belonged for many years to Egg, the famous gunmaker.

BIGAMY CHARGE SPITE, HE SAYS

Following his arrest Tuesday morning on a bigamy charge preferred by the Chief of Police of Unadilla, Ga., H. G. Wade, a machinist, attributed his trouble to "spite work" by a Unadilla man, who has had a grudge against him two years.

Wade is 24 years old. He said he came to Atlanta a week ago to work for the American Bridge Company, steel contractor on the Healey Building. He admitted have married a Unadilla girl, the daughter of a prosperous Georgia planter, a year ago, as the Unadilla Chief charges. He said she knew where he was and that she is his only wife. His wife was Miss Sannie Lokaman.

Two years ago, Wade said, a young man in Unadilla was about to wed. Wade knew he had a wife from whom he had not been divorced and he so informed the prospective bride. That broke up the marriage, of course, and Wade said the other man had made him trouble ever since.

"A year ago when I was in Macon this man slipped up behind me when I was at work one night and struck me over the head," Wade said. "We had a fight, and I took his pistol from him and shot him. He said then he would get even with me. He is out for revenge."

Wade said he never had the slightest trouble with his wife.

NEAR-BEER MEN WIN 2 STRIKING VICTORIES

Court Rules Railroads Can't Be Forced to Reveal Shipments. Single Tax Allowed.

Near-beer men won two important victories Tuesday when the Supreme Court of Georgia decided that railroad companies can not be required to furnish police departments with information regarding shipments of intoxicants, and wholesalers in near-beer can not be required to pay the annual $1,000 tax on each brand of near-beer handled by them.

The first decision applies directly to the Atlanta law, commonly known as the "McClelland Ordinance," requiring railroads to furnish the police department with full information regarding all shipments of intoxicants of more than three gallons. It was held to be "repugnant to the fifteenth section of the act of Congress known as the interstate commerce act, as amended June 18, 1910." A fine of $200 or a sentence of 30 days was the penalty provided for failure of railroad companies to furnish the information.

Railway Agent Convicted.

O. M. Ezell, agent for the Central of Georgia, declined to furnish the information and was placed under arrest March 19, 1912. He was convicted and appealed to the Supreme Court. A voluminous mass of testimony and citations was laid before the higher court.

In conclusion the decree read, "It was suggested in the brief of counsel for the city, since this case arose, what is known as the 'Webb Act' has been passed by Congress. Whatever may be the extent or effect of that act—as to which we express no opinion—it has no effect upon the present case."

This decision removes one of the city's surest methods of getting "tips" on persons guilty of operating blind tigers.

Demand Can't Be Made.

The Supreme Court held that demand for such information was not derived from the fact that a crime had been committed, but that the officers were simply seeking information which might lead to the discovery of violations of the law.

Ruling on the near-beer tax of $1,000 on each brand handled by wholesalers was handed down in the case of J. H. Morgan, of Brunswick. His arrest was made under section 5 of the General Tax Act, Civil Code 983.

The court held that the tax only could be applied to the particular place of business and not to each specific brand of near-beer handled.

Three Charged With Court Irregularity

MACON, GA., June 17.—Justice of the Peace J. H. Brown, his constable, Lee Davis, and E. W. Howard, who appeared in Brown's court as a prosecutor of Edgar Elias, a negro, have been indicted by the Bibb Grand Jury for alleged irregularities in the case against the negro. It is claimed that Elias was made to pay $14 costs for his release from jail, in violation of the law.

J. A. Flournoy, who had the negro employed at the time of his arrest, is prosecuting the three indictments.

Lane Urges Law to Drain Swamp Lands

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary Lane has submitted a recommendation to Congress for the drainage and reclamation of public swamp and overflowed lands in any State or Territory.

Mr. Land authorized an agreement with Oregon to co-operate in the construction of the Tunlo irrigation project, comprising 35,000 acres, to cost $900,000.

DR. COOK AGAIN TO EXPLORE ARCTICS

Dr. Cook, of Polar fame, is going polaring again—in other words, he has an "itching of the feet and a trembling of the hands, real signs of wanderlust," according to a statement at the Hotel Aragon Monday afternoon.

"Yes, the fever has me again," said the genial doctor. "It always strikes me about this time of the year, but I'm in for it in real dead earnest this time, and just as soon as I get the Polar matter cleaned up satisfactorily I am going on another expedition to the North Polar regions, where there remains much work to be done. I will make an expedition also to Mount Everest, about which there is a great deal to be learned."

Dr. Cook said he would like to get on the way even sooner, but could not do so until the Polar controversy had been settled, as he owes this debt to his family and to his good name.

Loses His Countess Because of Religion

BIARRITZ, June 17.—The Marquis de Alcedo, of Spain, announces that there will be no marriage between his daughter, Ysabel, Countess Bannelos, and Maurice Burke-Roche, of New York. The Marquis states that religious differences make such a union impossible.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago.

Wants Divorce; Kin Kidnaped Her Son

Mrs. Julia Cleo Clarke, who figured in a sensational kidnaping case last March, when she had her mother-in-law, Mrs. G. S. Clarke, indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of abducting her son to Chicago, Tuesday filed a suit for divorce against her husband, A. H. Clarke.

In the first part of March Mrs. Clarke appeared before the Grand Jury and said that her mother-in-law had persuaded her husband to desert her and that the two had gone to Chicago with her 2-year-old son. The child was returned to the mother shortly after the indictment and it was understood there would be no prosecution of the kidnaping case.

Reweds First Wife; Alimony for Second

CHICAGO, June 17.—W. D. Boyce, a wealthy published and traveler, remarried his first wife, Mary J. Boyce, in Ottawa, Ill. They are here on the way to a honeymoon in Alaska.

Boyce was divorced in 1908. He married Miss Virgina Lee, of Oak Park, Ill., and went to South America. A year ago Mrs. Boyce got a divorce with $100,000 alimony.

Boyce attracted attention in 1906 by an offer to take over the postal business of the United States, guaraneeing 1-cent postage.

Drug Slave Spends $100,000 in Decade

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Volmey Tilbert told Police Judge Sullivan that in eleven years he had spent $100,000, mostly for drugs, to which he is a slave, averaging nearly $30 a day. He was arrested for buying cocaine.

"I came from a wealthy family in Memphis," he said. "Eleven years ago I left college and inherited $100,000. Then I took to this. In the last month I spent my last $1,000. Can you send me to an institution?"

Judge Sullivan postponed action.

THE "BLUE TAG" FURNITURE SALE

A Message of Fine Savings on Every Little Blue Tag.

Atlanta has not known such a sale of furniture as this "Blue Tag" Sale! Such elegant furniture, such reckless reductions, make a rare combination and a rare opportunity---an opportunity that the housekeeper who is in any way interested in furniture is not going to overlook. It would be too expensive for her to overlook it.

Why, there is not a piece of furniture that goes into a home that can not be bought for a great deal less than at any other time of the year! We mean the most elegant home, where furniture must be in keeping with luxurious surroundings, and the home where simplicity rules and true, sturdy, long-life furniture is wanted.

Take, for instance, this

Dining Room Set

Perhaps one of the rarest examples of mahogany dining room furniture that was ever brought to Atlanta. You must see how richly the mahogany is marked and its wonderful color to appreciate the truth of this statement.

It is a Colonial set.

The Table is 60 inches, extension table.

The Sideboard, a massive 7-foot affair, with many roomy compartments.

The China Cabinet---properly it should be called a China "Press." It stands high, with mirrored back, plate glass shelves, paneled front, and with compartments below for holding quantities of wares.

The Serving Table is 48 inches long.

This Set Was $946.00. Now the Blue Tag Shows $695.00

A Day For Her Who Would Be Her Own Milliner---

Untrimmed Hats That Were $2.50 to $7.50 Are

75c

But the quantity is limited to a number smaller, we know, than the number of women who would be their own milliners with such a tempting opportunity before them—there are eighty-five untrimmed hats in all. There are hemps, split Belgians and a few Milans in the darker colors so fine for traveling, for wear with suits. The shapes are those the style authorities demanded this season—small and medium, with brims and crowns turned and curved in wondrous ways and varied.

And at 75c, instead of $2.50 to $7.50.

Flower Trimmings That Were 50c to $1.50 Are

25c

A garden of flowers in full bloom. There are roses—ever so many—pink roses, red, red roses, dainty little clusters of French roses, carnations—all but fragrant—nodding poppies, rich dahlias and others. They were 50c to $1.50 a bunch—which may mean a single flower or a half dozen flowers. And now they are 25c!

The Social World

The wedding of Miss Charles Owens and Edward Buckingham Hall, Jr., of Morristown, N. J., which took place Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, was of broad social interest. While the invitations to the church ceremony had been recalled, on account of illness in the bride's family, there were present the relatives and intimate friends of the couple, and the wedding was characterized by unusually beautiful and elaborate decorations.

In the library, where the ceremony was performed by Dr. A. M. Hughlett, the bridal party were grouped before a bank of palms, extending to the canopy of smilax, which was fringed with valley lilies. On either side and in the center of the altar of greenery were great clusters of Easter lilies, th same flowers being banked on the mantl and bookcases. The white prieu dieu was garlanded with smilax and tied with clusters of Easter lilies, and the wide doorway leading into the apartment was festooned with ropes of Shasta daisies and smilax.

In the hall and other apartments Easter lilies with greenery were used, the entrance to the dining room being marked by clusters of garden flowers, and smilax forming a mural decoration throughout the house.

Miss Eda Bartholomew played the wedding march, and music was furnished by an orchestra for the reception.

The wedding party included a grbup of little people, Theodore Owens, Harriet Shewmake, John Owens and Donovan Owens, who precluded Miss Marion Goldsmith, as maid of honor. Mrs. Jerome Simmons, Jr., and Miss Frances Connally held the ribbons.

The bride entered with her father, Mr. John S. Owens, who gave her away. She was very lovely in her bridal gown of white satin, the long court train being draped from the high waist line, and the corsage and sleeves formed of rose point lace. The tulle veil was adjusted with orange blossoms and worn over the face, and she carried a bouquet of wild roses, showered with valley lilies. Her ornaments were antique pearls, an heirloom in her family, and a diamond bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Goldsmith wore a Watteau gown of chiffon with tunic of white chiffon, showing a design of tiny rosebuds. A sash of old blue, caught in front with a large bow of the same, and a tracery of old blue ribbons, caught with tiny rosebuds, finished the skirt, and she carried a large round old-fashioned bouquet of field flowers in a lace paper holder. The little girls wore hand-embroidered white mull frocks, with pink sashes, and carried similar old-fashioned bouquets of field flowers.

Mrs. Owens wore white brocade satin, with overdress of shadow lace and a corsage bouquet of valley lilies. Mrs. Edward J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., the bridegroom's mother, wore lavender satin with tunic of brocade chiffon and a magnificent pearl necklace. Her flowers were lavender sweetpeas. Mrs. William Donovan, the bride's grandmother, wore lavender charmeuse veiled in shadow lace with pearl embroidery and valley lilies. Mrs. Claude Shewmake, her aunt, wore flesh-colored charmeuse satin and lace, with valley lilies. Mrs. Arthur Chapman, of Macon, wore pink chiffon and lace with pearl garniture. Miss Donovan, of Macon, wore blue satin veiled in lavender chiffon and lace.

Punch was served on the porch from a bowl embedded in garden flowers, Misses Elizabeth Shewmake, Lillian Stephens and Margaret Donovan presided, wearing white embroidered chiffon. The table in the dining room was adorned with a large basket filled with vari-colored field flowers, surrounded by smaller baskets of the same flowers—poppies, daisies, corn flowers, hollyhocks and feverfew.

A number of out-of-town guests were present, among them Mr. Wickerbotham, of Chicago.

The array of handsome presents received by the young couple, who are both members of prominent and wealthy families, bespoke their wide popularity, and included a magnificent collection of silver, china, Oriental rugs, cutglass and French prints.

Plan Swimming Party.

Harris, Lyda Nash, Caroline Muse, Helen Hobbs, Elise Brown, Mary Butler, Annie Lee McKenzie, Helen Dargan, Helen Hawkins, Nina Gentry, Laura Ansley, Sara Rawson, Mignon McCarty, Jeannette Lowndes, Mary Helen Moody, Dr. and Mrs. LeRoy Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Frazier, Messrs. Wallace Draper, Westervelt Terhune, J. D. Osborne, Walter Dubard, Lewis Gregg, Ed Gay, Ellis Whiteley, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, Lynn Werner, Richard Thornton, Rucker McCarty, George McCarty, Neal Reed, Remsen King, Ernest Armistead, Clarence Knowles and Hal Hentz.

An al fresco supper will follow the swimming party, which will be one of a series of swimming parties enjoyed by the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Adair.

Rohl-Young.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Rohl and Mr. Frederick J. Young took place at the Church of the Ascension, Oak Park, Ill., on the afternoon of June 10.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor, Miss Lois Rohl, wore white lingerie and carried pink sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Young are at home at 100 Queen Street, West End.

For Miss Gaddy.

Miss Bayma Gaddy, a bride-elect, was tendered a linen shower by Mrs. Horace Mashburn. Lawn Party in West End.

The ladies of the Church of the Incarnation at West End will give a lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Pollard, corner of Holderness Street and Sells Avenue, Thursday evening, beginning at 6 o'clock.

There will be all sorts of entertainment for the guests, including an old-fashioned open-air dance on the grass. "The Virginia Reel" will be enjoyed and games will be conducted by the committee on entertainment.

A gypsy booth will furnish a glimpse into the future, and lemonade wells and ice cream and cake booths will supply refreshments.

Mrs. Pollard will be hostess for the occasion, assisted by Mrs. G. O. Jones and Mrs. H. A. Tripp, who will have charge of the refreshments.

A group of young people will provide popular songs, and other pleasures incident to a lawn party will be in order.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Frank Cundell entertained at bridge Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Royal Ingersoll. Sweetpeas and daisies decorated the house and the prizes were white silk hose.

The guests were Misses Eda and Marguerite Bartholomew, Miss Wilmirth Gamble, Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mrs. Tom Weaver, Mrs. Oscar Pappenheimer, Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. R. J. A Dress Sale at Keely's

Summer Dresses $16.50 to $20 Values at $8.50

To-morrow a Sale of 678 dresses

This will be a welcome sale for the woman who has looked over so many "bargain offerings" this season, and failed to find the right thing.

These dresses are of the scarce materials. The color range is remarkable in its variety of strictly fashionable shades. You can anticipate your summer wants to-morrow, and at this low figure, will take two or three of the dresses offered. Here you will find grouped for you 678 dresses (we wish there were 2,000 of them)

189 Linen Dresses
152 Ratine Dresses
68 Eponge Dresses

At $8.50 Each

112 Crash Dresses
82 Voile Dresses
75 Tissue Dresses

678 Choice Summer Dresses Worth $16.50, $18.75 and $20

In the STYLES you will find about TWENTY MODELS
In COLORS you can secure any fashionable TINT
Every SIZE from Misses' 16 to Ladies' 44
And in VALUES you will find them worth $16.50, $18.75, $20

In the collection there are new Balkan Blouses, with crushed girdles and draped skirts, with colored collars and cuffs, high waist.

A dressy gown of dotted mull, in polka, coin and medium size dots; velvet girdle, draped skirt; short sleeves, scalloped net ruffle finish.

The French Linen Dress is bloused front and back; turn down collars and cuffs hand-embroidered; slashed skirt; finished with hand-made ornament buttons.

The one-piece strictly tailored dress has hand-embroidered bands down front; hand-embroidered collars and cuffs; high girdle; button trimmed.

There are also tailored suits of Linen Canvas, French linen and linen crash, in the new cutaway, Balkan Blouse and Norfolk Jacket effects; plain or draped skirts; high girdles.

The wise buyer, the keen-eyed shopper, the woman with an instinct for value, will find this sale the most alluring of the season.

Our buyer visited last week an upset suit market, and bought fresh from a prominent maker of dresses this great lot which goes on sale to-morrow. He discarded the original prices, and sold us the lot at one figure. He tells us that they are easily worth $15.00 each to make, without reference to the retail prices, which in most cases would be from $16.75 to $20.

These suits and dresses are offered because of unusual market conditions, and the manufacturer wanted to clear his stocks. It was easy for us to pick the best offering of the market, because of our inflexible rule of keeping CLEAN, FRESH STOCKS. We are never crowded with undesirable dresses, hence we are in a position to take advantage of just such conditions as these.

The center of our whole second floor will be given up to this sale, and the expected business of this occasion will require that we draft extra salespeople for promptly serving you.

DIXIE WOMAN IS A RIGID GAME WARDEN

Mobile Bay Pothunters Chuckle at First, but Mrs. Gibboney Soon Curbs Them.

MOBILE, June 17.—"I have already made two arrests for game violations. I had no trouble with the prisoners. I carried a revolver and a shotgun—and the pothunters knew that I could use either of them."

Which announcement goes to show that Mrs. Norma Frederic Gibboney didn't become game warden merely to wear a bright badge. Mrs. Gibboney was appointed warden recently by Governor Emmet O'Neal. She probably is the only woman in the United States with this sort of commission.

When the news of her appointment was made pblic, the pothunters in their huts along the Mobile Bay marshes thought it a good joke.

"She's one o' these society women," they laughed. "She never would come out on a rainy day, for fear of getting her feet wet."

They were fully convinced of their mistake when the handsome warden came upon two of their number slaughtering duck, and marched them in with one hand resting significantly on the black butt of the revolver at her hip.

Is a Crack Shot.

Her home is Aloha. It stands among acres of forest and foliage. Mobile Bay stretches away to the east and at the back is the Dog River. She is a deadly shot with a rifle and can bring down the mallards from behind a blind with the best shots in Mobile. It was her love for animals, and not the passion for hunting, that led her to become one of the Alabama game police.

"I have spent my life on the fringe of the beautiful waters of this bay," she said. "All its birds and animals are dear friends of mine. I have made a close study of them. Recently I found that the inroads of professional hunters were mowing them down at a rate that would soon mean their extinction. It hurts me to see the ducks slaughtered without regard to the law or to the decent ethics of sportsmanship.

"Here I was, right in the center of it, with nothing that I could do to stop it.

"'Why don't you have yourself appointed game warden?' one of my friends suggested.

Idea a Good One.

"I wondered why I hadn't thought of that before. I had a good saddle horse, all the time I wanted—and my heart was in the work. I got the commission.

"It is the birds that I particularly want to protect. We seldom realize how much good they do. If they didn't prey constantly on the insects, we would be without vegetation before very long. I am familiar with every bird of Alabama. Ten years ago you could see flocks of beautiful white tarsus and blue cranes in the edge of the water out there. Now they are curiosities.

"I have recently fitted out a log cabin in the midst of ten acres of forest that is just as nature made it. I intend to spend the rest of my life there."

Mrs. Gibboney is well known over the entire South. She is a frequent visitor to New Orleans. She is a descendant of Zaeh Taylor, Patrick Henry and the Virginia Sheltons. She is prominent in society. From now on she won't see so much of receptions and pink teas.

"Women would be a lot happier and healthier," she said, "if they spent more time with nature and less at bridge parties and theaters."

HighEducationWorth $25,000 in 40 Years

CHICAGO, June 17.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by Northwestern University. For the first five years out of college the average earning power of the graduate was $867, and for the next five years, $1,862.

An estimate of the value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and the report of the Government census and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statistician considers a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

Marshalls "Borrow" Baby and Blues Go

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have borrowed a baby to enliven their Washington home. He is Thomas Marshall Sutherland, four-year-old son of the Vice President's pastor. Young Thomas Marshall thinks "Papa Marshall" as he calls him, is the best chum ever. Mrs. Marshall says borrowing a baby is a sure cure for the blues which haunt a childless home.

Charlton to Be Tried in Italy Next Fall

ROME, June 17.—The formalities in regard to the extradition of Porter Charlton, who murdered his wife here some three years ago, and who, according to a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, must return here for trial, will not be tried before next fall.

Fisher Has All the Temperament His Wife 'Just a Country Girl'

"Bud" Fisher, creator of "Mutt and Jeff," and his bride, Pauline Welch, whom he first met in Atlanta last year.

Artist's Bride Doesn't Believe in Suffrage and Wouldn't Vote if She Could.

Pauline Welch, the pretty singing comedienne who dislodged Mutt and Jeff from first place in Bud Fisher's heart, is just a "happy little country girl."

There are no frills and no fads in her private life—none of the Eva Tanguay stuff, with a carload of hats and a particularly colored gown for every hour of the day. If she has a hobby, she doesn't know it, and she wouldn't be a suffragette for the world.

Bud Fisher has an artistic temperament, she says; one of those troublesome temperaments that demand constant attention and explode without notice, and it's all one girl can do to live with it. If it wasn't for the fact that Bud Fisher, the man, is a perfectly lovely fellow who rises above his artistic eccentricities, Pauline Welch would have a really exasperating time at least 24 hours every day.

Miss Welch, or Mrs. Fisher, as she is now, was deeply meditative yesterday afternoon when a Georgian reporter interviewed her. And well she might be, for she was sitting in the Piedmont Cafe at the very same table where Bud Fisher began to spring all that foolish stuff about love and marriage just a year ago.

The Temperamental Bud.

"Evidently the artistic temperament is something fierce—what do you do with it?" asked the reporter.

"What do I do with it? I lock it up, put the key in my purse and go away and forget about it—that's what I do with it.

"Then when I think the artistic temperament has been imprisoned long enough, I go back and let it out. Then I say, 'Now, young man, such and such is the case.' And that always settles it.

"The artistic temperament is an awful thing. Bud has it bad."

Bud was coming back.

"Bless his heart, he's a dear fellow, and I love him better than anything in the world. He's the finest man in the world, and I'm perfectly happy."

Isn't that just like a woman?

Pauline No Suffragette.

Miss Welch says Bud is a fine dancer and would make a great hit doubling with her. He's a better judge of an act than she is, because he bet her $25 yesterday that she would get a reception at the Forsyth, and she bet she wouldn't—and she lost.

Miss Welch was asked if she was a suffragette. "I should say not," was the quick response.

"You almost insult me. Women are not made for such things. You ought to see the suffragettes in New York. They stand on the street corners and go crazy, or act just like men, which is the same thing. No voting for me."

CINCINNATI, June 17.—The eighteenth annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men opened its four-day session this morning with addresses of welcome by Governor James M. Cox and Henry T. Hunt, Mayor of Cincinnati.

Spanish Historian Calls Columbus Jew

PARIS, June 17.—Enrigue Arribas Y. Turull, Spanish historian, has published a brochure in which he gives as the conclusion of his latest researches among original documents that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not an Italian, Spaniard nor Corsican.

Eighteen documents dated 1413 to 1528 establish Columbus as a native of Pontevedra and the great discoverer merely posed as a Genoese from policy, says Turull.

In his mother's family, the Fonteresas, the men's names are Abraham, Eleazar, Jacob and Benjamin.

Insurance Injunction Decision Due Tuesday

MACON, June 17.—A decision will be rendered this afternoon on the petition of a number of minority stockholders for the appointment of a receiver for the Georgia Life Insurance Company and for an injunction to restrain the company from changing its name and reducing its capital stock from $500,000 to $300,000.

The company asks $50,000 damages from the stockholders who instituted the proceeding.

Club Women to Sell Posies for Hospital

MACON, June 17.—In pursuance of a campaign to raise money for the Macon Hospital, women and girls of the Sidney Lanier Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and Children of the Confederacy will on next Saturday sell flowers on the streets.

Miss Ida Holt, Miss Anna Bryant, Mrs. J. A. Selden, Mrs. T. A. Small, Sr., Mrs. S. C. Moore and Mrs. W. T. Morgan are prominent in the flower day plans.

Aim to Be Attorney Dead, She Ends Life

NEW YORK, June 17—Laid off because of the slack season, Pauline Rosen, 21, hurled herself from the top of eleven-story building. She died in an hour.

The girl, a Russian, came to America a year ago to study to become an attorney. Out of her slender earnings she sent money home to her family. Later she planned to have them come to America to join her.

Pauline studied in a night school. She earned $8 a week.

NEVER PASS UP A CHANCE, SAYS PONY MAN

Only One Way to Win in Contest, "Keep Everlastingly at It," He Advises.

CONTEST GINGER.

He laughs best who laughs after July 31.

Explain to your friends the special vote offers which impel haste.

Let them know they can help you more now than later, when the offers will be withdrawn.

Faint heart never won anything really worth while.

It takes two to get votes—the candidate and his friend. If you are the candidate, find the other half of the bargain.

A little concentration now will pay mightily.

You may get tired now, but you can find recreation with a pony after July 31.

"The wise candidate," remarked the contest manager, "goes to all prospects, the good and the unpromising alike. Occasionally he gets a surprise from both. The person he thinks almost 'landed' may disappoint him and the 'poor' prospect may subscribe for a year."

Many of the boys and girls who are striving for the twenty-odd ponies The Georgian and American are giving away August 1 come to the contest manager for advice. He has only one rule for success—"Keep everlastingly at it."

But if a boy or girl learns nothing else from the contest, there will be a big profit in it, for the "Keep everlastingly at it" precept holds good all through life in every line of work.

To lose the chance of a single subscription may be to lose the chance of winning a pony. It may make the difference between first and second place. Therefore, get every person you can, and you will have no cause for regrets.

It is better by far to find, after July 31, that you could have won on less votes than you had—than to find that you are 100 short of being the winner.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

AFTER I get thru with this book of verses, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I want you to read it too. I paid a dollar & a half for it, Ma sed, & considering the fack that it is the first work of a new poet, I think I got it very cheep.

I doant think the first work of any poet is worth a dollar & a half, Pa sed. There was a time, Pa sed, wen I wud have paid almost any price for a good book, but owing to the present high cost of living things is different. The way I look at it now, Pa sed, a dollar & a half may not be much, but it is fifteen cool glasses of lager or five pounds of good substanshul steak. Who is the young nut that they are calling a new poet? sed Pa.

His name is Orland La Tosca, sed Ma. His hoam is in Californy & he nevver went to a college or eeven a high school. Him & his parents lived out among the redwood trees, Ma sed, & they was too poor to give him much educashun. But the boy cuddent be stopped. His Wunderful geenyus asserted itself wen he was only sixteen. Just lissen to this, one of his vary first poems. It is called Sunrise, & I think it is simply divine Lissen:

First comes a flush of pink so nearly white
That color seems a hint alone. Then comes
A bolder tint, as though the god of Dawn
Were flushing with some ungovernable rage,
A dew-damp bird sings in a gnarled tree
And then the morning dawns all glorified.

Was that one of the first things he wrote? sed Pa.

It was one of the vary first things, sed Ma. I shud think his parents wud be vary proud to have such a boy.

Oh, I doant know, sed Pa. I am a whole lot prouder of little Bobbie than I wud be of any almost-poet. I doant think much of the piece you jest red, sed Pa. "Dew-damp bird," sed Pa. Ha, Ha, that must have been sum bird. I have heard of cold birds and hot birds, Pa sed, & I have heard of wise birds & gay birds, but I doant think I wud know what to say to a dew-damp bird if I was interduced to one.

Oh, doant try to be cunning, sed Ma. You know rite down in yure heart that the poem I jest red to you is sure to be immortal.

Immortal rats, sed Pa. It is nothing but a bunch of junk. I guess there must have been at leest ten thousand poems ritten about sunrise, sed Pa, moast of them by peepul that dident know enuff to get up in time to see a regular sunrise, & all of them poems sed the saim thing, sed Pa, about the first tint of dawn steeling into the sky & about a bird singing. Why cant a bird sing onst in a while without a poet beeing its press agent, Pa sed. Reed me sum moar of those dethless poems, sed Pa. I want to git a hed ake.

Then listen to this dainty littel love ballad, sed Ma.

Arabella, Arabella,
Tripping lightly through the meadow
Where the sunset throws its shadow,
How I love to watch the meeting
When your lips the sun is greeting.
Sweetest nymph that ever walked here,
Loveliest sprite that ever talked here,
How I long to be yure fellow,
Arabella!

Whoa, sed Pa, that will do. I have my hed ake now, Pa sed, & you wont have to reed any moar to me tonite. I see the Crackers are getting into thare regiar form, Bobbie.

Chapeau a la Parisienne

Three Models That You Can Copy

Mlle. Marcelle Praince.

By Olivette.

TO-DAY we are showing you three hats that express the latest manifestation of "le dernier cri" from Paris. The hats are worn by three charming French actresses, and are quite the latest thing from one of the smartest of the smart French hat shops.

Mlle. Marcelle Praince, of the "Varietes," shows us the new idea called the "cabriolet dip," and at the short brimmed side her hat does resemble the bowler with down drooping brim worn by the cabby of Paris. The brim rolls up a bit at the right. The model was bound at the edge with cerise satin ribbon and the crown is covered with a checker board made of interwoven cerise and white satin ribbon. A veil of soft white shadow weave adds a softening touch to this simple but fetching model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW CAN I TELL?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 19. A young man who calls at our office claims he loves me. He also asked me to write to him.

Please advise me whether he is serious about it. ANXIOUS.

My dear, you ask a question impossible for me to answer. If he is serious or not, you must learn for yourself. Watch him carefully for a few months, and keep a close guard on your heart while doing it.

IT WILL IN TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and in love with a man two years my senior. He has but one bad habit and that is smoking cigarettes. Do you think I should let this interfere with true love? J. D. E.

A man of 20 who is an inveterate cigarette smoker is not worth any woman's love, and she invites unhappiness by associating her life with his.

The habit will kill your love in time. Why not choose a quick death for your love now?

I AM SURE OF IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young lady, and when I tell her of my love she says that she loves me also, but she is constantly teasing me, and when I tell how she hurts my feelings, she just laughs and teases all the omre. Do you think she cares for me? I have reason to think so, because she never keeps company with other boys. A. W.

She teases you, a sign of love; she never keeps company with others; another proof. My dear young man, what more do you ask?

YES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and engaged to a wealthy financier, but have heard that he is dissipated. There is no love between us. Should I give up position and wealth for love? NOVENA.

Love is worth every sacrifice, and in your case there would be no sacrifice, since there could be no happiness with a man who is dissipated, and no position and wealth if the dissipation lasts long.

SHE IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and draw a salary of $12 per week, with promise of an increase. I have been in love with a girl of my age for three years, but she has shown little affection until, lately, I proposed to her, but she said: "We are too young," and had better wait.

L. J. A.

The girl has exceptionally good sense. If your age were right, your salary isn't. Do as the girl suggests, and some day you will realize what a great debt of gratitude you owe her.

LAST SENTENCE EXPLAINS IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, whom I have known for one year. I have every reason to believe she loves me also. Is it proper for her to let me kiss her when I arrive or when I leave her house? She has consented at times; at others she refuses. To what do you attribute this? It is understood between us that it is only a kiss of friendship. WARREN.

The kiss of friendship is not for those of opposite sexes. Tell her of your love, ask her to marry you, and if she consents you will have a right to ask for her kisses, and they will not be refused.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, "for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put is mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whisky, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't yer?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Like an Oyster.

Cain might have answered, "None of your damned business," but he didn't. He simply said:

"Some friends of mine came up from Atlanta to spend a few weeks in their summer camp and I just came up, too; that's all. Let's have another drink."

They drank silently. Cain spoke again."

"I asked you awhile ago where you came from. I take it you live around here somewhere. If you live on my property you can continue to do so for all of me. I only built this shack to have a place as headquarters to hunt and fish. I have never used it before and I don't believe I ever will use it again.

The stranger made no offer of thanks, but accepted another invitation to drink. He was not at all talkative, and the more Cain saw of him the less inclined he was to ask questions concerning his identity. He did venture one question. It was:

"Is your family up here with you?"

The mountaineer (and this word probably describes him best of all) arose abruptly from his chair without making answer. It was evidently not his day for answering questions from any man he did not know. They drank again, standing, and then Cain went into the shack and returned with the stranger to the edge of the road, which was only a few rods away, and, arriving there, he suddenly asked:

A Proposition.

"Do you want to make some money?"

There are few persons in the world who will not reply "yes" to this question. The mountaineer was not one of them. He intimated that he might be induced to make some. With that as a basis to work on, Cain engaged the stranger in earnest conversation for more than half an hour. Dusk settled and night came on ere they parted. The mountaineer disappeared in the darkness and Cain returned to the shack, where his man had a meal prepared for him.

Early next morning Cain returned to Atlanta, his man driving the car to Pew Creek. It was left there to be shipped later in the day by freight. In Atlanta the broken bones in Cain's right hand were set and the member put in a splint. Ten days later he went to the mountains again, but instead of taking a train for Pew Creek, he took the Knoxville line and landed at a station on what might be called the eastern side of the mountains. There he procured a horse and saddle and rode ten miles in a westerly direction, uphill all the way. When he reached a point where a huge knob of granite stuck up out of the ground like an inverted tin basin, he dismounted and walked directly into the woods on the opposite side of the road. A hundred yards in he stopped beside a massive oak tree.

Presently four men appeared, one of whom Cain recognized as the blackbearded mountaineer he had entertained at his shack. The others were dressed in the same kind of garb.

"Are you ready to do business?" demanded Cain.

"We're here, I reckon," replied the bearded man.

Without more words, Cain drew a leather case from his pocket and counted out a sum of money to the four men. At that instant Cain became possessed of the fear that he might not be allowed to depart. But nothing of the sort happened. The four men received the money and disappeared in the forest.

Cain mounted his horse and rode back whence he came. An evil smile played on his lips.

CHAPTER XXXI.

GORDON KELLY was at the bridge a full hour ahead of time. Mildred had said 3 o'clock, but as early as 1 o'clock he had arrayed himself in a suit of light summer flannels (it was now early in the month of June), and after trying to kill time around the house he had, in his impatience, jumped into his automobile and rode to the meeting place.

The minutes that followed seemed ages to him. There was a sharp bend in the road, just before it reached the bridge, in the direction Mildred must come, and he had to trust to his ear rather than his eye to detect the approach of a vehicle. At last he heard a sound that he knew was made by the little runabout. When the car came in sight he was standing on the bridge. Mildred saw him, and raising a hand from the wheel she waved a gay salute. Gordon lifted his cap in answering greeting, but he had faced the crowd and the tumult and the opposing pitcher in the crisis of that last game in Atlanta with less trepidation than he faced the oncoming automobile.

Mildred stopped the runabout close to Gordon's car, switched off the magneto, put the lever in neutral and applied the emergency brake with business-like precision. Then, turning her head toward the young man, she favored him with a beaming smile and said:

"Here I am on time, Mr. Gordon Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly Again!"

At these words a look of dejection came into Gordon's face.

"Mr. Kelly again! I suppose as long as you call me Mr. Kelly I will have to call you Miss Deery, and I am dying to call you——"

"Mr. Bud, then, if you like that name better," said Mildred, with a little toss of her head.

Gordon smiled and held out his hand. She placed her fingers in it and jumped lightly to the ground.

"That certainly has a more familiar sound, but I would much prefer to have you call me Gordon," he said.

Mildred faced him squarely.

"But I want to know about this Mr. Bud and this Mr. Gordon Kelly business. Why is there such a mystery over it?"

"There's no mystery that cannot be very easily solved," replied Gordon. "Let us walk over to that big oak, where it is cool and shady, and I will tell you all about it."

They walked slowly and silently side by side until they stood beneath the spreading branches of the huge tree. At their feet flowed the purling brook. Gordon indicated a place where they might rest, but Mildred shook her head.

"Before we get too comfortable I want to know about Mr. Bud, or Mr. Kelly, or whatever his name is," she said.

Just a Nickname.

"That is the simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Bud is a nickname my father gave me. My mother also grew into the habit of calling me Bud. The people around the place never heard me called by any other name and naturally they addressed me as Mr. Bud."

Mildred let her eyes fall to the ground and began toying with the leaves with the toe of her shoe.

"I can readily understand that," she said, "but what I cannot understand is that no one in your home knows who Gordon Kelly is. When Elmer called your house on the telephone the other day your colored boy, Steve, said there was no Mr. Gordon Kelly there, no Mr. Kelly and no Mr. Gordon there. And when I called you this morning the person who answered the telephone said the same thing."

"That, too," is easily explained," declared Gordon. His face became very serious. "I meant to have told you. It has been on my mind ever since we met under the bridge over there. I—I—I will tell you now."

But he hesitated. Mildred brought her eyes to bear on his. He was looking off in the distance.

"Well" she said, quietly.

Gordon stooped and picked a twig from the ground. He broke it in small pieces and tossed them one by one into the rippling brook. Still he did not answer. Mildred, who had not taken her eyes off his face, saw the blood suddenly paint it crimson and she felt herself trembling slightly. Gordon turned his face toward hers and their eyes met.

They're Engaged.

"Mildred," he said, and his voice was hoarse and passionate, "God knows there is nothing to conceal and I want to tell you all about myself and my life. But there is something I want to tell you first, I MUST tell it to you first. It is that I love you, Mildred. Oh, how I love you! That is all I can say now; say it over and over again. From the very first day, Mildred. From the very instant you put your hand in mine and the rain beat down on us. How I love you! Will you take me, Mildred?" His blue-gray eyes were humid now and he, too, was trembling.

Her eyes had never left his. A flood of emotion was rushing through her. She raised her arms and Gordon crushed her to his heart.

"You know it, Gordon," she murmured.

Their lips met and then her head nestled against his breast and she sighed contentedly. The merry brook raced on, the sun shone kind, a lazy breeze played with a stray wisp of her hair. She felt a strange peacefulness creep over her as she rested in his arms.

"Honeybunch," she repeated raising her head, "Oh, Gordon, what a sweet name you have for me. Where did you find it?"

"My mother called me that when I was a little boy. My mother, Mildred, was the sweetest woman, next to you, that ever breathed."

"She must have been, dear heart. And you will tell me all about her when the time comes."

Mildred gently released herself from Gordon's embrace and sat down on the ground. He threw himself by her side as close as he could get, reclining on his elbow. She gently stroked his hair.

What the Tease Said.

"Do you know what that little tease, Elmer, said to me when I left him to-day?" she asked.

"I never could guess," he replied, looking up in her eyes.

"He said"—Mildred leaned over and whispered the rest, blushing furiously.

"Mildred, you are certainly the sweetest girl in the world to tell me that. Why, the little beggar is quicker than I am."

"He has been with me more than you have, dear. He is a bright lad. In this case I think he was quicker than I was myself."

And so the talk of these two happy young people went on and on. The shadows lengthened and the sun sank behind the hills before they realized it.

"Oh, I must be going, Gordon; they'll think I'm lost or that something has happened to me," exclaimed Mildred springing to her feet.

"Something has happened to you, honeybunch and something has happened to me to make me the happiest man in the world."

"You are right, Gordon; something has happened and I am very, very happy."

They were walking toward the bridge when Mildred stopped suddenly.

"Oh Gordon, I want you to take me home in your car. I want to ride right next to you on the front seat. But if we do that what will become of the runabout?"

"Don't worry about that, sweetheart; come with me," and he led her along the edge of the brook until they came to the telephone in its box fastened to the tree.

"Steve," said Gordon as soon as his ring was answered, "take a car out of the garage, put a rope in it, bring Mose along with you and come down to the bridge. You will find a runabout there. I want you to tow it to Miss Deery's bungalow. Do you know where it is?"

"Yes, Mr. Bud."

"All right; hurry it along!"

"You are a regular Aladdin with his wonderful lamp, Gordon," said Mildred, slipping her arm through his. "I am just dying to see all that lies beyond those two great granite pillars."

"And I'm just crazy to have you see it all, sweetheart, for it's all yours now, and I hope you'll like it. I have lots to show you and lots to tell you. But I did want to tell you something else first."

"I want you to, Gordon."

With her head resting on his arm, they drove to her mountain home, he at the wheel. He had to switch on the electric headlights before they reached it. When they were within a few feet of their destination she made him stop the car.

"Quick," she whispered, "they can't see us behind the headlights." He folded her in his embrace.

"No more Mr. Kelly?" he said.

"No more Mr. Kelly," she replied.

"No more Mr. Bud?"

"No more Mr. Bud."

"Always Gordon?"

"Always Gordon," she repeated, softly.

"Hey!" yelled the voice of Elmer in the distance. "Breakaway there!"

"The little rascal is only guessing," laughed Mildred.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 26th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE telephone line from Pew Creek to Atlanta earned more money in tolls that night than it had earned in the previous six months. Mildred called up her mother and talked with her more than half an hour. This is the way she began:

"Oh, mother, won't you please come up to the mountains right away?—Ill? No indeed; I'm feeling simply great, but there's lots of things I want to tell you. . . . Oh, no; not over the telephone. . . . Of course not, mother dear. I am perfectly happy and contented up here, except that you are not with me and the way I feel to-night I never want to go back to Atlanta again. But you must come up right away."

And so on and so on. But not once in their long talk did Mildred mention Gordon Kelly's name to her mother. She wanted to hold her supreme secret all to herself, at least until her mother arrived. Nor did she tell of the trouble she had with Forrest Cain, deeming that a matter that would better not be spread on a public telephone wire. In the end, Mrs. Deery promised to come up for a few days, as she, too, needed rest after her labors in the household of Cain's sister.

Gordon Kelly called up Judge Barbee as soon as he reached home. He could not get him at his office, but reached him at his home. This is what he said:

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource.

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bid old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Elian may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this ungodly man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passion, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real life, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight. On the train from Liverpool to London she meets a woman who directs her to a semi-fashionable boarding house. A great hue and cry is being raised over her disappearance. She is feeling somewhat secure, when suddenly Mildred Bankes, of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," finds her. Mary confesses all to her and begs for her help.

IF I had not been so wildly agitated I should have known that this was the wrong way with Mildred, and it was not until I had said it all in a rush of whispered words that I saw her eyes fixed on me as if they were about to start from their sockets.

"But, my dear, dear child," she said, "this is worse and worse. Your father and your husband may have done wrong, but you have done wrong, too. Don't you see you have?"

I did not tell her that I had thought of all that before and did not believe any longer that God would punish me for breaking a bond I had been forced to make. But when she was about to rise, saying that, after all it would be a good thing to send me home before I had time to join my life to his—whoever he was—who had led me to forget my duty as a wife, I held her trembling hands and whispered, "Wait, Mildred. There is something I have not told you even yet."

"What is it?" she asked, but already I could see that she knew what I was going to say.

"Mildred," I said, "if I ran away from my husband it was not merely because I loved somebody else, but because"——

I could not say it. Do what I would I could not. But holy women like Mildred, who spend their lives among the lost ones, have a way of reading a woman's heart when it is in trouble, and Mildred read mine.

"Do you mean that . . . that there are consequences . . . going to be?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"Does your husband know?"

"Yes."

"And your father?"

"No."

Mildred drew her hand away from me and crossed herself and said beneath her breath, "O Mother of God!"

I felt more humbled than I had ever been before, but after a while I said: "Now you see why I can never go back. And you will save me, will you not?"

There was silence for some moments. Mildred had drawn back in her chair as if an evil spirit had passed between us. But at length she said, "It is not for me to judge you, Mary. But the gentlemen will come up soon to know if you are the Mary O'Neill whom I knew at the Sacred Heart, and what am I to say to them?"

"Say no," I cried. "Why shouldn't you? They'll never know anything to the contrary. Nobody will know."

"Nobody?"

I knew what Mildred meant, and in my shame and confusion I tried to excuse myself by telling her who the other woman was.

"It is Alma," I said.

"Alma? Alma Lier?"

"Yes."

She Tells Mildred All About Martin.

And then I told her how Alma had come back into my life, how she had tortured and tempted me, and was now trying to persuade my husband, who was a Protestant, to divorce me that she might take my place.

And then I spoke of Martin again—I could not help it—saying that the shame which Alma would bring on him would be a greater grief to me than anything else that could befall me in this world.

"If you only knew who he is," I said, "and the honor he is held in you would know that I would rather die a thousand deaths than that any disgrace should fall on him through me."

I coud see that Mildred was deeply moved at this, and, though I did not intend to play upon her feelings, yet in the selfishnes of my great love I could not help doing so.

"You were the first of my girl friends, Mildred, the very first. Don't you remember the morning after I arrived at school? They had torn me away from my mother, and I was so little and lonely, but you were so sweet and kind. You took me into church for my first visitation and then into the garden for my first rosary—don't you remember it?"

Mildred had closed her eyes. Her face was becoming very white.

"And then don't you remember the day the news came that my mother was very ill, and I was to go home? You came to see me off at the station, and don't you remember what you said when we were sitting in the train? You said we might never meet again, because our circumstances would be so different. You didn't think we should meet like this, did you?"

Mildred's face was growing deadly white.

"My darling mother died. She was all I had in the world, and I was all she had, and when she was gone there was no place for me in my father's house, so I was sent back to school. But the Reverend Mother was very kind to me, and the end of it was that I wished to become a nun. Yes, indeed, and never so much as on the day you took your vows."

Mildred's eyes were still closed, but her eyelids were fluttering, and she was breathing audibly.

"How well I remember it? The sweet summer morning and the snow-white sunshine, and the white flowers and the white chapel of the Little Sisters, and then you, dressed as a bride, in your white gown and long white veil. I cried all through the ceremony. And if my father had not come for me then, perhaps, I should have been a nun like you now."

Her Passionate Appeal for Aid.

Mildred's lips were moving. I was sure she was praying to our Lady for strength to resist my pleading, yet that only made me plead the harder.

"But God knows best what our hearts are made for," I said. "He knows that mine was made for love. And though you may not think it, I know God knows that he who is away is my real husband—not the one they married me to. You will not separate us, will you? All our happiness—his and mine—is in your hands. You will save us, will you not?"

Some time passed before Mildred spoke. It may have been only a few moments, but it seemed to me like an eternity. I did not know then that Mildred was reluctant to extinguish the last spark of hope in me. At length she said, "Mary, you don't know what you are asking me to do. When I took my vows I promised to speak the truth under all circumstances, no matter what the consequences, as surely as I should answer to God at the great Day of Judgment. Yet you wish me to lie. How can I? How can I? Remember my vows, my duty."

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but, no! Duty—always duty! Love indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blazing fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both her hands covering her face and tears trickling through her fingers onto the linen of her habit.

The Final Moment and a Decision.

That conquered me in a moment.

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dare not do that, now, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, Sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me. . . . and that when he comes home he will find . . ." But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

During the silence that followed we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"My dear child," said the mother, "not to know who the young lady is, where she comes from, why she is here, and whether she is married or single or a widow! —it is quite impossible to take her in."

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair, and stood with her back to the fireplace.

There was a knock at my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but my landlady came into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These gentlemen are making an examination of the house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching intently. The men made a pretense of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak, "Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence, and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her! —she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window.

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

But Sister Mildred was on her knees, with her face buried in my bed, praying fervently.

The Loss of the Scotia.

I DID not know then, and it seems unnecessary to say now, why my father gave up the search for me in London. He did so, and from the day the milliner's clew failed him I moved about freely.

Then, from the sense of being watched I passed into that of being lost.

Sister Mildred was my only friend in London, but she was practically cut off from me. The Little Sisters had fixed her up (in the interests of her work among the lost ones) in a tiny flat at the top of a lofty building near to Piccadilly, where her lighted widow always reminded me of a lighthouse on the edge of a dangerous reef. But in giving me her address she warned me not to come to her except in case of urgent need, partly because further intercourse might discredit her denial, and partly because it would not be good for me to be called one of Sister Mildred's girls."

Oh, the awful loneliness of London!

I thought I could have felt at home in the smallest village, for though nobody had spoken to me there, I should have come to know everybody, while in London I had no time to know anybody, for the ever-flowing tides of human faces flashed past me and were lost in a moment like waves under the moon at sea.

Others just as friendless have wandered in the streets of the big city. I knew I was not the first, and I am sure I have not been the last to find London the most solitary place in the world. But I really and truly think there was one day of the week when, from causes peculiar to my situation, my loneliness must have been deeper than that of the most friendless refugee.

Nearly every boarder in our boarding house used to receive once a week or once a month a letter containing a remittance from some unknown source, with which he paid his landlady and discharged all his other obligations.

I had no such letter to receive, so to keep up the character I had not made but had allowed myself to maintain (of being a captain's wife) I used to go out once a week under pretense of calling at a shipping office to draw part of my husband's pay.

In my childish ignorance of the habits of business people I selected Saturday afternoon for this purpose, and in my fear of encountering my husband, or my husband's friends in the West End streets, I chose the less conspicuous thoroughfares at the other side of the river.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, you see," he went on in his heavy voice, yet very kindly, and with a sort of massive playfulness in his manner, "no one has hurt you—not even a little bit, after all. Now, you run right home to your mother."

The girl did not need to be told twice. On the instant, she sprang up joyously, and started toward the door, with a final ravishing smile for the pleased official at the desk.

"I'll go just as fast as ever I can," the musical voice made assurance blithely.

"Give my compliments to your father," Burke requested, courteously. "And tell him I'm sorry I frightened you."

The girl turned at the door. * * * After all, too great haste might be indiscreet.

"I will, Commissioner," she promised, with an arch smile. "And I know papa will be so grateful to you for all your kindness to me!"

It was at this critical moment that Cassidy entered from the opposite side of the office. As his eyes fell on the girl at the door across from him, his stolid face lighted in a grin. And in that same instant of recognition between the two the color went out of the girl's face. The little red lips snapped together in a line of supreme disgust against this vicissitude of fate after all her maneuverings in the face of the enemy. She stood motionless in wordless dismay, impotent before this disaster forced on her by untoward chance.

"Hello, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes started disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the ——t luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy and then back to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind, "She's little Aggie Lynch—con woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time in Burnsing."

With this succint narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience, the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly, rose from his chair, and walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely, then of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, 'kid,' you're a beaut'!"

Aggie sniffed vehemently in rebuke of the gross partiality of fate in his behalf.

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle
The Only Safe Hair Remover

Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. De Miracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

NINE RACES SET FOR DECISION AT MOTORDROME

Facts About Races at Atlanta 'Drome.

Place—Old Show Grounds.
Time—8:30; gates open at 7 o'clock.
Tickets—On sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's cigar stores.
Events—Georgia sweepstakes, four heats; Motordrome purse, four heats; special match race, one heat; amateur events to be decided later.
Cars—Leave Five Points at short intervals.

THE last word in sensational sport, the very topmost pinnacle of thrills will be reached at the Atlanta Motordrome to-night when the first night motorcycle racing ever staged in the Gate City will be put on. The pleasing pastime of risking the neck at 90 miles an hour is great sport in the daytime. At night, with lights blazing, the band playing and a large yellow moon shining overhead it is a spectacle that would make the burning of Rome look like cheap vaudeville.

Nine races have been scheduled for to-night. And in addition, there may be three for amateurs, which will be put on early. These can not be scheduled, as the novice riders are not under contract, and it is necessary to make a race for them after they arrive and declare their willingness to risk their necks.

The opening professional event will be the Georgia sweepstakes. This will be decided with two-mile heats and a five-mile final. Then follows the second Motordrome purse. This will be raced with three-mile heats and a four-mile final.

The program will close with a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris, to settle the dead heat which they ran on Saturday afternoon.

The program for to-night's races follows:

Georgia Sweepstakes.

(Two-mile heats, five-mile final, winner of each heat and second in fastest heat to qualify for final.)

First heat, No. 5, "Tex" Richard, Dallas, Texas; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris, France; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 1, Morton Graves, Los Angeles. Third heat, No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth, Texas; No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn, of Atlanta. Final heat, Georgia sweepstakes.

Motordrome Purse.

(Three-mile heats, four-mile final; winner in each heat and two in the fastest heat to qualify for finals.)

First heat, No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse; No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinburgh. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn. Third heat, No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris; No. 5, "Tex" Richards; No. 1, Morth Graves. Final heat, Motordrome purse.

Special match race, to be announced.

Bettors on Baseball Fired From Grounds

NEW YORK, June 17.—A large number of men whom the management alleges have been laying odds on the baseball games at the Polo grounds were denied admission to the baseball park for the New York-Detroit American League game. It is estimated 150 of them were not permitted to pass the turnstiles and that 50 others who had evaded the watchfulness of detectives at the gates later were ordered from the grandstand.

The crusade against betting is a concerted one. It was started by Ban Johnson, and Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, and Hempstead, proprietor of the New York Nationals, and various other club owners will work actively for the abolition of the betting evil at ball games, it is said.

Ban Johnson Ready For Ball Trust Probe

NEW YORK, June 17.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, arrived here yesterday on a tour of inspection and paid his first visit to the Polo Grounds since Frank Chance's New Yorks began playing there. Asked about the talk of a Congressional investigation of the so-called baseball trust, he said:

"If an investigation is intended, we are ready. In fact, we have always been ready, for we have nothing to conceal. But, personally, I don't believe Congress will take action. Horace Fogel appears to be the only one eager to have baseball probed. If he has any evidence, we are not aware of the fact."

HOOSIERS GET TOM DOWNEY.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 17.—Tom Downey, instead of Fred Parent, will be the new Indianapolis second baseman. Downey was purchased by Kelley from Jack Dunn's Baltimore team. Kelley wanted Parent, but Dunn chose to keep Fred and send Downey here. Downey will report at once, and may be used at third base until Marty Krug is able to resume play.

BUD ANDERSON NOT STUCK ON BOXING GAME

By Bud Anderson.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—I'm not stuck on the boxing game. I may as well be frank and tell you truthfully that I'm in it for the money. I'm not fighting for the joy of the game, although I like to box.

Nature gave me the strength and stamina to fight, and I am going to use that gift to put me on a comfortable financial basis. Then I'll quit the game.

I'm not going to talk to you about boxing. I'm going to tell you about my ranch.

Ever since my first fight I have been saving my money toward establishing a good paying farm. The first $5 I earned by boxing was in a four-round contest in Portland.

I was happy as a lark when I got that five. I put it away, and that fiver, with the money I got in my following fights, started me on the road toward farmerville. I purchased a ranch near my home in Vancouver.

Farm work is one of the best methods of training I know of. I have four horses and three cows. When I want to limber up I curry them. The movements from side to side, running the currycomb up and down the animal's sides and over its back are great for the muscles—of man, not the horse.

Milking is another good training stunt. It improves the grip and limbers the wrists. Driving horses is also good for the grip. It strengthens the forearm.

FULL PAY AND RELEASE FOR INJURED INFIELDER

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 17. President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, stated to-day that Third Baseman Jimmy Gillespie, who was struck in the head by a pitched ball by Hardgrove, of Birmingham, will be released outright with full pay for the remainder of the season as soon as consent is received from the other clubs of the league. At present the injured third sacker is upon the ineligible list.

YOU HAVE TO GO TO England to get the true sporting spirit. The English papers gallantly concede the superiority of the American polo team, but they admit that England would have won if the umpire had been more severe on the Americans; if the Americans had "galloped wide," a well-known American "trick," and if the Americans had refrained from playing carefully when they were four goals to the good. Outside of this they have no fault to find. Fair play and Old England forever!

Manager Wahoo Gets Release at Waycross

WAYCROSS, GA., June 17.—Charles Wahoo is released as manager of the Waycross team, in the Empire League, and Catcher Hawkins, of the Jacksonville, South Atlantic League team, signed as local manager. Shamus O'Brien, recently of Charleston, and Morrison, of Pennsylvania, reported to-day.

On the grounds that Waycross is carrying more than three players who have played in class "C" league, Manager Dudley protested yesterday's game.

MORRIS RATH IS HONORED BY CHICAGO TEAMMATES

NEW YORK, June 17.—Members of the Chicago White Sox have picked Morris Rath, Sox second baseman, to represent the team in the baseball players' fraternity. The players held an executive session with President Dave Fultz of the players' organization while the White Sox were here. Fultz urged them to pull together for their own interests.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 17.—The National League race is practically just as it was two weeks ago. The Giants have not profited by their jaunt on the road, while the Phillies have failed to crack as we hoped and expected. The fact that Dooin caught Pittsburg going badly just after we had taken four straight from his club was a big steadier. If the Pirates had cleaned up on that series it would have pretty nearly crowded Philadelphia out of the running. Then we ran into the Pirates when they are moving at something like their normal gait. It was due to bad baseball that we did not win four straight in Chicago.

The Philadelphia club is inevitably in the race to the finish unless it cracks wide open, which I do not expect now. It does not seem to me that Chicago and Brooklyn can hold up ahead of the Pirates much longer. Pittsburg will begin to climb and the other two start to sink. The Cubs looked very bad against us, although the best we made out of the series was an even break. Of course, we did not get a fair glimpse of Overall because he threw his arm out after pitching four balls in the game he started against us, but lately he has been Evers' winning card in the box with his newly-found spitball. He will be out of the game for a time now, and this will further reduce the efficiency of an already weak pitching staff. Then there is not the spirit behind the Cubs in Chicago which used to be evidenced in the old days. Some fans really roasted O'Day when he called Miller safe at the plate with the winning run in the tenth inning of the first game we played against the Chicago club on Sunday. That was an unheard of thing during the regime of Chance.

* * *

BROOKLYN'S pitchers are uncertain. The team has also lost the dash which the winning streak gave it for a time. Still it would not surprise me at all to see the Superbas finish in the first division ahead of Chicago. It is one of the best fighting clubs Brooklyn has ever possessed. The race will eventually narrow down to a triangular fight between the Pirates, Phillies and Giants, unless the Quakers get too far ahead to be overtaken, which I think unlikely. The championship will be won or lost by the outcome of the future series between these three clubs, with an occasional defeat of one of the three contenders having some influence on the standing. It is my opinion that it will be a very close race and a driving finish. The Pirates are great stayers. And I want to report that the Giants are still hopeful.

* * *

THEY tell me here in Cincinnati that Cleveland is baseball mad over the showing the club is making under Birmingham. The merchants have promised to give the players $100,000 if the team takes the pennant, and this may have something to do with the hustling of the Naps at present. They have experienced only a fairly successful road trip, however; fairly successful because the Athletics are going so well. The and the pitching staff is moving as Cleveland team is playing great ball, smoothly as a demonstration six-cylinder automobile, but they cannot win the pennant if the Athletics never lose.

Doyle Whiffed Hard But This One Got By

NEW YORK, June 17.—What Jack Doyle, the White Sox scout, does not know he makes a stab at. But he doesn't always get by.

Doyle and half a dozen others were sitting about the lobby of the hotel. Frank Fogarty, the actor man, joined the party and he grasped at a glance that there wasn't much jollity in the bunch. He's quite a friend of Cal's and he was there to do the cheering act.

"Say, you know," and he called the name of some mutual friend.

"Oh, very well indeed," answered Cal. "But what happened to him?"

"Oh, he graduated."

"He did?"

"Yes, went through the entire curriculum."

Cal turned to Doyle. "You know what he is talking about, don't you?" queried the manager.

"Oh, very well," answered Doyle. "You know what a curriculum is?"

"Even so," from Doyle.

"Then what is it?" demanded Cal.

"Oh, it's one of those things where a fellow," continued Doyle, and hesitated. "It's one of those—well, a fellow who does that is the kind of a fellow who makes up his mind to ride in an automobile and then walks."

Joe Jackson to Bat From Seat in Chair

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—Joe Jackson is planning a stunt to throw the harpoon of ridicule into the pitchers and managers who haven't the nerve to give him a whack at the ball when he comes to bat with runners on second and third base. He is saving this for one of the early home games in Cleveland, where the manager directs the pitcher to pass him on purpose.

The instrument of ridicule will be a camp stool or a small chair. As the quartet of pitchouts for the intentional pass is begun Joe will signal the bat boy to hurry out from the bench with aforesaid stool.

Joe will then take his seat at the plate and watch the wide ones go by while the crowd jeers the opposing team. Or if that shames the opposing side into putting them over he figures he can get to his feet and in position to hit it.

IN OTHER WORDS—

Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Sees not another ball yard fight begun.

We read in certain periodicals that the chief difference between the English and the Americans is that the Americans think more of winning than of sport. Another difference is that the English put up the louder howl if they lose.

Georges Carpentier has consented to do battle with Bomp Wells again, possibly on the theory that one good purse deserves another.

After digesting the dope of the polo experts, one deduces that the American team is outclassed, but plays better polo.

Speaking of ungrateful wretches, there is Jack O'Connor, who demands $25,000 for losing his job with the St. Louis Browns.

SHAKE 'EM UP.

Where are the chills of yesterweek
that ambled through my frame
And made me shiver as I sat at
yonder baseball game?
I swelter now and yearn for winds
that long have beat it hence,
And if I want a chill to-day it costs
me 15 cents.

By hoisting a pennant, the Red Sox reminded us that they are champions of the universe. One would not suspect it from their playing.

Tony Caponi and Jack Dillon, having been matched to fight for the middleweight championship of Canada, it behooves the Giants and Pirates to play for the baseball championship of Siberia.

One of the most popular pastimes in Europe these days is to knock Bombardier Wells' block off.

If those English poloists take their defeat gracefully it is due to the fact that they have had a lot of practice at it.

LIGHTWEIGHTS POST FORFEIT FOR TITLE GO

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The treasury of the Tuxedo Club which is the right-hand pocket of Eddie Graney's vest, was bulging to-day with certified checks, bank notes, bank drafts and other evidences of money. Billy Nolan, for Willie Ritchie, and Joe Levy, for Joe Rivers, posted their forfeits for the twenty-round boxing contest on July 4, and Graney put up collateral for his agreement to hold the bout.

The boxers put up $3,750 apiece, two-thirds of this to be for weight and appearance, and the balance as a guarantee that they would be ready to box 25 minutes after weighing in, as stipulated in the articles of agreement. Should one of the fighters delay the game more than 25 minutes after weighing in, it's going to cost him a lot of money.

SCHWARTZ HAS WEIRDEST CLUB IN THE LEAGUE

By Percy Whiting.

THE opinion prevails in Atlanta that Bill Schwartz is the greatest manager in the world. He has to be to stick up around the top with that ball club of his.

In the Atlanta way of thinking Bill has the weirdest collection of cast-offs misfits and comers that the league ever saw. And yet he sometimes wins games with it.

Of course it happened that yesterday wasn't one of the days, but barring Earl Fleharty's well known "bad inning," which proved to be the fourth, they had at least an even break with the Crackers all the rest of the way.

* * *

FLEHARTY'S "blow" was a profound and spectacular affair. Earl lid by for three innings, thanks to an efficacious prayer and the mystifying effect of a red flannel shirt. Then beginning at the south end of the batting order, the Crackers all took a whack at him. Five hits were made most notable of which was Tommy Long's three-sacker that scored three runs. This was a terrible poke, but even at that the ubiquitous Jud Daley all but nailed it. He got two hands on it, after a bit of jazzy aerial work, but the ball wrenched loose and continued on its course. Maybe if it had not been for Daley's tackle it would have gone for a home-run.

* * *

AFTER Fleharty was allowed to retire Dye went in. This lad had a snappy, twisty delivery and considerable pep. But he could not hold the Crackers, who nicked him for two more runs.

And in the meantime Gilbert Price was pitching good ball. An error made the first brace of Vol runs possible. In the ninth he really weakened a bit, but by then the Crackers were so far ahead that nothing short of an earthquake mattered much.

* * *

WHAT might have been a fast, snappy game was dragged out interminably by the fact that the umpires allowed the players all the time they wanted for arguing. And the Nashville Club needed a good deal.

THE Crackers and the Vols mingle again this afternoon. Dent will probably work for the Crackers. Schwartz did not announce his battery performers. The Vol series closes here Wednesday afternoon and Thursday the Barons and President W. M. Kavanaugh will be here and the local club will be presented the cup for the largest attendance on opening day.

St. Louis Magnates Want Local Franchise

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 17.—The owners of the St. Louis Americans are anxious to break into the Southern League, according to Manager Dobbs, of the Montgomery Club, who corded the story to a Memphis friend.

Manager Dobbs intimated that President Hedges, of St. Louis, had made overtures to the owners of the Atlanta team with a view to purchasing the franchise from the trolley people, but nothing had come of the matter so far.

YANKEE TRAINING METHODS PRAISED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, June 17.—American race horse training methods are coming in for high praise in Germany again this season, owing to the excellent results accomplished by the stable of Baron Oppenheim, the Cologne banker and millionaire, under the direction of J. Hyland, formerly of Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

Although the season has just begun Hyland's mounts already have won more than $50,000 in prize money.

CLEANS BLOOD THROUGH KIDNEYS

A Most Important Function and One To Be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Real Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through this capillary net work that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutrients obtained from grain, meats, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S., so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The Pirates lost their fourth straight game yesterday, dropping a combat to the Braves by a 6 to 5 score.

* * *

The Naps are gunning for the person who whispered in their ear about two weeks ago that Bender and Plank, the pitching mainstays of the Athletics, were about to "crack" from overwork. Plank went against the Naps twice and won twice and Bender engaged them in a battle once and lifted the Nap scalp.

* * *

Russell, the new pitcher of the White Sox, looks like one of the best finds of the season. He pitched his team to another victory yesterday, a 4 to 1 affair, over the Senators.

* * *

* * *

In passing it might be well to keep one's eye on the Red Sox. A few weeks ago they were counted out of the race entirely. They were far below the .500 mark and merely floundered along. But they seem to have recovered and are racing forward with the same dash and speed that carried them to a world's championship last season.

* * *

Few sport writers are brave enough to still predict that the Red Sox will repeat. Just now they are 13½ games, a total of 259 points, behind the leading Athletics, but the Sox seem to have hit their stride at last, and if the Athletics slump, as has been predicted, the Bostonians may surprise the talent by slipping up within grappling distance of the league leaders.

* * *

Falkenberg, the elongated Nap twirler, who annexed a string of ten straight victories, now seems to be after a record of straight defeats. He went against the Athletics yesterday and dropped his third straight game.

* * *

The Dodgers seem to have established a season's record for slugging yesterday when they pounded out twenty hits.

* * *

The Giants had a rather easy time defeating the Reds yesterday.

* * *

The Cubs leaped upon the league leaders yesterday with all their spiked shoes and when the battle smoke cleared away it was found that the Phillies had used seventeen men, including four pitchers, in a vain attempt to grab a victory. The Cubs swatted out fifteen hits, which resulted in thirteen runs, against three for the Phillies.

* * *

The Giants are booming along at a terrific clip and unless the Phillies take a sudden brace the New Yorkers have a chance to overhaul them and take the leadership of the league within two weeks, perhaps less.

* * *

Just now the Giants are only three and one-half games, a total of 77 points, behind the Quakertown Athletics.

* * *

Just because Ty Cobb failed to make a half dozen home runs each day while playing in New York, and because he is batting only about .410, some of the Gotham sport writers are putting the fiery Georgian in the "going back fast" class.

* * *

The Tigers snatched a game from the Yankees in the ninth inning yesterday, going to bat with the score 3 to 2 against them and clubbing out three runs.

Fight Managers Lose Ring Idols
Walsh and Jones Suffer Most

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—Where the fight manager was treading sweet clover a few short weeks ago, he's up to his neck in cactus now.

It looks like a hard summer for this natural enemy of the boxing promoter.

The affable Southern gentleman, Tommy Walsh, has been separated from three meal tickets in less than as many months. First he brought Frankie Burns to the coast only to have the pompadoured one neatly trimmed by little Eddi Campi. Frankie Russell dropped by the wayside and Walsh devoted all his cunning toward getting Joseph Mandot on the map again. When Mandot was beaten by Anderson a few nights ago, Tommy threw up both hands.

Morgan's Meal Ticket Punched.

"Dumb" Dan Morgan was another to have his bread-winner sent to the trash heap. For four years "Kayo" Brown brought in the coin while Dan indulged in the luxury of eating regularly. Brown was knocked out by both Rivers and Anderson, putting himself in the back row and dragging Morgan along. Dan still has Jack Britton on his hands, but the promoters do not seem to be rushing madly after Jack's services.

"Cherokee" Tom Jones lost a fortune builder when Wolgast surrendered to Ritchie. T. J. quickly shanghaied big Jess Willard, only to have him beaten by "Gunboat" Smith. The win was not decisive, however, and Tom may yet be able to work Willard into the "big money" bei

The fatality at Calgary reduced Billy McCarney to the ranks again. After ten years of the "ten, twent and thirt" stuff McCarney finally landed a live wire in Luther McCarty. Billy's prospects were of the best until the unfortunate meeting with Pelky. Also this sad affair put the rollers under Tommy Burns. With his arena burned to the ground and the Canadian authorities up in arms against the boxing game it is not probable that Burns will continue as a promoter.

Harry Gilmore, Jr., the man that "made" Packey McFarland, and one of the cleverest managers in America, has not had a money maker since he and the classy Chicago welter split up. Harry's hopes now are to develop a heavyweight contender in the elephantine "Bull" Young.

Long Increases Lead Over Dave Robertson

Tommy Long, the Crackers' star batter, increased his lead yesterday over Dave Robertson, of Mobile, for the batting leadership of the Southern League. Tommy secured three hits out of five chances yesterday, giving him a batting average of .364 for the season.

Robertson succeeded in pounding out two safeties in his five trips to the plate, giving him a mark of .352 for the season. Kid Elberfeld continues to stay around the top, hitting at a .345 clip.

Here are the averages to date.

Atlantans Only in State Tourney
Fast Play on Piedmont Courts

THE tenth annual tennis tournament for the Georgia State championship, which is attracting much interest among the tennis enthusiasts, will be continued Tuesday afternoon on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club. No matches will be played in the mornings during the tournament, the playing beginning sufficiently early in the afternoons to allow enough time for playing them off. The men's consolation singles will be started this afternoon.

No out-of-town entries have been made in the tournament, those players who had intended entering having been kept away for various reasons. There are some classy local players, however, and the meet will by no means be a slow one.

The results of Monday afternoon's matches were as follows:

First Round.

A. W. Smith won from A. Clarke, 8-6, 2-6, 6-0.

H. J. Hall won from Grover Middlebrooks by default.

S. C. Williams won from Henry Groves by default.

Mansfield won from Orr, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

McLarty won from Sims, 6-4, 6-4.

Matthews won from Drummond Jones by default.

The following men drew byes:

L. D. Scott, G. A. Howell, E. R. Black, Jr., J. Draper, W. Colquitt, F. B. Green, J. B. Williams, C. Y. Smith, T. H. Williams, T. Perry, G. W. McCarty, H. M. Ashe, Jr., W. Nunnally, W. Griffith, Ramspeck, Abbott, Hallman, E. V. Carter, Jr., Martin, Porter, Jennings, Grant, J. Colquitt and V. R. Smith.

G. A. Howell won from L. D. Scott, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Draper won from E. R. Black, Jr., 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

F. B. Green won from W. Colquitt by default.

C. Y. Smith won from J. B. Williams, 6-0, 6-0.

T. H. Williams won from H. Perry by default.

G. W. McCarty won from H. M. Ashe, Jr., 6-4, 6-3.

W. Nunnally won from W. Griffith by default.

Abbott won from Ramspeck by default.

E. V. Carter, Jr., won from Hallman, 6-3, 6-0.

G. R. Porter won from Martin, 6-3, 6-2.

B. M. Grant won from Jennings, 6-3, 6-0.

Third Round.

C. Y. Smith won from F. B. Green, 6-1, 6-3.

HOFMAN MAY QUIT GAME; REFUSES TO JOIN K. C.

PITTSBURG, June 17.—It is said that Artie Hofman, of the Pittsburg National League club, will not go to the Kansas City club of the American Association, to which club he has been assigned by Barney Dreyfuss, the local club owner. Hofman, it is said, will quit baseball.

MADISON, 4; MONROE, 1.

MADISON, GA., June 17.—Madison defeated Monroe here yesterday, 4 to 1. The University of Georgia will be here with its strong aggregation for three games Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

DUNDEE MEETS JACK WHITE ON COAST TO-NIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 17.—Jack White, the Chicago featherweight, and Johnny Dundee will clash in a scheduled twenty-round battle here to-night. Both boys completed training yesterday and look to be in great shape for the fray.

Dundee needed but light work to fit him for the bout, as he had been training to take on Ad Wolgast two weeks ago. When Ad called off the match White at once asked Tom McCarey for a date with the Eastern boy. McCarey readily consented and secured Dundee's signature to a set of articles.

Although Dundee is a 10 to 8 favorite, White money is coming in fast and it would not be surprising to see the Chicago boy enter the ring to-night an even-money bet. White is well known out here as he has had four fights at McCarey's arena and has only been defeated by Joe Rivers. He holds victories over Owen Moran, Frankie Conley and Harry Thomas.

FELSH IS INJURED.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 17.—Shortstop Felsh, of the Wisconsin-Illinois League club here, for whom Detroit and Philadelphia clubs have offered a good price, has gone to Youngstown, Ohio, to have a sprained tendon in his shoulder treated.

"STEEPLEJACK" IS COOL 360 FEET UP.

Offers to Pose on Head at Top of Flag Extending From Roof of Candler Building

It's hot down on the street—but how would you like to be perched on the flagpole which "tops" the seventeen-story Candler Building, where Old Sol's rays get in their fiercest work these days?

Take a squint up that way as you stroll down Peachtree Street and see W. C. Ficken, of 80 Ormond Street, a steeplejack by trade, thoroughly enjoying himself in his eagle's perch. He has been doing such "stunts" as this in and around Atlanta for the past twenty years.

Tuesday he reached what he terms the "climax" of his eventful career, for he has "sat upon" the top of the highest flagpole in the South, according to actual measurements. To be exact, at high noon Tuesday Mr. Ficken quietly viewed the surrounding country from an altitude of 360 feet.

"Don't you feel sort of queer away up there?" he was asked when he had capered down the pole on a rope the size of your little finger.

"Huh, not a bit," he replied between the puffs of his cigarette. "I feel better up there than I do here, by a long shot." And, to demonstrate his prowess in the art of steeplejacking, he offered to "skin" the pole and stand on his head for The Georgian photographer, who was after "cute" poses.

Mr. Ficken says he is the oldest steeplejack, in point of service, in Atlanta—"been at it twenty years and good for another twenty," he says.

Several times, he says, he has had some hair-raising expeirences, but has always come through safely. His most serious mishap was a fall of 40 feet in Madison, Ga., some years ago.

"Just a little Fourth of July celebration," he commented, dryly, in speaking of the incident, "for it happened on the Glorious Fourth."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

Nero, the smallsouled, the vainglorious Roman emperor who made a hell of his empire to find new thrills, lived a chapter of his life again in the wonderful production of Quo Vadis," which began a week's engagement at the Grand Monday night.

With the historical setting true in minutest detail, the wonderful photoplay carries the spectator back into a civilization that neither histories nor drama has adequately described.

For two hours the cinematograph clicked off a vivid picture, whose romantic interest vied with its historic perfection. The pomp of a pagan civilization, the splendor of a mighty nation were depicted in the novel. The pictures supply what in the book must be left to imagination.

An idea of detail to which the producers have paid such close attention may be gained from fact that even the poor sight of Nero was not overlooked. The emperor in the picture carries with him a lorgnette made from an emerald. Costumes, scenes—everything—were of that period nearly 2,000 years ago, when the early Christians were struggling to introduce the newest religion into heathen Rome.

The story as told by the novel is followed closely. And aside from spectacular scenes the story itself calls for closest attention. It runs easily, unfolding naturally as plot gives way to counterplot.

A few years ago the picture would have been impossible. Now, though, producers have learned to perfect setting. In pictures seen daily in the 5-cent houses wonderful illusions are shown; many similar to those in "Quo Vadis." But they can not hold like the play at the Grand. It has a background they lack.

Good Bill at Forsyth.

Augustus Mutt, Mrs. Lina Mutt (Mutt's boss), the two little Mutts and Little Jeff are at the Forsyth this week, and from the reception they got Monday night they are due for a very pleasant visit in the city. Of course, they are in the care of "Bud" Fisher, The American-Georgia cartoonist, which assures them a big week. Mr. Fisher is the headliner of a good bill—a bill that will reward you amply for braving the torrid weather.

Miss Pauline Welch (Mrs. "Bud" Fisher) takes second honors—that is, on the bill. She makes the biggest popular hit of the program with her dainty singing act. She is somewhat "stingy" with her encores—so Monday night's audience evidently thought—but there's quality if not quantity in her turn.

Other acts which go extremely well are Karl Emmy's Pets, a troupe of splendidly trained dogs; Bart McHugh's troup of kiddies in a singing and dancing act, a la Gus Edwards; the Three Leightons, minstrel songs and talk; Whitfield and Ireland, in a small town act, and Adonis and his dog, the former an acrobat.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

New Gas Joke; Read It and Laugh.

The Atlanta detective had just congratulated the West End housewife for bringing about the arrest of a sneak thief.

"Oh, I knew he was a crook the minute he opened his mouth," she replied smilingly.

"How did you spot him so quickly?"

"Why, he told me the gas company had sent him to examine our meter and see if we were not entitled to a rebate."

The Reason That She Gave.

The families of two neighboring houses on an Atlanta street that shall be nameless were playing 10-cent limit poker together. After the busting of a pot the opener drew one card and the mistress of the house where the game was played also drew one. She held, to start with, the deuce, trey, four and five of diamonds, and acquired the six of the same suit.

The opener bet a dime and the woman merely called. When the cards were spread, her husband went up in the air.

"Why didn't you raise that hand?" he exclaimed. "Didn't you know it was worth it?"

Advice as Given To a Tenderfoot.

"When I first went out West I did what nearly every other tenderfoot does—bought one of those broad-brimmed felt hats like the stage cowboys wear, and put it on at the first opportunity.

"Mine wasn't the only one in town, but I felt conspicuous just the same. Somehow or other I hadn't acquired the knack of wearing it. One windy day I was walking down the main street of the town holding onto my hat with one hand and my coat with the other. As I turned a corner the wind seemed to stop blowing, and I let go of the hat, when a sudden gust came, took it off my head and sent it rolling like a frightened hoop down the street.

"I started to give chase, when another hatless man—he was a sure-enough Westerner, too—took me by the arm and said:

"'Don't chase it, pardner; there'll be another one along in a minute.'"

Lawn Party Tuesday Evening at Marist

GEORGIA RED MEN GO TO COLUMBUS

Great Council Meets Wednesday and Thursday for Thirty-fourth Annual Powwow.

COLUMBUS, June 17.—From every section of Georgia Red Men are en route to Columbus for the thirty-fourth annual powwow of the Great Council of the Great Rreservation of Georgia, to be in session here Wednesday and Thursday.

The committees that have charge of the entertainment expect between 175 and 200 chiefs to gather around the camp fires.

Appropriate exercises attendant upon the opening session have been arranged. Pawnee Creek and Osceola Tribes of Red Men have arranged to give the visitors an enjoyable time.

Welcome From Mayor.

On Wednesday morning the first session will be called to order at 10 o'clock and will be opened with the invocation by Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of the First Baptist Church, followed by the address of welcome by Mayor L. H. Chappell on behalf of the city of Columbus, and by B. S. Miller, Senator from the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, in behalf of the Red Men of Columbus. The response will be made by T. H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, great junior sagamore of the Great Council of the United States.

The addresses will be followed by a brief business session, at which the opening business of the great council will be transacted, after which a luncheon will be served in the banquet room of the Masonic Temple.

Trolley and Boat Trips.

The business session of the afternoon will be short, to be followed by a trolley ride around the city. After a two-hour tour, the visitors will be taken by steamer down the Chattahoochee River on a boat excursion. The boat will return to the city about 7 o'clock, and after a brief rest, the visitors and members of the local tribes will have a short business session, after which will take place the Haymakers' parade, which will be led by the Red Men's Drum Corps from Atlanta and the Columbus City Band.

Thursday Morning.

On Thursday morning the business before the Great Council will be continued. There are a number of matters to be disposed of, including the election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place and disposing of numerous other matters.

Only a few visitors had arrived this morning, but it is expected that during the afternoon and evening that large numbers will come in, so they may be present at the opening session Wednesday morning.

Local Red Men are preparing to meet all trains and visitors will be assigned to hotels and given every possible attention in order that they may secure quarters as soon after arriving in the city as possible. The hotels have put forth special efforts for the accomodation of the visiting Red Men, and they will be given the very best to be had.

Biscuit Makers to Improve Crackers

CHICAGO, June 17.—It was decided at the convention of the Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of America that better crackers must be made in order to compete with English biscuits.

"The lower tariff is letting the English product in to compete with us," said Secretary W. H. Brownell. "It means that American manufacturers have got to improve the quality of their goods and raise prices."

Brooks Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president. Secretary Brownell was re-elected.

Gas Kills Chicago Divorcee in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—That Mrs. Viola McKenna Hudson, of Chicago, found dead from gas asphyxiation in her apartments at St. Georges mansion Sunday, came to her death while temporarily insane, was the Coroner's verdict to-day. Mrs. Hudson, a divorcee, was 26 years old and pretty.

Among her effects was the bequest of $5,000 to an Oxford undergraduate.

L. & N.'S MACHINE RATE HELD UNFAIR

Commission Rules on Freight Charges of Several Roads—C. & A. Sugar Tariff Stands.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The rate of 53 cents per 100 pounds on machinery from Saginaw, Mich., to Milton, Fla., over the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was declared unreasonable by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day. The commission held unreasonable the present rates on flour over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad from Dickson, N. Dak., to Kirby and Thermopolis, Wyo.

Rates on sugar and molasses from producing points in Louisiana to Slinton, Iowa, over the Chicago and Alton were held not discriminatory in comparison with rates to Chicago. An advance of 40 per cent in fertilizer rates from Wadesboro, S. C., to various local stations in that State were found to be unreasonable.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and ten other railroads to-day were ordered to accept shipments of flaxseed products from Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., to Galveston, Texas, when for export, notwithstanding their desire to decline such shipments owing to the low rates. The commission finds that the present rate of 16 1-2 cents is unreasonably low. It permits the railroads to impose a charge of 22 1-2 cents per 100 pounds.

HARVESTS ARE GOOD THERE WILL BE PLENTY OF GOLD

Give Calamity Howler Forbes a vacation and us a rest for the balance of the summer. We are tired of his pessimism.

Why fight the Administration, when he must use methods that are "below the belt?"

One day he claims that the banks of the country can't supply the West and South with money to move the splendid crops that are in sight. The next day he claims that the Administration will run all the gold to Europe because it has provided enough emergency currency to move these crops.

He knows you can't legislate gold into America, and that the only way to force it here is by sending our grain and cotton to Europe. This is the law of economics.

He knows that the grain of the West and the cotton of the South have brought gold to America whenever it was claimed that there was a shortage of gold. Neither the gamblers of Wall Street nor the political party in control of the Government ever forced the gold to come back.

If Mr. Forbes will "go way back and sit down" at some sanitarium, regulate his liver, and stay there until the crops are harvested and Europe's gold put on shipboard for America, then Mr. Forbes can go and count the yellow piles that are visible in the banks of America to the credit of our people, and reporting what he finds, he will become an optimist and a helper like other writers.

SHIPPING TIE-UP THREATENED BY COTTON MEN

Conference Over New Rules for Foreign Bills of Lading Expected to Develop Fight.

Cotton buyers, compress owners, bankers, railroad men, and the representatives of the ocean steamship lines meet in Birmingham Wednesday for a conference which will attempt to solve one of the most knotty questions which ever has arisen regarding the movement of the cotton crop in the South.

The steamship lines have announced that they will put into effect within a month, strict regulations governing the baling and marking of cotton. They intend to make notations on the bills af lading describing the condition of the cotton—whether wet or not, properly covered, for instance. Their aim is to avoid the heavy claims for damages which have been made upon them in years past by consignees on the other side who received cotton in bad condition.

The railroads announce that if such notes are put on bills of lading, they will not issue through bills from interior points to destination in Europe, but will issue bills only to shipside.

Banks Would Suffer.

The banks cannot possibly finance the cotton crop unless through bills are issued. On the other hand, if the through bills contain notice of damage, the best authorities agree that they make the banks buying them liable for damages as parties to the merchandise transaction, when their real interest is only as bankers.

A. P. Coles, who has made a deep study of the question, sums it up by saying:

"Why should our bank, for the small profit there is in selling exchange, buy a lawsuit?"

One conference already has been held in Atlanta on the subject, at which the steamship interests were not represented.

In Birmingham, a desperate effort will be made to get a compromise. It is admitted that the cotton trade of the South loses millions yearly by wasteful handling of the crop; careless baling, second-hand bagging, and so on.

It is pointed out, though, that these practices cannot be reformed from the top. They must begin with the planter. Education of the cotton grower will require years, and no fiat of the steamship companies can bring about such a change in a few weeks.

Coles to Speak.

Mr. Coles, vice president of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, probably will make one of the principal arguments. He has found a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission which he believes covers the case like a blanket. This decision governs the demurrage charges on cotton at Galveston.

In effect, it says that, while the Commission cannot force the railroads to issue through bills of lading via Galveston, it can compel the practice to be stopped at all other ports unless Galveston is so favored; while it cannot compel through bills of lading on cotton, it can stop issuance of through bills on all other commodities if cotton is not so handled. It can compel, too, installation of proper facilities to prevent cotton being damaged while in transit.

Mr. Coles proposes to threaten laying the case before the Interstate Commerce Commission with a request for a parallel ruling if the matter is not adjusted.

Letters from the National City Bank of New York City, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Blyth & Bonner, exchange brokers, and others who handle millions of dollars' worth of cotton bills yearly, express their opinion that a bill of lading with notice of damage on it will be unbankable, and say, too, that they believed the matter had been settled at a conference in New York last August.

Browne, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Heavy continental realizing; feeling in advance not warranted."

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 17.—The continued decline in English consols during the past few days suggests some unfavorable political development. Liverpool came in rather disappointing, with futures only 2 to 3 points up; were due 6 to 7 points higher; spots 5 points higher; sales 8,000 bales. This shows that the advance has its origin and seat in New York and is of professional character, with an attempt to run in shorts as its sole basis. It may sound paradoxical, but it is nevertheless true that, owing to the fact that the general situation is bearish and crop prospects so good, the market advanced because of the short interest accumulated and the bearish outlook for the future, which gave the professionals a chance to work.

Weather conditions continue very good. There were some nice rains overnight in the southern half of Texas, while fair weather prevailed elsewhere. Warm night minimums throughout the belt. Indications are for a continuance of these favorable conditions. After the close of New York yesterday, our market jumped up on the execution of stop limits bringing it out of line with the others. This morning, therefore, prices dropped 10 to 20 points, but selling was timid, and New York again soon advised buying of July and August by spot interests and the market recovered in anticipation of a further advance, which soon appeared, October here selling to 11.75 by 11 o'clock.

NEW CROP DEMAND SENDS COTTON UP

Spot Houses and Shorts Continue to Buy in Face of Extremely Bearish Sentiment.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Liverpool did not respond to our advance yesterday, resulting in the market opening barely steady, with first prices at a net decline of 1 to 5 points from Monday's final. But for overnight buying orders the initial quotations would have been much lower. The feeling around the ring is bearish and many expressed the belief that we should have a good reaction as weather continues favorable. Weather dispatches reported clear weather over the belt.

After the call offerings became scarce and scattered, resulting in a short covering movement. Spot houses also bought. All the loss was quickly recovered and prices during the late forenoon were some 2 to 15 points higher than the opening quotations. The advance was based chiefly on the rumor that the Government's weekly weather report would be very unfavorable, owing to the cold weather last week, but private reports say that no damage of consequence was done and temperatures over the entire belt are entirely normal.

The weather map indicated part cloudy in the western half, possibly more rain in the central, south and west Texas. This, coupled with the weekly weather report, being much better than generally expected, encouraged freer offerings during the early afternoon session, resulting in prices shading a few points from the early best, when July reached 12.22, August 12.19, October and December 11.75. However, there was too much steam behind the market and prices quickly retrieved the loss and rallied to the high point.

One broker was credited with buying 50,000 bales, which was believed to be short covering. It is generally believed that the short interest has been greatly eliminated and prices will recede on any further favorable weather or crop advices.

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Market Showed Better Tone Than for Some Time—Offerings Eliminated Considerably.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 17.—A bearish tendency marked the opening of the Stock Exchange to-day and prices of most of the issues were from ½ to 2⅝ lower, Canadian Pacific being the leader in the downward movement, with a loss of 2⅜. After a half hour, however, a rallying sentiment developed and most of the stocks which had suffered declines made partial recoveries. United States Steel common and Reading again were very active, the former losing ½ and the latter selling from 155⅞ to 156¼. This last quotation represented a gain of ¼. Among the declines were Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Can, ½; American Smelting, ½; Atchison, ½; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅝; Union Pacific, 1; Southern Pacific, ⅝; Pennsylvania, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅛; Missouri Pacific, ⅝; Mexican Petroleum, ½; Lehigh Valley, ⅛; Erie, ½; Chino Copper, ½. California Petroleum gained ¼.

The curb market was heavy.

Americans in London lacked leadership and were lower. Canadian Pacific in London was weak on Continental selling.

After the first few minutes of unsettled trading, Reading assumed the market leadership and advanced over 2 points. This upward movement influenced trading all through the list. New Haven rose 2 points to 104, and Canadian Pacific made a gain of over 2½ to 218. Copper was up 1⅛ at 66¼. Union Pacific, Steel and the railroads scored considerable advances. Call money loaned at 2⅛.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mean temperatures ranged from 2 to 14 below normal generally over the cotton belt, the greatest deficiency being in South Carolina and Northern Georgia. The weekly mean temperatures ranged from 60 to 76 over eastern, 68 to 74 over central and 66 to 78 over western part of the cotton States. The lowest weekly mean, 60 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 78 degrees, at San Antonio and Del Rio, Texas. Frost was reported from Pike County, Alabama, and Bentonville, Ark. Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region except in north central part and over a small area in Texas, where there was no rain.

The rainfall was generally light and unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Florida, Georgia and Oklahoma.

The greatest weekly amount, 1.60, occurred at Valdosta, Ga.

Corn—No. 2 63
Oats—No. 2 ..... 42@43

CHICAGO, June 17.—Wheat showed early losses of 1c to 1⅜c on the change to scattered rains in the Northwestern or spring wheat country and generally lower temperatures up there. There was some reaction from the lowest levels reached on short covering. Northwestern receipts were double those of a year ago, but Winnipeg receipts were smaller than a year ago. The European visible showed a fair decrease for the week, but cables refused to respond to the strength at Chicago yesterday.

Corn was off ⅛c to ⅜c early, with the weather the principal weakening factor. The lowest levels were not the ruling prices toward the close of the first hour, as shorts were good buyers.

Oats were a shade higher at the start, but they sold off with the other grains, only to react from the bottom prices.

Provisions were lower.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 17.—It is believed that big short line was covered to-day, forcing prices up rapidly. Liverpool did not respond to our strength of yesterday, and cables said Continent was realizing on recent purchases. Soon as shorts are eliminated the market will lose steam, and with favorable weather should decline.

The weekly weather report is more favorable than expected and eased prices down from the top.

Concerning Range Fowls Should Have

Free Range Has Its Advantages and Disadvantages. Read the Following Article Carefully.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

JUDGE MARSHALL—I hear many conflicting opinions about range for fowl. Some contend that they will do but little good without it while others say that they are better confined to yards where one can have better control of them and manage them at will. I am at a loss to know what to do in the matter. Whether to arrange to have it or to depend upon the yards. I would like to have your opinion about it if you please, sir. Thanking you, I am, your truly, R. J. S., Covington, Ga.

ANSWER—Range is good and it is not good. Free range has its advantages and its disadvantages. For the quick growing of young stock free range is the very thing. They need all kinds of exercise for the exercise of their rapidly developing muscles.

In order to get the very best there is in these little but rapidly expanding bodies it is necessary that they shall be on the go from morning to night. There is no other way to get such exercise out of them but from the free range where they are jumping from one thing to another; first a bug on the spring and then the scratching out of the worm? and so it goes form morning to night. In addition to what they get in the shape of grain that is furnished them by the keeper they are filled up with bugs, worms, seeds and every conceivable thing that is intended by Nature to make them grow. They come in at night filled to the neck and are soon snugly asleep in their coops. Is it any wonder that they are on tip toe and ready to get out long before the old hens think of getting off the roost. They grow like weeds. How different they will be from the little fellows that are closely yarded, unless the yarded ones have had unusual attention. By unusual attention we mean that they have had all their little wants supplied from start to finish in a way that few persons attend to them. We have seen Brahmas and Cochins hatched in June and July large enough and good enough looking to take prizes at our best mid-winter poultry shows. It was no boy work, however.

It was accomplished by the best chicken raisers in this country. And the secret was free range of the very finest kind; apple orchards flowing with blue grass, meadows full of grasshoppers, grain fields of various kinds where they could find the stuff that stuck to the ribs at any time from dawn to dark. Nothing short of such conditions could have produced this phenomenal growth. For it really was a phenomenal growth when you think what it meant to grow an eight or nine-pound Brahma from June to the first of February. Aside from the great growth in avoirdupois they had the finest plumage that one could ever dream of seeing. Almost like silk velvet to the touch, and every feather in its place. For conditioning old hens or cocks for the coming breeding season the wide and good range is the very ideal place; nothing can take its place. They will not lay so many eggs while doing this kind of summer outing business. But next year's results in better and more fertile eggs, stronger chicks from those eggs all down the line will well repay for any lapse in the egg laying. Laying that is the con side of the question. If it is eggs you are after day in and day out avoid the unlimited range. Hens will not lay so many eggs where they have nothing to do but run over a hundred-acre farm from morning to night.

They will lay pretty well. Some of them will lay awhile others will take it up so that where a farmer has a hundred or so hens he will think he is getting about all the time and in goodly numbers, and so he will be but let him keep a record of his hens and the eggs laid and compare them with the fellow who lives in the village and is obliged to keep his hens yarded where they get quite a little exercise, but are not in a position where they are really running their legs off as it were. The village fellow will if he knows how to handle hens in confinement in a satisfactory manner beat him almost two to one. This has been tried many a time and the balance is usually in favor of the yarded hen.

So you see why we answered yes and no. The growing chicks need it while the hens for eggs will get down to business better in the yard. Then too it is so much better for the handling of eggs for the market to have the hens yarded that the eggs may all be laid in good clean nests rather than under the barn in the fence corners and brush piles and so on, as every one who has observed must know.

Leg Weakness.

Judge Marshall—I would like for you to tell me what ails my chicks and give me a remedy, if you please. I find them sitting or staggering around at first. Then they would get so they could not walk at all, but even then they would eat and seem well otherwise. They sometimes linger this way for several days, and toward the end they are perfectly helpless. I thought perhaps it was rheumatism, but did not know what to do for it. Respectfully,

Cope, S. C. MRS. G M. B.

Answer.—In old fowls we would call it rheumatism; in young ones it would more naturally be of the nature of leg weakness, and might be caused by a number of different things. Brooder chicks often show leg weakness from the brooder floor being too warm or the feeding of too much starchy food and not enough green food, causing an overgrowth of the body without sufficient bone development; or damp quarters, in connection with improper feeding, will cause a complication of leg weakness and rheumatism. Where there is much rheumatism you will notice the jerking of the limbs in walking, with evidences of pain. At times there is a swelling of the joints also. For immediate and quick relief about 10 grains of epsom salts to a teaspoonful of water for chicks 6 weeks old or older. Then add to the drinking water of the flock so affected 30 grains of bicarbonate of soda to the half-gallon of water. Every third day substitute 25 grains of salicylic acid to the same amount of water. But remember, surrounding conditions, with the proper feed in variety, will do much toward helping matters.

Eggs—All Varieties.

THE EGGS of different varieties of fowls will be found classified under their respective breeds in the future, instead of under the classification of "Eggs."

CLEANLINESS PAYS; it is a big factor in successful poultry raising; you simply can not get good results from your hens if they have lice or mites on them. We carry Lee's, Conkey's and Pratt's liquid lice killer and will guarantee either of them to rid your chickens of these pests; 35c qt.; 60c ½ gal.; $1 gal.

WE CARRY all the leading brands of lice powder. 25c, 50c and $1 a pkg.

FOR THE NEXT few days we will have a special sale on chick feed; Red Comb chick feed, $2.15 per 100 lbs.; 50 lbs., $1.15; 10 lbs., 25c. Pratt's chick feed, $4.75 per 100 lbs.; 50 lbs. $2.40; 6 lbs., 25c. These prices are about 25 per cent lower than the usual prices and it will pay any one to take advantage of them. Phone us your orders.

A BEAUTIFUL lot of ferns, 50 cents up to $2.00.

EVERY HEN should pay her own board and make a profit for you; begin now feeding Poultry Regulator; it helps the hens through the molt and greatly increases egg production. 25c, 50c and 50 per pkg.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Transferred On Marietta Street

The transfer of a lease on central property on Marietta Street was interesting in Tuesday's real estate news. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company has bought the stock of drugs and the lease of the Braselton Drug Company at the northeast corner of Marietta and North Forsyth Streets. The lease calls for the expenditure of about $6,000 a year and has about three years to run. The property is in the DeGive estate. The Jacobs Pharmacy Company now has eleven drug stores in the city.

Increase in Building.

The first sixteen days in June show a decided increase in building over the corresponding period during 1912. The figures are $412,501, as against $192,593, a gain of $219,908. Figures since January 1 give 1912 an advantage, however, with a difference of $365,291. This difference is explained by the fact that a number of large buildings were started during the period last year.

Deals in Postoffice Section.

Papers in the transfer of three valuable parcels in the postoffice section have gone to record. Mrs. Mary E. Barrow bought for $15,000 from the Georgian Realty Company a 20-by-60-foot lot on Poplar Street, 20 feet south of Fairlie, and from B. M. Grant and others a 20-by-73-foot lot on Walton Street, 110 feet southeast of Bartow Street, for a consideration that is withheld. A warranty deed has been given by James Stokes, of New Jersey, to Mrs. Lena Swift Huntley on the northwest corner of James and Fairlie Streets, 50 by 100 feet, for $12,000.

Effect of Segregation.

Real estate men are busy figuring out probable effects of the proposed segregation law. The opinion seems to be that this action will help some property and hurt other property. Fourth Ward people are elated, since the law is aimed especially at the negro sections in that locality. Many real estate men saved copies of the ordinance so they might know what course to pursue in renting houses.

Building at East Point.

Some 40 houses have been built at East Point since January 1, according to the estimate of Gid Hanna, a resident of that section and a well-known real estate dealer. Of these, Colonel I. N. Ragsdale built about twelve bungalows.

Smith Estate Sale.

The sale of parcels in the Peter Francisco Smith estate, which will occur at the court house door Tuesday, July 1, will be entirely technical, to remove titles from court. The Smith estate embraces the southeast corner of Peachtree Street and Forrest Avenue, the home place at the southeast corner of Forrest Avenue and Courtland Street, and other valuable pieces. The terms will be cash.

North Fulton Enhancement.

Probably no section around Atlanta has experienced more rapid enhancement in property values than the section about Buckhead. A comparison of prices will serve to illustrate. When the Fulton County Almshouse property was put up at auction two or three years ago, lots along Piedmont Road near Roswell Road brought as little as $3 and $4 a front foot, and some "inside" acreage brought as low as $75 and $100. Now these same lots are in the market at $20 to $40 a foot, and the owners are not very anxious to sell; and the acreage is held at about $300. Lots which are now $100 a foot on Peachtree in the neighborhood of Mrs. Carrie L'Engle's and Colonel Walter P. Andrews' homes changed hands about a year ago at $70, a clear advance of $30 a foot. A lot opposite James R. Gray's country home south of Buckhead was recently offered at $92 a foot, and the price of $65 a foot has been hung up at Buckhead for business lots. In fact, lots as far north as Piedmont Avenue have brought $60 and $65 a foot, and the prices promise to ascend steadily.

Peachtree values have never failed to rise. One or two lots in the Brookwood section have been offered at $200 a foot, but they are few and far between. Ten years ago a man with $5,000 cash could have bought enough land at Brookwood to have made him independent to-day. Some did, and they have had no cause to worry.

Fast Paving Peachtree.

The bitulithic paving which was started some weeks ago on Peachtree Road at Buckhead is now nearly done, and in a few more days automobilists will be able to drive over one of the finest stretches in the Southern States. The paving extends northeast to the DeKalb County line, a distance of about two miles.

In this section are some of the best highways to be found anywhere, other good roads being Piedmont Road, Roswell Road, Pace's Ferry Road and Wesley Avenue. The Welauca Road is undergoing extensive improvements, and the Ivey Road, leading off Piedmont Avenue at W. J. Stoddard's place, is due to be cherted and worked out this year. The county convict gang is encamped on McCullough Bros.' land on the Welauca Road and it has much more road work in prospect.

Lot Sales Aggregate $23,000.

L. C. Ball, associate sales manager of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency, reports lot sales aggregating $23,000 the past week. Most of these were in the Peachtree Highlands subdivision, at Piedmont Road. Paving and street work in this neighborhood have attracted a great many home-seekers of late.

Oglethorpe University Plans.

Funds for Oglethorpe University are said to be well in hand, and the erection of buildings at Silver Lake, DeKalb County, near the Capital City Country Club, will start about January 1, 1914. The establishment of this university is of special interest to real estate men on account of the influence it will have in the development of land tracts which will cluster about it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent on the buildings and the grounds, and many subdivisions are expected to start soon after the university has opened its doors.

THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN

All Civilized Nations Should Unite in Defense of Civilization

THE GEORGIAN prints on this page to-day the well-known prophetic cartoon of the Emperor of Germany, published some years ago, in which the Archangel Michael is shown warning the Powers of Europe against a threatened Oriental invasion.

The cross of Christianity is displayed above the nations of Europe, and amid the smoke and flames of the devastating invasion are shown the outlines of the statue of Buddha.

This cartoon showed the concern of the Kaiser of Germany for the Christian and civilized nations of Europe. We assume that the Kaiser and Germany generally are concerned for Christianity and civilization throughout the world. We can hardly believe, then, that Count Reventlow voices the sentiment of the Kaiser and the sentiment of the people of Germany when he sees only a possible trade advantage to Germany in a Buddhist Oriental nation occupying the western slopes of the North American continent.

Are not the German Kaiser and the German people concerned more for Christianity and civilization than they are for a fancied, and purely fancied, trade advantage? Does the Kaiser's favorite cartoon apply only to the Christian and civilized nations of Europe, and not the Christian and civilized nations of America and Australasia and elsewhere?

We can say with confidence that the view of the Kaiser and of the German people as a whole is not so narrow and so venal.

Count Reventlow's utterances are both brutal and bigoted, both selfish and shortsighted. No good can come to Christianity and civilization anywhere by the weakening of the power and progress of Christianity and civilization in any nation, in any section of the globe.

If the struggle is in behalf of Christianity and civilization, of human progress and human liberty, then all the nations of the world which believe in these ideals should unite to further them and to oppose any influence which threatens them.

No petty prejudice, no small selfishness, no baser passions of envy or jealousy or greed, should cause distrust and defection, with the possibility of defeat and disaster to the common cause.

Let the Kaiser modify his cartoon to make it include the United States and Canada and Australasia, to make it include all Christian and civilized nations everywhere, and he will make it more worthy of himself, more worthy of his people, more worthy of the Christian spirit he is seeking to express, the civilized conditions he is seeking to preserve.

On such a broad and lofty platform the Christian and civilized nations of the world could be united, and should be united, for the advancement and advantage of all humanity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"NATIONS OF EUROPE, GUARD YOUR PRECIOUS POSSESSIONS!"

Why Women Should Vote

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY.

The Stranger and "Small Town" Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyrighted, 1913, by the Star Co.)

THE menu in your home may be the best in the world; yet, because you are accustomed to it, you find a new zest in food placed before you when you visit other homes, or sit at hotel tables.

The eye, the ear, the mind, the taste all find a keener pleasure in the unaccustomed at certain intervals, even when that which is offered is less admirable.

In an interesting letter which discusses to some length the follies of my own sex, the weakness of his, a question of interest is propounded by a man of culture. After reviewing the numerous tragedies which have occurred from time to time as the result of infatuation of young women in villages and interior towns through love affairs with strangers, the correspondent says:

Dreams of Sweetheart.

"It has always been a great mystery to me why the stranger within our gates has such fascinating attractions for some of our American girls. I shall eschew the engagements and marriages of American heiresses to foreigners. Every one knows the reasons. But the question is a subtle and far-reaching one. Let a total stranger, of good appearance and polite address, come to a town and at once he is the favorite with the girls at the prayer meeting and picnic. The actor, the drummer, the ball player, yes, even the prize fighter, in competition for the hand and heart of the reigning belle, will nearly always outdistance the Georgies and Charlies and Willies of the town. Is it hero worship, or what is it?"

To the man or woman who understands what the imaginative and romantic temperament means this question would suggest its own answer.

While familiarity does not always or often breed "contempt," it does destroy, as a rule, romantic illusions.

The average young girl—God bless her!—is possessed of a good share of sentiment and romance in her thoughts of the lover waiting for her somewhere in the world.

She invests him with the qualities most desirable in her estimation and perhaps drawn to some extent from the novels she has read. He is a creature of her dreams and meditations, and it is not to be supposed that she will readily clothe the youth with whom she has played "tag" and "I spy" in the garments of her dreams.

The boy who has been repeatedly punished at school or whipped by an older brother in her presence or who has been the cause of disagreeable neighborhood criticisms because of his oversupply of youthful vitality; the boy who has teased and tormented her and shown all the unattractive traits of the average growing lad is not liable to become her ideal by any sudden transformation.

The stranger who comes to town has passed through all these unattractive phases in his own village, and he may be far less worthy of her admiration and much further removed from the standard of her ideal than her old playmate, but she sees in him the object of her dreams, free from all crudity, and he seems to her a wholly superior being.

Whatever he may have been in the process of evolution, she finds him her finished ideal when they meet.

He has come into her life suddenly, and by the will of kind Providence she believes.

There is a novelty in all he says and does; he has a new trick of pronunciation, or a new set of phrases and he brings the atmosphere of a new world into her monotonous life. He tells her of new scenes, new people.

It is as if she had listened all her life to one air, and now a new melody is sounded. Harmonies undreamed of become perceptible to the ear of her heart. She listens to his recital of boyish days and pranks, and while the tales he relates differ little from the actions of the boys with whom she has been reared, they are surrounded with a halo of charm in her mind which places his past in a realm quite apart from the commonplace; and it is this commonplace association of neighborhood life which has stood between her dreams and her boy lovers.

Whatever affairs of the heart the stranger may have passed through in his evolving period, she has not been a witness thereof nor a confidant of the other maidens in the case, as she has been with her childhood's companions.

When he tells her that he loves her, she does not recall the fact that two or three years ago he was the devoted cavalier of her sister, or her cousin, or her rival in the high school.

Blessed Is She.

And the accident of their meeting, the day they first looked into each other's faces, the hour they first spoke—all these incidents are thrilling and wonderful and food for hours of happy memories.

Blessed is she to whom such memories and dreams remain forever surrounded by a romantic halo! For never in any ordinary association of childhood and never in the more commonplace development of friendship into love can there be found quite the depth of joy and sentiment which results from the sudden advent of a great and lasting love.

The Back Yard Stock Farm

By WEX JONES.

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I used to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew,
For rent was high, and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of ham,
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.

*For whalebone. Corsets, you know.

Inspiring Line Versus Firing Line

By THOMAS TAPPER.

(I)

TO THE BOSS:

EVERY business organization possesses its misfits.

What can be done with them?

The easiest solution of the problem is to discharge them, shut your eyes and draw again.

The economic way is to open your eyes and study the situation and develop them.

There is some trouble involved in this. But no more than a carpenter encounters when he has to cut and plane a piece of wood to make it fit a certain place. He might overhaul a million feet of lumber before finding exactly the piece he needs.

It is his ready skill for altering the length and shape of lumber, for adjusting it to his purposes that makes him a carpenter.

A quick eye, an observing mind, a few tools by the help of which he can carry out his ideas and he can adjust means to ends without trouble, delivering a solid and efficient job.

Misfits in business are rough timber. Everyone is good for something. They may not make good tops for mahogany tables, but they are useful somewhere.

(II)

TO THE WORKER:

THE business organization in which you work can use all your thought and strength.

A certain amount of shaping and fitting is necessary to make you and the job balance perfectly.

Your own intelligence, plus the demands of your work, plus the directions you receive from the Boss, should result in an adjustment that will make you indispensable.

This is the secret of all the Getting-on-in-Life that everybody is so anxious to attain.

Many a man will cheer himself red in the face to see a second baseman play good ball. He is cheering efficiency. By watching that man he will learn the whole philosophy of doing teamwork in his own shop.

Take the second baseman from his place and put in a minister, or a shoemaker, and the game may be humorous, but it will not be efficient.

(III)

TO BOTH OF YOU:

WHEN two people have signed up for the purpose of doing one thing as well as it can be done, both must travel in the same direction and keep step to the music of the business. One can not lag behind when the double-time march begins.

The man who doesn't feel like marching at a double-time gait must either change his feelings or get out of line. But wherever he goes he must remember this: When a lot of men get together without purpose or leadership, they make up a Crowd. When they get together with a purpose, keep step and march straight on, they make a Procession.

And about all a crowd is fit for is to stand around and see the procession march by.

: The Lesson From Flag Day :

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"Hats off!"
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles and the sound of drums—
A flash of color beneath the sky—
"Hats off!"
The flag is passing by!

THE youth of a republic are its strength and hope. The decision of each man's destiny involves, in part, the common weal. The sentiments of youth make the policies of men. The State supplants the school, the student merges into the citizen. The schoolroom of yesterday is the forum of to-day, the playgrounds of to-day are the battlefields of to-morrow. The spirit planted in the bosoms of youth blossoms into the ballots or bayonets of manhood, and a mother-er's whisper in her children's ears may be the boom of cannon in the years to come.

It is well that Flag Day has become a national holiday. There was never a nobler or a wiser movement than to give one day of our national life to the national flag. Our Star Spangled Banner is the symbol of our country, and all policy and all patriotism unite in the effort to teach our country's children to love and to revere it.

It Is Inspiring.

As a thing symbolic, splendid, inspiring, it should be honored throughout the land.

The flag was George Washington's individual Declaration of Independence—his private pioneer defiance of England and the King. He made it first, he waved it first. Six months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, on July 4, 1776, and nearly eighteen months before the Continental Congress, on June 14, 1777, formally adopted the flag George Washington floated over his headquarters at Cambridge the Stars and Stripes. If the Revolution had failed, that flag alone and that flag's defiance would have condemned him to death.

Even so Charles Carroll, signing the Declaration, was reminded "There are other Carrolls," and swiftly the brave Marylander added, "Of Carrollton"—which was Carroll's dauntless acceptance of personal responsibility and his defiance of the King.

The spirit of Washington and the spirit of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was the spirit of individual responsibility and of individual and dauntless devotion. It should be the spirit of to-day. The Republic is verging to its zenith and patriotism should be at its prime. Our country is greater and stronger than it has ever been before, and the spirit of love and devotion in its people had never more to inspire it than now.

In every schoolhouse, in every public hall, in every home and in every hand, native or foreign born, the flag of our country should be displayed on Flag Day every year.

Not only in our splendid and inspiring youth, but in our stalwart and grateful manhood, should this spirit be expressed. Every great and noble sentiment that wraps our country's present and its future should rally around the colors of the republic.

More than ever before to the children of the republic and to its men and women should these stripes and stars from "Old Glory" stand for the essentials of power, protection and progress.

The Spirit of the Country.

The flag must stand for a constructive policy and for an ample navy to sustain it. It should stand in every instance for the right of our country to manage its own affairs. It should stand for clear treaties and every just advantage which is ours—even if it takes new treaties to secure it—for the right to fortify its great canal and to regulate its commerce.

It should stand for the right of its separate States to regulate their own affairs under the Federal Government in matters vital to the interests of its people.

The flag should stand for a constructive, and not a destructive, policy in business—regulated by a reduced but reasonable tariff for the protection of our industries and by reciprocal agreements to protect our international trade.

The flag should wave over a magnificent merchant marine. It should redeem the desolate harbors in which its glorious colors are rarely seen, and float above our country's commerce in its own ships on every sea.

It should stand for a constructive policy of durable and universal peace by being duly and fully prepared for war.

Above all present things, the flag should stand for the power to back its policies with argument in peace and with the ample equipment of a powerful navy for defense and for offense in war.

The Glory of the Flag.

The glory of our flag was made by the power and the glory of a strong and dauntless navy. It must be sustained by the power of a strong and ample navy. So long as other nations front the world with battleships and armed battalions our country must front the world with battleships and battalions. And because we are richer and more isolated than other nations we must see to it that our battleships are as many and as strong as those of any nation that may menace us upon either of our ocean coasts.

MILITANTS' CHIEF NEXT SUFFRAGE MARTYR

Mrs. Pankhurst in Desperate Condition After Second Release Following Hunger Strikes.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 17.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the union, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday for the second time since being sentenced to three years for conspiracy, because of illness brought on by a hunger strike, was reported to-day to be in a serious condition.

So ill is Mrs. Pankhurst said to be from self-starvation that defendants in Old Bailey Court predicted she would be the second "martyr" of the "cause."

A society event was made out of the final day of the trial of the six militant suffragette leaders and male adherent, all charged with malicious destruction of property, in Old Bailey Court.

A great throng of fashionably dressed women struggled with militants and non-militants for seats. Among those present were Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Premier, and Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

The defendants were allowed to address the court in their own behalf, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the "business agents" of the Women's Social and Political Union, made an impassioned and dramatic appeal.

In conclusion she raised her fists above her head and shouted: "If I have got to die to get the vote, then I am willing to die right now."

All R. R. Scales To Be Inspected by U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—As a result of complaints from shippers as to the weights charged for by railroads the Federal Bureau of Standards expects to begin, soon after July 1, the inspection of railroad scales, starting with Eastern roads.

The railroads annually collect approximately $2,260,000,000 from the shippers of the country on scales which belong to and are operated entirely by the roads, and over which neither the shipper nor the Government has any control of any information as to the correctness of the scales.

Doctor to Report On City's Milk Supply

Atlanta's milk supply will be discussed at a luncheon next Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Hotel. A report will be made by Dr. S. A. Visanska, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on milk supply.

B. M. Hood, director of the Chamber of Commerce division of health, will deliver an address. President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside at the luncheon.

Voliva Does Flip-flop On Woman Suffrage

ZION CITY, ILL., June 17.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to John Alexander Dowie, who said recently, "I hope the good Lord calls us all home before the women get into Congress," announced to-day that he was converted to the cause of suffrage. He is a full believer, he declared, in the right of women to vote.

The woman suffrage law in Illinois will increase the vote of Voliva's party in Zion City between 600 and 700 ballots.

Prefers Husband as Her Platonic Friend

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—Mrs. Joseph Lander Eastland, wife of the Venezuelan Consul at San Francisco, and a society leader there, who is suing for divorce at San Diego, today said:

"I hope to restore through divorce the beautiful friendship which my husband and I lost in marriage. That's why I'm suing him now."

Making a Touch

DR. COOK TO HEAD TRIP TO ARCTIC AGAIN

Dr. Cook, of Polar fame, is going polaring again—in other words, he has an "itching of the feet and a trembling of the hands, real signs of wanderlust," according to a statement at the Hotel Aragon Monday afternoon.

"Yes, the fever has me again," said the genial doctor. "It always strikes me about this time of the year, but I'm in for it in real dead earnest this time, and just as soon as I get the Polar matter cleaned up satisfactorily I am going on another expedition to the North Polar regions, where there remains much work to be done. I will make an expedition also to Mount Everest, about which there is a great deal to be learned."

Dr. Cook said he would like to get on the way even sooner, but could not do so until the Polar controversy had been settled, as he owes this debt to his family and to his good name.

Dr. Cook's announcement of his intention to lead further expeditions into the Far North came in connection with an interview on "Foolish Questions I Have Been Asked the World Over" since the world-famous Polar controversy began.

Some Questions Asked Him.

In reply, the doctor, to begin with, made the rather interesting statement that the questions varied with the times.

"The questions fired at me now by newspaper men and others are vastly different from those which used to be propounded a year or so ago," said he, "but there are some extremely funny ones yet.

"'Did you find a hole at the pole?' is a query which has greeted me a thousand times.

"'Did you get very cold at the pole?' is another familiar one.

"'Can you freeze anything up at the pole?' is another.

"'Doctor, from your observations at the pole, do you really think the world is round?' has been asked by not a few of the old-timers.

"'What did you go to the pole for?' 'What's the good of it?' 'Can people live up there?' 'Do you like dog meat?' 'Are the Eskimo women good lookers?' are others which have been asked in various parts of the world.

Women Curious About Babies.

"Perhaps the most interesting questioners, however," continued the doctor, "are the women, who always want to know how the Eskimo babies manage to live and thrive in such a cold country."

In commenting particularly on the "interviewing methods" of the newspaper men of the world, Dr. Cook said the French reporter always wanted to know 'How did you feel?' or 'How did you like dog meat?' In other words, something along emotional lines. The German, he said, manifests interest in the material things, while the Scandinavian reporter always shows interest in the natural scenery and the like.

"And the Englishman?" queried the reporter.

"He," replied Dr. Cook, "he—has to have it written out for him."

Burns Finds Woman Who Lifted $60,000

ROME, June 17.—W. J. Burns has located Mrs. Antonio Musica, wife of the head of the hair importing firm of New York. She has been shamming serious illness and hence has not been arrested by the Italian police.

She feared arrest because a complicity with her husband in fleecing a Naples bank out of $60,000.

Illinois Suffragists To Celebrate July 4

CHICAGO, June 17.—The mammoth suffrage demonstration to have been held within 24 hours after Governor Dunne signs the bill enfranchising women will be held in Chicago on July 4. The measure will become a law on July 1.

Miss Jane Addams will return from Budapest, where she is representing this State at the suffrage conference, and suffragettes from every county in the State will take part in a big parade.

English Polo Stars Praise Americans

NEW YORK, June 17.—The defeated English polo stars to-day made preparations for sailing for their homes on Thursday. They were given a farewell banquet at the Meadowbrook New York Club last night by August Belmont.

About 45 men who have figured prominently in polo in the last generation were seated around the horseshoe-shaped table. The Englishmen gave a toast to President Wilson, to King George, to their erstwhile polo rivals, and then said that "defeat has left no wound; the better team won."

B. Sanders Walker's Widow Gets $50,149

MACON, GA., June 17.—There will be no contest over the payment of the $232,000 insurance carried by the late B. Sanders Walker. This was indicated to-day when the Union Central paid Mrs. Walker a check for $50,149.50. This is the first of the large policies carried by Walker to be paid. It was taken out last December, and a premium of $1,200 was all that had been paid on it.

It is announced that policies for $81,000 and $60,000 will also be paid this week.

Six-Inch Limit for Dance Hugs Urged

CHICAGO, June 17.—Dancers who receive the approval of the United Professional Teachers of Dancing will remain six inches apart. The organization, which is holding a convention here, to-day voted to ask every community in the country to appoint a censor for dancing.

"Until private club dances are censored, the eyebrow gavotte, the horse trot and other bad dances will cause us trouble," said W. F. Braun, of Pittsburg, member of the advisory board.

Loses His Countess Because of Religion

BIARRITZ, June 17.—The Marquis de Alcedo, of Spain, announces that there will be no marriage between his daughter, Ysabel, Countess Bannelos, and Maurice Burke-Roche, of New York. The Marquis states that religious differences make such a union impossible.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago.

Lane Urges Law to Drain Swamp Lands

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Secretary Lane has submitted a recommendation to Congress for the drainage and reclamation of public swamp and overflowed lands in any State or Territory.

Mr. Land authorized an agreement with Oregon to co-operate in the construction of the Tunlo irrigation project, comprising 35,000 acres, to cost $900,000.

Mrs. Astor to Visit Vincent at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., June 17.—For the first time in five years Mrs. Astor and her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, will come to Beechwood, the Astor residence here, as guests for the summer of her son Vincent.

Vincent will bring his mother and sister from New York on his yacht Noma after their arrival from England.

Jerome Jones, Labor Editor, Recovering

The condition of Jerome Jones, editor of The Atlanta Journal of Labor, who has been ill for the past three weeks at his residence, 219 Oak Street, was reported much better Tuesday morning.

Mr. Jones caught a severe cold while addressing an open-air meeting in Chattanooga and complications resulted.

Bryan to Carry His Lunch in a Basket

NEW YORK, June 17.—Secretary Bryan will carry a lunch basket to his desk in the State Department like any other workingman.

LYNN, IN APPEAL, RAPS GRAND JURY

Sentenced to Life, Declares That Entire Procedure of Indictment Jury Was Illegal.

Charging unlawful admission of evidence and the unlawful sitting of the grand jury at the time of the return of indictment, and other unconstitutional acts, S. P. New and George B. Davis, attorneys for Alonzo L. Lynn, will carry his case to the United States Court. Lynn was convicted and given a life sentence by the Dublin Superior Court for the killing of Frank M. Hightower, 82 years old, and, on appeal to the Supreme Court, the decision of the lower court was sustained.

The case was peculiar in that the person who confessed to committing the deed was freed. This was Mrs. Lynn, who declared that she had killed Hightower after he had made insulting proposals.

The State charged that the killing was the result of a conspiracy, and displayed several letters which had been written to Hightower inviting him to come out to the Lynn home and obtain kindling.

A dictograph statement, alleged to have been made in Lynn's cell, was part of the evidence used by the State.

SLAYS PHYSICIAN; COMMITS SUICIDE

Young Widow Plays Principal Role in Double Tragedy at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, June 17.—Dr. Guy O. Brinkley and Mrs. Eugene H. Whisnant are dead as the result of a double tragedy in the offices of Dr. Brinkley, a prominent young physician, late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Whisnant killed Dr. Brinkley and immediately committed suicide with a .32 caliber automatic revolver. She fell dead across the body of the slain physician with a bullet through her brain. She fired six shots at him, chasing him from room to room of his suite, the fifth and sixth bullets taking effect in the brain and heart. One more shot ended her own life.

Those who investigated the tragedy are of the opinion that the woman was mentally deranged, having suffered from a nervous affection and melancholia. She had been a patient of the physician. It is believed that she slew Dr. Brinkley while obsessed with the idea that he had failed to relieve her suffering.

Mrs. Whisnant, accompanied by another woman, whose identity has not been disclosed, went to the physician's offices, with the pistol concealed in the folds of her dress. When she entered his private office, where he was seated at his desk, she began firing. Her companion fled. The doctor's negro maid rushed for the police. When she returned both were dead.

Mrs. Whisnant, a widow, about 27 years old, was Miss Katie Kittles, of a prominent Screven County family, before her marriage at Charlotte, N. C., in 1906. Her mother lives in Savannah. She left a sister, Mrs. Hobby, of Sylvania, and two brothers, Peter R. Kittles, of Macon, and William Kittles, of Valona.

Dr. Brinkley came here from Suffolk, Va., several years ago. He was single, and prominent in professional and social circles.

Atlanta's generosity is beginning to flow in a deep, broad stream toward the little home of the widow and six children of Court Deputy Dave Yancey, who was slain by a crazed negro Monday.

The contributions are small, but they are coming in from all over the city. Those who knew the brave deputy have mingled their small sums with those who did not in a universal endeavor to repay to the bereaved family that which it lost.

The Georgian's fund for Yancey is mouting upward, slowly but steadily, as Atlanta realizes the debt which it owes.

Atlanta will do its duty. This city will stand forth and meet the vast obligation which it contracted when it sent its servant to his death while preserving peace.

SENSATIONS IN PHAGAN CASE AT HAND

Out-of-Town Trips Believed To Be of Great Importance—Defense Has Strong Evidence.

Frank A. Hooper, associate counsel with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the prosecution of the Phagan murder mystery, left Atlanta Monday for a trip to Indianapolis. Attorney Hooper was the third man closely connected with the Phagan case to leave town within a space of three days.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who took an active part in the hunt for the slayer of Mary Phagan until the dictograph controversy arose, left Sunday, saying that he was going to Cincinnati. He said that it was a business trip and intimated that it was related either to his quarrel with Chief of Detectives Lanford or directly with the Phagan case.

Solicitor Dorsey left the previous afternoon. He gave out that the prosecution entirely had completed its preparation of the Phagan case and that he was going away for a week's rest at Atlantic City and New York.

Deny Mystery.

At the Hooper home Tuesday it was admitted that Mr. Hooper's trip was on business, but denial was made that it was in connection with the Phagan case or that there was any significance in his departure practically at the same time as that of Solicitor Dorsey and Colonel Felder.

Rumors are circulating, however, that material witnesses in the case have been uncovered and that their testimony may have a most important bearing in determining the person who strangled Mary Phagan. It is said that the sudden trips out of town of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Attorney Hooper, may not be unrelated to these new developments.

The prosecution has been aware for some time that the attorneys for the defense have been weaving a strong net of damaging evidence around the negro sweeper, Jim Conley.

But Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, following his custom of silence, has let neither the public nor the prosecution in on the secret of the source of this important evidence. He has scores of affidavits. That much is known by the prosecution, but by whom they are signed will probably remain a deep mystery until the Frank trial begins.

Report New Evidence.

Recent reports that new and startling evidence against the negro has been turned up by investigators for the defense are held responsible in some quarters for the sudden out-of-town trips of the Solicitor and his associate. It is explained that they are looking into some of the stories which have come to their ears.

They have heard, it is said, that the defense is in possession of statements from reputable and unquestionably reliable persons which place an overwhelming weight of circumstantial evidence upon the shoulders of the negro. These statements are said to have been overlooked or refused by the detectives working on the case.

Conley meanwhile sticks to the story told in his latest affidavit. He insists that the only part he had in the crime was assisting Frank to dispose of the body.

Chief Lanford and Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, continue to express their belief in the absolute truth of the latest story of the negro, although he admittedly uttered a series of lies and misstatements and perjured himself in two other affidavits before he signed the one which the authorities now believe.

U. S. Must Pay $900 As Father of Indian

WASHINGTON, June 17.—George E. Downey, Comptroller of the Treasury, approved a $900 bill of Dr. George P. Sampson, of Winslow, Ariz.

Charley Walker, a blind Navajo pupil of an Indian school, was run over by a train, and Dr. Sampson amputated his left leg and right foot.

"The Indian had to be cared for," said the Comptroller.

"Could a father escape liability for services rendered his child under similar circumstances? He could not."

SHIPPING TIE-UP THREATENED BY COTTON MEN

Conference Over New Rules for Foreign Bills of Lading Expected to Develop Fight.

Cotton buyers, compress owners, bankers, railroad men, and the representatives of the ocean steamship lines meet in Birmingham Wednesday for a conference which will attempt to solve one of the most knotty questions which ever has arisen regarding the movement of the cotton crop in the South.

The steamship lines have announced that they will put into effect within a month, strict regulations governing the baling and marking of cotton. They intend to make notations on the bills af lading describing the condition of the cotton—whether wet or not, properly covered, for instance. Their aim is to avoid the heavy claims for damages which have been made upon them in years past by consignees on the other side who received cotton in bad condition.

The railroads announce that if such notes are put on bills of lading, they will not issue through bills from interior points to destination in Europe, but will issue bills only to shipside.

Banks Would Suffer.

The banks cannot possibly finance the cotton crop unless through bills are issued. On the other hand, if the through bills contain notice of damage, the best authorities agree that they make the banks buying them liable for damages as parties to the merchandise transaction, when their real interest is only as bankers.

A. P. Coles, who has made a deep study of the question, sums it up by saying:

"Why should our bank, for the small profit there is in selling exchange, buy a lawsuit?"

One conference already has been held in Atlanta on the subject, at which the steamship interests were not represented.

In Birmingham, a desperate effort will be made to get a compromise. It is admitted that the cotton trade of the South loses millions yearly oy wasteful handling of the crop; careless baling, second-hand bagging, and so on.

It is pointed out, though, that these practices cannot be reformed from the top. They must begin with the planter. Education of the cotton grower will require years, and no fiat of the steamship companies can bring about such a change in a few weeks.

Coles to Speak.

Mr. Coles, vice president of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, probably will make one of the principal arguments. He has found a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission which he believes covers the case like a blanket. This decision governs the demurrage charges on cotton at Galveston.

In effect, it says that, while the Commission cannot force the railroads to issue through bills of lading via Galveston, it can compel the practice to be stopped at all other ports unless Galveston is so favored; while it cannot compel through bills of lading on cotton, it can stop issuance of through bills on all other commodities if cotton is not so handled. It can compel, too, installation of proper facilities to prevent cotton being damaged while in transit.

Mr. Coles proposes to threaten laying the case before the Interstate Commerce Commission with a request for a parallel ruling if the matter is not adjusted.

Letters from the National City Bank of New York City, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Blyth & Bonner, exchange brokers, and others who handle millions of dollars' worth of cotton bills yearly, express their opinion that a bill of lading with notice of damage on it will be unbankable, and say, too, that they believed the matter had been settled at a conference in New York last August.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As Governor Joseph M. Brown draws near the end of his term his mail grows heavier and heavier with letters of congratulation upon the record he has made in office.

Besides these missives by mail the Executive offices are daily crowded with callers, all bent upon expressing their good will and friendship to the retiring Governor.

The Governor is kept pretty busy thanking folks and assuring them of his appreciation of their evident interest in him, but upon the absorbing question of his future he remains as silent as the Sphinx.

There is a distinct impression abroad, however, that the Governor by no means intends disappearing from public view.

While he has made no statement as to his purpose in the game of politics hereafter, every day one hears in the hotel lobbies rumors of his intention to try for the United States Senate in next year's primaries.

Whether he elects to try for other honors or retire to dignified and unobtrusive private life, it is a generally accepted fact that Governor Brown has made a deep impression upon the people of Georgia as their Governor, and it is doubtful whether any Executive ever assembled a more devoted or loyal following.

The Governor's retiring message is about ready to transmit to the Legislature, and he is ready to turn over the affairs of his high office to his successor, John M. Slaton, at any moment.

It is said that one of the very first bills to go on the House calendar will be one providing the same amendments to the State prohibition laws as were provided in the late Tippins bill.

The impression is, however, that it will have a long, rough and rugged road to travel before it gets on the statute books, if it ever does.

The legislative program as tentatively mapped out, is as follows, immediately after the two Houses are called to order:

Wednesday, June 25, organization of the two Houses. Qualification of members and election of presiding officers.

Thursday, reception and reading of the retiring Governor's message.

Friday, canvassing of the State election returns and declaration of results.

Saturday, inauguration of the new Governor.

Monday, reception and reading of the new Governor's first message. Qualification of the new State House officers.

It is likely that a bill providing for the election of a Senator to succeed Senator Bacon will be introduced upon the first roll call of counties for the introduction of bills.

This will call for the first election of a Senator by the people to be held under the new Federal amendment.

Senator Bacon will be named as his own successor without opposition.

While the percentage of inexperienced membership in the new House is about up to the average, it is a fact that the percentage of the new membership coming over from the last House is very small.

An unusual number of new members have had legislative experience all the way from four to ten years back, but not many immediately familiar faces will be seen when the House is called to order.

On the other hand, a very heavy percentage of membership in the last House has been transferred to the new Senate.

Most of the old floor leaders in both the last House and the last Senate will be missing from the new General Assembly.

For a few brief and glorious moments on Wednesday, June 25, Charles "Stump" Northen, Secretary of the Georgia Senate, will be the only duly and legally authorized presiding officer of the Senate and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of the State.

That's an awful weight of dignity and responsibility for "Stump" to have to stagger around under, even for a flitting and all-too-brief moment, but he will have to make out as best he may, nevertheless.

It is written in the Constitution that the Secretary of the late lamented Senate, and no one else, shall call the Senate to order and hold it tight under the lid until it has chosen a president.

"What I want to know is," said a well-known member of the new Legislature, discussing the situation today, "whether, in the event of a long deadlock in the Senate, and the possible resignation, death, or disqualification of the then Governor, 'Stump' Northen, wouldn't, by operation of law, become Acting Governor of the commonwealth?

"I declare, I rarely have had a problem to weigh so heavily upon me. There is not one chance in a million of its arising for solution, but just suppose it did? Wouldn't 'Stump' be stumped to know what on earth to do in the circumstances?

"Suppose the Senate never should elect a president, but remain in perpetual deadlock, the newly elected Governor could not qualify, of course. If 'Little Joe' should get mad, or disgusted, and quit, where would that leave 'Stump' Northen?

"To be sure, 'Stump' would be perfectly satisfactory to me as a Governor, but the thing that worries me is, How would 'Stump' himself like the job?"

When asked whether he had said that he would, in such a situation, accept the responsibilities of the Executive office, Secretary Northen declined either to affirm or deny the report.

Such was the telegram sent. The verse reads:

"I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face that our joy may be full."

Mr. Payne received a telegram to come to Washington.

DIXIE WOMAN IS A RIGID GAME WARDEN

Mobile Bay Pothunters Chuckle at First, but Mrs. Gibboney Soon Curbs Them.

MOBILE, June 17.—"I have already made two arrests for game violations. I had no trouble with the prisoners. I carried a revolver and a shotgun—and the pothunters knew that I could use either of them."

Which announcement goes to show that Mrs. Norma Frederic Gibboney didn't become game warden merely to wear a bright badge. Mrs. Gibboney was appointed warden recently by Governor Emmet O'Neal. She probably is the only woman in the United States with this sort of commission.

When the news of her appointment was made pblic, the pothunters in their huts along the Mobile Bay marshes thought it a good joke.

"She's one o' these society women," they laughed. "She never would come out on a rainy day, for fear of getting her feet wet."

They were fully convinced of their mistake when the handsome warden came upon two of their number slaughtering duck, and marched them in with one hand resting significantly on the black butt of the revolver at her hip.

Is a Crack Shot.

Her home is Aloha. It stands among acres of forest and foliage. Mobile Bay stretches away to the east and at the back is the Dog River. She is a deadly shot with a rifle and can bring down the mallards from behind a blind with the best shots in Mobile. It was her love for animals, and not the passion for hunting, that led her to become one of the Alabama game police.

"I have spent my life on the fringe of the beautiful waters of this bay," she said. "All its birds and animals are dear friends of mine. I have made a close study of them. Recently I found that the inroads of professional hunters were mowing them down at a rate that would soon mean their extinction. It hurts me to see the ducks slaughtered without regard to the law or to the decent ethics of sportsmanship.

"Here I was, right in the center of it, with nothing that I could do to stop it.

"'Why don't you have yourself appointed game warden?' one of my friends suggested.

Idea a Good One.

"I wondered why I hadn't thought of that before. I had a good saddle horse, all the time I wanted—and my heart was in the work. I got the commission.

"It is the birds that I particularly want to protect. We seldom realize how much good they do. If they didn't prey constantly on the insects, we would be without vegetation before very long. I am familiar with every bird of Alabama. Ten years ago you could see flocks of beautiful white tarsus and blue cranes in the edge of the water out there. Now they are curiosities.

"I have recently fitted out a log cabin in the midst of ten acres of forest that is just as nature made it. I intend to spend the rest of my life there."

Mrs. Gibboney is well known over the entire South. She is a frequent visitor to New Orleans. She is a descendant of Zach Taylor, Patrick Henry and the Virginia Sheltons. She is prominent in society. From now on she won't see so much of receptions and pink teas.

"Women would be a lot happier and healthier," she said, "if they spent more time with nature and less at bridge parties and theaters."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

Nero, the small-souled, the vain glorious Roman emperor who made a hell of his empire to find new thrills, lived a chapter of his life again in the wonderful production of "Quo Vadis?" which began a week's engagement at the Grand Monday night.

With the historical setting true in minutest detail the wonderful photoplay carries the spectator back into a civilization that neither histories nor drama has adequately described.

For two hours the cinematograph clicked off a vivid picture, whose romantic interest vied with its historic perfection. The pomp of a pagan civilization, the splendor of a mighty nation were depicted in the novel. The pictures supply what in the book must be left to imagination.

An idea of detail to which the producers have paid such close attention may be gained from fact that even the poor sight of Nero was not overlooked. The emperor in the picture carries with him a lorgnette made from an emerald. Costumes, scenes—everything—were of that period nearly 2,000 years ago, when the early Christians were struggling to introduce the newest religion into Heathen Rome.

The story as told by the novel is followed closely. And aside from spectacular scenes the story itself calls for closest attention. It runs easily, unfolding naturally as plot gives way to counterplot.

A few years ago the picture would have been impossible. Now, though, producers have learned to perfect setting. In pictures seen daily in the 5-cent houses wonderful illusions are shown; many similar to those in "Quo Vadis." But they can not hold like the play at the Grand. It has a background they lack.

Poison of Night Air Is Branded a Myth

SACRAMENTO, June 17.—The bogey of the latent poison that lurks in the night air is given a sharp rap by the State Board of Health in a bulletin. It says that there is no danger in breathing the good night air, so long as it isn't indoor night air.

Thus, folks are advised to cuddle up in sleeping porches, protected from obnoxious insects.

'Bud' Fisher Has All the Family's Temperament

'I'm Just a Country Girl,' Says Pauline Welch

Artist's Bride Doesn't Believe in Suffrage and Wouldn't Vote if She Could.

"Bud" Fisher, creator of "Mutt and Jeff," and his bride, Pauline Welch, whom he first met in Atlanta last year.

Pauline Welch, the pretty singing comedienne who dislodged Mutt and Jeff from first place in Bud Fisher's heart, is just a "happy little country girl."

There are no frills and no fads in her private life—none of the Eva Tanguay stuff, with a carload of hats and a particularly colored gown for every hour of the day. If she has a hobby, she doesn't know it, and she wouldn't be a suffragette for the world.

Bud Fisher has an artistic temperament, she says; one of those troublesome temperaments that demand constant attention and explode without notice, and its all one girl can do to live with it. If it wasn't for the fact that Bud Fisher, the man, is a perfectly lovely fellow who rises above his artistic eccentricities, Pauline Welch would have a really exasperating time at least 24 hours every day.

Miss Welch, or Mrs. Fisher, as she is now, was deeply meditative yesterday afternoon when a Georgian reporter interviewed her. And well she might be, for she was sitting in the Piedmont Cafe at the very same table where Bud Fisher began to spring all that foolish stuff about love and marriage just a year ago.

The Temperamental Bud.

"Evidently the artistic temperament is something fierce—what do you do with it?" asked the reporter.

"What do I do with it? I lock it up, put the key in my purse and go away and forget about it—that's what I do with it.

"Then when I think the artistic temperament has been imprisoned long enough, I go back and let it out. Then I say, 'Now, young man, such and such is the case.' And that always settles it.

"The artistic temperament is an awful thing. Bud has it bad."

Bud was coming back.

"Bless his heart, he's a dear fellow, and I love him better than anything in the world. He's the finest man in the world, and I'm perfectly happy."

Isn't that just like a woman?

Pauline No Suffragette.

Miss Welch says Bud is a fine dancer and would make a great hit doubling with her. He's a better judge of an act than she is, because he bet her $25 yesterday that she would get a reception at the Forsyth, and she bet she wouldn't—and she lost.

Miss Welch was asked if she was a suffragette. "I should say not," was the quick response.

"You almost insult me. Women are not made for such things. You ought to see the suffragettes in New York. They stand on the street corners and go crazy, or act just like men, which is the same thing. No voting for me."

NEVER PASS UP A CHANCE, SAYS PONY MAN

Only One Way to Win in Contest, "Keep Everlastingly at It," He Advises.

CONTEST GINGER.

He laughs best who laughs after July 31.

Explain to your friends the special vote offers which impel haste.

Let them know they can help you more now than later, when the offers will be withdrawn.

Faint heart never won anything really worth while.

It takes two to get votes—the candidate and his friend. If you are the candidate, find the other half of the bargain.

A little concentration now will pay mightily.

You may get tired now, but you can find recreation with a pony after July 31.

"The wise candidate," remarked the contest manager, "goes to all prospects, the good and the unpromising alike. Occasionally he gets a surprise from both. The person he thinks almost 'landed' may disappoint him and the 'poor' prospect may subscribe for a year."

Many of the boys and girls who are striving for the twenty-odd ponies The Georgian and American are giving away August 1 come to the contest manager for advice. He has only one rule for success—"Keep everlastingly at it."

But if a boy or girl learns nothing else from the contest, there will be a big profit in it, for the "Keep everlastingly at it" precept holds good all through life in every line of work.

To lose the chance of a single subscription may be to lose the chance of winning a pony. It may make the difference between first and second place. Therefore, get every person you can, and you will have no cause for regrets.

It is better by far to find, after July 31, that you could have won on less votes than you had—than to find that you are 100 short of being the winner.

Recorder's Removal Rouses Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 17.—Throughout the city to-day discussions have been warm anent the mass meeting held Sunday, which packed the Jefferson Theater to protest against the summary removal of Clement Wood as Recorder by the city commission, and to comment on the city commission in general, as well as the incidents connected with the alleged "railroading out of the city" of an organizer who came here to form a union of motormen and conductors of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company.

So successful was the meeting that White Gibson, attorney for the labor unions, to-day announced that another would be held.

GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS URGED

George W. Coleman, Head of Advertising Clubs of Nation, Asks It Be Practiced.

"Can the Golden Rule be followed in business?

"Must it be 'doing unto others as ye would they should do unto you,' or will it be David Harum's rule, 'Do others or they'll do you, and do it first'?" asks George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in The Christian Endeavor World. He says:

For my part, I do not want to wait either for the co-operative commonwealth or for the millennium, but in the name of God and righteous dealing and suffering humanity I want to get the Golden Rule right here and now. Begin at once to make conditions what they ought to be, no matter if they have been otherwise since the days of Methuselah. There is nothing inherently adverse to brotherliness in a simple business transaction like giving something you have in exchange for something you want. Is it not good business to get your competitor's trade and keep him from getting yours, if you can do it without lying or misrepresenting?

But does the Golden Rule mean that you are at liberty to get your competitor's trade, because you are willing that he should get yours, if he can. The biggest and most successful business men will tell us that where they have put in effect in their business the principles of the Golden Rule it has turned out generally to be good business as well as good morals. Whatever may be the rule of the Standard Oil Company in dealing with its competitors, with the public, and with the Government, it has been a past master in developing the application of the Golden Rule to its employees.

San Francisco Out For World Congress

GHENT, Belgium, June 17.—At the closing meeting of the Tenth International Congress of Agriculture, the American delegate, Dr. Alfred C. True, of Washington, proposed that the next congress in 1915 should be held in San Francisco.

An international commission will consider the question.

W. J. BURNS ROUTS NAPLES "BANDITS"

Cabmen Fail to Cheat Detective, Sees Many Fugitives and Pays Visit to Pope.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 17.—William J. Burns, the American detective, has passed a fortnight in Italy investigating the Musica case, and also the disappearance of the Hungarian banker, Ernest Havas, from Nice, who was supposed to have committed suicide. The noted Chicagoan followed important clews in both cases. He discovered Mrs. Musica and he hopes to trace Herr Havas.

The detective does not attempt to hide his identity. He is generally mistaken for an ordinary American tourist, but the cab drivers, guides and tradesmen who have tried to overcharge him have failed miserably. Mr. Burns is delighted with Italy.

"Untraveled Americans," he said, "do not realize the greatness and the progress of this country and the fine qualities of the Italians. The stories about dangers lurking in Naples for tourists are ridiculous. It is one of the safest cities in the world. Anyone keeping his eyes open need not fear cheating, except by the cabmen, who may attempt to overcharge by a few cents. The Italian Caribineers did splendid work in connection with the Camorra cases.

"I have visited the chief of police and many other officials here. I had an audience with the Pope, who has the finest face I ever saw. I had dinner at the American College and was the guest of the vice rector, who is a Chicagoan, and of some of the students.

"I regret to say that in going about the city I recognized in many Americans, supposed to be here owing to ill health, fugitives from justice or persons who had troubles at home."

POLICE NET SET FOR 3 NEGRO BANDITS

Blacks Who Stabbed and Robbed Mail Clerk Believed Same Who Assaulted Franklin.

The police dragnet was thrown out Tuesday morning to capture the three negro highwaymen who stabbed Railway Mail Clerk W. S. Ware, of 82 West Baker Street, Monday night about 10 o'clock.

The police think the negroes are the trio who have terrorized pedestrians in various parts of the city for the past several weeks. They have connected Ware's assailants with the attempted robbery of Joseph Franklin, a groceryman, on Crumley Street between Washington and Pulliam, Sunday night, the description of one of the negroes given by Ware fitting that given by Franklin of one of the men who held him up.

Tuesday morning Ware was in a serious condition at Grady Hospital, where he was taken after he staggered into fire headquarters, but if no complications develop it is thought he will recover. He was stabbed twice. The knives inflicted a wound seven inches long across the back of his neck and another almost two inches deep in his right shoulder. Ware lost much blood during the encounter and Tuesday morning was so weak he could not talk.

Robbers Got Valuable Letters.

So far detectives have learned that six registered letters Ware was carrying from his train to the postoffice was all the booty the robbers got. Ware's watch and some money were in his pockets when he was taken to the hospital. Federal authorities probably will take a hand in the case Tuesday. They hope to trace the negroes by the stolen letters.

The attack on Ware was made within two blocks of Whitehall Street, almost in the heart of the downtown district. The police declare the robbery was extraordinarily bold. Ware has the mail run between Atlanta and Chattanooga on the Southern Railway, and it is his custom, each night when his train gets in, to carry all registered mail to the postoffice in person instead of sending it by messenger. Monday night he is said to have noticed three negroes hanging around the mail car when he left the train, but paid no attention to them. He placed the letters in his inside coat pocket and started to the Federal Building, going no faster than usual.

Leaped From Doorway.

Nothing occurred until he turned the corner and started up Alabama Street. As he pased a dark doorway just below fire headquarters, three men sprang upon him from a doorway. He was knocked down, and before he could rise or shout one of the negroes grabbed him by the throat. The negro jerked Ware to his feet, still gripping his throat, and another of the negroes stood in front of the mail clerk brandishing a knife. The third negro plunged his hand into Ware's coat pocket and took the letters.

After the negro got the letters the one gripping Ware's throat momentarily released his hold, and Ware screamed for help. The negro with the knife leaped upon him. He stabbed Ware in the neck, and, as he plunged again with his knife Ware jerked his head to one side and the blade was buried in his shoulder.

The mail clerk fell to the ground, screaming, and the negro with the knife started to leap upon the prostrate body. His companions restrained him, however, and they fled into the railroad yards.

Ware, with blood streaming from his wounds and barely able to stand, tottered into fire headquarters, a few feet away, and collapsed on the floor. The firemen notified the police and called the ambulance.

Negro Teachers to Convene in Atlanta

The Georgia Association of Teachers in Colored Schools will assemble in the thirty-first annual session in Atlanta June 18-20 at Atlanta Baptist College. From present indications this will be the largest assembly of negro teachers that has met in Atlanta in many years.

Some of the most prominent educators of the State of both races will be present. Chief among these are M. L. Brittain, State Supervisor of Education; Professor M. L. Duggan, State Superintendent of Rural Schools, and W. M. Slaton, superintendent of public schools of Atlanta.

Biscuit Makers to Improve Crackers

CHICAGO, June 17.—It was decided at the convention of the Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association of America that better crackers must be made in order to compete with English biscuits.

"The lower tariff is letting the English product in to compete with us," said Secretary W. H. Brownell. "It means that American manufacturers have got to improve the quality of their goods and raise prices."

Brooks Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president. Secretary Brownell was re-elected.

Queen Mary Forbids Poker and Baccarat

LONDON, June 17.—When Queen Mary's guests at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races assemble at the card tables after dinner they will find printed notifications that baccarat and poker are barred and that stakes at bridge must not exceed half a crown a hundred points.

Heretofore baccarat has been the favored gambling game and high stakes have been played for.

Betting on the races among the royal servants is also prohibited, but it nevertheless goes on.

'Get Fresh Air' Dan Carey's Main Happiness Hint

Tells Tads How to Enjoy Life and Keep Health

Happy group at play in Park.

"Direct their energies in right direction and they can't go wrong," Is Corley's theory.

"People of Atlanta Not Yet Awake to the Value of Playground," Says Director.

Dan Carey, general manager of parks, whose bright smile and jolly manner have marked him as the possessor of the true secret of happiness, has given The Georgian some hints to children to happiness that were inspired by the opening of the playgrounds Monday.

Viewing a throng of children at play in Joyner Park playground, he denied that there was any secret to happiness.

"There is a composite picture of happiness," he declared. "Is there anything more simple or natural? Look at their beaming faces. Listen to their spontaneous laughter and shouts. My hints to happiness to children would be something like these:

"Get out in the sunshine, in the fresh air, and there won't be so much cause to complain at the heat of summer.

"Drink lots of water. You see our sanitary drinking founts in the playgrounds provide flowing water that children may drink as fairies.

"Get children together, then have a director over them to see that all their outbursts are in a wholesome direction.

Appeal to Imagination.

"Inspire activities and morals in them by getting them interested in specific things.

"You seldom have to even scold children when they are treated right, but they have lots of pent-up energy which must be directed rightly or they will go wrong.

"Teach them to love the flag of our country. They demand things that appeal to their imagination.

"When they are tired at night from a long day of play let them sleep lots."

Mr. Carey explained that providing happiness for children was a business just like running a store, and that it required the same sort of systematic thought from grown-ups.

While he was talking in his office the telephone rang.

"You want me to say something funny about the birth of the lion cubs at the zoo for your paper?" he asked.

"That is like a newspaper man," he continued. "His question is typical of the attitude of most people to parks and playgrounds. But the spirit of humor and play are not quite so spontaneous. There is work and study back of both."

Value of Grounds Not Realized.

Then he revealed a copy of a letter he had written to a city official explaining why the number of playgrounds had been reduced this year and touching on the object of playground work in general.

"The people of Atlanta have not yet realized exactly what the playgrounds mean," he had written.

Heretofore Atlanta has operated its grounds merely as a place for the children of the neighborhood to play and no attention has been paid to the more serious side of the work. One member of the park board said he could see no advantage to the city in hiring a young woman to act as nurse for the neighborhood.

Spanish Historian Calls Columbus Jew

PARIS, June 17.—Enrigue Arribas Y. Turull, Spanish historian, has published a brochure in which he gives as the conclusion of his latest researches among original documents that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not an Italian, Spaniard nor Corsican.

Eighteen documents dated 1413 to 1528 establish Columbus as a native of Pontevedra and the great discoverer merely posed as a Genoese from policy, says Turull.

In his mother's family, the Fonteresas, the men's names are Abraham, Eleazar, Jacob and Benjamin.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 17.—Due 3½ points higher on July and 5 to 6 points advance on other positions, this market opened steadily at a net advance of 3 to 4 points from last night's close. At 12:15 p. m. the market was quiet at a net advance of 2½ to 3 points.

Fair business doing in spot cotton at 5 points advance; middling 6.80d; sales, 8,600 bales, including 7,000 American; imports, 14,000 bales, including 11,000 American.

Browne, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Heavy continental realizing; feeling in advance not warranted."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: "We favor a conservative attitude on buying side on all recessions."

A. Norden & Co.: "It looks as if still higher prices might be seen."

Miller & Co.: "We expect the market to gradually work higher."

Morris, Rothschild & Co.: "We do not advise the short side of the market."

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: "We have not changed our opinion any and still look for higher prices."

Salvation Army Is Raising Picnic Fund For Mill Children

Members of the Atlanta post of the Salvation Army Monday began soliciting funds for an outing at Piedmont Park June 26 for 300 mill children. Under the direction of the Army the children will be taken to the park on special trolley cars and treated to a swim. Ice cream and other light refreshments will be provided for them.

The plan is to get the children who work in cotton mills and have no chance for real recreating such as the water and grass and sunshine at Piedmont Park will afford.

Away from the din of the mills they are to enjoy a day of wholesome freedom. And the Salvation Army officers report that they are receiving liberal contributions.

Ten Dead Men Share Film With Roosevelt

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Aviator Andrew Drew, of St. Louis, killed when his aeroplane caught fire at Lima, Ohio, was the tenth man to die of those who appeared in the famous motion picture "death film," taken in St. Louis in October, 1910.

The others who have died are: Arch Hoxsey, Ralph Johnstone, P. O. Parmalee, A. C. Welsh, Howard Gill, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, Jacques Faure, Theodore Schreck and "Tony" Von Phul.

Of the others, Theodore Roosevelt was shot at Milwaukee, Alfred Le Blanc was disabled for life and Walter De Mumm was shot.

State Convention Is Planned to Discuss Disposal of W. & A.

The advisability of calling a State convention to discuss the future of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, and to aid the State Legislature in its disposal, will be considered at a mass meeting of Atlanta citizens at the Auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. No conclusion will be reached as to the disposal of the property, which has an estimated value of $12,000,000. The meeting is a preliminary one, and probably will be the first of a number.

In calling the meeting Chamber of Commerce officials declare they are moved not only by the fact that the proper disposal is of the utmost importance to the State, but because the road is an important part of the freight rate situation, and the citizens of Atlanta have an especial interest in it.

Burglar Fires at Couple in Bed as Man Yells at Him

Firing two shots, then leaping out the window, taking sash and all with him, was the reply a negro burglar gave to the demand, "What are you doing in here?" by A. H. Hall, of 14 Markham Street, when he discovered the burglar in his room early Tuesday morning.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Mr. Hall was awakened by a noise. He found the negro standing near the foot of his bed. He did not have a pistol near and yelled at the negro, who replied with two shots. Both struck the bed, narrowly missing the heads of Mr. and Mrs. Hall.

The man evidently was discovered immediately after his entrance, as nothing was missed.

Call Officers Cochran and Darby were unable to locate the negro.

Dr. Landrum Likely To Be Mercer Head

MACON, June 17.—It is believed now that Dr. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., a native of Macon and graduate of Mercer, former pastor of the First Baptist Church in Atlanta and one of the most eminent divines of the South, will be offered the presidency of Mercer University.

A meeting of the trustees will be held at an early date to elect a successor to Dr. S. Y. Jameson.

Favors $40,000,000 For U. S. Alaska R. R.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The Senate Committee on Territories today favorably reported the Jones-Chamberlain bill providing for a $40,000,000 bond issue to construct railroads in Alaska.

The measure was amended in committee, the clause providing for a commission being struck out and a paragraph leaving the supervision of the railroad construction up to the President being substituted.

FUND IS GROWING FOR DEPUTY'S FAMILY

the Jonesboro road the widow and six children of Court Deputy Yancey will thank their creator that their husband and father served such a generous and noble master.

Touching among the contributions which have been received was that sent in by a little boy. The amount was $1 and the note accompanying it stated that the donor was "a little kid just like those who have lost their daddy."

Contributions have also started by the police and detective departments of Atlanta. Headed by the names of Police Chief Beavers and Detective Chief Lanford, the list of contributions coming in from the police is constantly growing as the officers of the law step forward to aid one of their own kind who met a fate which they themselves are ever in danger of meeting.

Eugene Watson, the negro who slew the brave deputy and devastated his home, died at the Grady Hospital Monday night. Death despoiled the law of its duty.

Family Weeps at Bier.

In a small, bare cottage on the Jonesboro road, where, until yesterday, a family had struggled hard for an existence and good fortune had never smiled, to-day the utter hopelessness of the poverty is emphasized.

Through the night a widow, broken in health and spirit, and six children, none of them able to work, knelt by the form of the murdered Dave Yancey, court deputy, weeping for the life that was sacrificed to duty and for the dark days ahead when there will be no one to provide.

The fate that had never been kind to Yancey was more than cruel to him yesterday when it called him to pursue Eugene Watson, negro desperado.

The hand that the arresting officer depended upon to accurately and steadily hold his revolver shook and trembled in the throes of a nervous disease with which he had been afflicted since he was a boy.

He knew as he ran after the negro that if it came to a fight it would be the merest accident if his aim were true. Three times he fired at the negro approaching him with the knife. One shot was at close range, but his hand veered widely to the right and the revolver was snatched from him before he could fire again.

Bad Luck Pursued Him.

Once or twice in his life Yancey had prospered. Shortly after he came to Atlanta he was a bailiff for a Justice of the Peace. He earned money then to take care of his wife and children. He held the position a short while, when the justice died. For several months he was unable to find employment.

About four years ago he secured a position as a court bailiff under Sheriff Mangum. His salary depended on the number of days he worked, which was never over two weeks each month. On other days he would substitute as a deputy and serve subpenas. During the summer months, when court was not in session, his income was practically nothing.

On the day he was stabbed to death he had virtually secured the position as a regular bailiff in the court of Judge Calhoun. It would have paid him $100 monthly. This news was to be a surprise to his wife and children when he returned home.

Lived Life of Farmer.

Although he lived in the shadow of a great city the life of Yancey and his family was that of the farmer. About a year ago he secured the place on the Jonesboro Road on which he had made two payments. Nine hundred dollars are still to be paid. He called it a truck farm, but the few acres were almost barren, and it was with the greatest difficulty that enough vegetables were raised to supply the needs of the family.

About six months ago his oldest daughter, Lois, was taken seriously ill and had to be taken to the hospital. It cost Yancey more than $400, and during the time his family was often without food.

He had lived at the house on the Jonesboro Road for about a year, but he lived in that section of the county the fifteen years since he came here from Grayson, in Gwinnett County.

He was raised on a farm, and when he secured enough money to make the first payment on his little home with the few acres of untilled soil he had hopes of making it a productive truck farm and later acquiring more land.

Family Worked the Farm.

His wife and children tilled the soil. They had no horse to draw a plow and the work was difficult. From early morning until late in the evening Mrs. Yancey worked in the field and directed the work of the children.

Yancey usually came home at about 6 o'clock every evening. As he trudged up the long hill from the end of the car line his wife and children left the field and came to the house to prepare the scant supper. By 8 o'clock in the evening the house was in darkness and the family asleep.

Only when little Lois was in the hospital did any of them venture into the city. Usually they walked the entire way. They saw little of their neighbors except an occasional conversation as one would pass the house in the early morning, or after work in the evening.

Where they have lived and struggled for an existence together Mrs. Yancey and her children want to continue to live. They declined to consider returning to Gwinnett County, where Yancey's relatives live.

Outlook Is Gloomy.

There is some hope of the little farm being made successful, enough so to pay the monthly installments on the home, and there is some possibility of Mrs. Yancey's idea of a small poultry farm becoming a reality, but these are things that are almost out of the question this year.

The farm is an absolute failure this season. It is impossible to start a poultry farm without money, and unless money can be secured the home will have to be given up, and the family, more destitute than ever, return to worse conditions in Gwinnett County.

DAVE YANCEY, MARTYR TO DUTY, who was hacked to death by a crazed negro thief he had attempted to capture. A destitute family survives him. A fund has been started for their aid and you are asked to help.

QUEEN BARS SLIT SKIRT AT ASCOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ASCOTHEATH, ENGLAND, June 16.—Fearing another such outrage as almost spoiled the Derby, when Emily Wilding Davison threw herself under the hoofs of King George's horse Anmer, scores of police and detectives thronged the course here to-day when the four-day race meet, the most fashionable turf event of the season, opened.

From a purely sporting angle the Derby is the premier classic of the turf; from the standpoint of a society function the Ascot meeting compares favorably with the Auteuil and Chantily meetings in France.

Not alone was the course thoroughly policed, but detectives moved among the crowds in the paddock and grandstands, prepared to prevent any demonstration that suffragettes might attempt.

King George and Queen Mary attended the meet and were greeted vociferously as they entered the royal box. There were also many American tourists in the private boxes in the stand.

Although no sartorial censor stood guard at the entrance to the royal inclosure, the word had gone forth that women appearing in scandalizing or freak dresses would do so at the risk of being barred next year.

This applied particularly to the slashed skirt which showed the wearer's stockings to the knees. Queen Mary was simply dressed in white and wore a straw hat with flowers on it.

New Law Wipes Out Restricted Sections

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 17.—The laws passed at the recent session of the Legislature are said to have already resulted in obliterating the restricted districts of some of the smaller cities.

The women's minimum wage commission to be appointed by the Governor is expected to begin hearings in a short time to obtain data for the fixing of the lower limit of wages.

PRINCESS WRITES AND ACTS MOVIE

Films Are Shown at Buckingham Palace After Being Censored By Queen Mary.

A report says Princess Mary wrote and took part in acting a sketch for a film, which was shown after a dinner party at the palace the other night. It is a humorous sketch, a five-character child's piece. The action is laid in a school room and the dining room of the palace, where the pictures were actually taken.

The Princess wrote the play a few months ago, but her mother, Queen Mary, refused to allow it to be played until she had read it, which she did only recently. She made several alterations and deletions in the Princess's MS. and struck out one character altogether, that of an irritable uncle, who in the Queen's opinion was too likely to be taken for the Kaiser, to be allowed to remain in the sketch.

Mail Order Houses Accused As Menace

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Small country merchants of the United States are gradually being ruined by the monstrous mail order houses of the country, according to statements made in a speech before the House by Representative William H. Hinebaugh, of Illinois. Mr. Hinebaugh said that the distribution of commodities in the country districts was rapidly being confined to billion dollar concerns.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

AFTER I get thru with this book of verses, sed Ma to Pa last nite, I want you to read it too. I paid a dollar & a half for it, Ma sed, & considering the fack that it is the first work of a new poet, I think I got it very cheep.

I doant think the first work of any poet is worth a dollar & a half, Pa sed. There was a time, Pa sed, wen I wud have paid almost any price for a good book, but owing to the present high cost of living things is different. The way I look at it now, Pa sed, a dollar & a half may not be much, but it is fifteen cool glasses of lager or five pounds of good substanshul steak. Who is the young nut that they are calling a new poet" sed Pa.

His name is Orland La Tosca, sed Ma. His hoam is in California & he nevver went to a college or eevn a high school. Him & his parents lived out among the redwood trees, Ma sed, & they was too poor to give him much edueashun. But the boy cuddent be stopped. His Wunderful geenyus asserted itself wen he was only sixteen. Just lissen to this one of his vary first poems. It is called Sunrise, & I think it is simply divine. Lissen:

First comes a flush of pink so nearly white
That color seems a hint alone. Then comes
A bolder tint, as though the god of Dawn
Were flushing with some ungovernable rage.
A dew-damp bird sings in a gnarled tree
And then the morning dawns all glorified.

Was that one of the first things he wrote? sed Pa.

It was one of the vary first things, sed Ma. I shud think his parents wud be vary proud to have such a boy.

Oh, I doant know, sed Pa. I am a whole lot prouder of little Bobbie than I wud be of any almost-poet. I doant think much of the piece you jest red, sed Pa. "Dew-damp bird," sed Pa. Ha, Ha, that must have been sum bird. I have heard of cold birds and hot birds, Pa sed, & I have heard of wise birds & gay birds, but I doant think I wud know what to say to a dew-damp bird if I was interduced to one.

Oh, doant try to be cunning, sed Ma. You know rite down in yure heart that the poem I jest red to you is sure to be immortal.

Immortal rats, sed Pa. It is nothing but a bunch of junk. I guess there must have been at leest ten thousand poems ritten about sunrise, sed Pa, moast of them by peepul that dident know enuff to get up in time to see a regular sunrise, & all of them poems sed the sain thing, sed Pa, about the first tint of dawn steeling into the sky & about a bird singing. Why cant a bird sing onst in a while without a poet beeing its press agent, Pa sed. Reed me sum moar of those dethless poems, sed Pa. I want to git a hed ake.

Then listen to this dainty littel love ballad, sed Ma.

Arabella, Arabella,
Tripping lightly through the meadow
Where the sunset throws its shadow.
How I love to watch the meeting
When your lips the sun is greeting.
Sweetest nymph that ever walked here,
Loveliest sprite that ever talked here,
How I long to be yure fellow,
Arabella!

Whoa, sed Pa, that will do. I have my hed ake now, Pa sed, & you wont have to reed any moar to me tonite. I see the Crackers are getting into their regular form, Bobbie.

Chapeau a la Parisienne

Three Models That You Can Copy

Mlle. Marcelle Praince.

By Olivette.

TO-DAY we are showing you three hats that express the latest manifestation of "le dernier cri" from Paris. The hats are worn by three charming French actresses, and are quite the latest thing from one of the smartest of the smart French hat shops.

Mlle. Marcelle Praince, of the "Varietes," shows us the new idea called the "cabriolet dip," and at the short brimmed side her hat does resemble the bowler with down drooping brim worn by the cabby of Paris. The brim rolls up a bit at the right. The model was bound at the edge with cerise satin ribbon and the crown is covered with a checker board made of interwoven cerise and white satin ribbon. A veil of soft white shadow weave adds a softening touch to this simple but fetching model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HOW CAN I TELL?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 19. A young man who calls at our office claims he loves me. He also asked me to write to him.

Please advise me whether he is serious about it. ANXIOUS.

My dear, you ask a question impossible for me to answer. If he is serious or not, you must learn for yourself. Watch him carefully for a few months, and keep a close guard on your heart while doing it.

IT WILL IN TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and in love with a man two years my senior. He has but one bad habit and that is smoking cigarettes. Do you think I should let this interfere with true love? J. D. E.

A man of 20 who is an inveterate cigarette smoker is not worth any woman's love, and she invites unhappiness by associating her life with his.

The fad it will kill your love in time. Why not choose a quick death for your love now?

I AM SURE OF IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young lady, and when I tell her of my love she says that she loves me also, but she is constantly teasing me, and when I tell how she hurts my feelings, she just laughs and teases all the more. Do you think she cares for me? I have reason to think so, because she never keeps company with other boys. A. W.

She teases you, a sign of love; she never keeps company with others; another proof. My dear young man, what more do you ask?

YES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and engaged to a wealthy financier, but have heard that he is dissipated. There is no love between us. Should I give up position and wealth for love? NOVENA.

Love is worth every sacrifice, and in your case there would be no sacrifice, since there could be no happiness with a man who is dissipated, and no position and wealth if the dissipation lasts long.

SHE IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18, and draw a salary of $12 per week, with promise of an increase. I have been in love with a girl of my age for three years, but she has shown little affection until, lately, I proposed to her, but she said: "We are too young," and had better wait.

L. J. A.

The girl has exceptionally good sense. If your age were right, your salary isn't. Do as the girl suggests, and some day you will realize what a great debt of gratitude you owe her.

LAST SENTENCE EXPLAINS IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, whom I have known for one year. I have every reason to believe she loves me also. Is it proper for her to let me kiss her when I arrive or when I leave her house? She has consented at times; at others she refuses. To what do you attribute this? It is understood between us that it is only a kiss of friendship. WARREN.

The kiss of friendship is not for those of opposite sexes. Tell her of your love, ask her to marry you, and if she consents you will have a right to ask for her kisses, and they will not be refused.

Cornered.

A SOLICITOR who is noted for his egotistical bearing recently retired to a quiet village for a month's rest, and his air of superiority aroused the curiosity of the "daft" resident of the place, who made up his mind to investigate the matter without delay.

One morning he coolly buttonholed the proud man of parchment and, without further parley, boldly asked him why he was so "stuck up." The solicitor smiled.

"Well," said he, "I am a member of a most honorable profession, and that naturally makes one feel a little proud."

This explanation did not satisfy "Daft William."

"It's all very well what you say," said he, after a brief reflection; "but tell me what a lawyer can do."

"Oh," replied the other, anxious to humor his interrogator, "for one thing he can draw a conveyance."

"Draw a conveyance!" exclaimed Willie, in disgust. "Why, that's nothing. Any donkey can do that!"

The lawyer moved on.

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

What could he do about it? Cain asked himself. What chance would he have with this backwoodsman if he attempted to evict him, especially with a damaged hand? The thoughts of his hand instantly put is mind back to the encounter with Gordon Kelly. And thinking of Gordon Kelly suddenly put another idea in his head. His face wrinkled into what he intended for a smile.

"I beg your pardon, stranger," he said in his pleasantest manner, "I met with an accident this afternoon and my hand gives me so much pain that it puts me out of sorts. You can have all the matches you want. And as I'm going back to the city there's a lot of other stuff in the shack you are welcome to if you want to take it away—a lot of stuff to eat and maybe a little to drink. And that reminds me, will you join me in a drink?"

Thus mollified, the stranger remarked that he didn't care if he did. Cain ordered George to fetch a table, two chairs, a bottle of whisky, some glasses and fresh water.

"I call that right good stuff," remarked Cain when they had sampled the contents of the bottle. "You don't get any like it in this part of the country, do you?"

Cain was treading on dangerous ground, if he had only known it. The stranger eyed him narrowly and did not make direct reply to the question.

"You all is named Cain and you come from Atlanta, don't yer?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Cain.

"You done own a right smart piece of property up yere don't yer?"

"I do."

"What you all doin' up yere?"

Like an Oyster.

Cain might have answered, "None of your damned business," but he didn't. He simply said:

"Some friends of mine came up from Atlanta to spend a few weeks in their summer camp and I just came up, too; that's all. Let's have another drink."

They drank silently. Cain spoke again.

"I asked you awhile ago where you came from. I take it you live around here somewhere. If you live on my property you can continue to do so for all of me. I only built this shack to have a place as headquarters to hunt and fish. I have never used it before and I don't believe I ever will use it again.

The stranger made no offer of thanks, but accepted another invitation to drink. He was not at all talkative, and the more Cain saw of him the less inclined he was to ask questions concerning his identity. He did venture one question. It was:

"Is your family up here with you?"

The mountaineer (and this word probably describes him best of all) arose abruptly from his chair without making answer. It was evidently not his day for answering questions from any man he did not know. They drank again, standing, and then Cain went into the shack and returned with the stranger to the edge of the road, which was only a few rods away, and, arriving there, he suddenly asked:

A Proposition.

"Do you want to make some money?"

There are few persons in the world who will not reply "yes" to this question. The mountaineer was not one of them. He intimated that he might be induced to make some. With that as a basis to work on, Cain engaged the stranger in earnest conversation for more than half an hour. Dusk settled and night came on ere they parted. The mountaineer disappeared in the darkness and Cain returned to the shack, where his man had a meal prepared for him.

Early next morning Cain returned to Atlanta, his man driving the car to Pew Creek. It was left there to be shipped later in the day by freight. In Atlanta the broken bones in Cain's right hand were set and the member put in a splint. Ten days later he went to the mountains again, but instead of taking a train for Pew Creek, he took the Knoxville line and landed at a station on what might be called the eastern side of the mountains. There he procured a horse and saddle and rode ten miles in a westerly direction, uphill all the way. When he reached a point where a huge knob of granite stuck up out of the ground like an inverted tin basin, he dismounted and walked directly into the woods on the opposite side of the road. A hundred yards in he stopped beside a massive oak tree.

Presently four men appeared, one of whom Cain recognized as the blackbearded mountaineer he had entertained at his shack. The others were dressed in the same kind of garb.

"Are you ready to do business?" demanded Cain.

"We're here, I reckon," replied the bearded man.

Without more words, Cain drew a leather case from his pocket and counted out a sum of money to the four men. At that instant Cain became possessed of the fear that he might not be allowed to depart. But nothing of the sort happened. The four men received the money and disappeared in the forest.

Cain mounted his horse and rode back whence he came. An evil smile played on his lips.

CHAPTER XXXI.

GORDON KELLY was at the bridge a full hour ahead of time. Mildred had said 3 o'clock, but as early as 1 o'clock he had arrayed himself in a suit of light summer flannels (it was now early in the month of June), and after trying to kill time around the house he had, in his impatience, jumped into his automobile and rode to the meeting place.

The minutes that followed seemed ages to him. There was a sharp bend in the road, just before it reached the bridge, in the direction Mildred must come, and he had to trust to his ear rather than his eye to detect the approach of a vehicle. At last he heard a sound that he knew was made by the little runabout. When the car came in sight he was standing on the bridge. Mildred saw him, and raised a hand from the wheel she waved a gay salute. Gordon lifted his cap in answering greeting, but he had faced the crowd and the tumult and the opposing pitcher in the crisis of that last game in Atlanta with less trepidation than he faced the oncoming automobile.

Mildred stopped the runabout close to Gordon's car, switched off the magneto, put the lever in neutral and applied the emergency brake with business-like precision. Then, turning her head toward the young man, she favored him with a beaming smile and said:

"Here I am on time, Mr. Gordon Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly Again!"

At these words a look of dejection came into Gordon's face.

"Mr. Kelly again! I suppose as long as you call me Mr. Kelly I will have to call you Miss Deery, and I am dying to call you——"

"Mr. Bud, then, if you like that name better," said Mildred, with a little toss of her head.

Gordon smiled and held out his hand. She placed her fingers in it and jumped lightly to the ground.

"That certainly has a more familiar sound, but I would much prefer to have you call me Gordon," he said.

Mildred faced him squarely.

"But I want to know about this Mr. Bud and this Mr. Gordon Kelly business. Why is there such a mystery over it?"

"There's no mystery that cannot be very easily solved," replied Gordon. "Let us walk over to that big oak, where it is cool and shady, and I will tell you all about it."

They walked slowly and silently side by side until they stood beneath the spreading branches of the huge tree. At their feet flowed the purling brook. Gordon indicated a place where they might rest, but Mildred shook her head.

"Before we get too comfortable I want to know about Mr. Bud, or Mr. Kelly, or whatever his name is," she said.

Just a Nickname.

"That is the simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Bud is a nickname my father gave me. My mother also grew into the habit of calling me Bud. The people around the place never heard me called by any other name and naturally they addressed me as Mr. Bud."

Mildred let her eyes fall to the ground and began toying with the leaves with the toe of her shoe.

"I can readily understand that," she said, "but what I cannot understand is that no one in your home knows who Gordon Kelly is. When Elmer called your house on the telephone the other day your colored boy, Steve, said there was no Mr. Gordon Kelly there, no Mr. Kelly and no Mr. Gordon there. And when I called you this morning the person who answered the telephone said the same thing."

"That, too," is easily explained," declared Gordon. His face became very serious. "I meant to have told you. It has been on my mind ever since we met under the bridge over there. I—I—I will tell you now."

But he hesitated. Mildred brought her eyes to bear on his. He was looking off in the distance.

"Well" she said, quietly.

Gordon stooped and picked a twig from the ground. He broke it in small pieces and tossed them one by one into the rippling brook. Still he did not answer. Mildred, who had not taken her eyes off his face, saw the blood suddenly paint it crimson and she felt herself trembling slightly. Gordon turned his face toward hers and their eyes met.

They're Engaged.

"Mildred," he said, and his voice was hoarse and passionate, "God knows there is nothing to conceal and I want to tell you all about myself and my life. But there is something I want to tell you first. I MUST tell it to you first. It is that I love you, Mildred. Oh, how I love you! That is all I can say now; say it over and over again. From the very first day, Mildred. From the very instant you put your hand in mine and the rain beat down on us. How I love you! Will you take me, Mildred?" His blue-gray eyes were humid now and he, too, was trembling.

Her eyes had never left his. A flood of emotion was rushing through her. She raised her arms and Gordon crushed her to his heart.

"You know it, Gordon," she murmured.

Their lips met and then her head nestled against his breast and she sighed contentedly. The merry brook raced on, the sun shone kind, a lazy breeze played with a stray wisp of her hair. She felt a strange peacefulness creep over her as she rested in his arms.

"Honeybunch," she repeated raising her head, "Oh, Gordon, what a sweet name you have for me. Where did you find it?"

"My mother called me that when I was a little boy. My mother, Mildred, was the sweetest woman, next to you, that ever breathed."

"She must have been, dear heart. And you will tell me all about her when the time comes."

Mildred gently released herself from Gordon's embrace and sat down on the ground. He threw himself by her side as close as he could get, reclining on his elbow. She gently stroked his hair.

What the Tease Said.

"Do you know what that little tease, Elmer, said to me when I left him to-day?" she asked.

"I never could guess," he replied, looking up in her eyes.

"He said"—Mildred leaned over and whispered the rest, blushing furiously.

"Mildred, you are certainly the sweetest girl in the world to tell me that. Why, the little beggar is quicker than I am."

"He has been with me more than you have, dear. He is a bright lad, in this case I think he was quicker than I was myself."

And so the talk of these two happy young people went on and on. The shadows lengthened and the sun sank behind the hills before they realized it.

"Oh, I must be going, Gordon; they'll think I'm lost or that something has happened to me," exclaimed Mildred springing to her feet.

"Something has happened to you, honeybunch and something has happened to me to make me the happiest man in the world."

"You are right, Gordon; something has happened and I am very, very happy."

They were walking toward the bridge when Mildred stopped suddenly.

"Oh Gordon, I want you to take me home in your car. I want to ride right next to you on the front seat. But if we do that what will become of the runabout?"

"Don't worry about that, sweetheart; come with me," and he led her along the edge of the brook until they came to the telephone in its box fastened to the tree.

"Steve," said Gordon as soon as his ring was answered, "take a car out of the garage, put a rope in it, bring Mose along with you and come down to the bridge. You will find a runabout there. I want you to tow it to Miss Deery's bungalow. Do you know where it is?"

"Yes, Mr. Bud."

"All right; hurry it along!"

"You are a regular Aladdin with his wonderful lamp, Gordon," said Mildred, slipping her arm through his. "I am just dying to see all that lies beyond those two great granite pillars."

"And I'm just crazy to have you see it all, sweetheart, for it's all yours now, and I hope you'll like it. I have lots to show you and lots to tell you. But I did want to tell you something else first."

"I want you to, Gordon."

With her head resting on his arm, they drove to her mountain home, he at the wheel. He had to switch on the electric headlights before they reached it. When they were within a few feet of their destination she made him stop the car.

"Quick," she whispered, "they can't see us behind the headlights." He folded her in his embrace.

"No more Mr. Kelly?" he said.

"No more Mr. Kelly," she replied.

"No more Mr. Bud?"

"No more Mr. Bud."

"Always Gordon?"

"Always Gordon," she repeated, softly.

"Hey!" yelled the voice of Elmer in the distance. "Breakaway there!"

"The little rascal is only guessing," laughed Mildred.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 26th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE telephone line from Pew Creek to Atlanta earned more money in tolls that night than it had earned in the previous six months. Mildred called up her mother and talked with her more than half an hour. This is the way she began:

"Oh, mother, won't you please come up to the mountains right away?—Ill? No indeed; I'm feeling simply great, but there's lots of things I want to tell you. . . . Oh, no; not over the telephone. . . . Of course not, mother dear. I am perfectly happy and contented up here, except that you are not with me and the way I feel to-night I never want to go back to Atlanta again. But you must come up right away."

And so on and so on. But not once in their long talk did Mildred mention Gordon Kelly's name to her mother. She wanted to hold her supreme secret all to herself, at least until her mother arrived. Nor did she tell of the trouble she had with Forrest Cain, deeming that a matter that would better not be spread on a public telephone wire. In the end, Mrs. Deery promised to come up for a few days, as she, too, needed rest after her labors in the household of Cain's sister.

Gordon Kelly called up Judge Barbee as soon as he reached home. He could not get him at his office, but reached him at his home. This is what he said:

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Surprised Her.

The stout party had been in the bootshop for over an hour, and the patient shop assistant had had half the shop down for her inspection. She found fault with them all, until his patience became quite exhausted.

"These should suit you," he said, taking another pair down as a last resource.

Still the lady was not satisfied. "I don't like this sort," she said; "they have a tendency to get wider when they are a bit old."

"Well, madam," retorted the exasperated assistant, politely, "didn't you?"

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Elian may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this ungodly man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passion, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real life, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight. On the train from Liverpool to London she meets a woman who directs her to a semi-fashionable boarding house. A great hue and cry is being raised over her disappearance. She is feeling somewhat secure, when suddenly Mildred Bankes, of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," finds her. Mary confesses all to her and begs for her help.

IF I had not been so wildly agitated I should have known that this was the wrong way with Mildred, and it was not until I had said it all in a rush of whispered words that I saw her eyes fixed on me as if they were about to start from their sockets.

"But, my dear, dear child," she said, "this is worse and worse. Your father and your husband may have done wrong, but you have done wrong, too. Don't you see you have?"

I did not tell her that I had thought of all that before and did not believe any longer that God would punish me for breaking a bond I had been forced to make. But when she was about to rise, saying that, after all it would be a good thing to send me home before I had time to join my life to his—whoever he was—who had led me to forget my duty as a wife, I held her trembling hands and whispered, "Wait, Mildred. There is something I have not told you even yet."

"What is it?" she asked, but already I could see that she knew what I was going to say.

"Mildred," I said, "if I ran away from my husband it was not merely because I loved somebody else, but because"——

I could not say it. Do what I would I could not. But holy women like Mildred, who spend their lives among the lost ones, have a way of reading a woman's heart when it is in trouble, and Mildred read mine.

"Do you mean that . . . that there are consequences . . . going to be?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"Does your husband know?"

"Yes."

"And your father?"

"No."

Mildred drew her hand away from me and crossed herself and said beneath her breath, "O Mother of God!"

I felt more humbled than I had ever been before, but after a while I said: "Now you see why I can never go back. And you will save me, will you not?"

There was silence for some moments. Mildred had drawn back in her chair as if an evil spirit had passed between us. But at length she said, "It is not for me to judge you, Mary. But the gentlemen will come up soon to know if you are the Mary O'Neill whom I knew at the Sacred Heart, and what am I to say to them?"

"Say no," I cried. "Why shouldn't you? They'll never know anything to the contrary. Nobody will know."

"Nobody?"

I knew what Mildred meant, and in my shame and confusion I tried to excuse myself by telling her who the other woman was.

"It is Alma," I said.

"Alma? Alma Lier?"

"Yes."

She Tells Mildred All About Martin.

And then I told her how Alma had come back into my life, how she had tortured and tempted me, and was now trying to persuade my husband who was a Protestant, to divorce me that she might take my place.

And then I spoke of Martin again—I could not help it—saying that the shame which Alma would bring on him would be a greater grief to me than anything else that could befall me in this world.

"If you only knew who he is," I said, "and the honor he is held in you would know that I would rather die a thousand deaths than that any disgrace should fall on him through me."

I coud see that Mildred was deeply moved at this, and, though I did not intend to play upon her feelings, yet in the selfishnes of my great love I could not help doing so.

"You were the first of my girl friends, Mildred, the very first. Don't you remember the morning after I arrived at school? They had torn me away from my mother, and I was so little and lonely, but you were so sweet and kind. You took me into church for my first visitation and then into the garden for my first rosary—don't you remember it?"

Mildred had closed her eyes. Her face was becoming very white.

"And then don't you remember the day the news came that my mother was very ill, and I was to go home? You came to see me off at the station, and don't you remember what you said when we were sitting in the train? You said we might never meet again, because our circumstances would be so different. You didn't think we should meet like this, did you?"

Mildred's face was growing deadly white.

"My darling mother died. She was all I had in the world, and I was all she had, and when she was gone there was no place for me in my father's house, so I was sent back to school. But the Reverend Mother was very kind to me, and the end of it was that I wished to become a nun. Yes, indeed, and never so much as on the day you took your vows."

Mildred's eyes were still closed, but her eyelids were fluttering, and she was breathing audibly.

"How well I remember it? The sweet summer morning and the snow-white sunshine, and the white flowers and the white chapel of the Little Sisters, and then you, dressed as a bride, in your white gown and long white veil. I cried all through the ceremony. And if my father had not come for me then, perhaps, I should have been a nun like you now."

Her Passionate Appeal for Aid.

Mildred's lips were moving. I was sure she was praying to our Lady for strength to resist my pleading, yet that only made me plead the harder.

"But God knows best what our hearts are made for," I said. "He knows that mine was made for love. And though you may not think it, I know God knows that he who is away is my real husband—not the one they married me to. You will not separate us, will you? All our happiness—his and mine—is in your hands. You will save us, will you not?"

Some time passed before Mildred spoke. It may have been only a few moments, but it seemed to me like an eternity. I did not know then that Mildred was reluctant to extinguish the last spark of hope in me. At length she said, "Mary, you don't know what you are asking me to do. When I took my vows I promised to speak the truth under all circumstances, no matter what the consequences, as surely as I should answer to God at the great Day of Judgment. Yet you wish me to lie. How can I? How can I? Remember my vows, my duty."

I think the next few minutes must have been the most evil of my life. When I saw, or thought I saw, that though one word would save me, one little word, Mildred intended to give me away to the men downstairs, I leapt to my feet and burst out on her with the bitterest reproaches.

"You religious women are always talking about your duty," I cried. "You never think about love. Love is kind and merciful; but, no! Duty—always duty! Love indeed! What do you cold creatures out of the convent, with your crosses and rosaries, know about love—real love—the blazing fire in a woman's heart when she loves somebody so much that she would give her heart's blood for him—yes, and her soul itself if need be."

What else I said I cannot remember, for I did not know what I was doing until I found myself looking out of the window and panting for breath.

Then I became aware that Mildred was making no reply to my reproaches, and looking over my shoulder I saw that she was still sitting in my chair with both her hands covering her face and tears trickling through her fingers onto the linen of her habit.

The Final Moment and a Decision.

That conquered me in a moment.

I was seized with such remorse that I wished to throw my arms about her neck and kiss her. I dare not do that, now, but I knelt by her side again and asked her to forgive me.

"Forgive me, Sister," I said. "I see now that God has brought us to this pass and there is no way out of it. You must do what you think is right. I shall always know you couldn't have done otherwise. He will know, too. And if it must be that disgrace is to fall on him through me. . . . and that when he comes home he will find . . ." But I could not bear to speak about that, so I dropped my head on Mildred's lap.

During the silence that followed we heard the sound of footsteps coming up the stairs.

"Listen! They're here," said Mildred. "Get up. Say nothing. Leave everything to me."

I rose quickly and returned to the window. Mildred dried her eyes, got up from the chair, and stood with her back to the fireplace.

There was a knock at my door. I do not know which of us answered it, but my landlady came into the room, followed by three men in tall silk hats.

"Excuse us, my dear," she said, in an insincere voice. "These gentlemen are making an examination of the house, and they wish to see your room. May they?"

I do not think I made any reply. I was holding my breath and watching intently. The men made a pretense of glancing round, but I could see they were looking at Mildred. Their looks seemed to say as plainly as words could speak, "Is it she?"

Mildred hesitated for a moment, there was a dreadful silence, and then—may the Holy Virgin bless her!—she shook her head.

I could hear no more. I turned back to the window.

I heard the door close behind them. I heard their low voices as they passed along the corridor. I heard their slow footsteps as they went down the stairs. And then, feeling as if my heart would burst, I turned to throw myself at Sister Mildred's feet.

But Sister Mildred was on her knees, with her face buried in my bed, praying fervently.

The Loss of the Scotia.

I DID not know then, and it seems unnecessary to say now, why my father gave up the search for me in London. He did so, and from the day the milliner's clew failed him I moved about freely.

Then, from the sense of being watched I passed into that of being lost.

Sister Mildred was my only friend in London, but she was practically cut off from me. The Little Sisters had fixed her up (in the interests of her work among the lost ones) in a tiny flat at the top of a lofty building near to Piccadilly, where her lighted widow always reminded me of a lighthouse on the edge of a dangerous reef. But in giving me her address she warned me not to come to her except in case of urgent need partly because further intercourse might discredit her denial, and partly because it would not be good for me to be called one of Sister Mildred's girls."

Oh, the awful loneliness of London!

I thought I could have felt at home in the smallest village, for though nobody had spoken to me there, I should have come to know everybody, while in London I had no time to know anybody, for the ever-flowing tides of human faces flashed past me and were lost in a moment like waves under the moon at sea.

Others just as friendless have wandered in the streets of the big city. I knew I was not the first, and I am sure I have not been the last to find London the most solitary place in the world. But I really and truly think there was one day of the week when, from causes peculiar to my situation, my loneliness must have been deeper than that of the most friendless refugee.

Nearly every boarder in our boarding house used to receive once a week or once a month a letter containing a remittance from some unknown source, with which he paid his landlady and discharged all his other obligations.

I had no such letter to receive, so to keep up the character I had not made but had allowed myself, to maintain (of being a captain's wife) I used to go out once a week under pretense of calling at a shipping office to draw part of my husband's pay.

In my childish ignorance of the habits of business people I selected Saturday afternoon for this purpose, and in my fear of encountering my husband, or my husband's friends in the West End streets, I chose the less conspicuous thoroughfares at the other side of the river.

"My dear child," said the mother, "not to know who the young lady is, where she comes from, why she is here, and whether she is married or single or a widow! —it is quite impossible to take her in."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, you see," he went on in his heavy voice, yet very kindly, and with a sort of massive playfulness in his manner, "no one has hurt you—not even a little bit, after all. Now, you run right home to your mother."

The girl did not need to be told twice. On the instant, she sprang up joyously, and started toward the door, with a final ravishing smile for the pleased official at the desk.

"I'll go just as fast as ever I can," the musical voice made assurance blithely.

"Give my compliments to your father," Burke requested, courteously. "And tell him I'm sorry I frightened you."

The girl turned at the door. • • • After all, too great haste might be indiscreet.

"I will, Commissioner," she promised, with an arch smile. "And I know papa will be so grateful to you for all your kindness to me!"

It was at this critical moment that Cassidy entered from the opposite side of the office. As his eyes fell on the girl at the door across from him, his stolid face lighted in a grin. And in that same instant of recognition between the two the color went out of the girl's face. The little red lips snapped together in a line of supreme disgust against this vicissitude of fate after all her maneuverings in the face of the enemy. She stood motionless in wordless dismay, impotent before this disaster forced on her by untoward chance.

"Hello, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes started disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the ——t luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy and then back to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind. "She's little Aggie Lynch—con woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time in Burnsing."

With this succint narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience, the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly rose from his chair, and walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely, then of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, 'kid,' you're a beaut'!"

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

She had filled the carriage with the warm odor of eau de cologne and luggage, which chiefly consisted of ladies' hat boxes of various shapes and sizes.

Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle
The Only Safe Hair Remover

Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. De Miracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

NINE RACES SET FOR DECISION AT MOTORDROME

Place—Old Show Grounds.

Time—8:30; gates open at 7 o'clock.

Tickets—On sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's cigar stores.

Cars—Leave Five Points at short intervals.

HE last word in sensational sport, the very topmost pinnacle of thrills will be reached at the Atlanta Motordrome to-night when the first night motorcycle racing ever staged in the Gate City will be put on. The pleasing pastime of risking the neck at 90 miles an hour is great sport in the daytime. At night, with lights blazing, the band playing and a large yellow moon shining overhead it is a spectacle that would make the burning of Rome look like cheap vaudeville.

Nine races have been scheduled for to-night. And in addition, there may be three for amateurs, which will be put on early. These can not be scheduled, as the novice riders are not under contract, and it is necessary to make a race for them after they arrive and declare their willingness to risk their necks.

The opening professional event will be the Georgia sweepstakes. This will be decided with two-mile heats and a five-mile final. Then follows the second Motordrome purse. This will be raced with three-mile heats and a four-mile final.

The program will close with a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris, to settle the dead heat which they ran on Saturday afternoon.

The program for to-night's races follows:

Georgia Sweepstakes.

(Two-mile heats, five-mile final, winner of each heat and second in fastest heat to qualify for final.)

First heat, No. 5, "Tex" Richard, Dallas, Texas; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris, France; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 1, Morton Graves, Los Angeles. Third heat, No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinborough; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth, Texas; No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn, of Atlanta. Final heat, Georgia sweepstakes.

Motordrome Purse.

(Three-mile heats, four-mile final; winner in each heat and two in the fastest heat to qualify for finals.)

First heat, No. 2, Harry Swartz, Denver; No. 3, Billy Shields, Syracuse; No. 8, Jock McNeil, Edinborough. Second heat, No. 4, George Lockner, Syracuse; No. 6, Freddie Luther, Fort Worth; No. 10, Harry Glenn. Third heat, No. 9, Henry Lewis, Fort Worth; No. 7, Georges Renel, Paris; No. 5, "Tex" Richards; No. 1, Morth Graves. Final heat, Motordrome purse.

Special match race, to be announced.

Bettors on Baseball Fired From Grounds

NEW YORK, June 17.—A large number of men whom the management alleges have been laying odds on the baseball games at the Polo grounds were denied admission to the baseball park for the New York-Detroit American League game. It is estimated 150 of them were not permitted to pass the turnstiles and that 50 others who had evaded the watchfulness of detectives at the gates later were ordered from the grandstand.

The crusade against betting is a concerted one. It was started by Ban Johnson, and Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, and Hempstead, proprietor of the New York Nationals, and various other club owners will work actively for the abolition of the betting evil at ball games, it is said.

Accused of making bets on the Philadelphia-Cleveland baseball game, 38 spectators were arrested in the grandstand and bleachers during the game in Shibe Park, in Philadelphia. The prisoners were taken to city hall in patrol wagons and held for a hearing in the night court.

Ban Johnson Ready For Ball Trust Probe

NEW YORK, June 17.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, arrived here yesterday on a tour of inspection and paid his first visit to the Polo Grounds since Frank Chance's New Yorks began playing there. Asked about the talk of a Congressional investigation of the so-called baseball trust, he said:

"If an investigation is intended, we are ready. In fact, we have always been ready, for we have nothing to conceal. But, personally, I don't believe Congress will take action. Horace Fogel appears to be the only one eager to have baseball probed. If he has any evidence, we are not aware of the fact."

"What has the National Commission done about ball-player authors?" Johnson was asked.

"The American League has suppressed them," was the reply. "And I understand that President Lynch, of the National League, has had some correspondence with President Hempstead, of the Giants, regarding the articles by McGraw, Mathewson, Marquard and Meyers."

BUD ANDERSON NOT STUCK ON BOXING GAME

By Bud Anderson.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—I'm not stuck on the boxing game. I may as well be frank and tell you truthfully that I'm in it for the money. I'm not fighting for the joy of the game, although I like to box.

Nature gave me the strength and stamina to fight, and I am going to use that gift to put me on a comfortable financial basis. Then I'll quit the game.

I'm not going to talk to you about boxing. I'm going to tell you about my ranch.

To be a successful farmer is my ultimate dream. I'd rather do farm work than fight.

Bud Saves His Money.

Ever since my first fight I have been saving my money toward establishing a good paying farm. The first $5 I earned by boxing was in a four-round contest in Portland.

I was happy as a lark when I got that five. I put it away, and that fiver, with the money I got in my following fights, started me on the road toward farmerville. I purchased a ranch near my home in Vancouver.

My ranch will be the prettiest in Washington when I get it improved the way I want it. It has a spring and a brook on it, and some of the prettiest grove scenery in the Northwest. It consists of about seventeen acres, but I will increase its size after a few more fights.

Boosts Farm Work.

Farm work is one of the best methods of training I know of. I have four horses and three cows. When I want to limber up I curry them. The movements from side to side, running the curry comb up and down the animal's sides and over its back are great for the muscles—of man, not the horse.

Milking is another good training stunt. It improves the grip and limbers the wrists. Driving horses is also good for the grip. It strengthens the forearm.

DON'T BE TORTURED

Eczema can be instantly relieved and permanently cured. Read what J. R. Maxwell, Atlanta, Ga., says. It proves that

Tetterine Cures Eczema

I suffered agony with severe eczema. Tried six different remedies and was in despair when a neighbor told me to try Tetterine. After using $3 worth I am completely cured.

Why should you suffer when you can so easily get a remedy that cures all skin troubles—eczema, itching piles, erysipelas, ground itch, ringworm, etc. Get it to-day—Tetterine. 50c at druggists, or by mail.

YOU HAVE TO GO TO England to get the true sporting spirit. The English papers gallantly concede the superiority of the American polo team, but they admit that England would have won if the umpire had been more severe on the Americans; if the Americans had "galloped wide," a well-known American "trick," and if the Americans had refrained from playing carefully when they were four goals to the good. Outside of this they have no fault to find. Fair play and Old England forever!

* * *

IT IS HIGH TIME we were all sitting up to observe the Yankees. They have, since the season begun, won one series and split even on another, which is not bad considering the kind of a team they set out to be.

Manager Wahoo Gets Release at Waycross

WAYCROSS, GA., June 17.—Charles Wahoo is released as manager of the Waycross team, in the Empire League, and Catcher Hawkins, of the Jacksonville, South Atlantic League team, signed as local manager. Shamus O'Brien, recently of Charleston, and Morrison, of Pennsylvania, reported to-day.

On the grounds that Waycross is carrying more than three players who have played in class "C" league, Manager Dudley protested yesterday's game.

MORRIS RATH IS HONORED BY CHICAGO TEAMMATES

NEW YORK, June 17.—Members of the Chicago White Sox have picked Morris Rath, Sox second baseman, to represent the team in the baseball players' fraternity. The players held an executive session with President Dave Fultz of the players' organization while the White Sox were here. Fultz urged them to pull together for their own interests.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 17.—The National League race is practically just as it was two weeks ago. The Giants have not profited by their jaunt on the road, while the Phillies have failed to crack as we hoped and expected. The fact that Doolin caught Pittsburg going badly just after we had taken four straight from his club was a big steadier. If the Pirates had cleaned up on that series it would have pretty nearly crowded Philadelphia out of the running. Then we ran into the Pirates when they are moving at something like their normal gait. It was due to bad baseball that we did not win four straight in Chicago.

The Philadelphia club is inevitably in the race to the finish unless it cracks wide open, which I do not expect now. It does not seem to me that Chicago and Brooklyn can hold up ahead of the Pirates much longer. Pittsburg will begin to climb and the other two start to sink. The Cubs looked very bad against us, although the best we made out of the series was an even break. Of course, we did not get a fair glimpse of Overall because he threw his arm out after pitching four balls in the game he started against us, but lately he has been Evers' winning card in the box with his newly-found spitball. He will be out of the game for a time now, and this will further reduce the efficiency of an already weak pitching staff. Then there is not the spirit behind the Cubs in Chicago which used to be evidenced in the old days. Some fans really roasted O'Day when he called Miller safe at the plate with the winning run in the tenth inning of the first game we played against the Chicago club on Sunday. That was an unheard of thing during the regime of Chance.

* * *

BROOKLYN'S pitchers are uncertain. The team has also lost the dash which the winning streak gave it for a time. Still it would not surprise me at all to see the Superbas finish in the first division ahead of Chicago. It is one of the best fighting clubs Brooklyn has ever possessed. The race will eventually narrow down to a triangular fight between the Pirates, Phillies and Giants, unless the Quakers get too far ahead to be overtaken, which I think unlikely. The championship will be won or lost by the outcome of the future series between these three clubs, with an occasional defeat of one of the three contenders having some influence on the standing. It is my opinion that it will be a very close race and a driving finish. The Pirates are great stayers. And I want to report that the Giants are still hopeful.

* * *

THEY tell me here in Cincinnati that Cleveland is baseball mad over the showing the club is making under Birmingham. The merchants have promised to give the players $100,000 if the team takes the pennant, and this may have something to do with the hustling of the Naps at present. They have experienced only a fairly successful road trip, however; fairly successful because the Athletics are going so well. The and the pitching staff is moving as Cleveland team is playing great ball, smoothly as a demonstration six-cylinder automobile, but they cannot win the pennant if the Athletics never lose.

* * *

THE club has made a good showing on the road, and the players are in there fighting, but the Athletics are at the top of their gait and are holding it. Bender and Plank were never better in their lives. The infield is moving as it did in 1910 and 1911. Collins is going at his best at second base. Every man on the club is hitting. They act like a college team, more like one than I ever saw in the big league. They are all pulling together. It is due to the great management of "Connie" Mack that no discords exist on the club, and there are no cliques. Mack is always right there urging and directing and encouraging. A young pitcher named Wyckoff started against the New York Americans on Memorial Day in the morning and ran into a game in which Russell Ford did not allow a hit up to the ninth inning. Between every round Mack was sitting beside his young twirler with his arm around him, steadying and talking to him. He held him on the ground. The pitcher won that game in the ninth inning.

* * *

THEREFORE, it does not appear to be due to any fault of the Cleveland club, but more to the excellence of the Athletics, that the pennant chances of the Birmingham boys are slowly fading. They are up against a wonderful team going at its best, and the expected weakness in the pitcher's box is not there, because "Connie" has discovered some good talent in Brown, Wyckoff, Heuck and the rest of his youngsters. The Cleveland team is making a game fight of it, and deserves credit. It has been facing a harder schedule than the Athletics for the last two weeks.

Joe Jackson to Bat From Seat in Chair

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—Joe Jackson is planning a stunt to throw the harpoon of ridicule into the pitchers and managers who haven't the nerve to give him a whack at the ball when he comes to bat with runners on second and third base. He is saving this for one of the early home games in Cleveland, where the manager directs the pitcher to pass him on purpose.

The instrument of ridicule will be a camp stool or a small chair. As the quartet of pitchouts for the intentional pass is begun Joe will signal the bat boy to hurry out from the bench with aforesaid stool.

Joe will then take his seat at the plate and watch the wide ones go by while the crowd jeers the opposing team. Or if that shames the opposing side into putting them over he figures he can get to his feet and in position to hit it.

City Limits Changed To Get Sunday Ball

GIRARD, Kan., June 17.—Despite a "blue law" which went into effect here recently, after being submitted to a popular vote at a city election and carried, Girard fans may have their Sunday baseball.

Upon their instigation and insistence, the city commissioners have voted to change the city limits, leaving the ball park outside and beyond the jurisdiction of the city ordinances.

A campaign against Sunday baseball was conducted here some months ago under the leadership of the churches.

IN OTHER WORDS—

Count that day lost whose low descending sun
Sees not another ball yard fight begun.

We read in certain periodicals that the chief difference between the English and the Americans is that the Americans think more of winning than of sport. Another difference is that the English put up the louder howl if they lose.

Georges Carpentier has consented to do battle with Bomb Wells again, possibly on the theory that one good purse deserves another.

After digesting the dope of the polo experts, one deduces that the American team is outclassed, but plays better polo.

Speaking of ungrateful wretches, there is Jack O'Connor, who demands $25,000 for losing his job with the St. Louis Browns.

SHAKE 'EM UP.

Where are the chills of yesterweek
that ambled through my frame
And made me shiver as I sat at
yonder baseball game?
I swelter now and yearn for winds
that long have beat it hence,
And if I want a chill to-day it costs
me 15 cents.

By hoisting a pennant, the Red Sox reminded us that they are champions of the universe. One would not suspect it from their playing.

Tony Caponi and Jack Dillon, having been matched to fight for the middleweight championship of Canada, it behooves the Giants and Pirates to play for the baseball championship of Siberia.

One of the most popular pastimes in Europe these days is to knock Bombardier Wells' block off.

If those English poloists take their defeat gracefully it is due to the fact that they have had a lot of practice at it.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The treasury of the Tuxedo Club which is the right-hand pocket of Eddie Graney's vest, was bulging to-day with certified checks, bank notes, bank drafts and other evidences of money. Billy Nolan, for Willie Ritchie, and Joe Levy, for Joe Rivers, posted their forfeits for the twenty-round boxing contest on July 4, and Graney put up collateral for his agreement to hold the bout.

The boxers put up $3,750 apiece, two-thirds of this to be for weight and appearance, and the balance as a guarantee that they would be ready to box 25 minutes after weighing in, as stipulated in the articles of agreement. Should one of the fighters delay the game more than 25 minutes after weighing in, it's going to cost him a lot of money.

SCHWARTZ HAS WEIRDEST CLUB IN THE LEAGUE

By Percy Whiting.

THE opinion prevails in Atlanta that Bill Schwartz is the greatest manager in the world. He has to be to stick up around the top with that ball club of his.

To the Atlanta way of thinking Bill has the weirdest collection of cast-offs, misfits and comers that the league ever saw. And yet he sometimes wins games with it.

Of course it happened that yesterday wasn't one of the days, but barring Earl Fleharty's well known "bad inning," which proved to be the fourth, they had at least an even break with the Crackers all the rest of the way.

* * *

FLEHARTY'S "blow" was a profound and spectacular affair. Earl slid by for three innings, thanks to an efficacious prayer and the mystifying effect of a red flannel shirt. Then, beginning at the south end of the batting order, the Crackers all took a whack at him. Five hits were made, most notable of which was Tommy Long's three-sacker that scored three runs. This was a terrible poke, but even at that the ubiquitous Jud Daley all but nailed it. He got two hands on it, after a bit of dizzy aerial work, but the ball wrenched loose and continued on its course. Maybe if it had not been for Daley's tackle it would have gone for a home-run.

* * *

AFTER Fleharty was allowed to retire Dye went in. This lad had a snappy, twisty delivery and considerable pep. But he could not hold the Crackers, who nicked him for two more runs.

And in the meantime Gilbert Price was pitching good ball. An error made the first brace of Vol runs possible. In the ninth he really weakened a bit, but by then the Crackers were so far ahead that nothing short of an earthquake mattered much.

Bill Smith wasn't taking any chances, though. While Price was pitching to Dunn, Dent was working a full game with Chapman over in the shade of the smokers. Two or three times Bill seemed on the point of signaling for him but Price always managed to pull through.

* * *

WHAT might have been a fast, snappy game was dragged out interminably by the fact that the umpires allowed the players all the time they wanted for arguing. And the Nashville Club needed a good deal.

A slow game is poor business. It bores the spectators and hurts attendance. It is as "draggy" as a slow play or a long sermon. The umpires can keep a game moving. At least they can prevent a waste of time in arguing. If he isn't man enough to put the offenders out there are plenty of police within his call.

* * *

THE Crackers and the Vols mingle again this afternoon. Dent will probably work for the Crackers. Schwartz did not announce his battery performers. The Vol series closes here Wednesday afternoon and Thursday the Barons and President W. M. Kavanaugh will be here and the local club will be presented the cup for the largest attendance on opening day.

YANKEE TRAINING METHODS PRAISED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, June 17.—American race horse training methods are coming in for high praise in Germany again this season, owing to the excellent results accomplished by the stable of Baron Oppenheim, the Cologne banker and millionaire, under the direction of J. Hyland, formerly of Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

Although the season has just begun Hyland's mounts already have won more than $50,000 in prize money.

CLEANS BLOOD THROUGH KIDNEYS

A Most Important Function and One To Be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Rest Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through this capillary net work that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutriments obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 127 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any obstinate seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.

DUNDEE MEETS JACK WHITE ON COAST TO-NIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 17.—Jack White, the Chicago featherweight, and Johnny Dundee will clash in a scheduled twenty-round battle here to-night. Both boys completed training yesterday and look to be in great shape for the fray.

Dundee needed but light work to fit him for the bout, as he had been training to take on Ad Wolgast two weeks ago. When Ad called off the match White at once asked Tom McCarey for a date with the Eastern boy. McCarey readily consented and secured Dundee's signature to a set of articles.

Although Dundee is a 10 to 8 favorite, White money is coming in fast and it would not be surprising to see the Chicago boy enter the ring to-night an even-money bet. White is well known out here as he has had four fights at McCarey's arena and has only been defeated by Joe Rivers. He holds victories over Owen Moran, Frankie Conley and Harry Thomas.

The winner of the White-Dundee match will probably meet Tommy Murphy. The Harlemite has wired McCarey that he will come here to meet either boy on July 15. However, if White wins he may go after Johnny Kilbane. He has been challenging the featherweight king for the last six months without any results.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Pirates lost their fourth straight game yesterday, dropping a combat to the Braves by a 6 to 5 score.

* * *

The Naps are gunning for the person who whispered in their ear about two weeks ago that Bender and Plank, the pitching mainstays of the Athletics, were about to "crack" from overwork. Plank went against the Naps twice and won twice and Bender engaged them in a battle once and lifted the Nap scalp.

* * *

Russell, the new pitcher of the White Sox, looks like one of the best finds of the season. He pitched his team to another victory yesterday, a 4 to 1 affair, over the Senators.

* * *

* * *

In passing it might be well to keep one's eye on the Red Sox. A few weeks ago they were counted out of the race entirely. They were far below the .500 mark and merely floundered along. But they seem to have recovered and are racing forward with the same dash and speed that carried them to a world's championship last season.

* * *

Few sport writers are brave enough to still predict that the Red Sox will repeat. Just now they are 13½ games, a total of 235 points, behind the leading Athletics, but the Red Sox seem to have hit their stride at last, and if the Athletics slump, as has been predicted, the Bostonians may surprise the talent by slipping up within grappling distance of the league leaders.

* * *

Falkenberg, the elongated Nap twirler, who annexed a string of ten straight victories, now seems to be after a record of straight defeats. He went against the Athletics yesterday and dropped his third straight game.

* * *

The Dodgers seem to have established a season's record for slugging yesterday when they pounded out twenty hits.

* * *

The Giants had a rather easy time defeating the Reds yesterday.

* * *

The Cubs leaped upon the league leaders yesterday with all their spiked shoes and when the battle smoke cleared away it was found that the Phillies had used seventeen men, including four pitchers, in a vain attempt to grab a victory. The Cubs swatted out fifteen hits, which resulted in thirteen runs, against three for the Phillies.

* * *

The Giants are booming along at a terrific clip and unless the Phillies take a sudden brace the New Yorkers have a chance to overhaul them and take the leadership of the league within two weeks, perhaps less.

* * *

Just now the Giants are only three and one-half games, a total of 77 points, behind the Quakertown Athletics.

Fight Managers Lose Ring Idols

Walsh and Jones Suffer Most

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 17.—When the fight manager was treading sweet clover a few short weeks ago, he's up to his neck in cactus now.

It looks like a hard summer for this natural enemy of the boxing promoter.

The affable Southern gentleman, Tommy Walsh, has been separated from three meal tickets in less than as many months. First he brought Frankie Burns to the coast only to have the pompadoured one neatly trimmed by little Eddi Campi. Frankie Russell dropped by the wayside and Walsh devoted all his cunning toward getting Joseph Mandot on the map again. When Mandot was beaten by Anderson a few nights ago, Tommy threw up both hands.

Morgan's Meal Ticket Punched.

"Dumb" Dan Morgan was another to have his bread-winner sent to the trash heap. For four years "Kayo" Brown brought in the coin while Dan indulged in the luxury of eating regularly. Brown was knocked out by both Rivers and Anderson, putting himself in the back row and dragging Morgan along. Dan still has Jack Britton on his hands, but the promoters do not seem to be rushing madly after Jack's services.

"Cherokee" Tom Jones lost a fortune builder when Wolgast surrendered to Ritchie. T. J. quickly shanghaied big Jess Willard, only to have him beaten by "Gunboat" Smith. The win was not decisive, however, and Tom may yet be able to work Willard into the "big money" bag.

The fatality at Calgary reduced Billy McCarney to the ranks again. After ten years of the "ten, twent and thirt" stuff McCarney finally landed a live wire in Luther McCarty. Billy's prospects were of the best until the unfortunate meeting with Pelky. Also this sad affair put the rollers under Tommy Burns. With his arena burned to the ground and the Canadian authorities up in arms against the boxing game it is not probable that Burns will continue as a promoter.

Harry Gilmore, Jr., the man that "made" Packey McFarland, and one of the cleverest managers in America, has not had a money maker since he and the classy Chicago welter split up. Harry's hopes now are to develop a heavyweight contender in the elephantine "Bull" Young.

Kilbane Not Much in Demand.

Johnnie Kilbane's weak showing against Dundee gave Manager Jimmie Dunn something to worry about. With scarcely a demand for the featherweight champion's services Dunn finds himself with nothing but time and a growing expense account on his hands.

Joe Woodman and his truly great fighter, Sammy Langford, have dropped almost entirely out of sight. The Australian promoters appear to have hung an anchor to Joe and Sam and they are tied up where nothing but small change grows.

Fast Play on Piedmont Courts

THE tenth annual tennis tournament for the Georgia State championship, which is attracting much interest among the tennis enthusiasts, will be continued Tuesday afternoon on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club. No matches will be played in the mornings during the tournament, the playing beginning sufficiently early in the afternoons to allow enough time for playing them off. The men's consolation singles will be played this afternoon.

No out-of-town entries have been made in the tournament, those players who had intended entering having been kept away for various reasons. There are some classy local players, however, and the meet will by no means be a slow one.

The results of Monday afternoon's matches were as follows:

First Round.

A. W. Smith won from A. Clarke, 8-6, 2-6, 6-0.

H. J. Hall won from Grover Middlebrooks by default.

S. C. Williams won from Henry Groves by default.

McLarty won from Sims, 6-4, 6-4.

Matthews won from Drummond Jones by default.

The following men drew byes: L. D. Scott, G. A. Howell, E. R. Black, Jr., J. Draper, W. Colquitt, F. B. Green, J. B. Williams, C. Y. Smith, T. H. Williams, T. Perry, G. W. McCarty, H. M. Ashe, Jr., W. Nunnally, W. Griffith, Ramspeck, Abbott, Hallman, E. V. Carter, Jr., Martin, Porter, Jennings, Grant, J. Colquitt and V. R. Smith.

Second Round.

G. A. Howell won from L. D. Scott, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Draper won from E. R. Black, Jr., 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

F. B. Green won from W. Colquitt by default.

C. Y. Smith won from J. B. Williams, 6-0, 6-0.

T. H. Williams won from H. Perry by default.

G. W. McCarty won from H. M. Ashe, Jr., 6-4, 6-3.

W. Nunnally won from W. Griffith by default.

Abbott won from Ramspeck by default.

E. V. Carter, Jr., won from Hallman, 6-3, 6-0.

G. R. Porter won from Martin, 6-3, 6-2.

B. M. Grant won from Jennings, 6-3, 6-0.

Third Round.

C. Y. Smith won from F. B. Green, 6-1, 6-3.

MADISON, 4; MONROE, 1.

MADISON, GA., June 17.—Madison defeated Monroe here yesterday, 4 to 1. The University of Georgia will be here with its strong aggregation for three games Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

BRANNIGAN HELD TO DRAW.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 17.—Kid Mahoney and Patsy Brannigan went ten rounds here last night to a draw.

Doyle Whiffed Hard But This One Got By

NEW YORK, June 17.—What Jack Doyle, the White Sox scout, does not know he makes a stab at. But he doesn't always get by.

Doyle and half a dozen others were sitting about the lobby of the hotel. Frank Fogarty, the actor man, joined the party and he grasped at a glance that there wasn't much jollity in the bunch. He's quite a friend of Cal's and he was there to do the cheering act.

"Say, you know," and he called the name of some mutual friend.

"Oh, very well indeed," answered Cal. "But what happened to him?"

"Oh, he graduated."

"He did?"

"Yes, went through the entire curriculum."

Cal turned to Doyle. "You know what he is talking about, don't you?" queried the manager.

"Oh, very well," answered Doyle. "You know what a curriculum is?"

"Even so," from Doyle.

"Then what is it?" demanded Cal.

"Oh, it's one of those things where a fellow," continued Doyle, and hesitated. "It's one of those—well, a fellow who does that is the kind of a fellow who makes up his mind to ride in an automobile and then walks."

TIGERS WORRY JENNINGS; MANAGER NEAR BREAKDOWN

DETROIT, MICH., June 17.—Hugh Jennings, the hard-working manager of the Tigers, is said to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown because of the poor showing made by his team this season. Jennings is working night and day endeavoring to formulate a plan by which he can strengthen his team. He has scouts scurrying in bush leagues all over the country for fresh material and hopes to have the team climbing by the end of the month.

'PHILS ARE NOT PLAYING ABOVE STRIDE'--DOOIN

PITTSBURG, June 17.—"Get one thing clear," said Manager Dooin of the Phillies, "which is that the Phillies are not playing beyond their speed. Honestly, I believe we are not yet playing up to our speed. The fact that we are out in front doesn't mean, to my way of thinking that we are going beyond our gait, but that some of the other clubs are slipping.

"There is nothing the matter with the Giants in their games against us, however. It seemed to me that they played as well as they ever did, and certainly there couldn't have been any improvement in Matt's pitching. We beat him in Philadelphia because Luby happened to get one of his hits.

"There is only one man on our club who is hitting above his regular gait, and two of them, Paskert and Luderus, are hitting away below their real form about .150.

Free From Injuries.

"I've always thought the Phillies could win if they had a ball club, and you must bear in mind that this is the first time they have been able to put a club in the field since July, 1911. From that time up to this year the team was simply shot to pieces with injuries.

"I see they say we are weak in substitutes, but I can't see it. We have Runt Walsh for substitute infielder and Cozy Dolan and Doc Miller for the outfield. Dolan has made four pinch hits in four times up and Miller six in eight times up, and none of the six was a single. We have Dan Howley behind the bat beside Killifer and myself, and Howley is one of the fastest men on the team.

"I consider Killifer the best catcher in the big leagues to-day. He's hitting good. Can he throw? Why, he never misses 'em. Jimmy McAleer brought him out in St. Louis, but thought he was too light. I like a light catcher myself—weighed only 126 pounds when I broke in."

Some Interesting Facts Concerning The Turkey Tribe

The Turkey the Only Fowl Extensively Bred in a Domestic State That Was Previously Wild.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The turkey is the only fowl that is extensively bred in a domestic state that was previously wild. With this in view, it is really essential that we should know something of its habits while in the wild state. In the first place, it very naturally secured a great deal of exercise while doing its foraging for its daily rations. All this foraging served a twofold purpose; it not only gave them the much-needed food for maintenance, but the exercise they got made them very hardy and thrifty. It enabled them to make the flight that was absolutely necessary that they might keep out of the reach of the Indians' bow and arrow or the white man's gun. This great vigor has, to a great extent, been carried down through generations to the present time, but in a very much modified form. In fact, every turkey that is raised in close quarters and used as a breeder is helping just that much to sound the death roll of the turkey. It weakens its constitution, and this weakness is transmitted to the next generation. Many people who attempt to raise turkeys in that way are really ignorant of the real harm they are doing the race of turkeys by such a course. But, thank fortune, not very many ever reach maturity over this route. Then there are so many persons working with turkeys who do not recognize one of the turkey's natural food lines. They fail to remember, if they ever knew, that the turkey's food in its wild state consisted chiefly of insects, interspersed with wild seeds, beech nuts, berries, etc., but little or no corn. The average poultry keeper who has not really studied the conditions as he should, feeds too much corn and cornmeal. Corn fed exclusively, or nearly so, is too rich a food and tends to pack the crop and the result is liver trouble. You will notice one going a little slow with a sort of measured tread. This will be about the only symptom noticed, but is enough to lay out many a promising half-grown turkey. Wheat, where it can be had, is one of the safest foods one can use. Used in the whole grain and its various millings, such as good bran, middlings and low-grade flour.

Middlings moistened with skim milk makes an ideal feed for the morning and then the evening feed may be of cracked corn and wheat, about half and half. Into the mash should be cut onion tops of about one-third inch lengths and mixed through. This is relished and at the same time is a great health promoter. Where low-grade flour is to be procured and not the shorts or middlings, it should be mixed half and half with good bran by measure. This is to be used as the shorts with milk. Turkeys should be induced to stay on the range as much as possible. To encourage this, one can scatter a little cracked corn out from the buildings in a trail to the woods and fields for a few times. This will get them to hunting in good shape if they are not fully inclined otherwise. Do not feed at noon time before they get to be of some size. When they find that they must stay out on the range to secure their living they will be but little trouble. If they seem to get a good supply of food in the fields, being satisfied, it is a good practice to give them but a very small feed at night, simply to encourage them to come home to roost. After they have gone to roost it is a good plan to put out their morning feed so they can get it at daybreak and go.

As a general thing, everything and everybody eats too much, so if they are doing fairly well on the range, let them alone until you notice that they are really hungry when they come home. It will then be evidence that foodstuff is getting scarce out there and it must be forthcoming from another source.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two Corporations With $350,000 Capital Seek Charters—Mrs. Akin and Others File Petitions.

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as atorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

Many New Houses Rented.

The Smith, Ewing & Ranking Renting Agency has announced the following houses rented in the past few days:

No. 28 Joe Johnston Avenue, B. Phillips, $12.50; No. 46 Rogers Street, O. L. Graham, $15; No. 41 Mills Street, R. L. All Civilized Nations Should Unite in Defense of Civilization

THE GEORGIAN prints on this page to-day the well-known prophetic cartoon of the Emperor of Germany, published some years ago, in which the Archangel Michael is shown warning the Powers of Europe against a threatened Oriental invasion.

The cross of Christianity is displayed above the nations of Europe, and amid the smoke and flames of the devastating invasion are shown the outlines of the statue of Buddha.

This cartoon showed the concern of the Kaiser of Germany for the Christian and civilized nations of Europe. We assume that the Kaiser and Germany generally are concerned for Christianity and civilization throughout the world. We can hardly believe, then, that Count Reventlow voices the sentiment of the Kaiser and the sentiment of the people of Germany when he sees only a possible trade advantage to Germany in a Buddhist Oriental nation occupying the western slopes of the North American continent.

Are not the German Kaiser and the German people concerned more for Christianity and civilization than they are for a fancied, and purely fancied, trade advantage? Does the Kaiser's favorite cartoon apply only to the Christian and civilized nations of Europe, and not the Christian and civilized nations of America and Australasia and elsewhere?

We can say with confidence that the view of the Kaiser and of the German people as a whole is not so narrow and so venal.

Count Reventlow's utterances are both brutal and bigoted, both selfish and shortsighted. No good can come to Christianity and civilization anywhere by the weakening of the power and progress of Christianity and civilization in any nation, in any section of the globe.

If the struggle is in behalf of Christianity and civilization, of human progress and human liberty, then all the nations of the world which believe in these ideals should unite to further them and to oppose any influence which threatens them.

No petty prejudice, no small selfishness, no baser passions of envy or jealousy or greed, should cause distrust and defection, with the possibility of defeat and disaster to the common cause.

Let the Kaiser modify his cartoon to make it include the United States and Canada and Australasia, to make it include all Christian and civilized nations everywhere, and he will make it more worthy of himself, more worthy of his people, more worthy of the Christian spirit he is seeking to express, the civilized conditions he is seeking to preserve.

On such a broad and lofty platform the Christian and civilized nations of the world could be united, and should be united, for the advancement and advantage of all humanity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"NATIONS OF EUROPE, GUARD YOUR PRECIOUS POSSESSIONS!"

The German Kaiser's cartoon on the Yellow Peril, representing the Archangel Michael warning the Western Powers against the threatened Oriental invasion, typified by the image of Buddha.

Why Women Should Vote

Copyright, 1913.

Another State, Illinois, has passed a law giving the vote to women. This makes ten States, all in the West, where women will vote at future elections.

Whether you believe in female suffrage or not, whether you WANT to see women vote or not, make up your mind to this:

Women are going to vote. They are going to have their say in the laws that rule them and their children. They are going to add morality, benevolence and kindness to man's governing selfishness, AND NOTHING WILL STOP IT.

There is a time for each important work. THIS IS THE TIME TO WORK AND GET THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Our purpose is to interest, first of all, the poorer women. It is easy for the right and prosperous "lady" to discuss in a distant, indifferent way her future and her rights. She has comfort, luxury and ease now. Her rights do not really worry her very much, except as an added luxury.

Those especially interested, and in whom The Georgian is especially interested, are the poorer women—women whose husbands or fathers earn two dollars a day, or five or ten dollars a day perhaps. They are the women that really pay the cost of government to-day.

Is not our Government a trust government? Are not the real taxes in this country imposed BY THE TRUSTS?

The man with a little house pays a little tax on that house. And he pays to the Government a little tax on his tobacco, if he uses it, and another little tax on his woolen suit. But the Government doesn't get the REAL tax. That goes to the trusts. The real tax laid upon the people, WITHOUT REPRESENTATION IN THE TAXING BODY, is made by the trusts.

There is Mr. Rockefeller's tax from the Oil Trust. There is the tax from the Sugar Trust and the Meat Trust, and all the other trusts.

WHO PAYS THOSE TAXES? THE WOMEN PAY THEM. They spend the household money, and the trusts raise their incomes by taxes in the household.

The women of the poorer families, the wives of men with four or five hundred dollars a year, or of the lucky man with his three or four thousand dollars a year, THEY PAY THE COST OF OUR TRUST GOVERNMENT.

The poorer women pay the taxes; the poorer women should be allowed to vote.

There are a hundred ways of looking at this question of votes for women, and no matter how you look at it, you respect women, if you have had a good mother, a good wife, good daughters and sisters, GOOD WOMEN AROUND YOU, YOU MUST WORK IN FAVOR OF THE VOTE FOR WOMEN.

Suppose a woman holds stock in a railroad. Is she not allowed to vote like any man, as a stockholder in that railroad?

Is not every woman in America a stockholder in this NATION? Do not the women of America CREATE the nation? Will there be anything left of the United States a hundred years from now, EXCEPT THE CHILDREN CREATED BY THE WOMEN LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES?

Is not the nation made up of its people, and do not the women CREATE the people? Are they not entitled to an opinion, to cast a vote, in the lawmaking, in the country governing, in the tax imposing?

You will hear women say that they do not want to vote, they are happy as they are, quite contented. And this is said often by some of the best women, the most intelligent in certain directions, excellent morally.

But to the women, well-meaning, satisfied, intelligent, BUT NARROW, we would say, and we shall often repeat, THAT WHILE THEY MAY THINK THEY ARE CONTENTED IN THEIR SLAVERY, ONCE THEY GET FREEDOM, ONCE THEIR MORAL CHARACTER IS EXPRESSED IN THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT, THEY WILL FIND THE FREEDOM AND THE RIGHTS OF THE VOTER INFINITELY PREFERABLE TO PEACEFUL, WELL DRESSED, SILKY SLAVERY,

The Stranger and "Small Town" Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyrighted, 1913, by the Star Co.)

THE menu in your home may be the best in the world; yet, because you are accustomed to it, you find a new zest in food placed before you when you visit other homes, or sit at hotel tables.

The eye, the ear, the mind, the taste all find a keener pleasure in the unaccustomed at certain intervals, even when that which is offered is less admirable.

In an interesting letter which discusses to some length the follies of my own sex, the weakness of his, a question of interest is propounded by a man of culture. After reviewing the numerous tragedies which have occurred from time to time as the result of infatuation of young women in villages and interior towns through love affairs with strangers, the correspondent says:

Dreams of Sweetheart.

"It has always been a great mystery to me why the stranger within our gates has such fascinating attractions for some of our American girls. I shall eschew the engagements and marriages of American heiresses to foreigners. Every one knows the reasons. But the question is a subtle and far-reaching one. Let a total stranger, of good appearance and polite address, come to a town and at once he is the favorite with the girls at the prayer meeting and picnic. The actor, the drummer, the ball player, yes, even the prize fighter, in competition for the hand and heart of the reigning belle, will nearly always outdistance the Georgies and Charlies and Willies of the town. Is it hero worship, or what is it?"

To the man or woman who understands what the imaginative and romantic temperament means this question would suggest its own answer.

While familiarity does not always or often breed "contempt," it does destroy, as a rule, romantic illusions.

The average young girl—God bless her!—is possessed of a good share of sentiment and romance in her thoughts of the lover waiting for her somewhere in the world.

She invests him with the qualities most desirable in her estimation and perhaps drawn to some extent from the novels she has read. He is a creature of her dreams and meditations, and it is not to be supposed that she will readily clothe the youth with whom she has played "tag" and "I spy" in the garments of her dreams.

The boy who has been repeatedly punished at school or whipped by an older brother in her presence or who has been the cause of disagreeable neighborhood criticsms because of his oversupply of youthful vitality; the boy who has teased and tormented her and shown all the unattractive traits of the average growing lad is not liable to become her ideal by any sudden transformation.

The stranger who comes to town has passed through all these unattractive phases in his own village, and he may be far less worthy of her admiration and much further removed from the standard of her ideal than her old playmate, but she sees in him the object of her dreams, free from all crudity, and he seems to her a wholly superior being.

Whatever he may have been in the process of evolution, she finds him her finished ideal when they meet.

He has come into her life suddenly, and by the will of kind Providence she believes.

There is a novelty in all he says and does; he has a new trick of pronunciation, or a new set of phrases and he brings the atmosphere of a new world into her monotonous life. He tells her of new scenes, new people.

It is as if she had listened all her life to one air, and now a new melody is sounded. Harmonies undreamed of become perceptible to the ear of her heart. She listens to his recital of boyish days and pranks, and while the tales he relates differ little from the actions of the boys with whom she has been reared, they are surrounded with a halo of charm in her mind which places his past in a realm quite apart from the commonplace; and it is this commonplace association of neighborhood life which has stood between her dreams and her boy lovers.

Whatever affairs of the heart the stranger may have passed through in his evolving period, she has not been a witness thereof nor a confidant of the other maidens in the case, as she has been with her childhood's companions.

When he tells her that he loves her, she does not recall the fact that two or three years ago he was the devoted cavalier of her sister, or her cousin, or her rival in the high school.

Blessed Is She.

And the accident of their meeting, the day they first looked into each other's faces, the hour they first spoke—all these incidents are thrilling and wonderful and food for hours of happy memories.

Blessed is she to whom such memories and dreams remain forever surrounded by a romantic halo! For never in any ordinary association of childhood and never in the more commonplace development of friendship into love can there be found quite the depth of joy and sentiment which results from the sudden advent of a great and lasting love.

The Back Yard Stock Farm

By WEX JONES.

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I used to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew,
For rent was high, and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of ham,
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.

*For whalebone. Corsets, you know.

Inspiring Line Versus Firing Line

By THOMAS TAPPER.

TO THE BOSS:

EVERY business organization possesses its misfits.

What can be done with them?

The easiest solution of the problem is to discharge them, shut your eyes and draw again.

The economic way is to open your eyes and study the situation and develop them.

There is some trouble involved in this. But no more than a carpenter encounters when he has to cut and plane a piece of wood to make it fit a certain place. He might overhaul a million feet of lumber before finding exactly the piece he needs.

It is his ready skill for altering the length and shape of lumber, for adjusting it to his purposes that makes him a carpenter.

A quick eye, an observing mind, a few tools by the help of which he can carry out his ideas and he can adjust means to ends without trouble, delivering a solid and efficient job.

Misfits in business are rough timber. Everyone is good for something. They may not make good tops for mahogany tables, but they are useful somewhere.

TO THE WORKER:

THE business organization in which you work can use all your thought and strength.

A certain amount of shaping and fitting is necessary to make you and the job balance perfectly.

Your own intelligence, plus the demands of your work, plus the directions you receive from the Boss, should result in an adjustment that will make you indispensable.

This is the secret of all the Getting-on-in-Life that everybody is so anxious to attain.

Many a man will cheer himself red in the face to see a second baseman play good ball. He is cheering efficiency. By watching that man he will learn the whole philosophy of doing teamwork in his own shop.

Take the second baseman from his place and put in a minister, or a shoemaker, and the game may be humorous, but it will not be efficient.

(III)

TO BOTH OF YOU:

WHEN two people have signed up for the purpose of doing one thing as well as it can be done, both must travel in the same direction and keep step to the music of the business. One can not lag behind when the double-time march begins.

The man who doesn't feel like marching at a double-time gait must either change his feelings or get out of line. But wherever he goes he must remember this: When a lot of men get together without purpose or leadership, they make up a Crowd. When they get together with a purpose, keep step and march straight on, they make a Procession.

And about all a crowd is fit for is to stand around and see the procession march by.

Electric fans, a scientist says, are run so fast that the current of air is actually lessened. However, things are evened up by an increase in the number of colds and sore throats.

: The Lesson From Flag Day :

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

"Hats off!"
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles and the sound of drums—
A flash of color beneath the sky—
"Hats off!"
The flag is passing by!

THE youth of a republic are its strength and hope. The decision of each man's destiny involves, in part, the common weal. The sentiments of youth make the policies of men. The State supplants the school, the student merges into the citizen. The schoolroom of yesterday is the forum of to-day, the playgrounds of to-day are the battlefields of to-morrow. The spirit planted in the bosoms of youth blossoms into the ballots or bayonets of manhood, and a mother-er's whisper in her children's ears may be the boom of cannon in the years to come.

It is well that Flag Day has become a national holiday. There was never a nobler or a wiser movement than to give one day of our national life to the national flag. Our Star Spangled Banner is the symbol of our country, and all policy and all patriotism unite in the effort to teach our country's children to love and to revere it.

It Is Inspiring.

As a thing symbolic, splendid, inspiring, it should be honored throughout the land.

The flag was George Washington's individual Declaration of Independence—his personal pioneer defiance of England and the King. He made it first, he waved it first. Six months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, on July 4, 1776, and nearly eighteen months before the Continental Congress, on June 14, 1777, formally adopted the flag George Washington floated over his headquarters at Cambridge the Stars and Stripes. If the Revolution had failed, that flag alone and that flag's defiance would have condemned him to death.

Even so Charles Carroll, signing the Declaration, was reminded "There are other Carrolls," and swiftly the brave Marylander added, "Of Carrollton"—which was Carroll's dauntless acceptance of personal responsibility and his defiance of the King.

The spirit of Washington and the spirit of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, was the spirit of individual responsibility and of individual and dauntless devotion. It should be the spirit of to-day. The Republic is verging to its zenith and patriotism should be at its prime. Our country is greater and stronger than it has ever been before, and the spirit of love and devotion in its people had never more to inspire it than now.

In every schoolhouse, in every public hall, in every home and in every hand, native or foreign born, the flag of our country should be displayed on Flag Day every year.

Not only in our splendid and inspiring youth, but in our stalwart and grateful manhood, should this spirit be expressed. Every great and noble sentiment that wraps our country's present and its future should rally around the colors of the republic.

More than ever before to the children of the republic and to its men and women should these stripes and stars from "Old Glory" stand for the essentials of power, protection and progress.

The Spirit of the Country.

The flag must stand for a constructive policy and for an ample navy to sustain it. It should stand in every instance for the right of our country to manage its own affairs. It should stand for clear treaties and every just advantage which is ours—even if it takes new treaties to secure it—for the right to fortify its great canal and to regulate its commerce.

It should stand for the right of its separate States to regulate their own affairs under the Federal Government in matters vital to the interests of its people.

The flag should stand for a constructive, and not a destructive, policy in business—regulated by a reduced but reasonable tariff for the protection of our industries and by reciprocal agreements to protect our international trade.

The flag should wave over a magnificent merchant marine. It should redeem the desolate harbors in which its glorious colors are rarely seen, and float above our country's commerce in its own ships on every sea.

It should stand for a constructive policy of durable and universal peace by being duly and fully prepared for war.

Above all present things, the flag should stand for the power to back its policies with argument in peace and with the ample equipment of a powerful navy for defense and for offense in war.

The Glory of the Flag.

The glory of our flag was made by the power and the glory of a strong and dauntless navy. It must be sustained by the power of a strong and ample navy. So long as other nations front the world with battleships and armed battalions our country must front the world with battleships and battalions. And because we are richer and more isolated than other nations we must see to it that our battleships are as many and as strong as those of any nation that may menace us upon either of our ocean coasts.
