TRIAL OF LEO FRANK IS SET FOR JULY 28

State Urges Earlier Date, But Objection by the Defense Wins Day.

Phincipally on the statements of the defense July 28 was definitely fixed by Judge L. S. Roan for the opening of the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, following a conference Tuesday afternoon with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, of counsel for the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey declared his case was ready for immediate trial, and he wished to clear it off his docket. He urged a speedy trial. Mr. Rosser, however, stated he and his colleague, Reuben Arnold, were forced to go to Emmanuel county to try the McNaughton murder case there during the week of July 14. Mr. Arnold said flatly the case would take two weeks after the Solicitor had estimated its length at two days.

Judge Roan also said he had planned to take his vacation July 4, but was willing to forego it and set the date for July 7, but brought up the McNaughton case and July 28 was fixed.

Subpenas Still Effective.

The trial will very likely be held in some more commodious room than the one in which Judge Roan sits.

Notwithstanding the fixing of the July date, the subpenas summoning witnesses for the prosecution to appear in court on June 30 with their evidence for examination by the defense will be effective. At this time, however, arguments will be heard on the validity of this action, and Judge Roan will decide whether or not the State will turn its affidavits over to the defense.

While the conference was in session in the Thrower Building Jim Conley, the State's principal witness, being put through another cross-examination by Detectives Campbell and Starnes. The negro was not taken to Chief Lanford's office, but was questioned in the cell house. The examination was kept secret and its outcome will not be made known to the public.

State's Leaders Called.

The first important legal move by the defense in the battle for the life and freedom of Leo Frank, accused of the strangling of Mary Phagan, was made Tuesday in the issuance of subpenas duces tecum for the prime movers in the prosecution of the factory superintendent.

The following have been subpenaed to appear:

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, to whom is generally given credit for the admissions gained from Conley.

All other city detectives who have worked on the case.

All of them are ordered to produce any affidavits they may have bearing on the case in court June 30, the date at first suggested for the trial.

The startling move on the part of the defense was taken to mean that Frank's lawyers propose to use to free their client the very evidence the detectives and Solicitor General have collected to send him to the gallows.

The most significant demand is made upon Chief Beavers, who is commanded to bring into court the famed series of affidavits made by the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. It is evident that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who are conducting the defense, intend to tear the contradictory sto-

Chaingang System Assailed in Bulletin Of Men and Religion

The executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement began Tuesday, through the newspaper bulletins previously devoted to the vice problem, a campaign against the chaingang system in Georgia.

The practice of chaining boys and first offenders to hardened criminals was bitterly condemned and the whole system was characterized as a prolific breeding place for criminal tendencies of the worst sort.

The State's policy in making the wives and children of the chaingang victims suffer along with the head of the family by depriving them of their source of support was severely criticised, and the voters of the State were called upon to write their Representatives in the House and Senate to free the State from these conditions.

Road-building about the State was commended, but the policy of "making criminals to build roads" was described as madness. The bulletin said in part:

Georgia daily thus degrades and drives men deeper into hell. Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men. But 2,896 of the 6,139 are felony convicts. They are under long sentence. Among these are two 12-year-old boys and two of 13; three of 14, eleven of 15; twenty of 16, thirty of 17, 85 of 18, ninety-one of 19, 123 of 20 and 163 of 21. Children are out of place in convict camps.

Prohibitive Opium Law Passes House

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The House to-day passed the Harrison bill placing a prohibitive tax of $200 a pound on smoking opium, imposing a $100,000 bond on manufacturers of such opium and placing heavy criminal penalties for violation of the act.

ALLEN TELLS WOMEN HE WILL AID 'DRYS'

W. C. T. U. Plans Defeat of Anderson in Senate Leadership Race by Prayer.

The Georgia Anti-Saloon League, through the Rev. H. M. DuBose, chairman of the Headquarters Committee, late Tuesday afternoon addressed a letter to Randolph Anderson and John T. Allen, the rival candidates for the presidency of the Senate, asking if they would support legislation prohibiting common carriers from shipping into and delivering liquor in the state of Georgia.

Immediately after receiving the letter, Mr. Allen answered in the affirmative. "The legislation referred to in your letter meets my approval and would receive my support," he write.

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were flooded with letters protesting against Anderson's candidacy and denouncing the Savannah man as a foe of prohibition and an ally of the liquor interests.

Prayers will be one of the weapons in the fight, women all over the State joining in pleas to Providence to prevent the election of Anderson.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. Now, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the late prohibition movement, and to thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything, for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer, and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee.

'Continued Sultry Weather' Best That Forecaster Offers

Not even a cloud interposed itself between the sun and the city of Atlanta Tuesday, and the result was a sultry and sweltering day. Although the temperature was only 88 at 12 o'clock and 89 an hour later, it seemed much hotter.

The outlook for cooler weather, based on a fall in the maximum temperature Monday, signally failed to materialize Tuesday. The 89 maximum mark of the day before was exceeded shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday, and 30 minutes later the mercury was hesitating less than one-tenth of a degree below 90.

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesey and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

TRAIN BURIED IN RUINS OF EXPLOSION; 50 DEAD

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24.—Fully fifty persons were killed and eighty five injured as a result of an explosion in the Huessted Milling Company plant on Elk Street this afternoon. Most of the dead and injured are employees in the mill.

While a Nickel Plate passenger train was passing the mill the rear wall was blown out by the explosion, causing it to topple on the train burying it completely. The engineer and fireman, conductor and 75 passengers were seriously injured, some of them probably fatally. Fifty of the injured were removed to the emergency hospital. Several of them are dying.

A priest, Rev. Father Barrett, administered the last rites to fifty of the injured during the excitement that prevailed. Immediately following the explosion a Polish boy, while running to the fire was instantly killed by an automobile.

One man was blown through the wall of the building, his body being found 100 feet away. Owing to the confusion it was impossible to ascertain the identity of the injured.

Many of the passengers injured when the wall collapsed on the train are from out of town. The monetary loss is estimated at one million dollars, there being over half a million bushels of grain in the mill.

Ga. Cotton Dealers Accuse Railroad of Rate Discrimination

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Six interior cotton firms to-day petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to order the Atlantic Coast Line to cease the practice of paying seaport cotton dealers for compression cotton held by the railroads. The interior firms charge the practice practically rebating.

The firms are located in Atlanta, Augusta, Covington and Athens. They allege the railroad discriminates against them in favor of cotton dealers in Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah and Norfolk.

Two Dead, One Dying In Train-Auto Crash

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 24.—Two persons were killed, one fatally injured and three others seriously injured to-day when their automobile was struck by a Lake Shore train at Bereau. The dead are: Homer Atkins, Bereau, and Charles Atkins, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

C. R. Stull, garage proprietor, Bereau, was fatally, and Mrs. Homer Atkins, Mrs. Charles Atkins and an 18-months-old child, badly injured.

Dies as He Phones Physician for Wife

W. B. Henson, of 28 Clark Street, Monday went to his telephone to call a physician to his sick wife. A few minutes later he was found lying dead in an adjoining room.

Seemingly he was in the best of health. He just had returned from a pleasure trip to Gainesville.

Heat Hatches Eggs in Ophir Mine Depth

They hatched.

PHAGAN DEFENSE CALLS STATE'S LEADERS

ries of the negro to tatters and make his statements appear so utterly ridiculous and improbable that the jury not only will refuse to accept them, but will interpret them as an effort of Conley to get from under the blame for a crime that he committed himself.

Chief Beavers is asked to bring into court the written statement made by Conley May 18 in the presence of Detective John R. Black and Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott; also the affidavit sworn to by Conley before G. C. Febuary in the presence of Chief Lanford and Detectives Black and Scott May 24, the affidavit made by Conley May 28, the affidavit made by the negro May 29 in the presence of Lanford, Campbell and Scott and all other written statements of the negro in the possession or control of the Chief.

Chief Beavers is asked, in addition, to bring all the statements of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman; Monteen Stover, the girl who testified that Frank was not in his office when she went for her money; W. M. Matthews, and Miss Grace Hicks, the girl who first identified the dead body as that of Mary Phagan.

The defense has persistently ridiculed the stories of Jim Conley and characterized them as cunning fabrications to shift the blame on Frank's shoulders.

With the other affidavits, which for the most part are given credence by the defense, the attempt will be merely to show that the evidence which the prosecution holds to point toward the guilt of Frank only more firmly fixes it upon the shoulders of the negro sweeper, and that the State from time to time has shifted the ground on which it based its theory that Frank was guilty.

Hooper Calls Move a Trick.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, branded the move of the defense as a thinly veiled trick to impeach the testimony of the witnesses called by the State, and said that it was not at all unlikely that the subpenaes would be resisted.

He intimated his belief that it was the intention of the defense to use the affidavits as a comparison with the testimony of the affiants when took the stand in an effort to pick out every discrepancy and thus seek to discredit the witnesses.

Before the conference between Judge Roan and the attorneys on the opposing sides began in the afternoon, the judge announced that he would be the one who would set the date for the trial, after consulting the convenience of the attorneys.

He said that he desired to preclude the possibility that the case would be called for June 30 and the witnesses summoned and then one or another of the attorneys ask for a postponement. He expressed it as his purpose to carry the case through to its completion once it was started.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, because of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quinney, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 24.—With a hundred fellow workers watching his death struggles from a high railroad bridge, Sullivan Lackel was drowned in Rock River with only two 12-year-old boys trying to rescue him.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.
Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.
India, 358,316,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.
Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.
Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.
Sugar beets, Belgium, 84.7 per cent.
Denmark, 102.3 per cent.
France, 94.36 per cent.
Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

WILSON MONEY TALK INDORSED BY BANKERS

At a meeting of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, held in their offices on Tuesday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, we have read with interest and approval the President's message to Congress, asking for the passage of some kind of remedial currency legislation for the relief of the banking and commercial interests of the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, First that we indorse heartily the spirit and purpose of said message.

Resolved, further, That it is the belief of the banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, representing the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests of Atlanta and the prosperous Southeast, that a satisfactory bill for the reform of banking and currency laws should be passed at this session of Congress.

Resolved, further, That we believe that the combined wisdom of the President, the House and the Senate, after hearing from the banking, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country, can and will evolve a currency bill that will be satisfactory to the banks and beneficial to the nation.

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

11,000 Cincinnati Workers on Strike

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Eleven thousand garment workers to-day obeyed the order to strike, and work in the majority of factories was completely tied up.

Workers demand 48 hours per week. Operators offer a 50-hour week. Former work was 54 hours.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—There was no sign of a break to-day in the deadlock of the ice manufacturers and their striking drivers, helpers, engineers and firemen. Hotter weather caused much suffering.

Rome Lawyer Sued For Total Divorce

ROME, June 24.—Accused of cruel treatment by his wife, J. Sante Crawford, well-known attorney, court stenographer and politician, to-day was sued for total divorce by his wife, who was a Miss McClaine. Mrs. Crawford alleges cruel treatment in her petition.

Both parties are well known, and each is prominently connected throughout the State. Crawford's family lived for years in Polk County, and his wife has relatives in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Mrs. Crawford is a very handsome woman.

The Crawfords have one child, a boy 10 years of age.

Nicholson Declines Post in Portugal

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson's ambassadorial troubles were augmented to-day when he was forced to accept the declination of Meredith Nicholson to serve as Minister to Portugal. Nicholson informed the President that family matters precluded his acceptance.

According to Secretary of State Bryan, an effort is now being made to place Mr. Nicholson in some other European diplomatic post.

Wilsons Exchange Anniversary Gifts

The President presented his wife with a handsome pearl necklace containing 28 jewels.

The occasion of the exchange of gifts was the fact that the day is the twenty-eighth anniversary of their marriage.

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,

"Yours,

"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, for President of the Senate."

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight fought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, and Representative Hardeman of Jackson, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to Representative Burwell, of Hancock.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

BULGARIANS AND SERVIANS IN BATTLE

Russia Orders Peace When Sixty Thousand of Ferdinand's Soldiers Oppose Allies.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council 18 considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $600,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

Mrs. Wilson Likely To Hurry Vacation

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches, deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grape-juice.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureaus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be compelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various sums available for each.

King George Greets Poincaire; Guarded Against Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

POPE TO SUMMON CARDINAL FARLEY

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva in intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome.

Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

Mrs. Stetson Heretic, Scientist Declares

BOSTON, June 24.—Alfred Farlow, chairman of the publication committee of the Christian Science Church, in reply to a claim of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, of New York, that she is the head of the church and the "true authority on the teachings of Mrs. Eddy," declared Mrs. Stetson is not even a member of the church.

WILSON LIKELY TO RIDE OVER M'REYNOLDS

Statement Cancelling Delay in White Slave Case, but Letting McNab Out, Is Near.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—That the resignation of District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco will be accepted immediately, and will be coupled with the appointment of his successor, was the statement made to-day by a White House official close to the President.

President Wilson instructed Attorney General McReynolds at the cabinet meeting to-day to submit to him this afternoon a full report of the McNab-Caminetti case. This report will be delivered in person by the Attorney General late to-day.

After the President has examined it he will issue a statement in which he is expected to announce, beside the McNab pleas, cancellation of the postponement of the Diggs and Caminetti white slave cases, ordering their immediate trial.

Would Over-Ride McReynolds.

Should the President take this action he will over-ride the head of the Department of Justice in postponing the Camnetti trial.

At the request of Secretary of Labor Wilson at to-day's cabinet meeting the Attorney General and the Secretary of Labor were called upon by the President to tell their sides of the case.

The chief executive showed disapproval of the action of the Department of Justice which he had previously upheld in public.

In calcelling the postponement of the Caminetti case the President is acting in accord with consensus of opinion of his cabinet, which disapproved the postponement, which was ordered at the request of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti.

Public Opinion Strong.

Secretary of the Interior Lane and Secretary of the Navy Daniels told the President very firmly that the action of the Department of Justice placed the administration in an embarrassing light before the country. The President decided it was better to over-ride the Attorney General than combat public opinion.

It is understood the President's statement will take no cognizance of the fact that the elder Caminetti, personal friend of Secretary Bryan, will be unable to be present at his son's trial.

Church and Civic Bodies Uphold McNab.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 24.—Church and civic bodies of Sacramento to-day went on record as condemning the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering the postponement of the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti on charges of violating the white slave law.

Resolutions went to President Wilson asking him to order the trial to proceed, and asking that District Attorney McNab's resignation be not accepted. Fifteen women's organizations uphold McNab.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

Chaingangs in Georgia

"You have turned justice into gall."---Amos vi:12

Six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine souls are in our chaingangs.

At dawn, the striped suits appear, the shackles clank in our city streets and country roads.

Women and children shuddering pass them as they work and sweat under the eyes of armed men until darkness draws near to hide the marks of their infamy.

AGAIN THEY ARE CHAINED TOGETHER.

And like monstrous striped snakes with men for vertebrae and chains for spinal cords, the squads in the gathering gloom squirm, shuffling and clinking their weary way back into camp.

A gang halts before a door. They stand, excepting one. He runs forward, drawing from between them the rattling chain now unlocked. To the ground it drops.

The men enter a long dimly lighted room.

On both sides beds are jammed together forming an aisle. In its center at intervals are boxes or cans, and tubs. Around its length goes another chain.

The men remove their clothes. They cannot get off their shackles. Begins a horrible clanking. The chain is being passed from shackle to shackle linking man to man. Repeatedly it crashes to the floor between them. At last, its ends are bolted to the wall on both sides of the door. They are again one in their wretchedness.

Here and there one drags the chain to a tub and washes. Man after man uses the same foul water.

Then comes food borne on a hand-barrow.

Seated on his bed, he eats.

Before his face waits the unspeakable box, hideous receptacle for unnamable human filth.

CHAINED TOGETHER, THE MEN LIE DOWN TO SLEEP.

To their mutual misery—to the lash hanging at the door—to the sting of conscience and the agony of memory in the long hours of the night are added the bite of the leg shackle on the naked skin and the clank of the endless chain as they turn and toss trying to rest.

Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men.

But two thousand eight hundred and ninety of the six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine are felony convicts. They are under long sentence.

Among these are two twelve-year-old boys, and two of thirteen.

Three of fourteen, eleven of fifteen, twenty of sixteen.

One hundred and twenty-three of twenty, and one hundred and sixty-three of twenty-one.

Children are out of place in convict camps.

YOU SHOULD NOT CHAIN FIRST OFFENDERS TO HARDENED CRIMINALS.

Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead.

You would not kill the young man who has slipped.

But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper: you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime.

He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living.

From it save the boy.

Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives.

At home? Have they homes? You know not.

You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

WHY? WHAT IS THEIR OFFENSE? THEIR BIRTH.

But their fathers and husbands have committed crimes?

Yes. And in defiling zebra suits and clanking chains they pay.

They build your roads; under the fear of your lash, they work; but their degradation and heart-breaking labor brings no morsel of food to those women and children; their shame does not clothe their wives and babies.

Shall the sons—

Shall the daughters—

Shall the wives follow in their steps, since great Georgia takes their all, the labor of these men, and gives nothing in return?

Boast not of our roads to-day. Each foot of them has been built at frightful cost—the sorrow and suffering of women and children, and the humiliating degradation of men. Rather should we be ashamed.

TO BUILD ROADS IS WISE.

But to make criminals in order to build roads is madness. And to crush men, women and children in the building is not to be endured.

Neither is necessary.

Roads can be built, and men made in the building. Elsewhere it is being done.

It can and will be done in Georgia.

You will help.

Speak to your representatives in the House and in the Senate.

Ask them to support those measures that will enable our officials to free us from our disgrace.

It is due to lack of thought, and not to criminally heartless intent; men in authority do not willfully degrade and hurt their fellow creatures.

In Christ's name forget politics! Stop and think!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cutys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Head, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photo-play in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Boiffeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memorializing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

Decatur Women and Trade Board to Meet

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the candidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes. Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

Village Scurries for Food for 250,000 Visitors—Vanguard Is Arriving.

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R. will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, DuPont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

600 or 700 Georgia Veterans to Attend.

Assurance that sufficient money had been appropriated to entertain every veteran who desires to attend the Gettysburg reunion was received by Governor Brown Tuesday morning in a telegram from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission.

At first it was thought that only 500 veterans from Georgia could be entertained, but the telegram means as many as can attend will be cared for.

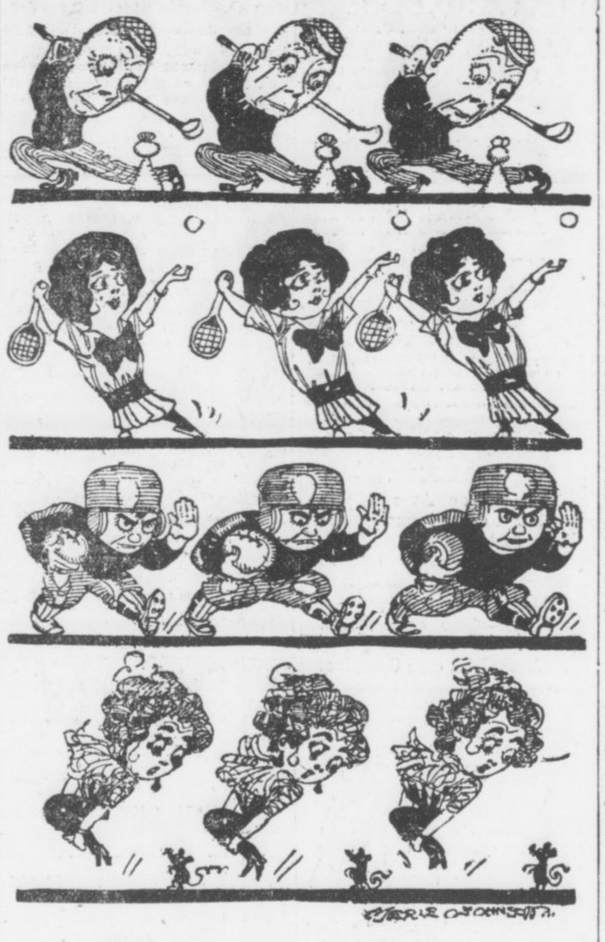
General A. J. West, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the Georgia delegation. He has been active in the effort to work up a full attendance. From 600 and 700 Confederate veterans from Georgia will make the trip. Many Georgia Federal veterans also have signified their intention of attending.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he showed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

FRESH BALLET THEMES ARE FOUND IN SPORTS



Some possible interpretations. Vaslav Nijinski, premier Russian danseuse, declares that each age has its dance, and that the national sports of each country will lend themselves to stage adaptation. The artist depicts what may be shortly expected here if this statement is true.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Vaslav Nijinski, which is a name and not an epithet, thank you, is to stand for a new epoch in the dance. Nijinski is the foremost of the Russian dancers, who is able to get more expression and art from the muscles of the great toe than most masters can command from a whole ballet.

Wherefore the Russian speaks with authority, and when that authority says that each age has its dance and that the dance takes its color and its action from the real doings of the particular age, you may be sure that you are getting no idle chatter from a mere dreamer. It is expert testimony.

According to Nijinski the dancer must represent something. The type must be distinctive of something that age is doing off the stage.

Thus, there is to come the Rockefeller ballet, with the clammy financial part of the period in the far background along with vivisection and the discovery of new and strange germs. Rockefeller plays golf, so the ballet will present Rockefeller by getting golfy. It is the Nijinski idea, that a chorus of fairies wearing golf togs, pursued by Cupid caddies carrying sixty pounds of plumbers' tools that are essential to make one happy while on the links, will justly represent the era of Jawn D.

They are to balance airily as though about to drive into the top gallery, swing in rhythmic cadence and poise as though peering over the long green to see where in thunder the ball anded. Then they are to jog toward the setting sun in fairy troop and go through the various other antics that beset one who is possessed of the devil of golf.

Further drawing upon sport for inspiration, the great Russian artist sees in tennis an outlet for the spirit of the dance. The tennis court at the White House where Theodore Roosevelt used to disport himself, along with Jimmy Garfield, Lawrence Murphy and other patriots who could swing the racket, affords the most just field for the study of the possibilities of the departure. White trousers and skirts will take the places of the tights. The arms only will be bare. The feet will wear tennis shoes. A net, which, mayhap, may be stretched between the players and the audience in case the dance is bad, will be a part of the stage property.

Before and behind this net the new order will have the girlies and chorus men dancing and whirling, so that the spectator may imagine that the score, instead of being in B flat, is 15 love.

Nor would the artiste stop with tennis. The football field offers a chance to mark the stage off with lines like the sidewalks whereon the children play hopscotch and the dancers, arrayed in padded clothing, shaggy hair, will dash madly about, trying to put their feet upon the faces of their neighbors and to kick, in the name of aesthetic art, the shins of those in the immediate vicinity.

To this, says Nijinski, we are coming.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

Hetty Green's Home Is Taxed at $112,000

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., June 24.—The tax listers of the town of Rockingham in their abstract of the tax list, show that Mrs. Hetty Green, who holds her permanent residence here, is assessed on a valuation of $112,000.

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

Important Sayings

By important people on topics of live interest

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. A thorough reorganization and upbuilding of the public and common schools is necessary. New methods, new ideas and ideals must be instituted."—Abrams Elkus, in address at City College, New York.

MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Barker to Manage Newly Built Road

The new Gainesville and Northwestern Railroad will have as its vice president and general manager B. S. Barker, of Atlanta, commercial agent of the Southern. Mr. Barker has tendered his resignation for July 1, and will go to Gainesville to his new office.

Mr. Barker has been in the employ of railroads for 25 years. The new road has just been completed. It extends through Hall and White Counties, with its terminus at North Helen, a booming town.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and alienists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

Then the task of deciding where to take your business course will be an easy one.

The people admire the Southern's businesslike appearance.

They like its large, wide-awake, enthusiastic and efficient faculty.

They are pleased with the way in which the business men speak of it.

Write, call or phone for catalogue, and enter now. Address,

A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, 10 West Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga.

The Social World

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crowninshield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larendon at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chapter and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Porch Party for Visitors.

Mr. Thomas Branch will give a porch party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Anna Willingham's guest, Miss Annie Tyler, of Sandersville, Ga.

Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Saturday, June 28, is shower day for Wesley Memorial Hospital, and donations will be received by a committee of ladies from the Woman's Auxiliary. Goods may be sent direct to the hospital and cash sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 561 South Pryor Street.

Bible Class to Picnic.

Bible Class No. 2 of the Second Baptist Church will have its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 25, at the cement pavilion at Grant Park. Dr. White will make an address, as will also Superintendent Spalding.

Party for Visitors.

Miss Estelle Weaver entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Thursday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses LaGrange Cothran and Katherine Graves, of Rome.

Miss Helen Jones Entertains.

The largest affair of Tuesday afternoon was a tea given by Miss Helen Jones in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va. Young girls and young men were entertained.

Guests were received in the drawing room, where there were decorations of pink and white sweetpeas and roses with wild flowers. The tea table was adorned with a basket of daisies, surrounded by pink unshaded tapers and minor details in pink. Misses Margaret McCarty and Eleanor Macey served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Adam Jones, Misses Nellie Kiser Stewart, Clifford West, Margaret Northen, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, San Antonio, Texas; Mignon McCarty and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Miss Jones wore white charmeuse satin with draperies in blue chiffon. Miss Buckner wore pink chiffon with panniers made over pink satin. Mrs. Jones wore white embroidered French mull.

An orchestra played through the calling hours. The affair was one of the happiest events of the week.

Stillman-Porter Wedding.

Miss Margaret Porter and Dr. Lowe Stillman were married Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in Columbia Avenue. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue crepe poplin with a small blue hat and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Dr. and Mrs. Stillman went for an automobile trip through South Georgia. They will go to housekeeping at 285 East Fourth Street.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain informally at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Martin Dunbar's guests, Misses Thelma Dargan, of Jacksonville, and Maude Miller, of St. Louis. The affair will be one of a series of parties tendered the visitors.

Series of Parties.

Misses Katherine Graves and LaGrange Cothran, of Rome, who have been visiting Miss Louise Cooper for the past week, are having many parties given in their honor. Miss Estelle Weaver gave a matinee party Tuesday. Miss Margaret Traylor gave a bridge Wednesday afternoon. Miss Josephine Stoney will entertain at a luncheon Thursday. Miss Katherine Darby will give a dance Thursday evening, and Mrs. Paul Baker will entertain Friday.

Miss Cothran will return home Thursday. Miss Graves will leave Saturday.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Sidney Hoberton gave an informal luncheon Tuesday for Miss Martha Francis, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Douthit will take place Saturday evening. Six girls were her guests.

MARY MANNERING OBSTINATE; SUED

Almost Runs Down Man and Boy in Auto, Then Refuses to Make Apology.

DETROIT, MICH., June 24.—Because she refused to apologize for her alleged carelessness in jeopardizing the lives of a representative of a Chicago packing concern and the latter's 8-year-old son, Mary Mannering Wadsworth, actress and wife of Frederick E. Wadsworth, a Grosse Point millionaire, must appear in court to face charges of violating traffic ordinances.

Mrs. Wadsworth was driving her motor car through a crowded downtown street, when the complainant and his son crossed in front of her machine to escape being run down by two heavy trucks. The complainant declares that the auto brushed his and his son's bodies.

He called up the Wadsworth residence last night and demanded an apology. Mr. Wadsworth is said to have answered the telephone and declared his wife would not make amends for her action. The complainant declared he would prosecute Miss Mannering and was invited to proceed with the action, which he did.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Thomson Names One Body to Work Up Support and Another to Determine Need.

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constiutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they cain gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibition at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

SLEUTHS PROBING GEORGIA LYNCHING

AMERICUS, June 24.—Detectives are investigating the lynching of Will Redding, the negro who shot Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, Saturday night This became manifest to-day as the detectives were especially busy collecting data. Inquiry here affords no information as to who sent the detectives to the city. They were not brought here by local authorities.

Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of the Sumter Superior Court, will return from Columbus to-night. He said when he left for Columbus upon his return he would have a thorough investigation of the lynching made. If the evidence is sufficient Judge Littlejohn said he would call a special session of the Grand Jury at once to deal with the lynchers.

A strong public sentiment against the lynching has developed. At first this was not so generally manifest, but since the passing of resolutions by all of the churches on Sunday condemning the lynching the sentiment has crystallized almost in unanimous fashion in favor of a session of the Grand Jury to investigate the matter.

On account of the fact that the lynchers wore no masks and were entirely open in their procedure, an investigation of the affair by the Grand Jury would likely lead to sensational developments. Practically everyone in the mob is known here, if those who know will give evidence.

Though he is still in a critical condition, Chief Barrow is resting as well as could be expected, according to the statement issued to-day by his physician. A favorable symptom is the freedom from fever and the fact that the patient has great will power and nerve control, which may save his life in spite of his advanced age. He is 72 years old.

Mayor's Secretary to Attend T. M. A. Meet

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor James G. Woodward, will leave Saturday for an extensive tour of the North, the West, the Northwest and the Southwest. His business "excuse" is that he must attend the T. M. A. national convention in Spokane, Wash., next month.

Auto Hits Chicken Coop; 3 Badly Hurt

RALEIGH, June 24.—Rushing from an impending storm, Mrs. John Borden, her four children and three guests, all prominent in North Carolina, were thrown from an automobile at Goldsboro when their machine, driven by a negro chauffeur, struck a chicken coop and turned turtle.

Miss Mary Borden, a pretty 19-year-old girl, sustained a broken jawbone and loss of teeth; Mrs. R. B. Miller, daughter of the late Richard H. Battle, broken ribs and a shoulder blade, and Mrs. D. R. Kornegay, a broken shoulder and face cuts.

Mrs. Borden and daughters, Mary and Virginia, had been out of a hospital only one week, all three convalescing from operations.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Illinois Suffrage Law Thought Invalid

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 24.—Belief that Attorney General Lucey had declared the Illinois woman suffrage bill unconstitutional in the opinion he sent to Governor Dunne to-day was strengthened this afternoon when the Governor, in conference with William L. Out-of-the-Ordinary Mid-Summer Hats
At $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00

We use out-of-the-ordinary advisedly. They are, beautifully.

Through our connection with the shop of Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th Street, New York, we keep in closest touch with millinery styles as they appear in the great metropolis.

We are apprised of the new things at once, and then our splendid corps of milliners sets to work—the result is $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats that differ from those about town. But you must see just how they do differ.

Right now, and there are fresh ones every day—literally, every day—there are a number of particularly dainty white and light colored hats of hemp and peanut straw, with feathers and wings placed at "dangerous" angles, with crowns wreathed with flowers, with crowns covered with white maline. One at $5.00 of notable charm has a crown wrapped with white brocade silk, a bow of the same silk stands upright in the back—the unusual part is the way the silk is edged with maline. It is $5.00. But this is but one of many. See them all.

You, too, will say the prettiest $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats are at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's.

Wanted Silks With Prices Cut to Thirds and Halves
The Selling Will Start at Nine o'Clock

A Silk Sale to reckon with!
The reasons:
—Here is a variety that rather fully covers the whole silk question.
—Qualities are as fine as we can buy in regular season for "regular" selling. They are best at their prices.
—Styles are those chosen because they were choice, distinctive.
And
—Prices are now cut down to a third and a half.

Certainly all the elements that would go to make a Silk Opportunity mark this event. Now, then, to your needs! What are they? A dress, a waist, a skirt, a suit, a coat—it matters little, just read on—

$1.69 For $3 to $4 a Yd. Silks
Yes, $1.69 a yard, for $3.00 and $4.00 crepe meteors and charmeuse, fabrics fashion will favor as fondly in the fall as she has this season. They drape and "cling" more gracefully, perhaps, than any other silks. And you may select from mais, brown, helio, apricot, taupe, Alice and wistaria. All are 44 inches wide.

69c For $1.50 to $2.25 a Yd. Silks
Perhaps the finest values of the sale are among these. We miss our guess if the crowds are not thick around them. There are 36-inch chiffon taffetas in plain and two-toned shades—light blue, green, mais, yellow, tan, lilac and blue, tan and blue, green and rose, black and green; there are bordered foulards; there are figured chiffons, small designs in exquisite shades, white eoliennes, marquisettes, colors for evening dresses—all 44 inches wide and none was less than $1.50 a yard!

79c For $1 a Yd. Wash Silks
For wash silks that seem to grow in popular favor as the weather grows warmer. The silk shirt—for men as well as for women—is the cool shirt. And these silks are the dependable kinds that are true to their name--wash silks. Plain and corded, white and black, white and helio, white and navy, white and gray. Stripes of various widths, 33 inches wide.

49c For 85c and $1 Yd. Foulards
The quality is told by the names they bear—but the patterns! Choosing a dress will be a delight, for here is variety—there are black and white stripes, there are little cubes and flowers and dots thrown across surfaces of brown, tan, navy, gray, wistaria and heliotrope. No question, one to your liking. 23 and 24 inches wide.

At Nine o'Clock

The Wash Goods buyer's return from New York with great quantities of new merchandise meant a crusade against short lengths—now they are gathered, every kind, making up the largest and finest quantity of remnants we have offered this season.

To-morrow at nine o'clock we will let you at them!

It will be a splendid time to select waists, skirts, dresses and underwear for yourself and children. Hardly a wanted wash material is not represented—for they are remnants, you know, and only wanted materials become remnants.

Colored Cottons
A world of ginghams, one kind after another; checks, stripes, plaids, zephyr ginghams, fine imported ginghams, colorings that are fast and as pretty as can be; bordered, figured, striped and plain voiles and marquisettes, crepes, in such great demand, figured and plain shades, soisettes, piques, cotton suitings that look like linen, silk mulls, percales, galateas, kimono crepes, and still the list could be extended to include practically every kind of colored cottons, the light, filmy kinds, the substantial kinds.

Linens
Even table linens are included. Dress linens, the smooth French finish and the rough ramie linens in white and colors, linen lawns, cambrics, crashes, pillow casing, huck toweling, butcher's linen, brown apron linen and crashes.

White Goods
Flaxon, plain and checked and striped, dimities, linens, percales, India linons, batistes, French and Persian lawns, French and English nainsooks, madras figured and striped, dotted swisses, curtain swisses, lingerie cloth, repps, poplins, piques and others.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napoleon was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day.

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?"

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

Of course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance. "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

"Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, befcre he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her husband's noble block.
Her husband saw the shattered dish and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife, these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distincktly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen. I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty.
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I suppoas sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

Natural History Lessons

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such abject fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young, and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

* * *

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24.—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery clug that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the ter of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. clears out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

* * *

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

* * *

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

* * *

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

* * *

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

* * *

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

* * *

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

* * *

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways,
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

DREAMS, IDLE DREAMS.

How dear to my heart is the snow of last winter!
How cool and refreshing the loud, shricking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter
A life-saving station and lay down my kale.

As H. Zim, the well known monologist, would say, silence is a gold certificate.

SPEAKING OF VACATION.

This is the forest primeval; the murmuring pines and the hemlocks
Swarm with a myriad of flies and other pestiferous insects,
Under the roof of the tent a healthy and active mosquito
Hums, and in accents sonorous answers the wail of the camper.

COOMBS TO QUIT GAME; ILLNESS BRINGS ON FAT

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—That he probably will be unable to pitch again this season was admitted today by Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics. The pitcher, who is ill at his Atlantic City home, is taking on weight at the rate of a pound a day, which is not considered favorable by his physicians. Connie Mack and John Shibe visited Coombs a few days ago and to them he admitted his condition.

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

YANKS RECRUIT PLAYERS FROM MOST EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Four new recruits have been signed for the New York team of the American League. They are Dan Costello, a first sacker from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; A. Williams, catcher, from Galveston, in the Texas League; Tom Hanley, southpaw, from Manhattan College, and Jay Rogers, catcher, from Richmond, Virginia League.

PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.
Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly mid-clemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—The market has been very quiet to-day, trading light, but ruled very steady, with little cotton for sale. The demand has been generally good. Liverpool reported a buyer, also some Southern buying spot people bought July on all soft spots.

* * *

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

* * *

* * *

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

* * *

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought a block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Generally fair weather will continue to-night and Wednesday in the Gulf States, New England and the interior of New York. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be overcast with local showers and thunderstorms.

Moderately warm weather will prevail over the eastern half of the country during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Following is the general forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Cloudy and warm; probably light showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina and South Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Fair in northwest, showers in the peninsula to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mean temperatures were from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Texas, where there was a deficiency of from 1 to 3 degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over eastern Tennessee. Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 74 to 82 over the eastern, from 80 to 82 over the central and from 78 to 82 over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature 74 degrees occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 82 degrees, occurred at a number of stations located in all portions of the cotton growing States.

Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region, except that in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas, scattered localities in Louisiana, eastern and southern Mississippi, western Alabama and parts of southern Georgia there was no rain. The precipitation was unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Texas. The greatest weekly amount, 25.20 inches, occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The cotton seed oil market was higher to-day on active covering by refiners in old crop deliveries and speculative buying of later months. There was good profit-taking on the advance, which resulted in a setback of a couple of points. Strength in lard was also a stimulating factor.

SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Spot Houses Support Old Crops, While Wall Street Sells—Sentiment Bearish.

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again centered their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

During the late forenoon the market was quiet, but ruled steady. The buying continued general, mainly on Cordill's report on Georgia, which was somewhat mixed and had a stimulating eeffct, as his reports up to this time of the season has been very favorable. Liverpool and the South were reported good buyers.

On the other hand, the Government weekly weather report was construed as bearish, resulting in active selling by Wall Street and the uptown crowd. There is a disposition on the part of local traders to sell the market short on the favorable conditions that have existed up to this time, but many operators hesitate in the face of the contined good demand for spots.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 1 point off to 3 points higher than the final quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The weather map shows very favorable conditions. Partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, rather general over the Atlantics, with some good rains in the Carolinas; even temperatures, warm nights, good growing weather. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair weather, with scattered thundershowers; range of temperature stationary.

Liverpool came in rather poor, but shows larger spots sales; total 8,000, at 2 points lower quotations. Political news is that Bulgaria refuses further peace negotiations and that financial war has been started on the Continent by France refusing loans.

The market here advanced from the start, mainly on the report on Georgia by Mr. Cordill, which does not show the improvement that was expected. Under the circumstances, it is thought that the July Bureau report can at the outside give 1 to 2 points' improvement for the belt, which would be a condition between 80 and 81, and as the acreage increase, owing to the acreage correction made by Washington in May, is expected to be between 1 and 2 per cent, it is thought that the July bureau may again make a bullish impression on the trade.

Selling was therefore rather light to-day, the more so as a bullish visible statement is expected for Friday. Trading was quiet, with prices steady around 11.53 for December.

WILSON'S MESSAGE SENDS STOCKS UP

Encouraging Crop Accounts Also Stimulating Factor—Speculative Situation Stronger.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend, Americans being higher there.

The charpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅛, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1¼; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ¾; Northern Pacific, ⅞; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅞; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅞.

The curb was steady.

Trading was low in the last hour and price changes for the most part were only slightly changed from the midday level.

Amalgamated Copper, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chino and Northern Pacific were fractionally under the midday level, but ranged above the low quotations for the morning. Union Pacific sold around 145⅝ for a net gain of 2½ on the day. Steel sold at 56¾ for a net gain of 1¾. Reading crossed 158 for a gain of 1¾ on the day.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Money on call 2 per cent. Time money unchanged; sixty days, 3¾; ninety days, 4 per cent; six months 5@5½ per cent.

Posted rates: Sterling exchange, 4.82½@4.87½, with actual business in bankers' bills at 4.8690 for demand and 4.83 for sixty-day bils.

Prime mercantile paper unchanged.

MINING STOCKS.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Conflicting Crop Advices and Bad Cable News Cause General Buying.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....97 @99½
Corn—No. 2 ....60½
Oats—No. 2 ....38½@39

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Closing prices for grain showed advances all around ⅛@½c for wheat, ⅜@½c for corn and ⅛@⅝c for oats. The strength shown at Minneapolis and the buying of July there by one of the larger millers was the bullish influence at Chicago toward the close of the day.

There are many uncertainties surrounding the crop situation in the Northwest and there are also many uncertainties surrounding the harvesting of the winter wheat crop. For these reasons the average speculator the average speculator is feeling his way rather than making large commitments.

Provisions showed but little change for week.

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS BAD.

CHICAGO, June 24.—W. B. Snow wires from Redfield, S. Dak., June 23: "Through Brown, McPherson, Edmunds, Faulk and Spink Counties west of James River district is reported as bad, involving about 600 acres. Was a failure last year, and most of it for three consecutive years. Present situation promises the fourth failure. Nothing but general soaking rains at once can save any part of it. Oats the same. Corn holding its own.

"General situation east of James River reported as satisfactory."

Freak Chicken Dies On Way to School

NORTH ADAMS, June 24.—Two beaks, three eyes and two necks was too much for any chicken to carry around—so the freak hatched by a Bracewell Avenue hen died on the way to school, where the children were going to show it to their playmates.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!

Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?
How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"
Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?
The proper way to make a double play at second?
How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?
Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?
The proper way to field a ground ball?
How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?
The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?
Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?
All these questions and many more are answered in

"How to Play Baseball"
By JOHN J. McGRAW

The greatest book on baseball ever written will tell you fully, clearly, entertainingly, how, why and when all these and a thousand and one other things should be done in baseball. $100,000 PAID ON PAINTER'S LIFE POLICIES

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painter's Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The warring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation-wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

Held Under Bond for Concealing Property

SAVANNAH, June 24.—P. A. Mack, a Sylvania merchant and Screven County farmer, held under bond charged with concealing assets from the trustee in bankruptcy, has been given a hearing before United States Commissioner Cooper Morcock.

Merchandise alleged to have been removed from Mack's store and hidden in warehouses, barns, stable lofts and cane fields has been recovered. Mack claims that no goods were taken away or hidden after J. W. Overstreet was appointed trustee.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Aimee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

Boy Scouts Start on 1,000-Mile Relay Run

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning President Wilson leaned forward from the portico of the White House and handed a small tube to a boy attired in running clothes who dashed off northward. The boy was Frank Reed, the perfect Boy Scout, who had been selected as the first of the Scouts to relay the President's message of congratulation to Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago.

Running night and day, 1,000 Boy Scouts hope to deliver the message within less than four days.

Special Court Term For Vice War Trials

MACON, June 24.—A special session of the Superior Court will be held during two weeks beginning June 30 for the trial of 70 liquor dealers charged with violating the prohibition law; twelve clubs similarly indicted, 35 women accused of operating disorderly houses, and fifteen property owners, charged with renting houses for immoral purposes.

Jesse C. Harris, attorney, who was indicted for perjury in connection with the alleged election frauds last ye will be called to trial on July 2.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have nto had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the ent of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory, see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"—to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoline add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a sieve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the high-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not be afraid to use these remedies, and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens,

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS.

THERE is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree Street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree Street, knows its desirability, and also knows its PRICE, which, as a rule, is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10 to $15 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of any one who contemplates a Peachtree home.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company hs leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Klitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those whiich have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Pe'ersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

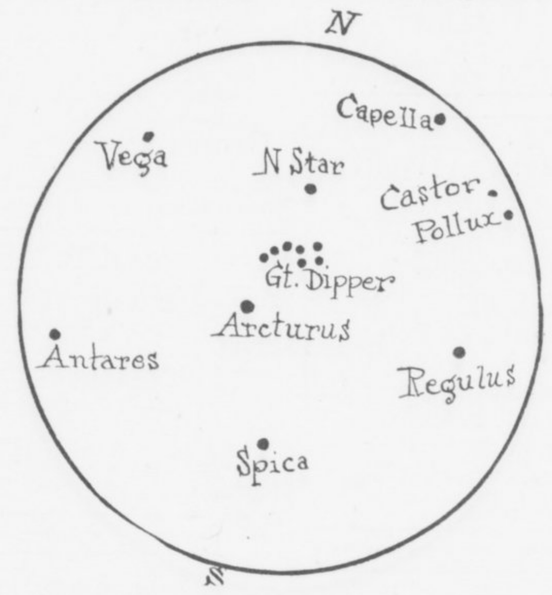
Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, being one of the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.



Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, paroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

TRIAL OF LEO FRANK IS SET FOR JULY 28

State Urges Earlier Date, But Objection by the Defense Wins Day.

Phincipally on the statements of the defense July 28 was definitely fixed by Judge L. S. Roan for the opening of the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, following a conference Tuesday afternoon with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, of counsel for the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey declared his case was ready for immediate trial, and he wished to clear it off his docket. He urged a speedy trial. Mr. Rosser, however, stated he and his colleague, Reuben Arnold, were forced to go to Emmanuel County to try the McNaughton murder case there during the week of July 14. Mr. Arnold said flatly the case would take two weeks after the Solicitor had estimated its length at two days.

Judge Roan also said he had planned to take his vacation July 4, but was willing to forego it and set the date for July 7, but brought up the McNaughton case and July 28 was fixed.

Subpenas Still Effective.

The trial will very likely be held in some more commodious room than the one in which Judge Roan sits.

Notwithstanding the fixing of the July date, the subpenas summoning witnesses for the prosecution to appear in court on June 30 with their evidence for examination by the defense will be effective. At this time, however, arguments will be heard on the validity of this action, and Judge Roan will decide whether or not the State will turn its affidavits over to the defense.

While the conference was in session in the Thrower Building Jim Conley, the State's principal witness, being put through another cross-examination by Detectives Campbell and Starnes. The negro was not taken to Chief Lanford's office, but was questioned in the cell house. The examination was kept secret and its outcome will not be made known to the public.

State's Leaders Called.

The first important legal move by the defense in the battle for the life and freedom of Leo Frank, accused of the strangling of Mary Phagan, was made Tuesday in the issuance of subpenas duces tecum for the prime movers in the prosecution of the factory superintendent.

The following have been subpenaed to appear:

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, to whom is generally given credit for the admissions gained from Conley.

All other city detectives who have worked on the case.

All of them are ordered to produce any affidavits they may have bearing on the case in court June 30, the date at first suggested for the trial.

The startling move on the part of the defense was taken to mean that Frank's lawyers propose to use to free their client the very evidence the detectives and Solicitor General have collected to send him to the gallows.

The most significant demand is made upon Chief Beavers, who is commanded to bring into court the famed series of affidavits made by the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. It is evident that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who are conducting the defense, intend to tear the contradictory sto-

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Following are contributions which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

'Continued Sultry Weather' Best That Forecaster Offers

Not even a cloud interposed itself between the sun and the city of Atlanta Tuesday, and the result was a sultry and sweltering day. Although the temperature was only 88 at 12 o'clock and 89 an hour later, it seemed much hotter.

The outlook for cooler weather, based on a fall in the maximum temperature Monday, signally failed to materialize Tuesday. The 89 maximum mark of the day before was exceeded shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday, and 30 minutes later the mercury was hesitating less than one-tenth of a degree below 90.

W.C.T.U. PLAN DEFEAT OF ANDERSON BY PRAYER

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were flooded with letters protesting against Anderson's candidacy and denouncing the Savannah man as a foe of prohibition and an ally of the liquor interests.

Prayers will be one of the weapons in the fight, women all over the State joining in pleas to Providence to prevent the election of Anderson.

Judge Allen is Anderson's most formidable opponent and has vigorously denied that his rival had the fight won. What effect the women's attack will have is problematical, but it means that the opening session of the Senate to-morrow will be no tame affair.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. Now, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the late prohibition movement, and,to thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer, and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24.—Fully fifty persons were killed and eighty five injured as a result of an explosion in the Huessted Milling Company plant on Elk Street this afternoon. Most of the dead and injured are employees in the mill.

While a Nickel Plate passenger train was passing the mill the rear wall was blown out by the explosion, causing it to topple on the train burying it completely. The engineer and fireman, conductor and 75 passengers were seriously injured, some of them probably fatally. Fifty of the injured were removed to the emergency hospital. Several of them are dying.

A priest, Rev. Father Barrett, administered the last rites to fifty of the injured during the excitement that prevailed. Immediately following the explosion a Polish boy, while running to the fire was instantly killed by an automobile.

One man was blown through the wall of the building, his body being found 100 feet away. Owing to the confusion it was impossible to ascertain the identity of the injured.

Many of the passengers injured when the wall collapsed on the train are from out of town. The monetary loss is estimated at one million dollars, there being over half a million bushels of grain in the mill.

Ga. Cotton Dealers Accuse Railroad of Rate Discrimination

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Six interior cotton firms to-day petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to order the Atlantic Coast Line to cease the practice of paying seaport cotton dealers for compression cotton held by the railroads. The interior firms charge the practice practically rebating.

The firms are located in Atlanta, Augusta, Covington and Athens. They allege the railroad discriminates against them in favor of cotton dealers in Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah and Norfolk.

Two Dead, One Dying In Train-Auto Crash

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 24.—Two persons were killed, one fatally injured and three others seriously injured to-day when their automobile was struck by a Lake Shore train at Bereau. The dead are: Homer Atkins, Bereau, and Charles Atkins, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

C. R. Stull, garage proprietor, Bereau, was fatally, and Mrs. Homer Atkins, Mrs. Charles Atkins and an 18-months-old child, badly injured.

Dies as He Phones Physician for Wife

W. B. Henson, of 28 Clark Street, Monday went to his telephone to call a physician to his sick wife. A few minutes later he was found lying dead in an adjoining room.

Seemingly he was in the best of health. He just had returned from a pleasure trip to Gainesville.

Heat Hatches Eggs in Ophir Mine Depth

They hatched.

Chaingang System Assailed in Bulletin Of Men and Religion

The executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement began Tuesday, through the newspaper bulletins previously devoted to the vice problem, a campaign against the chaingang system in Georgia.

The practice of chaining boys and first offenders to hardened criminals was bitterly condemned and the whole system was characterized as a prolific breeding place for criminal tendencies of the worst sort.

The State's policy in making the wives and children of the chaingang victims suffer along with the head of the family by depriving them of their source of support was severely criticised, and the voters of the State were called upon to write their Representatives in the House and Senate to free the State from these conditions.

Road-building about the State was commended, but the policy of "making criminals to build roads" was described as madness. The bulletin said in part:

Georgia daily thus degrades and drives men deeper into hell. Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men. But 2,896 of the 6,139 are felony convicts. They are under long sentence. Among these are two 12-year-old boys and two of 13; three of 14, eleven of 15; twenty of 16, thirty of 17, 85 of 18, ninety-one of 19, 123 of 20 and 163 of 21. Children are out of place in convict camps.

Free Drink Room in Capitol for Solons

HARRISBURG, June 24.—Representative Ollie M. Letzkus, of Allegheny, told the House Lobby Investigation Committee to-day that there has been throughout the session a "booze room" in the Capitol, where members of the Legislature could have free all the beer and whisky they wanted.

One was admitted, he said, by placing the palm of one hand on the ground glass door and tapping gently with the other hand.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

Man Fined for Row On Wife's Testimony

As the result of a fight precipitated Saturday, when Rudolph Otter found his wife in the room of Charles Olsen at 15 Houston Street, where the two-boarded, Otter was fined $15.75 by Judge Broyles Tuesday for disturbing the peace.

Mrs. Otter testified she and two other women were visiting Olsen, who was ill. Otter entered and started for Olsen, who picked up a water pitcher and struck his assailant on the head. The pitcher glanced and smashed against Mrs. Otter. She was cut about the face.

PHAGAN DEFENSE CALLS STATE'S LEADERS

ries of the negro to tatters and make his statements appear so utterly ridiculous and improbable that the jury not only will refuse to accept them, but will interpret them as an effort of Conley to get from under the blame for a crime that he committed himself.

Chief Beavers is asked to bring into court the written statement made by Conley May 18 in the presence of Detective John R. Black and Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott; also the affidavit sworn to by Conley before G. C. Febuary in the presence of Chief Lanford and Detectives Black and Scott May 24, the affidavit made by Conley May 28, the affidavit made by the negro May 29 in the presence of Lanford, Campbell and Scott and all other written statements of the negro in the possession or control of the Chief.

Chief Beavers is asked, in addition, to bring all the statements of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman; Monteen Stover, the girl who testified that Frank was not in his office when she went for her money; W. M. Matthews, and Miss Grace Hicks, the girl who first identified the dead body as that of Mary Phagan.

The defense has persistently ridiculed the stories of Jim Conley and characterized them as cunning fabrications to shift the blame on Frank's shoulders.

With the other affidavits, which for the most part are given credence by the defense, the attempt will be merely to show that the evidence which the prosecution holds to point toward the guilt of Frank only more firmly fixes it upon the shoulders of the negro sweeper, and that the State from time to time has shifted the ground on which it based its theory that Frank was guilty.

Hooper Calls Move a Trick.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, branded the move of the defense as a thinly veiled trick to impeach the testimony of the witnesses called by the State, and said that it was not at all unlikely that the subpenaes would be resisted.

He intimated his belief that it was the intention of the defense to use the affidavits as a comparison with the testimony of the affiants when took the stand in an effort to pick out every discrepancy and thus seek to discredit the witnesses.

Before the conference between Judge Roan and the attorneys on the opposing sides began in the afternoon, the judge announced that he would be the one who would set the date for the trial, after consulting the convenience of the attorneys.

He said that he desired to preclude the possibility that the case would be called for June 30 and the witnesses summoned and then one or another of the attorneys ask for a postponement. He expressed it as his purpose to carry the case through to its completion once it was started.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, becaus of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quincey, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 24.—With a hundred fellow workers watching his death struggles from a high railroad bridge, Sullivan Lackel was drowned in Rock River with only two 12-year-old boys trying to rescue him.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.
Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.
India, 358,316,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.
Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.
Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.
Sugar beets, Belgium 84.7 per cent.
Denmark, 102.3 per cent.
France, 94.36 per cent.
Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

WILSON MONEY TALK INDORSED BY BANKERS

At a meeting of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, held in their offices on Tuesday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, we have read with interest and approval the President's message to Congress, asking for the passage of some kind of remedial currency legislation for the relief of the banking and commercial interests of the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, First that we indorse heartily the spirit and purpose of said message.

Resolved, further, That it is the belief of the banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, representing the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests of Atlanta and the prosperous Southeast, that a satisfactory bill for the reform of banking and currency laws should be passed at this session of Congress.

Resolved, further, That we believe that the combined wisdom of the President, the House and the Senate, after hearing from the banking, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country, can and will evolve a currency bill that will be satisfactory to the banks and beneficial to the nation.

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

11,000 Cincinnati Workers on Strike

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Eleven thousand garment workers to-day obeyed the order to strike, and work in the majority of factories was completely tied up.

Workers demand 48 hours per week. Operators offer a 50-hour week. Former work was 54 hours.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—There was no sign of a break to-day in the deadlock of the ice manufacturers and their striking drivers, helpers, engineers and firemen. Hotter weather caused much suffering.

Rome Lawyer Sued For Total Divorce

ROME, June 24.—Accused of cruel treatment by his wife, J. Sante Crawford, well-known attorney, court stenographer and politician, to-day was sued for total divorce by his wife, who was a Miss McClaine. Mrs. Crawford alleges cruel treatment in her petition.

Both parties are well known, and each is prominently connected throughout the State. Crawford's family lived for years in Polk County, and his wife has relatives in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Mrs. Crawford is a very handsome woman.

The Crawfords have one child, a boy 10 years of age.

Nicholson Declines Post in Portugal

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson's ambassadorial troubles were augmented to-day when he was forced to accept the declination of Meredith Nicholson to serve as Minister to Portugal. Nicholson informed the President that family matters precluded his acceptance.

According to Secretary of State Bryan, an effort is now being made to place Mr. Nicholson in some other European diplomatic post.

Wilsons Exchange Anniversary Gifts

The President presented his wife with a handsome pearl necklace containing 28 jewels.

The occasion of the exchange of gifts was the fact that the day is the twenty-eighth anniversary of their marriage.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,

"Yours,

"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, for President of the Senate."

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight tought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, and Representative Hardeman of Jackson, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to Representative Burwell, of Hancock.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

BULGARIANS AND SERVIANS IN BATTLE

Russia Orders Peace When Sixty Thousand of Ferdinand's Soldiers Oppose Allies.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council is considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $500,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

Mrs. Wilson Likely To Hurry Vacation

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches, deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grape-juice.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureaus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be compelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various sums available for each.

King George Greets Poincaire; Guarded Against Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

POPE TO SUMMON CARDINAL FARLEY

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva in intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome.

Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

Mrs. Stetson Heretic, Scientist Declares

BOSTON, June 24.—Alfred Farlow, chairman of the publication committee of the Christian Science Church, in reply to a claim of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, of New York, that she is the head of the church and the "true authority on the teachings of Mrs. Eddy," declared Mrs. Stetson is not even a member of the church.

WILSON LIKELY TO RIDE OVER M'REYNOLDS

WASHINGTON, June 24.—That the resignation of District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco will be accepted immediately, and will be coupled with the appointment of his successor, was the statement made to-day by a White House official close to the President.

President Wilson instructed Attorney General McReynolds at the cabinet meeting to-day to submit to him this afternoon a full report of the McNab-Caminetti case. This report will be delivered in person by the Attorney General late to-day.

After the President has examined it he will issue a statement in which he is expected to announce, beside the McNab pleas, cancellation of the postponement of the Diggs and Caminetti white slave cases, ordering their immediate trial.

Would Over-Ride McReynolds.

Should the President take this action he will over-ride the head of the Department of Justice in postponing the Camnetti trial.

At the request of Secretary of Labor Wilson at to-day's cabinet meeting the Attorney General and the Secretary of Labor were called upon by the President to tell their sides of the case.

The chief executive showed disapproval of the action of the Department of Justice which he had previously upheld in public.

In calcelling the postponement of the Caminetti case the President is acting in accord with consensus of opinion of his cabinet, which disapproved the postponement, which was ordered at the request of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti.

Public Opinion Strong.

Secretary of the Interior Lane and Secretary of the Navy Daniels told the President very firmly that the action of the Department of Justice placed the administration in an embarrassing light before the country. The President decided it was better to over-ride the Attorney General than combat public opinion.

It is understood the President's statement will take no cognizance of the fact that the elder Caminetti, personal friend of Secretary Bryan, will be unable to be present at his son's trial.

Church and Civic Bodies Uphold McNab.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 24.—Church and civic bodies of Sacramento to-day went on record as condemning the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering the postponement of the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti on charges of violating the white slave law.

Resolutions went to President Wilson asking him to order the trial to proceed, and asking that District Attorney McNab's resignation be not accepted. Fifteen women's organizations uphold McNab.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

Chaingangs in Georgia

"You have turned justice into gall."---Amos vi:12

Six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine souls are in our chaingangs.

At dawn, the striped suits appear, the shackles clank in our city streets and country roads.

Women and children shuddering pass them as they work and sweat under the eyes of armed men until darkness draws near to hide the marks of their infamy.

AGAIN THEY ARE CHAINED TOGETHER.

And like monstrous striped snakes with men for vertebrae and chains for spinal cords, the squads in the gathering gloom squirm, shuffling and clinking their weary way back into camp.

A gang halts before a door. They stand, excepting one. He runs forward, drawing from between them the rattling chain now unlocked. To the ground it drops.

The men enter a long dimly lighted room.

On both sides beds are jammed together forming an aisle. In its center at intervals are boxes or cans, and tubs. Around its length goes another chain.

The men remove their clothes. They cannot get off their shackles. Begins a horrible clanking. The chain is being passed from shackle to shackle linking man to man. Repeatedly it crashes to the floor between them. At last, its ends are bolted to the wall on both sides of the door. They are again one in their wretchedness.

Here and there one drags the chain to a tub and washes. Man after man uses the same foul water.

Then comes food borne on a hand-barrow.

Each man gets his rations.

Seated on his bed, he eats.

Before his face waits the unspeakable box, hideous receptacle for unnamable human filth.

CHAINED TOGETHER, THE MEN LIE DOWN TO SLEEP.

To their mutual misery—to the lash hanging at the door—to the sting of conscience and the agony of memory in the long hours of the night are added the bite of the leg shackle on the naked skin and the clank of the endless chain as they turn and toss trying to rest.

Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men.

But two thousand eight hundred and ninety of the six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine are felony convicts. They are under long sentence.

Among these are two twelve-year-old boys, and two of thirteen.

Three of fourteen, eleven of fifteen, twenty of sixteen.

One hundred and twenty-three of twenty, and one hundred and sixty-three of twenty-one.

Children are out of place in convict camps.

YOU SHOULD NOT CHAIN FIRST OFFENDERS TO HARDENED CRIMINALS.

Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead.

You would not kill the young man who has slipped.

But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper: you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime.

He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living.

From it save the boy.

Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives.

At home? Have they homes? You know not.

You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

WHY? WHAT IS THEIR OFFENSE? THEIR BIRTH.

But their fathers and husbands have committed crimes?

Yes. And in defiling zebra suits and clanking chains they pay.

They build your roads; under the fear of your lash, they work; but their degradation and heart-breaking labor brings no morsel of food to those women and children; their shame does not clothe their wives and babies.

Shall the sons—

Shall the daughters—

Shall the wives follow in their steps, since great Georgia takes their all, the labor of these men, and gives nothing in return?

Boast not of our roads to-day. Each foot of them has been built at frightful cost—the sorrow and suffering of women and children, and the humiliating degradation of men. Rather should we be ashamed.

TO BUILD ROADS IS WISE.

But to make criminals in order to build roads is madness. And to crush men, women and children in the building is not to be endured.

Neither is necessary.

Roads can be built, and men made in the building. Elsewhere it is being done.

It can and will be done in Georgia.

You will help.

Speak to your representatives in the House and in the Senate.

Ask them to support those measures that will enable our officials to free us from our disgrace.

It is due to lack of thought, and not to criminally heartless intent; men in authority do not willfully degrade and hurt their fellow creatures.

In Christ's name forget politics! Stop and think!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cuttys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Ilead, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photoplay in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Bolfeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memoralizing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the condidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Boy Washes Hands; They Catch Afire

CHICAGO, June 24.—Vernon Balch, 8 years old, son of Oscar Balch, 611 North Kenilwood Avenue, Oak Park, was burned on the hands and arms when a paint-removing solution with which he was washing his hands became ignited by friction.

The boy's father, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was also burned on the hands and arms.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, DuPont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

600 or 700 Georgia Veterans to Attend.

Assurance that sufficient money had been appropriated to entertain every veteran who desires to attend the Gettysburg reunion was received by Governor Brown Tuesday morning in a telegram from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission.

At first it was thought that only 500 veterans from Georgia could be entertained, but the telegram means as many as can attend will be cared for.

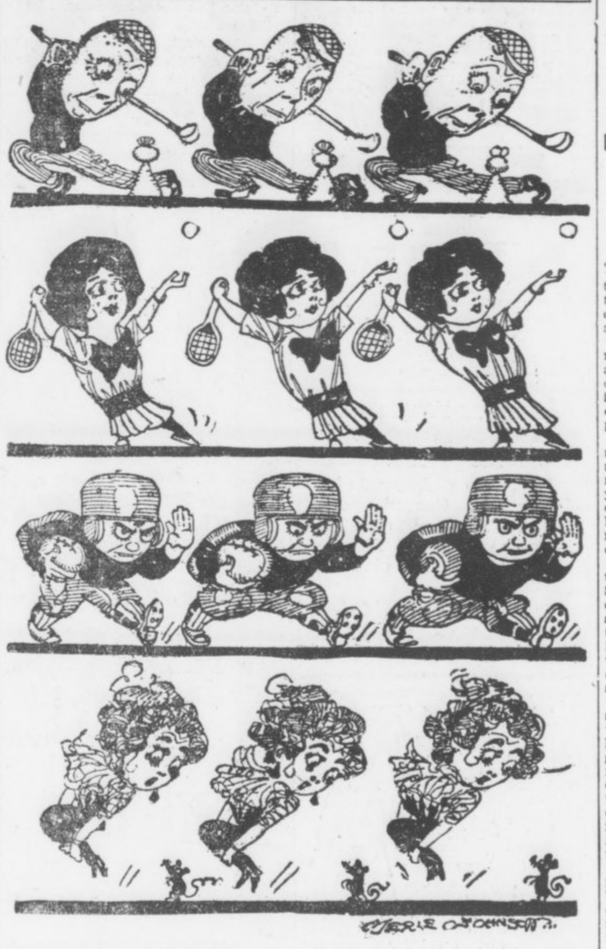
General A. J. West, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the Georgia delegation. He has been active in the effort to work up a full attendance. From 600 and 700 Confederate veterans from Georgia will make the trip. Many Georgia Federal veterans also have signified their intention of attending.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he showed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

FRESH BALLET THEMES ARE FOUND IN SPORTS



Some possible interpretations, Vaslav Nijinski, premier Russian danseuse, declares that each age has its dance, and that the national sports of each country will lend themselves to stage adaptation. The artist depicts what may be shortly expected here if this statement is true.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Vaslav Nijinski, which is a name and not an epithet, thank you, is to stand for a new epoch in the dance. Nijinski is the foremost of the Russian dancers, who is able to get more expression and art from the muscles of the great toe than most masters can command from a whole ballet.

Wherefore the Russian speaks with authority, and when that authority says that each age has its dance and that the dance takes its color and its action from the real doings of the particular age, you may be sure that you are getting no idle chatter from a mere dreamer. It is expert testimony.

According to Nijinski the dancer must represent something. The type must be distinctive of something that age is doing off the stage.

Thus, there is to come the Rockefeller ballet, with the clammy financial part of the period in the far background along with vivisection and the discovery of new and strange germs. Rockefeller plays golf, so the ballet will present Rockefeller by getting golfy. It is the Nijinski idea, that a chorus of fairies wearing golf togs, pursued by Cupid caddies carrying sixty pounds of plumbers' tools that are essential to make one happy while on the links, will justly represent the era of Jawn D.

They are to balance airily as though about to drive into the top gallery, swing in rhythmic cadence and poise as though peering over the long green to see where in thunder the ball anded. Then they are to jog toward the setting sun in fairy troop and go through the various other antics that beset one who is possessed of the devil of golf.

Further drawing upon sport for inspiration, the great Russian artist sees in tennis an outlet for the spirit of the dance. The tennis court at the White House where Theodore Roosevelt used to disport himself, along with Jimmy Garfield, Lawrence Murphy and other patriots who could swing the racket, affords the most just field for the study of the possibilities of the departure. White trousers and skirts will take the places of the tights. The arms only will be bare. The feet will wear tennis shoes. A net, which, mayhap, may be stretched between the players and the audience in case the dance is bad, will be a part of the stage property.

Before and behind this net the new order will have the girlies and chorus men dancing and whirling, so that the spectator may imagine that the score, instead of being in B flat, is 15 love.

Nor would the artiste stop with tennis. The football field offers a chance to mark the stage off with lines like the sidewalks whereon the children play hopscotch and the dancers, arrayed in padded clothing, shaggy hair, will dash madly about, trying to put their feet upon the faces of their neighbors and to kick, in the name of aesthetic art, the shins of those in the immediate vicinity.

To this, says Nijinski, we are coming.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

Hetty Green's Home Is Taxed at $112,000

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

Important Sayings

By important people on topics of live interest

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. A thorough reorganization and upbuilding of the public and common schools is necessary. New methods, new ideas and ideals must be instituted."—Abrams Elkus, in address at City College, New York.

MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Barker to Manage Newly Built Road

The new Gainesville and Northwestern Railroad will have as its vice president and general manager B. S. Barker, of Atlanta, commercial agent of the Southern. Mr. Barker has tendered his resignation for July 1, and will go to Gainesville to his new office.

Mr. Barker has been in the employ of railroads for 25 years. The new road has just been completed. It extends through Hall and White Counties, with its terminus at North Helen, a booming town.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and allenists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

Then the task of deciding where to take your business course will be an easy one.

The people admire the Southern's businesslike appearance.

They like its large, wide-awake, enthusiastic and efficient faculty.

They are pleased with the way in which the business men speak of it.

Write, call or phone for catalogue, and enter now. Address,

A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, 10 West Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Thomas L. Bryan, representative and lecturer.

The SOCIAL WORLD

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crownin-shield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larendon at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chapter and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Porch Party for Visitors.

Mr. Thomas Branch will give a porch party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Anna Willingham's guest, Miss Annie Tyler, of Sandersville, Ga.

Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Saturday, June 28, is shower day for Wesley Memorial Hospital, and donations will be received by a committee of ladies from the Woman's Auxiliary. Goods may be sent direct to the hospital and cash sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 591 South Pryor Street.

Bible Class to Picnic.

Bible Class No. 2 of the Second Baptist Church will have its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 25, at the cement pavilion at Grant Park. Dr. White will make an address, as will also Superintendent Spalding.

Party for Visitors.

Miss Estelle Weaver entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Thursday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses LaGrange Cothran and Katherine Graves, of Rome.

Miss Helen Jones Entertains.

The largest affair of Tuesday afternoon was a tea given by Miss Helen Jones in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va. Young girls and young men were entertained.

Guests were received in the drawing room, where there were decorations of pink and white sweetpeas and roses with wild flowers. The tea table was adorned with a basket of daisies, surrounded by pink unshaded tapers and minor details in pink. Misses Margaret McCarty and Eleanor Macey served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Adam Jones, Misses Nellie Kiser Stewart, Clifford West, Margaret Northen, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, San Antonio, Texas; Mignon McCarty and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Miss Jones wore white charmeuse satin with draperies in blue chiffon. Miss Buckner wore pink chiffon with panniers made over pink satin. Mrs. Jones wore white embroidered French mull.

An orchestra played through the calling hours. The affair was one of the happiest events of the week.

Stillman-Porter Wedding.

Miss Margaret Porter and Dr. Lowe Stillman were married Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in Columbia Avenue. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

Dr. and Mrs. Stillman went for an automobile trip through South Georgia. They will go to housekeeping at 285 East Fourth Street.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain informally at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Martin Dunbar's guests, Misses Thelma Dargan, of Jacksonville, and Maude Miller, of St. Louis. The affair will be one of a series of parties tendered the visitors.

Series of Parties.

Misses Katherine Graves and LaGrange Cothran, of Rome, who have been visiting Miss Louise Cooper for the past week, are having many parties given in their honor. Miss Estelle Weaver gave a matinee party Tuesday. Miss Margaret Traylor gave a bridge Wednesday afternoon. Miss Josephine Stoney will entertain at a luncheon Thursday. Miss Katherine Darby will give a dance Thursday evening, and Mrs. Paul Baker will entertain Friday.

Miss Cothran will return home Thursday. Miss Graves will leave Saturday.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Sidney Hoberton gave an informal luncheon Tuesday for Miss Martha Francis, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Douthit will take place Saturday evening. Six girls were her guests.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Thomson Names One Body to Work Up Support and Another to Determine Need.

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman L. N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constiutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they cain gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Convict Escapes at Tybee.

SAVANNAH.—Three convicts engaged in work on the Inlet road at the south end of Tybee Island made a dash for liberty, giving the guests, police force and residents at the resort an exciting man hunt. Two of the convicts were captured after one had been shot. The third swam Horsepen Creek and escaped.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibtion at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

SLEUTHS PROBING GEORGIA LYNCHING

AMERICUS, June 24.—Detectives are investigating the lynching of Will Redding, the negro who shot Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, Saturday night This became manifest to-day as the detectives were especially busy collecting data. Inquiry here affords no information as to who sent the detectives to the city. They were not brought here by local authorities.

Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of the Sumter Superior Court, will return from Columbus to-night. He said when he left for Columbus upon his return he would have a thorough investigation of the lynching made. If the evidence is sufficient Judge Littlejohn said he would call a special session of the Grand Jury at once to deal with the lynchers.

A strong public sentiment against the lynching has developed. At first this was not so generally manifest, but since the passing of resolutions by all of the churches on Sunday condemning the lynching the sentiment has crystallized almost in unanimous fashion in favor of a session of the Grand Jury to investigate the matter.

On account of the fact that the lynchers wore no masks and were entirely open in their procedure, an investigation of the affair by the Grand Jury would likely lead to sensational developments. Practically everyone in the mob is known here, if those who know will give evidence.

Though he is still in a critical condition, Chief Barrow is resting as well as could be expected, according to the statement issued to-day by his physician. A favorable symptom is the freedom from fever and the fact that the patient has great will power and nerve control, which may save his life in spite of his advanced age. He is 72 years old.

Mayor's Secretary to Attend T. M. A. Meet

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor James G. Woodward, will leave Saturday for an extensive tour of the North, the West, the Northwest and the Southwest. His business "excuse" is that he must attend the T. M. A. national convention in Spokane, Wash., next month.

Leaving Atlanta, Mr. Hammond will pass through Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Paul on the way to Spokane. After the T. M. A. convention he will take in Seattle and Portland, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and San Francisco, then swing back to Atlanta through Dallas, Houston and New Orleans.

Auto Hits Chicken Coop; 3 Badly Hurt

RALEIGH, June 24.—Rushing from an impending storm, Mrs. John Borden, her four children and three guests, all prominent in North Carolina, were thrown from an automobile at Goldsboro when their machine, driven by a negro chauffeur, struck a chicken coop and turned turtle.

Miss Mary Borden, a pretty 19-year-old girl, sustained a broken jawbone and loss of teeth; Mrs. R. B. Miller, daughter of the late Richard H. Battle, broken ribs and a shoulder blade, and Mrs. D. R. Kornegay, a broken shoulder and face cuts.

Mrs. Borden and daughters, Mary and Virginia, had been out of a hospital only one week, all three convalescing from operations.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible, with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Illinois Suffrage Law Thought Invalid

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 24.—Belief that Attorney General Lucey had declared the Illinois woman suffrage bill unconstitutional in the opinion he sent to Governor Dunne to-day was strengthened this afternoon when the Governor, in conference with William L. O'Connell, of Chicago, and others, deserted his offices for the Executive Mansion and denied himself to all callers.

Out-of-the-Ordinary Mid-Summer Hats

At $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00

We use out-of-the-ordinary advisedly. They are, beautifully.

Through our connection with the shop of Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th Street, New York, we keep in closest touch with millinery styles as they appear in the great metropolis.

We are apprised of the new things at once, and then our splendid corps of milliners sets to work—the result is $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats that differ from those about town. But you must see just how they do differ.

Right now, and there are fresh ones every day—literally, every day—there are a number of particularly dainty white and light colored hats of hemp and peanut straw, with feathers and wings placed at "dangerous" angles, with crowns wreathed with flowers, with crowns covered with white maline. One at $5.00 of notable charm has a crown wrapped with white brocade silk, a bow of the same silk stands upright in the back—the unusual part is the way the silk is edged with maline. It is $5.00. But this is but one of many. See them all.

You, too, will say the prettiest $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats are at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's.

Wanted Silks With Prices Cut to Thirds and Halves

The Selling Will Start at Nine o'Clock

A Silk Sale to reckon with!

The reasons:

—Qualities are as fine as we can buy in regular season for "regular" selling. They are best at their prices.

—Styles are those chosen because they were choice, distinctive.

And

—Prices are now cut down to a third and a half.

Certainly all the elements that would go to make a Silk Opportunity mark this event. Now, then, to your needs! What are they? A dress, a waist, a skirt, a suit, a coat—it matters little, just read on—

$1.69 For $3 to $4 a Yd. Silks

Yes, $1.69 a yard, for $3.00 and $4.00 crepe meteors and charmeuse, fabrics fashion will favor as fondly in the fall as she has this season. They drape and "cling" more gracefully, perhaps, than any other silks. And you may select from mais, brown, helio, apricot, taupe, Alice and wistaria. All are 44 inches wide.

79c For $1 a Yd. Wash Silks

For wash silks that seem to grow in popular favor as the weather grows warmer. The silk shirt—for men as well as for women—is the cool shirt. And these silks are the dependable kinds that are true to their name--wash silks. Plain and corded, white and black, white and helio, white and navy, white and gray. Stripes of various widths, 33 inches wide.

69c For $1.50 to $2.25 a Yd. Silks

Perhaps the finest values of the sale are among these. We miss our guess if the crowds are not thick around them. There are 36-inch chiffon taffetas in plain and two-toned shades—light blue, green, mais, yellow, tan, lilac and blue, tan and blue, green and rose, black and green; there are bordered foulards; there are figured chiffons, small designs in exquisite shades, white eoliennes, marquisettes, colors for evening dresses—all 44 inches wide and none was less than $1.50 a yard!

49c For 85c and $1 Yd. Foulards

The quality is told by the names they bear—but the patterns! Choosing a dress will be a delight, for here is variety—there are black and white stripes, there are little cubes and flowers and dots thrown across surfaces of brown, tan, navy, gray, wistaria and heliotrope. No question, one to your liking. 23 and 24 inches wide.

At Nine o'Clock

The Wash Goods buyer's return from New York with great quantities of new merchandise meant a crusade against short lengths—now they are gathered, every kind, making up the largest and finest quantity of remnants we have offered this season.

To-morrow at nine o'clock we will let you at them!

It will be a splendid time to select waists, skirts, dresses and underwear for yourself and children. Hardly a wanted wash material is not represented—for they are remnants, you know, and only wanted materials become remnants.

Colored Cottons

A world of ginghams, one kind after another; checks, stripes, plaids, zephyr ginghams, fine imported ginghams, colorings that are fast and as pretty as can be; bordered, figured, striped and plain voiles and marquisettes, crepes, in such great demand, figured and plain shades, soisettes, piques, cotton suitings that look like linen, silk mulls, percales, galateas, kimono crepes, and still the list could be extended to include practically every kind of colored cottons, the light, filmy kinds, the substantial kinds.

Linens

Even table linens are included. Dress linens, the smooth French finish and the rough ramie linens in white and colors, linen lawns, cambrics, crashes, pillow casing, huck toweling, butcher's linen, brown apron linen and crashes.

White Goods

Flaxon, plain and checked and striped, dimities, linens, percales, India linons, batistes, French and Persian lawns, French and English nainsooks, madras figured and striped, dotted swisses, curtain swisses, lingerie cloth, repps, poplins, piques and others.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

Of course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance, "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-ten ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distinckly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen. I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty.
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I suppose sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such ablect fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

P-R-R-R

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have nice long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

Price 25 cents by all druggists or by mail, on receipt of stamps or coin. Exelento Medicine Company, Atlanta, Ga. Agents wanted everywhere. Write for particulars to-day.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her husband's noble block.
Her husband saw the shattered dish and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife, these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

• • •

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

• • •

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24.—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery club that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the ter of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acidss and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

• • •

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like .195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

• • •

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

• • •

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

• • •

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

• • •

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

• • •

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

• • •

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

• • •

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

• • •

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

• • •

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

• • •

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD. Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

The ball player hasn't quite the magnate's contempt for the "boob in the stand." But the magnate——

• • •

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-3, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans, 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Easy for Thornton.

The surprise of the day was the match between Abe Leverich and E. S. Mansfield. The first set had not gone far before Leverich began showing his power. Leverich won in straight sets.

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

	AB.	H.	Pct.
Elberfeld	207	72	.347
Robertson	242	83	.343
Long	255	86	.337

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

TEAGUE GOES TO NAPS.

PADUCAH, KY., June 24.—Pitcher Teague has been sold by Paducah to the Cleveland American League team for $1,000.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

DREAMS, IDLE DREAMS.

How dear to my heart is the snow of last winter!
How cool and refreshing the loud, shricking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter
A life-saving station and lay down my kale.

As H. Zim, the well known monologist, would say, silence is a gold certificate.

SPEAKING OF VACATION.

This is the forest primeval; the murmuring pines and the hemlocks
Swarm with a myriad of flies and other pestiferous insects,
Under the roof of the tent a healthy and active mosquito
Hums, and in accents sonorous answers the wail of the camper.

COOMBS TO QUIT GAME; ILLNESS BRINGS ON FAT

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—That he probably will be unable to pitch again this season was admitted today by Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics. The pitcher, who is ill at his Atlantic City home, is taking on weight at the rate of a pound a day, which is not considered favorable by his physicians. Connie Mack and John Shibe visited Coombs a few days ago and to them he admitted his condition.

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

YANKS RECRUIT PLAYERS FROM MOST EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Four new recruits have been signed for the New York team of the American League. They are Dan Costello, a first sacker from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; A. PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.

Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable, that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Interstate Commerce Commission expected to issue orders to-day for investigation of the 5 per cent freight rate increase.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHANGES.

NEW YORK, June 24.—It is said that New York bankers in conference drafted suggestions for changes in the currency bill.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—The market has been very quiet to-day, trading light, but ruled very steady, with little cotton for sale. The demand has been generally good. Liverpool reported a buyer, also some Southern buying spot people bought July on all soft spots.

* * *

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

* * *

* * *

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

* * *

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought 5m block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Generally fair weather will continue to-night and Wednesday in the Gulf States, New England and the greater of New York. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be overcast with local showers and thunderstorms.

Moderately warm weather will prevail over the eastern half of the country during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Following is the general forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Cloudy and warm; probably light showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina and South Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Fair in northwest, showers in the peninsula to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska—Unsettled, with probably showers.

South Dakota and North Dakota—Cloudy to cooler.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mean temperatures were from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Texas, where there was a deficiency of from 1 to 3 degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over eastern Tennessee. Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 74 to 82 over the eastern, from 80 to 82 over the central and from 78 to 82 over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 74 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 82 degrees, occurred at a number of stations located in all portions of the cotton-growing States.

Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region, except that in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas, scattered localities in Louisiana, eastern and southern Mississippi, western Alabama and parts of southern Georgia there was no rain. The precipitation was unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Texas. The greatest weekly amount, 5.39 inches, occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The cotton seed oil market was higher to-day on active covering by refiners in old crop deliveries and speculative buying of later months. There was good profit-taking on the advance, which resulted in a setback of a couple of points. Strength in lard was also a stimulating factor.

SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Spot Houses Support Old Crops, While Wall Street Sells—Sentiment Bearish.

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again cent red their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

During the late forenoon the market was quiet, but ruled steady. The buying continued general, mainly on Cordill's report on Georgia, which was somewhat mixed and had a stimulating effect, as his reports up to this time of the season has been very favorable. Liverpool and the South were reported good buyers.

On the other hand, the Government weekly weather report was construed as bearish, resulting in active selling by Wall Street and the uptown crowd. There is a disposition on the part of local traders to sell the market short on the favorable conditions that have existed up to this time, but many operators hesitate in the face of the continued good demand for spots.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 1 point off to 3 points higher than the final quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The weather map shows very favorable conditions. Partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, rather general over the Atlantics, with some good rains in the Carolinas; even temperatures, warm nights, good growing weather. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair weather, with scattered thundershowers; range of temperature stationary.

Liverpool came in rather poor, but shows larger spots sales; total 8,000, at 2 points lower quotations. Political news is that Bulgaria refuses further peace negotiations and that financial war has been started on the Continent by France refusing loans.

The market here advanced from the start, mainly on the report on Georgia by Mr. Cordill, which does not show the improvement that was expected. Under the circumstances, it is thought that the July Bureau report can at the outside give 1 to 2 points' improvement for the belt, which would be a condition between 80 and 81, and as the acreage increase, owing to the acreage correction made by Washington in May, is expected to be between 1 and 2 per cent, it is thought that the July bureau may again make a bullish impression on the trade.

Selling was therefore rather light today, the more so as a bullish visible statement is expected for Friday. Trading was quiet, with prices steady around 11.53 for December.

WILSON'S MESSAGE SENDS STOCKS UP

Encouraging Crop Accounts Also Stimulating Factor—Speculative Situation Stronger.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend, Americans being higher there.

The sharpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅛, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1½; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ⅜; Northern Pacific, ⅞; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅝; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅜.

The curb was steady.

Trading was low in the last hour and price changes for the most part were only slightly changed from the midday level.

Amalgamated Copper, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chino and Northern Pacific were fractionally under the midday level, but ranged above the low quotations for the morning. Union Pacific sold around 145⅝ for a net gain of 2½ on the day. Steel sold at 56¼, for a net gain of 1⅝. Reading crossed 158 for a gain of 1¾ on the day.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged; other bonds dull.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Conflicting Crop Advices and Bad Cable News Cause General Buying.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 97 @99½
Corn—No. 2 ..... 60¼
Oats—No. 2 ..... 38½@39

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Closing prices for grain showed advances all around ¼@½c for wheat, ⅜@½c for corn and ⅛@⅝c for oats. The strength shown at Minneapolis and the buying of July there by one of the larger millers was the bullish influence at Chicago toward the close of the day.

There are many uncertainties surrounding the crop situation in the Northwest and there are also many uncertainties surrounding the harvesting of the winter wheat crop. For these reasons the average speculator the average speculator is feeling his way rather than making large commitments.

Provisions showed but little change for week.

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS BAD.

CHICAGO, June 24.—W. B. Snow wires from Redfield, S. Dak., June 23: "Through Brown, McPherson, Edmunds, Faulk and Spink Counties west of James River district is reported as bad, involving about 600 acres. Was a failure last year, and most of it for three consecutive years. Present situation promises the fourth failure. Nothing but general soaking rains at once can save any part of it. Oats the same. Corn holding its own.

"General situation east of James River reported as satisfactory."

Need 2,000 Hands in Kansas Wheat Fields

WICHITA, KANS., June 24.—A month ago farmers in the big wheat belt west and northwest of here called their crop practically worthless. Now they are calling for more than 2,000 harvest hands.

They are meeting all incoming trains and compete in bidding for help. Wages as high as $3.50 and board a day are offered.

MRS. ARMOR TO SPEAK ON "U. S. WITHOUT SALOONS"

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will tell an audience in the First Methodist Church Tuesday night why the United States would be much better off without a single saloon within its borders. Mrs. Armor has just returned from a tour through 28 States.

Freak Chicken Dies On Way to School

NORTH ADAMS, June 24.—Two beaks, three eyes and two necks was too much for any chicken to carry around—so the freak hatched by a Bracewell Avenue hen died on the way to school, where the children were going to show it to their playmates.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!

Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?

How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"

Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?

The proper way to make a double play at second?

How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?

The proper way to field a ground ball?

Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?

All these questions and many more are answered in

"How to Play Baseball"

By JOHN J. McGRAW

The greatest book on baseball ever written will tell you fully, clearly, entertainingly, how, why and when all these and a thousand and one other things should be done in baseball. It's a book of 192 pages, with thirty-two superb half-tone illustrations of Big League stars in actual play, and bound in either rich, red cloth or heavy, durable paper covers of similar richness and color. In paper, printing and binding, it is the equal of any $1.00 and $1.50 novel, but by special arrangement with Manager McGraw, and for a limited period only,

$100,000 PAID ON PAINTER'S LIFE POLICIES

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painter's Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The warring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation-wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

Held Under Bond for Concealing Property

SAVANNAH, June 24.—P. A. Mack, a Sylvania merchant and Screven County farmer, held under bond charged with concealing assets from the trustee in bankruptcy, has been given a hearing before United States Commissioner Cooper Morcock.

Merchandise alleged to have been removed from Mack's store and hidden in warehouses, barns, stable lofts and cane fields has been recovered. Mack claims that no goods were taken away or hidden after J. W. Overstreet was appointed trustee.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Almee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

Boy Scouts Start on 1,000-Mile Relay Run

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning President Wilson leaned forward from the portico of the White House and handed a small tube to a boy attired in running clothes who dashed off northward. The boy was Frank Reed, the perfect Boy Scout, who had been selected as the first of the Scouts to relay the President's message of congratulation to Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago.

Running night and day, 1,000 Boy Scouts hope to deliver the message within less than four days.

Special Court Term For Vice War Trials

MACON, June 24.—A special session of the Superior Court will be held, during two weeks beginning June 30 for the trial of 70 liquor dealers charged with violating the prohibition law; twelve clubs similarly indicted, 35 women accused of operating disorderly houses, and fifteen property owners, charged with renting houses for immoral purposes.

Jesse C. Harris, attorney, who was indicted for perjury in connection with the alleged election frauds last y... will be called to trial on July 2.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have nto had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the end of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"—to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoune add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a steve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the high-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not be afraid to use these remedies, and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 42-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company hs leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Foole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those which have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

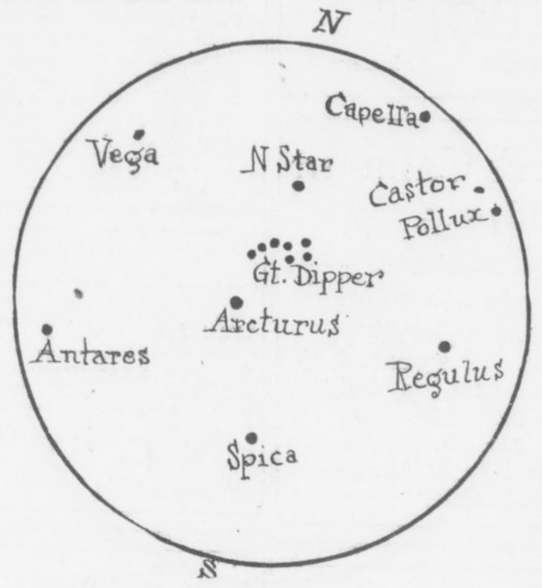
YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.



Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, perhaps the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.

Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, paroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

STATE URGES EARLIER DATE BUT OBJECTION BY DEFENSE WINS DAY

Judge Roan Calls Conference of Dorsey and Frank's Counsel---Rosser Gets Subpoenas for Prosecution's Witnesses and Affidavits.

Principally on the statements of the defense July 28 was definitely fixed by Judge L. S. Roan for the opening of the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, following a conference Tuesday afternoon with Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, of counsel for the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey declared his case was ready for immediate trial, and he wished to clear it off his docket. He urged a speedy trial. Mr. Rosser, however, stated he and his colleague, Reuben Arnold, were forced to go to Emnauel County to try the McNaughton murder case there during the week of July. 14. Mr. Aronld said flatly the case would take two weeks after the Solicitor had estimated its length at two days.

Judge Roan also said he had planned to take his vacation July 4, but was willing to forego it and set the date for July 7, but brought up the McNaughton case and July 28 was fixed.

Subpenas Still Effective.

The trial will very likely be held in some more commodious room than the one in which Judge Roan sits.

Notwithstanding the fixing of the July date, the subpenas summoning witnesses for the prosecution to appear in court on June 30 with their evidence for examination by the defense will be effective. At this time, however, arguments will be heard on the validity of this action, and Judge Roan will decide whether or not the State will turn its affidavits over to the defense.

While the conference was in session in the Thrower Building Jim Conley, the State's principal witness, being put through another cross-examination by Detectives Campbell and Starnes. The negro was not taken to Chief Lanford's office, but was questioned in the cell house. The examination was kept secret and its outcome will not be made known to the public.

State's Leaders Called.

The first important legal move by the defense in the battle for the life and freedom of Leo Frank, accused of the strangling of Mary Phagan, was made Tuesday in the issuance of subpenas duces tecum for the prime movers in the prosecution of the factory superintendent.

The following have been subpenaed to appear:

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, to whom is generally given credit for the admissions gained from Conley.

All other city detectives who have worked on the case.

All of them are ordered to produce any affidavits they may have bearing on the case in court June 30, the date at first suggested for the trial.

The startling move on the part of the defense was taken to mean that Frank's lawyers propose to use to free their client the very evidence the detectives and Solicitor General have collected to send him to the gallows.

The most significant demand is made upon Chief Beavers, who is commanded to bring into court the famed series of affidavits made by the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. It is evident that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who are conducting the defense, intend to tear the contradictory sto-

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Following are contributions which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

'Continued Sultry Weather' Best That Forecaster Offers

Not even a cloud interposed itself between the sun and the city of Atlanta Tuesday, and the result was a sultry and sweltering day. Although the temperature was only 88 at 12 o'clock and 89 an hour later, it seemed much hotter.

The outlook for cooler weather, based on a fall in the maximum temperature Monday, signally failed to materialize Tuesday. The 89 maximum mark of the day before was exceeded shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday, and 30 minutes later the mercury was hesitating less than one-tenth of a degree below 90.

At 7 o'clock Tuesday morning the temperature was 72. An hour later it was 81. At 10 o'clock the 84 mark was attained. At 11 o'clock it was 86, and then came the 88 and 89 marks with the mercury still rising.

Ga. Cotton Dealers Accuse Railroad of Rate Discrimination

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Six interior cotton firms to-day petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to order the Atlantic Coast Line to cease the practice of paying seaport cotton dealers for compression cotton held by the railroads. The interior firms charge the practice practically rebating.

The firms are located in Atlanta, Augusta, Covington and Athens. They allege the railroad discriminates against them in favor of cotton dealers in Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah and Norfolk.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

C. R. Stull, garage proprietor, Bereau, was fatally, and Mrs. Homer Atkins, Mrs. Charles Atkins and an 18-months-old child, badly injured.

W.C.T.U. PLAN DEFEAT OF ANDERSON BY PRAYER

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were flooded with letters protesting against Anderson's candidacy and denouncing the Savannah man as a foe of prohibition and an ally of the liquor interests.

Prayers will be one of the weapons in the fight, women all over the State joining in pleas to Providence to prevent the election of Anderson.

Judge Allen is Anderson's most formidable opponent and has vigorously denied that his rival had the fight won. What effect the women's attack will have is problematical, but it means that the opening session of the Senate to-morrow will be no tame affair.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. Now, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the late prohibition movement, and,to thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything, for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer, and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee.

CHAIN GANGS ASSAILED IN BULLETIN CRUSADE

Men and Religion Forward Movement Starts Fight to Reform Convict System.

The executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement began Tuesday, through the newspaper bulletins previously devoted to the vice problem, a campaign against the chaingang system in Georgia.

The practice of chaining boys and first offenders to hardened criminals was bitterly condemned and the whole system was characterized as a prolific breeding place for criminal tendencies of the worst sort.

The State's policy in making the wives and children of the chaingang victims suffer along with the head of the family by depriving them of their source of support was severely criticised, and the voters of the State were called upon to write their Representatives in the House and Senate to free the State from these conditions.

Scores Convict Roads.

Road-building about the State was commended, but the policy of "making criminals to build roads" was described as madness. The bulletin said in part:

Georgia daily thus degrades and drives men deeper into hell. Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men. But 2,896 of the 6,139 are felony convicts. They are under long sentence. Among these are two 12-year-old boys and two of 13; three of 14, eleven of 15; twenty of 16, thirty of 17, 85 of 18, ninety-one of 19, 123 of 20 and 163 of 21. Children are out of place in convict camps.

Defends First Offenders.

You should not chain first offenders to hardened criminals. Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead. You would not kill the young man who had slipped. But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper; you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime. He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living. When folly weds cruelty, their offspring is this affront to God and man. From it save the boy. Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives. At home? Have they homes? You know not. You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

Free Drink Room in Capitol for Solons

HARRISBURG, June 24.—Representative Ollie M. Letzkus, of Allegheny, told the House Lobby Investigation Committee to-day that there has been throughout the session a "booze room" in the Capitol, where members of the Legislature could have free all the beer and whisky they wanted.

One was admitted, he said, by placing the palm of one hand on the ground glass door and tapping gently with the other hand.

'September Morn' 'Pure Art' in Macon

MACON, June 24.—"September Morn" did not even cause a ripple of excitement in Macon. Chief of Police W. B. Chapman visited the store window where the paintings were displayed, and indorsed them as being "pure art."

A representative of the Law and Order League inspected the young lady, gazed ardently and then purchased one the copies.

Prohibitive Opium Law Passes House

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The House to-day passed the Harrison bill placing a prohibitive tax of $200 a pound on smoking opium, imposing a $100,000 bond on manufacturers of such opium and placing heavy criminal penalties for violation of the act.

Festival Concerts Planned for Every Sunday in Future

Officers were elected and a special committee named to confer with the Auditorium Committee of the City Council looking to less interruption of the Sunday concerts, at an annual meeting of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Monday afternoon.

The Auditorium Committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will seek to remedy the condition whereby Sunday concerts often are canceled because of poultry shows, conventions and other auditorium affairs. A determined effort will be made to have concerts every Sunday.

All of the old officers were elected, including W. L. Peel, president; George W. Wilkinson and Ben Lee Crew, vice president; C. B. Bidwell, treasurer; Victor L. Smith, secretary, and R. S. Wessells, assistant secretary.

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Dies as He Phones Physician for Wife

W. B. Henson, of 28 Clark Street, Monday went to his telephone to call a physician to his sick wife. A few minutes later he was found lying dead in an adjoining room.

Seemingly he was in the best of health. He just had returned from a pleasure trip to Gainesville.

Explosion In Mill Buries Train; 75 Hurt

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24.—An explosion of dust occurred in the flour mill of the Houston Milling Company this afternoon. Just as the explosion occurred a passenger train on the Nickel Plate Road was passing. The outer wall of the mill fell on one of the coaches of the train, damaging the cars and injuring many passengers. At 4:30 o'clock one dead body had been removed, and at least 75 people are injured.

A short time after the explosion the entire mill, which is eight stories, was in flames, and every fire engine in the city was hurried to the scene, also ambulances from all the hospitals.

The injured, many terribly burned, were taken to the hospitals.

Man Fined for Row On Wife's Testimony

As the result of a fight precipitated Saturday, when Rudolph Otter found his wife in the room of Charles Olsen at 15 Houston Street, where the two-boarded, Otter was fined $15.75 by Judge Broyles Tuesday for disturbing the peace.

Mrs. Otter testified she and two other women were visiting Olsen, who was ill. Otter entered and started for Olsen, who picked up a water pitcher and struck his assailant on the head. The pitcher glanced and smashed against Mrs. Otter. She was cut about the face.

Heat Hatches Eggs in Ophir Mine Depth

They hatched.

PHAGAN DEFENSE CALLS STATE'S LEADERS

ries of the negro to tatters and make his statements appear so utterly ridiculous and improbable that the jury not only will refuse to accept them, but will interpret them as an effort of Conley to get from under the blame for a crime that he committed himself.

Chief Beavers is asked to bring into court the written statement made by Conley May 18 in the presence of Detective John R. Black and Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott; also the affidavit sworn to by Conley before G. C. Febuary in the presence of Chief Lanford and Detectives Black and Scott May 24, the affidavit made by Conley May 28, the affidavit made by the negro May 29 in the presence of Lanford, Campbell and Scott and all other written statements of the negro in the possession or control of the Chief.

Chief Beavers is asked, in addition, to bring all the statements of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman; Monteen Stover, the girl who testified that Frank was not in his office when she went for her money; W. M. Matthews, and Miss Grace Hicks, the girl who first identified the dead body as that of Mary Phagan.

The defense has persistently ridiculed the stories of Jim Conley and characterized them as cunning fabrications to shift the blame on Frank's shoulders.

With the other affidavits, which for the most part are given credence by the defense, the attempt will be merely to show that the evidence which the prosecution holds to point toward the guilt of Frank only more firmly fixes it upon the shoulders of the negro sweeper, and that the State from time to time has shifted the ground on which it based its theory that Frank was guilty.

Hooper Calls Move a Trick.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, branded the move of the defense as a thinly veiled trick to impeach the testimony of the witnesses called by the State, and said that it was not at all unlikely that the subpenaes would be resisted.

He intimated his belief that it was the intention of the defense to use the affidavits as a comparison with the testimony of the affiants when took the stand in an effort to pick out every discrepancy and thus seek to discredit the witnesses.

Before the conference between Judge Roan and the attorneys on the opposing sides began in the afternoon, the judge announced that he would be the one who would set the date for the trial, after consulting the convenience of the attorneys.

He said that he desired to preclude the possibility that the case would be called for June 30 and the witnesses summoned and then one or another of the attorneys ask for a postponement. He expressed it as his purpose to carry the case through to its completion once it was started.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, becaus of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quincey, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 24.—With a hundred fellow workers watching his death struggles from a high railroad bridge, Sullivan Lackel was drowned in Rock River with only two 12-year-old boys trying to rescue him.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.
Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.
India, 358,316,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.
Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.
Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.
Sugar beets, Belgium 84.7 per cent.
Denmark, 102.3 per cent.
France, 94.36 per cent.
Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

WILSON MONEY TALK INDORSED BY BANKERS

At a meeting of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, held in their offices on Tuesday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, we have read with interest and approval the President's message to Congress, asking for the passage of some kind of remedial currency legislation for the relief of the banking and commercial interests of the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, First that we indorse heartily the spirit and purpose of said message.

Resolved, further, That it is the belief of the banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, representing the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests of Atlanta and the prosperous Southeast, that a satisfactory bill for the reform of banking and currency laws should be passed at this session of Congress.

Resolved, further, That we believe that the combined wisdom of the President, the House and the Senate, after hearing from the banking, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country, can and will evolve a currency bill that will be satisfactory to the banks and beneficial to the nation.

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

11,000 Cincinnati Workers on Strike

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Eleven thousand garment workers to-day obeyed the order to strike, and work in the majority of factories was completely tied up.

Workers demand 48 hours per week. Operators offer a 50-hour week. Former work was 54 hours.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—There was no sign of a break to-day in the deadlock of the ice manufacturers and their striking drivers, helpers, engineers and firemen. Hotter weather caused much suffering.

Rome Lawyer Sued For Total Divorce

ROME, June 24.—Accused of cruel treatment by his wife, J. Sante Crawford, well-known attorney, court stenographer and politician, to-day was sued for total divorce by his wife, who was a Miss McClaine. Mrs. Crawford alleges cruel treatment in her petition.

Both parties are well known, and each is prominently connected throughout the State. Crawford's family lived for years in Polk County, and his wife has relatives in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Mrs. Crawford is a very handsome woman.

The Crawfords have one child, a boy 10 years of age.

Nicholson Declines Post in Portugal

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson's ambassadorial troubles were augmented to-day when he was forced to accept the declination of Meredith Nicholson to serve as Minister to Portugal. Nicholson informed the President that family matters precluded his acceptance.

According to Secretary of State Bryan, an effort is now being made to place Mr. Nicholson in some other European diplomatic post.

Wilsons Exchange Anniversary Gifts

The President presented his wife with a handsome pearl necklace containing 28 jewels.

The occasion of the exchange of gifts was the fact that the day is the twenty-eighth anniversary of their marriage.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,

"Yours,

"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, for President of the Senate."

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight tought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, and Representative Hardeman of Jackson, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to Representative Burwell, of Hancock.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

BULGARIANS AND SERVIANS IN BATTLE

Russia Orders Peace When Sixty Thousand of Ferdinand's Soldiers Oppose Allies.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council is considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $600,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. Pastors Smite the Pellet With Churchly Zeal But Majors Draft None From Ministerial League

"Washington Street Howlers" Defeat Ridley's 'Hinky-Dinks,' Who Protest Game.

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grapejuice.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureaus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be compelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various sums available for each.

King George Greets Poincaire; Guarded Against Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

POPE TO SUMMON CARDINAL FARLEY

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva in intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome, Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

BOSTON, June 24.—Alfred Farlow, chairman of the publication committee of the Christian Science Church, in reply to a claim of Mrs. Augusta E. WILSON LIKELY TO RIDE OVER M'REYNOLDS

Statement Cancelling Delay in White Slave Case, but Letting McNab Out, Is Near.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—That the resignation of District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco will be accepted immediately, and will be coupled with the appointment of his successor, was the statement made to-day by a White House official close to the President.

President Wilson instructed Attorney General McReynolds at the cabinet meeting to-day to submit to him this afternoon a full report of the McNab-Caminetti case. This report will be delivered in person by the Attorney General late to-day.

After the President has examined it he will issue a statement in which he is expected to announce, beside the McNab pleas, cancellation of the postponement of the Diggs and Caminetti white slave cases, ordering their immediate trial.

Would Over-Ride McReynolds.

Should the President take this action he will over-ride the head of the Department of Justice in postponing the Camnetti trial.

At the request of Secretary of Labor Wilson at to-day's cabinet meeting the Attorney General and the Secretary of Labor were called upon by the President to tell their sides of the case.

The chief executive showed disapproval of the action of the Department of Justice which he had previously upheld in public.

In calcelling the postponement of the Caminetti case the President is acting in accord with consensus of opinion of his cabinet, which disapproved the postponement, which was ordered at the request of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti.

Public Opinion Strong.

Secretary of the Interior Lane and Secretary of the Navy Daniels told the President very firmly that the action of the Department of Justice placed the administration in an embarrassing light before the country. The President decided it was better to over-ride the Attorney General than combat public opinion.

It is understood the President's statement will take no cognizance of the fact that the elder Caminetti, personal friend of Secretary Bryan, will be unable to be present at his son's trial.

Church and Civic Bodies Uphold McNab.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 24.—Church and civic bodies of Sacramento to-day went on record as condemning the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering the postponement of the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti on charges of violating the white slave law.

Resolutions went to President Wilson asking him to order the trial to proceed, and asking that District Attorney McNab's resignation be not accepted. Fifteen women's organizations uphold McNab.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

Chaingangs in Georgia

"You have turned justice into gall."---Amos vi:12

Six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine souls are in our chaingangs.

At dawn, the striped suits appear, the shackles clank in our city streets and country roads.

Women and children shuddering pass them as they work and sweat under the eyes of armed men until darkness draws near to hide the marks of their infamy.

AGAIN THEY ARE CHAINED TOGETHER.

And like monstrous striped snakes with men for vertebrae and chains for spinal cords, the squads in the gathering gloom squirm, shuffling and clinking their weary way back into camp.

A gang halts before a door. They stand, excepting one. He runs forward, drawing from between them the rattling chain now unlocked. To the ground it drops.

The men enter a long dimly lighted room.

On both sides beds are jammed together forming an aisle. In its center at intervals are boxes or cans, and tubs. Around its length goes another chain.

The men remove their clothes. They cannot get off their shackles. Begins a horrible clanking. The chain is being passed from shackle to shackle linking man to man. Repeatedly it crashes to the floor between them. At last, its ends are bolted to the wall on both sides of the door. They are again one in their wretchedness.

Here and there one drags the chain to a tub and washes. Man after man uses the same foul water.

Then comes food borne on a hand-barrow.

Each man gets his rations.

Seated on his bed, he eats.

Before his face waits the unspeakable box, hideous receptacle for unnamable human filth.

CHAINED TOGETHER, THE MEN LIE DOWN TO SLEEP.

To their mutual misery—to the lash hanging at the door—to the sting of conscience and the agony of memory in the long hours of the night are added the bite of the leg shackle on the naked skin and the clank of the endless chain as they turn and toss trying to rest.

Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men.

But two thousand eight hundred and ninety of the six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine are felony convicts. They are under long sentence.

Among these are two twelve-year-old boys, and two of thirteen.

Three of fourteen, eleven of fifteen, twenty of sixteen.

One hundred and twenty-three of twenty, and one hundred and sixty-three of twenty-one.

Children are out of place in convict camps.

YOU SHOULD NOT CHAIN FIRST OFFENDERS TO HARDENED CRIMINALS.

Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead.

You would not kill the young man who has slipped.

But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper: you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime.

He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living.

From it save the boy.

Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives.

At home? Have they homes? You know not.

You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

WHY? WHAT IS THEIR OFFENSE? THEIR BIRTH.

But their fathers and husbands have committed crimes?

Yes. And in defiling zebra suits and clanking chains they pay.

They build your roads; under the fear of your lash, they work; but their degradation and heart-breaking labor brings no morsel of food to those women and children; their shame does not clothe their wives and babies.

Shall the sons—

Shall the daughters—

Shall the wives follow in their steps, since great Georgia takes their all, the labor of these men, and gives nothing in return?

Boast not of our roads to-day. Each foot of them has been built at frightful cost—the sorrow and suffering of women and children, and the humiliating degradation of men. Rather should we be ashamed.

TO BUILD ROADS IS WISE.

But to make criminals in order to build roads is madness. And to crush men, women and children in the building is not to be endured.

Neither is necessary.

Roads can be built, and men made in the building. Elsewhere it is being done.

It can and will be done in Georgia.

You will help.

Speak to your representatives in the House and in the Senate.

Ask them to support those measures that will enable our officials to free us from our disgrace.

It is due to lack of thought, and not to criminally heartless intent; men in authority do not willfully degrade and hurt their fellow creatures.

In Christ's name forget politics! Stop and think!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cuttys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Ilead, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photoplay in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Bolfeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memoralizing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the candidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Boy Washes Hands; They Catch Afire

CHICAGO, June 24.—Vernon Balch, 8 years old, son of Oscar Balch, 611 North Kenilwood Avenue, Oak Park, was burned on the hands and arms when a paint-removing solution with which he was washing his hands become ignited by friction.

The boy's father, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was also burned on the hands and arms.

$15,000,000 in Gifts at Kaiser's Jubilee

BERLIN, June 24.—It is calculated that the public and private subscriptions to charitable and other public purposes on the occasion of the Kaiser's jubilee amounted to $15,000,000.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R. will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, DuPont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

600 or 700 Georgia Veterans to Attend.

Assurance that sufficient money had been appropriated to entertain every veteran who desires to attend the Gettysburg reunion was received by Governor Brown Tuesday morning in a telegram from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission.

At first it was thought that only 500 veterans from Georgia could be entertained, but the telegram means as many as can attend will be cared for.

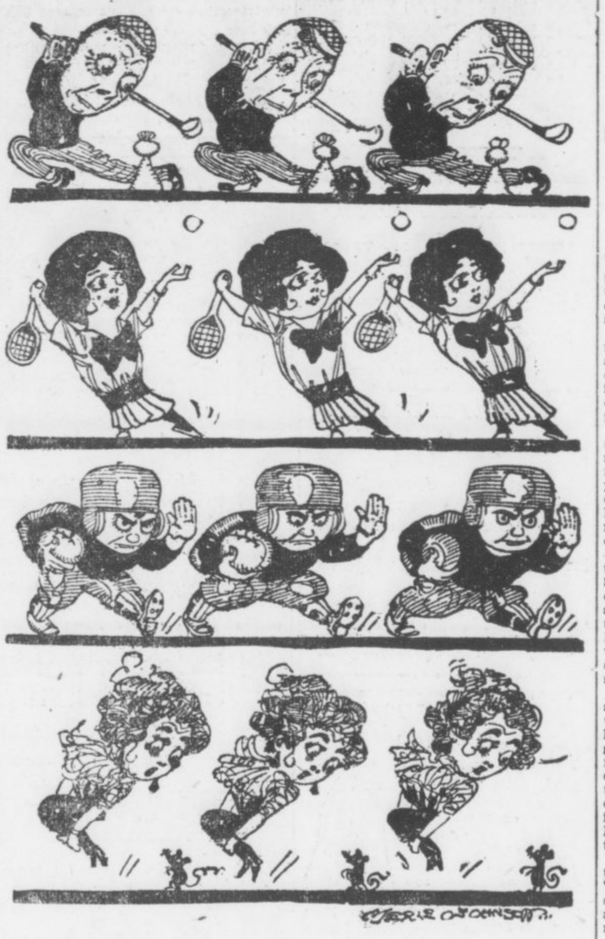
General A. J. West, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the Georgia delegation. He has been active in the effort to work up a full attendance. From 600 and 700 Confederate veterans from Georgia will make the trip. Many Georgia Federal veterans also have signified their intention of attending.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he showed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

FRESH BALLET THEMES ARE FOUND IN SPORTS



Some possible interpretations. Vaslav Nijinski, premier Russian danseuse, declares that each age has its dance, and that the national sports of each country will lend themselves to stage adaptation. The artist depicts what may be shortly expected here if this statement is true.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Vaslav Nijinski, which is a name and not an epithet, thank you, is to stand for a new epoch in the dance. Nijinski is the foremost of the Russian dancers, who is able to get more expression and art from the muscles of the great toe than most masters can command from a whole ballet.

Wherefore the Russian speaks with authority, and when that authority says that each age has its dance and that the dance takes its color and its action from the real doings of the particular age, you may be sure that you are getting no idle chatter from a mere dreamer. It is expert testimony.

According to Nijinski the dancer must represent something. The type must be distinctive of something that age is doing off the stage.

Thus, there is to come the Rockefeller ballet, with the clammy financial part of the period in the far background along with vivisection and the discovery of new and strange germs. Rockefeller plays golf, so the ballet will present Rockefeller by getting golfy. It is the Nijinski idea that a chorus of fairies wearing golf togs, pursued by Cupid caddies carrying sixty pounds of plumbers' tools that are essential to make one happy while on the links, will justly represent the era of Jawn D.

They are to balance airily as though about to drive into the top gallery, swing in rhythmic cadence and poise as though peering over the long green to see where in thunder the ball anded. Then they are to jog toward the setting sun in fairy troop and go though the various other antics that beset one who is possessed of the devil of golf.

Further drawing upon sport for inspiration, the great Russian artist sees in tennis an outlet for the spirit of the dance. The tennis court at the White House where Theodore Roosevelt used to disport himself, along with Jimmy Garfield, Lawrence Murphy and other patriots who could swing the racket, affords the most just field for the study of the possibilities of the departure. White trousers and skirts will take the places of the tights. The arms only will be bare. The feet will wear tennis shoes. A net, which, mayhap, may be stretched between the players and the audience in case the dance is bad, will be a part of the stage property.

Before and behind this net the new order will have the girlies and chorus men dancing and whirling, so that the spectator may imagine that the score, instead of being in B flat, is 15 love.

Nor would the artiste stop with tennis. The football field offers a chance to mark the stage off with lines like the sidewalks whereon the children play hopscotch and the dancers, arrayed in padded clothing, shaggy hair, will dash madly about, trying to put their feet upon the faces of their neighbors and to kick, in the name of aesthetic art, the shins of those in the immediate vicinity.

To this, says Nijinski, we are coming.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

Hetty Green's Home Is Taxed at $112,000

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company I.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and allenists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

The Social World

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crowninshield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larendon at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chapter and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Porch Party for Visitors.

Mr. Thomas Branch will give a porch party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Anna Willingham's guest, Miss Annie Tyler, of Sandersville, Ga.

Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Saturday, June 28, is shower day for Wesley Memorial Hospital, and donations will be received by a committee of ladies from the Woman's Auxiliary. Goods may be sent direct to the hospital and cash sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 501 South Pryor Street.

Bible Class to Picnic.

Bible Class No. 2 of the Second Baptist Church will have its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 25, at the cement pavilion at Grant Park. Dr. White will make an address, as will also Superintendent Spalding.

Party for Visitors.

Miss Estelle Weaver entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Thursday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses LaGrange Cothran and Katherine Graves, of Rome.

Miss Helen Jones Entertains.

The largest affair of Tuesday afternoon was a tea given by Miss Helen Jones in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va. Young girls and young men were entertained.

Guests were received in the drawing room, where there were decorations of pink and white sweetpeas and roses with wild flowers. The tea table was adorned with a basket of daisies, surrounded by pink unshaded tapers and minor details in pink. Misses Margaret McCarty and Eleanor Macey served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Adam Jones, Misses Nellie Kiser Stewart, Clifford West, Margaret Northen, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, San Antonio, Texas; Mignon McCarty and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Miss Jones wore white charmeuse satin with draperies in blue chiffon. Miss Buckner wore pink chiffon with panniers made over pink satin. Mrs. Jones wore white embroidered French mull.

An orchestra played through the calling hours. The affair was one of the happiest events of the week.

Stillman-Porter Wedding.

Miss Margaret Porter and Dr. Lowe Stillman were married Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in Columbia Avenue. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue crepe poplin with a small blue hat and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Dr. and Mrs. Stillman went for an automobile trip through South Georgia. They will go to housekeeping at 285 East Fourth Street.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain informally at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Martin Dunbar's guests, Misses Thelma Dargan, of Jacksonville, and Maude Miller, of St. Louis. The affair will be one of a series of parties tendered the visitors.

Series of Parties.

Misses Katherine Graves and LaGrange Cothran, of Rome, who have been visiting Miss Louise Cooper for the past week, are having many parties given in their honor. Miss Estelle Weaver gave a matinee party Tuesday. Miss Margaret Traylor gave a bridge Wednesday afternoon. Miss Josephine Stoney will entertain at a luncheon Thursday. Miss Katherine Darby will give a dance Thursday evening, and Mrs. Paul Baker will entertain Friday.

Miss Cothran will return home Thursday. Miss Graves will leave Saturday.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Sidney Hoberton gave an informal luncheon Tuesday for Miss Martha Francis, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Douthit will take place Saturday evening. Six girls were her guests.

MARY MANNERING OBSTINATE; SUED

Almost Runs Down Man and Boy in Auto, Then Refuses to Make Apology.

DETROIT, MICH., June 24.—Because she refused to apologize for her alleged carelessness in jeopardizing the lives of a representative of a Chicago packing concern and the latter's 8-year-old son, Mary Mannering Wadsworth, actress and wife of Frederick E. Wadsworth, a Grosse Point millionaire, must appear in court to face charges of violating traffic ordinances.

Mrs. Wadsworth was driving her motor car through a crowded downtown street, when the complainant and his son crossed in front of her machine to escape being run down by two heavy trucks. The complainant declares that the auto brushed his and his son's bodies.

He called up the Wadsworth residence last night and demanded an apology. Mr. Wadsworth is said to have answered the telephone and declared his wife would not make amends for her action. The complainant declared he would prosecute Miss Mannering and was invited to proceed with the action, which he did.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Thomson Names One Body to Work Up Support and Another to Determine Need.

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constitutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they cain gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Convict Escapes at Tybee.

SAVANNAH.—Three convicts engaged in work on the Inlet road at the south end of Tybee Island made a dash for liberty, giving the guests, police force and residents at the resort an exciting man hunt. Two of the convicts were captured after one had been shot. The third swam Horsepen Creek and escaped.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibtion at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

SLEUTHS PROBING GEORGIA LYNCHING

AMERICUS, June 24.—Detectives are investigating the lynching of Will Redding, the negro who shot Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, Saturday night This became manifest to-day as the detectives were especially busy collecting data. Inquiry here affords no information as to who sent the detectives to the city. They were not brought here by local authorities.

Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of the Sumter Superior Court, will return from Columbus to-night. He said when he left for Columbus upon his return he would have a thorough investigation of the lynching made. If the evidence is sufficient Judge Littlejohn said he would call a special session of the Grand Jury at once to deal with the lynchers.

A strong public sentiment against the lynching has developed. At first this was not so generally manifest, but since the passing of resolutions by all of the churches on Sunday condemning the lynching the sentiment has crystallized almost in unanimous fashion in favor of a session of the Grand Jury to investigate the matter.

On account of the fact that the lynchers wore no masks and were entirely open in their procedure, an investigation of the affair by the Grand Jury would likely lead to sensational developments. Practically everyone in the mob is known here, if those who know will give evidence.

Though he is still in a critical condition, Chief Barrow is resting as well as could be expected, according to the statement issued to-day by his physician. A favorable symptom is the freedom from fever and the fact that the patient has great will power and nerve control, which may save his life in spite of his advanced age. He is 72 years old.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible,with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up"-call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Illinois Suffrage Law Thought Invalid

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 24.—Belief that Attorney General Lucey had declared the Illinois woman suffrage bill unconstitutional in the opinion he sent to Governor Dunne to-day was strengthened this afternoon when the Governor, in conference with William L. O'Connell, of Chicago, and others, deserted his offices for the Executive Mansion and denied himself to all callers.

Out-of-the-Ordinary Mid-Summer Hats
At $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00

We use out-of-the-ordinary advisedly. They are, beautifully.

Through our connection with the shop of Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th Street, New York, we keep in closest touch with millinery styles as they appear in the great metropolis.

We are apprised of the new things at once, and then our splendid corps of milliners sets to work—the result is $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats that differ from those about town. But you must see just how they do differ.

Right now, and there are fresh ones every day—literally, every day—there are a number of particularly dainty white and light colored hats of hemp and peanut straw, with feathers and wings placed at "dangerous" angles, with crowns wreathed with flowers, with crowns covered with white maline. One at $5.00 of notable charm has a crown wrapped with white brocade silk, a bow of the same silk stands upright in the back—the unusual part is the way the silk is edged with maline. It is $5.00. But this is but one of many. See them all.

You, too, will say the prettiest $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats are at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's.

Wanted Silks With Prices Cut to Thirds and Halves
The Selling Will Start at Nine o'Clock

A Silk Sale to reckon with!

The reasons:

—Qualities are as fine as we can buy in regular season for "regular" selling. They are best at their prices.

—Styles are those chosen because they were choice, distinctive.

And

—Prices are now cut down to a third and a half.

Certainly all the elements that would go to make a Silk Opportunity mark this event. Now, then, to your needs! What are they? A dress, a waist, a skirt, a suit, a coat—it matters little, just read on—

$1.69 For $3 to $4 a Yd. Silks

Yes, $1.69 a yard, for $3.00 and $4.00 crepe meteors and charmeuse, fabrics fashion will favor as fondly in the fall as she has this season. They drape and "cling" more gracefully, perhaps, than any other silks. And you may select from mais, brown, helio, apricot, taupe, Alice and wistaria. All are 44 inches wide.

69c For $1.50 to $2.25 a Yd. Silks

Perhaps the finest values of the sale are among these. We miss our guess if the crowds are not thick around them. There are 36-inch chiffon taffetas in plain and two-toned shades—light blue, green, mais, yellow, tan, lilac and blue, tan and blue, green and rose, black and green; there are bordered foulards; there are figured chiffons, small designs in exquisite shades, white eoliennes, marquisettes, colors for evening dresses—all 44 inches wide and none was less than $1.50 a yard!

79c For $1 a Yd. Wash Silks

For wash silks that seem to grow in popular favor as the weather grows warmer. The silk shirt—for men as well as for women—is the cool shirt. And these silks are the dependable kinds that are true to their name--wash silks. Plain and corded, white and black, white and helio, white and navy, white and gray. Stripes of various widths, 33 inches wide.

49c For 85c and $1 Yd. Foulards

The quality is told by the names they bear—but the patterns! Choosing a dress will be a delight, for here is variety—there are black and white stripes, there are little cubes and flowers and dots thrown across surfaces of brown, tan, navy, gray, wistaria and heliotrope. No question, one to your liking. 23 and 24 inches wide.

A Greater-Than-Ever Remnant Day in the Wash Goods
At Nine o'Clock

The Wash Goods buyer's return from New York with great quantities of new merchandise meant a crusade against short lengths—now they are gathered, every kind, making up the largest and finest quantity of remnants we have offered this season.

To-morrow at nine o'clock we will let you at them!

It will be a splendid time to select waists, skirts, dresses and underwear for yourself and children. Hardly a wanted wash material is not represented—for they are remnants, you know, and only wanted materials become remnants.

Colored Cottons

A world of ginghams, one kind after another; checks, stripes, plaids, zephyr ginghams, fine imported ginghams, colorings that are fast and as pretty as can be; bordered, figured, striped and plain voiles and marquisettes, crepes, in such great demand, figured and plain shades, soisettes, piques, cotton suitings that look like linen, silk mulls, percales, galateas, kimono crepes, and still the list could be extended to include practically every kind of colored cottons, the light, filmy kinds, the substantial kinds.

Linens

Even table linens are included. Dress linens, the smooth French finish and the rough ramie linens in white and colors, linen lawns, cambrics, crashes, pillow casing, huck toweling, butcher's linen, brown apron linen and crashes.

White Goods

Flaxon, plain and checked and striped, dimities, linens, percales, India linons, batistes, French and Persian lawns, French and English nainsooks, madras figured and striped, dotted swisses, curtain swisses, lingerie cloth, repps, poplins, piques and others.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?"

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed, but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

"Oh, nothing much; just an idea, that's all," replied Long Tom.

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

OF course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance, "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distincktly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty,
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I supposs sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

There was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinately much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such abject fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have nice long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a
city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for
the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered
cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no
more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her
Her husband saw the shattered dish
and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife,
these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we
ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse
work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so
is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to been a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

* * *

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

* * *

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24.—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery clug that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the better of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

* * *

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

* * *

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

* * *

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

* * *

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

* * *

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

* * *

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

* * *

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

* * *

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

* * *

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

* * *

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

* * *

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD. Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

* * *

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

* * *

HOW CAN YOU BLAME THE ball player for taking the same view of the man in the stand as the magnate?

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-3, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Easy for Thornton.

The surprise of the day was the match between Abe Leverich and E. S. Mansfield. The first set had not gone far before Leverich began showing his power. Leverich won in straight sets.

ROSS BEATS CLARK.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24.—Hugh Ross won a hard fought ten-round bout here last night from Kid Clark, of Columbus.

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if he said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

How dear to my heart is the snow of last winter!
How cool and refreshing the loud, shrieking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter

COOMBS TO QUIT GAME; ILLNESS BRINGS ON FAT

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—That he probably will be unable to pitch again this season was admitted today by Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics. The pitcher, who is ill at his Atlantic City home, is taking on weight at the rate of a pound a day, which is not considered favorable by his physicians. Connie Mack and John Shibe visited Coombs a few days ago and to them he admitted his condition.

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.
Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—The market has been very quiet to-day, trading light, but ruled very steady, with little cotton for sale. The demand has been generally good. Liverpool reported a buyer, also some Southern buying spot people bought July on all soft spots.

* * *

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

* * *

* * *

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

* * *

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought a block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Generally fair weather will continue to-night and Wednesday in the Gulf States, New England and the interior of New York. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be overcast with local showers and thunderstorms.

Moderately warm weather will prevail over the eastern half of the country during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Following is the general forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Cloudy and warm; probably light showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina and South Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Fair in northwest, showers in the peninsula to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska—Unsettled, with probably showers.

South Dakota and North Dakota—Cloudy to cooler.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mean temperatures were from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Texas, where there was a deficiency of from 1 to 3 degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over eastern Tennessee. Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 74 to 82 over the eastern, from 80 to 82 over the central and from 78 to 82 over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 74 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 82 degrees, occurred at a number of stations located in all portions of the cotton-growing States.

Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region, except that in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas, scattered localities in Louisiana, eastern and southern Mississippi, western Alabama and parts of southern Georgia there was no rain. The precipitation was unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Texas. The greatest weekly amount, 25.20 inches, occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The cotton seed oil market was higher to-day on active covering by refiners in old crop deliveries and speculative buying of later months. There was good profit-taking on the advance, which resulted in a setback of a couple of points. Strength in lard was also a stimulating factor.

SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Spot Houses Support Old Crops, While Wall Street Sells—Sentiment Bearish.

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again centered their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

During the late forenoon the market was quiet, but ruled steady. The buying continued general, mainly on Cordill's report on Georgia, which was somewhat mixed and had a stimulating eeffet, as his reports up to this time of the season has been very favorable. Liverpool and the South were reported good buyers.

On the other hand, the Government weekly weather report was construed as bearish, resulting in active selling by Wall Street and the uptown crowd. There is a disposition on the part of local traders to sell the market short on the favorable conditions that have existed up to this time, but many operators hesitate in the face of the contined good demand for spots.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 1 point off to 3 points higher than the final quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The weather map shows very favorable conditions. Partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, rather general over the Atlantics, with some good rains in the Carolinas; even temperatures, warm nights, good growing weather. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair weather, with scattered thundershowers; range of temperature stationary.

Liverpool came in rather poor, but shows larger spots sales; total 8,000, at 2 points lower quotations. Political news is that Bulgaria refuses further peace negotiations and that financial war has been started on the Continent by France refusing loans.

The market here advanced from the start, mainly on the report on Georgia by Mr. Cordill, which does not show the improvement that was expected. Under the circumstances, it is thought that the July Bureau report can at the outside give 1 to 2 points' improvement for the belt, which would be a condition between 80 and 81, and as the acreage increase, owing to the acreage correction made by Washington in May, is expected to be between 1 and 2 per cent, it is thought that the July bureau may again make a bullish impression on the trade.

Selling was therefore rather light today, the more so as a bullish visible statement is expected for Friday. Trading was quiet, with prices steady around 11.53 for December.

WILSON'S MESSAGE SENDS STOCKS UP

Encouraging Crop Accounts Also Stimulating Factor—Speculative Situation Stronger.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend, Americans being higher there.

The charpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅛, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1¼; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ¾; Northern Pacific, ⅞; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅞; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅜.

The curb was steady.

Trading was low in the last hour and price changes for the most part were only slightly changed from the midday level.

Amalgamated Copper, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chino and Northern Pacific were fractionally under the midday level, but ranged above the low quotations for the morning. Union Pacific sold around 145⅝ for a net gain of 2½ on the day. Steel sold at 56¼ for a net gain of 1⅜. Reading crossed 158 for a gain of 1⅜ on the day.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged; other bonds dull.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Conflicting Crop Advices and Bad Cable News Cause General Buying.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....97 @99½
Corn—No. 2 ....60½
Oats—No. 2 ....38½@39

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Closing prices for grain showed advances all around ¼@½c for wheat, ⅜ @½c for corn and ⅛@⅝c for oats. The strength shown at Minneapolis and the buying of July there by one of the larger millers was the bullish influence at Chicago toward the close of the day.

There are many uncertainties surrounding the crop situation in the Northwest and there are also many uncertainties surrounding the harvesting of the winter wheat crop. For these reasons the average speculator the average speculator is feeling his way rather than making large commitments.

Provisions showed but little change for week.

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS BAD.

CHICAGO, June 24.—W. B. Snow wires from Redfield, S. Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!

Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?
How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"
Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?
The proper way to make a double play at second?
How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?
Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?
The proper way to field a ground ball?
How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?
The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?
Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?
All these questions and many more are answered in

$100,000 PAID ON PAINTER'S LIFE POLICIES

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painter's Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The warring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation-wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

Held Under Bond for Concealing Property

SAVANNAH, June 24.—P. A. Mack, a Sylvania merchant and Screven County farmer, held under bond charged with concealing assets from the trustee in bankruptcy, has been given a hearing before United States Commissioner Cooper Morcock.

Merchandise alleged to have been removed from Mack's store and hidden in warehouses, barns, stable lofts and cane fields has been recovered. Mack claims that no goods were taken away or hidden after J. W. Overstreet was appointed trustee.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Almee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

Boy Scouts Start on 1,000-Mile Relay Run

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning President Wilson leaned forward from the portico of the White House and handed a small tube to a boy attired in running clothes who dashed off northward. The boy was Frank Reed, the perfect Boy Scout, who had been selected as the first of the Scouts to relay the President's message of congratulation to Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago.

Running night and day, 1,000 Boy Scouts hope to deliver the message within less than four days.

Special Court Term For Vice War Trials

MACON, June 24.—A special session of the Superior Court will be held during two weeks beginning June 30 for the trial of 70 liquor dealers charged with violating the prohibition law; twelve clubs similarly indicted, 35 women accused of operating disorderly houses, and fifteen property owners, charged with renting houses for immoral purposes.

Jesse C. Harris, attorney, who was indicted for perjury in connection with the alleged election frauds last year, will be called to trial on July 2.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have nto had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the end of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory, see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"—to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoline add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a steve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the high-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not be afraid to use these remedies, and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have one-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company hs leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization, whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present throughtown route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the north east corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those whiich have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Pe'ersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

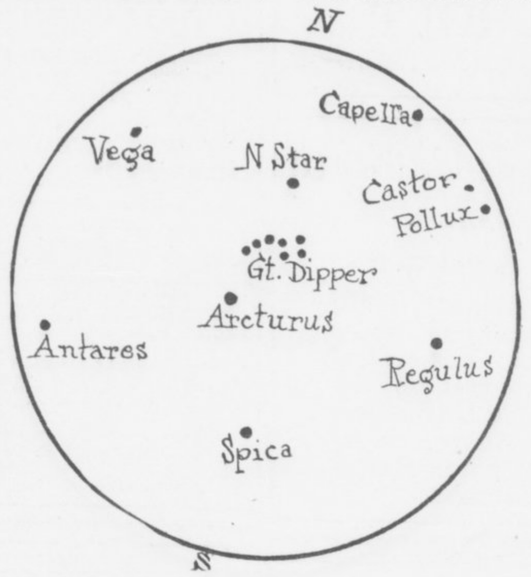
Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, perhaps the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.



Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie; the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, parroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

$100,000 OF PAINTER'S POLICIES PAID

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painter's Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The warring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Following are contributions which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

Judge Newman 70; Doesn't Stop Work

The celebration of his seventieth birthday did not make Judge William T. Newman, of the United States District Court, pause on his work Monday. Had not a number of telegrams of congratulation come to the court room, few would have known that the distinguished jurist had just reached the Biblical threescore and ten years.

Judge Newman has been a resident of Atlanta since the war. He was City Attorney in the seventies, and was made a Federal judge during the administration of President Cleveland.

Dies as He Phones Physician for Wife

W. B. Henson, of 28 Clark Street, Monday went to his telephone to call a physician to his sick wife. A few minutes later he was found lying dead in an adjoining room.

Seemingly he was in the best of health. He just had returned from a pleasure trip to Gainesville.

W.C.T.U. PLAN DEFEAT OF ANDERSON BY PRAYER

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were flooded with letters protesting against Anderson's candidacy and denouncing the Savannah man as a foe of prohibition and an ally of the liquor interests.

Prayers will be one of the weapons in the fight, women all over the State joining in pleas to Providence to prevent the election of Anderson.

Judge Allen is Anderson's most formidable opponent and has vigorously denied that his rival had the fight won. What effect the women's attack will have is problematical, but it means that the opening session of the Senate to-morrow will be no tame affair.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. Now, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the late prohibition movement, and to thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything, for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer, and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee.

'Continued Sultry Weather' Best That Forecaster Offers

Not even a cloud interposed itself between the sun and the city of Atlanta Tuesday, and the result was a sultry and sweltering day. Although the temperature was only 88 at 12 o'clock and 89 an hour later, it seemed much hotter.

The outlook for cooler weather, based on a fall in the maximum temperature Monday, signally failed to materialize Tuesday. The 89 maximum mark of the day before was exceeded shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday, and 30 minutes later the mercury was hesitating less than one-tenth of a degree below 90.

At 7 o'clock Tuesday morning the temperature was 72. An hour later it was 81. At 10 o'clock the 84 mark was attained. At 11 o'clock it was 86, and then came the 88 and 89 marks with the mercury still rising.

Festival Concerts Planned for Every Sunday in Future

Officers were elected and a special committee named to confer with the Auditorium Committee of the City Council looking to less interruption of the Sunday concerts, at an annual meeting of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Monday afternoon.

The Auditorium Committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will seek to remedy the condition whereby Sunday concerts often are canceled because of poultry shows, conventions and other auditorium affairs. A determined effort will be made to have concerts every Sunday.

Indian Teacher to Be Buried by Army

The funeral of Thomas Jefferson, an aged inmate of the Salvation Army Industrial Home, who died Sunday night following injuries received last Thursday from being struck by an automobile, will take place at Westview Cemetery at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Jefferson, for eighteen years a teacher on an Indian reservation, had been an inmate of the home for about two months. He was 70 years old.

All the men living at the home will attend the funeral, and the pallbearers will be selected from them. The regular Salvation Army service will be held over the grave and the band will play "Home, Sweet Home."

Committee Meets to Fix Convention Date

W. A. Wimbish, chairman of the committee appointed by President Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, to fix a date for the State convention to discuss the disposal of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has called a meeting of his committee for Tuesday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

In addition to fixing the date of the convention, which probably will be early in July, the committee probably will arrange the basis of representation for the gathering. It is proposed to have delegates here from every county, as well as representatives of various lines of industry.

Seeress Disappears With Macon Jewels

MACON, June 24.—Madame Thelma, who has been in Macon for several months, advertising and practicing as a fortune teller and seeress, has suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. Jewels and other valuables of patrons worth several thousand dollars are also missing. She told her customers to let her sleep over their jewels for two nights and she would be better able to tell their fortunes.

Private detectives have been employed to locate the woman, with the view of prosecuting unless she returns the valuables.

Little Miss Lobbies For Father

Burwell Banks on His Daughter

Mascot in Race for Speakership

Lyra Reid Burwell, 3 years old, and her father, William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, to whom he will owe a large measure of his success if he wins speakehship of Georgia House.

"You Are Going to Vote for My Daddy, Aren't You?" She Says, and It's Hard to Resist.

Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, who is a candidate for Speaker of the House, believes in mascots.

Also, it is why he brings her down every day to keep house for him, while he buttonholes visitors and runs down into the lobby now and then to see what the enemy is up to.

Little Miss Burwell is just three and a half years of age, but already she has developed a keen political intelligence.

She knows her papa needs to jolly along his friends and keep them interested in his cause nowadays, and she governs herself accordingly.

She is an exceedingly bright little lady, and her powers of conversation are marked for her rather youthful estate.

She can say, and does, in the most winsome of manners, "You are going to vote for my daddy, aren't you, mister?" to every visitor who seems worth cultivating.

Few, so far, have been able to resist her.

If every promise she has exacted stays put, the gentleman from Hancock will win the Speakership, in a walk, and will owe much of his victory to his charming little daughter, moreover.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quincey, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

BOTH SIDES CALLED IN CONFERENCE BY JUDGE; TRIAL SET FOR JULY 28

Dorsey, Beavers and Lanford Summoned to Appear June 30 With All Affidavits They Have Secured Relative to the Phagan Slaying Case.

Just before the conference with both sides in the Frank case started Judge Roan intimated strongly that he would set the case for July 14 or July 28 and hold it in some more commodious court room than the one in which he sits on the fourth floor of the Thrower building. Judge Roan's personal inclination leans to a date in July, and it is not likely that the State or defense will object to acceding to his wishes.

The date was definitely fixed for July 28 at the conference.

The first important legal move by the defense in the battle for the life and freedom of Leo Frank, accused of the strangling of Mary Phagan, was made Tuesday in the issuance of subpenas duces tecum for the prime movers in the prosecution of the factory superintendent.

The following have been subpenaed to appear:

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, who will prosecute the prisoner.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who took an active part in the collection of evidence.

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, to whom is generally given credit for the admissions gained from Conley.

All other city detectives who have worked on the case.

All of them are ordered to produce any affidavits they may have bearing on the case in court June 30, indicating that the defense will be prepared to go on with the trial at that time.

Judge Roan, however, had called a conference of the attorneys on both sides of the case for 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when he announced that he would set the date definitely after the attorneys had been given an opportunity to say whether or not their cases would be in shape to present if the trial were called the last of this month.

Plan to Use Same Evidence.

The startling move on the part of the defense was taken to mean that Frank's lawyers propose to use to free their client the very evidence the detectives and Solicitor General have collected to send him to the gallows.

The most significant demand is made upon Chief Beavers, who is commanded to bring into court the famed series of affidavits made by the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. It is evident that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who are conducting the defense, intend to tear the contradictory stories of the negro to tatters and make his statements appear so utterly ridiculous and improbable that the jury not only will refuse to accept them, but will interpret them as an effort of Conley to get from under the blame for a crime that he committed himself.

Chief Beavers is asked to bring into court the written statement made by Conley May 18 in the presence of Detective John R. Black and Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott; also the affidavit sworn to by Conley before G. C. Febuary in the presence of Chief Lanford and Detectives Black and Scott May 24, the affidavit made by Conley May 28, the affidavit made by the negro May 29 in the presence of Lanford, Campbell and Scott and all other written statements of the negro in the possession or control of the Chief.

Girls Also Are Called.

Chief Beavers is asked, in addition, to bring all the statements of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman; Monteen Stover, the girl who testified that Frank was not in his office when she went for her money; W. M. Matthews, and Miss Grace Hicks, the girl who first identified the dead body as that of Mary Phagan.

The defense has persistently ridiculed the stories of Jim Conley and characterized them as cunning fabrications to shift the blame on Frank's shoulders.

With the other affidavits, which for the most part are given credence by the defense, the attempt will be merely to show that the evidence which the prosecution holds to point toward the guilt of Frank only more firmly fixes it upon the shoulders of the negro sweeper, and that the State from time to time has shifted the ground on which it based its theory that Frank was guilty.

Hooper Calls Move a Trick.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, branded the move of the defense as a thinly veiled trick to impeach the testimony of the witnesses called by the State, and said that it was not at all unlikely that the subpenaes would be resisted.

He intimated his belief that it was the intention of the defense to use the affidavits as a comparison with the testimony of the affiants when took the stand in an effort to pick out every discrepancy and thus seek to discredit the witnesses.

Before the conference between Judge Roan and the attorneys on the opposing sides began in the afternoon, the judge announced that he would be the one who would set the date for the trial, after consulting the convenience of the attorneys.

He said that he desired to preclude the possibility that the case would be called for June 30 and the witnesses summoned and then one or another of the attorneys ask for a postponement. He expressed it as his purpose to carry the case through to its completion once it was started.

The judge said that he did not believe it right, in view of the warm weather, to call an umber of witnesses and then delay the case further. He said that after the attorneys on the two sides had been heard he would set the date himself.

Arnold Not Decided.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, becaus of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

That Leo M. Frank will go at once on trial for his life next Monday when he is brought before the court on the charge of strangling little Mary Phagan was the strong probability discussed in court circles Tuesday.

The prosecution has announced that its case has been practically complete for days. The defense has said that all its vital witnesses have been found. There has been no intimation that a continuance will be asked unless it be for some contingency as the illness of Frank or of an important witness.

The defense has been non-committal. The attorneys have not said that they would ask for a postponement. They also have refused to say that they would not seek a delay.

Rosser Reticent.

Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, has carefully avoided answering the direct question whether he would be ready for trial on that day. Reuben R. Arnold, associated with him, said the case was complete, but he, too, evaded a statement as to whether they would consent for the trial to begin next week.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is making his preparations for the trial on the supposition that the defense will be ready, and he will urge before the court that the case be tried on the date set. He summoned the first witnesses Monday and Tuesday, and when court opens next Monday he will have the corridors filled with persons who will testify against Frank. His preparations could not be more complete if he had received an announcement from the defense that no continuance would be asked.

Both the prosecution and the defense will have at least twelve vital witnesses. The inability of one to attend the trial, unless by death or removal from the jurisdiction of the court, would necessitate a continuance until this witness could attend the trial.

Arnold's Stand.

Attorney Arnold openly admitted that if one of his important witnesses was not able to appear in Frank's behalf when the case was called, he would move for a continuance and would not consider going to trial on the chance of the witness appearing later.

J. M. Gantt, one of the first to be arrested as a suspect, will be one of the most important witnesses for the State.

Developments since he testified at the Coroner's inquest, it is understood, have made his evidence of the utmost importance. He was one of the few witnesses to go before the Grand Jury when Frank was indicted, and he was closely questioned by the Solicitor Monday afternoon when he finished questioning Conley. It is said that evidence that could have been given by him in the examinations before the Conley affidavit was made, but was considered of no relative importance then, is now of vital interest to the State and he will be one of the star witnesses.

Jury Panel Drawn.

SPOONERS HALT BOAT LINE.

OSSINING, N. Y., June 24.—As a result of more love-making on the beach near here, the boat line between this town and the beach has been abandoned. Women bathers must walk.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 4-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SLAYING SUSPECT TRAPPED IN LIES

DUBLIN, June 24.—Jim Lewis, one of fourteen negroes arrested on suspicion in connection with the mysterious double murder of T. J. Hewell and his aged wife, has told several different tales as to his whereabouts Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday. All of his assertions that the officers have had time to run down have proven false.

When arrested at Scott, a few small bloodstains were plainly visible on his overalls, but on being taken out of the calaboose to be brought to this city the stains were just barely discernable, as Lewis had evidently been rubbing them so as to obliterate them as much as possible.

Investigation is still going on, and other arrests may follow.

Although officers have refused to make known the names of the other suspects, it has been learned that three arrested near Long Branch were Sam Irwin, Tom Green and one known as "Little Joe."

Jim Kellam, one of the negroes arrested Sunday, is still in custody, but the other two have been released, as the evidence against them was not strong enough to warrant their being held.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Hewell have been sent to Griffin for interment this afternoon.

The Coroner's jury held another star chamber session last night, examing six witnesses. Another session will be held to-morrow night.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Drivers Who Ran Down Photographer and Newsie Are Out on Bonds.

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Young Nickers was run down near the Grady Monument by a postoffice auto truck.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.
Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.
India, 358,816,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.
Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.
Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.
Sugar beets, Belgium 84.7 per cent.
Denmark, 102.3 per cent.
France, 94.36 per cent.
Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

WILSON MONEY TALK INDORSED BY BANKERS

At a meeting of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, held in their offices on Tuesday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, we have read with interest and approval the President's message to Congress, asking for the passage of some kind of remedial currency legislation for the relief of the banking and commercial interests of the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, First that we indorse heartily the spirit and purpose of said message.

Resolved, further, That it is the belief of the banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, representing the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests of Atlanta and the prosperous Southeast, that a satisfactory bill for the reform of banking and currency laws should be passed at this session of Congress.

Resolved, further, That we believe that the combined wisdom of the President, the House and the Senate, after hearing from the banking, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country, can and will evolve a currency bill that will be satisfactory to the banks and beneficial to the nation.

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

11,000 Cincinnati Workers on Strike

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Eleven thousand garment workers to-day obeyed the order to strike, and work in the majority of factories was completely tied up.

Workers demand 48 hours per week. Operators offer a 50-hour week. Former work was 54 hours.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—There was no sign of a break to-day in the deadlock of the ice manufacturers and their striking drivers, helpers, engineers and firemen. Hotter weather caused much suffering.

Rome Lawyer Sued For Total Divorce

ROME, June 24.—Accused of cruel treatment by his wife, J. Sante Crawford, well-known attorney, court stenographer and politician, to-day was sued for total divorce by his wife, who was a Miss McClaine. Mrs. Crawford alleges cruel treatment in her petition.

Both parties are well known, and each is prominently connected throughout the State. Crawford's family lived for years in Polk County, and his wife has relatives in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Mrs. Crawford is a very handsome woman.

The Crawfords have one child, a boy 10 years of age.

Nicholson Declines Post in Portugal

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson's ambassadorial troubles were augmented to-day when he was forced to accept the declination of Meredith Nicholson to serve as Minister to Portugal. Nicholson informed the President that family matters precluded his acceptance.

According to Secretary of State Bryan, an effort is now being made to place Mr. Nicholson in some other European diplomatic post.

Wilsons Exchange Anniversary Gifts

The President presented his wife with a handsome pearl necklace containing 28 jewels.

The occasion of the exchange of gifts was the fact that the day is the twenty-eighth anniversary of their marriage.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,

"Yours,

"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, for President of the Senate."

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight tought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to go to a finish between Representative Burwell, of Hancock, and Representative Hardeman, of Jackson.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

BULGARIANS AND SERVIANS IN BATTLE

Russia Orders Peace When Sixty Thousand of Ferdinand's Soldiers Oppose Allies.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Mayor Tells on What Conditions He Will Come to Terms—Work Continued by Company.

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council is considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $600,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

Mrs. Wilson Likely To Hurry Vacation

Pastors Smite the Pellet With Churchly Zeal But Majors Draft None From Ministerial League

"Washington Street Howlers" Defeat Ridley's 'Hinky-Dinks,' Who Protest Game.

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball, which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches, deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grape-juice.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

LEADERS STIFLE M'REYNOLDS QUIZ

Demand for Facts in Diggs-Caminetti White Slave Case Dies in House.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—There will be no investigation of Attorney General McReynolds' action in delaying the trial of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, according to information obtained to-day from one of the most influential Democratic leaders of the House. Resolutions calling upon McReynolds for the correspondence that passed between him and others in the case and seeking an investigation never will be allowed to see the light.

"I don't see how we can allow such an investigation to be made," said this leader, "unless we seem to discredit the whole party."

This observation was made after it had become known that the White House would not use its "official influence" to prevent a congressional investigation.

Owing to the parliamentary situation in the House, the Democratic leaders will be able not only to shut off all resolutions, but they will be able to prevent speeches being made on the subject.

White House Officials Silent on the Issue.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Silence hung over the White House to-day when the question of the Caminetti case was broached. Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the President, declined to discuss the case except to caution his questioner to "wait for developments."

Attorney General McReynolds, after the Cabinet meeting, greeted the newspaper men with: "I must positively decline to talk."

Chairman Clayton, of the House Judiciary Committee, informed Representative Kahn, of California, author of the Caminetti-Diggs inquiry resolutions, that he will hold a hearing Thursday, at which time Kahn, or any other Republican who desires, can present reasons in favor of an inquiry. Chairman Clayton conferred with Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, who is said to oppose an investigation.

Church and Civic Bodies Uphold McNab.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 24.—Church and civic bodies of Sacramento to-day went on record as condemning the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering the postponement of the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti on charges of violating the white slave law.

Resolutions went to President Wilson asking him to order the trial to proceed, and asking that District Attorney McNab's resignation be not accepted. Fifteen women's organizations uphold McNab.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

Carmack belongs to one of the most prominent families in Phenix City.

POPE TO SUMMON CARDINAL FARLEY

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva in intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome.

Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

Mrs. Stetson Heretic, Scientist Declares

BOSTON, June 24.—Alfred Farlow, chairman of the publication committee of the Christian Science Church, in reply to a claim of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, of New York, that she is the head of the church and the "true authority on the teachings of Mrs. Eddy," declared Mrs. Stetson is not even a member of the church.

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureaus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be compelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various sums available for each.

King George Greets Poincaire; Guarded Against Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

Man Fined for Row On Wife's Testimony

As the result of a fight precipitated Saturday, when Rudolph Otter found his wife in the room of Charles Olsen at 15 Houston Street, where the two-boarded, Otter was fined $15.75 by Judge Broyles Tuesday for disturbing the peace.

Mrs. Otter testified she and two other women were visiting Olsen, who was ill. Otter entered and started for Olsen, who picked up a water pitcher and struck his assailant on the head. The pitcher glanced and smashed against Mrs. Otter. She was cut about the face.

Chaingangs in Georgia

"You have turned justice into gall."---Amos vi:12

Six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine souls are in our chaingangs.

At dawn, the striped suits appear, the shackles clank in our city streets and country roads.

Women and children shuddering pass them as they work and sweat under the eyes of armed men until darkness draws near to hide the marks of their infamy.

AGAIN THEY ARE CHAINED TOGETHER.

And like monstrous striped snakes with men for vertebrae and chains for spinal cords, the squads in the gathering gloom squirm, shuffling and clinking their weary way back into camp.

A gang halts before a door. They stand, excepting one. He runs forward, drawing from between them the rattling chain now unlocked. To the ground it drops.

The men enter a long dimly lighted room.

On both sides beds are jammed together forming an aisle. In its center at intervals are boxes or cans, and tubs. Around its length goes another chain.

The men remove their clothes. They cannot get off their shackles. Begins a horrible clanking. The chain is being passed from shackle to shackle linking man to man. Repeatedly it crashes to the floor between them. At last, its ends are bolted to the wall on both sides of the door. They are again one in their wretchedness.

Here and there one drags the chain to a tub and washes. Man after man uses the same foul water.

Then comes food borne on a hand-barrow.

Each man gets his rations.

Seated on his bed, he eats.

Before his face waits the unspeakable box, hideous receptacle for unnamable human filth.

CHAINED TOGETHER, THE MEN LIE DOWN TO SLEEP.

To their mutual misery—to the lash hanging at the door—to the sting of conscience and the agony of memory in the long hours of the night are added the bite of the leg shackle on the naked skin and the clank of the endless chain as they turn and toss trying to rest.

Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men.

But two thousand eight hundred and ninety of the six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine are felony convicts. They are under long sentence.

Among these are two twelve-year-old boys, and two of thirteen.

Three of fourteen, eleven of fifteen, twenty of sixteen.

Thirty of seventeen, eighty-five of eighteen, ninety-one of nineteen.

One hundred and twenty-three of twenty, and one hundred and sixty-three of twenty-one.

Children are out of place in convict camps.

YOU SHOULD NOT CHAIN FIRST OFFENDERS TO HARDENED CRIMINALS.

Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead.

You would not kill the young man who has slipped.

But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper: you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime.

He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living.

When folly weds cruelty, their offspring is this affront to God and man.

From it save the boy.

Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives.

At home? Have they homes? You know not.

You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

WHY? WHAT IS THEIR OFFENSE? THEIR BIRTH.

But their fathers and husbands have committed crimes?

Yes. And in defiling zebra suits and clanking chains they pay.

They build your roads; under the fear of your lash, they work; but their degradation and heart-breaking labor brings no morsel of food to those women and children; their shame does not clothe their wives and babies.

Shall the sons—

Shall the daughters—

Shall the wives follow in their steps, since great Georgia takes their all, the labor of these men, and gives nothing in return?

Boast not of our roads to-day. Each foot of them has been built at frightful cost—the sorrow and suffering of women and children, and the humiliating degradation of men. Rather should we be ashamed.

TO BUILD ROADS IS WISE.

But to make criminals in order to build roads is madness. And to crush men, women and children in the building is not to be endured.

Neither is necessary.

Roads can be built, and men made in the building. Elsewhere it is being done.

It can and will be done in Georgia.

You will help.

Speak to your representatives in the House and in the Senate.

Ask them to support those measures that will enable our officials to free us from our disgrace.

It is due to lack of thought, and not to criminally heartless intent; men in authority do not willfully degrade and hurt their fellow creatures.

In Christ's name forget politics! Stop and think!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cuttys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Ilead, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Other acts are the Four Hayamas, clever Jap acrobats; Dorothy Richmond and company in a pleasing comedy sketch; Minnie Allen, a singer; Doc O'Neill, one of the many imitators of James J. Morton, and the Pathe pictures.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photoplay in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Boiffeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possiboy, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Eduardo Wohlwender, of Columbus, Representative-elect from Muscogee County, is in Atlanta's deliciously delighted midst, at last, and is ready for the Legislative grind.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memorializing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the condidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Boy Washes Hands; They Catch Afire

CHICAGO, June 24.—Vernon Balch, 8 years old, son of Oscar Balch, 611 North Kenilwood Avenue, Oak Park, was burned on the hands and arms when a paint-removing solution with which he was washing his hands became ignited by friction.

The boy's father, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was also burned on the hands and arms.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"Why don't they make arithmetics with practical examples like this?" asked the West End man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

Village Scurries for Food for 250,000 Visitors—Vanguard Is Arriving.

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R. will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, DuPont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

600 or 700 Georgia Veterans to Attend.

Assurance that sufficient money had been appropriated to entertain every veteran who desires to attend the Gettysburg reunion was received by Governor Brown Tuesday morning in a telegram from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission.

At first it was thought that only 500 veterans from Georgia could be entertained, but the telegram means as many as can attend will be cared for.

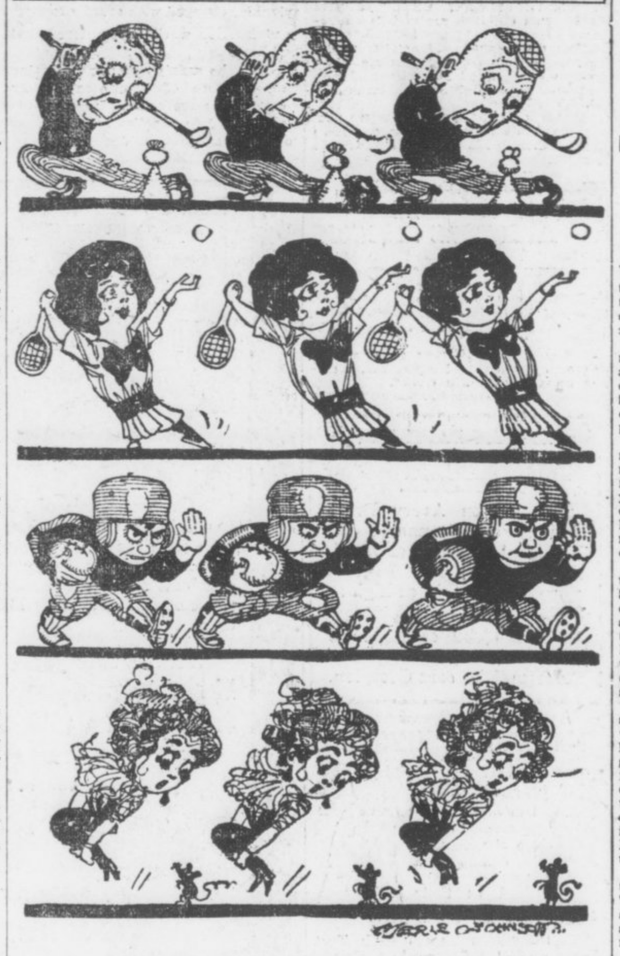
General A. J. West, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the Georgia delegation. He has been active in the effort to work up a full attendance. From 600 and 700 Confederate veterans from Georgia will make the trip. Many Georgia Federal veterans also have signified their intention of attending.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he showed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

FRESH BALLET THEMES ARE FOUND IN SPORTS



Some possible interpretations. Vaslav Nijinski, premier Russian danseuse, declares that each age has its dance, and that the national sports of each country will lend themselves to stage adaptation. The artist depicts what may be shortly expected here if this statement is true.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Vaslav Nijinski, which is a name and not an epithet, thank you, is to stand for a new epoch in the dance. Nijinski is the foremost of the Russian dancers, who is able to get more expression and art from the muscles of the great toe than most masters can command from a whole ballet.

Wherefore the Russian speaks with authority, and when that authority says that each age has its dance and that the dance takes its color and its action from the real doings of the particular age, you may be sure that you are getting no idle chatter from a mere dreamer. It is expert testimony.

According to Nijinski the dancer must represent something. The type must be distinctive of something that age is doing off the stage.

Thus, there is to come the Rockefeller ballet, with the clammy financial part of the period in the far background along with vivisection and the discovery of new and strange germs. Rockefeller plays golf, so the ballet will present Rockefeller by getting golfy. It is the Nijinski idea that a chorus of fairies wearing golf togs, pursued by Cupid caddies carrying sixty pounds of plumbers' tools that are essential to make one happy while on the links, will justly represent the era of Jawn D.

They are to balance airily as though about to drive into the top gallery, swing in rhythmic cadence and poise as though peering over the long green to see where in thunder the ball anded. Then they are to jog toward the setting sun in fairy troop and go through the various other antics that beset one who is possessed of the devil of golf.

Further drawing upon sport for inspiration, the great Russian artist sees in tennis an outlet for the spirit of the dance. The tennis court at the White House where Theodore Roosevelt used to disport himself, along with Jimmy Garfield, Lawrence Murphy and other patriots who could swing the racket, affords the most just field for the study of the possibilities of the departure. White trousers and skirts will take the places of the tights. The arms only will be bare. The feet will wear tennis shoes. A net, which, mayhap, may be stretched between the players and the audience in case the dance is bad, will be a part of the stage property.

Before and behind this net the new order will have the girlies and chorus men dancing and whirling, so that the spectator may imagine that the score, instead of being in B flat, is 15 love.

Nor would the artiste stop with tennis. The football field offers a chance to mark the stage off with lines like the sidewalks whereon the children play hopscotch and the dancers, arrayed in padded clothing, shaggy hair, will dash madly about, trying to put their feet upon the faces of their neighbors and to kick, in the name of aesthetic art, the shins of those in the immediate vicinity.

To this, says Nijinski, we are coming.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

Hetty Green's Home Is Taxed at $112,000

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Barker to Manage Newly Built Road

The new Gainesville and Northwestern Railroad will have as its vice president and general manager B. S. Barker, of Atlanta, commercial agent of the Southern. Mr. Barker has tendered his resignation for July 1, and will go to Gainesville to his new office.

Mr. Barker has been in the employ of railroads for 25 years. The new road has just been completed. It extends through Hall and White Counties, with its terminus at North Helen, a booming town.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and alienists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

The Popular Business School, With a Large and Efficient Faculty, Is Daily Sending Out Its Well-Trained Pupils Into Good-Paying Positions.

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

Then the task of deciding where to take your business course will be an easy one.

The people admire the Southern's businesslike appearance.

They like its large, wide-awake, enthusiastic and efficient faculty.

They are pleased with the way in which the business men speak of it.

Write, call or phone for catalogue, and enter now. Address,

A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, 10 West Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga.

The SOCIAL WORLD

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crownin-shield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larendon at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chapter and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Porch Party for Visitors.

Mr. Thomas Branch will give a porch party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Anna Willingham's guest, Miss Annie Tyler, of Sandersville, Ga.

Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Saturday, June 28, is shower day for Wesley Memorial Hospital, and donations will be received by a committee of ladies from the Woman's Auxiliary. Goods may be sent direct to the hospital and cash sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 501 South Pryor Street.

Bible Class to Picnic.

Bible Class No. 2 of the Second Baptist Church will have its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 25, at the cement pavilion at Grant Park. Dr. White will make an address, as will also Superintendent Spalding.

Party for Visitors.

Miss Estelle Weaver entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Thursday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses LaGrange Cothran and Katherine Graves, of Rome.

Miss Helen Jones Entertains.

The largest affair of Tuesday afternoon was a tea given by Miss Helen Jones in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va. Young girls and young men were entertained.

Guests were received in the drawing room, where there were decorations of pink and white sweetpeas and roses with wild flowers. The tea table was adorned with a basket of daisies, surrounded by pink unshaded tapers and minor details in pink. Misses Margaret McCarty and Eleanor Macey served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Adam Jones, Misses Nellie Kiser Stewart, Clifford West, Margaret Northen, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, San Antonio, Texas; Mignon McCarty and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Miss Jones wore white charmeuse satin with draperies in blue chiffon. Miss Buckner wore pink chiffon with panniers made over pink satin. Mrs. Jones wore white embroidered French mull.

An orchestra played through the calling hours. The affair was one of the happiest events of the week.

Stillman-Porter Wedding.

Miss Margaret Porter and Dr. Lowe Stillman were married Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in Columbia Avenue. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue crepe poplin with a small blue hat and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Dr. and Mrs. Stillman went for an automobile trip through South Georgia. They will go to housekeeping at 285 East Fourth Street.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain informally at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Martin Dunbar's guests, Misses Thelma Dargan, of Jacksonville, and Maude Miller, of St. Louis. The affair will be one of a series of parties tendered the visitors.

Series of Parties.

Misses Katherine Graves and LaGrange Cothran, of Rome, who have been visiting Miss Louise Cooper for the past week, are having many parties given in their honor. Miss Estelle Weaver gave a matinee party Tuesday. Miss Margaret Traylor gave a bridge Wednesday afternoon. Miss Josephine Stoney will entertain at a luncheon Thursday. Miss Katherine Darby will give a dance Thursday evening, and Mrs. Paul Baker will entertain Friday.

Miss Cothran will return home Thursday. Miss Graves will leave Saturday.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Sidney Hoberton gave an informal luncheon Tuesday for Miss Martha Francis, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Douthit will take place Saturday evening. Six girls were her guests.

Almost Runs Down Man and Boy in Auto, Then Refuses to Make Apology.

DETROIT, MICH., June 24.—Because she refused to apologize for her alleged carelessness in jeopardizing the lives of a representative of a Chicago packing concern and the latter's 8-year-old son, Mary Mannering Wadsworth, actress and wife of Frederick E. Wadsworth, a Grosse Point millionaire, must appear in court to face charges of violating traffic ordinances.

Mrs. Wadsworth was driving her motor car through a crowded downtown street, when the complainant and his son crossed in front of her machine to escape being run down by two heavy trucks. The complainant declares that the auto brushed his and his son's bodies.

He called up the Wadsworth residence last night and demanded an apology. Mr. Wadsworth is said to have answered the telephone and declared his wife would not make amends for her action. The complainant declared he would prosecute Miss Mannering and was invited to proceed with the action, which he did.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Thomson Names One Body to Work Up Support and Another to Determine Need.

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constitutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they cain gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Convict Escapes at Tybee.

SAVANNAH.—Three convicts engaged in work on the Inlet road at the south end of Tybee Island made a dash for liberty, giving the guests, police force and residents at the resort an exciting man hunt. Two of the convicts were captured after one had been shot. The third swam Horsepen Creek and escaped.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect
Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says
Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

Miss Ideal Believes Athletic Figure Is Inherited, but Regular Exercise Helps.

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily, to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibtion at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

SLEUTHS PROBING GEORGIA LYNCHING

AMERICUS, June 24.—Detectives are investigating the lynching of Will Redding, the negro who shot Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, Saturday night This became manifest to-day as the detectives were especially busy collecting data. Inquiry here affords no information as to who sent the detectives to the city. They were not brought here by local authorities.

Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of the Sumter Superior Court, will return from Columbus to-night. He said when he left for Columbus upon his return he would have a thorough investigation of the lynching made. If the evidence is sufficient Judge Littlejohn said he would call a special session of the Grand Jury at once to deal with the lynchers.

A strong public sentiment against the lynching has developed. At first this was not so generally manifest, but since the passing of resolutions by all of the churches on Sunday condemning the lynching the sentiment has crystallized almost in unanimous fashion in favor of a session of the Grand Jury to investigate the matter.

On account of the fact that the lynchers wore no masks and were entirely open in their procedure, an investigation of the affair by the Grand Jury would likely lead to sensational developments. Practically everyone in the mob is known here, if those who know will give evidence.

Though he is still in a critical condition, Chief Barrow is resting as well as could be expected, according to the statement issued to-day by his physician. A favorable symptom is the freedom from fever and the fact that the patient has great will power and nerve control, which may save his life in spite of his advanced age. He is 72 years old.

Mayor's Secretary to Attend T. M. A. Meet

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor James G. Woodward, will leave Saturday for an extensive tour of the North, the West, the Northwest and the Southwest. His business "excuse" is that he must attend the T. M. A. national convention in Spokane, Wash., next month.

Auto Hits Chicken Coop; 3 Badly Hurt

RALEIGH, June 24.—Rushing from an impending storm, Mrs. John Borden, her four children and three guests, all prominent in North Carolina, were thrown from an automobile at Goldsboro when their machine, driven by a negro chauffeur, struck a chicken coop and turned turtle.

Miss Mary Borden, a pretty 19-year-old girl, sustained a broken jawbone and loss of teeth; Mrs. R. B. Miller, daughter of the late Richard H. Battle, broken ribs and a shoulder blade, and Mrs. D. R. Kornegay, a broken shoulder and face cuts.

Mrs. Borden and daughters, Mary and Virginia, had been out of a hospital only one week, all three convalescing from operations.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible, with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Illinois Suffrage Law Thought Invalid

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 24.—Belief that Attorney General Lucey had declared the Illinois woman suffrage bill unconstitutional in the opinion he sent to Governor Dunne to-day was strengthened this afternoon when the Governor, in conference with William L. O'Connell, of Chicago, and others, deserted his offices for the Executive Mansion and denied himself to all callers.

Wanted Silks With Prices Cut to Thirds and Halves

The Selling Will Start at Nine o'Clock

A Silk Sale to reckon with!

The reasons:

—Here is a variety that rather fully covers the whole silk question.

—Qualities are as fine as we can buy in regular season for "regular" selling. They are best at their prices.

—Styles are those chosen because they were choice, distinctive.

And

—Prices are now cut down to a third and a half.

Certainly all the elements that would go to make a Silk Opportunity mark this event. Now, then, to your needs! What are they? A dress, a waist, a skirt, a suit, a coat—it matters little, just read on—

$1.69 For $3 to $4 a Yd. Silks

Yes, $1.69 a yard, for $3.00 and $4.00 crepe meteors and charmeuse, fabrics fashion will favor as fondly in the fall as she has this season. They drape and "cling" more gracefully, perhaps, than any other silks. And you may select from mais, brown, helio, apricot, taupe, Alice and wistaria. All are 44 inches wide.

79c For $1 a Yd. Wash Silks

For wash silks that seem to grow in popular favor as the weather grows warmer. The silk shirt—for men as well as for women—is the cool shirt. And these silks are the dependable kinds that are true to their name--wash silks. Plain and corded, white and black, white and helio, white and navy, white and gray. Stripes of various widths, 33 inches wide.

69c For $1.50 to $2.25 a Yd. Silks

Perhaps the finest values of the sale are among these. We miss our guess if the crowds are not thick around them. There are 36-inch chiffon taffetas in plain and two-toned shades—light blue, green, mais, yellow, tan, lilac and blue, tan and blue, green and rose, black and green; there are bordered foulards; there are figured chiffons, small designs in exquisite shades, white coliennes, marquisettes, colors for evening dresses—all 44 inches wide and none was less than $1.50 a yard!

49c For 85c and $1 Yd. Foulards

The quality is told by the names they bear—but the patterns! Choosing a dress will be a delight, for here is variety—there are black and white stripes, there are little cubes and flowers and dots thrown across surfaces of brown, tan, navy, gray, wistaria and heliotrope. No question, one to your liking. 23 and 24 inches wide.

A Greater-Than-Ever Remnant Day in the Wash Goods

At Nine o'Clock

The Wash Goods buyer's return from New York with great quantities of new merchandise meant a crusade against short lengths—now they are gathered, every kind, making up the largest and finest quantity of remnants we have offered this season.

To-morrow at nine o'clock we will let you at them!

It will be a splendid time to select waists, skirts, dresses and underwear for yourself and children. Hardly a wanted wash material is not represented—for they are remnants, you know, and only wanted materials become remnants.

Colored Cottons

A world of ginghams, one kind after another; checks, stripes, plaids, zephyr ginghams, fine imported ginghams, colorings that are fast and as pretty as can be; bordered, figured, striped and plain voiles and marquisettes, crepes, in such great demand, figured and plain shades, soisettes, piques, cotton suitings that look like linen, silk mulls, percales, galateas, kimono crepes, and still the list could be extended to include practically every kind of colored cottons, the light, filmy kinds, the substantial kinds.

Linens

Even table linens are included. Dress linens, the smooth French finish and the rough ramie linens in white and colors, linen lawns, cambrics, crashes, pillow casing, huck toweling, butcher's linen, brown apron linen and crashes.

White Goods

Flaxon, plain and checked and striped, dimities, linens, percales, India linons, batistes, French and Persian lawns, French and English nainsooks, madras figured and striped, dotted swisses, curtain swisses, lingerie cloth, repps, poplins, piques and others.

Out-of-the-Ordinary Mid-Summer Hats

At $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00

We use out-of-the-ordinary advisedly. They are, beautifully.

Through our connection with the shop of Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th Street, New York, we keep in closest touch with millinery styles as they appear in the great metropolis.

We are apprised of the new things at once, and then our splendid corps of milliners sets to work—the result is $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats that differ from those about town. But you must see just how they do differ.

Right now, and there are fresh ones every day—literally, every day—there are a number of particularly dainty white and light colored hats of hemp and peanut straw, with feathers and wings placed at "dangerous" angles, with crowns wreathed with flowers, with crowns covered with white maline. One at $5.00 of notable charm has a crown wrapped with white brocade silk, a bow of the same silk stands upright in the back—the unusual part is the way the silk is edged with maline. It is $5.00. But this is but one of many. See them all.

You, too, will say the prettiest $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats are at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

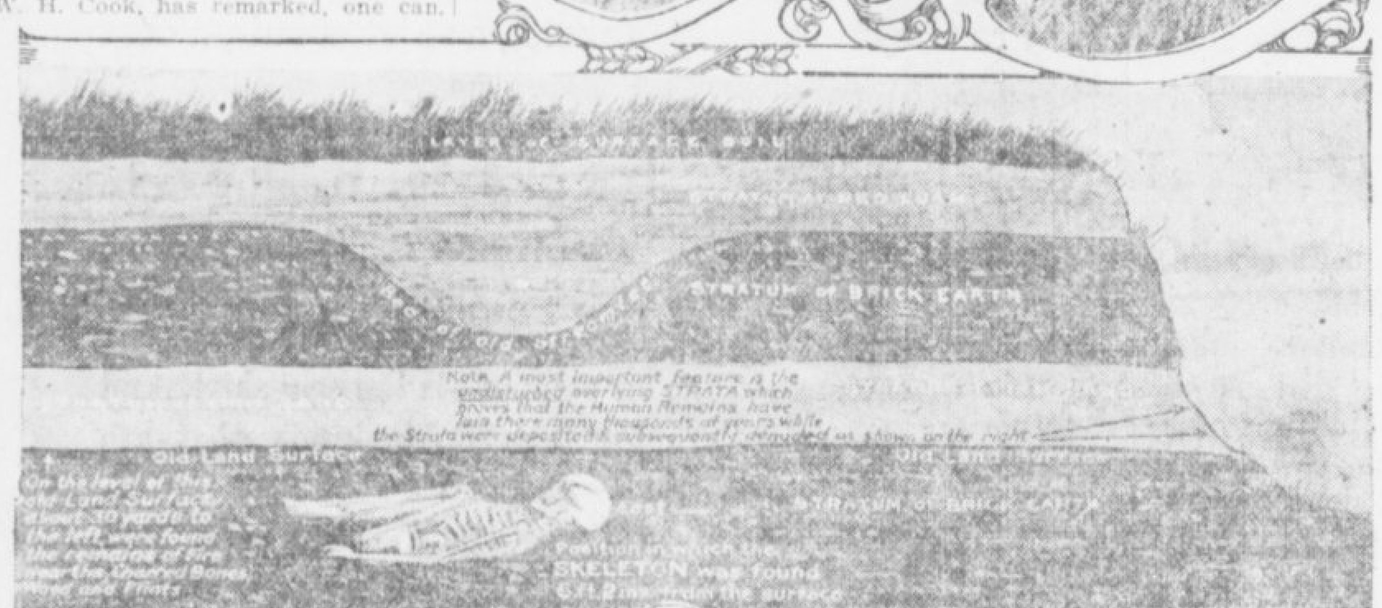
There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.



The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?"

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days; but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exerecise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, raw-boned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

"Oh, nothing much; just an idea, that's all," replied Long Tom.

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good. "Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

OF course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance. "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

"Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

Now Helen Page puts theory into practice and her shoulder to the wheel, too!

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or aghorseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distincktly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen. I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty,
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I suppoas sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa. I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen, editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such abject fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

Price 25 cents by all druggists or by mail, on receipt of stamps or coin, Exelento Medicine Company, Atlanta, Ga. Agents wanted everywhere. Write for particulars to-day.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a
city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for
the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered
cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no
more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her
Her husband saw the shattered dish
and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife,
these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we
ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse
work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so
is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

* * *

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

* * *

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24.—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery club that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the better of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

* * *

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

* * *

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

* * *

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

* * *

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

* * *

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

* * *

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

* * *

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

* * *

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

* * *

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

* * *

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

* * *

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD. Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

* * *

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-3, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans, 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Easy for Thornton.

The surprise of the day was the match between Abe Leverich and E. S. Mansfield. The first set had not gone far before Leverich began showing his power. Leverich won in straight sets.

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

Elberfeld	207	72	.347
Robertson	242	83	.343

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

How cool and refreshing the loud, shricking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

YANKS RECRUIT PLAYERS FROM MOST EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Four new recruits have been signed for the New York team of the American League. They are Dan Costello, a first sacker from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; A. Williams, catcher, from Galveston, in the Texas League; Tom Hanley, southpaw, from Manhattan College, and Jay Rogers, catcher, from Richmond, Virginia League.

PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.

Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which, though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable, that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

RUIN IS SEEN FOR PLANTERS IN FREE SUGAR

Louisiana Industry Will Be Destroyed by Schedule, New Orleans Man Says.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—"It would be difficult to estimate what damage free sugar would do to the sugar planters in Louisiana," said John J. Knapp, of New Orleans, at the Hotel Belvedere here.

"Sugar men in Louisiana are holding back until the tariff is settled before they spend money on improvements on their plantations. Free sugar would ruin a great many men in the far South. There is really little money made in sugar. Crops in Louisiana must be replanted every two years to get results. In Cuba the cane runs several years before replanting is required.

"Five cents a bunch duty has been talked about for bananas. There are no bananas grown in this country. One of the largest steamship companies, that has done a large business in bananas, is now buying sugar plantations in Cuba.

"Sugar means a great deal to the people in Louisiana. Should the plantations shut down and not be able to plant cane after sugar has been placed on the free list merchants and manufacturers of machinery in the South will suffer great loss. The sugar men of the South are fighting hard to keep sugar off the free list. They feel it is the backbone of the commerical and financial problem of certain sections of Louisiana."

Free Sugar Foes Need Four Votes to Defeat It.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The fight against free sugar was continued in the Democratic senatorial caucus today by Senator Walsh, of Montana, who declared thousands of people in his State would virtually be ruined by the present sugar schedule. He presented to the caucus many petitions in support of his assertion.

Aligned against free sugar also are Senators Shafroth, of Colorado; Thornton and Ransdell, Louisiana; Williams, Mississippi; Newlands, Nevada; Thompson, Kansas.

If two sugar supporters join the foes of free sugar it will enable the Republicans to defeat the measure.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—The market has been very quiet to-day, trading light, but ruled very steady, with little cotton for sale. The demand has been generally good. Liverpool reported a buyer, also some Southern buying spot people bought July on all soft spots.

* * *

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

* * *

* * *

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

* * *

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought a block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Generally fair weather will continue to-night and Wednesday in the Gulf States, New England and the interior of New York. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be overcast with local showers and thunderstorms.

Moderately warm weather will prevail over the eastern half of the country during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Following is the general forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Cloudy and warm; probably light showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina and South Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Fair in northwest, showers in the peninsula to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska—Unsettled, with probably showers.

South Dakota and North Dakota—Cloudy to cooler.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

LONDON, June 24.—Bar silver quiet at 26⅝d.

SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Spot Houses Support Old Crops, While Wall Street Sells—Sentiment Bearish.

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again centered their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

During the late forenoon the market was quiet, but ruled steady. The buying continued general, mainly on Cordill's report on Georgia, which was somewhat mixed and had a stimulating effect, as his reports up to this time of the season has been very favorable. Liverpool and the South were reported good buyers.

On the other hand, the Government weekly weather report was construed as bearish, resulting in active selling by Wall Street and the uptown crowd. There is a disposition on the part of local traders to sell the market short on the favorable conditions that have exised up to this time, but many operators hesitate in the face of the contined good demand for spots.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The weather map shows very favorable conditions. Partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, rather general over the Atlantics, with some good rains in the Carolinas; even temperatures, warm nights, good growing weather. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair weather, with scattered thundershowers; range of temperature stationary.

Liverpool came in rather poor, but shows larger spots sales; total 8,000, at 2 points lower quotations. Political news is that Bulgaria refuses further peace negotiations and that financial war has been started on the Continent by France refusing loans.

The market here advanced from the start, mainly on the report on Georgia by Mr. Cordill, which does not show the improvement that was expected. Under the circumstances, it is thought that the July Bureau report can at the outside give 1 to 2 points' improvement for the belt, which would be a condition between 80 and 81, and as the acreage correction made by Washington in May, is expected to be between 1 and 2 per cent, it is thought that the July bureau may again make a bullish impression on the trade.

Selling was therefore rather light today, the more so as a bullish visible statement is expected for Friday. Trading was quiet, with prices steady around 11.53 for December.

WILSON'S MESSAGE SENDS STOCKS UP

Encouraging Crop Accounts Also Stimulating Factor—Speculative Situation Stronger.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend, Americans being higher there.

The charpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅛, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1¼; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ⅝; Northern Pacific, ⅞; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅞; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅝.

The curb was steady.

The tone of the London Exchange was steady. Although practically all dealings there were professional, prices showed substantial improvement. Canadian Pacific was purchased by Berlin, Paris and Vienna despite the alarming Balkan reports.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Conflicting Crop Advices and Bad Cable News Cause General Buying.

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Corn was ¼c lower to unchanged. There was some reaction from the lowest prices reached by corn early.

Oats were off ⅛c to ¼c in sympathy with corn.

Provisions were fractionally higher, with small gain at the yards, coupled with an improved demand from investors.

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Bartlett, Frazer & Co.: "Wheat: Local sentiment is rather bearish and new buying at the moment is limited.

"Corn: Liquidation has been quite free since high point of last week; new buying is in moderate proportions.

"Oats: Continued pressure on the cash is more or less of a depressing factor, and while recent rains have doubtless been somewhat beneficial, good many reports continued to say that crop is heading short and indications point to a very material reduction as compared with last year's crop."

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mean temperatures were from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Texas, where there was a deficiency of from 1 to 3 degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over eastern Tnnessee. Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 74 to 82 over the eastern, from 80 to 82 over the central and from 78 to 82 over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 74 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 82 degrees, occurred at a number of stations located in all portions of the cotton-growing States.

Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region, except that in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas, scattered localities in Louisiana, eastern and southern Mississippi, western Alabama and parts of southern Georgia there was no rain. The precipitation was unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Texas. The greatest weekly amount, 25.20 inches, occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Need 2,000 Hands in Kansas Wheat Fields

WICHITA, KANS., June 24.—A month ago farmers in the big wheat belt west and northwest of here called their crop practically worthless. Now they are calling for more than 2,000 harvest hands.

They are meeting all incoming trains and compete in bidding for help. Wages as high as $3.50 and board a day are offered.

MRS. ARMOR TO SPEAK ON "U. S. WITHOUT SALOONS"

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will tell an audience in the First Methodist Church Tuesday night why the United States would be much better off without a single saloon within its borders. Mrs. Armor has just returned from a tour through 28 States.

Freak Chicken Dies On Way to School

NORTH ADAMS, June 24.—Two beaks, three eyes and two necks was too much for any chicken to carry around—so the freak hatched by a Bracewell Avenue hen died on the way to school, where the children were going to show it to their playmates.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!

Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?

How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"

Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?

The proper way to make a double play at second?

How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?

Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?

The proper way to field a ground ball?

How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?

The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?

Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?

All these questions and many more are answered in

"How to Play Baseball"

By JOHN J. McGRAW

The greatest book on baseball ever written will tell you fully, clearly, entertainingly, how, why and when all these and a thousand and one other things should be done in baseball. It's a book of 192 pages, with thirty-two superb half-tone illustrations of Big League stars in actual play, and bound in either rich, red cloth or heavy, durable paper covers of similar richness and color. In paper, printing and binding, it is the equal of any $1.00 and $1.50 novel, but by special arrangement with Manager McGraw, and for a limited period only,

MOVIES ON SHIP AND TRAIN HIS PREDICTION

NEW YORK, June 24.—A. Neff, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, who has just arrived to make arrangements for the annual convention of the league, predicts historical libraries composed of moving picture films, and ocean steamers and long-distance trains equipped with motion picture shows. These, Mr. Neff prophecies, will be in existence within half a dozen years.

"Although our league was only organized September 12, 1910, we now have thirty-eight State leagues," said Mr. Neff. "The State of Maine will organize another one next Monday. There are no manufacturers in our league and none is connected with it. We are not an association of managers but of men who own theaters. A man cannot belong to the league unless he owns at least part of a theater. Of course, we co-operate with manufacturers, but we also co-operate with many humane societies. We are now running tuberculosis slides in aid of a campaign our Tuberculosis League in Cincinnati is waging.

U. S. Surpasses in Films.

"The motion picture business is the largest business in the world today. In the Unted States alone there are 17,000 moving picture shows, and these represent an outlay of anywhere from $1,000 to $150,000 apiece, while some are being built now that will go beyond the higher figure."

"Is it true that the best films nowadays are made abroad?" he was asked.

"No; America makes the best films in the world. It has all the other countries skinned to a finish. American manufacturers make from 85 to 90 per cent of the films used abroad. Several American manufacturers are establishing plants in other countries.

"So many new things are continually coming up in the moving picture business that you can hardly pick up a paper in the morning and not find some new development. The time is not far distant when every ocean passenger steamer will be equipped with a first-class picture show. That would be a paying investment. You have your audience right there on the boat and it can't get away. You could give the same show every night and the chances are you would gather in the whole crowd, because there would not be any rival attraction.

"Every long-distance train will have a car fitted up containing a motion picture show. I believe that every first-class railroad station in the country will sooner or later have a motion picture waiting room. It would be the best way in the world for persons who are waiting for trains to kill time. Instead of having megaphones roaring out announcements in different parts of a great station, these would be thrown on the moving picture curtain and everybody would read that a train was ten minutes late or that a train was coming in on track 24, and so on.

Great Aid to Press.

"The motion picture has come tremendously to the fore as a disseminator of news. It has become a tremendous auxiliary to the press, because people see with their own eyes portrayals of events that the papers have just told them had happened. I predict that within a very few years a great historical library of motion pictures will be founded. The historian who has been writing the histories of countries for centuries, after all, presents these histories from the standpoint of one man, who has gathered his information from other men. No two men who witness an automobile accident will describe that accident exactly alike, though both may be truthful. When you show by a moving picture how the accident happened, you have a record that cannot be questioned. How much would we give to-day for pictures showing Abraham Lincoln delivering his Gettysburg address or Grant receiving the surrender of Lee at Appomattox; or, to go back further, of Washington crossing the Delaware. Mere stories of those events cannot give the inspiration that moving pictures could. The public generally does not know that the moving picture man has planted the American flag in every city and town of the world where civilization exists, and that he has given people of all the countries of the world an opportunity to realize what this country over here is like. As an educator, especially with regard to teaching untraveled people about the United States, the moving picture has done incalculable service."

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation--wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Aimee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

Boy Scouts Start on 1,000-Mile Relay Run

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning President Wilson leaned forward from the portico of the White House and handed a small tube to a boy attired in running clothes who dashed off northward. The boy was Frank Reed, the perfect Boy Scout, who had been selected as the first of the Scouts to relay the President's message of congratulation to Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago.

Running night and day, 1,000 Boy Scouts hope to deliver the message within less than four days.

Special Court Term For Vice War Trials

MACON, June 24.—A special session of the Superior Court will be held during two weeks beginning June 30 for the trial of 70 liquor dealers charged with violating the prohibition law; twelve clubs similarly indicted, 35 women accused of operating disorderly houses, and fifteen property owners, charged with renting houses for immoral purposes.

Jesse C. Harris, attorney, who was indicted for perjury in connection with the alleged election frauds last y. will be called to trial on July 2.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have nto had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the end of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory, see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"—to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoline add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a sieve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the nigh-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not oe afraid to use these remedies and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 579, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$2,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

$75—J. J. Jones, 193-195 Peters Street; alterations. Day work.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company hs leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

A farm tract of 136 acres 3 1-2 miles from Buckhead in North Fulton County has been put on the market at "old farm prices" by the Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. This is one of the largest tracts offered in that section for some months.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those whiich have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Con-

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-[illegible] the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.

Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, parroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

$100,000 OF PAINTER'S POLICIES PAID

Penn Mutual Settles Insurance Claims—Vicera of Ferterizer Man Eagerly Sought.

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painters Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The waring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

Judge Newman 70; Doesn't Stop Work

The celebration of his seventieth birthday did not make Judge William T. Newman, of the United States District Court, pause on his work Monday. Had not a number of telegrams of congratulation come to the court room, few would have known that the distinguished jurist had just reached the Biblical threescore and ten years.

Judge Newman has been a resident of Atlanta since the war. He was City Attorney in the seventies, and was made a Federal judge during the administration of President Cleveland.

Dies as He Phones Physician for Wife

W. B. Henson, of 28 Clark Street, Monday went to his telephone to call a physician to his sick wife. A few minutes later he was found lying dead in an adjoining room.

Seemingly he was in the best of health. He just had returned from a pleasure trip to Gainesville.

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 24.—With a hundred fellow workers watching his death struggles from a high railroad bridge, Sullivan Lackel was drowned in Rock River with only two 12-year-old boys trying to rescue him.

SERVIAN AND BULGARIAN ARMIES FIGHT

Sixty Thousand of Czar Ferdinand's Troops Face Old Allies. Russia Orders Peace.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

Crisis in Balkans; Powers Order Peace.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

Servian King Declines Minister's Resignation.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Boy Wireless Hero to Get French Medal

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—"Jack" Scheetz, the boy wireless operator, who in August, 1911, saved the steamship Lexington off the South Carolina coast, is to get a medal from the Societe des Hospitaliers Sauveteurs of Brittany, France.

On the way from Savannah to Philadelphia the Lexington went aground and her wireless was put out of order. Scheetz, only 16, climbed to the top of the mast, in a 99-mile gale, repaired the wireless and flashed an "S. O. S." message that summoned the United State revenue cutter, Yamacraw.

Free Drink Room in Capitol for Solons

HARRISBURG, June 24.—Representative Ollie M. Letzkus, of Allegheny, told the House Lobby Investigation Committee to-day that there has been throughout the session a "booze room" in the Capitol, where members of the Legislature could have free all the beer and whisky they wanted.

One was admitted, he said, by placing the palm of one hand on the ground glass door and tapping gently with the other hand.

Festival Concerts Planned for Every Sunday in Future

Officers were elected and a special committee named to confer with the Auditorium Committee of the City Council looking to less interruption of the Sunday concerts, at an annual meeting of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Monday afternoon.

The Auditorium Committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will seek to remedy the condition whereby Sunday concerts often are canceled because of poultry shows, conventions and other auditorium affairs. A determined effort will be made to have concerts every Sunday.

All of the old officers were elected, including W. L. Peel, president; George W. Wilkinson and Ben Lee Crew, vice president; C. B. Bidwell, treasurer; Victor L. Smith, secretary, and R. S. Wessells, assistant secretary.

Indian Teacher to Be Buried by Army

The funeral of Thomas Jefferson, an aged inmate of the Salvation Army industrial Home, who died Sunday night following injuries received last Thursday from being struck by an automobile, will take place at Westview Cemetery at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Jefferson, for eighteen years a teacher on an Indian reservation, had been an inmate of the home for about two months. He was 70 years old.

All the men living at the home will attend the funeral, and the pallbearers will be selected from them. The regular Salvation Army service will be held over the grave and the band will play "Home, Sweet Home."

Committee Meets to Fix Convention Date

W. A. Wimbish, chairman of the committee appointed by President Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, to fix a date for the State convention to discuss the disposal of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has called a meeting of his committee for Tuesday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

In addition to fixing the date of the convention, which probably will be early in July, the committee probably will arrange the basis of representation for the gathering. It is proposed to have delegates here from every county, as well as representatives of various lines of industry.

Seeress Disappears With Macon Jewels

MACON, June 24.—Madame Theima, who has been in Macon for several months, advertising and practicing as a fortune teller, and seeress, has suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. Jewels and other valuables of patrons worth several thousand dollars are also missing. She told her customers to let her sleep over their jewels for two nights and she would be better able to tell their fortunes.

Private detectives have been employed to locate the woman, with the view of prosecuting unless she returns the valuables.

German Beer Called Inferior to U. S. Kind

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—Dr. Max Henius, secretary of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, Chicago, told the German Brewers' Association here to-day that the average American beer is better than the average German product because Americans have adopted German scientific methods more universally than the Germans themselves. He excepted only Bavarian beer.

"The American saloon is a wicked evil," said Dr. Henius.

"It leads to the guiping of drinks and the malicious habit of treating."

New Messiah in Java; Dutch Fear Holy War

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

THE HAGUE, HOLLAND, June 24. Dutch officials in Java are alarmed by the spread of Islamic fanaticism following the recent alleged descent from heaven of a son of Mohammed, a child who has been adopted by the Emperor of Solo.

The natives, who formerly showed extreme servility toward Europeans, are now aggressive in their attitude.

W.C.T.U. PLAN DEFEAT OF ANDERSON BY PRAYER

Bitter Attack Made on Savannah Candidate for Senate Speakership—Called Saloon's Ally.

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were flooded with letters protesting against Anderson's candidacy and denouncing the Savannah man as a foe of prohibition and an ally of the liquor interests.

Prayers will be one of the weapons in the fight, women all over the State joining in pleas to Providence to prevent the election of Anderson.

Judge Allen is Anderson's most formidable opponent and has vigorously denied that his rival had the fight won. What effect the women's attack will have is problematical, but it means that the opening session of the Senate to-morrow will be no tame affair.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. No, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the lat eprohibition movement and thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything, for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee. Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,

"Yours,

"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph

Little Miss Lobbies For Father

Burwell Banks on His Daughter

Mascot in Race for Speakership

Lyra Reid Burwell, 3 years old, and her father, William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, to whom he will owe a large measure of his success if he wins speakehship of Georgia House.

"You Are Going to Vote for My Daddy, Aren't You?" She Says, and It's Hard to Resist.

Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, who is a candidate for Speaker of the House, believes in mascots.

That's the reason why he had his charming little daughter, Lyra Reid, open his headquarters.

Also, it is why he brings her down every day to keep house for him, while he buttonholes visitors and runs down into the lobby now and then to see what the enemy is up to.

Little Miss Burwell is just three and a half years of age, but already she has developed a keen political intelligence.

She knows her papa needs to jolly along his friends and keep them interested in his cause nowadays, and she governs herself accordingly.

She is an exceedingly bright little lady, and her powers of conversation are marked for her rather youthful estate.

She can say, and does, in the most winsome of manners, "You are going to vote for my daddy, aren't you, mister?" to every visitor who seems worth cultivating.

Few, so far, have been able to resist her.

If every promise she has exacted stays put, the gentleman from Hancock will win the Speakership. In a walk, and will owe much of his victory to his charming little daughter, moreover.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quincey, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible, with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Johnson refused to give any statement to the officers at the barracks or to the newspaper reporters who called upon him in his cell. Three charges—disorderly conduct, assault with intent to murder and child beating—were entered against him, and he is being held without bond.

COURT TO FIX DATE AFTER COUNSEL ARGUES

Dorsey Ready for Trial June 30. Arnold Does Not Know What May Happen Before Then.

Indicating that they would be prepared to go ahead with the trial when it was called, the attorneys for the defense Tuesday issued a subpena duces tecum commanding Chief of Police James L. Beavers, Chief of Detectivas Lanford and Solicitor General Dorsey to appear on the morning of June 30 with all the affidavits sworn to by James L. Conley, Newt Lee, Monteen Stover, W. M. Matthews, Miss Grace Hicks and others—all to be used by the defense.

Judge L. S. Roan called a conference of the attorneys on both sides in the Mary Phagan murder case for 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of setting a definite date for the trial of Leo Frank, who is charged with the crime.

Both sides were to be given an opportunity to say whether they would be ready to go on with the case if it were called on June 30, and if not, when would be the first date that they would be prepared.

The judge said that he did not believe it right, in view of the warm weather, to call an umber of witnesses and then delay the case further. He said that after the attorneys on the two sides had been heard he would set the date himself.

Arnold Not Decided.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, becaus of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

That Leo M. Frank will go at once on trial for his life next Monday when he is brought before the court on the charge of strangling little Mary Phagan was the strong probability discussed in court circles Tuesday.

The prosecution has announced that its case has been practically complete for days. The defense has said that all its vital witnesses have been found. There has been no intimation that a continuance will be asked unless it be for some contingency as the illness of Frank or of an important witness.

The defense has been non-committal. The attorneys have not said that they would ask for a postponement. They also have refused to say that they would not seek a delay.

Rosser Reticent.

Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, has carefully avoided answering the direct question whether he would be ready for trial on that day. Reuben R. Arnold, associated with him, said the case was complete, but he, too, evaded a statement as to whether they would consent for the trial to begin next week.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is making his preparations for the trial on the supposition that the defense will be ready, and he will urge before the court that the case be tried on the date set. He summoned the first witnesses Monday and Tuesday, and when court opens next Monday he will have the corridors filled with persons who will testify against Frank. His preparations could not be more complete if he had received an announcement from the defense that no continuance would be asked.

Both the prosecution and the defense will have at least twelve vital witnesses. The inability of one to attend the trial, unless by death or removal from the jurisdiction of the court, would necessitate a continuance until this witness could attend the trial.

Arnold's Stand.

Attorney Arnold openly admitted that if one of his important witnesses was not able to appear in Frank's behalf when the case was called, he would move for a continuance and would not consider going to trial on the chance of the witness appearing later.

J. M. Gantt, one of the first to be arrested as a suspect, will be one of the most important witnesses for the State.

Developments since he testified at the Coroner's inquest, it is understood, have made his evidence of the utmost importance. He was one of the few witnesses to go before the Grand Jury when Frank was indicted, and he was closely questioned by the Solicitor Monday afternoon when he finished questioning Conley. It is said that evidence that could have been given by him in the examinations before the Conley affidavit was made, but was considered of no relative importance then, is now of vital interest to the State and he will be one of the star witnesses.

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43by-100-f-oot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

$75—J. J. Jones, 193-195 Peters Street; alterations. Day work.

SLAYING SUSPECT TRAPPED IN LIES

DUBLIN, June 24.—Jim Lewis, one of fourteen negroes arrested on suspicion in connection with the mysterious double murder of T. J. Hewell and his aged wife, has told several different tales as to his whereabouts Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday. All of his assertions that the officers have had time to run down have proven false.

When arrested at Scott, a few small bloodstains were plainly visible on his overalls, but on being taken out of the calaboose to be brought to this city the stains were just barely discernable, as Lewis had evidently been rubbing them so as to obliterate them as much as possible.

Investigation is still going on, and other arrests may follow.

Although officers have refused to make known the names of the other suspects, it has been learned that three arrested near Long Branch were Sam Irwin, Tom Green and one known as "Little Joe."

Jim Kellam, one of the negroes arrested Sunday, is still in custody, but the other two have been released, as the evidence against them was not strong enough to warrant their being held.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Hewell have been sent to Griffin for interment this afternoon.

The Coroner's jury held another star chamber session last night, examing six witnesses. Another session will be held to-morrow night.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

Lady Cook Supports Fathercraft Study

NEW YORK, June 24.—Higher instruction in fathercraft will be given free of charge by a national eugenic committee organized yesterday by public-spirited women, with Lady Cook, formerly Tennessee Claflin, the leading spirit.

"The whole world is realizing that the greatest concern of the human race is a knowledge of eugenics," said Lady Cook. "We shall invite young men to study fathercraft. All the public schools should teach eugenics."

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureas.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be ocmpelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various appropriations available for each.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.

Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.

India, 358,316,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.

Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.

Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.

Sugar beets, Belgium 84.7 per cent.

Denmark, 102.3 per cent.

France, 94.36 per cent.

Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

MOVIES ON SHIP AND TRAIN HIS PREDICTION

NEW YORK, June 24.—A. Neff, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, who has just arrived to make arrangements for the annual convention of the league, predicts historical libraries composed of moving picture films, and ocean steamers and long-distance trains equipped with motion picture shows. These, Mr. Neff prophecies, will be in existence within half a dozen years.

"Although our league was only organized September 12, 1910, we now have thirty-eight State leagues," said Mr. Neff. "The State of Maine will organize another one next Monday. There are no manufacturers in our league and none is connected with it. We are not an association of managers but of men who own theaters. A man cannot belong to the league unless he owns at least part of a theater. Of course, we co-operate with manufacturers, but we also co-operate with many humane societies. We are now running tuberculosis slides in aid of a campaign our Tuberculosis League in Cincinnati is waging.

U. S. Surpasses in Films.

"The motion picture business is the largest business in the world today. In the Unted States alone there are 17,000 moving picture shows, and these represent an outlay of anywhere from $1,000 to $150,000 apiece, while some are being built now that will go beyond the higher figure."

"Is it true that the best films nowadays are made abroad?" he was asked.

"No; America makes the best films in the world. It has all the other countries skinned to a finish. American manufacturers make from 85 to 90 per cent of the filmis used abroad. Several American manufacturers are establishing plants in other countries.

"So many new things are continually coming up in the moving picture business that you can hardly pick up a paper in the morning and not find some new development. The time is not far distant when every ocean passenger steamer will be equipped with a first-class picture show. That would be a paying investment. You have your audience right there on the boat and it can't get away. You could give the same show every night and the chances are you would gather in the whole crowd, because there would not be any rival attraction.

"Every long-distance train will have a car fitted up containing a motion picture show. I believe that every first-class railroad station in the country will sooner or later have a motion picture waiting room. It would be the best way in the world for persons who are waiting for trains to kill time. Instead of having megaphones roaring out announcements in different parts of a great station, these would be thrown on the moving picture curtain and everybody would read that a train was ten minutes late or that a train was coming in on track 24, and so on.

Great Aid to Press.

"The motion picture has come tremendously to the fore as a disseminator of news. It has become a tremendous auxiliary to the press, because people see with their own eyes portrayals of events that the papers have just told them had happened. I predict that within a very few years a great historical library of motion pictures will be founded. The historian who has been writing the histories of countries for centuries, after all, presents these histories from the standpoint of one man, who has gathered his information from other men. No two men who witness an automobile accident will describe that accident exactly alike, though both may be truthful. When you show by a moving picture how the accident happened, you have a record that cannot be questioned. How much would we give to-day for pictures showing Abraham Lincoln delivering his Gettysburg address or Grant receiving the surrender of Lee at Appomattox; or, to go back further, of Washington crossing the Delaware. Mere stories of those events cannot give the inspiration that moving pictures could. The public generally does not know that the moving picture man has planted the American flag in every city and town of the world where civilization exists, and that he has given people of all the countries of the world an opportunity to realize what this country over here is like. As an educator, especially with regard to teaching untraveled people about the United States, the moving picture has done incalculable service."

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

$1,504,027 Hawley Overlooked Found

NEW YORK, June 24.—Lawyer W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., retained by State Comptroller Schmer, has completed a new appraisal of the estate of Edwin Hawley and has found that he was worth $6,787,315, which amount is $1,504,027 more than the first appraisal of the estate showed.

This means a difference of more than $80,000 in transfer taxes, payable to the State if the new appraisal stands.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight fought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to go to a finish between Representative Burwell, of Hancock, and Representative Hardeman, of Jaconson.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support, I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 24.—Twelve more Turkish reactionaries, found guilty of complicity in the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha, were executed today.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constiutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they cain gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation--wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Mayor Tells on What Conditions He Will Come to Terms—Work Continued by Company.

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons invoived for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council is considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $600,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

Mrs. Wilson Likely To Hurry Vacation

Pastors Smite the Pellet With Churchly Zeal But Majors Draft None From Ministerial League

"Washington Street Howlers" Defeat Ridley's 'Hinky-Dinks,' Who Protest Game.

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball, which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches, deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grape-juice.

Dr. White, one of the stars of the pastors' ball game.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

LEADERS STIFLE M'REYNOLDS QUIZ

Demand for Facts in Diggs-Caminetti White Slave Case Dies in House.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—There will be no investigation of Attorney General McReynolds' action in delaying the trial of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, according to information obtained to-day from one of the most influential Democratic leaders of the House. Resolutions calling upon McReynolds for the correspondence that passed between him and others in the case and seeking an investigation never will be allowed to see the light.

"I don't see how we can allow such an investigation to be made," said this leader, "unless we seem to discredit the whole party."

This observation was made after it had become known that the White House would not use its "official influence" to prevent a congressional investigation.

Owing to the parliamentary situation in the House, the Democratic leaders will be able not only to shut off all resolutions, but they will be able to prevent speeches being made on the subject.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

Village Scurries for Food for 250,000 Visitors—Vanguard Is Arriving.

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R. will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, DuPont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

The Senate had designated the Vice President himself as a member of the committee.

Man Fined for Row On Wife's Testimony

As the result of a fight precipitated Saturday, when Rudolph Otter found his wife in the room of Charles Olsen at 15 Houston Street, where the two-boarded, Otter was fined $15.75 by Judge Broyles Tuesday for disturbing the peace.

Mrs. Otter testified she and two other women were visiting Olsen, who was ill. Otter entered and started for Olsen, who picked up a water pitcher and struck his assailant on the head. The pitcher glanced and smashed against Mrs. Otter. She was cut about the face.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he snowed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and alienists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

'September Morn' 'Pure Art' in Macon

MACON, June 24.—"September Morn" did not even cause a ripple of excitement in Macon. Chief of Police W. B. Chapman visited the store window where the paintings were displayed, and indorsed them as being "pure art."

A representative of the Law and Order League inspected the young lady, gazed ardently and then purchased one the copies.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cuttys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Ilead, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Other acts are the Four Hayamas, clever Jap acrobats; Dorothy Richmond and company in a pleasing comedy sketch; Minnie Allen, a singer; Doc O'Neill, one of the many imitators of James J. Morton, and the Pathe pictures.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photoplay in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Bolfeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly, and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Eduardo Wohlwender, of Columbus, Representative-elect from Muscogee County, is in Atlanta's deliciously delighted midst, at last, and is ready for the Legislative grind.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memorializing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

Decatur Women and Trade Board to Meet

The Civic Beauty Committees of the Decatur Woman's Club and of the Decatur Board of Trade will hold a joint session Tuesday afternoon at 4:30.

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the condidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes. Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Boy Washes Hands; They Catch Afire

CHICAGO, June 24.—Vernon Balch, 8 years old, son of Oscar Balch, 611 North Kenilwood Avenue, Oak Park, was burned on the hands and arms when a paint-removing solution with which he was washing his hands became ignited by friction.

The boy's father, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was also burned on the hands and arms.

$15,000,000 in Gifts at Kaiser's Jubilee

BERLIN, June 24.—It is calculated that the public and private subscriptions to charitable and other public purposes on the occasion of the Kaiser's jubilee amounted to $15,000,000.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"Why don't they make arithmetics with practical examples like this?" asked the West End man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

"Contratoxin" Is Name of New Alleged Remedy for Consumption—Discoverer Modest.

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

KEELY'S

The World of Society

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crowninshield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larenden at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chaptr and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

Miss Ideal Believes Athletic Figure Is Inherited, but Regular Exercise Helps.

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibition at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Aimee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

Carmack belongs to one of the most prominent families in Phenix City.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Drivers Who Ran Down Photographer and Newsie Are Out on Bonds.

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Young Nickers was run down near the Grady Monument by a postoffice auto truck.

MARY MANNERING OBSTINATE; SUED

Almost Runs Down Man and Boy in Auto, Then Refuses to Make Apology.

DETROIT, MICH., June 24.—Because she refused to apologize for her alleged carelessness in jeopardizing the lives of a representative of a Chicago packing concern and the latter's 8-year-old son, Mary Mannering Wadsworth, actress and wife of Frederick E. Wadsworth, a Grosse Point millionaire, must appear in court to face charges of violating traffic ordinances.

Mrs. Wadsworth was driving her motor car through a crowded downtown street, when the complainant and his son crossed in front of her machine to escape being run down by two heavy trucks. The complainant declares that the auto brushed his and his son's bodies.

He called up the Wadsworth residence last night and demanded an apology. Mr. Wadsworth is said to have answered the telephone and declared his wife would not make amends for her action. The complainant declared he would prosecute Miss Mannering and was invited to proceed with the action, which he did.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

The Popular Business School, With a Large and Efficient Faculty, Is Daily Sending Out Its Well-Trained Pupils Into Good-Paying Positions.

MISS MAE GARNER,

Who has just completed course in the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and secured Steno-Bookkeeper's Position with Messrs. Collier & Co., of Barnesville, Ga.

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

Then the task of deciding where to take your business course will be an easy one.

The people admire the Southern's businesslike appearance.

They like its large, wide-awake, enthusiastic and efficient faculty.

They are pleased with the way in which the business men speak of it.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehisteric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is flashing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

"All right," said Gordon, after a pause. "Think it over. When you get ready to talk business let me know."

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

"Oh, nothing much; just an idea, that's all," replied Long Tom.

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather, Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but the final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

OF course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance. "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

"Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

Now Helen Page puts theory into practice and her shoulder to the wheel, too!

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distincktly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen. I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty.
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I supposs sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Glider." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

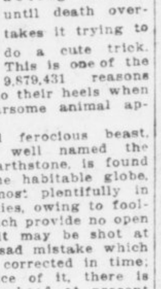
THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such abject fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.



When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have nice long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her husband's noble block.
Her husband saw the shattered dish and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife, these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

* * *

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

* * *

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery club that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the better of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

* * *

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

* * *

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

* * *

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

* * *

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

* * *

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

* * *

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

* * *

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

* * *

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

* * *

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

* * *

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

* * *

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD.

Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

* * *

DURING THE LAST WORLD series a bunch of Boston fans, with a band and banners, formed a Loyal Rooters' Club and blew wads of dough going and risked their lives on the New Haven road to cheer for Boston at every game.

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

HOW CAN YOU BLAME THE ball player for taking the same view of the man in the stand as the magnate?

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-3, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans, 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Easy for Thornton.

The surprise of the day was the match between Abe Leverich and E. S. Mansfield. The first set had not gone far before Leverich began showing his power. Leverich won in straight sets.

ROSS BEATS CLARK.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24.—Hugh Ross won a hard fought ten-round bout here last night from Kid Clark, of Columbus.

LAKE TOXAWAY.

Effective Sunday, June 22, an electric lighted, twelve section drawing room sleeping car will be operated daily, leaving Atlanta at 8:45 p. m. and arriving at Lake Toxaway 8:10 a. m. Twelve section drawing room sleeping car on the same train arriving Asheville 7 a. m., thus affording excellent service to Western North Carolina, the "Land of the Sky."

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

DREAMS, IDLE DREAMS.

How dear to my heart is the snow of last winter!
How cool and refreshing the loud, shrieking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter
A life-saving station and lay down my kale.

One who looks upon a boat race is impressed by the fact that intercollegiate rowing is a great little sport for the innocent bystanders.

As H. Zim, the well known monologist, would say, silence is a gold certificate.

SPEAKING OF VACATION.

This is the forest primeval; the murmuring pines and the hemlocks
Swarm with a myriad of flies and other pestiferous insects,
Under the roof of the tent a healthy and active mosquito
Hums, and in accents sonorous answers the wail of the camper.

COOMBS TO QUIT GAME; ILLNESS BRINGS ON FAT

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—That he probably will be unable to pitch again this season was admitted today by Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics. The pitcher, who is ill at his Atlantic City home, is taking on weight at the rate of a pound a day, which is not considered favorable by his physicians. Connie Mack and John Shibe visited Coombs a few days ago and to them he admitted his condition.

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

YANKS RECRUIT PLAYERS FROM MOST EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Four new recruits have been signed for the New York team of the American League. They are Dan Costello, a first sacker from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; A. Williams, catcher, from Galveston, in the Texas League; Tom Hanley, southpaw, from Manhattan College, and Jay Rogers, catcher, from Richmond, Virginia League.

PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.

Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which, though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable, that the morigage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

RUIN IS SEEN FOR PLANTERS IN FREE SUGAR

Louisiana Industry Will Be Destroyed by Schedule, New Orleans Man Says.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—"It would be difficult to estimate what damage free sugar would do to the sugar planters in Louisiana," said John J. Knapp, of New Orleans, at the Hotel Belvedere here.

"Sugar men in Louisiana are holding back until the tariff is settled before they spend money on improvements on their plantations. Free sugar would ruin a great many men in the far South. There is really little money made in sugar. Crops in Louisiana must be replanted every two years to get results. In Cuba the cane runs several years before replanting is required.

"Five cents a bunch duty has been talked about for bananas. There are no bananas grown in this country. One of the largest steamship companies, that has done a large business in bananas, is now buying sugar plantations in Cuba.

"Sugar means a great deal to the people in Louisiana. Should the plantations shut down and not be able to plant cane after sugar has been placed on the free list merchants and manufacturers of machinery in the South will suffer great loss. The sugar men of the South are fighting hard to keep sugar off the free list. They feel it is the backbone of the commerical and financial problem of certain sections of Louisiana."

Free Sugar Foes Need Four Votes to Defeat It.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The fight against free sugar was continued in the Democratic senatorial caucus today by Senator Walsh, of Montana, who declared thousands of people in his State would virtually be ruined by the present sugar schedule. He presented to the caucus many petitions in support of his assertion.

Aligned against free sugar also are Senators Shafroth, of Colorado; Thornton and Ransdell, Louisiana; Williams, Mississippi; Newlands, Nevada; Thompson, Kansas.

If two sugar supporters join the foes of free sugar it will enable the Republicans to defeat the measure.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again centered their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: It is a two-sided affair, which will be largely decided by the weather.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to feel friendly to cotton.

Miller & Co.: We continue our favorable view of the market.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to favor the policy of buying conservatively on easy markets.

COTTON GOSSIP

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought a block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

BAR SILVER.

LONDON, June 24.—Bar silver quiet at 26⅝d.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Commercial bar silver 57⅝c.

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

RATE INCREASE NOT APPROVED.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Interstate Commerce Commission expected to issue orders to-day for investigation of the 5 per cent freight rate increase.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHANGES.

NEW YORK, June 24.—It is said that New York bankers in conference drafted suggestions for changes in the currency bill.

STOCK MARKET

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend. Americans being higher there.

The charpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅜, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1¼; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ⅜; Northern Pacific, ⅝; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅜; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅝.

The curb was steady.

The tone of the London Exchange was steady. Although practically all dealings there were professional, prices showed substantial improvement. Canadian Pacific was purchased by Berlin, Paris and Vienna despite the alarming Balkan reports.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Corn was ¼c lower to unchanged. There was some reaction from the lowest prices reached by corn early.

Oats were off ⅛c to ¼c in sympathy with corn.

Provisions were fractionally higher, with small gain at the yards, coupled with an improved demand from investors.

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Bartlett, Frazer & Co.: "Wheat: Local sentiment is rather bearish and new buying at the moment is limited.

"Corn: Liquidation has been quite free since high point of last week; new buying is in moderate proportions.

"Oats: Continued pressure on the cash is more or less of a depressing factor, and while recent rains have doubtless been somewhat beneficial, good many reports continued to say that crop is heading short and indications point to a very material reduction as compared with last year's crop."

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska—Unsettled, with probably showers.

South Dakota and North Dakota—Cloudy to-cooler.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS BAD.

CHICAGO, June 24.—W. B. Snow wires from Redfield, S. Dak., June 23: "Through Brown, McPherson, Edmunds, Faulk and Spink Counties west of James River district is reported as bad, involving about 600 acres. Was a failure last year, and most of it for three consecutive years. Present situation promises the fourth failure. Nothing but general soaking rains at once can save any part of it. Oats the same. Corn holding its own.

"General situation east of James River reported as satisfactory."

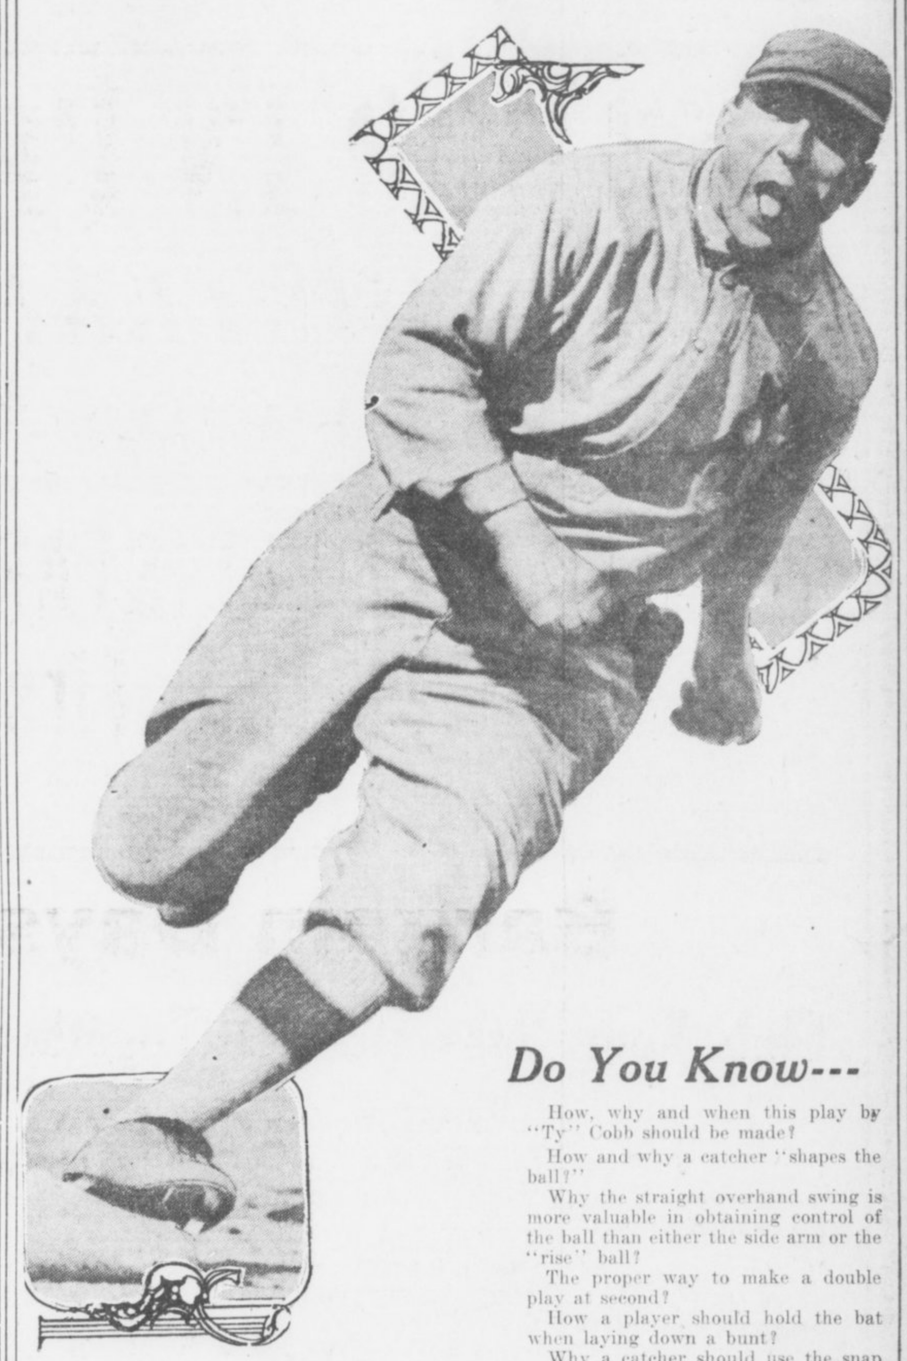
Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!



Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?

How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"

Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?

The proper way to make a double play at second?

How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?

Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?

The proper way to field a ground ball?

How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?

The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?

Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?

All these questions and many more are answered in

"How to Play Baseball"

By JOHN J. McGRAW

The greatest book on baseball ever written will tell you fully, clearly, entertainingly, how, why and when all these and a thousand and one other things should be done in baseball. It's a book of 192 pages, with thirty-two superb half-tone illustrations of Big League stars in actual play, and bound in either rich, red cloth or heavy, durable paper covers of similar richness and color. In paper, printing and binding, it is the equal of any $1.00 and $1.50 novel, but by special arrangement with Manager McGraw, and for a limited period only,

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

WE CARRY a full line of poultry yard supplies, drinking founts, food hoppers, grit and shell boxes, feed pans, in fact everything for the poultryman. Come see our line and get our prices before you buy.

BOARD WANTED.

WANTED—Board by three refined young men in private family; Grant Park section preferred. Address Park, Box 1, care Georgian. 37-20-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

HOUSES WANTED.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

Residence Noted for Antiques. Traders Exchange Properties. More Building on Peachtree.

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Dillard Jacobs will soon build on Peachtree Road near the McGrath place.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those which have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

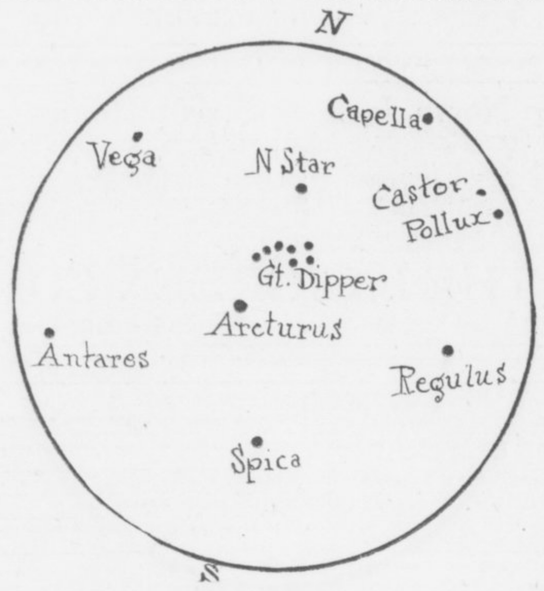
Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, perhaps the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.



Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little, later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, paroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

FRANK TRIAL BEGINS ON MONDAY NEXT

South Georgia AFTERNOON EDITION

THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN

VOL. XI. NO. 277. ATLANTA, GA., TUESDAY, JUNE 24, 1913. Copyright, 1906, By The Georgian Co. 2 CENTS PAY NO MORE

BOTH SIDES READY FOR TRIAL ON MONDAY

Probability of Defense Asking for Continuance Less—Gantt Important Witness.

That Leo M. Frank will go at once on trial for his life next Monday when he is brought before the court on the charge of strangling little Mary Phagan was the strong probability discussed in court circles Tuesday.

The case has been set for this date. The prosecution has announced that its case has been practically complete for days. The defense has said that all its vital witnesses have been found. There has been no intimation that a continuance will be asked unless it be for some contingency as the illness of Frank or of an important witness.

The defense has been non-committal. The attorneys have not said that they would ask for a postponement. They also have refused to say that they would not seek a delay.

Rosser Reticent.

Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, has carefully avoided answering the direct question whether he would be ready for trial on that day. Reuben R. Arnold, associated with him, said the case was complete, but he, too, evaded a statement as to whether they would consent for the trial to begin next week.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is making his preparations for the trial on the supposition that the defense will be ready, and he will urge before the court that the case be tried on the date set. He summoned the first witnesses Monday and Tuesday, and when court opens next Monday he will have the corridors filled with persons who will testify against Frank. His preparations could not be more complete if he had received an announcement from the defense that no continuance would be asked.

Both the prosecution and the defense will have at least twelve vital witnesses. The inability of one to attend the trial, unless by death or removal from the jurisdiction of the court, would necessitate a continuance until this witness could attend the trial.

Arnold's Stand.

Attorney Arnold openly admitted that if one of his important witnesses was not able to appear in Frank's behalf when the case was called, he would move for a continuance and would not consider going to trial on the chance of the witness appearing later.

One strong indication that the case will be tried Monday lies in the length of time that will in all probability be taken in securing a jury. More than a day and a half, at least, will be required in selecting twelve men from the panel of 72. During this time, when no evidence will be taken, either side will have an opportunity to locate any witness who might not answer Monday morning.

J. M. Gantt, one of the first to be arrested as a suspect, will be one of the most important witnesses for the State.

Developments since he testified at the Coroner's inquest, it is understood, have made his evidence of the utmost importance. He was one of the few witnesses to go before the Grand Jury when Frank was indicted, and he was closely questioned by the Solicitor Monday afternoon when he finished questioning Conley. It is said that evidence that could have been given by him in the examinations before the Conley affidavit was made, but was considered of no relative importance then, is now of vital interest to the State and he will be one of the star witnesses.

Need 2,000 Hands in Kansas Wheat Fields

WICHITA, KANS., June 24.—A month ago farmers in the big wheat belt west and northwest of here called their crop practically worthless. Now they are calling for more than 2,000 harvest hands.

They are meeting all incoming trains and compete in bidding for help. Wages as high as $3.50 and board a day are offered.

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

German Beer Called Inferior to U. S. Kind

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—Dr. Max Henius, secretary of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, Chicago, told the German Brewers' Association here to-day that the average American beer is better than the average German product because Americans have adopted German scientific methods more universally than the Germans themselves. He excepted only Bavarian beer.

"The American saloon is a wicked evil," said Dr. Henius.

"It leads to the gulping of drinks and the malicious habit of treating."

New Messiah in Java; Dutch Fear Holy War

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgia

THE HAGUE, HOLLAND, June 24. Dutch officials in Java are alarmed by the spread of Islamic fanaticism following the recent alleged descent from heaven of a son of Mohammed, a child who has been adopted by the Emperor of Solo.

100 Men See Boys Try to Rescue Man

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 24.—With a hundred fellow workers watching his death struggles from a high railroad bridge, Sullivan Lackel was drowned in Rock River with only two 12-year-old boys trying to rescue him.

SERVIAN AND BULGARIAN ARMIES FIGHT

Sixty Thousand of Czar Ferdinand's Face Old Allies—Russia Orders Peace.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

Crisis in Balkans; Powers Order Peace.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

Servian King Declines Minister's Resignation.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Boy Wireless Hero to Get French Medal

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—"Jack" Schéetz, the boy wireless operator, who in August, 1911, saved the steamship Lexington off the South Carolina coast, is to get a medal from the Societe des Hospitaliers Sauveteurs of Brittany, France.

On the way from Savannah to Philadelphia the Lexington went aground and her wireless was put out of order. Scheetz, only 16, climbed to the top of the mast, in a 99-mile gale, repaired the wireless and flashed an "S. O. S." message that summoned the United State revenue cutter, Yamacraw.

Free Drink Room in Capitol for Solons

HARRISBURG, June 24.—Representative Ollie M. Letzkus, of Allegheny, told the House Lobby Investigation Committee to-day that there has been throughout the session a "booze room" in the Capitol, where members of the Legislature could have free all the beer and whisky they wanted.

One was admitted, he said, by placing the palm of one hand on the ground glass door and tapping gently with the other hand.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight fought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this attack, however, and appear to be little disturbed.

Both men are well known and each has a strong and most loyal following, very much in evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

M'CARTY GOT ONY $26 FOR HIS FIGHT WITH PELKY, BOOKS SHOW

SPRINGFIELD, MO., JUNE 24.—THE PROBATE JUDGE HERE DISCOVERED THAT LUTHER M'CARTY'S ESTATE IS CREDITED WITH ONLY $26 AS M'CARTY'S SHARE IN THE FIGHT AT CALGARY, ALBERTA, WITH ARTHUR PELKY, WHICH COST HIM HIS LIFE. M'CARTY, WHEN HE SIGNED THE CONTRACT, DECLARED IT CALLED FOR A $4,000 GUARANTEE

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Marion Representative Has Bill Providing "Discoverer" to Catch Dodgers.

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

Half a dozen members already have announced they have drafted tax reform bills.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption. There are some who favor placing the matter in the hands of a special committee or commission, to confer with the Governor and make a thorough investigation, reporting next year.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

Lady Cook Supports Fathercraft Study

NEW YORK, June 24.—Higher instruction in fathercraft will be given free of charge by a national eugenic committee organized yesterday by public-spirited women, with Lady Cook, formerly Tennessee Claflin, the leading spirit.

"The whole world is realizing that the greatest concern of the human race is a knowledge of eugenics," said Lady Cook. "We shall invite young men to study fathercraft. All the public schools should teach eugenics."

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

Augusta Man Refuses to Explain Brutal Treatment of Daughter. Held in Jail.

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible, with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Johnson refused to give any statement to the officers at the barracks or to the newspaper reporters who called upon him in his cell. Three charges—disorderly conduct, assault with intent to murder and child beating—were entered against him, and he is being held without bond.

The police surgeon was called to attend to the girl. Her arms and back were covered with clots of blood, and the marks of the horsewhip were still plainly visible. Restoratives were administered, and she was sent back home to be cared for by her mother.

Royalty Welcomes Poincare to Britain

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PORTSMOUTH, ENGLAND, June 24.—With British guns roaring out a salute, President Poincare of France arrived in England to-day and was officially welcomed by the 19-year-old Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, who came down from London on the "royal train."

When the French dreadnought carrying the French President and the French Foreign Minister, M. Pichon, arrived off Spithead, the English fleet anchored there fired the royal salute, to which the French warship replied.

CHERBOURG, FRANCE, June 24. Two gunners were killed and two fatally wounded yesterday afternoon when a gun exploded during the firing of a salute to President Poincare.

Freak Chicken Dies On Way to School

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Mayor Tells on What Conditions He Will Come to Terms—Work Continued by Company.

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Sandbag Cures Man Of Cigarette Habit

When W. W. Christian, a cabinetmaker, residing at 18 Larkin Street, regained consciousness after having been sandbagged at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets Monday night, he found that the robber had taken $14 and a pocketknife. All that was left was a box of cigarettes.

Christian remembered that the robber had first asked him for a cigarette as a ruse. It then dawned upon him that if he had not stopped to give the man one of the paper tubes, he would not have been sandbagged and robbed. Christian is now a violent anti-cigarette advocate.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

POPE TO SUMMON CARDINAL FARLEY

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva in intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome.

Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

The American College will give a reception and dinner in honor of the Cardinal, who will also be entertained at the Hospice of St. Sulpice, where he has many friends.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Drivers Who Ran Down Photographer and Newsie Are Out on Bonds.

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Young Nickers was run down near the Grady Monument by a postoffice auto truck.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Needs Money, She Says.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance.

They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

The Dance Barbaric.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

So it is drawing packed houses, especially from Mayfair and Belgravia.

Mrs. Thaw says:

"My dance best expresses my temperament."

When this statement was published London sat up and said: "My word!"

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have nto had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the end of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory. see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"— to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoline add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a sieve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the high-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not be afraid to use these remedies, and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

MOVIES ON SHIP AND TRAIN HIS PREDICTION

NEW YORK, June 24.—A. Neff, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, who has just arrived to make arrangements for the annual convention of the league, predicts historical libraries composed of moving picture films, and ocean steamers and long-distance trains equipped with motion picture shows. These, Mr. Neff prophecies, will be in existence within half a dozen years.

"Although our league was only organized September 12, 1910, we now have thirty-eight State leagues," said Mr. Neff. "The State of Maine will organize another one next Monday. There are no manufacturers in our league and none is connected with it. We are not an association of managers but of men who own theaters. A man cannot belong to the league unless he owns at least part of a theater. Of course, we co-operate with manufacturers, but we also co-operate with many humane societies. We are now running tuberculosis slides in aid of a campaign our Tuberculosis League in Cincinnati is waging.

U. S. Surpasses in Films.

"The motion picture business is the largest business in the world today. In the United States alone there are 17,000 moving picture shows, and these represent an outlay of anywhere from $1,000 to $150,000 apiece, while some are being built now that will go beyond the higher figure."

"Is it true that the best films nowadays are made abroad?" he was asked.

"No; America makes the best films in the world. It has all the other countries skinned to a finish. American manufacturers make from 85 to 90 per cent of the films used abroad. Several American manufacturers are establishing plants in other countries.

"So many new things are continually coming up in the moving picture business that you can hardly pick up a paper in the morning and not find some new development. The time is not far distant when every ocean passenger steamer will be equipped with a first-class picture show. That would be a paying investment. You have your audience right there on the boat and it can't get away. You could give the same show every night and the chances are you would gather in the whole crowd, because there would not be any rival attraction.

"Every long-distance train will have a car fitted up containing a motion picture show. I believe that every first-class railroad station in the country will sooner or later have a motion picture waiting room. It would be the best way in the world for persons who are waiting for trains to kill time. Instead of having megaphones roaring out announcements in different parts of a great station, these would be thrown on the moving picture curtain and everybody would read that a train was ten minutes late or that a train was coming in on track 24, and so on.

Great Aid to Press.

"The motion picture has come tremendously to the fore as a disseminator of news. It has become a tremendous auxiliary to the press, because people see with their own eyes portrayals of events that the papers have just told them had happened. I predict that within a very few years a great historical library of motion pictures will be founded. The historian who has been writing the histories of countries for centuries, after all, presents these histories from the standpoint of one man, who has gathered his information from other men. No two men who witness an automobile accident will describe that accident exactly alike, though both may be truthful. When you show by a moving picture how the accident happened, you have a record that cannot be questioned. How much would we give to-day for pictures showing Abraham Lincoln delivering his Gettysburg address or Grant receiving the surrender of Lee at Appomattox; or, to go back further, of Washington crossing the Delaware. Mere stories of those events cannot give the inspiration that moving pictures could. The public generally does not know that the moving picture man has planted the American flag in every city and town of the world where civilization exists, and that he has given people of all the countries of the world an opportunity to realize what this country over here is like. As an educator, especially with regard to teaching untraveled people about the United States, the moving picture has done incalculable service."

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Little Miss Lobbies For Father

Burwell Banks on His Daughter

Mascot in Race for Speakership

Lyra Reid Burwell, 3 year old, to whom her father will owe a large measure of his success if he wins speakership of Georgia House.

"You Are Going to Vote for My Daddy, Aren't You?" She Says, and It's Hard to Resist.

Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, who is a candidate for Speaker of the House, believes in mascots.

That's the reason why he had his charming little daughter, Lyra Reid, open his headquarters.

Also, it is why he brings her down every day to keep house for him, while he buttonholes visitors and runs down into the lobby now and then to see what the enemy is up to.

Little Miss Burwell is just three and a half years of age, but already she has developed a keen political intelligence.

She knows her papa needs to jolly along his friends and keep them interested in his cause nowadays, and she governs herself accordingly.

She is an exceedingly bright little lady, and her powers of conversation are marked for her rather youthful estate.

She can say, and does, in the most winsome of manners, "You are going to vote for my daddy, aren't you, mister?" to every visitor who seems worth cultivating.

Few, so far, have been able to resist her.

If every promise she has exacted stays put, the gentleman from Hancock will win the Speakership, in a walk, and will owe much of his victory to his charming little daughter, moreover.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

Judge Newman 70; Doesn't Stop Work

The celebration of his seventieth birthday did not make Judge William T. Newman, of the United States District Court, pause on his work Monday. Had not a number of telegrams of congratulation come to the court room, few would have known that the distinguished jurist had just reached the Biblical threescore and ten years.

Judge Newman has been a resident of Atlanta since the war. He was City Attorney in the seventies, and was made a Federal judge during the administration of President Cleveland.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

$1,504,027 Hawley Overlooked Found

NEW YORK, June 24.—Lawyer W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., retained by State Comptroller Schmer, has completed a new appraisal of the estate of Edwin Hawley and has found that he was worth $6,787,315, which amount is $1,504,027 more than the first appraisal of the estate showed.

This means a difference of more than $60,000 in transfer taxes, payable to the State if the new appraisal stands.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.
Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which, though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable, that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

"Contratoxin" Is Name of New Alleged Remedy for Consumption—Discoverer Modest.

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Calls It a "Good Thing."

"This is a good thing," implying that he was disposed to believe in the efficiency of the cure.

Dr. Mehnarto admits that his new serum cannot be described as a perfect cure until after four or five years without a recurrence of the disease.

He states definitely that he has no intention of going to America, but that the serum is now on the market and obtainable by any registered physician in London. He said that it is also being used in Germany. Some of the most prominent specialists in tuberculosis have been experimentally carrying out this treatment.

Composition of Remedy.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Boifeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly, and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Eduardo Wohlwender, of Columbus, Representative-elect from Muscogee County, is in Atlanta's deliciously delighted midst, at last, and is ready for the Legislative grind.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memorializing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. A thorough reorganization and upbuilding of the public and common schools is necessary. New methods, new ideas and ideals must be instituted."—Abrams Elkus, in address at City College, New York.

$15,000,000 in Gifts at Kaiser's Jubilee

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can. It is practically the same bill that he introduced a year ago when still a member of the Legislature. It failed to pass because certain merchants succeeded in exempting mercantile establishments from its operation.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Age Limit 12 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments. Section 1 provides that after this year no child under 12 years of age shall work in any of these places; after 1914 no child under 13; after 1915 no child under 14 shall be so employed or permitted to work.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Section 2 provides for the education of children until they pass the age of 16. It repeals Section 3146 of the Code of 1910, which provided for the education of children between 14 and 18 years, but which was so vague and verbose as to practically nullify itself. It provides that no child between the ages of 14 and 16 shall be employed unless he can read ordinary English and write simple English sentences. In case of doubt the State Commissioner of Labor is to make the educational test, and his decision shall be final.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Among the child labor laws now on the statute books of Georgia is a provision permitting children 10 years old to work when they have parents who are disabled or dependent upon them for support. Mr. Alexander's bill stops 10-year-old children from working after this year.

In short, the minimum age for child laborers in Mr. Alexander's bill eventually is raised from 10 to 14 years. The maximum age at which children remain under protection of the laws is reduced from 18 to 16.

Mills Want Restriction.

"The bill is not revolutionary; it is rational and right," said Mr. Alexander. "The present law contains so many exceptions, and the evidence about them is so vaguely provided for, that little headway has been made toward enforcement.

"The cotton mills want to enforce the child labor laws. The leaders among them are humane and just. They think it is right and they are behind this bill. The National Child Labor Committee also is behind it.

"The law is perfectly plain. It wipes out all complications and exceptions and conditions and comes out flat-footed. For that reason, it will be easily enforceable."

Mr. Alexander said he wanted to warn friends of child labor legislation against accepting any amendments to his measure. The minute amendments are tacked on, he said, the bill becomes confusing, and if too many amendments were accepted it would become as useless as the present statutes on the same subject.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect

Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says

Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

Miss Ideal Believes Athletic Figure Is Inherited, but Regular Exercise Helps.

"If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibition at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. J. H. Lord, thirty-eight years old, died Tuesday morning at a private sanitarium. She is survived by her husband and a small son. The body was removed to Patterson's chapel and will be shipped to Dublin, Ga., at 12:20 o'clock Tuesday for funeral and interment.

Lewis S. Phillips, thirty years old, died at a private sanitarium Tuesday morning. He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Phillips; a sister, Mrs. H. H. Hamby, and a wife and three small children. Mr. Phillips formerly lived at Battle Hill. He had been in the drug business for years, and for the past few years ran a drug store at Garnett and Pryor Streets. The body was removed to the chapel of Burkert & Simmons. Funeral arrangements later.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"Why don't they make arithmetics with practical examples like this?" asked the West End man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the condidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes. Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the man of the house at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped. The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

"All right," said Gordon, after a pause. "Think it over. When you get ready to talk business let me know."

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

"Oh, nothing much; just an idea, that's all," replied Long Tom.

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

Of course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance, "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

"Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fineha skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

Now Helen Page puts theory into practice and her shoulder to the wheel, too!

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distinckly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen. I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty.
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Grecks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I suppoas sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undenisibly the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Glider?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Glider should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Glider." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such ablect fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have nice long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

Price 25 cents by all druggists or by mail, on receipt of stamps or coin, Exelento Medicine Company, Atlanta, Ga. Agents wanted everywhere. Write for particulars to-day.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her husband's noble block.
Her husband saw the shattered dish and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife, these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should, because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

* * *

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

* * *

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville." The snares and temptations that beset the path of the boxer, the late hours in congenial company and divers items all go to make his return to actual battle a hard one. Yet to make himself an attraction on the stage he must make reputation and gain glory in the ring. These two requirements go hand in hand. In order to obtain these results, however, the average fighter adopts means exactly opposite to those that bring success.

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, itch, pus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

* * *

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 138 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

* * *

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

* * *

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

* * *

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

* * *

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

* * *

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

* * *

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

* * *

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

* * *

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

* * *

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD. Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

But the ball player hasn't quite the magnate's contempt for the "boob in the stand." He is willing they should see him play when he does feel like it. He occasionally goes so far as to say that he thinks the "boob" is entitled to some consideration, because he probably wouldn't be a boob if he knew any better. But the magnate—

DURING THE LAST WORLD series a bunch of Boston fans, with a band and banners, formed a Loyal Rooters' Club and blew wads of dough going and risked their lives on the New Haven road to cheer for Boston at every game.

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players. Entries in the singles include 50 contestants and 31 teams are entered for the doubles.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-3, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans, 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the better of the round.

ONE MORE GAME WITH PELS, THEN OFF TO MEMPHIS

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Well, we're off for Memphis to-night, and are out for revenge. We expect to take to-day's game from the Pels, with Price and Chapman doing the battery work.

Charley Frank has a new twirler named Walker, touted as the greatest phenom since the game was written. The Pels have not been drawing very well, owing to their position in the standing list.

Yesterday's game was rained out again. We went to the park, but the steady downpour made it impossible to play, and we soon hit the 'bus for the hotel. But the rest won't hurt us. We have had some hard games recently. Only one game will be played to-day.

Memphis had all the luck the last time we met, but we believe we can put the Indian sign on them this round. Anyway, here's hoping.

Washington-Chicago Is Boys' Relay Route

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One of the longest relay events in which boys of this country have participated started to-day when President Wilson handed the first boy in the chain a message to the officials of the international athletic championships, to be held at Grant Park, Chicago, June 28 to July 6. Over a thousand lads will run in various distances over the 800-mile course to Chicago, the greatest distance run by any boy being one mile.

The boys will run day and night, and the last boy in the chain is scheduled to dash into Grant Park with the message on the afternoon of the 28th, when the championship games will be officially opened. The message from the President contains an expression of his approval of athletics.

The relay is in no sense a race, as no attempt will be made to break any records and no boy has been asked to run his hardest. The boys will run regardless of rain, mud or any other unfavorable conditions.

Vols Secure Almeida; Goalby to be Benched

NASHVILLE, June 24.—After overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles, President Hirsig has secured Rafael Almeida, the fast-going third-sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, for the Nashville club. The president returned last night from Akron and Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been for the past week on business for the club and his firm.

Almeida is expected to report in the next few days and it is understood that he will be placed on third. Perry will probably go to second in "Kitty" Goalby's place. Goalby will probably be benched for the present. In case Almeida can not report, Dodge, another third-sacker on the Reds, will come to Nashville. Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds, stated to President Hirsig that either Almeida or Dodge would be sent to Nashville, but that in all probability Almeida would be the one to come.

Elberfeld Leads All; Long Drops to Third

Kid Elberfeld, the scrappy Chattanooga manager, is now leading the Southern League at bat. Although Elberfeld has been idle for the past few days, Tommy Long, the former leader, has slumped and is now in third place.

Robertson, the Mobile outfielder, moves up a notch to second position, just above Long. Wallie Smith is now hitting fourth. Elberfeld is batting at a .347 clip; Robertson has a mark of .343, while Long is swatting at a .337 average.

	AB.	H.	Pct.
Elberfeld	207	72	.347
Robertson	242	83	.343
Long	255	86	.337

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

TEAGUE GOES TO NAPS.

PADUCAH, KY., June 24.—Pitcher Teague has been sold by Paducah to the Cleveland American League team for $1,000.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—After looking carefully over the Western teams at this point in the race, which is nearing the middle of the season, I can see only two with the natural strength to keep up the fight for the first division. These are the Chicago and Pittsburg teams. The Cubs have displayed much strength during the last couple of weeks. The club always did carry a punch as far as batting went, but the pitching staff was the weakness.

Evers has now turned loose a couple of twirlers who threaten to thrust the team into the fight again. They are Humphries and Smith. The former worked against Philadelphia last week and permitted only three scattered hits, allowing but two men to reach second base. If Overall comes around again into the form he flashed for a few minutes before he wrenched his side in the series against the Giants and Cheney rests up, the Cubs will be very well fixed for pitchers. The rest of the club is a fast-thinking, fast-fielding, hard-hitting bunch.

* * *

PITTSBURG is the puzzle of the league. The Pirates do everything a ball club should do but win games. They have a grand looking pitching staff and a fine set of hitters, but the Bostons nosed them out by one run a couple of times last week. They have a slim chance of getting into the pennant quarrel now. The Pirates are bound to climb sooner or later, but they will not climb much higher than third, in my opinion now.

* * *

CINCINNATI is going very badly, and Tinker is looking over the best suites in the Ohio sanitariums.

"On the level," he said to me recently in Cincinnati, "if this club of mine does not take a brace, I am going 'nutty.' Every once in a while I think I have them moving, only to see them fall back into another slump. Life here is just one slump after another."

As is true of most teams when they get into a losing streak, all the breaks have been against the Reds. They have lost several games through close decisions or lucky catches or hits by their opponents. The team is a better one than its standing indicates. I do not count on it finishing last.

* * *

ST. LOUIS is wilting fast, and the club is not showing any signs of improvement. The first spurt of the Cardinals this last spring appeared to take all the "pep" out of the team, and even the fighting Miller Huggins cannot restore it. His pitchers are working badly, and the rest of the team is weak.

* * *

THE Cubs, with the strong pitching, have been the leading contenders this year. Teams with weak twirling staffs have fallen down badly. More importance than ever is being attached to the twirling corps by managers. McGraw has confirmed this by sending a scout out to carefully comb the bush leagues for pitchers. It is the first time he has done this in several seasons. The scout has turned up two good ones, according to their records—one being Schauer, a big fellow from the Northern League, for whom McGraw thought it worth while to pay $10,000, thereby outbidding the Cubs. This is a big gamble, but the big gamblers are the winners in baseball. None can win without material these days, and material is expensive.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six hits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

DREAMS, IDLE DREAMS.

How dear to my heart is the snow of last winter!
How cool and refreshing the loud, shrieking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter
A life-saving station and lay down my kale.

One who looks upon a boat race is impressed by the fact that intercollegiate rowing is a great little sport for the innocent bystanders.

As H. Zim, the well known monologist, would say, silence is a gold certificate.

SPEAKING OF VACATION.

This is the forest primeval; the murmuring pines and the hemlocks
Swarm with a myriad of flies and other pestiferous insects,
Under the roof of the tent a healthy and active mosquito
Hums, and in accents sonorous answers the wail of the camper.

COOMBS TO QUIT GAME; ILLNESS BRINGS ON FAT

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—That he probably will be unable to pitch again this season was admitted today by Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics. The pitcher, who is ill at his Atlantic City home, is taking on weight at the rate of a pound a day, which is not considered favorable by his physicians. Connie Mack and John Shibe visited Coombs a few days ago and to them he admitted his condition.

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

YANKS RECRUIT PLAYERS FROM MOST EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Four new recruits have been signed for the New York team of the American League. They are Dan Costello, a first sacker from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; A. Williams, catcher, from Galveston, in the Texas League; Tom Hanley, southpaw, from Manhattan College, and Jay Rogers, catcher, from Richmond, Virginia League.

PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

WANTED—Board by three refined young men in private family; Grant Park section preferred. Address Park, Box 1, care Georgian. 37-20-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

Residence Noted for Antiques. Traders Exchange Properties. More Building on Peachtree.

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Dillard Jacobs will soon build on Peachtree Road near the McGrath place.

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those which have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

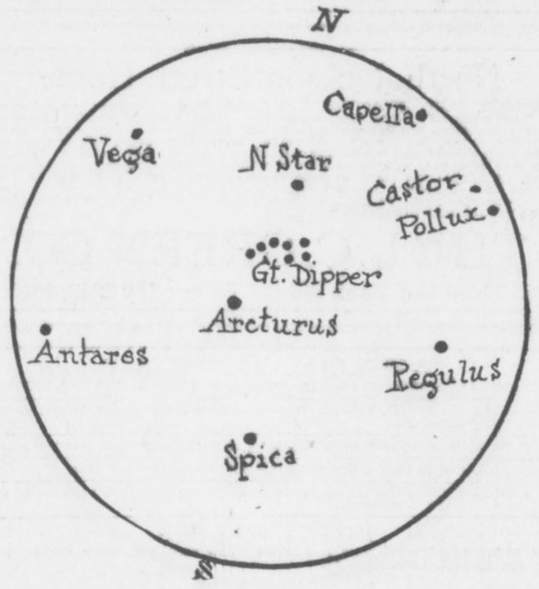
Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, perhaps the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.



Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, paroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?

PRESIDENT WILSON POINTS OUT NEEDS OF BUSINESS

"We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains."—From Wilson's address to Congress on Monday.

DRAW JURY PANEL FOR FRANK TRIAL

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Negro Conley Sticks to Affidavit Story When Again Cross-Examined by Dorsey.

The first official action of the court in preparing for the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was taken Monday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan impaneled 72 men, from whom a jury to hear the case will be sought.

June 30 was agreed to by Judge Roan for the opening of the case. If a postponement is desired it will now have to be asked for in open court.

As yet Judge Roan said he had received no intimation from the defense that a delay was wanted. Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey said Monday the prosecution was ready for trial.

Trial in Thrower Building.

An extra staff of deputies has been sworn in and subpenas to jurymen impaneled and witnesses are now being served.

No plans for a larger room in which to hear the case have matured, and it is likely that the courtroom of the Superior Court in the Thrower Building will be used at last, despite its size and lack of comfort.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was brought before Solicitor Dorsey Monday morning for another cross-examination. The questions were solely along the lines of the negro's affidavit charging Frank with the crime. As the Solicitor later said, he had only refreshed Conley's mind on the points he had made in his statement. The negro told the same story he told before without deviation.

Mr. Dorsey said that he would call all of the principal witnesses for the State and refresh their minds on the part they will play in the trial.

W. J. Coleman, stepfather of the strangled girl, was summoned by the Solicitor after Conley had been questioned for some time and was brought before the negro. Strict secrecy surrounded the performance, and if anything was gained by confronting the sweeper with Coleman it was not divulged. Mary Phagan's grandfather accompanied Coleman.

Later Coleman said that he had called particularly to ask the Solicitor if Judge Newt Morris, formerly of the Blue Ridge Circuit, could be brought into the case. Mr. Dorsey informed him that the State had made all arrangements for handling the case, but that if he wanted to have the former Judge represent the family there would be no objection.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Monteen Stover, the young girl who called at the pencil factory office between noon and 12:15 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, was taken before Jim Conley at the police station Sunday and identified by the negro as the girl he had seen while hiding at the foot of the stairway waiting for Frank's signal.

Conley Identifies Girl.

Detectives went out to the Stover girl's home at 171 South Forsyth Street late in the afternoon and asked that she dress as she had on the afternoon of the murder and go to the police station with them.

The girl put on a small yellow hat with a red ribbon about it, enveloped her body in a yellow raincoat and

Atlanta Man Tells Neurologists They Alone Keep U. S. Sane

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Were it not for the alienists and neurologists of America, the country would in time be inhabited only by insane persons."

This was the statement to-day of Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, before the convention of neurologists meeting here under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society.

"There are more insane people in the United States than any other country in the world," he said.

Causes of insanity, he said, were whisky, hereditary weakness, religious excitement and modern life.

"The business man and the society woman," he said, "are falling victims to modern life. The business man often loses his mind through chasing the almighty dollar, and the society woman for various reasons, among them loss of sleep, too much dancing, irregular eating, worry over card games, envy of another's success and too much attention to dress."

Hot Wave Is in No Danger of Breaking, Says Weather Man

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thunder showers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of last week.

Woman With Dagger Attacks Policeman

Flora May Bateman, a negro woman, who made an attack on Call Officer T. M. Gorman when placed under arrest for disorderly conduct, will be tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

The policeman had a narrow escape when he attempted to arrest the woman. She attacked him with a long dirk she drew from her stocking. She was subdued and placed under arrest only after a lively struggle. The policeman was not hurt.

Bogus Check Charge Causes His Arrest

J. Percival, charged with passing a bogus check for $100 on Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex Saloon, will arrive in Atlanta from Birmingham Monday night in custody of Detective J. W. Hollingsworth.

Percival was arrested in Birmingham Sunday on complaint of Jones, who has preferred the charge.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

The shooting culminated an attempt by Parham to put Wright under arrest.

Mrs. Lanier's Trial To Begin Tuesday

WAYCROSS, June 23.—Unless some unforeseen delay arises, the trial of Mrs. W. C. Lanier, the pretty young woman facing a charge of murder of her infant son, will start in Superior Court to-morrow. To-day several minor criminal cases are being disposed of. Judge T. A. Parker will preside.

It is understood that the defense will rely mainly upon the statement of Mrs. Lanier.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

Undoubtedly the big and absorbing topic of comment and speculation among the great throng of Georgia legislatore statesmen and politicians in Atlanta to-day is the forthcoming election of a President of the Senate.

Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth District, and Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, both advance ironclad claims to election.

Each exhibits that which he considers unqualified pledges of support from more than a sufficient number of Senators to elect.

Senator Anderson gave out an interview Saturday in which he said he had 28 votes signed, sealed and delivered. He said then, and reaffirms it to-day, that he has the race won beyond a doubt.

Judge Allen, on the contrary, gave out the following interview to-day:

"Senator Anderson has not 28 votes pledged—he can not have. I do not say he willfully misstates the situation—he may imagine he has the votes—but he misstates it, nevertheless.

Claims 25 Votes.

"I have 25 votes pledged to me in writing, without any qualifications whatever — straightaway promises. Not one man signing these pledges—they are individual, and not in the form of a list—will break his word to me. I shall be elected, for it only requires 23 votes, and I think I shall get five besides the ones I now have pledged.

"It should be remembered, too, that a distinguished South Georgian, Judge Sweat, has four votes, and that another distinguished Senator, Mr. Tyson, has two or three. Judge Sweat is in the race, and so is Senator Tyson—I take it neither would be in unless he had at least one pledged vote.

"Claiming is one thing and showing down the corn is another. I shall have the necessary votes when the roll is called Wednesday.

Denies Aid of Interests.

"As to the rumor that certain corporations and manufacturing interests may be taking a hand in the race for the Senate Presidency, I know nothing more than that no corporation or big manufacturing interest is taking a hand in my race. I can win, and will win, without that. And certainly I would prefer to."

Despite the statements of the rival candidates for the honor of being President of the Senate, and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of Georgia, the impression is that this race is yet to be won, and will be won between this time and the assembling of the Senate Wednesday.

Politicians of all shades of opinion, all over the State, are watching this fight with intense interest.

Legislators All Here.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered

Yancey Killed One Week Ago; Family Is In Need of Support

One week ago Monday Court Deputy Dave Yancey was stabbed to death by a crazed negro while attempting to preserve law and order, as he had sworn to do. To-day his widow and six children are holding a sad commemoration of that event in their little home on the Jonesboro Road.

What has Atlanta done for the family of the court deputy? The citizens of this city have subscribed about $1,000 to the Yancey fund, $900 of which must go to pay off the mortgage on the farm. The remainder is not sufficient to put this family on a self-supporting basis. More contributions are needed. Let the generosity of the prosperous Gate City continue to assert itself.

Following are contributions to the fund which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

A. K. Hawke	$10.00
Rev. T. C. Gray and Wife	1.00
Cashier	1.00
Eugene B. Elder	1.00
Working Man	10.00

Tax Delinquents to Face Double Charge In Recorder's Court

Slow tax collections have led city officials to resort to some unusual but very effective methods of securing street taxes. Delinquents are to be punished with no less a penalty than facing the Recorder.

City Marshal James Fuller and Councilman Orville Hall, chairman of the Streets Committee, called at the police station Monday and outlined a system whereby a list of the persons arrested each day will be furnished to the Marshal. Marshal Fuller will check them with his books, and if they have failed to give in or pay their taxes, they will be confronted with double charges in Police Court.

The street tax is $1 per year. Where persons are delinquent $1.50 cost is added.

Eighteen Ministers In Baseball Game Feature of Picnic

A baseball game between eighteen Baptist ministers was the feature of an old-time picnic and barbecue held by the Baptist Ministers' Association of Atlanta at the waterworks Monday.

The game was played in the afternoon and followed the weekly morning conference of the ministers. More than 100 "rooters" who participated in the picnic viewed the battle on the improvised diamond.

Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, pitched for one side, while Dr. C. A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist, twirled for the other.

Miss Wilson's Pansy Hat a Capital Hit

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, has succeeded to the place formerly held by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and has become the leading society milliner of the capital.

She not only trims her own hats, but she trims the jauntiest hat that adorns a belle's head in Washington. The younger set is particularly taken just now with a new creation Miss Wilson has made, which she calls the pansy hat.

She bought a white hemp shape and a gorgeous mass of purple pansies and soft ribbons. With artistic skill she arranged these about the hat. It has a chic, Parisian effect, and the uninformed would imagine it the work of a leading milliner.

Sickles Can Attend Gettysburg Reunion

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—State officials will not prevent General Daniel E. Sickles from going to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next month. Attorney General Carmody so advised Daniel P. Hays, counsel for General Sickles.

The State obtained a judgment against General Sickles for failure to account for $23,000 State funds. Carmody says no execution will be issued to prevent Sickles attending the reunion.

WRIT STARTS CREMATORY SQUABBLE AFRESH

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said:, "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

LIEUTENANT J. H. TOWERS, U. S. A., formerly of Rome, Ga., the hydroplane in which he fell into Chesapeake Bay last Friday, and a diagram sketch of the accident. Ensign W. D. Billingslea fell from the descending machine and was killed. The remarkable story by Lieutenant Towers of the sensations of the nearly fatal fall was printed in The Georgian Saturday.

NINE DROWN WHEN U. S. BOAT UPSETS

MEMPHIS, June 23.—Nine of a party of fourteen United States engineers and other Government employees were drowned near New Madrid, when the United States survey boat Beaver, which the party was aboard, capsized during a windstorm.

Those drowned are:

C. S. WILLIAMSON, chief engineer, Mason, Ohio.

J. M. M'CONNELL, of Memphis, a recent graduate of the law department of Cornell.

CAPTAIN LAMB, pilot.

A. D. COSTON, engineer.

HARRY SHERRELL, mate, Cottonwood, Tenn.

PHIL WRAY, Jackson, Tenn.

—— FREEMAN, deck hand.

Two rodmen, names not known.

J. H. Miller, civil engineer, of Millersburg, Ky., and four deck hands were the others of the party who reached the bank in safety.

When the storm broke the Beaver was making a hurried run back to New Madrid to get medical attention for McConnell, who had been taken suddenly ill, and was within sight of a quarterboat, anchored near this city, when the wind tipped the boat over.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

Major Hunter, of the Third Battalion, and Adjutant McCollum are among the busiest men in the camp, for many orders must be issued in the early stages of the encampment. The real work of the week probably will not begin before Tuesday.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its pith in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made public a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law; to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"The powers of the Federal reserve board are as follows:

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(e) To supervise and regulate the issue of Treasury notes to Federal reserve banks.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

BULGARIAN PLOT TO KILL GREEK KING FOILED

Soldiers Disguised as Citizens Are Arrested—One Confesses Conspiracy to Blow Up Palace.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation today was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

The Coroner held an inquest and found a verdict of justifiable homicide.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

taking an umbrella went with the detectives.

As soon as the Stover girl entered the room he jumped to his feet, exclaiming:

"That's her; that's her." Then the negro surveyed her wearing apparel.

"She's dressed just as she was that day, only she hasn't got on her 'easy walkers.'

The girl was wearing leather slippers. Later she said she had worn "easy walkers," or tennis shoes, when she went to the pencil factory, as the negro had said.

The negro's identification of the Stover girl proves, apparently, beyond a doubt that he was in the factory building at the time he said in his affidavit. Beyond sustaining that statement, though, no further support to the prosecution's case against Frank is shown by it.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Girl Dies of Fever; Peril Thought Past

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

Wilburn-King Trials Come Up in October

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

W. C. Tribble, father of the girl, said Monday he had arranged to have the crayon which his daughter had eaten analyzed. It is hardly expected that the analysis will be completed in time to be of any benefit to the physicians in prescribing a treatment.

Mary was given the crayons a few days before school ended a week ago last Friday. On the last day of school she came home and fell into the arms of her mother, crying that her head hurt. A few minutes later part of her body was paralyzed and she was seized frequently with agonizing convulsions. She has been in this condition ever since, the only change being that she gradually has been growing weaker.

Dr. Seacord, Dead; Was With Fire Dept.

Dr. Andrew C. Seacord, 38 years old, died at a private sanitarium Monday morning at 2 o'clock. Dr. Seacord for the past fifteen years had been the veterinary surgeon for the Atlanta Fire Department. He lived at 621 Whitehall Street and is survived by a wife and two young sons, Lynn and Robert Seacord.

Funeral services will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. A. R. Holderby officiating. Pallbearers will be G. C. Courtney, O. J. Parker, W. H. Clowe, Pas Short, William Butler and W. B. Harrison. Interment will be at Westview.

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

MME. RAPPOLD'S ROMANCE IS REVEALED

Prima Donna, to Wed Tenor Berger, Waited Long for Freedom, She Says.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mme. Marie Rappold, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has told the story of her romance which is to culminate in her marriage this week to Rudolph Berger, the tenor.

She discussed the wedding preparations and told of the great happiness which had come to her after eight years of waiting to gain her freedom and the right to marry the man who had won her heart.

The wedding will take place at Long Branch, N. J., in the home of a friend of the prima donna. It was to have taken place last week, but Mr. Berger was commanded by the Kaiser to remain in Germany during the fest performances.

"Long, Weary, Hard Wait."

"No one but the Kaiser could have prevailed upon my fiance to postpone our wedding any longer," said Mme. Rappold as she smiled.

"It has been a long, weary, hard wait, and never a moment has our love wavered," added the beautiful singer, who recently obtained a Western divorce from Dr. Julius Rappold. "In fact, the five weeks we spent together abroad two months ago were the happiest of my life, and we both felt that we deserved our complete happiness, which, after all, is in marriage. It surely has been a romance stranger than fiction in many ways.

"Eight years ago I signed a contract with Mr. Conried, who felt that he had found in me a great Wagnerian singer. I went at his advice to Bayreuth to study German opera. I reached Bayreuth during the night, and in the morning I went for a drive.

Loved Him at First Sight.

"The very first man I saw was Rudolph Berger. It was extraordinary, for from that instant we were in love—genuinely, beautifully, earnestly in love. I wasted no time in telling my husband of my newfound happiness. We had already found our lives uncongenial, and my life was empty, save in the love I had from my little daughter Lillian.

"I soon found that while Mr. Berger was known as a baritone, his voice really was tenor. He took my advice and came to New York in 1906, spent a year taking instructions from my teacher, Oscar Sanger, and developed, as I knew he would, into perhaps the greatest Wagnerian tenor in the world."

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life

Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation

Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

The girls were consulted, and they jumped at the idea. Miss Tatum completed the details, and the result is best told in her own words.

"Mr. Jackson volunteered to give us all the space we wanted on his 290-acre farm," she said. "His beneficence assured the success of our plan, because the greatest obstacle was to secure a site with abundant good spring water.

All Home Comforts.

"We will have a dozen tents, some of them 12 by 14 feet, others 18 by 20 feet. An average of half a dozen cots will be placed in each tent. We have arranged a perfect sanitary system. There will be running hot and cold water in each tent, and plenty of ice water.

"We will have a community library and will, of course, take the daily papers. We will have telephones, too. In short, we will have all the conveniences of the city together with the comforts and beauties of the country. Our camp site is a cool and beautiful place, free from swamps and malaria and mosquitoes, and we intend to keep it so clean there will be no flies.

"We will have a man cook and a matron. I myself will be in charge of the camp, and I intend to see that it is very home like and just as attractive as it can possibly be. We will have an acetylene gas system and shower baths.

"Careful contracting and financing has made it possible for us to have this outing at 50 cents a day. That's the total cost, and I'd like to know where there is a health resort or summer hotel where you can live as we will live for this price.

"Some of the girls are accustomed to go to New York during their vacations. The fare to New York and back is $48.40. The fare to our camp will be fifteen cents, five cents for the car ride and ten cents for an automobile bus to the camp, or thirty cents for the round trip. As compared with the New York trip, we will save $48.10 on fare alone, to say nothing of other expenses. Besides, we will have a cooler, healthier and nicer time at the camp.

Night Trips For Workers.

"Some few of the girls have already taken their vacations. We have arranged for these girls to go to the camp every night, if they want to. They will leave the office at 5:30 o'clock and get back at 8:30 o'clock the next morning. The trip, including their supper and breakfast, will cost fifty cents."

An idea of the thoroughness of the arrangements for the outing may be gained from the fact that the girls have already contracted for their country produce. Farms adjacent to their camp will provide chickens, eggs, butter, milk, vegetables and fruits. At least once a week an old time barbecue will be served.

Unlimited diversion will be obtainable. The Jackson farm has a magnificent concrete swimming pool, filled with water from the springs, and the girls have been tendered free use of it. A string band has been engaged to make music every night. Visitors, either men or women, will be received until a reasonable hour each night. The camp will accommodate fifty girls a day, and the girls unite in saying they will tax its capacity for the whole three months.

CARUSO IN MAD FIT AT LOSING GIRL'S SUIT

Italian Court Orders New Trial to Fix Damages due Rejected Sweetheart.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start tomorrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. P. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

Women Are Drifting To Double Standard, Dr. White Declares

A spirit of rebellion against parasitism was the explanation given for the rapid spread of the feminist movement by Dr. John E. White in his morning sermon Sunday at the Second Baptist Church.

Dr. White said women had become dissatisfied with the social conditions which made them little more than dependents on their husbands and gave them no activities or opportunities for self-development outside the walls of their own homes.

A significant statement was that the equality of rights, which he believed surely in prospect, undoubtedly would bring man and woman to the same level and would establish a single standard of morals for the two sexes. Either the man would rise to the higher plane upon which woman exists or woman would sink to man's level.

He regretted that the present tendency appeared toward the adoption of man's code of morals by the women.

He thought, however, that this condition was temporary and that man would bring himself to her level.

Dies in 5 Days After Taking Mercury for Toothache Tablets

CHICAGO, June 23.—The final incident in a five days' hopeless battle against death was recorded to-day at the inquest over the body of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets, thinking they were toothache medicine. Her aged mother, now without any one to support her, is in a serious condition.

The last thought of the young woman, who had suffered frightful agony since last Tuesday night, was of her mother. She recalled that her employer owed her $3 in wages. She asked Dr. O. W. Hatz to collect the money and give it to her parent.

Scores of wealthy Chicagoans have sent flowers with offers of financial assistance for the girl's mother.

CREMATORY ROW REVIVES WITH INJUNCTION

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

Americus Officer's Condition Critical

AMERICUS, June 23.—The condition of Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, who was shot by a negro here Saturday night and whose assailant was lynched shortly afterward on the principal street of the city is to-day reported as unfavorable. The bullet entered the officer's abdomen and struck his spine.

The city is quiet to-day, following the intense excitement precipitated by the shooting and lynching Saturday night.

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year

Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation

Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hadn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN M'REYNOLDS CASE ASKED

House Resolution Orders Attorney General to Show Papers in White Slave Suits.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Kahn, of California, to-day introduced two resolutions, one calling upon Attorney General McReynolds to transmit to the House all papers relating to the prosecution on white slave charges of Maura Diggs and Drew Caminetti and leading up to the resignation of United States District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco. The other calls for the same papers in the case of the prosecution of the Western Fuel Company.

David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University of California, informed President Wilson to-day that he believed the McNab charges false. Dr. Jordan said that he considered that McNab is apparently annoyed over a number of recent occurrences in his office and that he took this occasion to resign "in a blaze of glory."

District Attorney McNab said today that he had repeatedly protested against attempts to prevent the prosecution of Caminetti and Diggs, and that Caminetti's father had sought aid in Washington have the case delayed.

On June 1 Caminetti, after he had been appointed Commissioner General of Immigration, wired McNab, asking another delay. McNab replied that the case would be set for July 26. On the same day McNab wrote to Atorney General McReynolds, reviewing the case.

On June 18 McNab received a telegram from the Attorney General ordering him to postpone the trial until autumn. Two days later McNab's resignation was wired to Washington.

Secretary Wilson Says He Delayed Trials.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—"I have stated all the facts. There is nothing further in the case and the public will have to judge for itself."

This is the only statement that Secretary of Labor Wilson will make to-day supplementing his announcement assuming responsibility for the postponement for the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case in San Francisco.

"It was for the benefit of the service that I wished to keep Mr. Caminetti, the Commissioner General of Immigration, in Washington for a time and I could not then see and do not now see any serious interference with justice," said the Secretary.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Railroad Continues Train-Bandit Search

WAYCROSS, June 23.—No developments have been reported here today in the hunt for the Kirkland freight train robebrs, but it is known that the search, while abandoned by Coffee County officers, has by no means been given up by agents of the Atlantic Coast Line.

It is believed the men now hiding in Roundabout Swamp will soon be forced to leave the swamp for food supplies, and then an effort will be made to capture them.

Schools by Parcel Post Latest Wrinkle

WASHINGTON, June 23.—One, two and four room school houses are now sent by parcel post by the United States Bureau of Education. The school houses are models on which to erect structures in small communities.

They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail.

These models will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities which can not afford to engage a school architect.

Hot Weather 'Don'ts' Given by U. S. Expert

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form to-day by Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Harvey W. Wiley as chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Here are his "don'ts:"

"Don't eat to excess.
"Don't wear too many clothes.
"Don't drink ice cold beverages.
"Don't look at the thermometer and keep thinking how hot it is."

SONS OF VETERANS MEET.

CHATTANOOGA, June 23.—The Cons of Veterans, U. S. A., of Alabama and Tennessee, convened here to-day in their twenty-fifth annual encampment. John A. Patten, of this city, is expected to be elected to succeed John Tinker, of this city, as division commander.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

Has No Recollection of Months in Hospital—Pathetic Meeting With Brother.

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hillitt, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

350,000 POSTAL DEPOSITORS.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—There are 12,820 postal depositaries, 350,000 depositors and $85,000,000 in deposits. The Postmaster General is now receiving applications from postmasters for postal savings bonds to be distributed July 1.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

Rich Dentist Sued For Divorce; Wife Declares He Beat Her

Three days after her husband went home intoxicated, according to her charge, and beat her with a walking cane, Mrs. Kathryne Steer brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce from Dr. John S. Steer, a dentist, who is reputed to be wealthy. The offense was alleged to have been committed on the night of June 20 at the Steer home, 21 Ashby Street.

Mrs. Steer enjoined Dr. Steer from disposing of his interest in a well-known dental concern. They were married in Kentucky in 1908.

Boll Weevil Here to Stay.

THOMASVILLE.—L. U. Calhoun, of Louisiana, expert from the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been attending farmers' institutes in South Georgia, declares that the boll weevil is in this country to stay and that the chief thing the farmers should concern themselves about now is the best method of warding off its attacks on cotton.

MISSISSIPPI SUES FOR 'PEN' COTTON

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—Acting under instructions from Governor Brewer, Attorney General Ross A. Collins to-day filed an attachment in the Chancery Court here against all properties in Mississippi of Boyce & Co., Memphis and New Orleans cotton factors and cotton exporters, and also more than 1,000 bales of cotton recently bought by Boyce & Co. from the State, now on the wharves in New Orleans, ready for export.

The Governor makes sensational charges in directing the Attorney General to act.

Flee From Sing Sing; Are Glad to Return

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close.

PLAYERS TO SOLVE RAGTIME PROBLEM

Another effort to solve Atlanta's ragtime problem will be made to-morrow afternoon.

This problem, which has aroused lovers of ragtime music, is whether an expert pianist or a Weatherholt player-piano is the more expert in producing that entrancing syncopated music.

At the contest Friday afternoon Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, awarded the decision to the player-piano, after considering the problem overnight.

Mr. Weatherholt has received dozens of letters from admirers of the player-piano who insist that the pianist never lived who can produce ragtime as the player does, and he has received invitations to visit homes of the owners and hear for himself.

Other letters have been received giving names of expert pianists who are declared to be such artists that a player would never get a decision in a contest.

The contest will be held in Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street, with L. T. Briers, H. H. Bowers, H. C. Wiley, A. D. Beatty and others competing against the player operated by J. A. Mills.

During the contest complimentary tickets to the Elite Theater will be given to the ladies present, through the courtesy of Mr. Briers, who is assistant manager of that theater.

Seven 250-Lb. Women Testify in Fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

You Have Heard Much of Late About Makers' Surplus Stocks of Dresses and the Fine Economy That Their Purchase Has Meant, But It Has Remained for This

Sale of Summer Dresses

To Bring to the Women of Atlanta the Real Values of the Season

$5.00 to $5.75 Black China Silk Waists

$2.45

The Waist Department contributes to the day's events! Contributes an interesting item.

Black China silk waists and shirts from our own good stocks and priced regularly there at $5.00 to $5.75 are marked $2.45.

And there is a variety of splendid styles, serviceable and cool. Choose from waists with high and Dutch necks, eyelet embroidered, with little clusters of tucks and buttons on fronts, with tucks over shoulders. Open front or back. Shirts with folds down front, with pocket, with folded or flat collar.

The women of Atlanta shall have a day of it to-morrow! A day to choose the freshest and charmingest of summer dresses at prices that in no wise compare with values as you know them. It is accomplishing such results as this that adds zest to the game of merchandising; that brings the fine sense of a good job well done. We have heard much, very much, of late about dress sales, their whys and wherefores, but somehow or other one advertising pen---that must be truthful ---has had to wait until now for this opportunity. It has arrived with a vengeance! But how to make the most of it?

Simply by reciting the plain and interesting facts to the women of Atlanta, who have yet, when they visit this store, to be undeceived by any statement that Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. makes.

Our dress buyer has just come in from New York and with him upward of three hundred summer dresses of surpassing beauty. They are anything but the usual kinds, a happy relief from cheap laces, gaudy embroideries, from dresses made down to a price. These are from a maker whose business pride is a great asset. It holds him above any kind of cheapening, of skimping in quality of materials; it keeps him everlastingly working out new and becoming styles. Whether it is early April when he is making dresses and fair profits, or whether it is mid-June, when he is making dresses and readiness for another season, the same thoroughness characterizes his work.

We tell you this now merely because you have not seen the dresses. After your visit to-morrow, when your eyes will have taken in all that the dresses are, you will more fully understand.

There are white voile dresses--all white and with touches of color here and there on collars, cuffs, in girdles; there are striped voile dresses, there are Dresden crepe dresses and flowered crepe dresses---any number of different kinds---so many that, we warrant, the question most women will have to decide is which one or several she likes best.

And back of them all is that fine fact that every one may be bought at a splendid saving. But you will not have to be told of the saving---it is evident. You will know no such attractive affairs could be sold regularly at such prices, you will know they have not been sold at such prices!

$5.00 for $7.50 to $9.75 Dresses

There are fifty of these. You may choose from white voiles or from white crepes, figured and flowered in delicate pinks, blues, lavenders and the like. They are trimmed with laces and embroideries, yokes are often entirely of embroidery—and have belts (some of them) of black velvet or folded satin. The finest five dollars worth we have known, and we believe you will agree—they are so cool and summery, they fit so splendidly.

$6.98 for $10.00 to $12.50 Dresses

One hundred twenty-five of these. There are all white voiles and their laces and embroideries will be a revelation for fineness. There are dresses with white crepe skirts and smart coats of Dresden crepes, in which the daintiest flowers show, rose, Copenhagen, over plain tucked vests and with belt and facings of satin. With these we have put a number of $10.00 and $11.75 black China silk dresses from our own stock. Half-length sleeves, flat round collar.

$8.75 for $12.50 to $15.00 Dresses

There are one hundred twenty-five of these and would there were more! Voiles are the materials, and such voiles, seemingly as crisp and fine as could be woven. Some are white, some are striped in shades favored right now. Those all white are made elegant with embroidery medallions surrounded by laces in yokes, and those striped are newly styled dresses, simple and dainty, that mean worlds of satisfaction for morning trips to town, for afternoon wear.

The "Halling Man," Who Was Contemporaneous With the Mammoth, Had a Brain Larger Than the Average To-day

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

ONE of the most interesting of all finds of the remains of prehistoric man is that recently made near the village of Halling, on the shore of the River Medway, in Kent, England.

It is the complete skeleton of a man whose body had evidently been buried by his friends, in the place where it was found, AT LEAST FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

So perfectly are the bones preserved that it requires but the slightest exercise of the imagination to see this prehistoric gentleman standing before us as he was in life, clothed in his rude skin garments, which other discoveries have indicated were the fashion in his time.

That it is no misnomer to call him a "gentleman" is proved by the noble outlines of his head and face. The skull and face bones are exceedingly well shaped and finely modeled, and careful measurements show that he possessed a brain above the modern average in size. He must, then, in all probability, have been a marked man in the ancient community in which he lived.

Relics of that community have been found near the site of his forgotten grave, upon which a dozen historic races have unknowingly trod, for he had already been sleeping there not less than thirteen thousand years when Julius Caesar with his legions invaded Britain.

Wonderful Relics.

These relics consist of extensive remains of ancient fire-hearths, with specimens of flint implements, such as were used in the Neolithic, or "Later Stone Age." The hearths were situated about 30 yards away from the place where the skeleton lay, and in the earth layer immediately above it, which is regarded as sufficient proof that the man had been buried at that spot. The position of the skeleton, which was doubled up in a manner commonly employed in ancient burials, is another indication that the remains had not been moved since their original interment.

As the English archaeologist, Mr. W. H. Cook, has remarked, one can, in imagination, see this Englishman of a hundred and fifty centuries ago seated with his family and his friends beside those very hearths, which have remained in position during all the intervening ages. The curling smoke and the flickering blaze may have startled the eyes of long-horned stags, and even of huge mammoths, for those animals are known to have inhabited England in the geological period to which these remains belong.

One of the most interesting facts about this "Halling Man" is that he possessed a type of bodily structure closely accordant with that of many of the inhabitants of the County of Kent to-day. He was rather short of stature, measuring only 5 feet 4 inches (Napolean was not much taller than that), but he was well formed, though thick-set, and, as already remarked, he had a head of admirable proportions, with a brain cavity of unusual dimensions. This may be taken as an indication of the exceeding slowness with which the human race has made its upward march. In the later ages the brains of men seem to have developed more in quality than in quantity.

Peculiar Interest.

There is another respect in which this discovery possesses peculiar interest, and that is with regard to the completeness of the evidence which it affords of the real antiquity of the find. The nature of this evidence is shown at a glance by the accompanying sectional picture. The discovery was accidental, due to the fact that a trench was being driven for a sewer. A slip of earth occurred in the steep face of the trench, and a part of the skeleton fell with the tumbling earth, the rest remaining in its original position.

The top picture was drawn from a description of the Halling Man as Professor Arthur Keith, a famous English scientist, believes he must have looked. The diagram below shows the exact position of the skeleton as it was found, and the various strata of earth over it that gave its discoverers the basis for their calculations on its age.

The ground was distinctly marked by five successive layers, first a stratum of grass-covered soil at the top; then a layer of red loam; next a stratum of brick earth; after that a layer of river sand, and then another stratum of brick earth, in which the skeleton lay, about six feet below the present surface of the ground.

Curiously enough, an ancient streamlet had cut a bed (subsequently filled up with later deposits) directly over the skeleton. This bed had penetrated nearly through the first stratum of brick earth, and then, evidently, the streamlet was diverted, for below its bottom the strata had never been disturbed since the interment took place. If the water had continued to flow there it would, probably, have carried away the skeleton. It was this water that deposited the layer of red loam.

The geologists who have examined the ground are certain that the undisturbed layers above the place where the skeleton lay have remained, just as natural forces slowly deposited them, from the Pleistocene Age to the present time.

Ages ago another peril threatened the grave of the Halling Man. The River Medway, which now flows half a mile away from the spot, once cut down a terrace edge, fifteen feet deep, within a comparatively short distance of the ancient burial place, and, if this cutting away of the ground by the river had continued, the skeleton, and all the relics found near it, would have disappeared. But it was preserved, as if to throw light on the antiquity of man.

What Every Girl Should Know

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"In every company the man with the fact is like the guide you hire to lead your party up a mountain, or through a difficult country. He may not compare with any of the party in mind, or breeding, or courage, or possessions, but he is much more important to the present need than any of them."—Emerson.

EVERY girl should know:

That superficial knowledge is like trimming on a garment, expensive and of no value so far as real utility is concerned;

That eloquence and show may command attention, but it takes the fact to hold it;

That the more promises a man makes the fewer he will keep, contenting himself with having made the promises;

That the friend who pursues with sympathy is often governed by a less noble motive; curiosity is the fact;

That the lover who would by wily insinuations of his greater devotion cause a girl to doubt her parents' love is her worst enemy;

That no girl ever went wrong as a result of confiding in her mother;

A Better Man.

That the man attracted by modesty and good sense is a better man than the one won by immodest display and frivolity.

That when a lover asks that the engagement be kept secret from the girl's parents it is proof he has made engagements a matter of habit and wants to make it easier for himself when he tires and breaks away;

That the most expensive garment repels admiration if there is evidence that neatness doesn't underlie.

That the girl who can not deny herself penny wastes until she has accomplished a dollar benefit must reform if she ever hopes to rank among the world's helpful, useful, progressive women.

That it is one thing to sing "Home, Sweet Home" with tears in one's voice when away from home, and something more to make it home, sweet home, when one is there.

That no girl should delude herself in the belief that she can reform a husband when she has never been an influence for good on her brother.

Hard to Keep.

That silly accomplishments may win a man's love, but it takes a command of hard, practical knowledge to keep it;

That pessimism is not the mark of a thinker, but rather a proof of fashionable shallowness;

That father, in whom the hard knocks of life have crushed all romance, is a better judge of the fitness of the man who comes wooing than mother, to whom a little love of the romantic clings to her dying day;

That the fact in every relation in life is worth more than a thousand fancies.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is flashing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

At this the black-bearded man, with a sort of apology, drew from a corner of the cabin an iron ball and shackles of the kind that are used in Georgian penitentiaries and locked the chain around the prisoner's ankle. Then he placed the fetter in such a position at the foot of Gordon's bunk that he would not be inconvenienced very much by it and wished him good night. He retired soon after, as did one of the other men, leaving the third to stand guard. The latter placed a fresh candle close to the head of Gordon's bed and seated himself on the bench, six-shooter in hand.

No Chance to Escape.

Next morning Gordon had more of a chance to stretch himself. The fetter was removed from his leg, and after breakfast he was taken outdoors and allowed to do as he pleased within certain limits. The place the mountaineers had chosen to take him was situated in a kind of cup or hollow in the hills. It was effectually concealed, and there was no chance of their being discovered, unless someone should inadvertently stumble on their hiding place. Figuring on this possibility, Gordon told himself there was but one chance in a million of anyone finding the place by accident. Off in the mountain country, several miles from a road that was almost never used except between the mansion and Pew Station, he was as much a prisoner as though he were on some desert island.

His captors took absolutely no chance of his escaping. Wherever he went within the limits pointed out to him by the black-bearded man, he was followed, as the ringmaster, long whip in hand, follows the performing horses in a circus, by one of the four men holding a gun ready for instant action. At intervals Gordon would try to start a conversation, but he did all the talking. Never were such silent men as the mountaineers proved to be. He could get absolutely no explanation as to why he was being held a prisoner.

Wanted Bat and Ball.

Before the day was over Gordon made a long speech to them in which he covered all the points he could think of. He told them who he was. He said he had never injured anyone intentionally. He asked them if he were being held for a ransom, in which case he invited them to name their figure. To this proposition he received no reply, nor, in fact, could he get a word of any kind from them. Silence followed every question he asked. In spite of the exasperation of this sort of thing, Gordon preserved his good nature throughout the day.

After supper Gordon made another request. He said, with a smile:

"As you gentlemen seem inclined to keep me here for several days at least, there are a few things I would like to have. Can you get them for me?"

"Maybe so," replied the black-bearded man. They were the first words spoken that day.

"Well, then, in the first place, I would like a toothbrush and a comb. Then I would like a baseball bat and two or three baseballs. I will pay for them. Can you get them for me?"

The bearded man nodded.

"All right, then," said Gordon, cheerfully. "And when can I write another letter?"

There was no reply to this question, and shortly after Gordon crawled into his bunk. The chain was placed on his ankle, one of the men took up guard duty, and the others retired for the night.

Gordon lay awake for some time, thinking over the extraordinary predicament he found himself in. It is true he had spent most of the day in thinking about it, but it was such a puzzling problem that he could make no headway in the solution of it.

On the morning of the fourth day the youngest man of the four saddled the horse and rode off. Late in the afternoon he returned, bringing the things Gordon had asked for and a few other articles besides. He handed the bearded man a large envelope, which Gordon could see had come through the mail. The envelope was opened before his eyes, and Gordon saw the bearded man draw four bank notes from it. He handed one to each of the other men and placed the other in his own pocket.

It required no more than this to convince Gordon that Forrest Cain was at the bottom of the whole business. In casting about for a reason for his capture he had naturally thought of Cain, but this act of passing money around made him sure now that the Atlanta man had hired these men to take him and hold him. He could not fathom Cain's reasons for paying out good money for this sort of a cheap revenge for fancied wrongs. After turning the matter over in his mind for awhile, he suddenly burst out laughing.

"You know this Forrest Cain is nothing more or less than a snake, don't you?" he asked.

A look of surprise came into the faces of his captors and Gordon knew he had hit the mark.

"I'll tell you men something about that fellow," he continued. He proceeded to do so, giving an account of the first time he met Cain in front of the ball park in Atlanta, the incident of Cain driving him to the outskirts of the city at night and the chastisement administered to him, and lastly, the affair of recent date in which Mildred, Elmer and himself were involved with Cain. The mountaineers listened attentively, but as the bearded man made no comment, the others refrained from doing so.

"How much is he giving you for the job?" demanded Gordon, with a smile. He was careful to keep good-natured all the time.

Men Keep Silent.

No answer. The men smoked on in silence.

"You know I've got some money myself," suggested Gordon. "Maybe you and I can make some kind of a deal."

No answer.

"All right," said Gordon, after a pause. "Think it over. When you get ready to talk business let me know."

But the men were never ready to talk. He took up the subject more than once, but could get nothing out of the men. It became evident that they preferred the bird in the hand rather than a bird in the bush they were not sure of getting. After studying his captors for several days, Gordon became convinced that they were not overburdened with intelligence. There was nothing even crafty about them. They were not mean or vicious and they never bothered Gordon or interfered with him so long as he stayed within the prescribed limits of what might be called the jail yard; but their vigil was unceasing and Gordon could not move a step without one of the men following him within a distance of 10 or 15 feet, with a gun ever ready in his hand.

It was a peculiar situation and would have been laughable for Gordon except for the annoyance of the whole thing. He was allowed to write to Mildred every five or six days, but, of course, he could not write the words he desired to write, nor could he tell her openly where he was or why he could not come to her. He continued the simple cryptogram he began in his first letter. Something told him that before long Mildred, or perhaps the active-minded Elmer, would decipher the hidden meaning and would organize a rescue party.

Closely Watched.

If there be youthful readers of this narrative, they have doubtless asked themselves why Gordon Kelly, the big, strong, powerful man, did not sail into the mountaineers, take their guns away from them, give them all a good thrashing and march them, triumphantly, to the nearest lockup. Some of the youthful readers might not be satisfied unless Gordon Kelly killed them all and left them for the buzzards, while he rushed back to the bungalow and threw himself in Mildred's arms. That would be very nice, indeed; but things didn't go that way. Gordon had no opportunity to end his captivity in this sanguinary manner. He looked for loopholes of escape, and he watched carefully (while appearing not to do so) for an opening which would enable him to spring upon his guard, wrest the weapon from his hand and turn the tables on his captors. But while these men might have been considerably below the average in intelligence, and while they might be sluggish in their movements, they certainly knew how to do the work they had cut out for themselves, which was simply to watch over Gordon Kelly night and day, so that he could not get away from them or overcome them.

For example, when he desired to exercise with bat and ball, not less than two of them went with him to a little cleared space near the cabin and saw to it that he was never more than twenty feet from them at any time. And what kind of exercise could Gordon take with bat and ball alone? He had the knack of batting the ball straight up in the air to a tremendous height and catching it when it came down, never having to move more than ten feet in any direction to do so. This would seem to be a foolish performance, but it served to keep his muscles limbered up, his eyes bright, his condition good and his hands toughened to the shock of catching a baseball.

Two Flashes.

And so the days passed. And the weeks passed, with Gordon Kelly still bottled up in the log cabin or within a few feet of it. And then one day there came a change.

His captors had procured newspapers for Gordon now and then, and one afternoon he was seated in the shade of a tree, with his back against the trunk of it, reading. The guard sat fifteen feet in front of him, pistol in hand. And while he was absorbed in the baseball scores something flashed across the page of his newspaper. A moment later there came another flash. He cautiously lowered the newspaper and glanced at his guard. Finding his attention had not been attracted, Gordon brought the paper up to his face again and gave a little gesture with one of his hands. Then, holding the paper in such a way as to hide his head from the mountaineer, he slowly turned.

What he saw caused him to smile and put his paper aside, and arise and stretch himself and yawn.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IN no place was the subject of Gordon Kelly's disappearance more thoroughly discussed than in the club house of the Atlanta baseball club. Manager Bill Smith stuck to his opinion that the great player would appear when least expected, while Long Tom Morrissey was firm in the belief that Gordon had become so interested in the young woman who rushed on the field when he lay unconscious at the home plate that he had lost interest in baseball.

"That kid was a high-class guy and he don't have to play ball," declared Long Tom, in proof of his assertion, when the $50,000 player came up for the daily club house debate one afternoon before the game. "Why, he made the rest of us look like bush leaguers with his silk underwear and his silk stockings and his ten-dollar shirts. I know what they cost, because I priced some of them in a swell shop downtown the other day. And one day he told me, just casual-like, that he owned six automobiles, and he offered to give me one of 'em if I would learn to run it, but I told him no, as I was too old to risk breaking my neck. And the kid can talk French, too."

This last statement clinched the argument and had the effect of placing Gordon among the "highbrows" in the minds of his former clubmates.

They continued to talk of Gordon Kelly when they went out on the field for preliminary practice and they were still talking about the mystery of his disappearance when the players of the visiting team appeared. Among them was Hamil, the tall, rawboned, disconsolate-looking pitcher. By means of a curve ball as crooked as Pearl Street, New York, which he had recently developed, Hamil had been having great success in the box lately, but this did not serve to brighten his countenance and he still went about looking as though he had received the usual ten days' notice from his manager that his pitching repertoire was not puzzling enough to warrant his continuance with the club.

Hamil sauntered up to Long Tom Morrissey, bent on making some gloomy remark that passed with him as humor, and heard Long Tom arguing with his side partner over the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

"And I say the kid's quit baseball for good," declared the veteran backstop, emphatically. "What do you think about it, Groucho?" he added, turning to Hamil.

The Number of the Auto.

"That puts me in mind of something that happened on the first trip here," replied the gloomy pitcher. "A guy comes around to the hotel one night and gets himself introduced to me and then asks me to go for a ride with him in his speed wagon. He takes me out a ways and all of a sudden he starts to knock Gordon Kelly, and winds up by offering me a thousand bones if I would beat up the kid. What do you know about that?"

"What was the guy's name?" demanded Long Tom.

"I never did catch the guy's name, but he was one of them rich young fellows, to judge by his looks; either that or a four-flusher—you can't tell 'em apart sometimes. But I do remember the number on his automobile."

"What was it?" cried Long Tom, fiercely.

"It was '50000 Ga.,'" replied Hamil. "What you getting so excited about?"

The tale created a profound impression on the mind of Long Tom. He was a great judge of human nature and he immediately began to connect the owner of Car No. 50000 Ga. with the disappearance of Gordon Kelly. He applied some of the uncanny knowledge that told him unerringly as a catcher when a base runner would try to steal second base, to the case of the automobilist and Gordon Kelly. He reasoned that a man who would stoop to hire another man to do his dirty work would stoop to do almost anything. He became so absorbed in the problem that when he went out on the third base coaching lines he forgot all about the game and waved a runner home on a three-base drive when he hadn't a chance in a hundred of scoring. For this piece of stupidity he was bawled out by Bill Smith and sent in disgrace to the bench, where for the remainder of the game he brooded over the story told him by Hamil.

Long Tom Gets Busy.

After the game, Long Tom changed his uniform for street clothes and started downtown on a street car. On the car he met Whiting, The Georgian's baseball writer.

"Hello, Percy," he said, hailing the newspaper man. "Say, you know something about automobiles, don't you?"

"That's my middle name, Tom," replied Whiting. "What do you want to do, buy one?"

"Not on your life. I want to know if there's any way of finding out the owner of a car by the number on the machine."

"Sure. If you're in a hurry about it, come with me to the office and I'll find out for you right away."

"I'll go you," said Long Tom. "By the way, did you write that account about Gordon Kelly being seen up in the mountains and then disappearing at the time that cyclone hit that section?"

"No; Farnsworth wrote that. He went up there and dug up the facts."

"Is Farnsworth in the office now?"

"I expect he is. What have you on your mind?"

"Oh, nothing much; just an idea, that's all," replied Long Tom.

At The Georgian office Farnsworth shook hands with the visitor, while Whiting looked in his desk for a list of automobile owners and the numbers of their cars.

Owned by Forrest Cain.

"Who is he?" demanded the ball player.

"Say, Bill, come on out and have something to eat with me. I got an idea and maybe there's something in it for you," said Long Tom. "Much obliged, Percy," he added. "See you later."

When Long Tom and Farnsworth were seated at a table, the veteran catcher reported the story told him by Hamil, after which he reasoned things out so clearly to the newspaper man that Farnsworth became convinced that there was a good deal to Morrissey's theory.

There were two reasons why Long Tom's line of argument appealed to the newspaper man. In the first place, he saw the ingredients of another bangup story for The Georgian, and in the second place Atlanta had opened to be insufferably hot just at that time and he was casting about for an excuse to get away from the office for a brief period.

Farnsworth put in the evening learning all there was to learn about Forrest Cain, and then laid wires to keep covered on the movements of that person. His method of procedure was to get in touch with Whisky (not the alcoholic beverage, but the colored man employed by the Atlanta Baseball Club). Whisky, being a somewhat important personage among his coterie, fixed things up so that Farnsworth, through devious channels that led up to George, the colored valet of Cain, would receive daily reports of the man he was trailing, and in addition he would be informed whenever Cain was to leave town. Then, having arranged things at his office, he laid back and waited for something to break.

On Cain's Trail.

Farnsworth had not long to wait. Four days after he set out to run down the Forrest Cain clew he received word through his underground route that the man under suspicion would leave town next morning by an early train, destination unknown.

Farnsworth sat in a taxicab stationed within 100 feet of Cain's home from 6 until 8:30 o'clock on the following morning before Cain issued forth, without bag or baggage, and, jumping into his car, which had been sent around from the garage, was driven to the depot. The newspaper man followed along behind, but was not quick enough to reach the ticket office in time to learn Cain's destination. He trailed his man into a passenger coach and dropped into a seat ten feet behind him.

The train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going, Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station, and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They traveled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off, and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him, Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"'Bout 30 miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that man is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

This place appeared to be worse than Pew Creek as a transportation center.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait.

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Finally from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far-off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning freight cars. Then from out of the darkness dashed a horse, covered with lather. Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train, seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his car and sped toward its mark.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-first installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 32d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city, but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully, and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. James G. LeClear, 336 Hunt Street, Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while, but did not get well, so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. Charles Boell, 2650 South Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

OF course it is a moot question whether a man can by taking thought add a cubit to his stature; but long ago woman decided that by taking pains she could add vast amounts to her beauty. And now we have in our ranks a gentle voiced prophet who is sure that by taking thought "of beauty we may possess beauty—that by loving loveliness we make it ours."

"Have you a beauty secret?" I asked Helen Page—one of Marcus Loew's most brightly twinkling stars. "Will you tell me and all the rest of the seekers after pulchritude how to set about increasing Nature's dower?"

An Unusual Method.

Miss Page smiled with severe assurance, "I THINK myself lovely," said she. "Any one can do that—if she believes it, and believes in the Power that created harmony, not discord. The day is surely coming when faith will give a woman all the beauty she desires."

"Enough to dispense with 'make-up' if she is an actress?" I quizzed. "Could you think yourself cheeks so red that the footlight glare would not pale them?"

"Oh, I don't expect to see that," answered the little lady of the interview with undiminished sweetness. "But twenty or thirty years from now I think the world will be ready for a woman to go before the glaring stage lights and to project beauty over that white glare just because she feels herself part of the Universal Perfection. Now I won't try to convert you to science—but surely you can answer this question but one way: Does a woman who is gracious, sweet and kind and who is filling her mind with beautiful thoughts, radiate a certain charm?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the interviewer. "I know women who exhale an atmosphere of sweetness as a rose does perfume."

She Is Practical.

"Exactly!" exclaimed Miss Page, with satisfaction. "Now we are on common ground, and we can look on beauty from a Mental Science angle—though don't forget that I feel sure all the world will some day see beauty and health from the point of view of the Greater Science.

"Now my theory of beauty is to think beauty—not to see ugliness—to feel that there is no evil, and so to surround yourself by an atmosphere from which you absorb and to which you give the real beauty of the spirit.

"Honestly, now, can't you see how bright that would make eyes, and how sweet mouths would be and how soft and fine a skin would have to grow in my rare thought-atmosphere?"

Do you know, little Sister Skeptics, I did begin to see! Think of the pink and white imperfection, tango-tea ladies, with near-ruby lips and near-sighted belladonnaed eyes you see prancing about in sun-glare and white-lights stare! Don't you wish they would think themselves some soul-beauty, a touch of spirit loveliness and get a real "bloom of youth" instead of the white-lead, red-paint, hard-as-nails kind?

Now Helen Page puts theory into practice and her shoulder to the wheel, too!

"I live an absolutely regular, on-schedule-to-the-minute life," said she. "I get up at seven—and in regular order there follow hot bath, donning of riding togs and breakfast. That is always stewed fruit, toast and coffee. There follows a fifteen or twenty-mile gallop in that perfection of loveliness, God's out-doors, the life-giver for us all, on foot or a-horseback. Then comes a quick, cold plunge, a simple luncheon at 12:30 exactly; the afternoon round of duties, a supper at 6 and my evening's work, which is not work, but a chance for self-expression.

"Nature will give you health and beauty and help you overcome past errors. I have a fat friend, who vainly tried to drug herself into the 'supple silhouette.' I rescued her. Now she eats two simple meals a day and does a five-mile country tramp each day. She is swathed in red flannel, and nature and natural perspiration and a tonic cold bath are helping her get the figure that is really hers.

"Oh, yes, we can all think beauty," continued Miss Page, "and we can unthink past errors in the line of hips and double chins if we add a little practical effort to our thoughts."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma last nite, do you remember that magazeen editor that was up to the house for dinner about two months ago?

Indeed I do, sed Ma. He was certingly a charming gentelman. I remember distinckly what charming manners he had. Thay was perfect.

I dident pay much attenshun to his manners, sed Pa. I doant think it is any grate credit for a man to eet with his fork. A man is supposed to have manners, the saim as he is supposed to pay his way. What I am gitting at was this: Do you reemember the argument he & me had about verse?

I doant think I do, sed Ma. You are always having a argument with sumbody. If it isent about verse it is about sumthing else. What was the argument?

Well, sed Pa, I main-tained that the poetry in the leeding newspapers was much better as a rule than the poetry in the magazeens. The maga-zeen editor scoffed at the idea, sed Pa. He sed that the stuff printed in the magazeens was pure poetry & that the stuff printed in the paipers was nothing but dog-gerel.

Well, what of it? sed Ma.

The Poem.

What of it? sed Pa. Everything of it. Why, Pa sed, if the newspaiper poetry is ded dog-gerel, the stuff I see in the magazeens is ded mackerel. Well, this is what I am gitting at: I have here the latest issue of that magazeen man's magazeen I am going to reed aloud to you a poem wich he thought good enuff to have illustraited & played up on a whole page, rite next to good reeding matter. Listen:

Hector was slain. The Trojans stood aloof
And wept as wept the skies all lowering.
Hector, brave Hector! Favored by the gods
With ten men's strength and fair Adonis's beauty.
Mighty Achilles, springing from his tent,
Had called on Jove to steel his wondrous arm
And Nature shuddered when the Titans fought.
The corpse of Hector, poor, dishonored dust,
The Greeks did drag around the Trojan walls
Behind a chariot that would madly flee
From living Hector, once the pride of Troy.

I think that is kind of pritty, sed Ma. It sounds like reel poetry to me.

Does it, sed Pa. I think it is a dozen lines of slushymush.

I suppoas sum newspaper poet wud have rote it better, said Ma. How wud he have rote it?

A Little Different.

Prubly like this, sed Pa:

Thare was an old geezer naimed Hector,
Who fought when half loaded with nectar.
He was stabbed through the lunch
By a Greek with a punch,
And they sent for the Red Cross collector.

That is very ordinary, sed Ma. You rote that yureself. Yes, sed Pa, I did rite it myself, & let me whisper to you, sweetheart, sed Pa, I rote the other one for a joak, too. The one I red first. I rote it with my left hand the nite of the argument & sent it to his magazeen for a joak. He printed it, dident he? sed Pa. I guess them magazeen editors is wise old owls, aint thay. Ha, ha!

—WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Explaining It.

A schoolmaster in the country delivered an address to the scholars, of which the following passage is an example:

"You boys ought to be kind to your little sisters. I once knew a bad boy who struck his little sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't fade and die in the early summer time, when the June roses were blooming, with the sweet words of forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose and hit him over the head with a rolling-pin, so that he couldn't go to school for more than a month, on account of not being able to put his hat on."

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it, the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that has condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significance. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. * * * Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"I Had No Proof."

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Thereat, he hastened to make up for this momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said, briskly.

"Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question bearing at his brain forced him to speak roughly, building hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And presently, he went on, half-stunned over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly, "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on, ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

Mary Is Resourceful.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with honest mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling was a love of things esthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, persuasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips, as she smiled so winsomely.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were drawled in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed. . . . This is what she said in that so-called voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

THE CAT

By Dorothy Dix

THE Cat is what the kitten turns into when it is forty years old and gets three chins. Only the Cat never finds out that it is no longer a kitten, and it goes along acting kittenish until death overtakes it trying to do a cute trick. This is one of the 9,879,431 reasons why people take to their heels when they see this fearsome animal approaching.

This cruel and ferocious beast, which has been well named the Terror of the Hearthstone, is found in all parts of the habitable globe, but it abounds most plentifully in civilized communities, owing to foolish game laws which provide no open season in which it may be shot at sight. This is a sad mistake which will doubtless be corrected in time; but, in consequence of it, there is scarcely a neighborhood at present that is not infested by one or more old Cats that make life a burden to the entire community.

Undoubtedly there is no other living creature that inspires such abject fear in the heart of man as does the Cat. No man has ever yet had sufficient courage to pursue one and capture it, or try to domesticate it, and there are innumerable instances on record of intrepid hunters of big game, who have tracked the hippopotami to their lairs in darkest Africa and dallied with lions and tigers in the jungle, who have turned and fled without even putting up a fight when they found a Cat had taken possession of their own homes.

When men so dread and fear the Cat, it may seem strange that so many possess these pestiferous animals. The explanation is to be found in the fact that hope springs eternal in the human breast and that you never can persuade a man that a pretty and cunning little kitten is going to grow up to be like its ma. Every man has seen the thing happen a million times, but he is confident it won't occur to him until it does. Then it's too late. The catastrophe has happened.

In looks the Cat is of a harmless and even innocuous appearance, especially when it is young; and, although it has very sharp claws, it keeps them concealed until there is a good chance to scratch.

One of its favorite ways of clawing is by apparently paying you a compliment, as, for instance, when one says to a woman: "My dear, what a pretty new ring you have. I always think those little cheap diamond chips make up so effectively"; or, "Darling, how well you are looking! You must have gained fifteen pounds this Summer"; or, to a man, "Oh, Mr. Smith, how clever you are at driving an automobile! You get almost as much speed out of this cheap little machine as Mr. Croesus does out of his big imported car."

Of the habits of the Cat only three things are definitely known. One of these is that it will purr under your hand only so long as you stroke the fur the right way, and the minute that you ruffle it it will spring at you and tear you to pieces. Another is that the Cat loves a warm brick, and invariably snuggles up to the man in sight who has the biggest pocketbook and is the best spender; while its third characteristic is its ability to howl all night without taking time to catch its breath, and to murder sleep for all in its vicinity. It has been estimated that the vocal power of a Cat is 17,989,721 kilowats an hour.

There are a great many varieties of Cats. There is the Kitten Cat, who claws every other girl and tells young men that their complexions are hand-made; there is the House Cat, who claws her husband because she can't have an automobile; there is the Professional Cat, who claws her rivals in business; there is the Club Cat, who claws everything in sight every time she can't boss things, there is the Society Cat, who scratches the reputation of every woman who does not invite her to her parties; and there is the Mother-in-Law Cat, who simply eats the poor son-in-law alive. She is the most feared of all the different varieties of Cats, because, when she taketh up her abode in a man's house, he can neither drive her out nor smoke her out.

The spitting of Cats is what is known technically as repartee.

Most Cats belong to the feminine gender, but when they are Tommies instead of Tabbies they are the Cattiest Cats on earth.

Fashions of the Moment

Models From the Paris Shops

By OLIVETTE.

The bodice shows a certain fullness at the waistline, with a three-quarter sleeve, set in a low armhole and finished by a double flounce of "Blonde," tightened by a small bias of cherry satin. It is also of cherry satin and holds up a broad band of "Chinese blue" charmeuse, which hangs over the "drape" and is finished by a silk fringe.

The other is an original afternoon dress of "vanilla" cote de cheval silk material.

From the bodice, at first glance, are only seen the under arm and the lower part of the armhole, holding a three-quarter sleeve, trimmed with a high rever of the same material and finished by a high "plisse lingerie." The front is cut in a long waist coat shape, in a material of "cream and lilac tones," showing an effect of blouse at the waist line and finished by two points. A row of antique buttons in the shape of almonds, trim the front of each side.

A very broad turned-up collar of "vanilla" cote de cheval falls over the neck, and a small fichu of white net crosses over the chest.

The skirt, slightly going up in front, is trimmed over the hips with draped panniers. It is scalloped at the hem, slightly rounded, and a small ruching of the same material trims the hem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET HIM CHOOSE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a man four years my senior. He has taken me to several places of amusement and acts as though he cares a great deal for me when in my company. I know that he also calls on and takes out a friend of mine, but he never mentions her name to me. She also knows that he takes me out. We are both invited to a party, with escorts, and she and I want to ask him. We refuse to give in to each other, and I don't know what to do. B. L. A.

It is an opportunity to find out which girl he cares the more for. Both ask him, by all means, with the understanding that the girl he refuses will retire from the field. Under no circumstances should a girl accept the devotion of a man, knowing he is giving the same devotion to another girl. Let this test settle the matter.

FOR HER SAKE, NO!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a girl for six months until recently we had a little quarrel and we did not speak for a week. We made up a few days ago, but during the week we were mad she accepted the attentions of another man, but she still says she loves me and always will. Do you think it is worth while for me to think of her any longer? D. D.

You quarreled with her, and if she found comfort in the society of another man while you were pouting she did just right and I admire her spunk.

Your question leaves a doubt of the depth of your devotion, so, perhaps, for her sake, it will be just as well if you trouble her no longer.

MORE REASON FOR GIVING HIM UP.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 and have been keeping company for a year with a young man who loves me very much.

Recently I met another young man who also loves me and whom I dearly love.

How am I to tell the first young man that I don't care for him, as he has told me that he would turn to drink if I ever gave him up? BETTY.

If he is weak enough to hold a threat over your head you have reason for giving him up, even though there is no other man.

As it is, your love for the second man makes a parting with the first imperative. Justice to yourself, to him and to the man you love demands it.

Kinky Hair

Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your hair. Kinky hair can not be made straight. You have to have hair before you can straighten it. When you use Exelento Quinine Pomade it feeds the scalp and roots of the hair and makes hair grow very fast and you will soon have nice long hair, which will be long, soft and silky. It stops falling hair and cleans dandruff at once.

Price 25 cents by all druggists or by mail, on receipt of stamps or coin. Exelento Medicine Company, Atlanta, Ga. Agents wanted everywhere. Write for particulars to-day.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"BROTHER WILFRED got the first real piece of change yesterday that he ever got from his writings," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to come home with a five-dollar check once in a while that he got from the editor of the Flour and Feed Gazette or the Monitor, but yesterday he came home and flashed a hundred-dollar note that he had just got for a song of which he wrote the words of. Even father warmed up to the poor boy when he seen the yellow C in Wilfred's trembling mitt, and you can bet the old gent wasn't in no mood to warm up until the money got in front of his eagle glance."

"Was it a ragtime song?" asked the Head Barber. "It must be, though. That's the only kind of songs that are getting the dough now."

"No, it ain't a ragtime song," replied the Manicure Lady. "It's a sad ballad, George. I was sure that it was going to be liked the minute Wilfred showed it to me, before he showed it to anybody else. I wish he hadn't made it quite so sad, though. Goodness knows there is enough weeping in this world without making up new songs with sobs in them. Still, I suppose what the public wants nowadays is extremes in songs, either something so comic that it would make a snail snicker or something sad and pensive like dreary rain falling on sweeping willows. That's the kind of a song Wilfred has wrote, George, and I'll bet you that when it is sang with slides the folks will take on something terrible. This is the way it goes. I wish I could remember the tune, but it sounds something like this:

"GONE BEYOND RECALL.

"A handsome married couple in a city far away,
Was setting in their parlor at the close of one sad day.
The couple had been scrapping for the first time in their life,
And each hard word they uttered cut the other like a knife.
At last the wife could stand no more, and just at six o'clock,
She broke a china platter on her husband's noble block.
Her husband saw the shattered dish and felt his battered head,
Then facing his impetuous wife, these sad words he then said:

"CHORUS:

"The dish is gone beyond recall; we ne'er shall see it more.
We cannot get one like it at the five and ten cent store.
I little dreamed of such coarse work when vowing I'd be true,
The dish is gone beyond recall—so is my love for you!"

"Ain't there a second verse?" asked the Head Barber after a brief pause. "A ballad ought to have two verses and tell some kind of a story. That's what Charley Harris always said, anyhow."

"There is a second verse, all right," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't know just how it goes, but it tells how the husband went crazy from the blow on his head and was all the time wanting to play Spin the Platter with the keepers at the insane asylum. The wife died of a broken heart, just like she broke the china platter, and just before she died she heard her husband, in a dream, saying them sad words, that I told you in the chorus."

"It ought to be a good seller if they want sad songs now," said the Head Barber. "It's certainly sad enough."

"It seems kind of improbable, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "No lady ought to bean a gent with a platter when dishes is so high."

ATLANTA GAINS EXTRA GAME ON EVE OF FOURTH

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday. Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

DILLON-CLABBY BOUT OFF; M'KINNON TO BOX JACK

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 23.—Jimmy Clabby, of Hammond, Ind., will not meet Jack Dillon in the 10-round bout scheduled here at the American Association Ball Park on the night of July 3. Bill McKinnon, of Boston, has been substituted for Clabby. Young Saylor, of this city, will box Battling Terry, of Pittsburg, the same night.

WILLIAMS REPORTS TO CUBS.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Fred Williams, utility outfielder of the Chicago club of the National League, who has been coaching the ball club of Notre Dame University, joined the Chicago club yesterday. Williams formerly captained Notre Dame.

D. Brown Wins Perry Adair Cup

Plays 26 Holes to Down Block

THE Perry Adair Cup has become the property of Dowdell Brown. In the tournament just completed over the course of the Atlanta Athletic Club Brown won his way through four hard matches to victory.

Every match in the tournament was a moderately hard one for the winner. But in the second round he faced Hamilton Block in one of the greatest struggles ever witnessed on the East Lake course. The end of the eighteenth hole found them all even. They halved the rest of them straight through to the twenty-sixth hole, where Brown gained the advantage. Three of the four matches in the second round went into extra holes.

The results in all flights follow:

First Flight.

First Round—D. Brown defeated H. P. D. Coewee, 1 up; H. Block defeated D. B. Osborne, 5-4; C. E. Corwine defeated S. Hard, 1 up; W. R. Tichenor defeated J. W. Bachman, 2 up; J. S. Raine defeated H. E. Harman, 5-4; T. B. Fay defeated D. E. Root, 2-1; C. Donaldson defeated W. H. Glenn, 5-3; W. F. Spalding defeated W. H. Rowan by default.

Second Round—Brown defeated Block, 1 up, 26 holes; Tichenor defeated Corwin, 1 up, 19 holes; Fay defeated Raine, 1 up, 19 holes; Donaldson defeated Spalding, 3-1.

Finals—Brown defeated Fay, 5-4.

Second Flight.

First Round—J. G. Darling defeated H. R. Calef, 3-2; W. Alfriend defeated J. D. Eby, 1 up; W. E. Spiker defeated S. Hudson, 4-3; E. T. Winston defeated Y. M. Creighton, 7-6; T. P. Hinman defeated W. Markham, 2-1; R. J. Morris defeated C. J. Lippold, 1 up; C. V. Rainwater defeated C. E. Rose, by default; W. P. Hazlewood defeated W. Rogers, 1 up, 19 holes.

Second Round—Alfriend defeated Darling, 1 up, 20 holes; Winston defeated Spiker, 7-5; Hinman defeated Morris, 1 up; Rainwater defeated Hazlewood, 2-1.

Semi-finals—Winston defeated Alfriend, 2-1; Hinman defeated Rainwater, 3-1.

Finals—Hinman defeated Winston, 1 up.

Third Flight.

First Round—L. H. Beck defeated W. C. Warren, 5-4; R. M. Blount defeated J. O. Smith, by default; R. T. Jones defeated M. Saul, 6-5; H. M. Ashe defeated John T. Smith, 6 up; W. C. Holleyman defeated G. L. Simpson, 5-3; J. C. Michael defeated J. J. Hastings, 7-6; R. E. Trippe defeated J. W. Pearse, 4-3; G. N. Spring defeated W. F. Upshaw, by default.

Second Round—Beck defeated Blount, 3-2; Jones defeated Ashe, 5-4; Holleyman defeated McMichael, 5-4; Trippe defeated Spring, 2-1.

Semi-finals—Beck defeated Jones, 5-4; Trippe defeated Holleyman, 1 up.

Finals—Trippe defeated Beck, 1 up.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Mike Saul, Spider Britt and Kid Young are some of the local boys who are simply pining to get into action in the near future. Saul and Nelson recently fought a draw at the Auditorium and a return match between the pair should prove a corker.

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

* * *

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

If the Suffs insist on so shoving in their interference it may be necessary to equip English race horses with fenders.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Atlantans in Tennis Tourney in Orleans

The twenty-sixth annual tennis tournament for the championship of the South begins Monday on the courts of the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club.

Men's singles, men's doubles and ladies' singles will be the three events. Consolation singles will also be held.

The winner in the men's singles must meet Carleton Y. Smith, of Atlanta, the present title holder, and holder of the challenge cup in that event.

This cup was originally presented by the Atlanta Athletic Club. It has been won twice by Conrad B. Doyle, of Washington, and Dr. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, and once each by T. R. Pell, of New York; R. C. Hunt, of California, and C. Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

The Social World

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE BREITENBUCHER announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Lydia McBride, to Mr. John Ware Holliday, the ceremony to be performed Monday evening at the home of the bride at 8 o'clock.

The announcement of the engagement of this young couple will be received with surprise by their friends. Miss McBride is one of the most popular members of the younger set, and while she had not yet made her debut, she has been greatly admired. Mr. Holliday was one of the popular Tech students, and is at present making his home in Waycross.

The wedding this evening will be witnessed only by the family and a few close friends. Dr. Hugh Walker will officiate, and little Misses Isabel Breitenbucher and Lula Lewis, as ribbon bearers, will be the only attendants.

An informal reception will follow the ceremony, after which the bride and bridegroom will leave for a short wedding journey, and will then go to Waycross for the summer.

Vesper Club Dance.

Among the interesting social events recently was the dance given by the Vesper Club. Several charming visitors present were Misses Lucy and Sarah Veal, of Austell, guests of Mrs. A. Scott; Miss Jessie Simmons, of Chattanooga, guest of Miss Allie Ramsaur, and Miss Camille Calman, of Brunswick, guest of Miss Maude Rolestone. Others present were Misses Maude Lewis, Justine Henderson, Edwina Harper, Grace Angler, Jamie Arnold, Alice Snodgrass, Edna Malraven, Ada Eaves, Virginia Woofin, Adelaide Callaway, Agnes Bell, Jennie Lou Lindsey, Gertrude Jenkins, Mary Anderson, Louise Dobbs, Josephine Smith, Virginia Standard, Margaret Jester, Katherine Perry, Martha Roper, Elva McKee, Estelle Brown, Miss Purtell, Annie Kate Green, Maude Rolestone, Ada Dorothy, Allie Ramsaur, Verna Eaves, Louise Jones and Bert Williams, and Messrs. L. H. Withers, E. M. Stephens, Clarence Trotti, Ernest Trotti, Morton Rolestone, Robert H. Atkinson, L. D. Acker, Cy Young, Drew Swanson, Bert Lloyd, Fred Smith, G. Payne, Ernest Acker, William Bedell, W. E. Weems, Marion Hamilton, Franklin S. Chalmers, Charlie Kruger, Lynn Floyd, Robert Ledsinger, Avary Dimmock, Don Atchinson, Holland Symmes, B. S. Barker, Jr., A. C. Lampkin, Judson Willingham, Crawford Maddox, Frank Kempton, A. F. Green, A. H. Anderson, C. L. Bean, M. B. Durrett, Irwin Henderson, W. R. Sewell, E. J. Wilder, Earl Daly, W. C. King, Joe Heard and J. T. Allensworth.

The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Christensen and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Withers, of Tampa, Fla. The next dance will be given July 4.

Miss Nelson Chambliss to Wed.

The Atlanta friends of Miss Nelson Chambliss, of Chattanooga, will be interested to learn of her engagement to Mr. Samuel Whitaker, of Chattanooga, the marriage to take place the night of June 30 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Chambliss, in Chattanooga.

A number of friends from Atlanta will attend the wedding, the pretty bride-elect having frequently visited here as the guest of Miss Lula Dean Jones. Miss Rowena Sizer will be maid of honor and Mr. P. B. Whitaker will be best man. The bride's grandfather, Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of New Jersey, will officiate.

Miss Chambliss is one of the very popular young women in Chattanooga society, and she has been greatly admired in other cities where she has visited. She is a graduate of Chevy Chase, in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Whitaker is the son of Attorney General and Mrs. M. N. Whitaker, and is a member of a prominent Tennessee family and a rising young attorney of Chattanooga.

At the Driving Club.

The week-end affairs at the Piedmont Driving Club were largely attended and greatly enjoyed by the club members. Forty guests attended the informal Sunday night supper.

At the regular Saturday evening dinner 160 guests were present. Dinner was served on the terrace, and later there was dancing in the ballroom.

A number of small parties were given. Among the hosts of the evening were General and Mrs. Robert K. Evans, Captain and Mrs. Grayson Heidt, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nunnally, Messrs. Edward R. Austin, C. N. Ninninger, James O. Harris, Dozier Lowndes and Louis Carhart.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Dr. and Mrs. Willis Westmoreland and Mr. Milton Dargan, Jr., were together.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sciple, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Daniel and Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams were together.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sisson, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Johnson formed a party.

To Entertain Players' Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder will entertain the members of the Players' Club, the patrons and patronesses of the club at a supper party, followed by dancing, Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club. A delightful program has been prepared, and the affair will be one of the most interesting events of the week.

For Miss Reynolds.

Miss Josephine Smith entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Katherine Reynolds, of Birmingham, who is the guest of Miss Elizabeth Hawkins.

The guests were Misses Reynolds, Elizabeth Hawkins, Pattie McGehee, Carrie Blount, Elizabeth Anderson, Blanche Devine, Grace Bloodworth and May Crichton.

For Mr. and Mrs. Robertson.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spain entertained Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robertson, of Charleston, S. C., who came to Atlanta to be present at the wedding of Miss Muriel Hall to Mr. Lewis Turner last week.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Wadley Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. P. H. Mell, Mrs. Lyman Hall, Mrs. William Jennings, Mrs. Isabelle O'Hare, Mrs. C. L. Pettigrew, Mrs. John Harrison, Mrs. Arthur Locke, Miss Anna Holmes and Mr. Elliott.

For Miss Oliver.

Mrs. Joseph Moody gave a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Eloise Oliver, whose wedding to Mr. Frampton Ellis will be an event of June 30.

Mrs. Moody's guests were Misses Eloise Oliver, Lula Dean Jones, Susie Hallman, Carolyn King and Mrs. E. P. King, Jr.

After the matinee the party had tea at the Capital City Club.

Miss Vaughan Hostess.

Miss Kirkpatrick Entertains.

Miss Lizzie Kirkpatrick gave a spend-the-day party at her home in Decatur, entertaining the following friends: Mrs. Chalmers Fraser, Miss Liza Laneau, Mrs. Wallace Kirkpatrick, Miss Kathleen Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Mamie O'Keefe Kirkpatrick.

Patterson-Greene Guests.

Among the guests at the wedding Wednesday evening of Miss Annie Mays Patterson and Mr. Calvin Clay Greene will be Mrs. Mamie W. VanBibber, Mr. E. E. Jones, Miss Louise VanBibber and Master Wilbur VanBibber, all of Houston, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Wood, of McCombs City, Miss.; Mrs. J. M. Bonnell, of Oxford, Ga.; Mrs. L. D. Patterson and Miss Julia Dent Patterson, of Fairfield, Texas; Miss Sarah Mays, of Monticello, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Porter, of Athens; Mr. and Mrs. William B. Wilkinson, of Athens, and Miss Elizabeth Wood, of Macon.

For Miss Brown.

Miss Cora McCord Brown is being charmingly entertained as the guest of Mrs. Kilpatrick in Augusta. Saturday evening several young men gave a dance at the Country Club for her, and Miss Annie Boykin gives a supper and dance at Bath Monday evening. Mrs. L. M. Burrus entertains at bridge for her Tuesday. Before returning home she will visit relatives in Harlem for several days. Miss LeVin, of Philadelphia, who is in Augusta at present, will come home with Miss Brown for a visit.

For Miss Webber.

Miss Winnie Ison will give a matinee party Wednesday for Miss Celeste Webber, of Spartanburg, S. C., who is visiting Miss Mae Baldwin.

On Friday afternoon Miss Mary Griffith will entertain at a swimming party at East Lake for Miss Webber.

Lawn Party at Church.

An affair of June 24, afternoon and evening, from 5 to 10 o'clock, will be a lawn party to be given on the lawn of the First Methodist Church, corner Peachtree Street and Porter Place, by the Young People's Missionary Society, Circle No. 2. Refreshments are to consist of ice cream, home-made cake and candy.

Mrs. McGaughey Hostess.

Mrs. J. E. McGaughey will entertain at an afternoon tea Friday for Mrs. Tedford E. Myers, a bride, who was formerly Miss Kathleen Braswell, of Fitzgerald.

Assisting Mrs. McGaughey will be Misses Ruth Chapman, Nellie England, Kate Chapman, Bessie Bumsted, Mrs. Guy Corley, Mrs. Walter Brogden, Mrs. H. K. Chapman, Mrs. Marwyn Conway, Mrs. Hattie Sanders and Mrs. Robert H. Bell.

For Miss Hoke Smith.

"Silver Tea."

Circle No. 10, Mrs. D. B. DeSaussure, chairman, will give a "silver tea" Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 10 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. C. B. Wilmer on Piedmont Avenue.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politic.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Railway at Panama Big Military Asset

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Directors of the Panama Railroad at a meeting in the office of Secretary of War Garrison regarded it as prime military importance that the railroad be kept up in every way, and it is expected that there will be considerable traffic over the line even after the Canal is open.

The Government will maintain a huge coal depot at the entrace of the Canal. It will also rent bins to private companies.

MRS. FRANCIS H. M'ADOO, formerly Miss Ethel Preston McCormick, of Baltimore, who became the bride of the son of the Secretary of the Treasury Saturday. President Wilson and several cabinet members were among the wedding guests. She is a daughter of Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson.

PERSONALS

Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, Pa., is being pleasantly entertained as Mrs. Wellborn Hill's guest.

Miss Gladys Payne, of Atlanta, was entertained in Macon last week as the guest of Miss Lelia Rogers.

Miss Ruth Hodgson, of Athens, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. F. M. Coker, at 86 Washington Street.

Mr. William E. Evans, of Monticello, Fla., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Charles E. Wilkes, on Courtland Street.

Mrs. Julia Llorens left for Havana, Cuba, June 18, where she will join her sons and make her home temporarily.

Mrs. Robert Logan and little daughter, Marjorie, are guests of Mrs. Thomas L. Sims, on North Jackson Street.

Mrs. Wallace Kirkpatrick has returned from a short visit to friends in Marietta.

Miss Emily Leonard, of Macon, is the guest of Mrs. Robert Hemphill in Atlanta.

Miss Ruby Lanton will attend the Gibson-Tarver wedding in Macon on July 2.

Mr. and Mrs. John Woodson Rice, Master Z. A. and Misses Valeria and Corday Rice are spending a while at Atlantic Beach.

Mrs. Courtland Winn and little Miss Frances Winn left last night for Atlantic Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil J. Adams will leave July 8 to make their home in Knoxville.

Misses Marion Alexander, of Richmond, Va., and Ruth Bradbury, of Athens, S. C., are the guests of Miss Mattie Lou Bailey, 186 Lee Street.

Misses Sarah and Elizabeth Coker, the young daughters of Mr. Frank Coker, are the guests of their grandmother, Mrs. F. M. Coker, on Washington Street.

Misses Geraldine and Mary Askew will leave Wednesday to spend the summer with relatives in and around Birmingham. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew, will leave June 28 for Atlantic City and New York, sailing early in July for an extended tour of the larger cities of Europe.

Miss Margaret Alley, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Alley, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. H. M. Beutell, at Norcross, and later visits Miss Celia Reynolds at Brenau.

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. King leave next Wednesday for an extended trip to Yellowstone Park, visiting also Chicago, St. Paul, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs and other places of interest. They probably will not return home before the latter part of August.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley and family will leave July 1 for an extended stay at Wrightsville Beach. Mrs. Ansley and Miss Laura Ansley will return home in ten days. The remainder of the family will spend a month there.

Miss Mae Baldwin and her guest, Miss Celeste Webber, of Spartanburg, S. C., left Monday afternoon for Douglasville, Ga., where they will be the guests of a house party for several days, given by Miss Bertice Phillips, in their honor.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS HERE GAIN 1,000

Nineteen Atlanta Sunday schools had an aggregate attendance Sunday of 6,382, an increase of 1,043 over the corresponding Sabbath of last year and an average gain of 55 for each school. The average attendance in 1912 was 281. Sunday it was 336.

Statistics were compiled in accordance with an agreement of the nineteen Sunday schools to publish their attendance in the newspapers of the city for three months to demonstrate the growth taking place in practically all of the churches.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. GRADY HOSPITAL BARS OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Man From Warwick Last of 18 Sent Back — More Room Is Needed, Says Summerall.

Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady Hospital, Monday issued a warning to non-residents of Atlanta that they must not send patients to the Grady Hospital. His announcement was a result of a most pathetic case of a young man in the last stages of an infectious disease, who was sent here from Warwick, Ga., by public subscription. Dr. Summerall is preparing to return him to his native town.

"The hospital is too small to accommodate legitimate cases," he declared. "We have been turning down about twelve applications a day from citizens of Atlanta. We certainly can not throw open our doors to persons outside. Yet in the last three months eighteen persons, hopelessly diseased, have been dumped on Atlanta from nearby towns, some of them outside the State. Some persons seem to think they can rid themselves of their unpleasant obligations by sending these helpless ones to Atlanta and forcing us to treat them.

Will Send Outsiders Back.

"We have sent each of the eighteen persons back to their homes, and we will continue this policy."

Early Monday the hospital was notified that there was a sick man at the Terminal Station. They responded to the call and found him, Ernest Harris, of Warwick, Ga., hopelessly ill.

The ambulance surgeon ordered him to Grady, although the hospital has no adequate facilities. Harris was too sick to be left on the streets, so he was taken to the clinic room and there given attention.

Harris told Dr. Summerall that he had had no medical treatment for four months and that he had not been able to get a bath for a month.

Doctors Turned Him Away.

He said there were two physicians in his town, but they had refused to treat him because he had no money. Finally, his condition became so wretched, he said, that a public subscription was taken and he was given a ticket and put on the train for Atlanta.

Dr. Summerall conferred with City Warden Thomas Evans and a railroad ticket back to Warwick has been obtained for Harris. Dr. Summerall declared it was the duty of every community, as long as it was able, to provide for its own mendicants.

"We need six times our present capacity to take care of the negroes in Atlanta who need treatment and four times as much capacity for the white people," said Dr. Summerall.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

Critics Rave, but All London Does Tango

LONDON, June 23.—Despite the bitterness of its critics the tango apparently has come to stay and the Argentine tango and the Boston, in all the newest elaborations, will be danced in the most fashionable ballrooms.

Mme. Van Dyck, one of London's leading dancing instructors, who has just returned from Paris, said:

The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

ICE CREAM POISONS 26.

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 23.—Twenty-six school children of Mays Mill, near Penn Yan, were poisoned by eating ice cream frozen at home for a school picnic. Physicians worked all night on the cases.

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Doc O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hasama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

The Sunday American goes everywhere all over the South. If you have anything to sell The Sunday American is "The Market Place of the South." The Sunday American is the best advertising medium.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Campanini Is Given Applause in Paris

PARIS, June 23.—A Beethoven-Verdi-Saint-Saens festival took place at the Paris Opera House under direction alternately of Maestro Campanini, new manager of the Chicago Opera House, and Saint-Saens.

The chief feature was a finished performance of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Campanini. He was warmly applauded.

Wilson's Daughter To Sing for Social; To Inspect Prisons

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer of New York has just appointed Miss Wilson a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Okle Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing the removal of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000, and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vital organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

Sees Female Revolt In Central America

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mrs. Marie Hubbard, the Costa Rican wife of an American merchant in Brussels, before sailing for San Jose was anxious to know if there would be many American men on board. She said she desired to travel with Americans only.

"Every woman in Central and South America wants to marry an American and live in the United States," declared Mrs. Hubbard, "for in this country she is free. There will be a revolution in Central America some day, and it will be led by the women."

OBITUARY.

The funeral of C. W. Nowell, 56 years old, who died at the residence, 403 Rawson Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, will take place from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mr. Nowell is survived by a wife and two sons, M. J. and C. W. Nowell, Jr. Interment will be at Westview.

The funeral of Elmer Harmon, the 1-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Harmon, of 154 McMillan Street, will take place from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Interment will be at Hollywood.

Thomas J. Pearson, 22 years old, who formerly lived at 103 McAfee Street, died at 5 o'clock Monday morning at a private sanitarium. The body was removed to the chapel of Harry G. Poole. Funeral arrangements later.

The body of Barney Thompson, the 2-year-old son of J. P. Thompson, of 56 Stewart Avenue, who died at 9 o'clock Sunday morning at a private sanitarium, will be shipped to Hampton, Ga., at noon Monday for funeral and interment.

The body of Mrs. Suzie Rainwater, who died at the residence at Lakewood Heights at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, will be shipped to Cullman, Ala., Monday for funeral and interment. Mrs. Rainwater was 73 years old, and is survived by nine children.

Mrs. William Wordley Bray died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. H. Merrill, in Eufaula, Ala., Sunday morning. Mrs. Bray is the mother of Mr. Sims Bray, of this city, president of the American Tape Company. Mr. Bray has gone to Eufaula for the funeral this afternoon.

DRY GOODS TRADE GOOD; COLLECTIONS ARE NORMAL

CHICAGO, June 23.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"General dry goods business for the past week has shown up well in comparison with the figures for the same period a year ago, with collections about normal. On future business the average sales per man have been higher than for any corresponding week since 1907, and they report that buyers are purchasing more freely than is usual at this season.

"Retailers are doing good business on all sheer summer fabrics and wearing apparel. Wholesale stocks are becoming well cleaned up in preparation for inventory, there being excellent response to the advertising of special offerings.

"The shipping department has been kept fairly busy taking care of immediate orders, the greater percentage of which were received from nearby States, although Eastern business placed through our New York office has been heavy."

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

Good Weather and Weak Cables Cause General Selling—Buying Rather Scattered.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet with very little trading. The selling pressure was in less evidence, while some brokers representing the larger spot houses were noticeable buyers. This class of buying caused prices to rally a few points from the early low level, but the market closed steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 11 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 23.—This market was due to open 7½ points lower on October and 2 to 4 points lower on other positions, but opened quiet at a net decline of 5½ to 6 points. At 12:15 p. m., the market was easy, at a net decline of 5¾ to 6½ points on near and 6½ to 7 points lower on distant months.

Spot cotton quiet at 5 points decline on the basis of 6.74d for American middling; sales 6,000 bales, including 5,000 American bales; imports 2,000 bales, of which all were American.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 3 to 9 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Weather conditions continued favorable over Sunday with a nice rainfall in the Atlantics. Some good scattered showers in the central States and west Texas; temperatures moderate; no excesses, warm nights, indications are for partly cloudy to fair and warm weather; some scattered showers.

Washington predicts a week of fair, warm weather—just as needed. Liverpool is poor in all departments; futures lost 2 points lower than cables; 6 points down; sales only 6,000 bales. Political news continues unfavorable and the repeated disappointments at the allure to arrive at peace is bound to v itself in a further depression.

The press reports a congestion of old crop, Egyptian cotton in the warehouses in Alexandria with an apparent falling off in the demand. A feature of the spinning situation, especially in America, is the dullness in fine yarns.

The following report from Canton, Miss., shows the active fight made against the boll weevil: "The report says that $250 was distributed in prizes; 450,000 weevils were brought in, representing almost one-tenth of the weevils caught in the county."

This market opened about 7 points lower and weakened steadily. December selling to 11.45 in the second hour. New York reported some influential selling. Consumption prospects affected by the unfavorable political and financial situation is the principal bearish argument.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—J. M. Anderson says: "The volume of trade today was only moderate, the buying and selling was pretty evenly divided. There was selling by the Wall Street interests, who were prominent on that side on Saturday, but a good scattered demand for contracts was found on the slight decline. Liverpool was a buyer and some of the Saturday sellers covered. Weather continues very favorable and local sentiment favors a further decline.

Texas wires: "Reports from all over State most promising; in fact, present conditions so perfect that anything to happen must be detrimental, as there is practically no room for improvement. There are reliable prospects for heavy new crop movement from south Texas in August and some even second half of July. European business so far very unsatisfactory; no demand."

The census report on Thursday, July 3, at noon, Eastern time, will give acreage of cotton this year and condition of crop to June 25.

Liverpool announces that Cotton Exchange will close at noon Saturdays and open at 11 a. m. on Mondays during June, July and August. The market will be closed July 11 and 12.

New York wires: "Fell and Baruch steady sellers."

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was occupied in overcoming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year, but it is making a bushy growth and shows the health that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant. The excellent cultivation that has been a pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the wheat harvest allowed some grass to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valleys, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 100 per cent, with soil in excellent condition. In the Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivation and the growth of the plant. Arkansas and the central valleys are beginning to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana and isolated sections of Texas and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that in most localities they have them whipped."

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is perfect; shows partly cloudy in the Atlantics and West Texas; fair rest of belt. Fine rains in the Atlantics; some good rains scattered in the central States and West Texas; absolutely normal temperatures; no excesses; warm nights.

Washington's forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather, with probably rain coming week in the Southern States; such showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is now very conservative and it will require lower prices to bring about aggressive buying.

Logan & Bryan: Fewer moderate purchases on further recessions.

Miller & Co.: Think the bears have again sold themselves into a trap.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The weather will be unsettled, with showers during the next thirty-six hours along the Atlantic coast from Florida to Southern New England and in the Ohio Valley, the region of the Great Lakes and Tennessee. In Northern New England and the East Gulf States, the weather will be generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

The temperature will rise Tuesday in the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic States, and it will change little elsewhere during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Tuesday:

Georgia—Showers to-night and Tuesday.

Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida—Showers to-night and Tuesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas—Generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

Tennessee—Local thunder showers to-night or Tuesday; warmer in southeast portion to-night.

STOCKS RECOVER SATURDAY'S LOSS

Prospects of Passing Currency Bill and Big Crops Have Stimulating Effect.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Bullish sentiment was helped by favorable comments from banking interests upon the proposed currency reforms advocated by President Wilson.

Canadian Pacific opened 1⅜ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ¾ of the advance. United States Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, ¼; Erie, ⅜; Erie preferred, ⅛; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ⅜; American Can, ⅝; Amalgamated Copper, ⅞; Reading, 1¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¼, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

The strong tone which prevailed at the opening was maintained through the forenoon with issues making gains of 2 or more points. Union Pacific was the most active of the railroad issues, advancing 2⅞ to 144⅜, but an excellent advance was made in Canadian Pacific, 1¼ points to 216⅞. Reading continued on the upward movement, reaching 157¼, a net gain of 2¼. Copper was up ⅛ from the opening, a net gain of 1⅜. Steel, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and all other leading stocks after slight recessions made worthy gains.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

After the upturn around noon, the market again sold off in the last hour and prices shaded from the best. Steel sold around 51⅝, while Union Pacific were and 142⅞, for a loss of 1¼ from the midday level. Later, however, Union Pacific and Lehigh Valley sold down to 149½ for the loss of 1 point from the noon price. Other prices just before the close were Amalgamated Copper 62⅝, American Smelting 61, Erie 23½, Baltimore and Ohio 92¼.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged; other bonds dull.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....97 @98
Corn—No. 2 .....60½
Oats—No. 2 .....39½@40

CHICAGO, June 23.—There was a weak feeling in wheat at the close to-day when the price was ½@⅝c lower on selling by many of those who bought early. The demand was wholly on short account and mainly by those taking profits. The visible supply of wheat decreased 1,579,000 bushels, corn increased 2,331,000 bushels and oats increased 2,658,000 bushels for the week.

Corn closed 1c off and oats were 1@1½c lower.

Provisions were higher all around.

Corn opened unchanged. At 1:30 p. m. the market was unchanged; closed ¼d lower.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

WANTED—Board by three refined young men in private family; Grant Park section preferred. Address Park, Box 1, care Georgian. 37-20-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

Residence Noted for Antiques. Traders Exchange Properties. More Building on Peachtree.

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Dillard Jacobs will soon build on Peachtree Road near the McGrath place.

TARIFF AFFECTS SOUTH LITTLE, SAYS SMITH

Cotton Schedule Alone Touches Whole of Dixie, Georgia Senator Declares.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, member of the sub-committee which considered the cotton schedule in the tariff bill, considers the cotton schedule the one of greatest interest to the South and about the only schedule touching that section as a whole to any extent.

"The most important feature in the cotton schedule is the provision which adds 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff tax on cotton yarns when combed, bleached, dyed or mercerized," he said. "The House has added 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff on cotton cloth when dyed, mercerized or painted. The Senate Finance Committee considered that the same treatment should be given to cotton yarns. Other than in this respect little change was made in the cotton schedule.

"The Senate committee, however, placed alizarin, anthracene and all carbazol dyes on the free list and made duties obtained from alizarin, anthracene, indigo also free. While these changes will not affect the selling price to the consumer of cotton products, the free dyes aid the manufacturers in meeting the heavy cut placed on the duties of their products and the increased duty for combing, dyeing and mercerized yarns preserving to the yarn products their just relation to the cloth manufacturers.

"Amendments made in the Senate are thoroughly in line with the Democratic platform, and give the first instance of the Senate being even more Democratic than the House."

Colonel Roosevelt Knows His Countrymen

The People DO Want an Adequate Navy

Colonel Roosevelt at Bunker Hill chose a fitting occasion to speak in behalf of a larger navy. The result of the Battle of Bunker Hill is an object lesson in more than the patriotism of our forefathers. We lost the battle because we had no artillery and ran out of powder.

We had the courage, the intelligence, the cause, but we needed also some more powder and big guns.

But when we dragged the cannon over the snow from Fort Ticonderoga and set them up on Dorchester Heights, WITH POWER AND BALL IN THEM, we drove the redcoats out of Boston and recaptured Bunker Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt said at Bunker Hill the other night that he knew his countrymen and knew that they would never neglect the means of defending a righteous cause, which is an adequate navy. He said:

"I will never consent to arbitrate national questions of vital honor and national interests. What is more, I know my countrymen and I know that they will not consent. Uncle Sam will never arbitrate a slap in the face, and in the last resort the navy is Uncle Sam's punch.

"It is not necessary for us to appeal to the arbitrament of war, but it is necessary to show in times of peace the qualities which the men showed who won our independence for us and founded this Government.

"You know the proverb that I used to quote: 'Speak softly but carry a big stick.' You will go far, but the worst of all possible combinations is to speak roughly and to drop the big stick. A policy of peace with insult is a mighty poor policy. It is a fine thing to commemorate the mighty men who fought at Bunker Hill. It is a great thing for us to remember what they did, but only on condition that we show that we can profit by it in our turn, only on condition that we show in our day or generation we are able to repeat what these men did.

"Now, I do not want to talk anything resembling politics, but I do want to point out that the men who fought at Bunker Hill were the radicals of their day, which is true. The only kind of wise conservatism is the wise radicalism. You can not turn the hands of the clock back; you can not restore conditions to what they were, but you can apply the principles that were right in the past in such a way as to make them effective in reference to the present."

Mr. Roosevelt has given ample evidence that he knows his countrymen. Those who have thought he did not know them so well have learned their mistake, sometimes to their sorrow.

A Wise Bill for Preventing Floods

The lesson of the recent floods in Ohio and Indiana has not been lost.

That mighty casualty has produced a flood of discussion throughout the entire country as to the best method of flood prevention and river regulation. It is a matter of vital consideration on the Lower Mississippi River, where the old system of bank protection and levee building has been pursued for so many years, the levees growing higher every year, and yet inadequate to protect.

The New Orleans Item, a leading paper of the Mississippi Valley, has taken up the cudgels for the Newlands river regulation bill and has presented it with great vigor, as the best measure for meeting the requirements of the country.

The propaganda of The Item is meeting with response everywhere just as a similar propaganda on the Pacific Coast and in other regions is reaching large proportions.

Senator Newlands' measure received the approval of several legislatures, numerous boards of trade, chambers of commerce and waterway associations. Its principal features have had the approval of all the recent Secretaries of War, including Taft and Stimson. They have also received the approval of Secretary of the Interior Fisher, of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and of the present Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane.

The measure provides for a river regulation board, composed of the chiefs of the various scientific services in any way related to water, such as the chief of the corps of army engineers, the Chief of the Reclamation Service, the Chief of the Forest Service, the Chief of the Geological Survey, etc. This board is to bring into co-ordination all the various scientific services of the Government that relate to water, with a view to comprehensive plans and co-operative work. It also provides for the co-operation of the board of river regulation with similar organizations in the various States, so that not only the quesion of navigation shall be completely covered, but all the related subjects of arid and swamp land reclamation, development of water power, preservation of forests and others.

It provides for an ample fund of fifty million dollars annually for the next ten years, thus securing consecutive work, and apportions this fund between the various watersheds on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific Coast, thus securing contemporaneous work in flood prevention and river regulation in all sections of the country.

The principles of this bill have been acted upon favorably in the Senate of the United States in various amendments to the river and harbor bill, and there would seem to be no reason why we should not immediately enter upon this big work in a big way, just as we entered upon the Panama Canal enterprise. In its practical application this measure will bring about immediate action by the national Government which will safeguard the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio River Valley from a repetition of such catastrophes as those whiich have been caused by the floods of the past two years.

Senator Newlands' bill seems to be broadly national, rather than selfishly sectional, and in that is to be found no small part of its wisdom and the promise of its deserved success before Congress.

The Great Capitals of Space Are Now Before Our Eyes if We Will Only Look

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

YOU would be ashamed if you could not point out on a map of the earth the location of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Calcutta, Pekin and Tokio. You would feel that you were disgracefully ignorant if you did not know something about the character and appearance of these great foreign cities, even if you had never visited them.

But over your heads on these summer nights shine many of the sun-capitals of the universe, every one in plain sight, every one magnificent to look upon, every one different from all the others—and yet how many of them can you recognize? How many of them do you know by name, or by appearance and surroundings?

Yet the geography of the heavens is easier to learn than that of the earth, and this is a good time to begin. Just now, about 9 o'clock at night, there are no great planets (which are likely to be confused with stars) visible to puzzle the beginner in learning the real stars.

Spica Lies Southward.

Here is a little chart which will help you. It represents the whole visible heavens at 9 o'clock in the evening. The top is north, the bottom south, the right-hand west and the left-hand east. The center is the point overhead.

Look first toward the south. There you see, right on the meridian, a bright white star less than half way from the horizon to the point overhead. It is Spica in the constellation Virgo. It is a sun probably thousands of times brighter than ours. How do we know that? By comparing the amount of light that it sends us with the light of the sun, and then remembering that the intensity of light falls off as the square of the distance. Put the sun a thousand times as far away as it really is and its light would be a million times less than it now appears. But Spica is at least two million times as far away as the sun, and we know that at that distance the sun would be invisible, except with the telescopes, for its light would be diminished four million-million times! Yet Spica, at that distance, is still a bright star to the naked eye!

Off in the eastern quarter, close to the horizon, you catch a brilliant red gleam. It comes from the star Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. That, too, is one of the giant suns, and a telescope shows that it has a smaller BRIGHT GREEN sun near it!

Nearly overhead, east of the zenith, you see the great star Arcturus, in the constellation Bootes. It is another monstrous sun, probably not as large as Spica, but looking larger because it is not so far away. Professor Simon Newcomb estimated its real brightness at about a thousand times that of the sun.

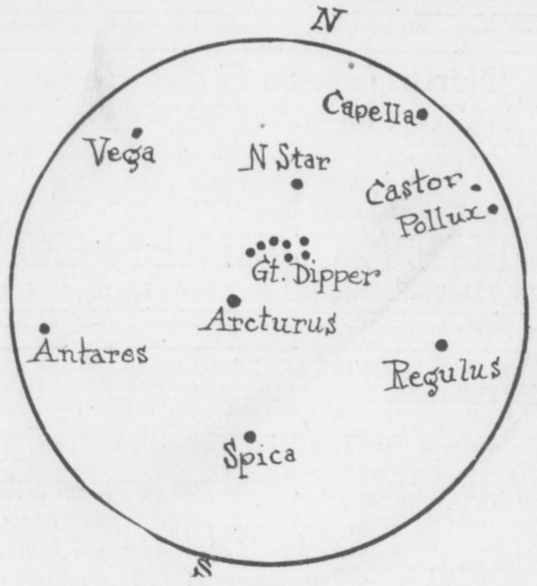
Rather low down in the west shines the star Regulus, a vast sun in the constellation Leo, some of whose other stars are so placed as to imitate the form of a sickle.

Capella in Northwest.

Away over in the northeast your eye will catch the glitter of an exceedingly beautiful star named Vega, in the constellation Lyra. It is another of the giants. With a glass it shows a brilliant blue-white color, perhaps the most beautiful in the sky. Because of its brilliancy Vega might be called the Paris of the Sky.

Low in the northwest you will see Capella, in the constellation Auriga, just setting and flaming magnificently on the horizon. The sectroscope shows that Capella closely resembles our sun in constitution, but it is more than a hundred times brighter.

To the right of Capella are the twin stars Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini. If our sun were near either of them it would fall a captive, like a child in the hands of a giant, for it is much smaller than they are.



Can Not Be Answered.

North of the point overhead is the Great Dipper, formed by seven stars of the constellation Ursa Major, and the outer pair in the bowl of the "Dipper" point directly to the North or Pole Star, around which the whole heavens appear to swing. This star, too, is of enormous actual size, although it does not appear as bright as many of the others.

At least two of the great stars mentioned have very remarkable companions. Spica is attended by a huge dark, or invisible, star, with which it swings swiftly round and round like a black and a white wrestler striving to trip each other. The companion sun of Capella is not dark, but so closely are they grappled that only the spectroscope is able to show that there are two of them.

Whether these struggling suns have accidentally met or were created together, is a question that can not now be answered.

I am doing you a kindness when I advise you to go out the first fair night and make acquaintance with these wonders of the sky, for no one ever studied, or even looked at, the universe without feeling the better for it. Aratus, the Greek, declared more than two thousands years ago that "from all quarters the heavens SPEAK to man," and you will find that it is strictly so.

Battle of Ramillies

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE battle of Ramillies, fought May 23, 1706, between Marlborough and Villeroy, was as decisive in its political results as it was brilliant in its tactics. The English and their allies numbered about sixty thousand, the French about sixty-two thousand.

The battle opened at 1 o'clock, with an attack on the French left. But it was only a trick; and presently, when Villeroy was nicely deceived, the allies got down to the real business in a powerful onslaught upon the French right. Staving in that wing, the artillery began an enfilade fire, and soon the whole French line began reeling like a drunken man. At the signal from Marlborough the Dutch, Danish, Hanoverian and British cavalry was launched against the enemy like a thunderbolt, and, utterly demoralized, the French ran for their lives, the cavalry at their heels, cursing, howling, slashing at them like a pack of devils.

Ramillies was a great blow to the prestige of Louis the Fourteenth. Blenheim, that "famous victory" of two years before, had broken his power in Germany, and now Ramillies had driven him from The Netherlands. A little later on Gibraltar was secured forever to England, the French forts were destroyed at Vigo, Eugene crushed the French power in Italy, and the haughty old despot bowed his head and prepared himself to die. And because Ramillies, more than any other event, helped to put the old sinner "down and out," it deserves to be remembered with gratitude.

Husbands and Wives and the House Bills

It Isn't All a Joke, This High Cost of Living, She Says. It's a Serious Thing in Some Homes and It Is a Tragedy in Many.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

A WOMAN killed herself in a Western city the other day because she didn't dare face her husband when he saw the last month's grocery bill!

Two respectable women were arrested in Berlin for shoplifting. They said they couldn't pay the grocers' bills and rather than to tell their husbands that they were running behind they had stolen things in shops and were trying to sell them to get the money to make up the deficit in the bills.

A Kansas City woman went into the divorce court and told the judge that she wanted to go to her mother.

"My husband wants good things to eat," said the Kansas City woman, "but he doesn't want to pay the price for them. I economize all I can, but the bills creep higher and higher and I am almost crazy trying to think what to do when the first of the month comes. I can't stand it any more; I simply can't stand it.

The Husband Grinned.

"I want to go home and give the whole thing up, but I want to take my little girl with me. Can't I do it, judge, without people saying I am a bad woman?"

And the woman's husband stood in the court room and grinned sheepishly when she told the court that he wouldn't eat hash and hated stews and wouldn't hear of fish balls for breakfast.

"Steaks and chops and eggs and hot bread he wants," sobbed the poor little woman, "and then when he has to pay for them he blames me."

She was so little and so young and so frightened and yet so desperately in earnest that by the time she was through with her foolish little story the husband was the only one who had the heart to smile.

The judge took the matter under advisement. I hope he'll advise the little woman to go home and stay awhile and let husband hire someone to cook his steaks and chops and eggs for him—and worry over the bills, too. I think he'll begin to see the light before very long.

It isn't all a joke, this high cost of living. It's a serious thing in some homes and it is a tragedy in many.

Men and women quarrel and turn love into hate, respect into contempt, peace into misery, all over the grocery bills.

They Dine Comfortably.

Children are left homeless, and old people wander in and out of almshouses all because of the few extra cents on the price of a pound of meat; and everyone seems to think of every kind of remedy on earth except going without the things that make so much misery.

What did you have for dinner a week ago to-night? Day before yesterday, was it steak or a chop or, let's see, a roast? You can't think for the life of you, and yet that very dinner may have cost the woman who is trying to make you happy and comfortable a whole heart full of anxious tears. Why must we all have such expensive things to eat?

I have some friends in New England, and every time I go to visit them I come home ten pounds lighter, ten years younger and happier than I have been for years.

Those friends eat to live; they do not live to eat. They have enough to satisfy hunger—and that's all.

One chop, a couple of leaves of lettuce, a tomato, a few berries and we have dined—and dined comfortably and prettily, too—and ten minutes after dinner we've all forgotten all about it.

They are strong, healthy, happy people, and they would laugh at the idea of putting their very hearts and souls and dispositions and every dollar they have in the world into the dinner pot. I wonder why some of the rest of us can't do the way they do?

Enough to eat, good wholesome food—those aren't the things that count up on the bills. It's the extras—the pie, the cake, the preserves, the olives, the celery, the artichokes, the endives, the asparagus out of season—that's what brings that bill up to desperation point.

If I had a husband who drove me crazy over the household bills I'd have a session with him every Monday evening.

I'd get him to help me plan a bill of fare for the week, and I'd know what every single item on that bill would cost, and I'd see that he knew, too, when he ordered it.

Asparagus—yes, my dear—let's see, 10 cents a bunch—four bunches, you always want at least three helpings. Strawberries? A shortcake, yes, that means butter and cream extra—and sugar, too—that will run the bill up to—etc.

Make a business of it; put it down in dollars and cents, and then if you want to pay for it, have it. If you don't want to pay for it, go without and say no more; that would be my plan.

What's the Use Talking?

Managing? Oh, yes, there is a great deal in that. Lots of women have no more idea of managing than hens have of arithmetic. Let them learn that. Let them find out that one egg more in the cake counts. One chop left over is that much thrown away. One loaf of bread left to get stale means waste, and waste means incompetence.

Also let the men of the family learn that a porterhouse steak costs real money and that two helpings to asparagus take just that much more money at the end of the week.

What's the use of talking economy and eating extravagance?

I know men who rave madly over the weekly bills and make life a burden to the whole family for a day or so after they have been paid, and who never think of paying less than 50 cents or 75 cents for a luncheon for themselves downtown. They expect wife and children to get something out of the ice box for about 10 cents, and they don't see why even that need be so very elaborate.

Come home for luncheon a few times, father, and see if you aren't just a little bit ashamed of your ravings over the weekly budget when you think of your English chop and pickled walnuts, etc., that seems such a modest affair to you when you drop into "Henry's" for a bite at noon.

Mother would think that was a feast at noon—and so would the children.

We eat too much—every other one of us. We make it too important a thing what we eat. Good food is a fine thing, a comfortable thing, a necessary thing, but when it comes to giving your whole life up to squabbles over it I'd rather live on stew and hash the rest of my life and call it well chosen.

We've all gone extravagance mad, spending crazy—$30 for a hat, $8 for a pair of shoes, $2 for a raw steak—a dollar for the mushrooms to go with it.

Walk? Never. A taxi, please, and be quick about it. Flowers for the table every day; the beauty woman twice a week. Which will you have, red wine or white? Every sort of fruit from every sort of clime. And how much better are you off than your father, who never paid more than 40 cents for the finest steak he ever ate and who would have as soon tried to eat diamonds as to order fresh mushrooms at a dollar the pound.

Where Is the Slave?

Are you any wiser, any happier? Do you live any the longer, love more deeply, laugh harder? Is your heart lighter; do you sleep more soundly than did he?

Click, click, they sound upon the pavement, the little high-heeled slippers. Swish, they pass us in the corridors, the silken garments, birds of paradise, paroquets. Clash, clish, jingle—the ornaments rattle like the chains of a galley slave.

Where is the slave who pays for all this? In his galley rowing, with split hands, with bursting heart, with aching head. Row, slave, row—break your back, but bend to the oar—the great god money is your master, and she who pretends to love you sits above there in the sunshine and laughs to see him ply the lash upon your shrinking skin.

Rich food, rich clothes, fine feathers—misery, discord, despair—what couples they seem to run in, don't they, in these brave days of ours?
