CUYLER LOCATED FOR HIS WIFE BY WOMAN

Farmer's Spouse Located Georgia's Famous Cosmopolite After Sleuths Failed.

WAYSIDE, GA., June 25.—It developed to-day that a woman, indigenous to the red hills of Jones County, succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and delitante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the wildest regions of war-torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman detective of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never seen a sleuth, but she has a well-developed power of reasoning.

Finds Him at Plantation.

Two weeks ago when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County sources the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, she took the rather prosaic method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been playing hide-and-seek with officers endeavoring to serve him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months. She had reports that he was hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dilettante wanted to hide, abviously the best place for him to secrete himself would be his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be anywhere but at home.

Perhaps she didn't reason at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front verdanda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary for Jones County farmers to do.

Couple Discussed Divorce.

In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, her counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Alameda, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No decision was reached at that time, and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Southern Cotton Company to grow long staple cotton on a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know what he did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from officers she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Alameda conference. A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

Later he was traced, according to Mrs. Cuyler's information, through Arizona and then East to New York. She had also been told that he was reported variously in Europe and the Orient.

Leading Life of Recluse.

About two weeks ago, according to Mrs. Chiles' information, on the birthday of Telemon Cuyler, Jr., the five-year-old son of the torn pair, a package of presents was received at the California home of the mother. It was addressed in Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Wayside people say that Cuyler has been at his mother's plantation for at least three weeks.

How much longer he has been there they do not know. Since his return he has been leading the life of a recluse. On his former visits to his Jones County place he made daily trips to the Wayside Station and showed considerable interest in discussions, so universal on the porches of rural general stores.

Cuyler is taking the news of the proceedings with the utmost nonchalance. He apparently is in no hurry to decide on the exact nature of his action in the matter.

"The affair is very complex," he says, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added as an afterthought.

"I may come to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel. I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime, I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction. Then the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are thus rather completely employed, and this matter's coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex, and interesting."

'Parasol Cop' Like Toad Under a Stool

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The parasol cop is the latest thing and the advance guard, Policeman J. C. Holmes, is stationed at Fifteenth and New York Avenues. He stands there under a huge parasol fastened in the middle of the street for all the world like a toad under a toadstool.

If the experimental parasol cop turns out well, Major Sylvester will have a battalion of them.

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

Congress to Adopt New Budget System

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A caucus of the Democratic members of the House was called to-day for the purpose of adopting a budget system, or method of controlling appropriations in the House.

The caucus also will decide the fate of the Commerce Court and determine whether the bars should be let down so as to allow the enactment of general legislation at this session.

Throng Chases Boy Down Busy Streets

Willie Jones, a 17-year-old negro, had nothing on his mind but his cap Wednesday morning as he stood at Five Points. The transformation of his mental state was marvelous, however, when he saw Policeman Helms, of Columbus, Jones' former home, approaching.

Terror seized him and he dashed through a crowd into Marietta Street. Hundreds joined the chase. Excitement ran high until Jones was arrested at Forsyth by Helms.

Jones will be taken to Columbus to answer a charge of theft.

Bankhead Asks U. S. Office for Goodwin

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, to-day recommended to President Wilson the appointment of Tyler Goodwin, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Alabama, to be District Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama.

OWLS OPEN HOME FOR YANCEY BALL

Court House Attaches Sell Hundreds of Tickets—Contributions Still Are Needed.

The club rooms and dance floor on the roof garden of the Owls' Club have been offered for the Dave Yancey benefit ball Friday night.

Practically every attache of the Sheriff's office and the court house has lent his efforts to boosting the affair, and already hundreds of tickets have been sold. Men will be charged 25 cents for admission. Women will be admitted free of charge.

The proceeds will go toward the Yancey fund to brighten the future of the dead deputy's widow and six children.

Additional subscriptions to this cause are badly needed. Provision for the life of the Yancey family has been but poorly made so far. A plea was issued Wednesday to the thousands of persons who have not yet contributed their mite to do so immediately. A dime, a quarter or a half-dollar is desired from each. The amount is insignificant, yet it means happiness to the stricken family.

HENEY EXPECTED TO BE M'NAB'S SUCCESSOR

Believed Wilson Won't Heed Fact That He's Bull Moose—Retirement of McReynolds Hinted.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House to-day as practically certain that Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco prosecutor who convicted Abe Ruef of graft and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case.

The only obstacle to Heney's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is admitted that his appointment to take charge of the white slave cases at this time will tremendously help Heney's candidacy for the Senate, and as the prosecutor is a rabid Progressive, it is understood that this course will endanger the Democratic chances in California.

However, as President Wilson is being informed on all sides that Heney is the man to manage the Government side of the case it is probable he will cast aside all politics and appoint the Progressive as special counsel.

The President to-day conferred with Attorney General McReynolds and Representative Kahn, of California, on the Caminetti matter, but neither side would make any statement.

The White House and the Department of Justice said the McNab matter is closed so far as Washington is concerned, and the Government is only interested in obtaining justice, swift and sure, for Diggs and Caminetti.

Rumors that Attorney General McReynolds is about to leave the cabinet have been strengthened by the developments in the Caminetti case.

Elder Caminetti Gets Leave to Attend Trial.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Antonio Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration and father of one of the alleged white slavers, now awaiting trial at San Francisco, will be allowed to be present at his son's trial.

President Wilson has informed the Secretary of Labor he thinks it best to allow Commissioner Caminetti to go West at once instead of waiting until fall.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for each of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court to-day when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl," and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

BULLETIN OPENS 50-DAY WAR ON CHAINGANGS

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me as if there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

Zionists Tell Plan of Palestine Colony

CINCINNATI, O., June 25.—At the sixteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists here the annual message of the honorary president, Dr. Harry Freidenwald, explained fully the purpose of the federation.

"It is not our idea to send all Jews back to Palestine," he said, "but to place all Jews in a position where independence is assured them. Primarily, the move is for the relief of the Russian Jew."

Girls Writing Book Will Simplify Laws

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—The embryo lawyer of to-day, who will be the brilliant pleader of to-morrow, will owe a debt of gratitude to two Cleveland girls for a massive volume filled with simple interpretations of Ohio's laws. The girls are Miss Ruth Winch, 22, daughter of Judge Louis H. Winch, and Miss Ruth Jenkins, 18.

The book is being prepared by the girls under the supervision of Judge Winch, and will be known as "The History of the Laws of Ohio."

1,500 Milwaukee's Bars Face Closing

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon measure means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their free book. Write to-day. It is most instructive.

Lad Plays Ball on Piedmont Roof

Hits Homer From Aerial Ball Lot

Sphere Cracks Cabman in Street

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-massy, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

Lear Dutton.

BRAVES DEATH TO BE NOBLE'S BRIDE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened if she married Sir Joseph Tichborne, was wedded to Sir Joseph in Brompton Oratory to-day without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by Theresa Doughty Tichborne, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Orton, claimant of the Tichborne baronetcy and estates. Later she declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Tichborne, who mysteriously disappeared half a century ago and about whose absence a romantic cloud of mystery had been woven.

Orton, in 1869, claimed to be Roger Tichborne and demanded the title and estates of the twelfth baronet. He came from Australia and the Tichborne family, convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. Then came a long and celebrated trial, but Orton's case was nonsuited. He was convicted of perjury and sent to jail for 14 years.

Orton, before he died in 1898, confessed he had been a butcher in London's East End.

The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and who was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Krusekopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

FANS, ALSO, MUST OBSERVE SUNDAYS

That phase of the Atlanta spirit so pronounced in baseball fans and that causes them to root for the home team as no other set of fans ever rooted must be placed in the ice chest Sundays.

Recorder Nash Broyles so decreed Tuesday afternoon when he ruled that the baseball parlors of "Caller" R. H. King at 9 Viaduct Way will not be permitted to open Sundays. This is the hall in which Atlanta fans assemble to witness the battle by innings flashed by telegraph when the Crackers are scrapping in foreign fields.

The baseball parlor is in the same class as moving picture theaters, penny arcades, and other such amusements, according to the Recorder.

King threw open his parlors for the game last Sunday, and a test case was promptly made against him.

Judge Broyles dismissed the case on the agreement of King to keep his place closed on Sunday.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

WASHINGTON, June 25.—When Mrs. William P. Borland, wife of Representative Borland, of Missouri, met her husband at the Union Station she nearly swooned. For Borland, smiling happily, emerged from the train shed with two chubby, giggling little girls.

The representative informed his wife he had adopted the youngsters at Kansas City when he found they were about to be sent to an orphan asylum.

TENNESSEE BAR IN SESSSION.

Convict Offers to Sell His Body to The Highest Bidder

Thomas A. McCullough, a convict in the Monroe County camp, wants to sell his own body. He expresses that desire in a letter dated Griffin, Ga., sent for insertion Wednesday in the ad columns of The Georgian.

FOR SALE—To the highest bidder for cash—I offer my body, which is 6 feet high, weighs 175 pounds, is large frame, well proportioned, 40 years of age and Caucasian race.

"I have a sentence of 18 years for killing a negro in Griffin in 1911 and have no prospects, no hopes and no friends, hence, being in bad health, I am asking this proposition. Anyone wishing to consummate a trade, address Thomas A. McCullough, Box 271, Care Monroe County Convict Camp.

Mercury Reaches 91; Showers May Abate Heat This Evening

The usual mark, 91 degrees, was the maximum temperature Wednesday. It was attained shortly before 2 o'clock.

The thermometer reached 84 at 10 o'clock and 88 at noon.

"It is remarkable how the same kind of weather prevails over the entire country," said C. F. VonHerrmann, the Atlanta forecaster. "It is 90 or thereabouts in Atlanta day after day, and the same nearly everywhere else. Although it seems pretty warm here, Atlanta is no hotter than other places."

"Continued fair, with possibly showers late in the afternoon," is the forecast for Thursday.

Ethical Society to Get Noted Speakers

Many noted lecturers will speak before the Atlanta Ethical Society next season, according to a report just issued by the executive committee. Among those now under consideration are Dr. Horace Bridges, leader of the Chicago Ethical Society; Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer, of the New York School of Philanthropy; Dr. Percival Chubb, of the St. Louis Society; Dr. David Saville Muzzey, of the New York Society; Dr. C. DeLisle Burns, extension lecturer of Oxford University, England, and others.

M. H. Wilensky is chairman of the committee. Assisting him are Dr. C. B. Wilmer, H. M. Atkinson, Clifford L. Anderson, L. B. Magid, Dr. E. G. Ballenger, A. H. Bancker, Harold Hirsch and L. C. Hopkins. Joseph C. Greenfield is secretary-treasurer of the society.

Decatur Organizes Beautifying Clubs

The civic beauty committees of the Decatur Board of Trade and the Decatur Woman's Club will, it was decided, organize a neighborhood club in the town to beautify Decatur.

Several clubs were started on the spot. Mrs. Thomas H. Fulton started the Oak Street Club; Mrs. A. T. Brooks and Mrs. J. G. Addy, College Avenue; Mrs. Jennie Findley, North Candler; Mrs. F. H. Hollister and Mrs. H. W. Cantrell, Jefferson Place; Mrs. R. M. Lightfoot and Mrs. George Watts, Adams Street.

Going on Vacation? Leave P. O. Address

Postmaster Hugh McKee announced Tuesday that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address order.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to disposition of mail.

Woman Prosecutor Convicts Embezzler

Judge L. S. Roan Wednesday will sentence Oscar A. Donehoo for embezzling $200. The jury returned a verdict of guilty late yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Donehoo, a sister-in-law, who appeared in the role of prosecutor, declared Oscar Donehoo was executor of his father, C. M. Donehoo, and that she was due $200 which she had been unable to get.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

French President Is Given Great Ovation as He Drives Through Streets of London.

LONDON, June 25.—A riot occurred in Oxford Street this afternoon when spectators watching for President Poincare of France to drive on his way from Guild Hall to York House attacked a suffragette procession.

Three women were badly hurt.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Aerial Courier Takes Dispatches to Poincare.

LONDON, June 25.—Bearing dispatches from the French Government to President Poincare of France, Aviator Slack, a British airman, arrived here from Paris to-day in his aeroplane. The courier made the trip without mishap, beating the regular mail time by many hours.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Boy Worker Killed By Compressed Air

CAMDEN, N. J., June 25.—Joseph DeFinnie, 18, died here from injuries received when fellow workers in a factory, it is alleged, forced compressed air down his throat through a tube until his abdomen was ruptured.

An investigation is being made.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 4S-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and exorbitant fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the purest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sunday, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing and if I can help you I will.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably tho result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Members of the Capital City Club, their wives and friends, are eagerly anticipating the formal opening of the Capital City Country Club Thursday afternoon and evening when the entire club membership will assemble to declare the summer season open at this new branch of the club.

Since taking over the Brookhaven Club the Capital City Club has added a new feature. The Country Club will be largely an athletic club.

There are three fine tennis courts and golf links are in good condition. Each afternoon sees twenty or thirty persons in or on the water many members having private canoes. Flower beds and flower boxes add to the attractiveness of the verandas.

The entire club house will be thrown open from 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, officers and their wives holding an informal reception at that hour. Later refreshments will be served al fresco. In the evening there will be dancing.

Mr. Robert F. Maddox, president, and Mrs. Maddox will act as official host and hostess. Receiving with them will be other officers of the club and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Spalding, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Brutus Clay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman, Messrs. Charles I. Ryan, Robert Clarke and Edward Austin.

At St. Simons Island.

Among the Atlantans registered at the new St. Simon's Hotel are Mr. Martin Amorous, Misses Emma Kate, Isabel, Rosalind, Janice and William Amorous, Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong and children, Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newell and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Irving S. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McRae and family, Mrs. Mary F. Boynton, Mrs. Walter G. Smith, Miss Louise Mell, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Callaway, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Armistead, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and family, Mr. C. G. Thorn, Dr. and Mrs. John S. Derr, and many others.

Large numbers of Macon, Atlanta, Birmingham and other cities are represented at the hotel. The Governor's Horse Guards of Atlanta and other military companies are in camp near the light house.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. William Schroder gave a bridge party Wednesday at her home in Fourteenth Street for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

The house was decorated with pink sweetpeas and Shasta daisies. In the dining room the tea table had as its centerpiece a mound of pink sweetpeas. Pink candle shades and pink mints completed the color motif.

Prizes were a parasol and pieces of shadow lace lingerie, trimmed in French roses.

Mrs. Schroder's guests were twelve of her young married friends.

Mrs. Massenburg Entertains.

Mrs. Frank Massenburg entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. R. Bethune, of Rome, formerly Miss Gladys Kirk. The game was played on the porch, decorated with plants and sweetpeas, and prizes were white and gold china for top score, a pin tray for consolation and crystal candlesticks for the honor guest.

Tea was served from a table covered with lace over pink satin and adorned with pink and white sweetpeas, a color scheme of pink and white being observed in detail. Funch was served from a bowl imbedded in fruits. Mrs. Massenburg wore pink embroidered voile.

Guests were Mrs. Bethune, Mrs. D. Y. Sage, Mrs. G. A. Harbour, Mrs. T. C. Mell, Mrs. B. O. Jackson, Mrs. H. B. Rogers, Mrs. F. E. Markel, Mrs. W. H. Letton, Mrs. H. C. Chapman, Mrs. G. R. Glenn, Mrs. Carl DuPuy, Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. J. M. Daniel, Mrs. T. R. Smith, Misses Bess Smith, Willie Adher and Jennie Sue Bell.

For Miss Oliver.

Miss Lula Dean Jones gave a tea at the Driving Club Wednesday afternoon for Miss Eloise Oliver, whose wedding to Mr. Frampton Ellis will take place June 30.

Tea was served on the terrace and the table had a centerpiece of Gloire de Dijon roses. All the details were in yellow. Miss Jones' guests included the girls in the wedding party.

Miss Broyles Hostess.

Miss Louise Broyles will have as her guests for the week-end Misses Harriet Benedict and Nellie Phinizy, of Athens. Many informal affairs are planned for the visitors. A tea will be given at the Driving Club by Miss Helen McCarty.

Miss Traylor Entertains.

Miss Margaret Traylor entertained informally at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses Katharine Graves and LaGrange Cochran, of Rome. There were two tables of bridge, and the prizes were silk hose for top score and consolation, and gauze fans for the honor guests. Pink roses formed the decorations. Miss Traylor wore white lace with overdress of pink chiffon.

Vesper Club Dance.

The Vesper Club will give a dance in the club rooms Friday evening, July 4. A number of visitors will be the honor guests.

For Mrs. Dowman.

Mrs. Julian Prade will entertain a group of young matrons at tea Thursday afternoon for her sister, Mrs. Charles Dowman, Jr., of Birmingham.

Mrs. Marye Entertains.

Mrs. Thornton Marye was hostess at an informal tea Wednesday afternoon at the Piedmont Club, entertaining a group of married friends. The guests were received on the piazza at the rear of the ball room, which provided a charming setting for the prettily gowned guests. Tea was served from a long table, adorned with a large basket of daisies, tied with yellow ribbons. Mrs. Marye wore white cotton crepe combined with Florentine lace, with girdle of pale blue, her white hat adorned with blue ribbons and clusters of tiny French flowers.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Frank Orme gave a children's party Wednesday afternoon, celebrating the sixth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Mark. A grab bag afforded amusement. A heart-shaped birthday cake, bearing six pink tapers in rosebud holders, alternating with silver vases of pink roses, adorned the table. Refreshments were in pink and white. The honor guest wore Irish lace over a pink slip, with pink slippers, stockings and ribbons. Receiving with her were her cousins, Mary Phillips and Nancy Belle Keeler.

For Miss Oliver and Mr. Ellis.

Miss Eloise Oliver and Mr. Frampton Ellis, whose marriage takes place next Monday evening, will be tendered a buffet supper Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., preceding the rehearsal for the wedding.

Cole-Reese.

The wedding of Miss Harriet Cole to Mr. Rogers Reese Wednesday evening will be one of the interesting social events of the season. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. H. D. Cole in Ansley Park at 8:30 o'clock. A limited number of guests will be present. An informal reception will follow the ceremony.

Parties for Miss Francis.

Miss Lula Dean Jones will entertain at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect. Mrs. James W. Morrow's bridge party Thursday will be in honor of Miss Francis, and the luncheon at which Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain Tuesday will also be for Miss Francis. Mrs. William Schroder has dated her bridge party for Miss Francis for next Wednesday.

For Mrs. Seydel.

Miss Ida May Blountgave an informal bridge party Tuesday morning for Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers and the prize was silver slipper buckles.

The guests were the Misses Margaret Nutting, Eloise Oliver, May Bancker, Mrs. Kenneth Goode, Mrs. Hamilton Block, Mrs. Benjamin Weaver and Mrs. Ernest Duncan.

For Miss Kendrick.

Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins will entertain ten guests informally at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, in honor of Miss Helen Kendrick, of Cincinnati, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Alex Smith.

For Mrs. Ravenel.

Mrs. Edward C. Peters entertained twelve guests at an informal porch party Wednesday morning for Mrs. St. Julian Ravenel, of New York, the guest of Mrs. Thomas M. Clarke. Garden flowers and growing plants formed the decorations, and luncheon followed the game.

Sturgeon-Rothe.

Mrs. Lebens Wagner, of Columbus, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Uda Marie Sturgeon, to Dr. H. H. Rothe, of San Antonio, Texas, the couple to be at home in Athens after their marriage.

Miss Inez Pirkle Entertains.

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

B. Y. P. U. TO MEET.

The city B. Y. P. U. will hold its regular meeting at the Second Baptist Church Thursday night at 8 o'clock. This will be an echo meeting of the State B. Y. P. U. Convention at Macon last week.

A Sale of Brass Wares

In Which Jardinieres, Window Boxes, Fern Dishes, Andirons and Novelties Are Priced at Half and Less

There is always a place in a well regulated household for an artistic piece of brassware, or, perhaps we should say, for another piece of brassware.

Now is your time to secure another piece at a price never more than half and very often less than half. It is our June disposal, which alone accounts for such prices.

The brasswares are elegant, usually those heavy hand-wrought pieces that lend distinction and grace wherever they are placed—such, too, as seldom find their way into such a sale. But all merchandise, be it ever so artistic and beautiful, is only merchandise at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co., and so must be disposed of in good season.

This time it is brasswares.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us," Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it.

Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE moment Warren entered Helen knew by the set lines of his mouth that something unusual had happened.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay fares for four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

The Sins of the Parents

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or she is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Items of Interest

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Co.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain, "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice. "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE

Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure; and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Here is the way Deacon Davis of the Davenport Democrat and Leader tells of the sale and career of Reed:

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

GRANEY TO BE REFEREE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Eddie Graney, promoter of the Ritchie-Rivers July 4 bout here, will be the third man in the ring when hostilities begin. At a conference the former blacksmith was chosen referee.

A Bit on the Side

MENTAL OVERFLOW.

There's many a substitute better than the real thing, even in baseball.

Muggsy McGraw has a fat chance of scaring Hank O'Day by making a rush at him. Hank worked a whole season in Cincinnati, where the fans rush every day.

Miss Bugg—Will you kindly tell me how to make a rag carpet out of a linen vest, an old flannel nightgown, two pairs of trousers and a silk hat?

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

Hirsig Trades Glenn; After Major Players

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25.—President Hirsig announces he has sold Catcher Harry Glenn, last season with the Vols, to the St. Louis Cardinals for $2,000 and Pitcher Redding.

Glenn was farmed to Akron, Ohio, in the early part of this season, where he has been hitting at a terrific clip. Hirsig claims he has deals pending for a number of players from the major leagues in his efforts to strengthen the sliding Vols.

SCHALLER IS RELEASED.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Walter Schaller, the White Sox utility outfielder, was released to-day to the Washington club. Schaller was obtained from Detroit, who got him from Kansas City.

Racing at Belmont; Only Two-Day Meet

NEW YORK, June 25.—The two days' meet of the United Hunts Racing Association will open this afternoon at Belmont Park Terminal with a large field of entries. The second and closing day of the meet is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The program is a varied one and embraces both jumping and flat races. Six events are carded for each day, including three flat races, two steeplechases and one hurdle event. The Sportsmen's Steeplechase Dinner Stakes, which is considered to be the most important race of the meet, has a fine field of starters and has aroused much interest. This race was closed by private subscription several weeks ago.

Renel	0	2	0	8
Shields	0	0	2	6
Graves	0	1	0	4
Lockner	0	0	1	3

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlanta Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in getting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close race, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel, Swartz and Luther have been placed. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mile High Harry" has his machine in the fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—both of them new men at motor racing on the boards—have been thrown in the same heat with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arranged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each other four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Motordrome Purse.

First heat, 3 miles—No. 6, Fred Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 3, Billy Shields. Second heat, 3 miles—No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 1, Morty Graves. Third heat, 3 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Special match race, to be announced later.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a .352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

HEINE.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:
("————")

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"'Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:
("————")

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:
("————")

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently—Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"

Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

Campi Beats Ledoux To Jelly on Coast

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—Eddie Campi, more clever and faster than ever, outjabbed, outpunched, outgeneraled and out everything else the French bantam weight champion, Charley Ledoux, earning a 20-round decision in the ring here.

Ledoux is willing, game and durable. There his credit ends. Charley took a whipping that would have made Battling Nelson jealous. As it is, the boy's best friends won't be able to recognize him until the flaxseed poultices and raw beef strips have had healing time.

GOVERNOR, IN HIS FAREWELL MESSAGE, ASSAILS LABOR UNIONS

New Legislature Is Asked to Provide for a State Highways Commission

WARNS OF PERILS OF ANARCHY

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt.

It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law.

Compulsory arbitration should be required and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should be permitted to paralyze the powers of the public. As to the killing in Augusta of the three men, who by their deeds defied the militia, the suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of all and there comes times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Upward of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to inspire confidence and make it the proudest boast to say: "I, too, am a Georgian."—From Governor Brown's Message,

The farewell message of Governor Brown follows:

To the Genera. Assembly:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and unnecessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights for the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet, in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 20 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great braintrainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses, besides the burning of one store.

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners, and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers:

"The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees iu 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912 to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess one-tenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz, the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz, those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue; the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and reelected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as tne labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced on all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselces alone. And as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlesly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated.

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce, travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitution of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a selfbridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence, they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia will be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who by their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious pleas by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution, organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend:" (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylæ in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in lacedæmon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth, standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law.

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members, preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed. It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say; "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 98 @100
Oats—No. 2 ..... 38 @ 38½

CHICAGO, June 25.—The crop killer who has been in the spring wheat country will now be obliged to turn his attention to other factors than dry weather, as the entire country was visited with a thorough wetting down during the past 24 hours and this was reflected by the loss of ⅝ to ¾ in the wheat market at Chicago early this morning. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago at 280 cars, but those at Winnipeg were less than half for the same time in 1912.

There was a weak feeling in the wheat market at Liverpool, owing to favorable weather conditions abroad.

Corn was ¼ to ½ cent lower under favorable weather conditions and oats were off ¼ to ⅜.

Provisions were 2½ cents lower early in sympathy with the decline of 5 cents in the price of hogs at the yards.

STOCKS DULL BUT FIRM ENTIRE DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 25—A confused appearance obtained in the stock list at the opening of the market to-day and prices showed a division of sentiment. Trading was fairly active in United States Steel common and Union Pacific, the former losing ⅜ and the latter, after beginning ¼ lower, making a net gain of ⅜. Amalgamated Copper was ⅝ lower, but subsequently rallied fractionally. American Can was under pressure as the result of the unfavorable bond showing it had made and shaded.

Atchison lost ⅛. Canadian Pacific at the outset was ¼ higher, but subsequently increased this to ⅝. Chesapeake and Ohio was again weak, declining ¼. Among the other advances were Utah Copper ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ½, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ⅛, Norfolk and Western ⅛, Mexican Petroleum 1, Lehigh Valley ⅛, American Car and Foundry ⅛. New York Central lost ⅛.

The curb was steady.

Sentiment in London was cheerful. Americans in the London market was steady above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was harder on earnings. Other foreigners on the London Exchange were irregular.

A wavering tendency developed after the first half hour, and several of the leading issues recorded fractional losses. Chesapeake and Ohio declined over 2 points to 53¾, and Amalgamated Copper yielded 1 point. Union Pacific lost a good part of its early gain with Steel, Can and Lehigh Valley. Southern Pacific advanced 1¼ to 96½. At 146½ Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was off ⅜.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

Price changes in the last hour showed little change from either the morning or midday quotations. Amalgamated Copper sold around 64¾ and Atchison at 96¼. Canadian Pacific ruled around 217½. Union Pacific rose to 146¾ for a net gain of 1 point on the day. Steel gained ½ on the day, going to 53½. Pennsylvania was unchanged at 111. Trading was quiet.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

SOUTH DAKOTA WHEAT CROP 50 POINTS BELOW AVERAGE

CHICAGO, June 25.—B. W. Snow wires from Milbank, S. Dak: "From Jim River to Minnesota line to-day, east half Jim valley fully as bad as west Eight counties are in burnt district, involving 1,100,000 acres. The average condition reported by these counties June 1 was 97 per cent. Their average is now lowered 50 points. There is still some wheat in Brown and Spink Counties that good rains now would save for fair yield, being forced in heading at 8 inches high.

"From Clark County east the situation is reversed. Stand is fair and crop green and vigorous. Much of it perfect in appearance. This includes the eight northeast counties with little above 1,000,000 acres, which will average at least 95 for condition. No drouth damage here, but ground very dry clear to bottom of roots and plant would go to pieces with a few days of hot, windy weather. At best the State will fall much short of last year."

OAT CROP ESTIMATE.

Ohio, 50,716,000; Indiana, 38,758,000; Illinois, 90,843,000; Wisconsin, 73,317,000; Missouri, 16,605,000; Iowa, 135,610,000; Minnesota, 93,669,000; North Dakota, 80,080,000; South Dakota, 40,810,000; Nebraska, 62,463,000; Kansas, 32,328,000 bushels.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The indications are that there will be thunderstorms during the next thirty-six hours in the Lake Region and the Ohio Valley and widely scattered showers in the Middle Atlantic States and the Florida Peninsula. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be fair to-night and Thursday. Warmer weather will continue to-night and Thursday over the eastern half of the country, except that moderate temperature will prevail on the North Atlantic coast.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday.

Georgia, North and South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

Virginia: Cloudy and warm, probably light showers to-night or Thursday.

Florida: Probably fair in north, showers in south and central portions to-night or Thursday.

Louisina: Fair to-night and Thursday.

Texas: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The cotton seed oil market was active to-day, early months showing firmness, while late positions were easier. Refiners were buyers of old crop and sellers of new crop. A large part of the buying was for short account. Speculative longs were good sellers.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was considerable commission house buying at the opening of the cotton market today, and first prices were 2 to 9 points higher than Tuesday's final. Weather advices reported a lack of rain over the Western belt. Liverpool cables failed to make a strong showing at the opening, but quickly gained strength and closed with a sharp advance.

Interest was more plainly centered on new crops, which caused considerable strength in every option on the list. July and August, however, only opened 2 to 3 points higher. After the call new crops advanced still further, exercising a bullish influence upon old positions, with the results of July jumping 14 points over the opening, to 11.15, and August 13 points to 11.05.

Liverpool was reported a seller of January, but purchased July. Spot houses also bought July and August. The South was booked as a good buyer. Selling was scattered with very little for sale and the demand good. The ring was thought to be short and it took very little buying to put the market up.

The map indicates general rains in the belt in about 6 days, proceeded by moderate heat spell in the Northern quarter.

Scarcity of offerings and continued buying by big spot houses, resulted in a general short covering movement during the afternoon session. The market was flooded with buying orders from every source. July was rushed up to 12.22, against 1.99 previous close. The run was directed at some big Wall Street shorts.

Turner's report makes condition of the crop to June 22 at 81.3 per cent, showing an increase of 2.2 per cent over last month's report. The report was construed as bullish, owing to the big increase in condition showed by the National Ginners' report a few days ago.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 15 to 22 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Liverpool shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 1 point advance. Futures were as due. The advance yesterday of 1-16 to 12⅝ for middling in spot here and the continued high prices for July show that bullish conditions and control for the near future are at work and exercises a sustaining effect on new crops. July in New York advanced this morning 20 points and carried new crops here to 11.66. Sellers were scarce, realizing the bullish advantage at present and fearing the possibility of a low July bureau, owing to crop progress in the Atlantic States not being up to expectations.

The Wall Street Journal in a review of the general situation says: "The gentlemen as a result in industrial circles is that as a result of developments past and pending, a trade reaction is not far off."

The map shows partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, mostly light. Range of temperatures unchanged, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas. Indications are stationary conditions, but the map shows an important change in the distribution according to which general rains are likely to come on the belt in about a week, preceded, as usual, by a short spell of heat, which, from present indications, will be of only moderate intensity and confined principally to the northwestern quarter of the belt.

Trading was quiet and settled around 11.62 for October and December. The larger receipts at interior towns for the half week, 4,965 against 3,742 last year, sustains the claim that interior holdings are larger than last year, but the high July prices and large shipments show that the cotton is either already engaged or sold at very full prices.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris Rothschold & Co.: "We continue to be friendly to cotton."

Hayden Stone & Co.: "As the market is easily influenced by any unfavorable news the need of rain over a large central area will be a factor for the moment."

Condition of Cotton Shows Increase

MEMPHIS, June 25.—Reports of June 10th date showed a condition of 81.2. It is evident, therefore, that all the improvement for the month took place during the first two weeks. This was due to the fact that rains in that first period gave the Eastern States the desired stands and that elsewhere the ground was put into good cultivation. Nothing appears to have been added to either condition since and as the growth of the plant has not been generally rapid no gain above normal progress for the season is shown.

At this date last year this bureau's report was 80.1 per cent as compared with the official report to June 25 of 80.4 J. E. Turner's condition report through Miller & Cotter shows the following results on the condition of cotton as of June 22 as 81.2, compared to normal using government's basis as of May 25:

Good Time to Cull Out the Weaklings From Your Flock

Some Fine Pointers Regarding the Culling Out of Your Chickens. Suggestions Worth Lots to You.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

It is not the season of the year when we are doing our regular mating for breeding; it is a little too late, but it is a good time to do culling nevertheless. It is a good time to cull the hens. You will by this time, no doubt, have noticed that some of your pullets have not been laying regularly during this the great laying period of their lives. They may be laying small eggs or ill shaped ones all the time and that, too, in irregular numbers. It is a good plan and a good time to weed that kind out. Market them right now when the prices are good, and before they moult. Sometimes the breeder of exhibition stock is so anxious to perpetuate certain fancy traits that he is willing to forego short laying and things of that kind, but the utility man con not stand any such foolishness. He must have strength, vigor and good supply of eggs or it should go to the pot without delay. A good hen is expected to lay in a year about five times her weight in eggs. Professor Jordon, of the New York Experiment Station, has well put it, when he says: "Did you ever stop to note the difference in the production of the little Leghorn hen and the small Jersey cow? The Leghorn hen weighing 3½ pounds will lay 200 eggs weighing 25 pounds; the Jersey cow weighing 1,000 pounds will produce about 7,000 pounds of milk." He states "that if you will take the dry matter of the hen and compare it with the dry matter of the eggs she produces in a year, there will be 5⅛ times as much dry matter in the eggs as in her body. On the other hand, compare the dry matter in the cow's body to that of the milk that she produces and it will be as 1 to 2.9." In other words, the hen does twice as well as the cow. It is this high standing of the hen in mind that we must aim to keep our standard of utility up to.

In looking over your fully developed laying pullets if you see any that are small in the head for the size of the body, or has a slim, long beak, cull it out. It shows a weakness that should not be tolerated in a healthy flock. Those with the thin necks or pinched tails and narrow across the breast should go, too. Anything that shows a tendency to weakness. You can soon learn to detect these things if you will look your stock over carefully with that end in view. You will say that these things should be detected when the pens are first mated early in the spring, but at that time you can not tell all of them as well as you can after they have had a period of laying and begin to let down on their weak points. That is the reason that this is the very best time to do the culling. The males should be looked over for the same faults and those that do not measure up to the best that can be expected should be let go to the block rather than feeding them all the season for next year's use. The very strong and robust should not be disposed of at any price; keep them. Turning to the youngsters that are coming up watch them as they are developing to get at their weak points. Whenever you detect one in the flock as it grows it is a good plan to mark it with a brush and a little Diamond dye, so that when it gets old enough to eat there will be no trouble to tell it and get it out of the flock as soon as possible. The common points to detect the weak ones by are the drooping of the wings. Not necessarily clear to the ground, but they are not held in place as does a healthy chick have his. You will find that kind often sitting upon the ground while all its mates are out foraging.

It is the last to leave the roost in the morning and the first to get to it at night. The front part of its body is carried low, while in a vigorous one it is carried erect. As the comb begins to develop it should be a bright red and strong and vigorous looking. As we used to say the chicken carries his health certificate on top of his head.

The shanks are a very striking indication of the constitution of the specimen they carry. On the weaking the shanks are slim and bony; almost sunken, as we would call them. Note this fact closely as it is one of the surest indications. When the chicks are quite young you will note a great difference in the eyes. The eyes of the healthy one will be very bright and stand out like shoe buttons, while the weakling will have apparently flat and unimportant eyes.

Any one can soon train themselves to be an expert in the detecting of the weak ones that should come out of the flock, and the sooner they are put on the market the better for the rest of the flock. Of course, this has reference to those that show no sickness but are just not robust.

H. G. HASTINGS & CO.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities as to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

Poultry—Disinfectants.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS.

THERE is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree Street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree Street, knows its desirability, and also knows its PRICE, which, as a rule, is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10 to $15 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of any one who contemplates a Peachtree home.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

DeLeon Properties Sold for $40,000

Fulton National Buys and Subdivides. Church to Improve Property?—Echoes of Peachtree Paving.

The sale of the Moise DeLeon properties on Whitehall and South Forsyth Streets was closed Wednesday, the purchaser being the Fulton National Bank, through Dr. W. J. Blalock, president, and the price approximately $40,000. The deal was handled through Andrew Calhoun, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, and the property has been subdivided and placed with C. L. DeFoor and the above agency for resale.

The property is located on the west side of Whitehall Street, north of East Fair Street, where the total frontage is 52 1-3 feet, and on the east side of South Forsyth Street, in the rear of the Whitehall property, where the total frontage is 107 1-2 feet. In the new subdivision are two Whitehall lots 26.16 by 100 to an alley, and the Forsyth lots 21 by 22.5 by 100 feet to an alley.

It will be recalled that certain DeLeon equities were put up for sale before the court house door about two months ago. A Whitehall equity was bid in at $1,500, but Percy H. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, rejected the bid, and at private sale the equity brought $5,000. Wednesday's sale was for the entire properties.

Presbyterian Church Plans.

Members of the property committee of the First Presbyterian Church have a new scheme for disposition of the church's valuable lot on the south side of Marietta Street, near Spring Street. They want the church members to form a corporation and buy in the lot and erect substantial income-bearing improvements. In this way, pointed out by a prominent churchman Wednesday, the church would not be obliged to sell at a sacrifice.

There is still another proposition, in the nature of a cash offer which the property committee is considering. A land developer wants the lot to subdivide.

The congregation owns 90 feet of frontage on Marietta Street which has been held at $180,000. Some time ago they bought a large lot at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth Streets, where it is planned to put the new church and manse at a total cost of about $100,000. It is the desire of the property committee to go ahead with the erection of the new church irrespective of the sale of the downtown location, and it is probable that a move will be made toward erecting the edifice.

Healey Building Six Stories.

Steel work on the Healey Building has gone six stories and some of the uprights are in place for two more floors. The two monster derricks used to lift the stel are being carried up as the steel work progresses. At first they were located in the basement, but now they are high above the sidewalk and going higher. The Healey Building will soon be as high as the Grant Building to the south, and its seventeen stories will eventually cause it to tower over its neighbor.

Peachtree Paving Needed.

Members of the Board of County Commissioners declared Wednesday that something would be done as soon as possible to repair Peachtree Street from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead. What action would be taken was not stated definitely, but the Commissioners are at work on a plan and expect to announce it soon.

It will be recalled that the Commissioners met recently and agreed to remedy conditions "at once," but that a postponement was later ordered. In the meantime the paving is bad and property owners and travelers are beginning to complain.

Peachtree is used to reach town by all the people in the upper portion of Fulton County and of adjacent counties who do not use Piedmont Avenue or Marietta Street, and the volume of traffic is such that there is always a demand for a travelable thoroughfare. The condition of the street is now almost intolerable, and that is why ready relief is sought. The present paving is several years old, and the opinion is expressed that the commission will soon be obliged to lay entirely new paving.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

The Georgian heartily indorses the greater part of the message. However, there are one or two portions of the message on which The Georgian finds itself unable to agree with Governor Brown.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

The Hardest Hitter

The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

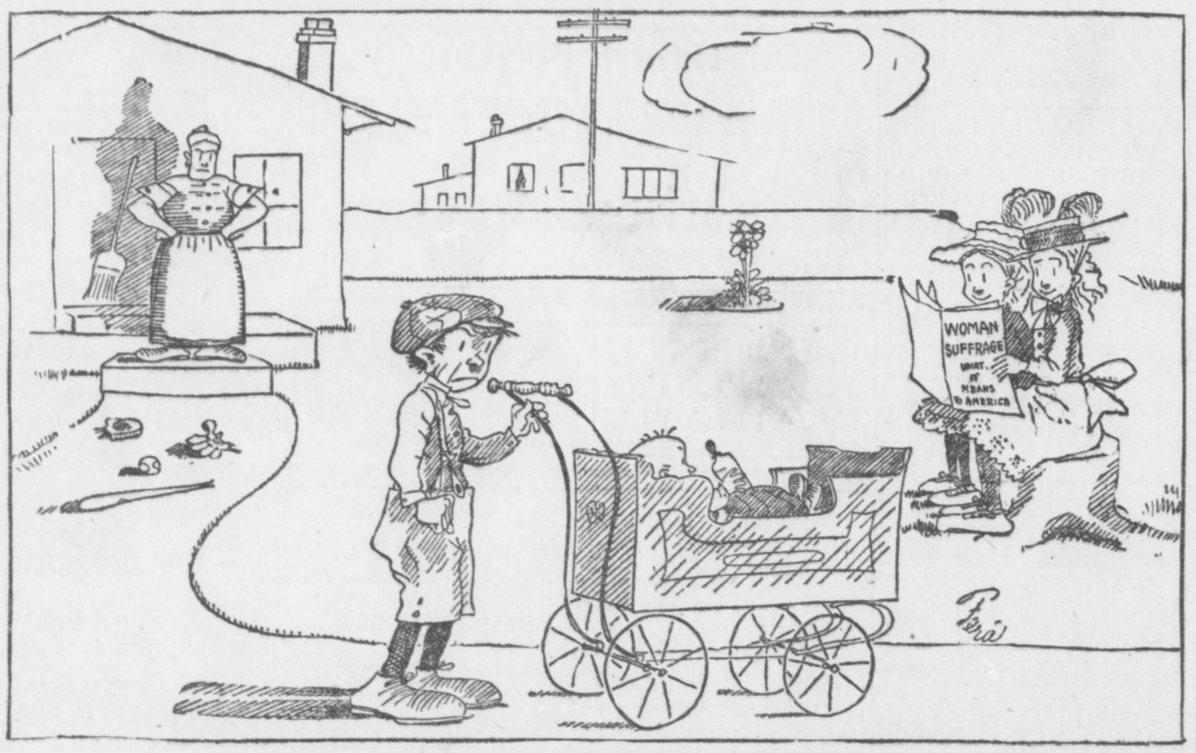
One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

3 CHILDREN MYSTERIOUSLY POISONED

CAPT. POOLE HURRIES TO POISONED TOTS

One Reported Dying From Strange Malady, and Chief's Auto Is Rushed to Scene.

A telephone message announcing that three of Police Captain Poole's children had been strangely poisoned late this afternoon took the captain out to his home on Glennwood Avenue on a record run in an automobile.

The message simply announced that the youngsters had been mysteriously seized and that one of them was dying and that their father was imperatively needed.

Chief of Police Beavers' automobile was put at Captain Poole's disposal and record time was made. The children are all under nine years old.

Bystander, Hit by Stray Shot, Dying

PENSACOLA, June 25.—As the result of a quarrel between two negroes here, Walter Miller, a young white man, is reported to be dying with a bullet in his chest. Mark Ewing, a negro, is seriously shot, and Emory Nelson, the negro who did the shooting, is stabbed in a lung.

The negroes began a fight at a factory, where Miller was in charge. A stray bullet struck him.

This is the second time Miller has been shot, both times being a bystander.

Train Rolls Into River; 10 to 20 Dead

OTTAWA, ONT., June 25.—The Canadian Pacific Imperial Limited was wrecked here this afternoon. Eight bodies already have been recovered. The dead are estimated at from ten to twenty. Scores were injured.

The accident was caused by spreading rails. Five cars were thrown down the embankment into the river.

FREE SUGAR AND WOOL UPHELD IN SENATE

Underwood's Plan for New Method of Handling Appropriations Is Killed.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Senate Democratic caucus to-day retained free sugar and wool in the Simmons-Underwood tariff bill by an overwhelming vote.

The names of those who voted against the free listing of those commodities were not made public, though it was rumored that Senators Ransdell, Thornton, Walsh, Newlands, Shafroth, Thompson and Shepherd stood out against the administration.

In the House the Democratic caucus voted 95 to 80 to table Representative Underwood's motion to carry into effect the terms of the budget committee's proposal for a new method of handling appropriations in the House. This was equivalent to defeating the budget scheme and it is now dead.

The motion was offered by Representative Hardwick, of Georgia.

The result is looked upon as a defeat for Underwood.

Convict Offers to Sell His Body to The Highest Bidder

Thomas A. McCullough, a convict in the Monroe County camp, wants to sell his own body. He expresses that desire in a letter dated Griffin, Ga., sent for insertion Wednesday in the ad columns of The Georgian.

FOR SALE—To the highest bidder for cash—I offer my body, which is 6 feet high, weighs 175 pounds, is large frame, well proportioned, 40 years of age and Caucasian race.

"I have a sentence of 18 years for killing a negro in Griffin in 1911 and have no prospects, no hopes and no friends, hence, being in bad health, I am asking this proposition. Anyone wishing to consummate a trade, address Thomas A. McCullough, Box 271, Care Monroe County Convict Camp.

Mercury Reaches 91; Showers May Abate Heat This Evening

The usual mark, 91 degrees, was the maximum temperature Wednesday. It was attained shortly before 2 o'clock.

The thermometer reached 84 at 10 o'clock and 88 at noon.

"It is remarkable how the same kind of weather prevails over the entire country," said C. F. VonHerrmann, the Atlanta forecaster. "It is 90 or thereabouts in Atlanta day after day, and the same nearly everywhere else. Although it seems pretty warm here, Atlanta is no hotter than other places."

"Continued fair, with possibly showers late in the afternoon," is the forecast for Thursday.

Augusta Likely Will Win Commission Rule

AUGUSTA, June 25.—Augusta will vote on the commission government plan Saturday. It is believed the movement will win.

Members of the present city administration and their friends do not wish commission government this time. They wanted it last year when not in power. The present anti-administration people did not want it last year.

UNION HEADS STIRRED BY BROWN'S ATTACK

Governor Brown's spirited attack upon labor unions and their tactics in his farewell message to the Legislature aroused widespread comment Wednesday, stirring up a hornets' nest among the labor union officials.

The Governor branded the unions an agency for anarchy and said that even in their gentler aspects they took on the nature of a gigantic labor trust out of all accord with the modern movement toward the suppression of big combinations.

He did not mince words in describing the unions as a menace to the people and to the principles of government. They struck their severest blows, he said, not at the rich people, but at the poor for whose protection they were supposed to be organized. The members, he said, regarded their organization as above the law, above the State and above the Constitution.

Says State Must Act.

The State of Georgia, declared the Governor, must assert itself and demonstrate that no person or group of persons can with impunity disregard the laws of the Commonwealth. As one of the panaceas for labor troubles, he suggested compulsory arbitration as a law on the statute books.

In referring to the Augusta car strike and the Georgia Railroad strike the Governor said the railroads had been given a charter to furnish transportation. The charter carried the effect of a contract. Neither the railroad company nor its employees had the right to commit any deed abrogating this contract. The State was privileged to call upon the railroad to fulfill the agreement, and the State's duty was to protect the railroad in operating its trains. By its disregard of the rights of the State and the people, the unions, he said, had made the union label mightier than the seal of State.

Labor union officials as a unit were bitter in their criticisms. Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, branded it as "balderhash" and "rot," and characterized the Governor as a disturber and a person seeking to restore the old order of things under the guise of reform.

Jerome Jones Criticises Brown.

"Governor Brown can see only within a narrowly circumscribed circle," said Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, in bitterly assailing Governor Brown's attack on labor. "Either he has no knowledge of the conditions of labor and the rights of those who work, or he deliberately is closing his eyes to the truth.

"Much that he says in his farewell message he has said before. He would have the laborer and his work the absolute chattel of the master—the employer. The day of such conditions rapidly is passing, and he is foolish who would restore the conditions of a half century ago.

Mary Tribble Dies After Two Weeks of Mysterious Illness

Seven-year-old Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman W. C. Tribble, of East Atlanta, died Wednesday afternoon shortly before 3 o'clock after being partly paralyzed for more than two weeks from the effects, it is believed, of eating pieces of crayon containing poisonous coloring matter.

Three physicians had tried every known remedy to relieve her. There were brief periods when she appeared to rally for a few minutes and hope was entertained for her recovery, but the deadly poison had done its work and she lapsed into complete unconsciousness Wednesday afternoon, the life spark slowly dying out.

The child went home on the last day of school two weeks ago Friday. She was in terrible agony. She was able only to tell her mother that her head hurt before she lapsed into unconsciousness.

Prints of teeth on colored crayon she had with her led physicians to believe that she had eaten the chalk and had been poisoned by the analine coloring matter.

ASSEMBLY GETS DOWN TO REAL BUSINESS

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both branches Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was elected president of the Senate, and Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, was named Speaker of the House.

Neither man had any opposition in the balloting, and both were elected unanimously.

The rather unexpected termination of the heretofore uncertain and strenuous fight for the presidency of the Senate undoubtedly surprised the packed galleries and lobbies.

Allen Withdraws His Name.

Senator Spinks, who was expected to nominate Judge Allen, arose immediately after the Senate had been called to order by Secretary Northen, and instead of nominating his man, withdrew his name.

In doing this he delivered a fine and friendly little speech, praised his own man and his opponent, and said that, while Judge Allen had 19 votes ready to stand by him, it was not sufficient to elect, and the Senator from the Twentieth—Judge Allen—preferred to do the graceful thing and retire, rather than proceed with his friends to a fruitless struggle.

When Senator Spinks sat down Senator Stark arose and nominated Mr. Anderson in a spech every bit as good natured as the one preceding it.

Rival Votes for Anderson.

When the roll was called, Allen's name came first, and when he started the balloting in favor of his victorious rival, he was generously applauded by his colleagues.

On assuming the chair, President Anderson delivered a brief address, particularly calling attention to the much necessary legislation that the new General Assembly likely would have to undertake.

He got a good laugh when, in a facitious manner, he referred to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce's work on behalf of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property. He said "it evidently would not be the Legislature's work to say what should be done with that property, as the Atlanta trade body seemingly proposed taking care of that little matter itself."

Senate Happy Over Outcome.

The feeling in the Senate, after the settlement of the Allen-Anderson fight was very happy. The way in which that issue was solved evidently lifted a heavy load off many a Senatorial mind, and Judge Allen's frank and manly attitude won him many friends.

Mr. Anderson, in accepting the Presidency, paid an eloquent tribute to the ability and integrity of his late opponent.

The efforts of the prohibition leaders to get into the game at the last minute seems to have been entirely futile, so far as results were concerned.

Both Senators Anderson and Allen answered the query propounded to them, as to whether they would favor legislation to perfect the Webb law, in the affirmative, and that flattened out all chance for excitement along that line.

"Drys" Fail to Change Vote.

It is evident that the injection of the prohibition issue did not change a vote.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth District, was elected President pro tem of the Senate. He is a new member, and has achieved a large measure of popularity during the past few days. He defeated Senator W. J. Bush by a vote of 37 to 6.

After the election of officers the Senate heard the Governor's message read and adjourned for the day.

Burwell's Speech Marks House Opening.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Secretary Boifeuillet called the House to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, chaplain of the House. This was followed by the administering of the oath to each member by Chief Justice W. H. Fish.

A large crowd witnessed the opening of the 50-day session. The galleries were filled.

Long before the opening hour the House chamber was filled with a good-humored crowd of legislators. With the Speakership settled by the withdrawal of Sheppard and Hardeman, members of the House found themselves devoid of anything to cause excitement. For a few minutes the lobbyists forgot their lobbying and the only thing to indicate that it was a political gathering was the soliciting of votes of the various candidates for the smaller offices.

Standing Room Only.

By 10:30 o'clock standing room in the House was at a premium. Every seat was taken, while the crowd lined the walls.

During the administering of the oath the lobbyists returned to their natural state, and the buttonholing began again.

Election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, as Speaker of the House was a somewhat quiet affair. No name was offered in opposition, while a score of Representatives were on their feet to second his nomination by L. R. Akin, of Glenn County, as Speaker. Harris, of Washington; J. J. Slade, of Muscogee; Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, and Adams, of Hall, were the first men to spring to their feet.

Burwell Without Opposition.

The roll call showed 170 votes for Burwell. Temporary Chairman Boifeuillet appointed Burwell's three rivals for the Speakership to escort him to the rostrum. They were Hardeman, Fullbright and Sheppard.

Great applause greeted their procedure down the hall with him. The appointment of his rivals as an escort caused a ripple of merriment to pass around the House.

Applause greeted Speaker Burwell's address throughout.

Minter Wimberly, of Bibb, placed in nomination John T. Boifeuillet as Clerk of the House, referring to him as the "Golden-hearted gentleman from Bibb," and the "handsomest man in Georgia." For fifteen minutes members of the House indulged in the making of complimentary speeches extolling the virtues and manly pulchritude of Boilfeuillet, whose intimate friends affectionately call him "John Bullyfoot," and who has been Clerk of the House since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. No name was offered in opposition to Boifeuillet.

Tax Reform Urged.

Burwell, in assuming the Speakership, urged tax reforms, saying, among other things:

"There are, with me, no scars to heal or enemies to pulish; and I sincerely trust that you can and will reciprocate the feelings of sincere personal regard and friendship that I entertain for every member of this House.

"For the past several years since the limitation of 5 mills was wisely placed upon the taxing power of the General Assembly, appropriations have been from time to time increased beyond the revenues of the State until to-day we find a deficit in our State Treasury which the honor and integrity of the State demands we should correct.

"To do this, and to do it wisely, will require our best thought and highest patriotism. In its consideration we should on the one hand keep in mind the demands and needs of the State and her various institutions, and with liberal justice provide for all, in order that the dignity of the State may be preserved and her institutions fostered, protected and developed; but, on the other hand, I can but beg you remember the present condition of our people.

Taxes High Enough.

"Let me assure you I am no pessimist and I fully realize and appreciate that Georgia is rich and prosperous in the possession of boundless natural resources, more varied perhaps than any of her sister States, and that her basic credit is well founded and established beyond the thought of criticism; yet it is a manifest fact to all in close touch with our constituency that the crop conditions of the past two years have placed unusual burdens upon our people and there is no business or interest in Georgia, whether farmer, merchant, banker, manufacturer, laborer or man of the professions, which has not felt its serious consequences.

"Therefore, to lay additional burdens upon our people at this time will be disastrous and unwise, and I sincerely trust that in providing for this deficit in the treasury you will find other means than that of increase in the various taxes of the State.

"We will be called upon to correct the present evils in our taxing system, a system which is now so antiquated, in many instances so inadequate and so unjust, and to correct these evils in such manner as will equalize the burdens of taxation and adjust the present inequalities and inequalities of our law, offers to us the highest opportunity for the exercise of wise statesmanship and real service to the State."

Boifeuillett Gets 170 Votes.

A total of 170 votes was recorded for Boifeuillett. A committee of three was appointed to escort him to the clerk's desk.

Immediately following this a message was sent to the Senate informing that body that the House was in order, and that a committee of five, to meet with a committee of three from the Senate, to inform the Governor that the General Assembly was in order, was appointed.

A resolution for the appointment of success, unanimous consent being the committee of three from the Senate to arrange for the inauguration of Governor Slaton then was adopted.

Nominations for Speaker Pro Tem were called for. E. H. McMichael, of Marion, and A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, were the only two men nominated, there being a large number of seconds for each man.

This vote was one of the most exciting in the history of the House, being neck and neck throughout. As the roll call progressed the vote stood 4-4, 10-10, 14-14, 18-18, 20-20.

Then McMichael began to forge ahead, the vote going McMichael 35, Stovall 31, then 45-36, 50-42, 52-46, 57-53, 60-54, 64-56, 66-60, 71-64, 73-71, 79-74, 86-81, 98-85. McMichael wins.

Speaker Raps for Order.

Mrs. Rosa Tolbert Reid was announced as postmistress of the House. D. T. Paulk, of Ben Hill County, was re-elected messenger without opposition.

Speaker Burwell was forced to rap for order repeatedly. Upon order of the Speaker the aisles were cleared and the members ordered to remain in their own seats while in the chamber.

W. T. Morris, of Tolbert County, was re-elected doorkeeper. There was no opposition and the Rev. H. J. Ellis, of Fulton County, was elected chaplain of the House.

An effort to dispense with the filing of bills during the opening day failed to success, unanimous consent being required, and several objections being voiced.

Following the filing of new bills the reading of the Governor's message was announced. Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley County, moved that the House adjourn without the reading of the message, but the motion was lost by a heavy roll of "noes."

Immediately following the conclusion of the reading of the Governor's message the House was declared adjourned until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

House Gets Many Bills on First Day.

The following bills were submitted in the House:

Edmondson, of Brooks—Bill providing for a constitutional convention:

Cole, of Bartow—Bill providing for inheritance tax;

Slater, of Bryan—Bill to establish a public highway from the beginning of King's Ferry Bridge on the Ogeechee River in Bryan County, through the counties of Bryan, Liberty, McIntosh, Glynn or Wayne and Camden to some suitable point on the line between Florida and Georgia;

Lynch, of Clarke—Bill to provide for system of equalization of tax assessments;

Clark, of Dougherty—Bill allowing County Commissioners to provide funds for support of Albany hospital;

Adams, of Hall—Providing for establishment of Barrow County;

FISHER'S BRIDE NEAR DEATH IN FALL

That Mrs. Bud Fisher, who is better known to Atlanta as Pauline Welch, narrowly escaped death late Sunday night became known to-day.

The wife of the famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff" lies in her apartments at the Piedmont Hotel with a gash five inches long in her throat as the result of an accident which only great good fortune prevented from being fatal.

Mrs. Fisher, whose clever singing won great applause at the Forsyth Theater last week, retired about midnight Sunday night. About an hour later she arose and started into the bath room to fill a pitcher, containing some ice, with water. The lights were not turned on in the apartment, and as Mrs. Fisher entered the bath room she stumbled and fell against the bath tub.

The pitcher she held in her hand crashed against the tub, and she fell against a jagged piece of the glass, cutting a deep gash in the throat. She screamed and fainted, and Mr. Fisher picked her up and carried her to a bed.

Twenty Stitches in Wound.

Mrs. Fisher lost a great deal of blood. There was considerable delay in getting medical assistance, and when Drs. Worth E. Yankey and C. L. Rougian arrived an hour later she was unconscious. The flow of blood was stopped and 20 stitches were taken in the wound, nine aluminum clamps being necessary to hold the severed flesh in place during the operation.

A third physician was called into consultation, and the doctors remained with Mrs. Fisher during the remainder of the night. For several hours it was feared that she would not recover from the shock and loss of blood, but early Tuesday morning she regained consciousness and rallied rapidly.

Must Remain in Atlanta.

Mr. Fisher stated Wednesday morning that it will be impossible to move Mrs. Fisher for a week or ten days. They have canceled a vaudeville engagement at Brighton Beach for week after next and intend to remain in Atlanta until Mrs. Fisher is completely recovered.

The attending physicians declare that Mrs. Fisher had a miraculous escape from death.

B. M. Dunn Dead at His West End Home

B. M. Dunn, age 71 years, a widely known citizen, died Wednesday afternoon at the family residence, 291 Gordon Street, West End.

He leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter. The sons are Charles W. Dunn, B. M. Dunn, Jr., and H. W. Dunn. The daughter is Mrs. John H. Dobbs. All of them reside in Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements have not been made, but interment will be at Cartersville Thursday.

Chicago Noise Peril Shown by Atlantan

CHICAGO, June 25.—The incessant noise of the downtown district of Chicago has a distinct effect on Chicagoans, and they do not know what relaxation means, Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., last night told the conference of allenists and neurologists who are considering ways and means of decreasing degeneracy and dementia.

"The loop is guilty of more and longer continued noise than any similar area in the world," declared Dr. King.

GRIM WARNING TO PLOTTERS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 25.—As a warning to all plotters the bodies of twelve Turkish reactionaries hanged yesterday for the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha were allowed to swing upon the gibbet in Bayazid Square 24 hours.

O. F. GOWER, of Crisp County, and Minter Wimberly, of Bibb County, two widely known leaders in the House of Representatives. This picture was taken at the statehouse as the two lawmakers were discussing the Governor's message. Apparently they are greatly interested in the stirring plea for reform measures.

UNION LEADERS SCORE BROWN FOR ATTACK

Ideas Approach Imbecilic.

"His ideas border on the imbecilic. It is utter nonsense to say that the increased wages obtained by the members of the labor unions has imposed a tax on those who happen not to be members. It is a matter of industrial history that where the labor unions have procured better wages those outside the union have been similarly benefited, if not quite in the same degree.

"The foremost economists of the country, those who look at the subject without the bias which might be accredited to the labor unionist himself, are pretty generally agreed that the labor union not only has set the standard of wages and the hours of labor, but also has set the standard of living among the working people, who in the final analysis are one of the strongest bulwarks of the State. They not only admit, but declare freely, that the reforms obtained by the unionists have been of benefit to the people at large.

"How foolish, then, is it to assert that the activities of the labor unions are imposing a tax on the remainder of the State's citizens.

Assails Compulsory Arbitration.

"His suggestion that compulsory arbitration be one of the laws placed upon our statute books constitutes a most dangerous principle. Who has a right to say that I shall arbitrate? 'I believe in arbitration, but no one has the power to make me arbitrate. Suppose, following out the Governor's suggestion, a dispute between a railroad company and its employees is arbitrated. Suppose that the award of the arbitration board is in favor of the employees. Is there any power that can make the railroad company keep me or any of my fellow employees on the company's payroll? Is there any way to stop the hundred and one similar methods of reprisal that the railroads may adopt under the compulsory arbitration system?

O. K.'s Sympathetic Strikes.

"Because the labor unionists are a small group in the population is no reason why their rights should have less weight than the rights of the others. Neither can there be any objection to the practice of sympathetic strikes, against which the Governor inveighs.

"If it should be only one man whose rights are attacked, the whole union is bound to fight in his behalf until its treasury is exhausted. That man's rights established, the decision has an effect on the whole body of laborers.

"The Governor speaks of courts and juries, but I would ask him at what courts and at the hands of what juries can the laboring man get equable decisions on the questions that arise from time to time?"

PAINTER FAMILY STARTS FIGHT FOR ORGANS

Demurrer Is Filed in Baltimore to Petition Asking a Receiver for Viscera.

BALTIMORE, June 25.—A demurrer offered in the Circuit Court today by Mrs. Martha S. Painter, widow of Edward O. Painter, the Jacksonville fertilizer man, and his daughter, Miss Okle C. Painter, may delay for several days consideration of the petition for a receiver asked for the viscera of the late fertilizer king.

The demurrer declares those instituting the proceedings have no constitutional right to do so.

Before hearing witnesses Judge Duffy asked Dr. Charles Glaser, who conducted the analysis, if they could be preserved pending the time the case might be in litigation. Dr. Glaser replied that they might be kept in a good state until next fall.

Attorneys for the family argued that they were entitled to possession of the remains of Painter, under rulings of courts in different States.

"The organs of the human body are not property," the attorneys argued. "The courts have said a human body is only quasi-property, and it can only be considered in the light of property when the next of kin are making a claim for it."

Advance Guard Off To Gettysburg Field

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The advance guard of the army of veterans of the war between the States who will attend the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg on the historic field next week left the Reading Terminal this morning.

The advance detachment is going ahead to prepare accommodations and commissary arrangements for the body of the army.

Wounded Americus Police Chief Dying

AMERICUS, June 25.—Chief of Police W. C. Barrows, who was fatally shot and whose assailant was lynched Saturday night, is not expected to live until night. Previous to to-day his condition was considered rather favorable, but during the morning he failed rapidly.

No further trouble in the event of his death is expected.

WHY SWELTER? KEEP COOL

You can do so these hot days by using an Oil Stove for your cooking. Especially acceptable are they during the canning season. Is it too hot in the kitchen? That's all right; just move the stove to the back porch. Not comfortable there? Then just try the butler's pantry and they won't heat up the rest of the house nor you, either.

Come in and let us give you a lesson on keeping cool while cooking in the summer time. We carry in stock one, two and three-burner stoves, with or without cabinets; and you can buy these with or without ovens.

Our King Bee line has many points of superiority over any other oil stove on the market.

CUYLER LOCATED FOR HIS WIFE BY WOMAN

WAYSIDE, GA., June 25.—It developed to-day that a woman, indigenous to the red hills of Jones County, succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and delitante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the wildest regions of war-torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman detective of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never seen a sleuth, but she has a well-developed power of reasoning.

Finds Him at Plantation.

Two weeks ago when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County sources the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, she took the rather prosaic method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been playing hide-and-seek with officers endeavoring to serve him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months. She had reports that he was hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dilettante wanted to hide, abviously the best place for him to secrete himself would be his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be anywhere but at home.

Perhaps she didn't reason at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front verdanda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary for Jones County farmers to do.

Couple Discussed Divorce.

In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, her counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Alameda, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No decision was reached at that time, and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Southern Cotton Company to grow long staple cotton on a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know what he did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from officers she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Alameda conference A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

Later he was traced, according to Mrs. Cuyler's information, through Arizona and then East to New York. She had also been told that he was reported variously in Europe and the Orient.

Leading Life of Recluse.

About two weeks ago, according to Mrs. Chiles' information, on the birthday of Telemon Cuyler, Jr., the five-year-old son of the torn pair, a package of presents was received at the California home of the mother. It was addressed in Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Wayside people say that Cuyler has been at his mother's plantation for at least three weeks.

How much longer he has been there they do not know. Since his return he has been leading the life of a recluse. On his former visits to his Jones County place he made daily trips to the Wayside Station and showed considerable interest in discussions, so universal on the porches of rural general stores.

Cuyler is taking the news of the proceedings with the utmost nonchalance. He apparently is in no hurry to decide on the exact nature of his action in the matter.

"The affair is very complex," he says, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added as an afterthought.

"I may come to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel. I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime, I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction. Then the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are thus rather completely employed, and this matter's coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex, and interesting."

'Parasol Cop' Like Toad Under a Stool

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The parasol cop is the latest thing and the advance guard, Policeman J. C. Holmes, is stationed at Fifteenth and New York Avenues. He stands there under a huge parasol fastened in the middle of the street for all the world like a toad under a toadstool.

If the experimental parasol cop turns out well, Major Sylvester will have a battalion of them.

PLAYERS' CLUB LEADERS are enthusiastic over the success of the season, and already are planning future activities. Felder, the president of the Players' Club.

HENEY EXPECTED TO BE M'NAB'S SUCCESSOR

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House to-day as practically certain that Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco prosecutor who convicted Abe Ruef of graft and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case.

The only obstacle to Heney's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is admitted that his appointment to take charge of the white slave cases at this time will tremendously help Heney's candidacy for the Senate, and as the prosecutor is a rabid Progressive, it is understood that this course will endanger the Democratic chances in California.

However, as President Wilson is being informed on all sides that Heney is the man to manage the Government side of the case it is probable he will cast aside all politics and appoint the Progressive as special counsel.

The President to-day conferred with Attorney General McReynolds and Representative Kahn, of California, on the Caminetti matter, but neither side would make any statement.

The White House and the Department of Justice said the McNab matter is closed so far as Washington is concerned, and the Government is only interested in obtaining justice, swift and sure, for Diggs and Caminetti.

Rumors that Attorney General McReynolds is about to leave the cabinet have been strengthened by the developments in the Caminetti case.

Elder Caminetti Gets Leave to Attend Trial.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Antonio Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration and father of one of the alleged white slavers, now awaiting trial at San Francisco, will be allowed to be present at his son's trial.

President Wilson has informed the Secretary of Labor he thinks it best to allow Commissioner Caminetti to go West at once instead of waiting until fall.

SLAYS WIFE AND FRIEND.

CIRCLEVILLE, KANS., June 24.—Because his wife had brought suit for divorce, Frank Payne stabbed her to death this morning. He also killed Mrs. Ora Eby, her friend.

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commorce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

Congress to Adopt New Budget System

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A caucus of the Democratic members of the House was called to-day for the purpose of adopting a budget system, or method of controlling appropriations in the House.

The caucus also will decide the fate of the Commerce Court and determine whether the bars should be let down so as to allow the enactment of general legislation at this session.

Throng Chases Boy Down Busy Streets

Willie Jones, a 17-year-old negro, had nothing on his mind but his cap Wednesday morning as he stood at Five Points. The transformation of his mental state was marvelous, however, when he saw Policeman Helms, of Columbus, Jones' former home, approaching.

Terror seized him and he dashed through a crowd into Marietta Street. Hundreds joined the chase. Excitement ran high until Jones was arrested at Forsyth by Helms.

Jones will be taken to Columbus to answer a charge of theft.

Bankhead Asks U. S. Office for Goodwin

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, to-day recommended to President Wilson the appointment of Tyler Goodwin, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Alabama, to be District Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama.

The President promised to take the matter up with the Attorney General.

OWLS OPEN HOME FOR YANCEY BALL

The club rooms and dance floor on the roof garden of the Owls' Club have been offered for the Dave Yancey benefit ball Friday night.

Practically every attache of the Sheriff's office and the court house has lent his efforts to boosting the affair, and already hundreds of tickets have been sold. Men will be charged 25 cents for admission. Women will be admitted free of charge.

The proceeds will go toward the Yancey fund to brighten the future of the dead deputy's widow and six children.

Additional subscriptions to this cause are badly needed. Provision for the life of the Yancey family has been but poorly made so far. A plea was issued Wednesday to the thousands of persons who have not yet contributed their mite to do so immediately. A dime, a quarter or a half-dollar is desired from each. The amount is insignificant, yet it means happiness to the stricken family.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for each of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court to-day when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl," and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

BULLETIN OPENS 50-DAY WAR ON CHAINGANGS

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me as if there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

Zionists Tell Plan of Palestine Colony

CINCINNATI, O., June 25.—At the sixteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists here the annual message of the honorary president, Dr. Harry Freidenwald, explained fully the purpose of the federation.

"It is not our idea to send all Jews back to Palestine," he said, "but to place all Jews in a position where independence is assured them. Primarily, the move is for the relief of the Russian Jew."

Girls Writing Book Will Simplify Laws

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—The embryo lawyer of to-day, who will be the brilliant pleader of to-morrow, will owe a debt of gratitude to two Cleveland girls for a massive volume filled with simple interpretations of Ohio's laws. The girls are Miss Ruth Winch, 22, daughter of Judge Louis H. Winch, and Miss Ruth Jenkins, 18.

The book is being prepared by the girls under the supervision of Judge Winch, and will be known as "The History of the Laws of Ohio."

1,500 Milwaukee's Bars Face Closing

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their free book. Write to-day. It is most instructive.

Lad Plays Ball on Piedmont Roof

Hits Homer From Aerial Ball Lot

Sphere Cracks Cabman in Street

Manager Dutton's Young Son Presses Nurses Into Service in His Practice Games.

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-massy, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

Lear Dutton.

BRAVES DEATH TO BE NOBLE'S BRIDE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened if she married Sir Joseph Tichborne, was wedded to Sir Joseph in Brompton Oratory to-day without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by Theresa Doughty Tichborne, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Orton, claimant of the Tichborne baronetcy and estates. Later she declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Tichborne, who mysteriously disappeared half a century ago and about whose absence a romantic cloud of mystery had been woven.

Orton, in 1869, claimed to be Roger Tichborne and demanded the title and estates of the twelfth baronet. He came from Australia and the Tichborne family, convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. Then came a long and celebrated trial, but Orton's case was nonsuited. He was convicted of perjury and sent to jail for 14 years.

Orton, before he died in 1898, confessed he had been a butcher in London's East End.

The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and who was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Krusekopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

FANS, ALSO, MUST OBSERVE SUNDAYS

That phase of the Atlanta spirit so pronounced in baseball fans and that causes them to root for the home team as no other set of fans ever rooted must be placed in the ice chest Sundays.

Recorder Nash Broyles so decreed Tuesday afternoon when he ruled that the baseball parlors of "Caller" R. H. King at 9 Viaduct Way will not be permitted to open Sundays. This is the hall in which Atlanta fans assemble to witness the battle by innings flashed by telegraph when the Crackers are scrapping in foreign fields.

The baseball parlor is in the same class as moving picture theaters, penny arcades, and other such amusements, according to the Recorder.

King threw open his parlors for the game last Sunday, and a test case was promptly made against him.

Judge Broyles dismissed the case on the agreement of King to keep his place closed on Sunday.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

CONLEY, PUT ON GRILL, STICKS STORY

Puzzled by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by Monteen Stover. He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 12 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Stover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clearer Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain this apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the factory foreman. Which statement is believed by the State is not known. What explanation is made by the negro for lying in regard to the matter also is conjectural.

Mary Phagan left her home on April 26 at about 11:50 o'clock. Living in Bellwood, it is regarded as unlikely that she reached the factory in less than 25 minutes, or at 12:15. Monteen Stover has testified that she visited the factory at about 12:10, which would be just before Mary Phagan had entered the factory, if the times testified to are correct.

Conley, on this account, has been asked if he saw, from his vantage point behind the boxes, Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, and Lemmie Quinn enter at 12:20, why he did not see Mary Phagan when she entered in the interval between the visits of the Stover girl and Lemmie Quinn.

Sticks to His Story.

Another point on which he has been questioned is as to how he could have left his home at the time he has testified and visit all the saloons of which he has told and still meet Frank at Nelson and Forsyth Streets as Frank was on his way to Montag Bros. factory. Frank, according to the statements of members of the Montag firm, was in their building by 10 o'clock. Yet the things that Conley has testified to doing would have taken him until considerably after 10 o'clock, according to a conservative estimate.

He also has been quizzed on other points in his testimony which appear at variance with the facts, but he has stuck steadfastly to the story told in his last affidavit. Solicitor Dorsey has said that he has been unable to shake the negro in any important particular.

Deny Hoke Smith Story.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, made strenuous denial Wednesday that any effort had been made to connect Senator Hoke Smith with the defense. A similar denial was made by Herbert Haas, associated with Mr. Rosser in the defense. Neither was able to say how the rumor had started.

Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, said that the State would be prepared Monday to fight the subpenas duces tecum issued by the lawyers for the defense. It is regarded as improbable, however, that the defense will bring the matter to an issue until the trial begins July 28.

Ethical Society to Get Noted Speakers

Many noted lecturers will speak before the Atlanta Ethical Society next season, according to a report just issued by the executive committee. Among those now under consideration are Dr. Horace Bridges, leader of the Chicago Ethical Society; Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer, of the New York School of Philanthropy; Dr. Percival Chubb, of the St. Louis Society; Dr. David Saville Muzzey, of the New York Society; Dr. C. DeLisle Burns, extension lecturer of Oxford University, England, and others.

M. H. Wilensky is chairman of the committee. Assisting him are Dr. C. B. Wilmer, H. M. Atkinson, Clifford L. Anderson, L. B. Magid, Dr. E. G. Ballenger, A. H. Bancker, Harold Hirsch and L. C. Hopkins. Joseph C. Greenfield is secretary-treasurer of the society.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

LONDON, June 25.—A riot occurred in Oxford Street this afternoon when spectators watching for President Poincare of France to drive on his way from Guild Hall to York House attacked a suffragette procession.

Three women were badly hurt.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Aerial Courier Takes Dispatches to Poincare.

LONDON, June 25.—Bearing dispatches from the French Government to President Poincare of France, Aviator Slack, a British airman, arrived here from Paris to-day in his aeroplane. The courier made the trip without mishap, beating the regular mail time by many hours.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Boy Worker Killed By Compressed Air

CAMDEN, N. J., June 25.—Joseph DeFinnie, 18, died here from injuries received when fellow workers in a factory, it is alleged, forced compressed air down his throat through a tube until his abdomen was ruptured. An investigation is being made.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 48-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and exterminate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the purest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sunday, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing and if I can help you I will.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Members of the Capital City Club, their wives and friends, are eagerly anticipating the formal opening of the Capital City Country Club Thursday afternoon and evening when the entire club membership will assemble to declare the summer season open at this new branch of the club.

Since taking over the Brookhaven Club the Capital City Club has added a new feature. The Country Club will be largely an athletic club.

There are three fine tennis courts and golf links are in good condition. Each afternoon sees twenty or thirty persons in or on the water many members having private canoes. Flower beds and flower boxes add to the attractiveness of the verandas.

The entire club house will be thrown open from 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, officers and their wives holding an informal reception at that hour. Later refreshments will be served al fresco. In the evening there will be dancing.

Mr. Robert F. Maddox, president, and Mrs. Maddox will act as official host and hostess. Receiving with them will be other officers of the club and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Spalding, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Brutus Clay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman, Messrs. Charles I. Ryan, Robert Clarke and Edward Austin.

At St. Simons Island.

Among the Atlantans registered at the new St. Simon's Hotel are Mr. Martin Amorous, Misses Emma Kate, Isabel, Rosalind, Janice and William Amorous, Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong and children, Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newell and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Irving S. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McRae and family, Mrs. Mary F. Boynton, Mrs. Walter G. Smith, Miss Louise Mell, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Callaway, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Armistead, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and family, Mr. C. G. Thorn, Dr. and Mrs. John S. Derr, and many others.

Large numbers of Macon, Atlanta, Birmingham and other cities are represented at the hotel. The Governor's Horse Guards of Atlanta and other military companies are in camp near the light house.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. William Schroder gave a bridge party Wednesday at her home in Fourteenth Street for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

The house was decorated with pink sweetpeas and Shasta daisies. In the dining room the tea table had as its centerpiece a mound of pink sweetpeas. Pink candle shades and pink mints completed the color motif.

Prizes were a parasol and pieces of shadow lace lingerie, trimmed in French roses.

Mrs. Schroder's guests were twelve of her young married friends.

Mrs. Massenburg Entertains.

Mrs. Frank Massenburg entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. R. Bethune, of Rome, formerly Miss Gladys Kirk. The game was played on the porch, decorated with plants and sweetpeas, and prizes were white and gold china for top score, a pin tray for consolation and crystal candlesticks for the honor guest.

Tea was served from a table covered with lace over pink satin and adorned with pink and white sweetpeas, a color scheme of pink and white being observed in detail. Punch was served from a bowl imbedded in fruits. Mrs. Massenburg wore pink embroidered voile.

Guests were Mrs. Bethune, Mrs. D. Y. Sage, Mrs. G. A. Harbour, Mrs. T. C. Mell, Mrs. B. O. Jackson, Mrs. H. B. Rogers, Mrs. F. E. Markel, Mrs. W. H. Letton, Mrs. H. C. Chapman, Mrs. G. R. Glenn, Mrs. Carl DuPuy, Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. J. M. Daniel, Mrs. T. R. Smith, Misses Bess Smith, Willie Adher and Jennie Sue Bell.

For Miss Oliver.

Miss Lula Dean Jones gave a tea at the Driving Club Wednesday afternoon for Miss Eloise Oliver, whose wedding to Mr. Frampton Ellis will take place June 30.

Tea was served on the terrace and the table had a centerpiece of Gloire de Dijon roses. All the details were in yellow. Miss Jones' guests included the girls in the wedding party.

Miss Broyles Hostess.

Miss Louise Broyles will have as her guests for the week-end Misses Harriet Benedict and Nellie Phinizy, of Athens. Many informal affairs are planned for the visitors. A tea will be given at the Driving Club by Miss Helen McCarty.

Miss Traylor Entertains.

Miss Margaret Traylor entertained informally at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses Katharine Graves and LaGrange Cochran, of Rome. There were two tables of bridge, and the prizes were silk hose for top score and consolation, and gauze fans for the honor guests. Pink roses formed the decorations. Miss Traylor wore white lace with overdress of pink chiffon.

Vesper Club Dance.

The Vesper Club will give a dance in the club rooms Friday evening, July 4. A number of visitors will be the honor guests.

For Mrs. Dowman.

Mrs. Julian Prade will entertain a group of young matrons at tea Thursday afternoon for her sister, Mrs. Charles Dowman, Jr., of Birmingham.

Mrs. Marye Entertains.

Mrs. Thornton Marye was hostess at an informal tea Wednesday afternoon at the Piedmont Club, entertaining a group of married friends. The guests were received on the piazza at the rear of the ball room, which provided a charming setting for the prettily gowned guests. Tea was served from a long table, adorned with a large basket of daisies, tied with yellow ribbons. Mrs. Marye wore white cotton crepe combined with Florentine lace, with girdle of pale blue, her white hat adorned with blue ribbons and clusters of tiny French flowers.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Frank Orme gave a children's party Wednesday afternoon, celebrating the sixth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Mark. A grab bag afforded amusement. A heart-shaped birthday cake, bearing six pink tapers in rosebud holders, alternating with silver vases of pink roses, adorned the table. Refreshments were in pink and white. The honor guest wore Irish lace over a pink slip, with pink slippers, stockings and ribbons. Receiving with her were her cousins, Mary Phillips and Nancy Belle Keeler.

For Miss Oliver and Mr. Ellis.

Miss Eloise Oliver and Mr. Frampton Ellis, whose marriage takes place next Monday evening, will be tendered a buffet supper Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., preceding the rehearsal for the wedding.

Cole-Reese.

The wedding of Miss Harriet Cole to Mr. Rogers Reese Wednesday evening will be one of the interesting social events of the season. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. H. D. Cole in Ansley Park at 8:30 o'clock. A limited number of guests will be present. An informal reception will follow the ceremony.

Parties for Miss Francis.

Miss Lula Dean Jones will entertain at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect. Mrs. James W. Morrow's bridge party Thursday will be in honor of Miss Francis, and the luncheon at which Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain Tuesday will also be for Miss Francis. Mrs. William Schroder has dated her bridge party for Miss Francis for next Wednesday.

For Mrs. Seydel.

Miss Ida May Blountgave an informal bridge party Tuesday morning for Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers and the prize was silver slipper buckles.

The guests were the Misses Margaret Nutting, Eloise Oliver, May Bancker, Mrs. Kenneth Goode, Mrs. Hamilton Block, Mrs. Benjamin Weaver and Mrs. Ernest Duncan.

For Miss Kendrick.

Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins will entertain ten guests informally at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, in honor of Miss Helen Kendrick, of Cincinnati, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Alex Smith.

For Mrs. Ravenel.

Mrs. Edward C. Peters entertained twelve guests at an informal porch party Wednesday morning for Mrs. St. Julian Ravenel, of New York, the guest of Mrs. Thomas M. Clarke. Garden flowers and growing plants formed the decorations, and luncheon followed the game.

Sturgeon-Rothe.

Mrs. Lebens Wagner, of Columbus, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Uda Marie Sturgeon, to Dr. H. H. Rothe, of San Antonio, Texas, the couple to be at home in Athens after their marriage.

He defeated Mavrogordato in the third round.

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

B. Y. P. U. TO MEET.

The city B. Y. P. U. will hold its regular meeting at the Second Baptist Church Thursday night at 8 o'clock. This will be an echo meeting of the State B. Y. P. U. Convention at Macon last week.

A Sale of Brass Wares

In Which Jardinieres, Window Boxes, Fern Dishes, Andirons and Novelties Are Priced at Half and Less

There is always a place in a well regulated household for an artistic piece of brassware, or, perhaps we should say, for another piece of brassware.

Now is your time to secure another piece at a price never more than half and very often less than half. It is our June disposal, which alone accounts for such prices.

The brasswares are elegant, usually those heavy hand-wrought pieces that lend distinction and grace wherever they are placed—such, too, as seldom find their way into such a sale. But all merchandise, be it ever so artistic and beautiful, is only merchandise at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co., and so must be disposed of in good season.

This time it is brasswares.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us," Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it.

Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay three or four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or sue is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice, "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section, Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

GRANEY TO BE REFEREE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Eddie Graney, promoter of the Ritchie-Rivers July 4 bout here, will be the third man in the ring when hostilities begin. At a conference the former blacksmith was chosen referee.

UHLAN GOES FAST MILE.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 25.—C. K. G. Billings' gelding Uhlan circled the mile course at North Randell yesterday in 2:04¼. Trotting to a sulky he went the route in 2:03 1-3.

A Bit on the Side

MENTAL OVERFLOW.

There's many a substitute better than the real thing, even in baseball.

Muggsy McGraw has a fat chance of scaring Hank O'Day by making a rush at him. Hank worked a whole season in Cincinnati, where the fans rush every day.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

Hirsig Trades Glenn; After Major Players

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25.—President Hirsig announces he has sold Catcher Harry Glenn, last season with the Vols, to the St. Louis Cardinals for $1,000 and Pitcher Redding.

Glenn was farmed to Akron, Ohio, in the early part of this season, where he has been hitting at a terrific clip. Hirsig claims he has deals pending for a number of players from the major leagues in his efforts to strengthen the sliding Vols.

Racing at Belmont; Only Two-Day Meet

NEW YORK, June 25.—The two days' meet of the United Hunts Racing Association will open this afternoon at Belmont Park Terminal with a large field of entries. The second and closing day of the meet is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The program is a varied one and embraces both jumping and flat races. Six events are carded for each day, including three flat races, two steeplechases and one hurdle event. The Sportsmen's Steeplechase Dinner Stakes, which is considered to be the most important race of the meet, has a fine field of starters and has aroused much interest. This race was closed by private subscription several weeks ago.

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlanta Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in getting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close race, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel, Swartz and Luther have been placed. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mile High Harry" has his machine in the fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—both of them new men at motor racing on the boards—have been thrown in the same heat with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arranged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each other four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 8, Billy Shields; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

First heat, 3 miles—No. 6, Fred Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 3, Billy Shields. Second heat, 3 miles—No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 1, Morty Graves. Third heat, 3 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Special match race, to be announced later.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a .352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

HEINE.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:
("————")

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"'Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:
("————")

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:
("————")

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently —Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"
Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

WISCONSIN SOON TO GET LIBERAL BOXING LAWS

MADISON, WIS., June 25.—The Hedding bill creating a State Boxing Commission and legalizing ten-round, no-decision boxing exhibitions, was ordered to the third reading in the Upper House of the Wisconsin Legislature last night. It will come up for final action on Thursday.

The bill has passed the Lower House and if it gets through the upper will go to the Governor for approval. The vote on advancing the bill was 12 to 11.

Campi Beats Ledoux To Jelly on Coast

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—Eddie Campi, more clever and faster than ever, outjabbed, outpunched, outgeneraled and out everything else the French bantam weight champion, Charley Ledoux, earning a 20-round decision in the ring here.

Ledoux is willing, game and durable. There his credit ends. Charley took a whipping that would have made Battling Nelson jealous. As it is, the boy's best friends won't be able to recognize him until the flaxseed poultices and raw beef strips have had healing time.

GOVERNOR, IN HIS FAREWELL MESSAGE, ASSAILS LABOR UNIONS

New Legislature Is Asked to Provide for a State Highways Commission

The farewell message of Governor Brown follows:

To the Genera. Assembly:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and unnecessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights for the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 20 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great braintrainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses, besides the burning of one store.

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation, and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

WARNS OF PERILS OF ANARCHY

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt.

It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law.

Compulsory arbitration should be required and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should be permitted to paralyze the powers of the public. As to the killing in Augusta of the three men, who by their deeds defied the militia, the suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of all and there comes times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Upward of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to inspire confidence and make it the proudest boast to say: "I, too, am a Georgian."—From Governor Brown's Message,

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers: "The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees in 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912 to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess onetenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz, the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz, those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue; the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and reelected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as the labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced upon all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselves alone. And, as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlessly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated.

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce, travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws, which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitution of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a self-bridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia shall be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who by their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious pleas by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution, organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend:" (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylæ in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in lacedæmon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law.

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members, preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed. It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say: "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

Oats—No. 2 ..... 38 @ 38½

CHICAGO, June 25.—The crop killer who has been in the spring wheat country will now be obliged to turn his attention to other factors than dry weather, as the entire country was visited with a thorough wetting down during the past 24 hours and this was reflected by the loss of ⅝ to ¾ in the wheat market at Chicago early this morning. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago at 280 cars, but those at Winnipeg were less than half for the same time in 1912.

There was a weak feeling in the wheat market at Liverpool, owing to favorable weather conditions abroad.

Corn was ¼ to ½ cent lower under favorable weather conditions and oats were off ¼ to ⅜.

Provisions were 2½ cents lower early in sympathy with the decline of 5 cents in the price of hogs at the yards.

STOCKS DULL BUT FIRM ENTIRE DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 25—A confused appearance obtained in the stock list at the opening of the market to-day and prices showed a division of sentiment. Trading was fairly active in United States Steel common and Union Pacific, the former losing ⅝ and the latter, after beginning ¼ lower, making a net gain of ¾. Amalgamated Coner was ⅝ lower, but subsequently rallied fractionally. American Can was under pressure as the result of the unfavorable bond showing it had made and shaded.

Atchison lost ½. Canadian Pacific at the outset was ¼ higher, but subsequently increased this to ¾. Chesapeake and Ohio was again weak, declining ¼. Among the other advances were Utah Copper ½, Southern Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ½, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ½, Norfolk and Western ¼, Mexican Petroleum 1, Lehigh Valley ¼, American Car and Foundry ⅛. New York Central lost ⅛.

The curb was steady.

Sentiment in London was cheerful. Americans in the London market was steady above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was harder on earnings. Other foreigners on the London Exchange were irregular.

A wavering tendency developed after the first half hour, and several of the leading issues recorded fractional losses. Chesapeake and Ohio declined over 2 points to 53¼, and Amalgamated Copper yielded 1 point. Union Pacific lost a good part of its early gain with Steel, Can and Lehigh Valley. Southern Pacific advanced 1¼ to 96½. At 146¼ Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was off ⅜.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

Price changes in the last hour showed little change from either the morning or midday quotations. Amalgamated Copper sold around 64¾ and Atchison at 96¼. Canadian Pacific ruled around 217½. Union Pacific rose to 146¾ for a net gain of 1 point on the day. Steel gained ⅛ on the day, going to 53⅛. Pennsylvania was unchanged at 111. Trading was quiet.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

SOUTH DAKOTA WHEAT CROP 50 POINTS BELOW AVERAGE

CHICAGO, June 25.—B. W. Snow wires from Millbank, S. Dak: "From Jim River to Minnesota line to-day, east half Jim valley fully as bad as west Eight counties are in burnt district, involving 1,100,000 acres. The average condition reported by these counties June 1 was 97 per cent. Their average is now lowered 50 points. There is still some wheat in Brown and Spink Counties that good rains now would save for fair yield, being forced in heading at 8 inches high.

"From Clark County east the situation is reversed. Stand is fair and crop green and vigorous. Much of it perfect in appearance. This includes the eight northeast counties with little above 1,000,000 acres, which will average at least 95 for condition. No drouth damage here, but ground very dry clear to bottom of roots and plant would go to pieces with a few days of hot, windy weather. At best the State will fall much short of last year."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The indications are that there will be thunderstorms during the next thirty-six hours in the Lake Region and the Ohio Valley and widely scattered showers in the Middle Atlantic States and the Florida Peninsula. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River, the weather will be fair to-night and Thursday. Warmer weather will continue to-night and Thursday over the eastern half of the country, except that moderate temperature will prevail on the North Atlantic coast.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday.

Georgia, North and South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

Virginia: Cloudy and warm, probably light showers to-night or Thursday.

Florida: Probably fair in north, showers in south and central portions to-night or Thursday.

Louisiana: Fair to-night and Thursday.

Texas: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The cotton seed oil market was active to-day, early months showing firmness, while late positions were easier. Refiners were buyers of old crop and sellers of new crop. A large part of the buying was for short account. Speculative longs were good sellers.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was considerable commission house buying at the opening of the cotton market today, and first prices were 2 to 9 points higher than Tuesday's final. Weather advices reported a lack of rain over the Western belt. Liverpool cables failed to make a strong showing at the opening, but quickly gained strength and closed with a sharp advance.

Interest was more plainly centered on new crops, which caused considerable strength in every option on the list. July and August, however, only opened 2 to 3 points higher. After the call new crops advanced still further, exercising a bullish influence upon old positions, with the results of July jumping 14 points over the opening, to 11.15, and August 13 points to 11.05.

Liverpool was reported a seller of January, but purchased July. Spot houses also bought July and August. The South was booked as a good buyer. Selling was scattered with very little for sale and the demand good. The ring was thought to be short and it took very little buying to put the market up.

The map indicates general rains in the belt in about 6 days, proceeded by moderate heat spell in the Northern quarter.

Scarcity of offerings and continued buying by big spot houses, resulted in a general short covering movement during the afternoon session. The market was flooded with buying orders from every source. July was rushed up to 12.22, against 1.99 previous close. The rush was directed at some big Wall Street shorts.

Turner's report makes condition of the crop to June 22 at 81.3 per cent, showing an increase of 2.2 per cent over last month's report. The report was construed as bullish, owing to the big increase in condition showed by the National Ginners' report a few days ago.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 15 to 22 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Liverpool shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 1 point advance. Futures were as due. The advance yesterday of 1-16 to 12⅝ for middling in spot here and the continued high prices for July show that bullish conditions and control for the near future are at work and exercise a sustaining effect on new crops. July in New York advanced this morning 20 points and carried new crops here to 11.66. Sellers were scarce, realizing the bullish advantage at present and fearing the possibility of a low July bureau, owing to crop progress in the Atlantic States not being up to expectations.

The Wall Street Journal in a review of the general situation says: "The gentlemen that as a result in industrial circles is that as a result of developments past and pending, a trade reaction is not far off."

The map shows partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, mostly light. Range of temperatures unchanged, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas. Indications are stationary conditions, but the map shows an important pressure in the distribution, according to which general rains are likely to come on the belt in about a week, preceded, as usual, by a short spell of heat, which, from present indications, will be of only moderate intensity and confined principally to the northwestern quarter of the belt.

Trading was quiet and settled around 11.62 for October and December. The larger receipts at interior towns for the half week 14,965 against 3,742 last year, sustains the claim that interior holdings are larger than last year, but the high July prices and large shipments show that the cotton is either already engaged or sold at very full prices.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris Rothschold & Co.: "We continue to be friendly to cotton."

Hayden Stone & Co.: "As the market is easily influenced by any unfavorable news the need of rain over a large central area will be a factor for the moment."

Condition of Cotton Shows Increase

MEMPHIS, June 25.—Reports of June 10th date showed a condition of 81.2. It is evident, therefore, that all the improvement for the month took place during the first two weeks. This was due to the fact that rains in that first period gave the Eastern States the desired stands and that elsewhere the ground was put into good cultivation. Nothing appears to have been added to either condition since and as the growth of the plant has not been generally rapid no gain above normal progress for the season is shown.

At this date last year this bureau's report was 80.1 per cent as compared with the official report to June 25 of 80.4 J. E. Turner's condition report through Miller & Cotter shows the following results on the condition of cotton as of June 22 as 81.3, compared to normal using government's basis as of May 25:

Good Time to Cull Out the Weaklings From Your Flock

Some Fine Pointers Regarding the Culling Out of Your Chickens. Suggestions Worth Lots to You.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

It is not the season of the year when we are doing our regular mating for breeding; it is a little too late, but it is a good time to do culling nevertheless. It is a good time to cull the hens. You will by this time, no doubt, have noticed that some of your pullets have not been laying regularly during this the great laying period of their lives. They may be laying small eggs or ill shaped ones all the time and that, too, in irregular numbers. It is a good plan and a good time to weed that kind out. Market them right now when the prices are good, and before they moult. Sometimes the breeder of exhibition stock is so anxious to perpetuate certain fancy traits that he is willing to forego short laying and things of that kind, but the utility man con not stand any such foolishness. He must have strength, vigor and good supply of eggs or it should go to the pot without delay. A good hen is expected to lay in a year about five times her weight in eggs. Professor Jordon, of the New York Experiment Station, has well put it, when he says: "Did you ever stop to note the difference in the production of the little Leghorn hen and the small Jersey cow? The Leghorn hen weighing 3½ pounds will lay 200 eggs weighing 25 pounds; the Jersey cow weighing 1,000 pounds will produce about 7,000 pounds of milk." He states "that if you will take the dry matter of the hen and compare it with the dry matter of the eggs she produces in a year, there will be 5½ times as much dry matter in the eggs as in her body. On the other hand, compare the dry matter in the cow's body to that of the milk that she produces and it will be as 1 to 2.9." In other words, the hen does twice as well as the cow. It is this high standing of the hen in mind that we must aim to keep our standard of utility up to.

In looking over your fully developed laying pullets if you see any that are small in the head for the size of the body, or has a slim, long beak, cull it out. It shows a weakness that should not be tolerated in a healthy flock. Those with the thin necks or pinched tails and narrow across the breast should go, too. Anything that shows a tendency to weakness. You can soon learn to detect these things if you will look your stock over carefully with that end in view. You will say that these things should be detected when the pens are first mated early in the spring, but at that time you can not tell all of them as well as you can after they have had a period of laying and begin to let down on their weak points. That is the reason that this is the very best time to do the culling. The males should be looked over for the same faults and those that do not measure up to the best that can be expected should be let go to the block rather than feeding them all the season for next year's use. The very strong and robust should not be disposed of at any price; keep them. Turning to the youngsters that are coming up watch them as they are developing to get at their weak points. Whenever you detect one in the flock as it grows it is a good plan to mark it with a brush and a little Diamond dye, so that when it gets old enough to eat there will be no trouble to tell it and get it out of the flock as soon as possible. The common points to detect the weak ones by are the drooping of the wings. Not necessarily clear to the ground, but they are not held in place as does a healthy chick have his. You will find that kind often sitting upon the ground while all its mates are out foraging.

It is the last to leave the roost in the morning and the first to get to it at night. The front part of its body is carried low, while in a vigorous one it is carried erect. As the comb begins to develop it should be a bright red and strong and vigorous looking. As we used to say the chicken carries his health certificate on top of his head.

The shanks are a very striking indication of the constitution of the specimen they carry. On the weaking the shanks are slim and bony; almost sunken, as we would call them. Note this fact closely as it is one of the surest indications. When the chicks are quite young you will note a great difference in the eyes. The eyes of the healthy one will be very bright and stand out like shoe buttons, while the weakling will have apparently flat and unimportant eyes.

Any one can soon train themselves to be an expert in the detecting of the weak ones that should come out of the flock, and the sooner they are put on the market the better for the rest of the flock. Of course, this has reference to those that show no sickness but are just not robust.

H. G. HASTINGS & CO.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS.

THERE is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree Street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree Street, knows its desirability, and also knows its PRICE, which, as a rule, is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10 to $15 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of any one who contemplates a Peachtree home.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

DeLeon Properties Sold for $40,000

Fulton National Buys and Subdivides. Church to Improve Property?—Echoes of Peachtree Paving.

The sale of the Moise DeLeon properties on Whitehall and South Forsyth Streets was closed Wednesday, the purchaser being the Fulton National Bank, through Dr. W. J. Blalock, president, and the price approximately $40,000. The deal was handled through Andrew Calhoun, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, and the property has been subdivided and placed with C. L. DeFoor and the above agency for resale.

The property is located on the west side of Whitehall Street, north of East Fair Street, where the total frontage is 52 1-3 feet, and on the east side of South Forsyth Street, in the rear of the Whitehall property, where the total frontage is 107 1-2 feet. In the new subdivision are two Whitehall lots 26.16 by 100 to an alley, and the Forsyth lots 21 by 22.5 by 100 feet to an alley.

It will be recalled that certain DeLeon equities were put up for sale before the court house door about two months ago. A Whitehall equity was bid in at $1,500, but Percy H. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, rejected the bid, and at private sale the equity brought $5,000. Wednesday's sale was for the entire properties.

Presbyterian Church Plans.

Members of the property committee of the First Presbyterian Church have a new scheme for disposition of the church's valuable lot on the south side of Marietta Street, near Spring Street. They want the church members to form a corporation and buy in the lot and erect substantial income-bearing improvements. In this way, pointed out by a prominent churchman Wednesday, the church would not be obliged to sell at a sacrifice.

There is still another proposition, in the nature of a cash offer which the property committee is considering. A land developer wants the lot to subdivide.

The congregation owns 90 feet of frontage on Marietta Street which has been held at $180,000. Some time ago they bought a large lot at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth Streets, where it is planned to put the new church and manse at a total cost of about $100,000. It is the desire of the property committee to go ahead with the erection of the new church irrespective of the sale of the downtown location, and it is probable that a move will be made toward erecting the edifice.

Healey Building Six Stories.

Steel work on the Healey Building has gone six stories and some of the uprights are in place for two more floors. The two monster derricks used to lift the stel are being carried up as the steel work progresses. At first they were located in the basement, but now they are high above the sidewalk and going higher. The Healey Building will soon be as high as the Grant Building to the south, and its seventeen stories will eventually cause it to tower over its neighbor.

Peachtree Paving Needed.

Members of the Board of County Commissioners declared Wednesday that something would be done as soon as possible to repair Peachtree Street from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead. What action would be taken was not stated definitely, but the Commissioners are at work on a plan and expect to announce it soon.

It will be recalled that the Commissioners met recently and agreed to remedy conditions "at once," but that a postponement was later ordered. In the meantime the paving is bad and property owners and travelers are beginning to complain.

Peachtree is used to reach town by all the people in the upper portion of Fulton County and of adjacent counties who do not use Piedmont Avenue or Marietta Street, and the volume of traffic is such that there is always a demand for a travelable thoroughfare. The condition of the street is now almost intolerable, and that is why ready relief is sought. The present paving is several years old, and the opinion is expressed that the commission will soon be obliged to lay entirely new paving.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

The Georgian heartily indorses the greater part of the message. However, there are one or two portions of the message on which The Georgian finds itself unable to agree with Governor Brown.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

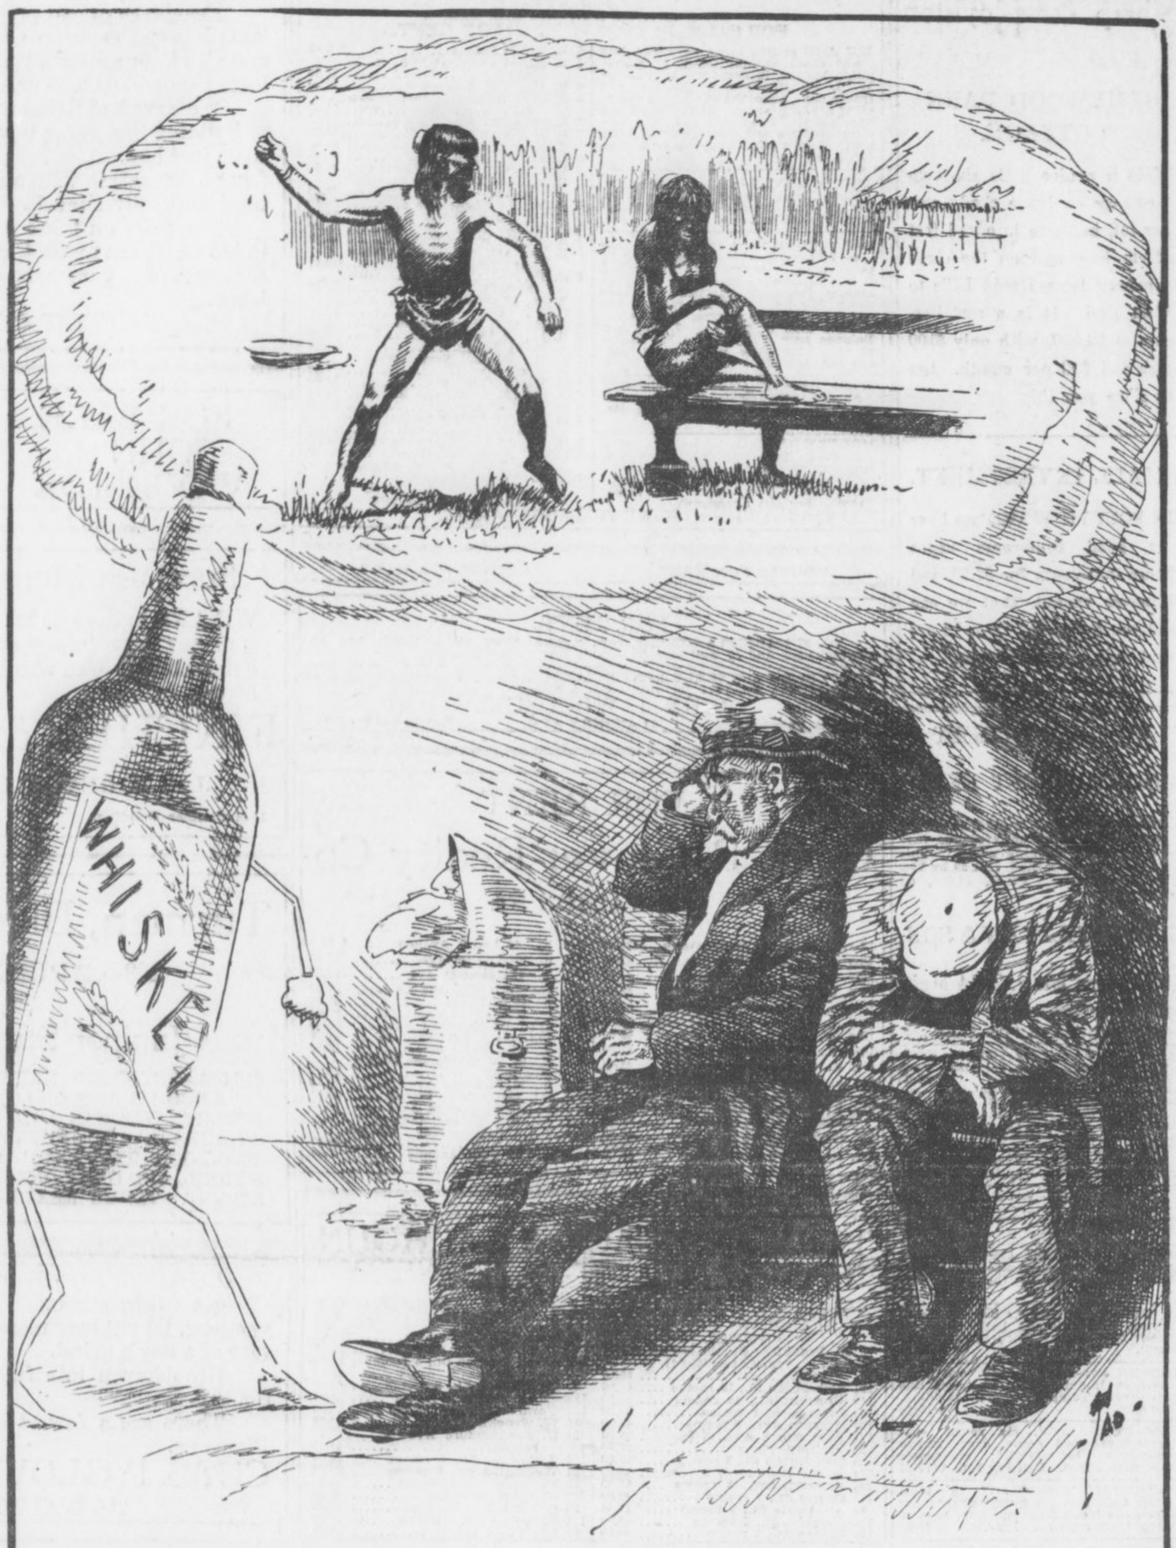
They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

The Hardest Hitter



The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

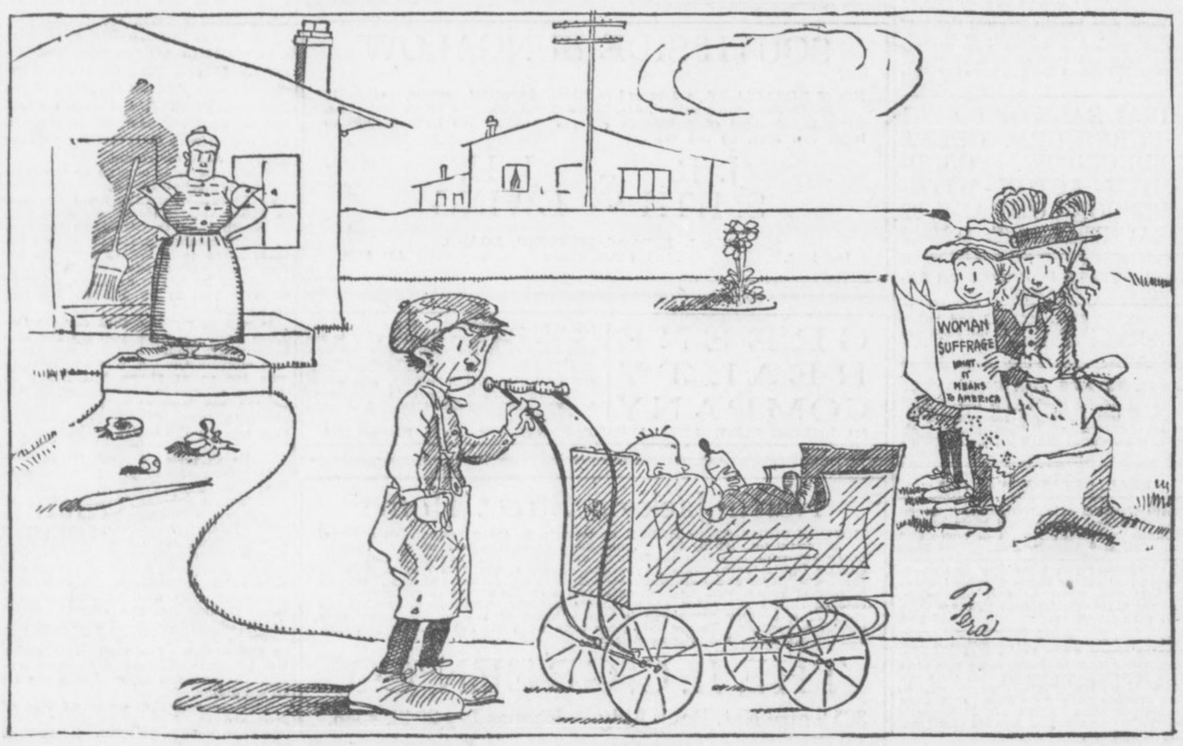
One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councilors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

BUD FISHER'S BRIDE NEAR DEATH IN FALL

That Mrs. Bud Fisher, who is better known to Atlanta as Pauline Welch, narrowly escaped death late Sunday night became known to-day.

The wife of the famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff" lies in her apartments at the Piedmont Hotel with a gash five inches long in her throat as the result of an accident which only great good fortune prevented from being fatal.

Mrs. Fisher, whose clever singing won great applause at the Forsyth Theater last week, retired about midnight Sunday night. About an hour later she arose and started into the bath room to fill a pitcher, containing some ice, with water. The lights were not turned on in the apartment, and as Mrs. Fisher entered the bath room she stumbled and fell against the bath tub.

The pitcher she held in her hand crashed against the tub, and she fell against a jagged piece of the glass, cutting a deep gash in the throat. She screamed and fainted, and Mr. Fisher picked her up and carried her to a bed.

Twenty Stitches in Wound.

Mrs. Fisher lost a great deal of blood. There was considerable delay in getting medical assistance, and when Drs. Worth E. Yankey and C. L. Rouglan arrived an hour later she was unconscious. The flow of blood was stopped and 20 stitches were taken in the wound, nine aluminum clamps being necessary to hold the severed flesh in place during the operation.

A third physician was called into consultation, and the doctors remained with Mrs. Fisher during the remainder of the night. For several hours it was feared that she would not recover from the shock and loss of blood, but early Tuesday morning she regained consciousness and rallied rapidly.

Must Remain in Atlanta.

Mr. Fisher stated Wednesday morning that it will be impossible to move Mrs. Fisher for a week or ten days. They have canceled a vaudeville engagement at Brighton Beach for week after next and intend to remain in Atlanta until Mrs. Fisher is completely recovered.

The attending physicians declare that Mrs. Fisher had a miraculous escape from death.

Bystander, Hit by Stray Shot, Dying

PENSACOLA, June 25.—As the result of a quarrel between two negroes here, Walter Miller, a young white man, is reported to be dying with a bullet in his chest. Mark Ewing, a negro, is seriously shot, and Emory Nelson, the negro who did the shooting, is stabbed in a lung.

The negroes began a fight at a factory, where Miller was in charge. A stray bullet struck him.

This is the second time Miller has been shot, both times being a bystander.

Train Rolls Into River; 10 to 20 Dead

OTTAWA, ONT., June 25.—The Canadian Pacific Imperial Limited was wrecked here this afternoon. Eight bodies already have been recovered. The dead are estimated at from ten to twenty. Scores were injured.

The accident was caused by spreading rails. Five cars were thrown down the embankment into the river.

Convict Offers to Sell His Body to The Highest Bidder

Thomas A. McCullough, a convict in the Monroe County camp, wants to sell his own body. He expresses that desire in a letter dated Griffin, Ga., sent for insertion Wednesday in the ad columns of The Georgian.

FOR SALE—To the highest bidder for cash—I offer my body, which is 6 feet high, weighs 175 pounds, is large frame, well proportioned, 40 years of age and Caucasian race.

"I have a sentence of 18 years for killing a negro in Griffin in 1911 and have no prospects, no hopes and no friends, hence, being in bad health, I am asking this proposition. Anyone wishing to consummate a trade, address Thomas A. McCullough, Box 271, Care Monroe County Convict Camp.

Mercury Reaches 91; Showers May Abate Heat This Evening

The usual mark, 91 degrees, was the maximum temperature Wednesday. It was attained shortly before 2 o'clock.

The thermometer reached 84 at 10 o'clock and 88 at noon.

"It is remarkable how the same kind of weather prevails over the entire country," said C. F. VonHerrmann, the Atlanta forecaster. "It is 90 or thereabouts in Atlanta day after day, and the same nearly everywhere else. Although it seems pretty warm here, Atlanta is no hotter than other places."

"Continued fair, with possibly showers late in the afternoon," is the forecast for Thursday.

B. M. Dunn Dead at His West End Home

B. M. Dunn, age 71 years, a widely known citizen, died Wednesday afternoon at the family residence, 291 Gordon Street, West End.

He leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter. The sons are Charles W. Dunn, B. M. Dunn, Jr., and H. W. Dunn. The daughter is Mrs. John H. Dobbs. All of them reside in Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements have not been made, but interment will be at Cartersville Thursday.

FREE SUGAR AND WOOL UPHELD IN SENATE

Underwood's Plan for New Method of Handling Appropriations Is Killed.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Senate Democratic caucus to-day retained free sugar and wool in the Simmons-Underwood tariff bill by an overwhelming vote.

The names of those who voted against the free listing of those commodities were not made public, though it was rumored that Senators Ransdell, Thornton, Walsh, Newlands, Shafroth, Thompson and Shepherd stood out against the administration.

In the House the Democratic caucus voted 95 to 80 to table Representative Underwood's motion to carry into effect the terms of the budget committee's proposal for a new method of handling appropriations in the House. This was equivalent to defeating the budget scheme and it is now dead.

The motion was offered by Representative Hardwick, of Georgia.

The result is looked upon as a defeat for Underwood.

Mexican Proposes U. S. Protectorate; Troops Eat Snakes

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 25.—The El Paso constitutionalist junta today received a message from Governor Carranza in Coahuila proposing that the United States be asked to establish a protectorate over the Republic of Mexico, pending the permanent restoration of peace.

At the same time word was received here that General Villa's constitutionalist army will be concentrated near Juarez within two days.

Reports received here from United States troops along the border of Sonora State said that Mexican Federals were eating snakes since the insurgent State troops have cut off their food supply.

MEXICO CITY, June 25.—The Mexican Government to-day commenced the concentration of all its armed forces in the northern military zone to restore railway traffic with the United States border over the National system. This step is taken to prevent the capital from complete isolation.

'Hub' Talley Faces Trial for Shooting

"Hub" Talley will have to answer to Recorder Broyles Wednesday afternoon for the shooting and serious wounding of George Blackstock a few weeks ago in Peters Street. A case of disorderly conduct also has been docketed against Blackstock.

At the time of Talley's arrest some time ago he was placed in the Tower and later released on bond, but no city case was made. The officials decided that he also should answer to the city.

Woman Prosecutor Convicts Embezzler

Judge L. S. Roan Wednesday will sentence Oscar A. Donehoo for embezzling $200. The jury returned a verdict of guilty late yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Donehoo, a sister-in-law, who appeared in the role of prosecutor, declared Oscar Donehoo was executor of his father, C. M. Donehoo, and that she was due $200 which she had been unable to get.

German Spy Sent to Prison by English

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Dr. William Klare, a hunchback German dentist, to-day was sentenced to five years' penal servitude at Winchester Assizes for espionage in behalf of Germany at the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

Mary Tribble Dies After Two Weeks of Mysterious Illness

Seven-year-old Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman W. C. Tribble, of East Atlanta, died Wednesday afternoon shortly before 3 o'clock after being partly paralyzed for more than two weeks from the effects, it is believed, of eating pieces of crayon containing poisonous coloring matter.

Three physicians had tried every known remedy to relieve her. There were brief periods when she appeared to rally for a few minutes and hope was entertained for her recovery, but the deadly poison had done its work and she lapsed into complete unconsciousness Wednesday afternoon, the life spark slowly dying out.

The child went home on the last day of school two weeks ago Friday. She was in terrible agony. She was able only to tell her mother that her head hurt before she lapsed into unconsciousness.

Prints of teeth on colored crayon she had with her led physicians to believe that she had eaten the chalk and had been poisoned by the analine coloring matter.

Decatur Organizes Beautifying Clubs

The civic beauty committees of the Decatur Board of Trade and the Decatur Woman's Club will, it was decided, organize a neighborhood club in the town to beautify Decatur.

Several clubs were started on the spot. Mrs. Thomas H. Fulton started the Oak Street Club; Mrs. A. L. Brooks and Mrs. J. G. Addy, College Avenue; Mrs. Jennie Findley, North Candler; Mrs. F. H. Hollister and Mrs. H. W. Cantrell, Jefferson Place; Mrs. R. M. Lightfoot and Mrs. George Watts, Adams Street.

Going on Vacation? Leave P. O. Address

Postmaster Hugh McKee announced Tuesday that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address order.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to disposition of mail.

Wife a Coney Fan, Man's Divorce Plea

A good time until 4 o'clock every morning at Coney Island while he had to remain at home to nurse the baby and cook his own breakfast, was the allegation made by W. T. Gould in his petition for divorce against Mrs. Mella R. Gould, filed with the Superior Court Wednesday.

Augusta Likely Will Win Commission Rule

AUGUSTA, June 25.—Augusta will vote on the commission government plan Saturday. It is believed the movement will win.

Members of the present city administration and their friends do not wish commission government this time. They wanted it last year when not in power. The present anti-administration people did not want it last year.

UNION HEADS STIRRED BY BROWN'S ATTACK

Governor Brown's spirited attack upon labor unions and their tactics in his farewell message to the Legislature aroused widespread comment Wednesday, stirring up a hornets' nest among the labor union officials.

The Governor branded the unions an agency for anarchy and said that even in their gentler aspects they took on the nature of a gigantic labor trust out of all accord with the modern movement toward the suppression of big combinations.

He did not mince words in describing the unions as a menace to the people and to the principles of government. They struck their severest blows, he said, not at the rich people, but at the poor for whose protection they were supposed to be organized. The members, he said, regarded their organization as above the law, above the State and above the Constitution.

Says State Must Act.

The State of Georgia, declared the Governor, must assert itself and demonstrate that no person or group of persons can with impunity disregard the laws of the Commonwealth. As one of the panaceas for labor troubles, he suggested compulsory arbitration as a law on the statute books.

In referring to the Augusta car strike and the Georgia Railroad strike the Governor said the railroads had been given a charter to furnish transportation. The charter carried the effect of a contract. Neither the railroad company nor its employees had the right to commit any deed abrogating this contract. The State was privileged to call upon the railroad to fulfill the agreement, and the State's duty was to protect the railroad in operating its trains. By its disregard of the rights of the State and the people, the unions, he said, had made the union label mightier than the seal of State.

Labor union officials as a unit were bitter in their criticisms. Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, branded it as "balderhash" and "rot," and characterized the Governor as a disturber and a person seeking to restore the old order of things under the guise of reform.

Jerome Jones Criticises Brown.

"Governor Brown can see only within a narrowly circumscribed circle," said Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, in bitterly assailing Governor Brown's attack on labor. "Either he has no knowledge of the conditions of labor and the rights of those who work, or he deliberately is closing his eyes to the truth.

"Much that he says in his farewell message he has said before. He would have the laborer and his work the absolute chattel of the master—the employer. The day of such conditions rapidly is passing, and he is foolish who would restore the conditions of a half century ago.

Police Hunt Woman Bent on Suicide

Detectives are scouring the Chattahoochee River banks near Atlanta to intercept a young woman who is reported to have left her North Side home Wednesday morning with the intention of drowning herself.

The police received their information through an anonymous telephone call. The informer, a woman, refused to give the name of the young woman for fear of its becoming public, but described her as dressed in a white shirtwaist, gray skirt, tan straw hat and tan shoes.

International Board Bryan Peace Feature

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Further details of the Bryan peace proposal have been made public. The points of dispute between the United States and any other nation shall be investigated by an international commission.

President Wilson proposes that the joint commission be composed of five members, one from each nation to the dispute, one to be chosen by each of these nations from the citizens of another nation, and the fifth member of the commission to be agreed upon by the two Governments.

Eighteen nations have accepted the proposal.

Masterpiece, Lost For Ages, Unearthed

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Carlo Dolci's masterpiece "Salome" with the head of John the Baptist, missing for centuries from the galleries of the old world, is hanging in Memorial Hall here.

The discovery has just been made through the restoration of the painting by Pasquale Farina. For nine years this painting of the greatest artist of his period, depicting one of the famous scenes of sacred history, has hung a dim and dingy, paint covered nondescript entitled "Youth and Love," by Carlo Dolci.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, June 25.—Militant suffragettes to-day burned the railway station at Hazelwell, near here, doing considerable damage and blocking traffic for a time.

Suffrage literature in the ruins revealed the identity of the incendiaries.

ASSEMBLY GETS DOWN TO REAL BUSINESS

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both branches Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was elected president of the Senate, and Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, was named Speaker of the House.

Neither man had any opposition in the balloting, and both were elected unanimously.

The rather unexpected termination of the heretofore uncertain and strenuous fight for the presidency of the Senate undoubtedly surprised the packed galleries and lobbies.

Allen Withdraws His Name.

Senator Spinks, who was expected to nominate Judge Allen, arose immediately after the Senate had been called to order by Secretary Northen, and instead of nominating his man, withdrew his name.

In doing this he delivered a fine and friendly little speech, praised his own man and his opponent, and said that, while Judge Allen had 19 votes ready to stand by him, it was not sufficient to elect, and the Senator from the Twentieth—Judge Allen—preferred to do the graceful thing and retire, rather than proceed with his friends to a fruitless struggle.

When Senator Spinks sat down Senator Stark arose and nominated Mr. Anderson in a spech every bit as good natured as the one preceding it.

Rival Votes for Anderson.

When the roll was called, Allen's name came first, and when he started the balloting in favor of his victorious rival, he was generously applauded by his colleagues.

On assuming the chair, President Anderson delivered a brief address, particularly calling attention to the much necessary legislation that the new General Assembly likely would have to undertake.

He got a good laugh when, in a facitious manner, he referred to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce's work on behalf of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property. He said "it evidently would not be the Legislature's work to say what should be done with that property, as the Atlanta trade body seemingly proposed taking care of that little matter itself."

Senate Happy Over Outcome.

The feeling in the Senate, after the settlement of the Allen-Anderson fight was very happy. The way in which that issue was solved evidently lifted a heavy load off many a Senatorial mind, and Judge Allen's frank and manly attitude won him many friends.

Mr. Anderson, in accepting the Presidency, paid an eloquent tribute to the ability and integrity of his late opponent.

The efforts of the prohibition leaders to get into the game at the last minute seems to have been entirely futile, so far as results were concerned.

Both Senators Anderson and Allen answered the query propounded to them, as to whether they would favor legislation to perfect the Webb law, in the affirmative, and that flattened out all chance for excitement along that line.

"Drys" Fail to Change Vote.

It is evident that the injection of the prohibition issue did not change a vote.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth District, was elected President pro tem of the Senate. He is a new member, and has achieved a large measure of popularity during the past few days. He defeated Senator W. J. Bush by a vote of 37 to 6.

After the election of officers the Senate heard the Governor's message read and adjourned for the day.

Burwell's Speech Marks House Opening.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Secretary Boifeuillet called the House to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, chaplain of the House. This was followed by the administering of the oath to each member by Chief Justice W. H. Fish.

A large crowd witnessed the opening of the 50-day session. The galleries were filled.

Long before the opening hour the House chamber was filled with a good-humored crowd of legislators. With the Speakership settled by the withdrawal of Sheppard and Hardeman, members of the House found themselves devoid of anything to cause excitement. For a few minutes the lobbyists forgot their lobbying and the only thing to indicate that it was a political gathering was the soliciting of votes of the various candidates for the smaller offices.

Standing Room Only.

By 10:30 o'clock standing room in the House was at a premium. Every seat was taken, while the crowd lined the walls.

During the administering of the oath the lobbyists returned to their natural state, and the buttonholing began again.

Election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, as Speaker of the House was a somewhat quiet affair. No name was offered in opposition, while a score of Representatives were on their feet to second his nomination by L. R. Akin, of Glenn County, as Speaker. Harris, of Washington; J. J. Slade, of Muscogee; Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, and Adams, of Hall, were the first men to spring to their feet.

Burwell Without Opposition.

The roll call showed 170 votes for Burwell. Temporary Chairman Boifeuillet appointed Burwell's three rivals for the Speakership to escort him to the rostrum. They were Hardeman, Fullbright and Sheppard.

Great applause greeted their procedure down the hall with him. The appointment of his rivals as an escort caused a ripple of merriment to pass around the House.

Applause greeted Speaker Burwell's address throughout.

Minter Wimberly, of Bibb, placed in nomination John T. Boifeuillet as Clerk of the House, referring to him as the "Golden-hearted gentleman from Bibb," and the "handsomest man in Georgia." For fifteen minutes members of the House indulged in the making of complimentary speeches extolling the virtues and manly pulchritude of Boifeuillet, whose intimate friends affectionately call him "John Bullyfoot," and who has been Clerk of the House since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. No name was offered in opposition to Boifeuillet.

Tax Reform Urged.

Burwell, in assuming the Speakership, urged tax reforms, saying, among other things:

"There are, with me, no scars to heal or enemies to pulish; and I sincerely trust that you can and will reciprocate the feelings of sincere personal regard and friendship that I entertain for every member of this House.

"For the past several years since the limitation of 5 mills was wisely placed upon the taxing power of the General Assembly, appropriations have been from time to time increased beyond the revenues of the State until to-day we find a deficit in our State Treasury which the honor and integrity of the State demands we should correct.

"To do this, and to do it wisely, will require our best thought and highest patriotism. In its consideration we should on the one hand keep in mind the demands and needs of the State and her various institutions, and with liberal justice provide for all, in order that the dignity of the State may be preserved and her institutions fostered, protected and developed; but, on the other hand, I can but beg you remember the present condition of our people.

Taxes High Enough.

"Let me assure you I am no pessimist and I fully realize and appreciate that Georgia is rich and prosperous in the possession of boundless natural resources more varied perhaps than any of her sister States, and that her basic credit is well founded and established beyond the thought of criticism; yet it is a manifest fact to all in close touch with our conditions that the crop conditions of the past two years have placed unusual burdens upon our people and there is no business or interest in Georgia, whether farmer, merchant, banker, manufacturer, laborer or man of the professions, which has not felt its serious consequences.

"Therefore, to lay additional burdens upon our people at this time will be disastrous and unwise, and I sincerely trust that in providing for this deficit in the treasury you will find other means than that of increase in the various taxes of the State.

"We will be called upon to correct the present evils in our taxing system, a system which is now so antiquated, in many instances so inadequate and so unjust, and to correct these evils in such manner as will equalize the burdens of taxation and adjust the present inequalities and inequalities of our law, offers to us the highest opportunity for the exercise of wise statesmanship and real service to the State."

Boifeuillett Gets 170 Votes.

A total of 170 votes was recorded for Boifeuillett. A committee of three was appointed to escort him to the clerk's desk.

Immediately following this a message was sent to the Senate informing that body that the House was in order, and that a committee of five, to meet with a committee of three from the Senate, to inform the Governor that the General Assembly was in order, was appointed.

A resolution for the appointment of success, unanimous consent being the committee of three from the Senate to arrange for the inauguration of Governor Slaton then was adopted.

Nominations for Speaker Pro Tem were called for. E. H. McMichael, of Marion, and A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, were the only two men nominated, there being a large number of seconds for each man.

This vote was one of the most exciting in the history of the House, being neck and neck throughout. As the roll call progressed the vote stood 4-4, 10-10, 14-14, 18-18, 20-20.

Then McMichael began to forge ahead, the vote going McMichael 35, Stovall 31, then 45-36, 50-42, 52-46, 57-53, 60-54, 64-56, 66-60, 71-64, 73-71, 79-74, 86-81, 98-85. McMichael wins.

Speaker Raps for Order.

Mrs. Rosa Tolbert Reid was announced as postmistress of the House. D. T. Paulk, of Ben Hill County, was re-elected messenger without opposition.

Speaker Burwell was forced to rap for order repeatedly. Upon order of the Speaker the aisles were cleared and the members ordered to remain in their own seats while in the chamber.

W. T. Morris, of Tolbert County, was re-elected doorkeeper. There was no opposition and the Rev. H. J. Ellis, of Fulton County, was elected chaplain of the House.

An effort to dispense with the filing of bills during the opening day failed to success, unanimous consent being required, and several objections being voiced.

Following the filing of new bills the reading of the Governor's message was announced. Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley County, moved that the House adjourn without the reading of the message, but the motion was lost by a heavy roll of "noes."

Immediately following the conclusion of the reading of the Governor's message the House was declared adjourned until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

House Gets Many Bills on First Day.

The following bills were submitted in the House:

Edmondson, of Brooks—Bill providing for a constitutional convention;

Cole, of Bartow—Bill providing for inheritance tax;

Slater, of Bryan—Bill to establish a public highway from the beginning of King's Ferry Bridge on the Ogeechee River in Bryan County, through the counties of Bryan, Liberty, McIntosh, Glynn or Wayne and Camden to some suitable point on the line between Florida and Georgia;

Turner, of Bulloch—Bill providing for establishment of Candler County;

'DRYS' DECLARE ANDERSON WILL AID THEM

Officials of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League will hold a conference Wednesday night to perfect plans for presenting a bill in the Legislature prohibiting shipments of liquor into the State. An additional bill or clause also will be prepared prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements in Georgia newspapers.

The conference follows fast upon the heels of the election of Randolph Anderson to the presidency of the Senate, which the temperance people regard as a victory inasmuch as Mr. Anderson has said that, as an individual Senator, he considers such a bill proper legislation. President Anderson further said, temperance people point out, that he would consider it proper to prohibit the publication of liquor advertisements.

Dr. G. W. Young, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, spokesman for the league Wednesday morning, had the following to say:

Have Anderson "Sewed."

"We regard Mr. Anderson's election as a virtual victory for the temperance cause, for he has practically committed himself to our views by his statements in regard to the Webb bill, as well as that concerning the passage of a bill prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements.

"In other words, we have Mr. Anderson, who has been more or less antagonistic to our cause, practically sewed up in a rag, and we will proceed to push our cause with more vigor than ever.

"We believe the public expressions from the two candidates for the Presidency of the Senate did us far more good than if we had put out a candidate, for then many prohibitionists who favored personally either Mr Allen, a lukewarm prohibitionist, or Mr. Anderson, antagonistic, would have been disgruntled to such an extent that perfect harmony would not have prevailed in our fight for the bill. We have every hope of getting the bill through.

Both Favored Bill.

The letter of Dr. DuBose, president of the Anti-Saloon League, was sent out by messenger to the two candidates Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Allen replied early in the afternoon saying the legislation met with his approval. The reply of Mr. Anderson was received Tuesday night.

Mr. Anderson said that in view of the enactment of the Webb bill and in consideration of the fact that the fixed present policy of the State is in favor of prohibition, he would, as an individual Senator, consider such a bill proper legislation.

He added that he would not commit himself to a bill he had never seen, nor would he pledge his official action either to the support or to the opposition of any particular measure. He pledged absolute fair and impartial treatment if the bill should be introduced.

Chicago Noise Peril Shown by Atlantan

CHICAGO, June 25.—The incessant noise of the downtown district of Chicago has a distinct effect on Chicagoans, and they do not know what relaxation means, Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., last night told the conference of allenists and neurologists who are considering ways and means of decreasing degeneracy and dementia.

"The loop is guilty of more and longer continued noise than any similar area in the world," declared Dr. King.

GRIM WARNING TO PLOTTERS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 25.—As a warning to all plotters the bodies of twelve Turkish reactionaries hanged yesterday for the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha were allowed to swing upon the gibbet in Bayazid Square 24 hours.

O. F. GOWER, of Crisp County, and Minter Wimberly, of Bibb County, two widely known leaders in the House of Representatives. This picture was taken at the statehouse as the two lawmakers were discussing the Governor's message. Apparently they are greatly interested in the stirring plea for reform measures.

UNION LEADERS SCORE BROWN FOR ATTACK

Ideas Approach Imbecilic.

"His ideas border on the imbecilic. It is utter nonsense to say that the increased wages obtained by the members of the labor unions has imposed a tax on those who happen not to be members. It is a matter of industrial history that where the labor unions have procured better wages those outside the union have been similarly benefited, if not quite in the same degree.

"The foremost economists of the country, those who look at the subject without the bias which might be accredited to the labor unionist himself, are pretty generally agreed that the labor union not only has set the standard of wages and the hours of labor, but also has set the standard of living among the working people, who in the final analysis are one of the strongest bulwarks of the State. They not only admit, but declare freely, that the reforms obtained by the unionists have been of benefit to the people at large.

"How foolish, then, is it to assert that the activities of the labor unions are imposing a tax on the remainder of the State's citizens.

Assails Compulsory Arbitration.

"His suggestion that compulsory arbitration be one of the laws placed upon our statute books constitutes a most dangerous principle. Who has a right to say that I shall arbitrate? "I believe in arbitration, but no one has the power to make me arbitrate. Suppose, following out the Governor's suggestion, a dispute between a railroad company and its employees is arbitrated. Suppose that the award of the arbitration board is in favor of the employees. Is there any power that can make the railroad company keep me or any of my fellow employees on the company's payroll? Is there any way to stop the hundred and one similar methods of reprisal that the railroads may adopt under the compulsory arbitration system?

O. K.'s Sympathetic Strikes.

"Because the labor unionists are a small group in the population is no reason why their rights should have less weight than the rights of the others. Neither can there be any objection to the practice of sympathetic strikes, against which the Governor inveighs.

"If it should be only one man whose rights are attacked, the whole union is bound to fight in his behalf until its treasury is exhausted. That man's rights established, the decision has an effect on the whole body of laborers.

"The Governor speaks of courts and juries, but I would ask him at what courts and at the hands of what juries can the laboring man get equable decisions on the questions that arise from time to time?"

PAINTER FAMILY STARTS FIGHT FOR ORGANS

BALTIMORE, June 25.—A demurrer offered in the Circuit Court today by Mrs. Martha S. Painter, widow of Edward O. Painter, the Jacksonville fertilizer man, and his daughter, Miss Okle C. Painter, may delay for several days consideration of the petition for a receiver asked for the viscera of the late fertilizer king.

The demurrer declares those instituting the proceedings have no constitutional right to do so.

Before hearing witnesses Judge Duffy asked Dr. Charles Glaser, who conducted the analysis, if they could be preserved pending the time the case might be in litigation. Dr. Glaser replied that they might be kept in a good state until next fall.

Attorneys for the family argued that they were entitled to possession of the remains of Painter, under rulings of courts in different States.

"The organs of the human body are not property," the attorneys argued. "The courts have said a human body is only quasi-property, and it can only be considered in the light of property when the next of kin are making a claim for it."

Advance Guard Off To Gettysburg Field

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The advance guard of the army of veterans of the war between the States who will attend the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg on the historic field next week left the Reading Terminal this morning.

The advance detachment is going ahead to prepare accommodations and commissary arrangements for the body of the army.

Wounded Americus Police Chief Dying

AMERICUS, June 25.—Chief of Police W. C. Barrows, who was fatally shot and whose assailant was lynched Saturday night, is not expected to live until night. Previous to to-day his condition was considered rather favorable, but during the morning he failed rapidly.

No further trouble in the event of his death is expected.

WHY SWELTER? KEEP COOL

You can do so these hot days by using an Oil Stove for your cooking. Especially acceptable are they during the canning season. Is it too hot in the kitchen? That's all right; just move the stove to the back porch. Not comfortable there? Then just try the butler's pantry and they won't heat up the rest of the house nor you, either.

Come in and let us give you a lesson on keeping cool while cooking in the summer time. We carry in stock one, two and three-burner stoves, with or without cabinets; and you can buy these with or without ovens.

Our King Bee line has many points of superiority over any other oil stove on the market.

CUYLER LOCATED FOR HIS WIFE BY WOMAN

WAYSIDE, GA., June 25.—It developed to-day that a woman, indigenous to the red hills of Jones County, succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and delitante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the wildest regions of war-torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman detective of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never seen a sleuth, but she has a well-developed power of reasoning.

Finds Him at Plantation.

Two weeks ago when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County sources the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, she took the rather prosaic method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been playing hide-and-seek with officers endeavoring to serve him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months. She had reports that he was hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dilettante wanted to hide, obviously the best place for him to secrete himself would be his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be anywhere but at home.

Perhaps she didn't reason at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front verdanda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary for Jones County farmers to do.

Couple Discussed Divorce.

In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, her counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Alameda, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No decision was reached at that time, and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Southern Cotton Company to grow long staple cotton on a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know what he did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from officers she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Alameda conference. A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

Later he was traced, according to Mrs. Cuyler's information, through Arizona and then East to New York. She had also been told that he was reported variously in Europe and the Orient.

Leading Life of Recluse.

About two weeks ago, according to Mrs. Chiles' information, on the birthday of Telemon Cuyler, Jr., the five-year-old son of the torn pair, a package of presents was received at the California home of the mother. It was addressed in Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Wayside people say that Cuyler has been at his mother's plantation for at least three weeks.

How much longer he has been there they do not know. Since his return he has been leading the life of a recluse. On his former visits to his Jones County place he made daily trips to the Wayside Station and showed considerable interest in discussions, so universal on the porches of rural general stores.

Cuyler is taking the news of the proceedings with the utmost nonchalance. He apparently is in no hurry to decide on the exact nature of his action in the matter.

"The affair is very complex," he says, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added as an afterthought. "I may come to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel. I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime, I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction. Then the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are thus rather completely employed, and this matter's coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex, and interesting."

'Parasol Cop' Like Toad Under a Stool

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The parasol cop is the latest thing and the advance guard, Policeman J. C. Holmes, is stationed at Fifteenth and New York Avenues. He stands there under a huge parasol fastened in the middle of the street for all the world like a toad under a toadstool.

If the experimental parasol cop turns out well, Major Sylvester will have a battalion of them.

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

Congress to Adopt New Budget System

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A caucus of the Democratic members of the House was called to-day for the purpose of adopting a budget system, or method of controlling appropriations in the House.

The caucus also will decide the fate of the Commerce Court and determine whether the bars should be let down so as to allow the enactment of general legislation at this session.

Throng Chases Boy Down Busy Streets

Willie Jones, a 17-year-old negro, had nothing on his mind but his cap Wednesday morning as he stood at Five Points. The transformation of his mental state was marvelous, however, when he saw Policeman Helms, of Columbus, Jones' former home, approaching.

Terror seized him and he dashed through a crowd into Marietta Street. Hundreds joined the chase. Excitement ran high until Jones was arrested at Forsyth by Helms.

Jones will be taken to Columbus to answer a charge of theft.

Bankhead Asks U. S. Office for Goodwin

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, to-day recommended to President Wilson the appointment of Tyler Goodwin, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Alabama, to be District Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama.

The President promised to take the matter up with the Attorney General.

OWLS OPEN HOME FOR YANCEY BALL

The club rooms and dance floor on the roof garden of the Owls' Club have been offered for the Dave Yancey benefit ball Friday night.

Practically every attache of the Sheriff's office and the court house has lent his efforts to boosting the affair, and already hundreds of tickets have been sold. Men will be charged 25 cents for admission. Women will be admitted free of charge.

The proceeds will go toward the Yancey fund to brighten the future of the dead deputy's widow and six children.

Additional subscriptions to this cause are badly needed. Provision for the life of the Yancey family has been but poorly made so far. A plea was issued Wednesday to the thousands of persons who have not yet contributed their mite to do so immediately. A dime, a quarter or a half-dollar is desired from each. The amount is insignificant, yet it means happiness to the stricken family.

HENEY EXPECTED TO BE M'NAB'S SUCCESSOR

Believed Wilson Won't Heed Fact That He's Bull Moose—Retirement of McReynolds Hinted.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House to-day, as practically certain that Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco prosecutor who convicted Abe Ruef of graft and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case.

The only obstacle to Heney's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is admitted that his appointment to take charge of the white slave cases at this time will tremendously help Heney's candidacy for the Senate, and as the prosecutor is a rabid Progressive, it is understood that this course will endanger the Democratic chances in California.

However, as President Wilson is being informed on all sides that Heney is the man to manage the Government side of the case it is probable he will cast aside all politics and appoint the Progressive as special counsel.

The President to-day conferred with Attorney General McReynolds and Representative Kahn, of California, on the Caminetti matter, but neither side would make any statement.

The White House and the Department of Justice said the McNab matter is closed so far as Washington is concerned, and the Government is only interested in obtaining justice, swift and sure, for Diggs and Caminetti.

Rumors that Attorney General McReynolds is about to leave the cabinet have been strengthened by the developments in the Caminetti case.

Elder Caminetti Gets Leave to Attend Trial.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Antonio Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration and father of one of the alleged white slavers, now awaiting trial at San Francisco, will be allowed to be present at his son's trial.

President Wilson has informed the Secretary of Labor he thinks it best to allow Commissioner Caminetti to go West at once instead of waiting until fall.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

Gymnastic Union's Meet On in Denver

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Theodore Stempfel, of Indianapolis, president of the Northern American Gymnastic Union, and his party were welcomed to Denver to-day at the formal opening of the thirty-first bundesturnfest of the organization.

The program of events for the week of festivities which begins to-morrow includes athletic prize contests and prize singing competitions. An allegorical pageant, which will include 50 floats representing the development of German activities in the United States, will be the feature of Thursday's program.

Boy Scouts Speed Message to Chicago

BEDFORD, PA., June 25.—The sealed missive written by President Woodrow Wilson to Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, which is being delivered by the Boy Scouts on foot, arrived here and was passed through by the local Scouts at 4:55 this morning.

Morgan Paintings to Go to Hartford

HARTFORD, CONN., June 25.—According to information received to-day by a relative of the Morgan family, some of the priceless Morgan art treasures are to have their permanent abode in this city in the Morgan Memorial erected by the late financier to the memory of his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, and turned over to the trustees last week.

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

Pope Pius is much distressed by reports of dissension among the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for each of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court today when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl," and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

BULLETIN OPENS 50-DAY WAR ON CHAINGANGS

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me as if there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

Zionists Tell Plan of Palestine Colony

CINCINNATI, O., June 25.—At the sixteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists here the annual message of the honorary president, Dr. Harry Freidenwald, explained fully the purpose of the federation.

"It is not our idea to send all Jews back to Palestine," he said, "but to place all Jews in a position where independence is assured them. Primarily, the move is for the relief of the Russian Jew."

Girls Writing Book Will Simplify Laws

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—The embryo lawyer of to-day, who will be the brilliant pleader of to-morrow, will owe a debt of gratitude to two Cleveland girls for a massive volume filled with simple interpretations of Ohio's laws. The girls are Miss Ruth Winch, 22, daughter of Judge Louis H. Winch, and Miss Ruth Jenkins, 18.

The book is being prepared by the girls under the supervision of Judge Winch, and will be known as "The History of the Laws of Ohio."

1,500 Milwaukee's Bars Face Closing

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon measure means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their free book. Write to-day. It is most instructive.

Lad Plays Ball on Piedmont Roof

Hits Homer From Aerial Ball Lot

Sphere Cracks Cabman in Street

Manager Dutton's Young Son Presses Nurses Into Service in His Practice Games.

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-masey, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

Lear Dutton.

BRAVES DEATH TO BE NOBLE'S BRIDE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened if she married Sir Joseph Tichborne, was wedded to Sir Joseph in Brompton Oratory to-day without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by Theresa Doughty Tichborne, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Orton, claimant of the Tichborne baronetcy and estates. Later she declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Tichborne, who mysteriously disappeared half a century ago and about whose absence a romantic cloud of mystery had been woven.

Orton, in 1869, claimed to be Roger Tichborne and demanded the title and estates of the twelfth baronet. He came from Australia and the Tichborne family, convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. Then came a long and celebrated trial, but Orton's case was nonsuited. He was convicted of perjury and sent to jail for 14 years.

Orton, before he died in 1898, confessed he had been a butcher in London's East End.

The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and who was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Krusekopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

FANS, ALSO, MUST OBSERVE SUNDAYS

Recorder Closes "Baseball Parlor" With a Bang—In Class With Movies.

That phase of the Atlanta spirit so pronounced in baseball fans and that causes them to root for the home team as no other set of fans ever rooted must be placed in the ice chest Sundays.

Recorder Nash Broyles so decreed Tuesday afternoon when he ruled that the baseball parlors of "Caller" R. H. King at 9 Viaduct Way will not be permitted to open Sundays. This is the hall in which Atlanta fans assemble to witness the battle by innings flashed by telegraph when the Crackers are scrapping in foreign fields.

The baseball parlor is in the same class as moving picture theaters, penny arcades, and other such amusements, according to the Recorder.

King threw open his parlors for the game last Sunday, and a test case was promptly made against him.

Judge Broyles dismissed the case on the agreement of King to keep his place closed on Sunday.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

WASHINGTON, June 25.—When Mrs. William P. Borland, wife of Representative Borland, of Missouri, met her husband at the Union Station she nearly swooned. For Borland, smiling happily, emerged from the train shed with two chubby, gigging little girls.

The representative informed his wife he had adopted the youngsters at Kansas City when he found they were about to be sent to an orphan asylum.

CONLEY, PUT ON GRILL, STICKS STORY

Puzzled by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by Monteen Stover. He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 12 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Stover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clearer Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain this apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the factory foreman. Which statement is believed by the State is not known. What explanation is made by the negro for lying in regard to the matter also is conjectural.

Mary Phagan left her home on April 26 at about 11:50 o'clock. Living in Bellwood, it is regarded as unlikely that she reached the factory in less than 25 minutes, or at 12:15. Monteen Stover has testified that she visited the factory at about 12:10, which would be just before Mary Phagan had entered the factory, if the times testified to are correct.

Conley, on this account, has been asked if he saw, from his vantage point behind the boxes, Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, and Lemmie Quinn enter at 12:20, why he did not see Mary Phagan when she entered in the interval between the visits of the Stover girl and Lemmie Quinn.

Sticks to His Story.

Another point on which he has been questioned is as to how he could have left his home at the time he has testified and visit all the saloons of which he has told and still meet Frank at Nelson and Forsyth Streets as Frank was on his way to Montag Bros. factory. Frank, according to the statements of members of the Montag firm, was in their building by 10 o'clock. Yet the things that Conley has testified to doing would have taken him until considerably after 10 o'clock, according to a conservative estimate.

He also has been quizzed on other points in his testimony which appear at variance with the facts, but he has stuck steadfastly to the story told in his last affidavit. Solicitor Dorsey has said that he has been unable to shake the negro in any important particular.

Deny Hoke Smith Story.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, made strenuous denial Wednesday that any effort had been made to connect Senator Hoke Smith with the defense. A similar denial was made by Herbert Haas, associated with Mr. Rosser in the defense. Neither was able to say how the rumor had started.

Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, said that the State would be prepared Monday to fight the subpenas duces tecum issued by the lawyers for the defense. It is regarded as improbable, however, that the defense will bring the matter to an issue until the trial begins July 28.

Ethical Society to Get Noted Speakers

Many noted lecturers will speak before the Atlanta Ethical Society next season, according to a report just issued by the executive committee. Among those now under consideration are Dr. Horace Bridges, leader of the Chicago Ethical Society; Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer, of the New York School of Philanthropy; Dr. Percival Chubb, of the St. Louis Society; Dr. David Saville Muzzey, of the New York Society; Dr. C. DeLisle Burns, extension lecturer of Oxford University, England, and others.

M. H. Wilensky is chairman of the committee. Assisting him are Dr. C. B. Wilmer, H. M. Atkinson, Clifford L. Anderson, L. B. Magid, Dr. E. G. Ballenger, A. H. Barnaker, Harold Hirsch and L. C. Hopkins. Joseph C. Greenfield is secretary-treasurer of the society.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

LONDON, June 25.—A riot occurred in Oxford Street this afternoon when spectators watching for President Poincare of France to drive on his way from Guild Hall to York House attacked a suffragette procession.

Three women were badly hurt.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Aerial Courier Takes Dispatches to Poincare.

LONDON, June 25.—Bearing dispatches from the French Government to President Poincare of France, Aviator Slack, a British airman, arrived here from Paris to-day in his aeroplane. The courier made the trip without mishap, beating the regular mail time by many hours.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Boy Worker Killed By Compressed Air

CAMDEN, N. J., June 25.—Joseph DeFinnie, 18, died here from injuries received when fellow workers in a factory, it is alleged, forced compressed air down his throat through a tube until his abdomen was ruptured. An investigation is being made.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 48-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatments, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the purest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Members of the Capital City Club, their wives and friends, are eagerly anticipating the formal opening of the Capital City Country Club Thursday afternoon and evening when the entire club membership will assemble to declare the summer season open at this new branch of the club.

Since taking over the Brookhaven Club the Capital City Club has added a new feature. The Country Club will be largely an athletic club.

There are three fine tennis courts and golf links are in good condition. Each afternoon sees twenty or thirty persons in or on the water, many members having private canoes. Flower beds and flower boxes add to the attractiveness of the verandas.

The entire club house will be thrown open from 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, officers and their wives holding an informal reception at that hour. Later refreshments will be served al fresco. In the evening there will be dancing.

Mr. Robert F. Maddox, president, and Mrs. Maddox will act as official host and hostess. Receiving with them will be other officers of the club and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Spalding, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Brutus Clay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman, Messrs. Charles I. Ryan, Robert Clarke and Edward Austin.

At St. Simons Island.

Among the Atlantans registered at the new St. Simon's Hotel are Mr. Martin Amorous, Misses Emma Kate, Isabel, Rosalind, Janice and William Amorous, Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong and children, Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newell and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Irving S. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McRae and family, Mrs. Mary F. Boynton, Mrs. Walter G. Smith, Miss Louise Mell, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Callaway, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Armistead, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and family, Mr. C. G. Thorn, Dr. and Mrs. John S. Derr, and many others.

Large numbers of Macon, Atlanta, Birmingham and other cities are represented at the hotel. The Governor's Horse Guards of Atlanta and other military companies are in camp near the light house.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. William Schroder gave a bridge party Wednesday at her home in Fourteenth Street for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

The house was decorated with pink sweetpeas and Shasta daisies. In the dining room the tea table had as its centerpiece a mound of pink sweetpeas. Pink candle shades and pink mints completed the color motif.

Prizes were a parasol and pieces of shadow lace lingerie, trimmed in French roses.

Mrs. Schroder's guests were twelve of her young married friends.

Mrs. Massenburg Entertains.

Mrs. Frank Massenburg entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. R. Bethune, of Rome, formerly Miss Gladys Kirk. The game was played on the porch, decorated with plants and sweetpeas, and prizes were white and gold china for top score, a pin tray for consolation and crystal candlesticks for the honor guest.

Tea was served from a table covered with lace over pink satin and adorned with pink and white sweetpeas, a color scheme of pink and white being observed in detail. Punch was served from a bowl imbedded in fruits. Mrs. Massenburg wore pink embroidered voile.

Guests were Mrs. Bethune, Mrs. D. Y. Sage, Mrs. G. A. Harbour, Mrs. T. C. Mell, Mrs. B. O. Jackson, Mrs. H. B. Rogers, Mrs. F. E. Markel, Mrs. W. H. Letton, Mrs. H. C. Chapman, Mrs. G. R. Glenn, Mrs. Carl DuPuy, Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. J. M. Daniel, Mrs. T. R. Smith, Misses Bess Smith, Willie Adher and Jennie Sue Bell.

For Miss Oliver.

Miss Lula Dean Jones gave a tea at the Driving Club Wednesday afternoon for Miss Eloise Oliver, whose wedding to Mr. Frampton Ellis will take place June 30.

Tea was served on the terrace and the table had a centerpiece of Gloire de Dijon roses. All the details were in yellow. Miss Jones' guests included the girls in the wedding party.

Miss Broyles Hostess.

Miss Louise Broyles will have as her guests for the week-end Misses Harriet Benedict and Nellie Phinizy, of Athens. Many informal affairs are planned for the visitors. A tea will be given at the Driving Club by Miss Helen McCarty.

Miss Traylor Entertains.

Miss Margaret Traylor entertained informally at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses Katharine Graves and LaGrange Cochran, of Rome. There were two tables of bridge, and the prizes were silk hose for top score and consolation, and gauze fans for the honor guests. Pink roses formed the decorations. Miss Traylor wore white lace with overdress of pink chiffon.

Vesper Club Dance.

The Vesper Club will give a dance in the club rooms Friday evening, July 4. A number of visitors will be the honor guests.

For Mrs. Dowman.

Mrs. Julian Prade will entertain a group of young matrons at tea Thursday afternoon for her sister, Mrs. Charles Dowman, Jr., of Birmingham.

Mrs. Marye Entertains.

Mrs. Thornton Marye was hostess at an informal tea Wednesday afternoon at the Piedmont Club, entertaining a group of married friends. The guests were received on the piazza at the rear of the ball room, which provided a charming setting for the prettily gowned guests. Tea was served from a long table, adorned with a large basket of daisies, tied with yellow ribbons. Mrs. Marye wore white cotton crepe combined with Florentine lace, with girdle of pale blue, her white hat adorned with blue ribbons and clusters of tiny French flowers.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Frank Orme gave a children's party Wednesday afternoon, celebrating the sixth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Mark. A grab bag afforded amusement. A heart-shaped birthday cake, bearing six pink tapers in rosebud holders, alternating with silver vases of pink roses, adorned the table. Refreshments were in pink and white. The honor guest wore Irish lace over a pink slip, with pink slippers, stockings and ribbons. Receiving with her were her cousins, Mary Phillips and Nancy Belle Keeler.

For Miss Oliver and Mr. Ellis.

Miss Eloise Oliver and Mr. Frampton Ellis, whose marriage takes place next Monday evening, will be tendered a buffet supper Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., preceding the rehearsal for the wedding.

Cole-Reese.

The wedding of Miss Harriet Cole to Mr. Rogers Reese Wednesday evening will be one of the interesting social events of the season. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. H. D. Cole in Ansley Park at 8:30 o'clock. A limited number of guests will be present. An informal reception will follow the ceremony.

Parties for Miss Francis.

Miss Lula Dean Jones will entertain at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect. Mrs. James W. Morrow's bridge party Thursday will be in honor of Miss Francis, and the luncheon at which Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain Tuesday will also be for Miss Francis. Mrs. William Schroder has dated her bridge party for Miss Francis for next Wednesday.

For Mrs. Seydel.

Miss Ida May Blountgave an informal bridge party Tuesday morning for Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers and the prize was silver slipper buckles.

The guests were the Misses Margaret Nutting, Eloise Oliver, May Bancker, Mrs. Kenneth Goode, Mrs. Hamilton Block, Mrs. Benjamin Weaver and Mrs. Ernest Duncan.

For Miss Kendrick.

Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins will entertain ten guests informally at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, in honor of Miss Helen Kendrick, of Cincinnati, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Alex Smith.

For Mrs. Ravenel.

Mrs. Edward C. Peters entertained twelve guests at an informal porch party Wednesday morning for Mrs. St. Julian Ravenel, of New York, the guest of Mrs. Thomas M. Clarke. Garden flowers and growing plants formed the decorations, and luncheon followed the game.

Sturgeon-Rothe.

Mrs. Lebens Wagner, of Columbus, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Uda Marie Sturgeon, to Dr. H. H. Rothe, of San Antonio, Texas, the couple to be at home in Athens after their marriage.

Miss Inez Pirkle Entertains.

He defeated Mavrogordato in the third round.

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

B. Y. P. U. TO MEET.

The city B. Y. P. U. will hold its regular meeting at the Second Baptist Church Thursday night at 8 o'clock. This will be an echo meeting of the State B. Y. P. U. Convention at Macon last week.

A Sale of Brass Wares

In Which Jardinieres, Window Boxes, Fern Dishes, Andirons and Novelties Are Priced at Half and Less

There is always a place in a well regulated household for an artistic piece of brassware, or, perhaps we should say, for another piece of brassware.

Now is your time to secure another piece at a price never more than half and very often less than half. It is our June disposal, which alone accounts for such prices.

The brasswares are elegant, usually those heavy handwrought pieces that lend distinction and grace wherever they are placed—such, too, as seldom find their way into such a sale. But all merchandise, be it ever so artistic and beautiful, is only merchandise at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co., and so must be disposed of in good season.

This time it is brasswares.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us." Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it. Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay bills of four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?", he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or she is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice, "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came; as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE

Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Here is the way Deacon Davis of the Davenport Democrat and Leader tells of the sale and career of Reed:

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

GRANEY TO BE REFEREE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Eddie Graney, promoter of the Ritchie-Rivers July 4 bout here, will be the third man in the ring when hostilities begin. At a conference the former blacksmith was chosen referee.

A Bit on the Side

MENTAL OVERFLOW.

Muggsy McGraw has a fat chance of scaring Hank O'Day by making a rush at him. Hank worked a whole season in Cincinnati, where the fans rush every day.

Miss Bugg—Will you kindly tell me how to make a rag carpet out of a linen vest, an old flannel nightgown, two pairs of trousers and a silk hat?

If I had that wardrobe I wouldn't worry about a rag carpet; I would go into vaudeville.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

Hirsig Trades Glenn; After Major Players

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25.—President Hirsig announces he has sold Catcher Harry Glenn, last season with the Vols, to the St. Louis Cardinals for $2,000 and Pitcher Redding.

Glenn was farmed to Akron, Ohio, in the early part of this season, where he has been hitting at a terrific clip. Hirsig claims he has deals pending for a number of players from the major leagues in his efforts to strengthen the sliding Vols.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Walter Schaller, the White Sox utility outfielder, was released to-day to the Washington club. Schaller was obtained from Detroit, who got him from Kansas City.

Racing at Belmont; Only Two-Day Meet

NEW YORK, June 25.—The two days' meet of the United Hunts Racing Association will open this afternoon at Belmont Park Terminal with a large field of entries. The second and closing day of the meet is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The program is a varied one and embraces both jumping and flat races. Six events are carded for each day, including three flat races, two steeplechases and one hurdle event. The Sportsmen's Steeplechase Dinner Stakes, which is considered to be the most important race of the meet, has a fine field of starters and has aroused much interest. This race was closed by private subscription several weeks ago.

Shields	0	0	2	6
Lockner	0	0	1	3

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlanta Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in getting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close race, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel, Swartz and Luther have been placed. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mile High Harry" has his machine in the fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—both of them new men at motor racing on the boards—have been thrown in the same heat with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arranged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each other four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Motordrome Purse.

First heat, 3 miles—No. 6, Fred Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 3, Billy Shields. Second heat, 3 miles—No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 1, Morty Graves. Third heat, 3 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Special match race, to be announced later.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a .352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

HEINE.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:

("————")

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:

("————")

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:

("————")

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently—Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"
Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

Campi Beats Ledoux To Jelly on Coast

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—Eddie Campi, more clever and faster than ever, outjabbed, outpunched, outgeneraled and out everything else the French bantam weight champion, Charley Ledoux, earning a 20-round decision in the ring here.

Ledoux is willing, game and durable. There his credit ends. Charley took a whipping that would have made Battling Nelson jealous. As it is, the boy's best friends won't be able to recognize him until the flaxseed poultices and raw beef strips have had healing time.

ADDRESED TO WOMEN IS YOURS A
Case of "Nerves?"
Hot flashes, dizziness, fainting spells, backache, headache, bearing-down pains, nervousness—all are symptoms of irregularity and female disturbances and are not beyond relief.
—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is that of a famous physician unusually experienced in the treating of women's peculiar ailments. For forty years it has been recommended to suffering womankind. Thousands of women can bear witness to its beneficial qualities. Perhaps its aid is all that is required to restore to you perfect health and strength. Now is the time to act, write Dr. R. V. Pierce's, Buffalo.
I AM NOW CURED
Mrs. Dominic Rodgers, of San Francisco, Calif., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending your wonderful remedies, and wish to say in behalf of your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' that through their use I am now cured of the various troubles that a woman is heir to. These remedies cured me when others failed and I therefore resolve to take no other. I thank you for your advice."

WARNS OF PERILS OF ANARCHY

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt.

It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law.

Compulsory arbitration should be required and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should be permitted to paralyze the powers of the public. As to the killing in Augusta of the three men, who by their deeds defied the militia, the suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of all and there comes times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Upward of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to inspire confidence and make it the proudest boast to say: "I, too, am a Georgian."—From Governor Brown's Message,

The farewell message of Governor Brown follows:

To the Genera. Assemply:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and unnecessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights for the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet, in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 20 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great brain-trainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses besides the burning of one store.

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners, and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation, and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers:

"The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees in 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912 to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess one-tenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz, the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz, those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue; the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and reelected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as the labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselces alone. And as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlesly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated.

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce, travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitution of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a self-bridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence, they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia shall be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious pleas by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution, organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend:" (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylæ in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in lacedæmon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth, standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law.

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members, preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed. It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say: "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

Oats—No. 2	38	@ 38½

CHICAGO, June 25.—The crop killer who has been in the spring wheat country will now be obliged to turn his attention to other factors than dry weather, as the entire country was visited with a thorough wetting down during the past 24 hours and this was reflected by the loss of ⅝ to ¾ in the wheat market at Chicago early this morning. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago at 280 cars, but those at Winnipeg were less than half for the same time in 1912.

There was a weak feeling in the wheat market at Liverpool, owing to favorable weather conditions abroad.

Corn was ¼ to ½ cent lower under favorable weather conditions and oats were off ¼ to ⅜.

Provisions were 2½ cents lower early in sympathy with the decline of 5 cents in the price of hogs at the yards.

STOCKS DULL BUT FIRM ENTIRE DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 25—A confused appearance obtained in the stock list at the opening of the market to-day and prices showed a division of sentiment. Trading was fairly active in United States Steel common and Union Pacific, the former losing ⅜ and the latter, after beginning ¼ lower, making a net gain of ¾. Amalgamated Copper was ⅝ lower, but subsequently rallied fractionally. American Can was under pressure as the result of the unfavorable bond showing it had made and shaded.

Atchison lost ⅛. Canadian Pacific at the outset was ¼ higher, but subsequently increased this to ¾. Chesapeake and Ohio was again weak, declining ¼. Among the other advances were Utah Copper ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ⅛, Norfolk and Western ⅛, Mexican Petroleum 1, Lehigh Valley ⅛, American Car and Foundry ⅛. New York Central lost ½.

The curb was steady.

Sentiment in London was cheerful. Americans in the London market was steady above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was harder on earnings. Other foreigners on the London Exchange were irregular.

A wavering tendency developed after the first half hour, and several of the leading issues recorded fractional losses. Chesapeake and Ohio declined over 2 points to 53¼, and Amalgamated Copper yielded 1 point. Union Pacific lost a good part of its early gain with Steel, Can and Lehigh Valley. Southern Pacific advanced 1¼ to 96½. At 146¼ Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was off ⅜.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

Price changes in the last hour showed little change from either the morning or midday quotations. Amalgamated Copper sold around 64⅝ and Atchison at 96¼. Canadian Pacific rallied around 217½. Union Pacific rose to 146¾ for a net gain of 1 point on the day. Steel gained ½ on the day, going to 53½. Pennsylvania was unchanged at 111. Trading was quiet.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

SOUTH DAKOTA WHEAT CROP 50 POINTS BELOW AVERAGE

CHICAGO, June 25.—B. W. Snow wires from Milbank, S. Dak: "From Jim River to Minnesota line to-day, east half Jim valley fully as bad as west. Eight counties are in burnt district, involving 1,100,000 acres. The average condition reported by these counties June 1 was 97 per cent. Their average is now lowered 50 points. There is still some wheat in Brown and Spink Counties that good rains now would save for fair yield, being forced in heading at 8 inches high.

"From Clark County east the situation is reversed. Stand is fair and crop green and vigorous. Much of it perfect in appearance. This includes the eight northeast counties with little above 1,000,000 acres, which will average at least 95 for condition. No drouth damage here, but ground very dry clear to bottom of roots and plant would go to pieces with a few days of hot, windy weather. At best the State will fall much short of last year."

OAT CROP ESTIMATE.

Ohio, 50,716,000; Indiana, 38,758,000; Illinois, 90,643,000; Wisconsin, 73,317,000; Missouri, 16,605,000; Iowa 135,610,000; Minnesota, 93,565,000; North Dakota, 80,080,000; South Dakota, 40,810,000; Nebraska, 62,463,000; Kansas, 32,338,000 bushels.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The indications are that there will be thunderstorms during the next thirty-six hours in the Lake Region and the Ohio Valley and widely scattered showers in the Middle Atlantic States and the Florida Peninsula. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River, the weather will be fair to-night and Thursday. Warmer weather will continue to-night and Thursday over the eastern half of the country, except that moderate temperature will prevail on the North Atlantic coast.

Forecast.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday.

Georgia, North and South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

Virginia: Cloudy and warm, probably light showers to-night or Thursday.

Florida: Probably fair in north, showers in south and central portions to-night or Thursday.

Tennessee: Probably fair and continued warm weather to-night and Thursday.

Louisina: Fair to-night and Thursday.

Texas: Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The cotton seed oil market was active to-day, early months showing firmness, while late positions were easier. Refiners were buyers of old crop and sellers of new crop. A large part of the buying was for short account. Speculative longs were good sellers.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was considerable commission house buying at the opening of the cotton market today, and first prices were 2 to 9 points higher than Tuesday's final. Weather advices reported a lack of rain over the Western belt. Liverpool cables failed to make a strong showing at the opening, but quickly gained strength and closed with a sharp advance.

Interest was more plainly centered on new crops, which caused considerable strength in every option on the list. July and August, however, only opened 2 to 3 points higher. After the call new crops advanced still further, exercising a bullish influence upon old positions, with the results of July jumping 14 points over the opening, to 11.15, and August 13 points to 11.05.

Liverpool was reported a seller of January, but purchased July. Spot houses also bought July and August. The South was booked as a good buyer. Selling was scattered with very little for sale and the demand good. The ring was thought to be short and it took very little buying to put the market up.

The map indicates general rains in the belt in about 6 days, proceeded by moderate heat spell in the Northern quarter.

During the forenoon the market was inflexible with prices fluctuating narrowly, but firmly maintained at the early high point.

Scarcity of offerings and continued buying by big spot houses, resulted in a general short covering movement during the afternoon session. The market was flooded with buying orders from every source. July was rushed up to 12.22, against 1.99 previous close. The rush was directed at some big Wall Street shorts.

Turner's report makes condition of the crop to June 22 at 81.3 per cent, showing an increase of 2.2 per cent over last month's report. The report was construed as bullish, owing to the big increase in condition showed by the National Ginners' report a few days ago.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 15 to 22 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Liverpool shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 1 point advance. Futures were as due. The advance yesterday of 1-16 to 12⅝ for middling in spot here and the continued high prices for July show that bullish conditions and control for the near future are at work and exercise a sustaining effect on new crops. July in New York advanced this morning 20 points and carried new crops here to 11.66. Sellers were scarce, realizing the bullish advantage at present and fearing the possibility of a low July bureau, owing to crop progress in the Atlantic States not being up to expectations.

The Wall Street Journal in a review of the general situation says: "The gentlemen as a result in industrial circles is that as a result of developments past and pending, a trade reaction is not far off."

The map shows partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, mostly light. Range of temperatures unchanged, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas. Indications are stationary conditions, but the map shows an important portion of the distribution according to which general rains are likely to come on the belt in about a week, preceded, as usual, by a short spell of heat, which, from present indications, will be of only moderate intensity and confined principally to the northeastern quarter of the belt.

Trading was quiet and settled around 11.62 for October and December. The larger receipts at interior towns for the half week, 4,965 against 3,742 last year, sustains the claim that interior holdings are larger than last year, but the high July prices and large shipments show that the cotton is either already engaged or sold at very full prices.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris Rothschold & Co.: "We continue to be friendly to cotton."

Hayden Stone & Co.: "As the market is easily influenced by any unfavorable news the need of rain over a large central area will be a factor for the moment."

Condition of Cotton Shows Increase

MEMPHIS, June 25.—Reports of June 10th date showed a condition of 81.2. It is evident, therefore, that all the improvement for the month took place during the first two weeks. This was due to the fact that rains in that first period gave the Eastern States the desired stands and that elsewhere the ground was put into good cultivation. Nothing appears to have been added to either condition since and as the growth of the plant has not been generally rapid no gain above normal progress for the season is shown.

At this date last year this bureau's report was 80.1 per cent as compared with the official report to June 25 of 80.4

J. E. Turner's condition report through Miller & Cotter shows the following results on the condition of cotton as of June 22 as 81.3, compared to normal using government's basis as of May 25:

Good Time to Cull Out the Weaklings From Your Flock

Some Fine Pointers Regarding the Culling Out of Your Chickens. Suggestions Worth Lots to You.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

It is not the season of the year when we are doing our regular mating for breeding; it is a little too late, but it is a good time to do culling nevertheless. It is a good time to cull the hens. You will by this time, no doubt, have noticed that some of your pullets have not been laying regularly during this the great laying period of their lives. They may be laying small eggs or ill shaped ones all the time and that, too, in irregular numbers. It is a good plan and a good time to weed that kind out. Market them right now when the prices are good, and before they moult. Sometimes the breeder of exhibition stock is so anxious to perpetuate certain fancy traits that he is willing to forego short laying and things of that kind, but the utility man con not stand any such foolishness. He must have strength, vigor and good supply of eggs or it should go to the pot without delay. A good hen is expected to lay in a year about five times her weight in eggs. Professor Jordon, of the New York Experiment Station, has well put it, when he says: "Did you ever stop to note the difference in the production of the little Leghorn hen and the small Jersey cow? The Leghorn heh weighing 3½ pounds will lay 200 eggs weighing 25 pounds; the Jersey cow weighing 1,000 pounds will produce about 7,000 pounds of milk." He states "that if you will take the dry matter of the hen and compare it with the dry matter of the eggs she produces in a year, there will be 5½ times as much dry matter in the eggs as in her body. On the other hand, compare the dry matter in the cow's body to that of the milk that she produces and it will be as 1 to 2.9." In other words, the hen does twice as well as the cow. It is this high standing of the hen in mind that we must aim to keep our standard of utility up to.

In looking over your fully developed laying pullets if you see any that are small in the head for the size of the body, or has a slim, long beak, cull it out. It shows a weakness that should not be tolerated in a healthy flock. Those with the thin necks or pinched tails and narrow across the breast should go, too. Anything that shows a tendency to weakness. You can soon learn to detect these things if you will look your stock over carefully with that end in view. You will say that these things should be detected when the pens are first mated early in the spring, but at that time you can not tell all of them as well as you can after they have had a period of laying and begin to let down on their weak points. That is the reason that this is the very best time to do the culling. The males should be looked over for the same faults and those that do not measure up to the best that can be expected should be let go to the block rather than feeding them all the season for next year's use. The very strong and robust should not be disposed of at any price; keep them. Turning to the youngsters that are coming up watch them as they are developing to get at their weak points. Whenever you detect one in the flock as it grows it is a good plan to mark it with a brush and a little Diamond dye, so that when it gets old enough to eat there will be no trouble to tell it and get it out of the flock as soon as possible. The common points to detect the weak ones by are the drooping of the wings. Not necessarily clear to the ground, but they are not held in place as does a healthy chick have his. You will find that kind often sitting upon the ground while all its mates are out foraging.

It is the last to leave the roost in the morning and the first to get to it at night. The front part of its body is carried low, while in a vigorous one it is carried erect. As the comb begins to develop it should be a bright red and strong and vigorous looking. As we used to say the chicken carries his health certificate on top of his head.

The shanks are a very striking indication of the constitution of the specimen they carry. On the weaking the shanks are slim and bony; almost sunken, as we would call them. Note this fact closely as it is one of the surest indications. When the chicks are quite young you will note a great difference in the eyes. The eyes of the healthy one will be very bright and stand out like shoe buttons, while the weakling will have apparently flat and unimportant eyes.

Any one can soon train themselves to be an expert in the detecting of the weak ones that should come out of the flock, and the sooner they are put on the market the better for the rest of the flock. Of course, this has reference to those that show no sickness but are just not robust.

H. G. HASTINGS & CO.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

Poultry—Disinfectants.

AGASCO-SPRAY
WILL RID your premises of mites, lice, fleas and ants. It is ready for immediate use with brush or spray pump. BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS.

THERE is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree Street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree Street, knows its desirability, and also knows its PRICE, which, as a rule, is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10 to $15 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of any one who contemplates a Peachtree home.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

DeLeon Properties Sold for $40,000

Fulton National Buys and Subdivides. Church to Improve Property?—Echoes of Peachtree Paving.

The sale of the Moise DeLeon properties on Whitehall and South Forsyth Streets was closed Wednesday, the purchaser being the Fulton National Bank, through Dr. W. J. Blalock, president, and the price approximately $40,000. The deal was handled through Andrew Calhoun, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, and the property has been subdivided and placed with C. L. DeFoor and the above agency for resale.

The property is located on the west side of Whitehall Street, north of East Fair Street, where the total frontage is 52 1-3 feet, and on the east side of South Forsyth Street, in the rear of the Whitehall property, where the total frontage is 107 1-2 feet. In the new subdivision are two Whitehall lots 26.16 by 100 to an alley, and the Forsyth lots 21 by 22.5 by 100 feet to an alley.

It will be recalled that certain DeLeon equities were put up for sale before the court house door about two months ago. A Whitehall equity was bid in at $1,500, but Percy H. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, rejected the bid, and at private sale the equity brought $5,000. Wednesday's sale was for the entire properties.

Presbyterian Church Plans.

Members of the property committee of the First Presbyterian Church have a new scheme for disposition of the church's valuable lot on the south side of Marietta Street, near Spring Street. They want the church members to form a corporation and buy in the lot and erect substantial income-bearing improvements. In this way, pointed out by a prominent churchman Wednesday, the church would not be obliged to sell at a sacrifice.

There is still another proposition, in the nature of a cash offer which the property committee is considering. A land developer wants the lot to subdivide.

The congregation owns 90 feet of frontage on Marietta Street which has been held at $180,000. Some time ago they bought a large lot at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth Streets, where it is planned to put the new church and manse at a total cost of about $100,000. It is the desire of the property committee to go ahead with the erection of the new church irrespective of the sale of the downtown location, and it is probable that a move will be made toward erecting the edifice.

Healey Building Six Stories.

Steel work on the Healey Building has gone six stories and some of the uprights are in place for two more floors. The two monster derricks used to lift the stel are being carried up as the steel work progresses. At first they were located in the basement, but now they are high above the sidewalk and going higher. The Healey Building will soon be as high as the Grant Building to the south, and its seventeen stories will eventually cause it to tower over its neighbor.

Peachtree Paving Needed.

Members of the Board of County Commissioners declared Wednesday that something would be done as soon as possible to repair Peachtree Street from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead. What action would be taken was not stated definitely, but the Commissioners are at work on a plan and expect to announce it soon.

It will be recalled that the Commissioners met recently and agreed to remedy conditions "at once," but that a postponement was later ordered. In the meantime the paving is bad and property owners and travelers are beginning to complain.

Peachtree is used to reach town by all the people in the upper portion of Fulton County and of adjacent counties who do not use Piedmont Avenue or Marietta Street, and the volume of traffic is such that there is always a demand for a travelable thoroughfare. The condition of the street is now almost intolerable, and that is why ready relief is sought. The present paving is several years old, and the opinion is expressed that the commission will soon be obliged to lay entirely new paving.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

The Georgian heartily indorses the greater part of the message. However, there are one or two portions of the message on which The Georgian finds itself unable to agree with Governor Brown.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

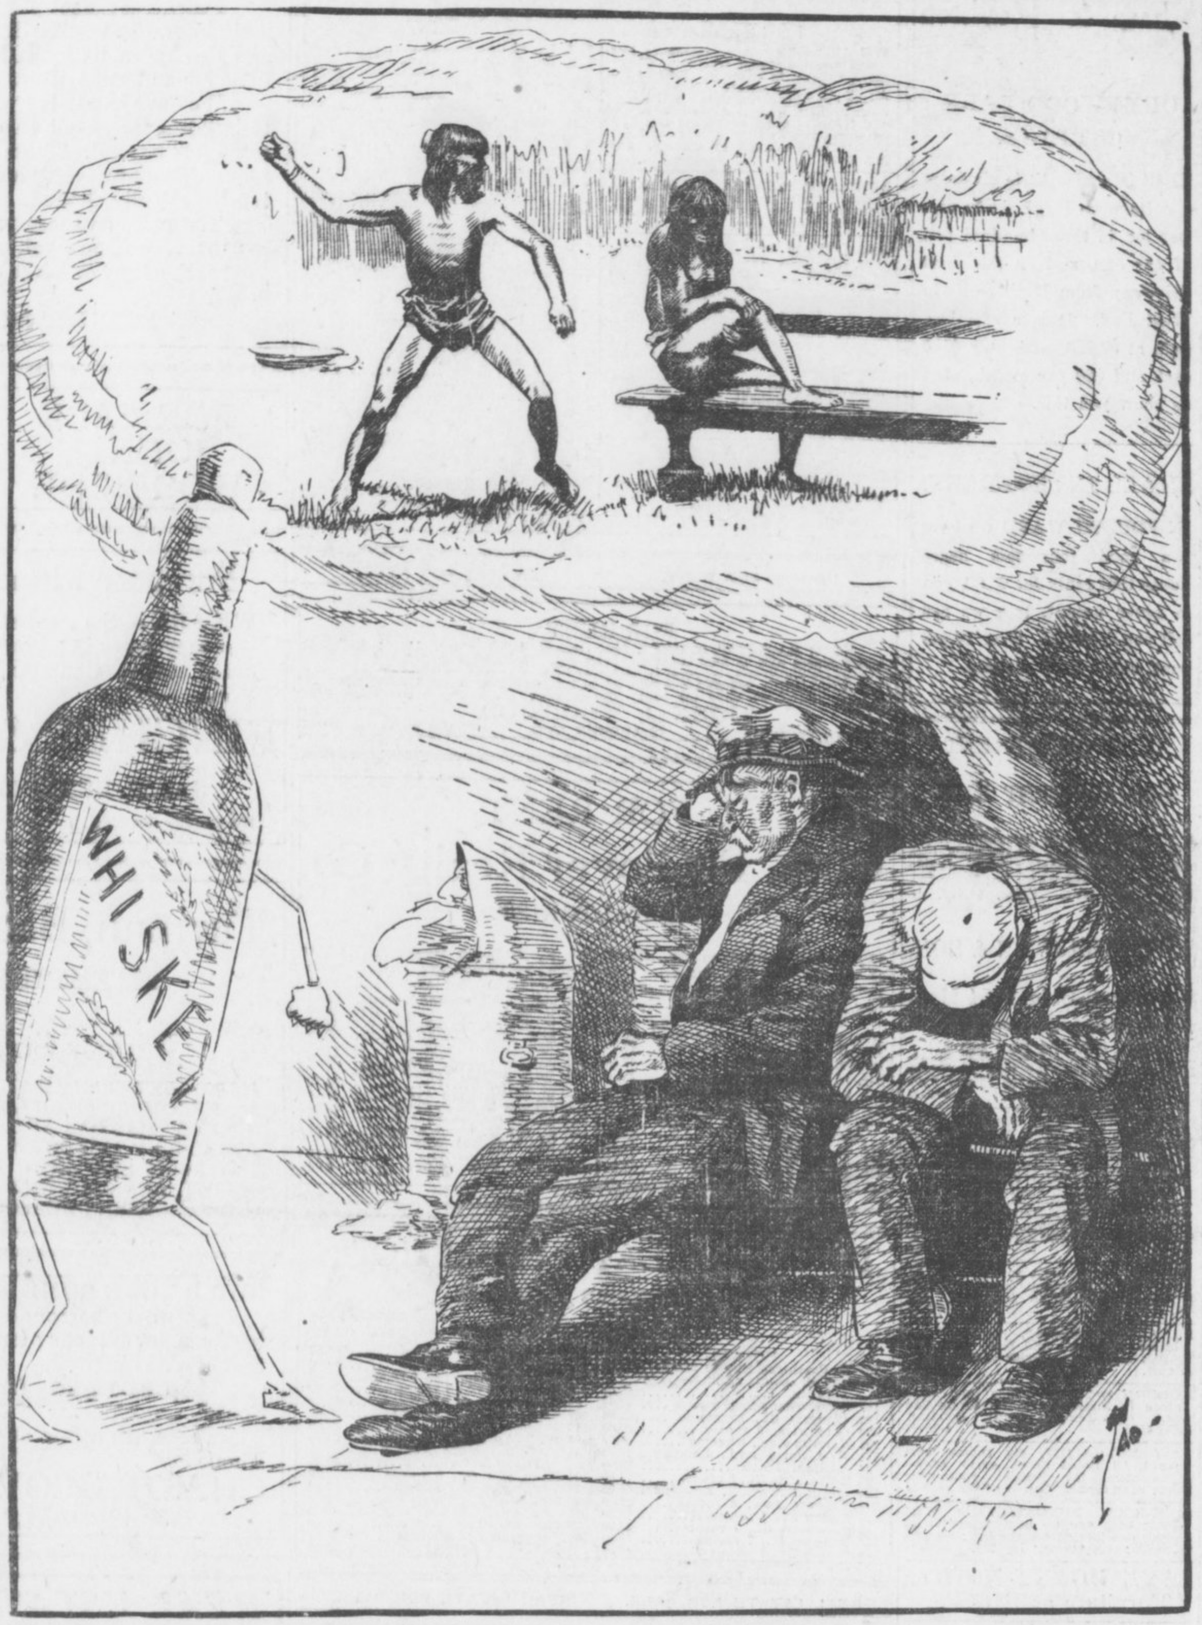
They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

The Hardest Hitter



The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

Whiskey, with its mailed fist, always leaves a mark. The man on the bench NEVER gets a chance to win.

One Vote Against It

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

PAULINE WELCH, actress-bride of "Bud" Fisher, famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff," who narrowly escaped death when she gashed her throat by falling upon the jagged edge of a broken water pitcher in an unlighted Piedmont Hotel bath room. She was rendered unconscious, and has been forced to cancel her vaudeville engagements.

'BUD' FISHER'S BRIDE HAS NARROW ESCAPE

That Mrs. Bud Fisher, who is better known to Atlanta as Pauline Welch, narrowly escaped death late Sunday night became known to-day.

The wife of the famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff" lies in her apartments at the Piedmont Hotel with a gash five inches long in her throat as the result of an accident which only great good fortune prevented from being fatal.

Mrs. Fisher, whose clever singing won great applause at the Forsyth Theater last week, retired about midnight Sunday night. About an hour later she arose and started into the bath room to fill a pitcher, containing some ice, with water. The lights were not turned on in the apartment, and as Mrs. Fisher entered the bath room she stumbled and fell against the bath tub.

The pitcher she held in her hand crashed against the tub, and she fell against a jagged piece of the glass, cutting a deep gash in the throat. She screamed and fainted, and Mr. Fisher picked her up and carried her to a bed.

Twenty Stitches in Wound.

Mrs. Fisher lost a great deal of blood. There was considerable delay in getting medical assistance, and when Drs. Worth E. Yankey and C. L. Rougian arrived an hour later she was unconscious. The flow of blood was stopped and 20 stitches were taken in the wound, nine aluminum clamps being necessary to hold the severed flesh in place during the operation.

A third physician was called into consultation, and the doctors remained with Mrs. Fisher during the remainder of the night. For several hours it was feared that she would not recover from the shock and loss of blood, but early Tuesday morning she regained consciousness and rallied rapidly.

Must Remain in Atlanta.

Mr. Fisher stated Wednesday morning that it will be impossible to move Mrs. Fisher for a week or ten days. They have canceled a vaudeville engagement at Brighton Beach for next and intend to remain in Atlanta until Mrs. Fisher is completely recovered.

The attending physicians declare that Mrs. Fisher had a miraculous escape from death.

'Hub' Talley Faces Trial for Shooting

"Hub" Talley will have to answer to Recorder Broyles Wednesday afternoon for the shooting and serious wounding of George Blackstock a few weeks ago in Peters Street. A case of disorderly conduct also has been docketed against Blackstock.

At the time of Talley's arrest some time ago he was placed in the Tower and later released on bond, but no city case was made. The officials decided that he also should answer to the city.

Woman Prosecutor Convicts Embezzler

Judge L. S. Roan Wednesday will sentence Oscar A. Donehoo for embezzling $200. The jury returned a verdict of guilty late yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Donehoo, a sister-in-law, who appeared in the role of prosecutor, declared Oscar Donehoo was executor of his father, C. M. Donehoo, and that she was due $200 which she had been unable to get.

Brown's Attack Stirs Unions

Anderson Is Elected President of the Senate

Both Branches of the Legislature Get Down to Real Work---Flood of Bills Begins in Upper and Lower Houses Soon After Lawmakers Convene.

With the reading of a sensational message by Governor Brown flaying the labor unions, the election of J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, to the Presidency of the Senate, the election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock, to the Speakership of the House and the introduction of the preliminary grist of bills, the Georgia Legislature began its session Wednesday.

Pledges made by Senator Anderson had appeased the hostility of the "drys" throughout the State and quieted the opposition to his candidacy. He was elected to the Presidency by a unanimous vote of the members, Judge Allen's name being withdrawn.

Representative Burwell, in accepting his unanimous election to the Speakership, spoke of the need of tax reforms in the State and expressed the hope that bills would be passed which would remedy the present inequable features of the system.

As soon as the House got down to work, the introduction of bills was begun. They had a wide range of subjects, and the indications from the first day of the session were that 50 days would be crowded with legislation.

Labor leaders issued a bitter reply to the charges made in the Governor's message.

LABOR LEADERS SCORE MESSAGE

Governor Brown's spirited attack upon labor unions and their tactics in his farewell message to the Legislature aroused widespread comment Wednesday, stirring up a hornets' nest among the labor union officials.

The Governor branded the unions an agency for anarchy and said that even in their gentler aspects they took on the nature of a gigantic labor trust out of all accord with the modern movement toward the suppression of big combinations.

He did not mince words in describing the unions as a menace to the people and to the principles of government. They struck their severest blows, he said, not at the rich people, but at the poor for whose protection they were supposed to be organized. The members, he said, regarded their organization as above the law, above the State and above the Constitution.

Says State Must Act.

The State of Georgia, declared the Governor, must assert itself and demonstrate that no person or group of persons can with impunity disregard the laws of the Commonwealth. As one of the panaceas for labor troubles, he suggested compulsory arbitration as a law on the statute books.

In referring to the Augusta car strike and the Georgia Railroad strike the Governor said the railroads had been given a charter to furnish transportation. The charter carried the effect of a contract. Neither the railroad company nor its employees had the right to commit any deed abrogating this contract. The State was privileged to call upon the railroad to fulfill the agreement, and the State's duty was to protect the railroad in operating its trains. By its disregard of the rights of the State and the people, the unions, he said, had made the union label mightier than the seal of State.

Labor union officials as a unit were bitter in their criticisms. Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, branded it as "balderhash" and "rot," and characterized the Governor as a disturber and a person seeking to restore the old order of things under the guise of reform.

Jerome Jones Criticises Brown.

"Governor Brown can see only within a narrowly circumscribed circle," said Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor, in bitterly assailing Governor Brown's attack on labor. "Either he has no knowledge of the conditions of labor and the rights of those who work, or he deliberately is closing his eyes to the truth.

"Much that he says in his farewell message he has said before. He would have the laborer and his work the absolute chattel of the master—the employer. The day of such conditions rapidly is passing, and he is foolish who would restore the conditions of a half century ago.

"His suggestions might be carried out in some of the European coun-

LEADERS NAMED WITHOUT FIGHT

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both branches Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was elected president of the Senate, and Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, was named Speaker of the House.

Neither man had any opposition in the balloting, and both were elected unanimously.

The rather unexpected termination of the heretofore uncertain and strenuous fight for the presidency of the Senate undoubtedly surprised the packed galleries and lobbies.

Allen Withdraws His Name.

Senator Spinks, who was expected to nominate Judge Allen, arose immediately after the Senate had been called to order by Secretary Northen, and instead of nominating his man, withdrew his name.

In doing this he delivered a fine and friendly little speech, praised his own man and his opponent, and said that, while Judge Allen had 19 votes ready to stand by him, it was not sufficient to elect, and the Senator from the Twentieth—Judge Allen—preferred to do the graceful thing and retire, rather than proceed with his friends to a fruitless struggle.

When Senator Spinks sat down Senator Stark arose and nominated Mr. Anderson in a spech every bit as good natured as the one preceding it.

Rival Votes for Anderson.

When the roll was called, Allen's name came first, and when he started the balloting in favor of his victorious rival, he was generously applauded by his colleagues.

On assuming the chair, President Anderson delivered a brief address, particularly calling attention to the much necessary legislation that the new General Assembly likely would have to undertake.

He got a good laugh when, in a facitious manner, he referred to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce's work on behalf of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property. He said "it evidently would not be the Legislature's work to say what should be done with that property, as the Atlanta trade body seemingly proposed taking care of that little matter itself."

Senate Happy Over Outcome.

The feeling in the Senate, after the settlement of the Allen-Anderson fight was very happy. The way in which that issue was solved evidently lifted a heavy load off many a Senatorial mind, and Judge Allen's frank and manly attitude won him many friends.

Mr. Anderson, in accepting the Presidency, paid an eloquent tribute to the ability and integrity of his late opponent.

The efforts of the prohibition leaders to get into the game at the last minute seems to have been entirely futile, so far as results were concerned.

Both Senators Anderson and Allen

Mexican Proposes U. S. Protectorate; Troops Eat Snakes

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 25.—The El Paso constitutionalist junta today received a message from Governor Carranza in Coahuila proposing that the United States be asked to establish a protectorate over the Republic of Mexico, pending the permanent restoration of peace.

At the same time word was received here that General Villa's constitutionalist army will be concentrated near Juarez within two days.

Reports received here from United States troops along the border of Sonora State said that Mexican Federals were eating snakes since the insurgent State troops have cut off their food supply.

MEXICO CITY, June 25.—The Mexican Government to-day commenced the concentration of all its armed forces in the northern military zone to restore railway traffic with the United States border over the National system. This step is taken to prevent the capital from complete isolation.

Decatur Organizes Beautifying Clubs

The civic beauty committees of the Decatur Board of Trade and the Decatur Woman's Club will, it was decided, organize a neighborhood club in the town to beautify Decatur.

Several clubs were started on the spot. Mrs. Thomas H. Fulton started the Oak Street Club; Mrs. A. L. Brooks and Mrs. J. G. Addy, College Avenue; Mrs. Jennie Findley, North Candler; Mrs. F. H. Hollister and Mrs. H. W. Cantrell, Jefferson Place; Mrs. R. M. Lightfoot and Mrs. George Watts, Adams Street.

Going on Vacation? Leave P. O. Address

Postmaster Hugh McKee announced Tuesday that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address order.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to disposition of mail.

CONLEY PUT ON GRILL STICKS TO STORY

Puzzled by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by Monteen Stover. He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 12 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Stover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clearer Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain this apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the factory foreman. Which statement is believed by the State is not known. What explanation is made by the negro for lying in regard to the matter also is conjectural.

Mary Phagan left her home on April 26 at about 11:50 o'clock. Living in Bellwood, it is regarded as unlikely that she reached the factory in less than 25 minutes, or at 12:15. Monteen Stover has testified that she visited the factory at about 12:10, which would be just before Mary Phagan had entered the factory, if the times testified to are correct.

Conley, on this account, has been asked if he saw, from his vantage point behind the boxes, Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, and Lemmie Quinn enter at 12:20, why he did not see Mary Phagan when she entered in the interval between the visits of the Stover girl and Lemmie Quinn.

Sticks to His Story.

Another point on which he has been questioned is as to how he could have left his home at the time he has testified and visit all the saloons of which he has told and still meet Frank at Nelson and Forsyth Streets as Frank was on his way to Montag Bros. factory. Frank, according to the statements of members of the Montag firm, was in their building by 10 o'clock. Yet the things that Conley has testified to doing would have taken him until considerably after 10 o'clock, according to a conservative estimate.

He also has been quizzed on other points in his testimony which appear at variance with the facts, but he has stuck steadfastly to the story told in his last affidavit. Solicitor Dorsey has said that he has been unable to shake the negro in any important particular.

Deny Hoke Smith Story.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, made strenuous denial Wednesday that any effort had been made to connect Senator Hoke Smith with the defense. A similar denial was made by Herbert Haas, associated with Mr. Rosser in the defense. Neither was able to say how the rumor had started.

Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, said that the State would be prepared Monday to fight the subpenas duces tecum issued by the lawyers for the defense. It is regarded as improbable, however, that the defense will bring the matter to an issue until the trial begins July 28.

Convict Offers to Sell His Body to The Highest Bidder

Thomas A. McCullough, a convict in the Monroe County camp, wants to sell his own body. He expresses that desire in a letter dated Griffin, Ga., sent for insertion Wednesday in the ad columns of The Georgian.

FOR SALE—To the highest bidder for cash—I offer my body, which is 6 feet high, weighs 175 pounds, is large frame, well proportioned, 40 years of age and Caucasian race.

"I have a sentence of 18 years for killing a negro in Griffin in 1911 and have no prospects, no hopes and no friends, hence, being in bad health, I am asking this proposition. Anyone wishing to consummate a trade, address Thomas A. McCullough, Box 271, Care Monroe County Convict Camp.

Mercury Reaches 91; Showers May Abate Heat This Evening

The usual mark, 91 degrees, was the maximum temperature Wednesday. It was attained shortly before 2 o'clock.

The thermometer reached 84 at 10 o'clock and 88 at noon.

"It is remarkable how the same kind of weather prevails over the entire country," said C. F. VonHerrmann, the Atlanta forecaster. "It is 90 or thereabouts in Atlanta day after day, and the same nearly everywhere else. Although it seems pretty warm here, Atlanta is no hotter than other places."

"Continued fair, with possibly showers late in the afternoon," is the forecast for Thursday.

Switchman Values His Foot at $40,000

A. L. Kirbo, a former Southern Railway switchman, filed a suit for $40,000 against the company Wednesday for the loss of his foot, crushed when he was caught between two cars.

Kirbo said he was standing between two tracks on which the clearance was only twelve inches when cars backing into one of the tracks crushed him against cars on the other track, and that he fell under the moving cars.

Held for Trial for Flogging Daughter

AUGUSTA, June 25.—J. J. Johnson, arrested for cruelty to his 15-year-old daughter, was admitted to bond of $1,000 to appear before the Recorder Friday morning and answer the charge of disorderly conduct.

Warrants charging him with assault with intent to murder and cruelty to a child have been sworn out by officers of the State courts.

Militants Fire Rail Station; Halt Traffic

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, June 25.—Militant suffragettes to-day burned the railway station at Hazelwell, near here, doing considerable damage and blocking traffic for a time.

Suffrage literature in the ruins revealed the identiy of the incendiaries.

Augusta Likely Will Win Commission Rule

AUGUSTA, June 25.—Augusta will vote on the commission government plan Saturday. It is believed the movement will win.

Members of the present city administration and their friends do not wish commission government this time. They wanted it last year when not in power. The present anti-administration people did not want it last year.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast—Fair Wednesday night, with showers Thursday. Temperatures—8 o'clock, 80 degrees; 10 o'clock, 86; 12 o'clock, 88; 2 o'clock, 91. Sunrise, 4:28; sunset, 6:53.

ASSEMBLY GETS DOWN TO REAL BUSINESS

answered the query propounded to them, as to whether they would favor legislation to perfect the Webb law, in the affirmative, and that flattened out all chance for excitement along that line.

"Drys" Fail to Change Vote.

It is evident that the injection of the prohibition issue did not change a vote.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth District, was elected President pro tem of the Senate. He is a new member, and has achieved a large measure of popularity during the past few days. He defeated Senator W. J. Bush by a vote of 37 to 8.

Charles S. Northen was elected, without opposition, to his old position of secretary of the Senate.

After the election of officers the Senate heard the Governor's message read and adjourned for the day.

Burwell's Speech Marks House Opening.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Secretary Boifeuillet called the House to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, chaplain of the House. This was followed by the administering of the oath to each member by Chief Justice W. H. Fish.

A large crowd witnessed the opening of the 50-day session. The galleries were filled.

Long before the opening hour the House chamber was filled with a good-humored crowd of legislators. With the Speakership settled by the withdrawal of Sheppard and Hardeman, members of the House found themselves devoid of anything to cause excitement. For a few minutes the lobbyists forgot their lobbying and the only thing to indicate that it was a political gathering was the soliciting of votes of the various candidates for the smaller offices.

Standing Room Only.

By 10:30 o'clock standing room in the House was at a premium. Every seat was taken, while the crowd lined the walls.

During the administering of the oath the lobbyists returned to their natural state, and the buttonholing began again.

Election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, as Speaker of the House was a somewhat quiet affair. No name was offered in opposition, while a score of Representatives were on their feet to second his nomination by L. R. Akin, of Glenn County, as Speaker. Harris, of Washington; J. J. Slade, of Muscogee; Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, and Adams, of Hall, were the first men to spring to their feet.

Burwell Without Opposition.

The roll call showed 170 votes for Burwell. Temporary Chairman Boifeuillet appointed Burwell's three rivals for the Speakership to escort him to the rostrum. They were Hardeman, Fullbright and Sheppard.

Great applause greeted their procedure down the hall with him. The appointment of his rivals as an escort caused a ripple of merriment to pass around the House.

Applause greeted Speaker Burwell's address throughout.

Minter Wimberly, of Bibb, placed in nomination John T. Boifeuillet as Clerk of the House, referring to him as the "Golden-hearted gentleman from Bibb," and the "handsomest man in Georgia." For fifteen minutes members of the House indulged in the making of complimentary speeches extolling the virtues and manly pulchritude of Boifeuillet, whose intimate friends affectionately call him "John Bullyfoot," and who has been Clerk of the House since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. No name was offered in opposition to Boifeuillet.

Tax Reform Urged.

Burwell, in assuming the Speakership, urged tax reforms, saying, among other things:

"There are, with me, no scars to heal or enemies to pulish; and I sincerely trust that you can and will reciprocate the feelings of sincere personal regard and friendship that I entertain for every member of this House.

"For the past several years since the limitation of 5 mills was wisely placed upon the taxing power of the General Assembly, appropriations have been from time to time increased beyond the revenues of the State until to-day we find a deficit in our State Treasury which the honor and integrity of the State demands we should correct.

"To do this, and to do it wisely, will require our best thought and highest patriotism. In its consideration we should on the one hand keep in mind the demands and needs of the State and her various institutions, and with liberal justice provide for all, in order that the dignity of the State may be preserved and her institutions fostered, protected and developed; but, on the other hand, I can but beg you remember the present condition of our people.

Taxes High Enough.

"Let me assure you I am no pessimist and I fully realize and appreciate that Georgia is rich and prosperous in the possession of boundless natural resources, more varied perhaps than any of her sister States, and that her basic credit is well founded and established beyond the thought of criticism; yet it is a manifest fact to all in close touch with our constituency that the crop conditions of the past two years have placed unusual burdens upon our people and there is no business or interest in Georgia, whether farmer, merchant, banker, manufacturer, laborer or man of the professions, which has not felt its serious consequences.

"Therefore, to lay additional burdens upon our people at this time will be disastrous and unwise, and I sincerely trust that in providing for this deficit in the treasury you will find other means than that of increase in the various taxes of the State.

"We will be called upon to correct the present evils in our taxing system, a system which is now so antiquated, in many instances so inadequate and so unjust, and to correct these evils in such manner as will equalize the burdens of taxation and adjust the present inequities and inequalities of our law, offers to us the highest opportunity for the exercise of wise statesmanship and real service to the State."

Boifeuillett Gets 170 Votes.

A total of 170 votes was recorded for Boifeuillett. A committee of three was appointed to escort him to the clerk's desk.

Immediately following this a message was sent to the Senate informing that body that the House was in order, and that a committee of five, to meet with a committee of three from the Senate, to inform the Governor that the General Assembly was in order, was appointed.

A resolution for the appointment of success, unanimous consent being the committee of three from the Senate to arrange for the inauguration of Governor Slaton then was adopted.

Nominations for Speaker Pro Tem were called for. E. H. McMichael, of Marion, and A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, were the only two men nominated, there being a large number of seconds for each man.

This vote was one of the most exciting in the history of the House, being neck and neck throughout. As the roll call progressed the vote stood 4-4, 10-10, 14-14, 18-18, 20-20.

Then McMichael began to forge ahead, the vote going McMichael 35, Stovall 31, then 45-36, 50-42, 52-46, 57-53, 60-54, 64-56, 66-60, 71-64, 73-71, 79-74, 86-81, 98-85. McMichael wins.

Speaker Raps for Order.

Mrs. Rosa Tolbert Reid was announced as postmistress of the House. D. T. Paulk, of Ben Hill County, was re-elected messenger without opposition.

Speaker Burwell was forced to rap for order repeatedly. Upon order of the Speaker the aisles were cleared and the members ordered to remain in their own seats while in the chamber.

W. T. Morris, of Tolbert County, was re-elected doorkeeper. There was no opposition and the Rev. H. J. Ellis, of Fulton County, was elected chaplain of the House.

An effort to dispense with the filing of bills during the opening day failed to success, unanimous consent being required, and several objections being voiced.

Following the filing of new bills the reading of the Governor's message was announced. Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley County, moved that the House adjourn without the reading of the message, but the motion was lost by a heavy roll of "noes."

Immediately following the conclusion of the reading of the Governor's message the House was declared adjourned until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

'DRYS' DECLARE ANDERSON WILL AID THEM

Officials of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League will hold a conference Wednesday night to perfect plans for presenting a bill in the Legislature prohibiting shipments of liquor into the State. An additional bill or clause also will be prepared prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements in Georgia newspapers.

The conference follows fast upon the heels of the election of Randolph Anderson to the presidency of the Senate, which the temperance people regard as a victory inasmuch as Mr. Anderson has said that, as an individual Senator, he considers such a bill proper legislation. President Anderson further said, temperance people point out, that he would consider it proper to prohibit the publication of liquor advertisements.

Dr. G. W. Young, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, spokesman for the league Wednesday morning, had the following to say:

Have Anderson "Sewed."

"We regard Mr. Anderson's election as a virtual victory for the temperance cause, for he has practically committed himself to our views by his statements in regard to the Webb bill, as well as that concerning the passage of a bill prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements.

"In other words, we have Mr. Anderson, who has been more or less antagonistic to our cause, practically sewed up in a rag, and we will proceed to push our cause with more vigor than ever.

"We believe the public expressions from the two candidates for the Presidency of the Senate did us far more good than if we had put out a candidate, for then many prohibitionists who favored personally either Mr Allen, a lukewarm prohibitionist, or Mr. Anderson, antagonistic, would have been disgruntled to such an extent that perfect harmony would not have prevailed in our fight for the bill. We have every hope of getting the bill through.

Both Favored Bill.

The letter of Dr. DuBose, president of the Anti-Saloon League, was sent out by messenger to the two candidates Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Allen replied early in the afternoon saying the legislation met with his approval. The reply of Mr. Anderson was received Tuesday night.

Mr. Anderson said that in view of the enactment of the Webb bill and in consideration of the fact that the fixed present policy of the State is in favor of prohibition, he would, as an individual Senator, consider such a bill proper legislation.

He added that he would not commit himself to a bill he had never seen, nor would he pledge his official action either to the support or to the opposition of any particular measure. He pledged absolute fair and impartial treatment if the bill should be introduced.

Chicago Noise Peril Shown by Atlantan

CHICAGO, June 25.—The incessant noise of the downtown district of Chicago has a distinct effect on Chicagoans, and they do not know what relaxation means, Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., last night told the conference of allenists and neurologists who are considering ways and means of decreasing degeneracy and dementia.

"The loop is guilty of more and longer continued noise than any similar area in the world," declared Dr. King.

Joyriding Puts End To Bride's Happiness

Shortly after she married W. M. Groves he took to joy riding with fair young neighbors and told them he had secured a divorce from her, according to Mrs. Annie Groves' petition for divorce filed with the Superior Court Wednesday.

She said he was a model young man until after the honeymoon, when he began drinking, treated her cruelly, and finally deserted her.

Tennessee Military School Hit by Fire

KNOXVILLE, June 25.—The buildings of the Tennessee Military Institute at Sweetwater were threatened with destruction in a fire that started early to-day. The buildings were at the mercy of the flames because the town of Sweetwater has no fire protection.

The loss will exceed $75,000.

Dead in Explosion Likely to Exceed 30

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 25.—The number of missing men in the Huested fire now totals twenty-six. The police at noon said six more men, in addition to these twenty believed to be killed, have not returned to their homes. Seven bodies have been recovered, so that the list of dead in the explosion of yesterday afternoon very likely will exceed thirty.

A number of the 45 injured probably will die.

STOCKHOLM, June 25.—For the first time the Baltic Sea was crossed to-day by an aeroplane. Marcel G. Brindejone Des Moulinais, the famous aviator who flew from Paris to St. Petersburg recently, made the flight. M. Des Moulinais started from Reval and reached Stockholm four hours later. He will leave for Paris via Copenhagen Friday.

Wilson and Advisers To Consult Bankers

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A special conference will take place at the White House late to-day between President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Senator Owen, of Oklahoma; Representative Glass, of Virginia, and a special committee of the American Bankers' Association.

The conference will consider in detail the Glass bill, which is awaiting introduction in the House.

UNION LEADERS SCORE BROWN FOR ATTACK

Ideas Approach Imbecilic.

"His ideas border on the imbecilic. It is utter nonsense to say that the increased wages obtained by the members of the labor unions has imposed a tax on those who happen not to be members. It is a matter of industrial history that where the labor unions have procured better wages those outside the union have been similarly benefited, if not quite in the same degree.

"The foremost economists of the country, those who look at the subject without the bias which might be accredited to the labor unionist himself, are pretty generally agreed that the labor union not only has set the standard of wages and the hours of labor, but also has set the standard of living among the working people, who in the final analysis are one of the strongest bulwarks of the State. They not only admit, but declare freely, that the reforms obtained by the unionists have been of benefit to the people at large.

"How foolish, then, is it to assert that the activities of the labor unions are imposing a tax on the remainder of the State's citizens.

Assails Compulsory Arbitration.

"His suggestion that compulsory arbitration be one of the laws placed upon our statute books constitutes a most dangerous principle. Who has a right to say that I shall arbitrate? I believe in arbitration, but no one has the power to make me arbitrate. Suppose, following out the Governor's suggestion, a dispute between a railroad company and its employees is arbitrated. Suppose that the award of the arbitration board is in favor of the employees. Is there any power that can make the railroad company keep me or any of my fellow employees on the company's payroll? Is there any way to stop the hundred and one similar methods of reprisal that the railroads may adopt under the compulsory arbitration system?

O. K.'s Sympathetic Strikes.

"Because the labor unionists are a small group in the population is no reason why their rights should have less weight than the rights of the others. Neither can there be any objection to the practice of sympathetic strikes, against which the Governor inveighs.

"If it should be only one man whose rights are attacked, the whole union is bound to fight in his behalf until its treasury is exhausted. That man's rights established, the decision has an effect on the whole body of laborers.

"The Governor speaks of courts and juries, but I would ask him at what courts and at the hands of what juries can the laboring man get equable decisions on the questions that arise from time to time?"

HUMPHREY QUITS WITH MAYOR ON CREMATORY

Finance Chairman Says He Is "Through" After Vain Effort to Effect Agreement.

A breach between Mayor James G. Woodward and his chairman of the Council Finance Committee, W. G. Humphrey, of the Eighth Ward, developed Wednesday over the crematory controversy. Councilman Humphrey had remained a firm supporter of the Mayor through all the storm and stress, except that he supported the crematory contract. After he had called at the Mayor's office Wednesday in a final effort to effect an agreement and met with failure he said that he was through.

Evins, Spence & Moore, attorneys for the Destructor Company, announced that they entertained no hope of the Mayor signing any crematory contract and that they would proceed to mandamus him for their pay at the proper time. They said the Mayor had broken faith with his recent verbal agreement to settle controversies and that they could explain his opposition only on the grounds that he feared a municipal electric plant might be erected.

The Mayor said he was disgusted with the whole affair and was ready to sign a contract at the price agreed when Council would pass up a legal contract.

"They seem afraid to trust me in the matter and I can assure those crematory people I won't trust them," he said. "I have had too much experience with them."

"They can settle this matter in half an hour, if they will. Otherwise, it will go again to the Supreme Court."

C. P. Goree, attorney, representing citizens who have sought to enjoin work on the crematory, took depositions from a number of witnesses connected with the work Wednesday afternoon.

WHY SWELTER? KEEP COOL

You can do so these hot days by using an Oil Stove for your cooking. Especially acceptable are they during the canning season. Is it too hot in the kitchen? That's all right; just move the stove to the back porch. Not comfortable there? Then just try the butler's pantry and they won't heat up the rest of the house nor you, either.

Come in and let us give you a lesson on keeping cool while cooking in the summer time. We carry in stock one, two and three-burner stoves, with or without cabinets; and you can buy these with or without ovens.

Our King Bee line has many points of superiority over any other oil stove on the market.

CUYLER LOCATED FOR HIS WIFE BY WOMAN

WAYSIDE, GA., June 25.—It developed to-day that a woman, indigenous to the red hills of Jones County, succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and delitante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the wildest regions of war-torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman detective of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never seen a sleuth, but she has a well-developed power of reasoning.

Finds Him at Plantation.

Two weeks ago when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County sources the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, she took the rather prosaic method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been playing hide-and-seek with officers endeavoring to serve him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months. She had reports that he was hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dilettante wanted to hide, abviously the best place for him to secrete himself would be his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be anywhere but at home.

Perhaps she didn't reason at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front verdanda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary for Jones County farmers

In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, her counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Alameda, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No decision was reached at that time, and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Southern Cotton Company to grow long staple cotton on a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know what he did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from officers she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Alameda conference. A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

Later he was traced, according to Mrs. Cuyler's information, through Arizona and then East to New York. She had also been told that he was reported variously in Europe and the Orient.

Leading Life of Recluse.

About two weeks ago, according to Mrs. Chiles' information, on the birthday of Telemon Cuyler, Jr., the five-year-old son of the torn pair, a package of presents was received at the California home of the mother. It was addressed in Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Wayside people say that Cuyler has been at his mother's plantation for at least three weeks.

How much longer he has been there they do not know. Since his return he has been leading the life of a recluse. On his former visits to his Jones County place he made daily trips to the Wayside Station and showed considerable interest in discussions, so universal on the porches of rural general stores.

Cuyler is taking the news of the proceedings with the utmost nonchalance. He apparently is in no hurry to decide on the exact nature of his action in the matter.

"The affair is very complex," he says, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added as an afterthought.

"I may come to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel. I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime, I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction. Then the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are thus rather completely employed, and this matter's coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex, and interesting."

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

Throng Chases Boy Down Busy Streets

Willie Jones, a 17-year-old negro, had nothing on his mind but his cap Wednesday morning as he stood at Five Points. The transformation of his mental state was marvelous, however, when he saw Policeman Helms, of Columbus, Jones' former home, approaching.

Terror seized him and he dashed through a crowd into Marietta Street. Hundreds joined the chase. Excitement ran high until Jones was arrested at Forsyth by Helms.

OWLS OPEN HOME FOR YANCEY BALL

Court House Attaches Sell Hundreds of Tickets—Contributions Still Are Needed.

The club rooms and dance floor on the roof garden of the Owls' Club have been offered for the Dave Yancey benefit ball Friday night.

Practically every attache of the Sheriff's office and the court house has lent his efforts to boosting the affair, and already hundreds of tickets have been sold. Men will be charged 25 cents for admission. Women will be admitted free of charge.

The proceeds will go toward the Yancey fund to brighten the future of the dead deputy's widow and six children.

Additional subscriptions to this cause are badly needed. Provision for the life of the Yancey family has been but poorly made so far. A plea was issued Wednesday to the thousands of persons who have not yet contributed their mite to do so immediately. A dime, a quarter or a half-dollar is desired from each. The amount is insignificant, yet it means happiness to the stricken family.

HENEY EXPECTED TO BE M'NAB'S SUCCESSOR

Believed Wilson Won't Heed Fact That He's Bull Moose—Retirement of McReynolds Hinted.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House to-day as practically certain that Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco prosecutor who convicted Abe Ruef of graft and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case.

The only obstacle to Heney's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is admitted that his appointment to take charge of the white slave cases at this time will tremendously help Heney's candidacy for the Senate, and as the prosecutor is a rabid Progressive, it is understood that this course will endanger the Democratic chances in California.

However, as President Wilson is being informed on all sides that Heney is the man to manage the Government side of the case it is probable he will cast aside all politics and appoint the Progressive as special counsel.

The President to-day conferred with Attorney General McReynolds and Representative Kahn, of California, on the Caminetti matter, but neither side would make any statement.

The White House and the Department of Justice said the McNab matter is closed so far as Washington is concerned, and the Government is only interested in obtaining justice, swift and sure, for Diggs and Caminetti.

Rumors that Attorney General McReynolds is about to leave the cabinet have been strengthened by the developments in the Caminetti case.

Elder Caminetti Gets Leave to Attend Trial.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Antonio Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration and father of one of the alleged white slavers, now awaiting trial at San Francisco, will be allowed to be present at his son's trial.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

Morgan Paintings to Go to Hartford

HARTFORD, CONN., June 25.—According to information received to-day by a relative of the Morgan family, some of the priceless Morgan art treasures are to have their permanent abode in this city in the Morgan Memorial erected by the late financier to the memory of his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, and turned over to the trustees last week.

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

Pope Pius is much distressed by reports of dissension among the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for each of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court to-day when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl," and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

BULLETIN OPENS 50-DAY WAR ON CHAINGANGS

Churches of Georgia Are Allied With Prison Reformers in Great Crusade.

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

To the candidate in this district having second highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, saddle and bridle complete, valued at $200.

To the candidate in this district having third highest number of votes will be awarded a pretty gold watch, valued at $15.

To the candidate in this district having fourth highest number of votes will be given a silver watch, valued at $7.50.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me as if there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

Zionists Tell Plan of Palestine Colony

CINCINNATI, O., June 25.—At the sixteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists here the annual message of the honorary president, Dr. Harry Freidenwald, explained fully the purpose of the federation.

"It is not our idea to send all Jews back to Palestine," he said, "but to place all Jews in a position where independence is assured them. Primarily, the move is for the relief of the Russian Jew."

Girls Writing Book Will Simplify Laws

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—The embryo lawyer of to-day, who will be the brilliant pleader of to-morrow, will owe a debt of gratitude to two Cleveland girls for a massive volume filled with simple interpretations of Ohio's laws. The girls are Miss Ruth Winch, 22, daughter of Judge Louis H. Winch, and Miss Ruth Jenkins, 18.

The book is being prepared by the girls under the supervision of Judge Winch, and will be known as "The History of the Laws of Ohio."

1,500 Milwaukee's Bars Face Closing

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon measure means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their free book. Write to-day. It is most instructive.

Lad Plays Ball on Piedmont Roof

Hits Homer From Aerial Ball Lot

Sphere Cracks Cabman in Street

Manager Dutton's Young Son Presses Nurses Into Service in His Practice Games.

Eight-year-old Lear Dutton spat on his hands, rubbed them in the dirt, and pounded vigorously on the home plate with his bat.

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-massy, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

English Girl Weds Sir Joseph Tichborne Despite Threat of Claimant to Estates.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened if she married Sir Joseph Tichborne, was wedded to Sir Joseph in Brompton Oratory to-day without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by Theresa Doughty Tichborne, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Orton, claimant of the Tichborne baronetcy and estates. Later she declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Tichborne, who mysteriously disappeared half a century ago and about whose absence a romantic cloud of mystery had been woven.

Orton, in 1869, claimed to be Roger Tichborne and demanded the title and estates of the twelfth baronet. He came from Australia and the Tichborne family, convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. Then came a long and celebrated trial, but Orton's case was nonsulted. He was convicted of perjury and sent to jail for 14 years.

Orton, before he died in 1898, confessed he had been a butcher in London's East End.

The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and who was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Kruseckopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

FANS, ALSO, MUST OBSERVE SUNDAYS

Recorder Closes "Baseball Parlor" With a Bang—In Class With Movies.

That phase of the Atlanta spirit so pronounced in baseball fans and that causes them to root for the home team as no other set of fans ever rooted must be placed in the ice chest Sundays.

Recorder Nash Broyles so decreed Tuesday afternoon when he ruled that the baseball parlors of "Caller" R. H. King at 9 Viaduct Way will not be permitted to open Sundays. This is the hall in which Atlanta fans assemble to witness the battle by innings flashed by telegraph when the Crackers are scrapping in foreign fields.

The baseball parlor is in the same class as moving picture theaters, penny arcades, and other such amusements, according to the Recorder.

King threw open his parlors for the game last Sunday, and a test case was promptly made against him.

Judge Broyles dismissed the case on the agreement of King to keep his place closed on Sunday.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

WASHINGTON, June 25.—When Mrs. William P. Borland, wife of Representative Borland, of Missouri, met her husband at the Union Station she nearly swooned. For Borland, smiling happily, emerged from the train shed with two chubby, giggling little girls.

The representative informed his wife he had adopted the youngsters at Kansas City when he found they were about to be sent to an orphan asylum.

ANTI-FREESUGAR SENATORS IN LAST DITCH

Ransdell Leads Desperate Fight in Caucus — Defeat Also Means Wool Victory."

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Ransdell, of Louisiana, and the other anti-free sugar Senators to-day in the Democratic caucus made their last stand against the Administration. Senator Ollie James, of Kentucky, defended the free sugar provision of the Underwood-Simmons bill.

The disposition of the sugar schedule will carry with it the fight on free wool, a victory or defeat for sugar meaning a victory or defeat for wool.

The rest of the bill then will be put through before the end of this week and go to the full Finance Committee for final consideration early next week.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

French President Is Given Great Ovation as He Drives Through Streets of London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Following her custom, Dowager Queen Alexandra drove through the city.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Aerial Courier Takes Dispatches to Poincare.

LONDON, June 25.—Bearing dispatches from the French Government to President Poincare of France, Aviator Slack, a British airman, arrived here from Paris to-day in his aeroplane. The courier made the trip without mishap, beating the regular mail time by many hours.

Bulgars Want Peace Or War to a Finish

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, SERVIA, June 25.—The Servian Government sent another note to St. Petersburg to-day relating to Czar Nicholas' offer to arbitrate the territorial dispute between Servia and Bulgaria.

At the same time dispatches from Sofia reported that Bulgaria would adopt more aggressive measures than have been taken if the Servian note does not accept Russia's offer of arbitration unconditionally.

Skirmishing between the outposts of the Servian and Bulgarian armies south of Uskub again was reported.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Copely Amory, Jr., found the fossils last summer while collecting specimens for the United States Alaskan Museum.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 48-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. My fees are reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for a cure. All medicines, the surest and best of drugs, are supplied from my own private laboratory. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY, consult me at once upon arrival, and maybe you can be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in one or two visits.

CALL OR WRITE—No detention from business. Treatment and advice confidential. Hours 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sunday, 9 to 1. If you can't call, write and give me full description of your case in your own words. A complete consultation costs you nothing and if I can help you I will.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Members of the Capital City Club, their wives and friends, are eagerly anticipating the formal opening of the Capital City Country Club Thursday afternoon and evening when the entire club membership will assemble to declare the summer season open at this new branch of the club.

Since taking over the Brookhaven Club the Capital City Club has added a new feature. The Country Club will be largely an athletic club.

There are three fine tennis courts and golf links are in good condition. Each afternoon sees twenty or thirty persons in or on the water, many members having private canoes. Flower beds and flower boxes add to the attractiveness of the verandas.

The entire club house will be thrown open from 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, officers and their wives holding an informal reception at that hour. Later refreshments will be served al fresco. In the evening there will be dancing.

Mr. Robert F. Maddox, president, and Mrs. Maddox will act as official host and hostess. Receiving with them will be other officers of the club and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Spalding, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Brutus Clay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman, Messrs. Charles I. Ryan, Robert Clarke and Edward Austin.

At St. Simons Island.

Among the Atlantans registered at the new St. Simon's Hotel are Mr. Martin Amorous, Misses Emma Kate, Isabel, Rosalind, Janice and William Amorous, Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong and children, Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newell and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Irving S. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McRae and family, Mrs. Mary F. Boynton, Mrs. Walter G. Smith, Miss Louise Mell, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Callaway, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Armistead, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and family, Mr. C. G. Thorn, Dr. and Mrs. John S. Derr, and many others.

Large numbers of Macon, Atlanta, Birmingham and other cities are represented at the hotel. The Gorvernor's Horse Guards of Atlanta and other military companies are in camp near the light house.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. William Schroder gave a bridge party Wednesday at her home in Fourteenth Street for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

The house was decorated with pink sweetpeas and Shasta daisies. In the dining room the tea table had as its centerpiece a mound of pink sweetpeas. Pink candle shades and pink mints completed the color motif.

Prizes were a parasol and pieces of shadow lace lingerie, trimmed in French roses.

Mrs. Schroder's guests were twelve of her young married friends.

Mrs. Massenburg Entertains.

Mrs. Frank Massenburg entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. R. Bethune, of Rome, formerly Miss Gladys Kirk. The game was played on the porch, decorated with plants and sweetpeas, and prizes were white and gold china for top score, a pin tray for consolation and crystal candlesticks for the honor guest.

Tea was served from a table covered with lace over pink satin and adorned with pink and white sweetpeas, a color scheme of pink and white being observed in detail. Punch was served from a bowl imbedded in fruits. Mrs. Massenburg wore pink embroidered voile.

Pigeon Flies From Rio Janeiro to U. S.

JEANNETTE, PA., June 25.—"Sunny Jim," a noted racing pigeon owned by Stephen Krupa, of this city, has arrived here from Rio Janeiro, Brazil, after 48 days of wandering through the torrid and temperate zones.

No pigeon ever before "homed" from a point below the equator.

American Wins Again In Tennis Title Play

WIMBLEDON, ENG., June 25.—Maurice McLoughlin, of California, triumphed again to-day in the play for the world's tennis championship. He defeated Mavrogordato in the third round.

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

B. Y. P. U. TO MEET.

The city B. Y. P. U. will hold its regular meeting at the Second Baptist Church Thursday night at 8 o'clock. This will be an echo meeting of the State B. Y. P. U. Convention at Macon last week.

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

A Sale of Brass Wares

In Which Jardinieres, Window Boxes, Fern Dishes, Andirons and Novelties Are Priced at Half and Less

There is always a place in a well regulated household for an artistic piece of brassware, or, perhaps we should say, for another piece of brassware.

Now is your time to secure another piece at a price never more than half and very often less than half. It is our June disposal, which alone accounts for such prices.

The brasswares are elegant, usually those heavy hand-wrought pieces that lend distinction and grace wherever they are placed—such, too, as seldom find their way into such a sale. But all merchandise, be it ever so artistic and beautiful, is only merchandise at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co., and so must be disposed of in good season.

This time it is brasswares.

The sale gets under way with the opening of the store at 8 o'clock.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us." Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it. Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE moment Warren entered Helen knew by the set lines of his mouth that something unusual had happened.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay three or four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or sue is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

This is only one of the reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter is worth more money than any other typewriter ever made.

: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice, "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"'Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

"Well, all right; just tell me how I can get the money and I'll try it."

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

One glance was enough. Cain returned to the beating of his horse with redoubled vigor.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible:

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy. When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke's broad jowls shook from the force with which he snapped his jaws together.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE
Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.
DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"
Write us to-day for our beautifully illustrated booklet, telling all about the freezer; it is ABSOLUTELY FREE—and receive our free trial offer.

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Here is the way Deacon Davis of the Davenport Democrat and Leader tells of the sale and career of Reed:

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

GRANEY TO BE REFEREE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Eddie Graney, promoter of the Ritchie-Rivers July 4 bout here, will be the third man in the ring when hostilities begin. At a conference the former blacksmith was chosen referee.

UHLAN GOES FAST MILE.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 25.—C. K. G. Billings' gelding Uhlan circled the mile course at North Randell yesterday in 2:04⅘. Trotting to a sulky he went the route in 2:03 1-3.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

Hirsig Trades Glenn; After Major Players

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25.—President Hirsig announces he has sold Catcher Harry Glenn, last season with the Vols, to the St. Louis Cardinals for $1,000 and Pitcher Redding.

Glenn was farmed to Akron, Ohio, in the early part of this season, where he has been hitting at a terrific clip. Hirsig claims he has deals pending for a number of players from the major leagues in his efforts to strengthen the sliding Vols.

Racing at Belmont; Only Two-Day Meet

NEW YORK, June 25.—The two days' meet of the United Hunts Racing Association will open this afternoon at Belmont Park Terminal with a large field of entries. The second and closing day of the meet is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The program is a varied one and embraces both jumping and flat races. Six events are carded for each day, including three flat races, two steeplechases and one hurdle event. The Sportsmen's Steeplechase Dinner Stakes, which is considered to be the most important race of the meet, has a fine field of starters and has aroused much interest. This race was closed by private subscription several weeks ago.

Lockner	0	0	1	3

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlana Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in gitting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close nce, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel Swartz and Luther have been paced. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mle High Harry" has his machine in he fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—both of them new men at motor racing on the board—have been thrown in the same hea with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arraiged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each otier four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 1, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 7, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Third heat, 3 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Special match race, to be announced later.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a 352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"'Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently—Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"
Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

Pelicans Cop Last in Frankville

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 25.—We're at Red Elm Park for three games with the Turtles, and if we don't cop two of them I'll buy you a hat when we get home. Conzelman will be on the mound this afternoon, with Chapman receiving.

We had punk luck the last time we visited Memphis, though it wasn't all luck at that. The Turtles got away with three of the four games. This trip our motto is "Rev-v-venge," and we're out to get it.

WE were trimmed in New Orleans yesterday to the tune of 4 to 2. Rube Evans had Gil Price bested a bit. Rube has everything, is airtight in the pinches and he held us at every stage of the game. There was nothing to it but lose.

It was a freakish game, with all kinds of crazy plays. Spencer's three-bagger got lost in the tall grass, and two men scored before Alperman could find the pill. Then Long fanned with the bases full. Bailey was called out at second, tried to argue it out with Umpire Stockdale and was given a holiday for the rest of the game.

* * *

THE Pelicans have absolutely the worst diamond in the league. The infield is so rough that the basemen are growing one leg longer than the other from standing in the holes. If one picks up a grounder it is the luck of heaven. I'm glad we've finished with Frankville for this round.

Piggy Paige Jumps Texas League Club

AUSTIN, TEX., June 25.—"Piggy" Paige, one of the Austin slabmen with whom Manager George Leidy expected to defeat Houston during the present four-game series, will not appear in battle array. The fans missed Paige from the uniformed ranks of the Senators and one of them asked George about it.

"Paige jumped the club and that's all there is to it," said George. "He cost us $150 and some salary money, threw a couple of games away and then skipped for parts unknown."

The jumping act referred to happened the day before the Senators invaded Houston for the series now in progress.

Austin secured Paige from the Nashville club of the Southern League. He reported just before the Senators left home for their swing through the southern wing of the circuit.

Leidy has asked President Allen, of the Texas League, to have Paige suspended for jumping a contract.

Louisiana Governor Bars Prize Fighting

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—"There will be no prize fight across the river."

These words from Governor Hall sealed the fate of the twenty-round fight scheduled between Jack Britton and Charley White at the West Side Athletic Club in McDonoughville, Jefferson parish, on July 4.

"That affair has been advertised all over the State as a twenty-round prize fight," the Governor continued. "It is nothing else than a twenty-round knock down and drag out prize fight, and directly in violation of the law. It will not take place."

BURNS LIKELY TO SUFFER FROM CANADIAN FIGHT LAW

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 25.—The charge of manslaughter against Tommy Burns will not be dropped as a result of yesterday's verdict in the Pelky case. The finding of the jury that the bout was a prize fight will give the prosecution a powerful lever against the promoter, and the Canadian law makes the promoter guilty of manslaughter in a fatal prize fight.

GOVERNOR, IN HIS FAREWELL MESSAGE, ASSAILS LABOR UNIONS

New Legislature Is Asked to Provide for a State Highways Commission

Double-Tracking of Railways Owned by the State Is Urged by Brown.

The farewell message of Governor Brown follows:

To the Genera. Assembly:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and unnecessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights for the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet, in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,-000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 20 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great braintrainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,-000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,-500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses besides the burning of one store.

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners, and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation, and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

WARNS OF PERILS OF ANARCHY

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt.

It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law.

Compulsory arbitration should be required and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should be permitted to paralyze the powers of the public. As to the killing in Augusta of the three men, who by their deeds defied the militia, the suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of all and there comes times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Upward of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to inspire confidence and make it the proudest boast to say: "I, too, am a Georgian."—From Governor Brown's Message.

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers: "The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees in 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912, to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess one-tenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz, the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz, those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue; the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and re-elected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as the labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced on all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselces alone. And as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlesly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated.

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce, travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitution of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a self-bridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia shall be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who by their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious plea by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylae in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in Lacedaemon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth, standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law.

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed.

It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say: "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

AMERICANS FIND BETTER CROPS IN EUROPE

U. S. Commissioners Learn Foreigners Possess More Skill Than Farmers at Home.

BY KENYON BUTTERFIELD.
Acting president of the American Commission to investigate European Agricultural Co-operation.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 25.—The marked and cordial hospitality with which the American Commission has been received everywhere on its travels through Europe was reflected again in Berlin. In all countries visited every effort has been made by both Government officials and heads of agricultural institutions to facilitate our work.

Perhaps the one greatest advantage which the trip has brought is the fact that a comparatively large number of men representing diversified interests in the United States have come in contact with the work of European agricultural co-operative institutions and their leaders.

Interest in Agriculture.

I have been much impressed with the deep interest displayed in agriculture as a whole here, both among the Government officials and business men. A similar interest is being awakened in our own country, but in Europe it is very clear and defined. It is based on the conviction that the welfare of the farmers is not a class interest, but a national interest; that the promotion and development of agriculture are essential parts of a national policy.

I also have been impressed with the extent of the political activities and influence of the farming classes in some of the European countries. This, of course, may account in part for the interest the Governments take in agriculture.

Skill Shown in Farming.

Even the most superfluous observation of conditions in Europe cannot fail to impress one with the remarkable skill shown in farming here. For example, the average yield of wheat in Germany is thirty bushels to the acre—more than double that in the United States. In the best farming districts it rises to between forty-five and fifty bushels, and this in a country with a rainfall of only twenty inches a year.

The organization of co-operative institutions in addition to relatively cheap labor probably has had much to do in bringing about this skillful farming. It has given the farmer capital at a low interest and on easy terms as well as the possibility of disposing of his products to advantage. The success of the methods employed are also due partly to the system of agricultural education, and as a consequence to the application of science to practical agriculture.

SOUTH DAKOTA WHEAT CROP 50 POINTS BELOW AVERAGE

CHICAGO, June 25.—B. W. Snow wires from Milibank, S. Dak: "From Jim River to Minnesota line to-day, east half Jim valley fully as bad as west Eight counties are in burnt district, involving 1,100,000 acres. The average condition reported by these counties June 1 was 97 per cent. Their average is now lowered 50 points. There is still some wheat in Brown and Spink counties that good rains now would save for fair yield, being forced in heading at 8 inches high.

"From Clark County east the situation is reversed. Stand is fair and crop green and vigorous. Much of it is perfect in appearance. This includes the eight northeast counties with little above 1,000,000 acres, which will average at least 95 for condition. No drouth damage here, but ground very dry clear to bottom of roots and plant would go to pieces with a few days of hot, windy weather. At best the State will fall much short of last year."

SMALL CHANGE LOOKED FOR IN PRICE OF GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 25.—The Inter Ocean says: "For the present a majority of traders are not looking for much change either way. Unless there is further deterioration in the spring wheat crop, it is the general belief that the buying power will have to increase materially to maintain a higher level.

"Speculators from down State say that corn has been hurt by the hot weather and that it was unfavorable for cultivation; that farmers are not selling freely and country interior elevator stocks have been cleaned out, both of corn and oats. There are so many damage reports coming in on oats that the bulls are lowering their estimates on the crop, and speculators generally are favorable to the buying side on all breaks.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was a good demand for July to-day. Liverpool and the South were good buyers; also spot interests. The selling was very light and scattered. Freeman, Cone, Geerman and Rich were the leading buyers at the opening. Riordan, Schill, Royce, Clearman were leading sellers. Parrot and Cone purchased July.

* * *

Gossip has it that the "long" interest that liquidated cotton yesterday will try to buy it all back on any good reaction, and for this reason the boys were rather friendly to the long side for a turn.

* * *

Friday is July notice day. Nobody seems to have much idea what will happen. It is said that Liverpool will demand the cotton unless differences continue to narrow.

* * *

The buying looks to come from good sources and sentiment is more friendly to the bull side.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas part cloudy to clear; few light local showers. Oklahoma generally clear."

* * *

J. P. Morgan says the trouble in the money market is that legitimate call for capital is greater than the available supply.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map shows partly cloudy to fair weather in the belt; scattered light showers and no change in range of temperatures, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas."

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "The bull has a hunch that cotton will corner itself in the old time way before the summer is done. The bears are convinced that fine weather and a big crop will break up anything that shows any resemblance to an actual cotton corner. With these opposing views as starting points, the talent at will may work out the theory of any ultimate result desired. Hence, the complex ramifications of the present day cotton market.

"There is no getting away from the fact that the weather is very nearly perfect cotton growing weather. The Government mentioned the need of rain in some sections, but the temperatures are right and it is hardly probable that the plant is actually suffering for moisture over any considerable area. Consequently, those people who say they believe the present day condition of the crop to be the best on record at this time of the year are referred to by their friends the enemy, as 'enthusiasts,' but no stronger terms are used. On the other hand when other people assert that the plant is smaller than is normally the case and that the season promises some important developments in the way of boll weevil activity, nobody takes side with them other than to protest that favorable weather should soon bring the plant up to standard size and that the farmers, through Government assistance, should now know how best to combat the ravages of the insect.

Condition of Cotton Shows Increase

MEMPHIS, June 25.—Reports of June 10th date showed a condition of 81.2. It is evident, therefore, that all the improvement for the month took place during the first two weeks. This was due to the fact that rains in that first period gave the Eastern States the desired stands and that elsewhere the ground was put into good cultivation. Nothing appears to have been added to either condition since and as the growth of the plant has not been generally rapid no gain above normal progress for the season is shown.

At this date last year this bureau's report was 80.1 per cent as compared with the official report to June 25 of 80.4

J. E. Turner's condition report through Miller & Comer shows the following results on the condition of cotton as of June 22 as 81.3, compared to normal using government's basis as of May 25:

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

Wall Street Caught in "Whipsaw" and Badly Punished by Big Professionals.

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was considerable commission house buying at the opening of the cotton market today, and first prices were 2 to 9 points higher than Tuesday's final. Weather advices reported a lack of rain over the Western belt. Liverpool cables failed to make a strong showing at the opening, but quickly gained strength and closed with a sharp advance.

Interest was more plainly centered on new crops, which caused considerable strength in every option on the list. July and August, however, only opened 2 to 3 points higher. After the call new crops advanced still further, exercising a bullish influence upon old positions, with the results of July jumping 14 points over the opening, to 11.15, and August 13 points to 11.05.

Liverpool was reported a seller of January, but purchased July. Spot houses also bought July and August. The South was booked as a good buyer. Selling was scattered with very little for sale and the demand good. The ring was thought to be short and it took very little buying to put the market up.

The map indicates general rains in the belt in about 6 days, proceeded by moderate heat spell in the Northern quarter.

During the forenoon the market was inflexible with prices fluctuating narrowly, but firmly maintained at the early high point.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.13; August, 12.04; October, 11.55; January, 11.48.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.48; August, 12.15; October, 11.61; January, 11.63.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Liverpool shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 1 point advance. Futures were as due. The advance yesterday of 1-16 to 12⅝ for middling in spot here and the continued high prices for July show that bullish conditions and control for the near future are at work and exercise a sustaining effect on new crops. July in New York advanced this morning 20 points and carried new crops here to 11.66. Sellers were scarce, realizing the bullish advantage at present and fearing the possibility of a low July bureau report to stop progress in the Atlantic States not being up to expectations.

The Wall Street Journal in a review of the general situation says: "The gentlemen as a result in industrial circles is that as a result of developments past and pending, a trade reaction is not far off."

The map shows partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, mostly light. Range of temperatures unchanged, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas. Indications are stationary conditions, but the map shows an important pressure in the distribution according to which general rains are likely to come on the belt in about a week, preceded, as usual, by a short spell of heat, which, from present indications, will be of only moderate intensity and confined principally to the northwestern quarter of the belt.

Trading was quiet and settled around 11.62 for October and December. The larger receipts at interior towns for the half week, 4,965 against 3,742 last year, sustains the claim that interior holdings are larger than last year, but the high July prices and large shipments show that the cotton is either already engaged or sold at very full prices.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris Rothschold & Co.: "We continue to be friendly to cotton."

Hayden Stone & Co.: "As the market is easily influenced by any unfavorable news the need of rain over a large central area will be a factor for the moment."

Logan & Bryan: "Would take advantage of reactions to make moderate purchase."

STOCKS DULL BUT FIRM ENTIRE DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 25—A confused appearance obtained in the stock list at the opening of the market to-day and prices showed a division of sentiment. Trading was fairly active in United States Steel common and Union Pacific, the former losing ⅝ and the latter, after beginning ¼ lower, making a net gain of ⅜. Amalgamated Coner was ⅝ lower, but subsequently rallied fractionally. American Can was under pressure as the result of the unfavorable bond showing it had made and shaded.

Atchison lost ⅛. Canadian Pacific at the outset was ¼ higher, but subsequently increased this to ¾. Chesapeake and Ohio was again weak, declining ¾. Among the other advances were Utah Copper ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ⅛, Norfolk and Western ¼, Mexican Petroleum 1, Lehigh Valley ¼, American Car and Foundry ⅛. New York Central lost ⅛.

The curb was steady.

Sentiment in London was cheerful. Americans in the London market was steady above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was harder on earnings. Other foreigners on the London Exchange were irregular.

A wavering tendency developed after the first half hour, and several of the leading issues recorded fractional losses. Chesapeake and Ohio declined over 2 points to 53¼, and Amalgamated Copper yielded 1 point. Union Pacific lost a good part of its early gain with Steel, Can and Lehigh Valley. Southern Pacific advanced 1¼ to 96⅛. At 1:46 Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was off ⅜.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—Rains west of the river may interfere somewhat with harvesting, but are certainly timely in the spring wheat country. We are likely to have a lower opening, but do not look for any big decline.

Corn—The weather is perfect for growing crop, which has a tendency to curtail new speculative buying.

Oats—Market looks lower with other grains, but there is a stronger feeling regarding the values of oats than prevails in corn, based on the belief that a great deal of damage has been done which can not be repaired.

Provisions are liable to have a setback.

BULLISH ADVICES PUT CEREALS UP

Early Drop Is Quickly Recovered When Shorts Turn Buyers. Weather Favorable.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The crop killer who has been in the spring wheat country will now be obliged to turn his attention to other factors than dry weather, as the entire country was visited with a thorough wetting down during the past 24 hours and this was reflected by the loss of ⅝ to ¾ in the wheat market at Chicago early this morning. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago at 280 cars, but those at Winnipeg were less than half for the same time in 1912.

There was a weak feeling in the wheat market at Liverpool, owing to favorable weather conditions abroad.

Corn was ¼ to ½ cent lower under favorable weather conditions and oats were off ¼ to ⅜.

Provisions were 2½ cents lower early in sympathy with the decline of 5 cents in the price of hogs at the yards.

Good Time to Cull Out the Weaklings From Your Flock

Some Fine Pointers Regarding the Culling Out of Your Chickens. Suggestions Worth Lots to You.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

It is not the season of the year when we are doing our regular mating for breeding; it is a little too late, but it is a good time to do culling nevertheless. It is a good time to cull the hens. You will by this time, no doubt, have noticed that some of your pullets have not been laying regularly during this the great laying period of their lives. They may be laying small eggs or ill shaped ones all the time and that, too, in irregular numbers. It is a good plan and a good time to weed that kind out. Market them right now when the prices are good, and before they moult. Sometimes the breeder of exhibition stock is so anxious to perpetuate certain fancy traits that he is willing to forego short laying and things of that kind, but the utility man con not stand any such foolishness. He must have strength, vigor and good supply of eggs or it should go to the pot without delay. A good hen is expected to lay in a year about five times her weight in eggs. Professor Jordon, of the New York Experiment Station, has well put it, when he says: "Did you ever stop to note the difference in the production of the little Leghorn hen and the small Jersey cow? The Leghorn hen weighing 3½ pounds will lay 200 eggs weighing 25 pounds; the Jersey cow weighing 1,000 pounds will produce about 7,000 pounds of milk." He states "that if you will take the dry matter of the hen and compare it with the dry matter of the eggs she produces in a year, there will be 5½ times as much dry matter in the eggs as in her body. On the other hand, compare the dry matter in the cow's body to that of the milk that she produces and it will be as 1 to 2.9." In other words, the hen does twice as well as the cow. It is this high standing of the hen in mind that we must aim to keep our standard of utility up to.

In looking over your fully developed laying pullets if you see any that are small in the head for the size of the body, or has a slim, long beak, cull it out. It shows a weakness that should not be tolerated in a healthy flock. Those with the thin necks or pinched tails and narrow across the breast should go, too. Anything that shows a tendency to weakness. You can soon learn to detect these things if you will look your stock over carefully with that end in view. You will say that these things should be detected when the pens are first mated early in the spring, but at that time you can not tell all of them as well as you can after they have had a period of laying and begin to let down on their weak points. That is the reason that this is the very best time to do the culling. The males should be looked over for the same faults and those that do not measure up to the best that can be expected should be let go to the block rather than feeding them all the season for next year's use. The very strong and robust should not be disposed of at any price; keep them. Turning to the youngsters that are coming up watch them as they are developing to get at their weak points. Whenever you detect one in the flock as it grows it is a good plan to mark it with a brush and a little Diamond dye, so that when it gets old enough to eat there will be no trouble to tell it and get it out of the flock as soon as possible. The common points to detect the weak ones by are the drooping of the wings. Not necessarily clear to the ground, but they are not held in place as does a healthy chick have his. You will find that kind often sitting upon the ground while all its mates are out foraging.

It is the last to leave the roost in the morning and the first to get to it at night. The front part of its body is carried low, while in a vigorous one it is carried erect. As the comb begins to develop it should be a bright red and strong and vigorous looking. As we used to say the chicken carries his health certificate on top of his head.

The shanks are a very striking indication of the constitution of the specimen they carry. On the weaking the shanks are slim and bony; almost sunken, as we would call them. Note this fact closely as it is one of the surest indications. When the chicks are quite young you will note a great difference in the eyes. The eyes of the healthy one will be very bright and stand out like shoe buttons, while the weakling will have apparently flat and unimportant eyes.

Any one can soon train themselves to be an expert in the detecting of the weak ones that should come out of the flock, and the sooner they are put on the market the better for the rest of the flock. Of course, this has reference to those that show no sickness but are just not robust.

H. G. HASTINGS & CO.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE have just gotten in a lot of nice, fresh, clean Red Comb Feed. The price for scratch and mash is $2.25 per 100 pounds.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS.

THERE is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree Street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree Street, knows its desirability, and also knows its PRICE, which, as a rule, is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10 to $15 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of any one who contemplates a Peachtree home.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

DeLeon Properties Sold for $40,000

Fulton National Buys and Subdivides. Church to Improve Property?—Echoes of Peachtree Paving.

The sale of the Moise DeLeon properties on Whitehall and South Forsyth Streets was closed Wednesday, the purchaser being the Fulton National Bank, through Dr. W. J. Blalock, president, and the price approximately $40,000. The deal was handled through Andrew Calhoun, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, and the property has been subdivided and placed with C. L. DeFoor and the above agency for resale.

The property is located on the west side of Whitehall Street, north of East Fair Street, where the total frontage is 52 1-3 feet, and on the east side of South Forsyth Street, in the rear of the Whitehall property, where the total frontage is 107 1-2 feet. In the new subdivision are two Whitehall lots 26.16 by 100 to an alley, and the Forsyth lots 21 by 22.5 by 100 feet to an alley.

It will be recalled that certain DeLeon equities were put up for sale before the court house door about two months ago. A Whitehall equity was bid in at $1,500, but Percy H. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, rejected the bid, and at private sale the equity brought $5,000. Wednesday's sale was for the entire properties.

Presbyterian Church Plans.

Members of the property committee of the First Presbyterian Church have a new scheme for disposition of the church's valuable lot on the south side of Marietta Street, near Spring Street. They want the church members to form a corporation and buy in the lot and erect substantial income-bearing improvements. In this way, pointed out by a prominent churchman Wednesday, the church would not be obliged to sell at a sacrifice.

There is still another proposition, in the nature of a cash offer which the property committee is considering. A land developer wants the lot to subdivide.

The congregation owns 99 feet of ground on Marietta Street which [illegible] ago they bought a large lot at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth Streets, where it is planned to put the new church and manse at a total cost of about $100,000. It is the desire of the property committee to go ahead with the erection of the new church irrespective of the sale of the downtown location, and it is probable that a move will be made toward erecting the edifice.

Healey Building Six Stories.

Steel work on the Healey Building has gone six stories and some of the uprights are in place for two more floors. The two monster derricks used to lift the stel are being carried up as the steel work progresses. At first they were located in the basement, but now they are high above the sidewalk and going higher. The Healey Building will soon be as high as the Grant Building to the south, and its seventeen stories will eventually cause it to tower over its neighbor.

Peachtree Paving Needed.

Members of the Board of County Commissioners declared Wednesday that something would be done as soon as possible to repair Peachtree Street from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead. What action would be taken was not stated definitely, but the Commissioners are at work on a plan and expect to announce it soon.

It will be recalled that the Commissioners met recently and agreed to remedy conditions "at once," but that a postponement was later ordered. In the meantime the paving is bad and property owners and travelers are beginning to complain.

Peachtree is used to reach town by all the people in the upper portion of Fulton County and of adjacent counties who do not use Piedmont Avenue or Marietta Street, and the volume of traffic is such that there is always a demand for a traversable thoroughfare. The condition of the street is now almost intolerable, and that is why ready relief is sought. The present paving is several years old, and the opinion is expressed that the commission will soon be obliged to lay entirely new paving.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

The Georgian heartily indorses the greater part of the message. However, there are one or two portions of the message on which The Georgian finds itself unable to agree with Governor Brown.

In discussing some questions, the Governor goes much further than some in his place would care to go—even dare to go.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

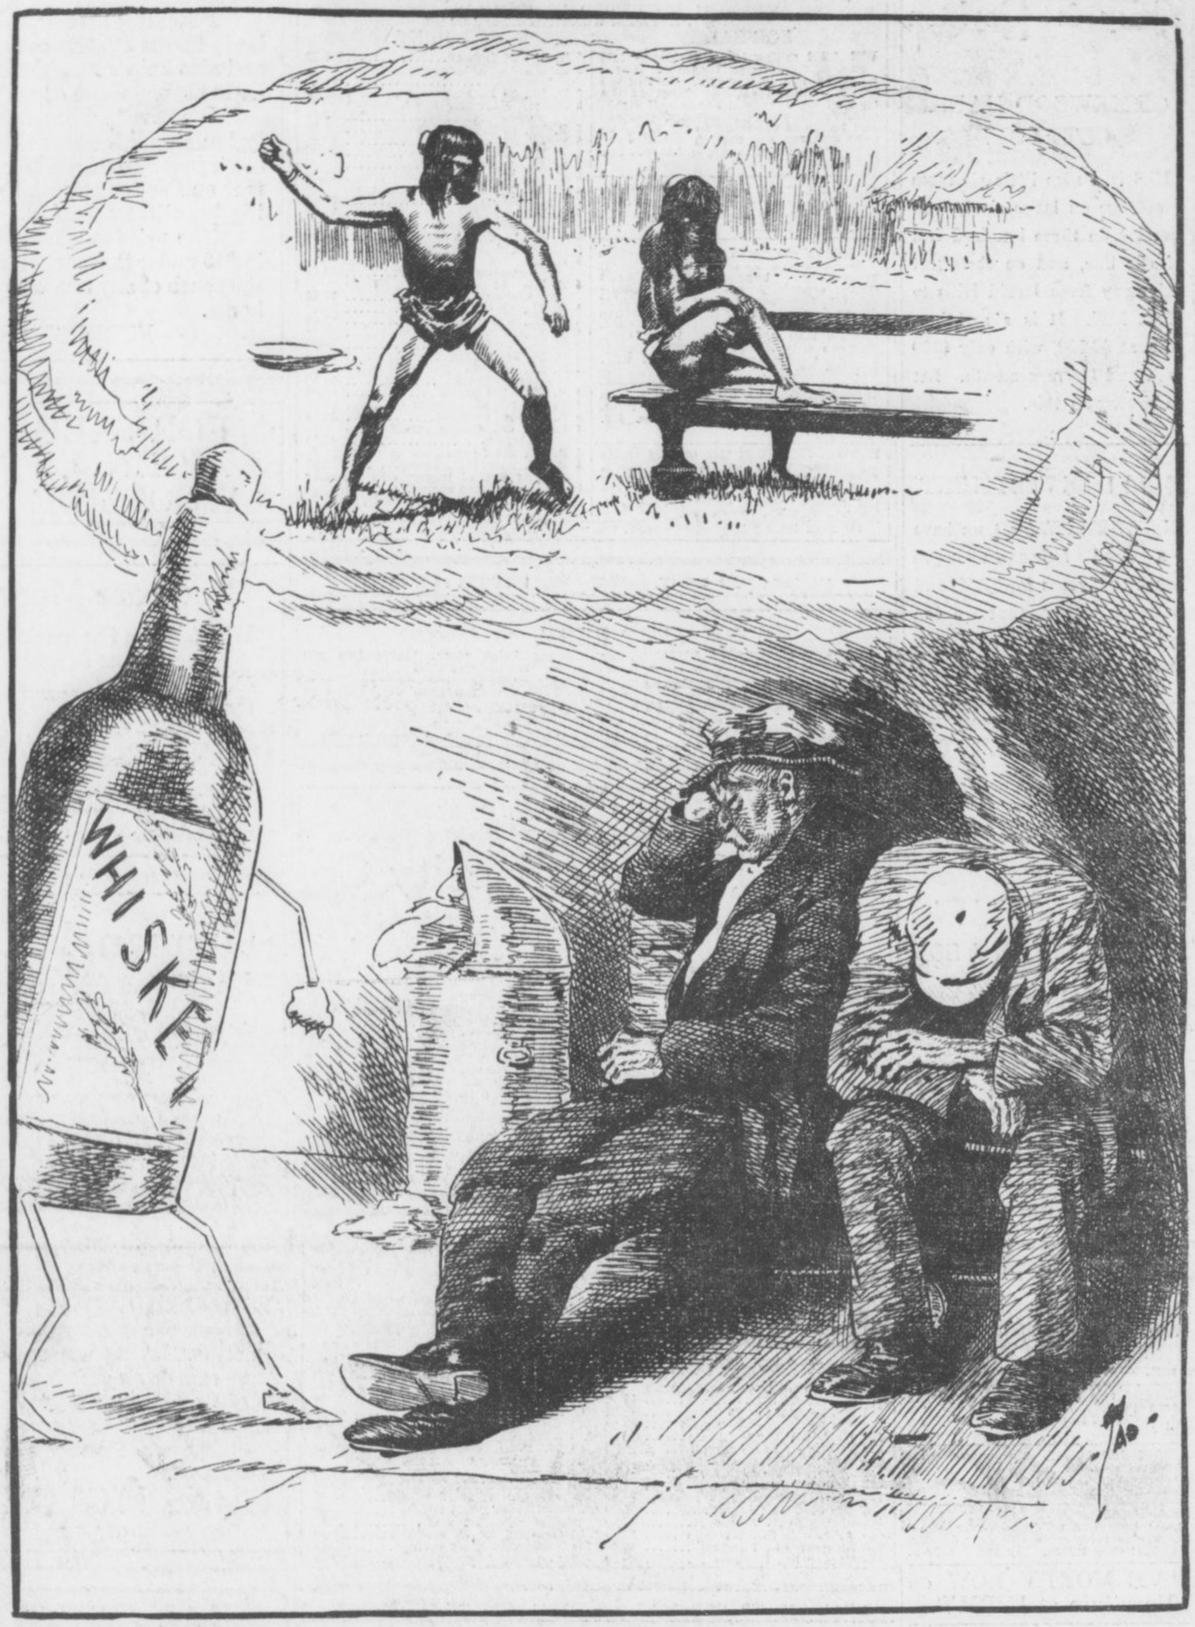
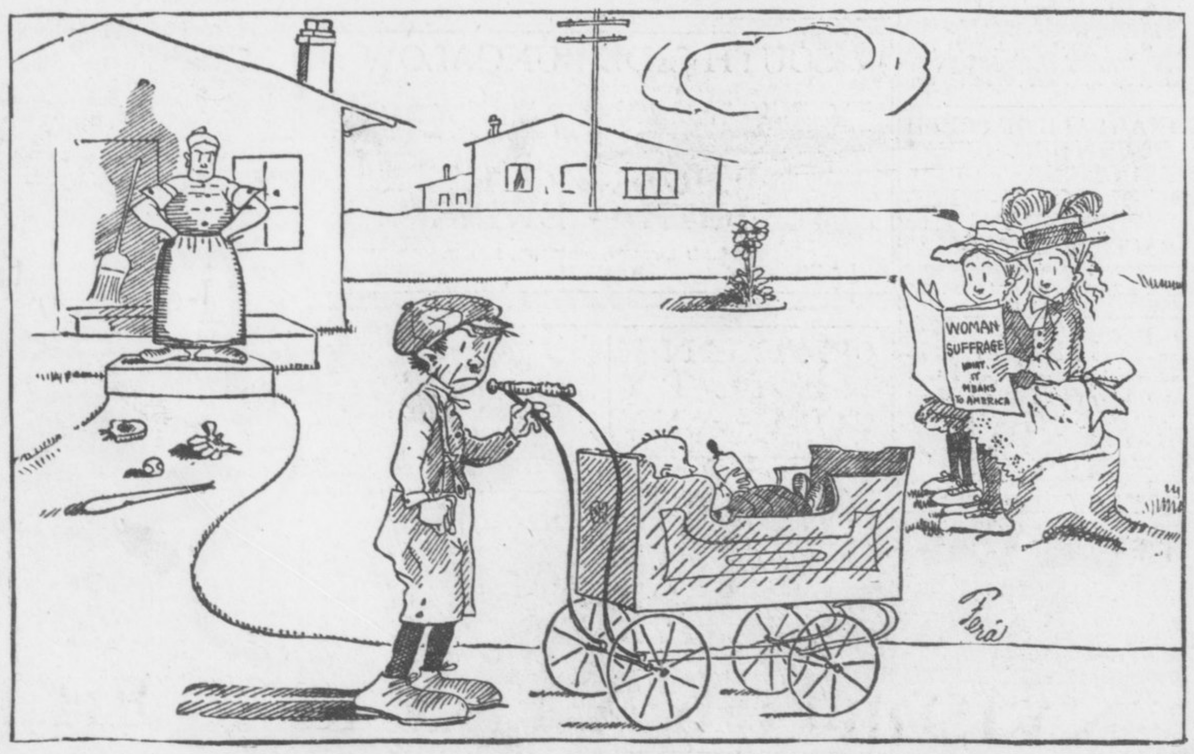
The Hardest Hitter



The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

Whiskey, with its mailed fist, always leaves a mark. The man on the bench NEVER gets a chance to win.

One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

CUYLER WAS FOUND FOR WIFE BY WOMAN

Farmer's Spouse Located Georgia's Famous Cosmopolite After Sleuths Failed.

WAYSIDE, GA., June 25.—It developed to-day that a woman, indigenous to the red hills of Jones County, succeeded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in informing Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemon Cruger Smith-Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and dellitante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the wildest regions of war-torn Mexico to the gayest boulevards of Paris.

The woman is Mrs. D. B. Chiles, a neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman detective of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never sen a sleuth, but she has a well-developed power of reasoning.

Finds Him at Plantation.

Two weeks ago when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County sources the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, she took the rather prosaic method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. Then she went to the Wayside telegraph office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been playing hide-and-seek with officers endeavoring to serve him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months. She had reports that he was hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dellitante wanted to hide, obviousyl the best place for him to secret himself would be his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be anywhere but at home.

Perhaps she didn't reason at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front verdanda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary for Jones County farmers to do.

Couple Discussed Divorce.

In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, her counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Alameda, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No decision was reached at that time, and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Southern Cotton Company to grow long staple cotton on a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know what he did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from officers she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Alameda conference. A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

Later he was traced, according to Mrs. Cuyler's information, through Arizona and then East to New York. She had also been told that he was reported variously in Europe and the Orient.

Mexican Proposes U. S. Protectorate; Troops Eat Snakes

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 25.—The El Paso constitutionalist junta today received a message from Governor Carranza in Coahuila proposing that the United States be asked to establish a protectorate over the Republic of Mexico, pending the permanent restoration of peace.

At the same time word was received here that General Villa's constitutionalist army will be concentrated near Juarez within two days.

Reports received here from United States troops along the border of Sonora State said that Mexican Federals were eating snakes since the insurgent State troops have cut off their food supply.

Cannot Advise King on Suffrage Appeal

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 25.—Mrs. Flora Anna Steele, president of the Women Writers' Suffrage League, has received a letter from the home office signed by the Under Secretary of State, referring to the league's recent letter to the King and Queen. The reply reads.

"Madam—I am directed to inform you that the petition has been referred by the King to the Secretary of State (McKenna) who is unable to advise His Majesty to take action thereon."

Going on Vacation? Leave P. O. Address

Postmaster Hugh McKee announced Tuesday that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address order.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to disposition of mail.

Chicago Noise Peril Shown by Atlantan

CHICAGO, June 25.—The incessant noise of the downtown district of Chicago has a distinct effect on Chicagoans, and they do not know what relaxation means, Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., last night told the conference of allenists and neurologists who are considering ways and means of decreasing degeneracy and dementia.

"The loop is guilty of more and longer continued noise than any similar area in the world," declared Dr. King.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

Moulinais First to Fly Across Baltic

STOCKHOLM, June 25.—For the first time the Baltic Sea was crossed to-day by an aeroplane. Marcel G. Brindejone Des Moulinais, the famous aviator who flew from Paris to St. Petersburg recently, made the flight.

M. Des Moulinais started from Reval and reached Stockholm four hours later. He will leave for Paris via Copenhagen Friday.

Advance Guard Off To Gettysburg Field

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The advance guard of the army of veterans of the war between the States who will attend the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg on the historic field next week left the Reading Terminal this morning.

The advance detachment is going ahead to prepare accommodations and commissary arrangements for the body of the army.

CONLEY PUT ON GRILL STICKS TO STORY

Police Try in Vain to Get Him to Add Materially to His Important Affidavit.

Puzzled by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by Monteen Stover. He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 12 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Stover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clearer Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain this apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the factory foreman. Which statement is believed by the State is not known. What explanation is made by the negro for lying in regard to the matter also is conjectural.

Mary Phagan left her nome on April 26 at about 11:50 o'clock. Living in Bellwood, it is regarded as unlikely that she reached the factory in less than 25 minutes, or at 12:15. Monteen Stover has testified that she visited the factory at about 12:10, which would be just before Mary Phagan had entered the factory, if the times testified to are correct.

Conley, on this account, has been asked if he saw, from his vantage point behind the boxes, Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, and Lemmie Quinn enter at 12:20, why he did not see Mary Phagan when she entered in the interval between the visits of the Stover girl and Lemmie Quinn.

Sticks to His Story.

Another point on which he has been questioned is as to how he could have left his home at the time he has testified and visit all the saloons of which he has told and still meet Frank at Nelson and Forsyth Streets as Frank was on his way to Montag Bros. factory. Frank, according to the statements of members of the Montag firm, was in their building by 10 o'clock. Yet the things that Conley has testified to doing would have taken him until considerably after 10 o'clock, according to a conservative estimate.

He also has been quizzed on other points in his testimony which appear at variance with the facts, but he has stuck steadfastly to the story told in his last affidavit. Solicitor Dorsey has said that he has been unable to shake the negro in any important particular.

Deny Hoke Smith Story.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, made strenuous denial Wednesday that any effort had been made to connect Senator Hoke Smith with the defense. A similar denial was made by Herbert Haas, associated with Mr. Rosser in the defense. Neither was able to say how the rumor had started.

Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, said that the State would be prepared Monday to fight the subpenas duces tecum issued by the lawyers for the defense. It is regarded as improbable, however, that the defense will bring the matter to an issue until the trial begins July 28.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Local thundershowers Wednesday and probably Thursday.

Convict Offers to Sell His Body to The Highest Bidder

Thomas A. McCullough, a convict in the Monroe County camp, wants to sell his own body. He expresses that desire in a letter dated Griffin, Ga., sent for insertion Wednesday in the ad columns of The Georgian.

FOR SALE—To the highest bidder for cash—I offer my body, which is 6 feet high, weighs 175 pounds, is large frame, well proportioned, 40 years of age and Caucasian race.

"I have a sentence of 18 years for killing a negro in Griffin in 1911 and have no prospects, no hopes and no friends, hence, being in bad health, I am asking this proposition. Anyone wishing to consummate a trade, address Thomas A. McCullough, Box 271, Care Monroe County Convict Camp.

Mercury Reaches 91; Showers May Agate Heat This Evening

The usual mark, 91 degrees, was the maximum temperature Wednesday. It was attained shortly before 2 o'clock.

The thermometer reached 84 at 10 o'clock and 88 at noon.

"It is remarkable how the same kind of weather prevails over the entire country," said C. F. VonHerrmann, the Atlanta forecaster. "It is 90 or thereabouts in Atlanta day after day, and the same nearly everywhere else. Although it seems pretty warm here, Atlanta is no hotter than other places."

"Continued fair, with possibly showers late in the afternoon," is the forecast for Thursday.

Augusta Likely Will Win Commission Rule

AUGUSTA, June 25.—Augusta will vote on the commission government plan Saturday. It is believed the movement will win.

Members of the present city administration and their friends do not wish commission government this time. They wanted it last year when not in power. The present anti-administration people did not want it last year.

Urges Segregation Of Stupid Children

CHICAGO, June 25.—"The average stupid child recruits the criminal class when he is brought up among normal children," declared Dr. Henry H. Goddard, of Vineland, N. J., addressing a convention of alienists here.

"They should be segregated and receive a special education."

Pigeon Flies From Rio Janeiro to U. S.

JEANNETTE, PA., June 25.—"Sunny Jim," a noted racing pigeon owned by Stephen Krupa, of this city, has arrived here from Rio Janeiro, Brazil, after 48 days of wandering through the torrid and temperate zones.

No pigeon ever before "homed" from a point below the equator.

Held for Trial for Flogging Daughter

AUGUSTA, June 25.—J. J. Johnson, arrested for cruelty to his 15-year-old daughter, was admitted to bond of $1,000 to appear before the Recorder Friday morning and answer the charge of disorderly conduct.

Warrants charging him with assault with intent to murder and cruelty to a child have been sworn out by officers of the State courts.

Militants Fire Rail Station; Halt Traffic

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, June 25.—Militant suffragettes to-day burned the railway station at Hazelwell, near here, doing considerable damage and blocking traffic for a time.

Suffrage literature in the ruins revealed the identiy of the incendiaries.

American Wins Again In Tennis Title Play

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

WIMBLEDON, ENG., June 25.—Maurice McLoughlin, of California, triumphed again to-day in the play for the world's tennis championship.

Hhe defeated Mavrogordato in the third round.

Governor Brown Attacks Unions

Legislature Gets Down to Work

BROWN ASKS ASSEMBLY FOR VITAL REFORMS

Governor Brown's farewell message to the Legislature appears in full on page 10.

Governor Joseph M. Brown sent in his farewell message to the General Assembly of Georgia immediately after its organization.

The message is written in the Governor's characteristically vigorous and straightforward style, and is almost sensational in its frankness in part, particularly in dealing with the question of union labor.

Governor Brown brought unionism of labor up for a strong arraignment. He cited two labor strikes of recent occurrence—that of the employees of the street car company in Augusta and that of Georgia Railroad employees. Both, he declared, were wholly unjust and precipitated violence directly in opposition to the State laws. He set forth the union label as carrying more authority than the Great Seal of the Commonwealth.

"An Agressive Trust."

The Governor declared that by the tactics it pursued in forcing wage scales up and stamping out competition from non-union men, organized labor had resolved itself into the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, selling labor at whatever price it chose and using methods which assumed an anarchistic nature.

The Governor, after touching briefly upon several matters heretofore called to the General Assembly's attention in previous messages, takes up the questions of public highways, double tracking railroads, inheritance taxes, bank examiners, vital statistics and the Ducktown copper mines, in which the State has direct interests.

Highway Commission Urged.

In the matter of good roads the Governor recommends the creation of a Highway Commission; in the matter of double tracking the railroads he recommends that the Railroad Commission be given express authority to go into that matter enhaustively; in the matter of an inheritance tax he repeats his recommendations of 1909; in the matter of bank examiners he recommends that the present number be increased sufficiently to meet the State's needs, and in the matter of vital statistics he recommends that the scope of the Agricultural Department's work be greatly increased.

Switchman Values His Foot at $40,000

A. L. Kirbo, a former Southern Railway switchman, filed a suit for $40,000 against the company Wednesday for the loss of his foot, crushed when he was caught between two cars.

Kirbo said he was standing between two tracks on which the clearance was only twelve inches when cars backing into one of the tracks crushed him against cars on the other track, and that he fell under the moving cars.

Storm Kills Stock In Dalton Section

DALTON, June 25.—Rain, wind and hail did considerable damage to the farm crops in Whitfield County Tuesday afternoon.

Wind blew down a barn on the farm of Amos Loughridge, seriously injuring a mule. A wood house was wrecked on H. P. Stacy's farm. A mule belonging to J. W. Smith was killed by lightning.

Woman Prosecutor Convicts Embezzler

Judge L. S. Roan Wednesday will sentence Oscar A. Donehoo for embezzling $200. The jury returned a verdict of guilty late yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Donehoo, a sister-in-law, who appeared in the role of prosecutor, declared Oscar Donehoo was executor of his father, C. M. Donehoo, and that she was due $200 which she had been unable to get.

Dead in Explosion Likely to Exceed 30

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 25.—The number of missing men in the Huested fire now totals twenty-six. The police at noon said six more men, in addition to these twenty believed to be killed, have not returned to their homes. Seven bodies have been recovered, so that the list of dead in the explosion of yesterday afternoon very likely will exceed thirty.

A number of 45 injured probably will die.

Joyriding Puts End To Bride's Happiness

Shortly after she married W. M. Groves he took to joy riding with fair young neighbors and told them he had secured a divorce from her, according to Mrs. Annie Groves' petition for divorce filed with the Superior Court Wednesday.

She said he was a model young man until after the honeymoon, when he began drinking, treated her cruelly, and finally deserted her.

Wounded Americus Police Chief Dying

AMERIC, June 25.—Chief of Police W. C. Barrows, who was fatally shot and whose assailant was lynched Saturday night, is not expected to live until night. Previous to to-day his condition was considered rather favorable, but during the morning he failed rapidly.

No further trouble in the event of his death is expected.

PRESIDENCY FIGHT HAS STARTLING FINISH

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both its branches at 10 o'clock this morning.

Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was named President of the Senate, and William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, was named Speaker of the House, both without opposition.

The badly mixed and uncertain fight between Anderson and Allen for the Presidency of the Senate was brought to a sudden and spectacular finish soon after the Senate was called to order, when Senator Spinks arose and withdrew Allen's name.

Allen Votes for Rival.

The Senator said Judge Allen had 19 votes, but that he realized his inability to muster more. That was five short of enough to elect, and Allen's name, in the utmost good nature, accordingly was withdrawn.

Judge Allen's name was the first called, and when he voted for Anderson he was generously applauded.

The two Houses were called to order by Secretary of the Senate Charles S. Northen and Clerk of the House John T. Boifeuillet.

William H. Burwell, of Hancock, was named Speaker by acclamation, both of his opponents having withdrawn during the day yesterday.

"Drys" Make Last Attack.

A last-minute effort to shake loose Anderson's strength was made by the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, through its president, the Rev. H. M. Dubose, who addressed a letter to both candidates asking them how they stood on the matter of legislation to perfect the Webb bill in Georgia.

Allen answered that he favored such legislation, unqualifiedly, and, while Anderson was a little more guarded in his reply, it was of an apparently satisfying nature, for little if anything came of the effort to break down the Anderson line-up.

Several Senators, admittedly undecided betwen the Baldwin County man and the Chatham County man, went over to Anderson last night, thus cinching his victory.

Fight Leaves No Scars.

Notwithstanding the red-hotness of this fight, the best of feeling prevails in the Senate to-day, and it seems likely that there will be no scars left to remind Senators unpleasantly of the contest as the session gets under way.

Charles S. Northen and John T. Boifeuillet were renamed Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House, respectively. These two veteran officials have been on their jobs for years, and there was no opposition to either.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth District, was elected President Pro Tem of the Senate. He is a new member of the Legislature, and within the past few days has achieved immense popularity among his colleagues. He generally is looked upon as a fine man for the position.

Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, was elected Speaker Pro Tem. He is an old member and won his fight handily.

An immense crowd thronged the Capitol long before ether House met for business.

Old Floor Leaders Missing.

While the race for the Presidency of the Senate was the only contest that promised to be at all exciting, the galleries were packed nevertheless when the House met. The present Legislature is composed almost entirely of new material, but the impression has gone abroad that it is rather above the average in point of ability.

Outside of Burwell, the new Speaker, and one or two others, none of the old floor leaders of the last Legislature were to be seen in the new.

Many of the veterans were there, but merely as lookers-on. Joe Hill Hall, upon motion of Representative Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was accorded the unusual distinction of the freedom of the floor during the sessions by unanimous vote. This was a genuine tribute to his popularity.

After both Houses had been organized Governor Brown's interesting farewell message was delivered to the General Assembly.

Burwell's Speech Marks House Opening.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Secretary Boifeuillet called the House to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, chaplain of the House. This was followed by the administering of the oath to each member by Chief Justice W. H. Fish.

A large crowd witnessed the opening of the 50-day session. The galleries were filled.

Long before the opening hour the House chamber was filled with a good-humored crowd of legislators. With the Speakership settled by the withdrawal of Sheppard and Hardeman, members of the House found themselves devoid of anything to cause excitement. For a few minutes the lobbyists forgot their lobbying and the only thing to indicate that it was a political gathering was the soliciting of votes of the various candidates for the smaller offices.

Standing Room Only.

By 10:30 o'clock standing room in the House was at a premium. Every seat was taken, while the crowd lined the walls.

During the administering of the oath the lobbyists returned to their natural state, and the buttonholing began again.

Election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, as Speaker of the House was a somewhat quiet affair. No name was offered in opposition, while a score of Representatives were on their feet to second his nomination by L. R. Akin, of Glenn County, as Speaker. Harris, of Washington; J. J. Slade, of Muscogee; Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, and Adams, of Hall, were the first men to spring to their feet.

Burwell Without Opposition.

The roll call showed 170 votes for Burwell. Temporary Chairman Boifeuillet appointed Burwell's three rivals for the Speakership to escort him to the rostrum. They were Hardeman, Fulibright and Sheppard.

Great applause greeted their procedure down the hall with him. The appointment of his rivals as an escort caused a ripple of merriment to pass around the House.

Applause greeted Speaker Burwell's address throughout.

Minter Wimberly, of Bibb, placed in nomination John T. Boifeuillet as Clerk of the House, referring to him as the "Golden hearted gentleman from Bibb," and the "handsomest man in Georgia." For fifteen minutes members of the House indulged in the making of complimentary speeches extolling the virtues and manyl pulchritude of Boifeuillet, whose intimate friends affectionately call him "John Bullyfoot," and who has been Clerk of the House since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. No name was offered in opposition to Boifeuillet.

Tax Reform Urged.

Burwell, in assuming the Speakership, urged tax reforms, saying, among other things:

"There are, with me, no scars to heal or enemies to pulish; and I sincerely trust that you can and will reciprocate the feelings of sincere personal regard and friendship that I entertain for every member of this House.

"For the past several years since the limitation of 5 mills was wisely placed upon the taxing power of the General Assembly, appropriations have been from time to time increased beyond the revenues of the State until to-day we find a deficit in our State Treasury which the honor and integrity of the State demands we should correct.

"To do this, and to do it wisely, will require our best thought and highest patriotism. In its consideration we should on the one hand keep in mind the demands and needs of the State and her various institutions, and with liberal justice provide for all, in order that the dignity of the State may be preserved and her institutions fostered, protected and developed; but, on the other hand, I can but beg you remember the present condition of our people.

Taxes High Enough.

"Let me assure you I am no pessimist and I fully realize and appreciate that Georgia is rich and prosperous in the possession of boundless natural resources, more varied perhaps than any of her sister States, and that her basic credit is well founded and established beyond the thought of criticism; yet it is a manifest fact to all in close touch with our constituency that the crop conditions of the past two years have placed unusual burdens upon our people and there is no business or interest in Georgia, whether farmer, merchant, banker, manufacturer, laborer or man of the professions, which has not felt its serious consequences.

"Therefore, to lay additional burdens upon our people at this time will be disastrous and unwise, and I sincerely trust that in providing for this deficit in the treasury you will find other means than that of increase in the various taxes of the State.

"We will be called upon to correct the present evils in our taxing system, a system which is now so antiquated, in many instances so inadequate and so unjust, and to correct these evils in such manner as will equalize the burdens of taxation and adjust the present inequities and inequalities of our law, offers to us the highest opportunity for the exercise of wise statesmanship and real service to the State."

INHERITANCE TAX BILL FOR SENATE

Miller's Measure Levies on Bequests Exceeding $10,000—6 Per Cent on $1,000,000.

An inheritance tax bill levying on all legacies and bequests exceeding $10,000 will be introduced in the Senate Wednesday afternoon by Senator B. S. Miller, of the Twenty-fourth District. The proposed tax ranges from 1 per cent on estate of $10,000 to 6 per cent on estates of more than $1,000,000.

The bill is modeled after the New York and Illinois laws. Its most important provisions are as follows:

A tax of 1 per cent on estates between $10,000 and $50,000; 2 per cent between $50,000 and $100,000; 3 per cent between $100,000 and $250,000; 4 per cent between $250,000 and $500,000; 5 par cent between $500,000 and $1,000,000; 6 per cent on estates exceeding $1,000,000.

No tax shall be levied when the estate does not exceed $10,000. All inheritance taxes are due at death of decedent. If a legacy is divided into two or more parts, the tax shall be levied and collected on every state and interest separately.

All administrators, executors and others in charge of estates must file an inventory with the ordinary of the county within three months after the death of the decedent.

In the event of failure to provide such an inventory, he shall be liable to a fine of $1,000.

U. S. Clerks Swim to Jobs in Washington

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The newest way to go to work in Washington is to swim. This is the way young United States clerks work it:

They leave their homes in a bathing suit, and on reaching the Potomac dive and strike out diagonally across the river. The nearest boathouse is about a mile, and on reaching it they change their bathing suits for their street clothes. After work they repair to the boathouse, change their clothes, don their bathing suits and swim back home.

Fly Is Acquitted as Carrier of Paralysis

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Prof. William B. Herms, noted parasitologist of the University of California and deadly foe of the fly, has refuted the declaration of Dr. Roseneau of Harvard that flies transmit the germs of infantile paralysis.

Fifteen thousand flies were used in the experiments of the university savants and the lives of thirteen monkeys were sacrificed.

Brunswick to Have New Evening Daily

BRUNSWICK, June 25.—A new evening daily will be launched in this city July 1, to be known as The Brunswick Evening Banner.

The principal incorporators are L. P. Artman and E. G. Laird, both of whom will be actively connected with the paper. The editorial department will be conducted by Fred L. Mathews, formerly of The Key West Journal.

Mrs. Champ Clark to be July 4th Orator

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Mrs. Champ Clark will be the orator of the day at the Fourth of July exercises to be held at Harrodsburg, Ky.

The exercises will be under the auspices of the Jane MacFee Chapter of the D. A. R., of which Mrs. Clark is a member and which is named for a revolutionary heroine, who is one of her ancestors.

Mrs. Catt Smoothes Suffrage Camp Row

BUDAPEST, June 25.—A threatened controversy among the delegates to the Congress of the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance over a resolution attacking the militant suffragettes was narrowly averted by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the organization.

Mrs. Catt persuaded the delegates to ignore the resolution.

PRISONER ADMITS KIRKLAND THEFTS

Alleged Coast Line Train Bandits Escape From the Roundabout Swamp—Hunt Abandoned.

WAYCROSS, June 25.—A full confession, telling of robberies of numerous stores in the vicinity of Kirkland and of other offenses, has been made by Edgar Carver, the 22-year-old man arrested last week in connection with the freight train robberies on the Atlantic Coast Line.

The parties implicated made their escape and hid in Roundabout swamp, but came out yesterday. Coast Line officers have been unable to connect any of them directly with the train robberies and are therefore unable to push the case. It is claimed that Coffee County officers have given up the hunt also, although opportunity of getting the Solomons and Register has presented itself frequently.

Judge T. A. Parker, of the Waycross Circuit, to-day was informed of this condition, but it is not known what action he will take.

International Board Bryan Peace Feature

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Further details of the Bryan peace proposal have been made public. The points of dispute between the United States and any other nation shall be investigated by an international commission.

President Wilson proposes that the joint commission be composed of five members, one from each nation to the dispute, one to be chosen by each of these nations from the citizens of another nation, and the fifth member of the commission to be agreed upon by the two Governments.

Eighteen nations have accepted the proposal.

Works 9,000 Hours on Freak Dresser

LONG BEACH, June 25.—Having worked 9,000 hours on a beautiful dresser, which he fashioned from 240 different kinds of wood, B. Fisher has placed his finished work on exhibition.

The 9,000 hours of work were divided into 900 days, 10 hours a day being the schedule.

There are 324 separate pieces of wood in the top of the dresser, 1,000 in each drawer front and 309 in each draw handle.

Reply of U. S. Will 'Satisfy' Japanese

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The information was given by an official close to the administration that the negotiations between Japan and the United States on the California land law had reached a point from which "there would be no further difficulty."

The intimation was made that the forthcoming reply of the Secretary of State to the last Japanese note would be "satisfactory to Japan."

Night Session for Lovett's Lobby Tale

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Overman lobby investigating committee will hold a special session to-night to hear the testimony of Judge Robert Scott Lovett, head of the Union Pacific Railroad, who alleges to have been approached by persons claiming to have influence with the Department of Justice.

Senator Overman, chairman, hopes to finish taking Judge Lovett's testimony in one session.

to Mrs. Chiles' information, on the birthday of Telemon Cuyler, Jr., the five-year-old son of the torn pair, a package of presents was received at the California home of the mother. It was addressed in Cuyler's handwriting and postmarked San Francisco. Wayside people say that Cuyler has been at his mother's plantation for at least three weeks.

How much longer he has been there they do not know. Since his return he has been leading the life of a recluse. On his former visits to his Jones County place he made daily trips to the Wayside Station and showed considerable interest in discussions, so universal on the porches of rural general stores.

Cuyler is taking the news of the proceedings with the utmost nonchalance. He apparently is in no hurry to decide on the exact nature of his action in the matter.

"The affair is very complex," he says, "and very interesting, too, no doubt," he added as an afterthought.

"I may come to Atlanta in a few weeks to consult my counsel. I hardly know exactly when. In the meantime, I am very busy here. Our farming is quite extensive and I am preparing to build a new house. In fact, I have drawn the plans myself and will superintend the construction. Then the fish are biting splendidly now and I spend an hour or so each day with my rod. My days are thus rather completely employed, and this matter's coming up may alter my present plans. As I said before, it has many sides. It is extremely complex, and interesting."

DeLeon Properties Sold for $40,000

Fulton National Buys and Subdivides. Church to Improve Property?—Echoes of Peachtree Paving.

The sale of the Moise DeLeon properties on Whitehall and South Forsyth Streets was closed Wednesday, the purchaser being the Fulton National Bank, through Dr. W. J. Blalock, president, and the price approximately $40,000. The deal was handled through Andrew Calhoun, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, and the property has been subdivided and placed with C. L. DeFoor and the above agency for resale.

The property is located on the west side of Whitehall Street, north of East Fair Street, where the total frontage is 52 1-3 feet, and on the east side of South Forsyth Street, in the rear of the Whitehall property, where the total frontage is 107 1-2 feet. In the new subdivision are two Whitehall lots 26.16 by 100 to an alley, and the Forsyth lots 21 by 22.5 by 100 feet to an alley.

It will be recalled that certain DeLeon equities were put up for sale before the court house door about two months ago. A Whitehall equity was bid in at $1,500, but Percy H. Adams, referee in bankruptcy, rejected the bid, and at private sale the equity brought $5,000. Wednesday's sale was for the entire properties.

Presbyterian Church Plans.

Members of the property committee of the First Presbyterian Church have a new scheme for disposition of the church's valuable lot on the south side of Marietta Street, near Spring Street. They want the church members to form a corporation and buy in the lot and erect substantial income-bearing improvements. In this way, pointed out by a prominent churchman Wednesday, the church would not be obliged to sell at a sacrifice.

There is still another proposition, in the nature of a cash offer which the property committee is considering. A land developer wants the lot to subdivide.

The congregation owns 90 feet of frontage on Marietta Street which has been held at $180,000. Some time ago they bought a large lot at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth Streets, where it is planned to put the new church and manse at a total cost of about $100,000. It is the desire of the property committee to go ahead with the erection of the new church irrespective of the sale of the downtown location, and it is probable that a move will be made toward erecting the edifice.

Healey Building Six Stories.

Steel work on the Healey Building has gone six stories and some of the uprights are in place for two more floors. The two monster derricks used to lift the stel are being carried up as the steel work progresses. At first they were located in the basement, but now they are high above the sidewalk and going higher. The Healey Building will soon be as high as the Grant Building to the south, and its seventeen stories will eventually cause it to tower over its neighbor.

Tennessee Military School Hit by Fire

KNOXVILLE, June 25.—The buildings of the Tennessee Military Institute at Sweetwater were threatened with destruction in a fire that started early to-day. The buildings were at the mercy of the flames because the town of Sweetwater has no fire protection.

The loss will exceed $75,000.

ROME BANK SUED; $180,000 SOUGHT

Receivers of Insurance Company Plaintiffs in Litigation Involving Certificates of Deposit.

ROME, June 25.—Suit for $180,000 was filed to-day against the American Bank and Trust Company, its successor, the State Bank of Rome; J. W. Curry, J. C. Porter, C. R. Porter, R. W. Graves, J. E. Dean and Fred Averett, by R. A. Denny, E. W. Butler and E. K. Scott, receivers of the Rome Insurance Company.

The suit is based upon dealings in connection with a renewal contract alleged to have been deposited as collateral security with the bank and in return for which certificates of deposit to the amount of $180,000 were issued President Corput, of the bank, declared to-day:

"I do not wish to try the issue in the public print and won't have a thing to say until it is explained in court."

Masterpiece, Lost For Ages, Unearthed

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Carlo Dolci's masterpiece "Salome" with the head of John the Baptist, missing for centuries from the galleries of the old world, is hanging in Memorial Hall here.

The discovery has just been made through the restoration of the painting by Pasquale Farina. For nine years this painting of the greatest artist of his period, depicting one of the famous scenes of sacred history, has hung a dim and dingy, paint covered nondescript entitled "Youth and Love," by Carlo Dolci.

Fishhook Pickpocket Trap Snares Trapper

WINDSOR, MASS., June 25.—Sewing several fishhooks in his wallet as a precaution against pickpockets, Albert Smith, a farmer, started to see the circus here. Later he espied a candy stand and plunged his hand into his pocket for the wherewithal. The crook trap worked perfectly.

A surgeon separated Smith from the fishhooks.

Boy Worker Killed By Compressed Air

CAMDEN, N. J., June 25.—Joseph DeFinnie, 18, died here from injuries received when fellow workers in a factory, it is alleged, forced compressed air down his throat through a tube until his abdomen was ruptured.

An investigation is being made.

$100,000 Lead Plant Coming to Atlanta

Work on a $100,000 lead plant, to be erected by the United Lead Company of New York City, at the corner of East and Bishop Streets, will begin within a few weeks under the direction of H. J. Carr and Company, contractors. The company has taken out a charter to do business in Georgia, and the Atlanta branch will be known as the Georgia Lead Works.

The plant will be a steel building 200 feet long. The United Lead Company plans a big business, and it is said the yearly pay roll will exceed $60,000.

Whips Crusader for Attack on Women

BALTIMORE, June 25.—Incensed by a letter which appeared in a local paper to-day, in which William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland maligned the wives, daughters and sons of Baltimore's best known citizens, Robert Lee Ullman, twenty-six years old, invaded the office of the Anti-Saloon League here and dog-whipped and struck Anderson a blow under the left eye and discolored the optic.

Ullman was arrested.

Woman Acquitted Of Slaying Infant

WAYCROSS, June 25.—After remaining out for five hours, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case against Mrs. W. C. Lanier, charged with complicity in the murder of her day-old infant.

Lanier is under a life sentence for the child's death.

That the acquittal of Mrs. W. C. Lanier will react in favor of her husband is the impression here, and it is believed he will be cleared in the event he is given a new trial.

Boys' High '08 Class Holds Banquet Friday

The annual banquet of the class of 1908 of the Boys' High School will be given at Dirand's Cafe Friday night.

Most of the members of the class are living in Atlanta.

Arrangements for the banquet are in charge of Willis Milner, H. G. Bedenfield, William Candler, George Osborne and Paul Carpenter.

PLAN FOR MACON STATION HALTED

Representative Wimberly to Fight Cherry Street Site in Legislature and Courts.

MACON, GA., June 25.—Although Council has awarded the Cherry Street site and agreed to close Cherry Street and Pine Street at Fifth, and the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways have agreed to build a depot subject to these conditions, there is little likelihood that Macon's dream of a union station will be realized in the near future.

Representative Minter Wimberly stated to Council last night that he was opposed to the proposition and would fight it in the Legislature. He is general counsel for the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad. Property owners below Fifth Street have employed counsel and declare that they will resist the plan to erect the depot at Cherry and Fifth Streets, both in the Legislature and in the courts.

Representatives Miller and Fowler are not in sympathy with Mr. Wimberly.

Sweethearts for 18 Years at Last Wed

MOBILE, June 28.—John D. Maxwell, master mechanic of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad at Mobile, and Miss Saveria Ferrara, also of Mobile, were quietly married by Judge Maher, of the Second City Court at Algiers, La., last night.

The couple were old sweethearts, and had planned to marry eighteen years ago, but became estranged. Recently did they decide to carry out the old plans, both having steadfastly remained true to the vow that they would never marry any other.

Pull Teeth of Webb Liquor Shipping Law

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Webb law forbidding interstate shipments of liquor into "dry States" is not a criminal statute and violations of it cannot be prosecuted in United States courts. Attorney General McReynolds so delcared in instructions sent to every United States attorney in the country.

This is the first time the Department of Justice has construed the Webb law which was declared unconstitutional by former President Taft.

'DRYS' DECLARE ANDERSON WILL AID THEM

Pre-Election Statement Assures Prohibitionists of His Help, They Say.

Officials of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League will hold a conference Wednesday night to perfect plans for presenting a bill in the Legislature prohibiting shipments of liquor into the State. An additional bill, or clause, also, will be prepared prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements in Georgia newspapers.

The conference follows fast upon the heels of the election of Randolph Anderson to the presidency of the Senate, which the temperance people regard as a victory inasmuch as Mr. Aanderson has said that, as an individual Senator, he considers such a bill proper legislation. President Anderson further said temperance people point out that he would consider it proper to prohibit the publication of liquor advertisements.

Dr. G. W. Young, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, spokesman for the league Wednesday morning, had the following to say:

Have Anderson "Sewed."

"We regard Mr. Anderson's election as a virtual victory for the temperance cause, for he has practically committed himself to our views by his statements in regard to the Webb bill, as well as that concerning the passage of a bill prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements.

"In other words, we have Mr. Anderson, who has been more or less antagonistic to our cause, practically sewed up in a rag, and we will proceed to push our cause with more vigor than ever.

"We believe the public expressions from the two candidates for the Presidency of the Senate did us far more good than if we had put out a candidate, for then many prohibitionists who favored personally either Mr. Allen, a lukewarm prohibitionist, or Mr. Anderson, antagonistic, would have been disgruntled to such an extent that perfect harmony would not have prevailed in our fight for the bill. We have every hope of getting the bill through.

Both Favored Bill.

The letter of Dr. DuBose, president of the Anti-Saloon League, was sent out by messenger to the two candidates Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Allen replied early in the afternoon saying the legislation met with his approval. The reply of Mr. Anderson was received Tuesday night.

Mr. Anderson said that in view of the enactment of the Webb bill and in consideration of the fact that the fixed present policy of the State is in favor of prohibition, he would, as an individual Senator, consider such a bill proper legislation.

He added that he would not commit himself to a bill he had never seen, nor would he pledge his official action either to the support or to the opposition of any particular measure. He pledged absolute fair and impartial treatment if the bill should be introduced.

'End Seat Hogs' to Receive Heavy Fines

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Washington's "end seat hogs" will soon be amenable to law. Commissioner Rudolph has taken the subject up with the Utilities Commission.

Convictions for refusing to "move up" will probably be punished by a heavy fine. A woman and a baby narrowly escaped death in alighting from a car because a fat man obstructed the passage.

Vatican Grounds Will Be Enlarged

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, June 25.—A plan to enlarge the Vatican grounds by the addition of an adjoining pine woodland, in order to give Pope Pius a larger area for his walks, has been taken up in view of the precarious health of the Pontiff.

The holy see is understood to have opened negotiations for the purchase of the woodland from Prince Torlonia.

Dynamite Expert, Hurt in Blast; Sues

George M. Ash, dynamiter's assistant, filed a suit for $15,000 against the Windsor Lumber Company Wednesday for injuries he claims to have received in a premature explosion of a blast.

He said the company furnished the dynamiters with an inferior quality of the explosive, in which the nitroglycerin had become segregated from the other chemicals making it liable to explode from unnatural causes.

BULLETIN OPENS 50-DAY WAR ON CHAINGANGS

Churches of Georgia Are Allied With Prison Reformers in Great Crusade.

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

GRIM WARNING TO PLOTTERS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 25.—As a warning to all plotters the bodies of twelve Turkish reactionaries hanged yesterday for the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha were allowed to swing upon the gibbet in Bayazid Square 24 hours.

PLAYERS' CLUB LEADERS are enthusiastic over the success of the season, and already are planning future activities. In the picture are Mrs. Frank Owen, on left, and Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, prominent participants in the play presented at the Driving Club in honor of Mrs. T. B. Felder, the president of the Players' Club.

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

'Model' Beats 'Morn'; Chicago Ousts Her

CHICAGO, June 25.—"Asti's Model," tried on the same charge as the one of which Miss "September Morn" was acquitted recently, to-day was found guilty of being "a shock to Chicago's morals." Judge Rooney fined her $7.50 and banished her from show windows.

"Asti's Model" depicts a young woman, nude, seated on a couch gazing into space. Her thick auburn hair falls below her waist. A copy of the painting was displayed to the jury.

Papa Spanks Wedded Daughter; Is Freed

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 25.—Mrs. Mary Brauert, a divorcee, went to the home of her father, Joseph Bokas, and demanded that he give her presents she had given her brother, which the latter had turned over to the father. Papa Bokas got a shingle, drew the astonished Mrs. Brauert across his knees and gave her a sound spanking.

The daughter had the father arrested, but Judge Cull held that he had a right to spank his daughter, even if she were married and twenty-five.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Not Quite Right on Picture Language

A story is told of a couple of Atlanta tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and consequently had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "2" beneath it and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight.

Adroit Answer to Turn Away Wrath

An Atlanta lawyer told this story at one of the clubs the other night. Some time ago, a man fell into an open coal hole, sued for damages, and was awarded a substantial amount. When he received a bill from his lawyer, however, he was stunned again, and as soon as he could get into hustling shape he hastened to see him.

"Your bill is outrageous!" exclaimed the client to the legal one. "It is more than three-fourths of the amount I recovered."

"Quite true," was the calm response of the lawyer, "but you mustn't forget that I furnished the skill and legal learning for the case."

"Yes," excitedly cried the client, "but I furnished the case."

"Oh, as far as that goes," was the scornful reply of the lawyer, "anybody can fall down a coal hole!"

Willing to Learn The Correct Way

Herbert and Helen, both of Atlanta, were sitting on the beach at Tybee in the moonlight when, moved by an impulse Herbert could not resist, he suddenly kissed her.

"Oh, Herbert!" she exclaimed, "that's not right."

"I'm very sorry, Helen," replied Herbert humbly. "I did the best I knew how. Won't you show me the proper way?"

Committee to Pick Mercer President

MACON, June 25.—Judge J. G. McCall, of Quitman, chairman of the trustees, has named a committee to select a new president for Mercer University, to succeed Dr. S. Y. Jameson. The committee comprises Rev. J. J. Bennett, Atlanta; Judge A. D. Freeman, Newnan; E. Y. Mallary, Macon, and N. L. Stapleton, Colquitt.

Among those considered for the presidency are Rev. W. W. Landrum, Louisville; Rev. E. M. Poteat, president of Furman; M. L. Brittain, State School Superintendent; Rev. E. C. Dargan, Macon; Rev. W. L. Pickard, Savannah, and Rev. John Roach Stratton, Baltimore.

OWLS OPEN HOME FOR YANCEY BALL

Court House Attaches Sell Hundreds of Tickets—Contributions Still Are Needed.

The club rooms and dance floor on the roof garden of the Owls' Club have been offered for the Dave Yancey benefit ball Friday night.

Practically every attache of the Sheriff's office and the court house has lent his efforts to boosting the affair, and already hundreds of tickets have been sold. Men will be charged 25 cents for admission. Women will be admitted free of charge.

The proceeds will go toward the Yancey fund to brighten the future of the dead deputy's widow and six children.

Additional subscriptions to this cause are badly needed. Provision for the life of the Yancey family has been but poorly made so far. A plea was issued Wednesday to the thousands of persons who have not yet contributed their mite to do so immediately. A dime, a quarter or a half-dollar is desired from each. The amount is insignificant, yet it means happiness to the stricken family.

Throng Chases Boy Down Busy Streets

Willie Jones, a 17-year-old negro, had nothing on his mind but his cap Wednesday morning as he stood at Five Points. The transformation of his mental state was marvelous, however, when he saw Policeman Helms, of Columbus, Jones' former home, approaching.

Terror seized him and he dashed through a crowd into Marietta Street. Hundreds joined the chase. Excitement ran high until Jones was arrested at Forsyth by Helms.

Jones will be taken to Columbus to answer a charge of theft.

Dr. Jordan's Banquet Nap Ended by Shriek

DENVER, Col., June 25.—Chancellor David Starr Jordan of Stanford University, so firmly believes in peace and quiet that he slept soundly at a banquet in his honor by the Chamber of Commerce. The meeting was held to discuss international peace.

As the assembled gusets began to leave something happened. It was a big black bug that intruded beneath a young woman's skirts. As she let out a shrill feminine yell Dr. Jordan's peace dreams were rudely shattered.

Wife Dances to Death in Husband's Arms

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mrs. Edna Wagner of Brooklyn died from an acute attack of heart disease, brought on by dancing the tango, turkey trot and the one-step for four consecutive hours with her husband at a marathon dance.

More than a thousand couples started. Only five were left at the end of more than four hours. Suddenly Mrs. Wagner fell from her husband's arms to the sidewalk, dead.

HENEY EXPECTED TO BE M'NAB'S SUCCESSOR

Believed Wilson Won't Heed Fact That He's Bull Moose—Retirement of McReynolds Hinted.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—It was stated at the White House to-day as practically certain that Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco prosecutor who convicted Abe Ruef of graft and successfully conducted a number of other important criminal cases, will be placed in charge of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case.

The only obstacle to Heney's appointment as special counsel in this case is a political one. It is admitted that his appointment to take charge of the white slave cases at this time will tremendously help Heney's candidacy for the Senate, and as the prosecutor is a rabid Progressive, it is understood that this course will endanger the Democratic chances in California.

However, as President Wilson is being informed on all sides that Heney is the man to manage the Government side of the case it is probable he will cast aside all politics and appoint the Progressive as special counsel.

The President to-day conferred with Attorney General McReynolds and Representative Kahn, of California, on the Caminetti matter, but neither side would make any statement.

The White House and the Department of Justice said the McNab matter is closed so far as Washington is concerned, and the Government is only interested in obtaining justice, swift and sure, for Diggs and Caminetti.

Rumors that Attorney General McReynolds is about to leave the cabinet have been strengthened by the developments in the Caminetti case.

Leg Bone Transfer Cures Tuberculosis

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 25.—What the physicians said was one of the most sensational operations of modern surgery was performed at a private clinic at a local hospital by Dr. Fred H. Albee of New York. A piece of bone was taken from a man's leg, transferred to his shin, affected by tuberculosis, the result being to correct the curvature and cure the tuberculosis.

The bone was grafted by the use of strands from a kangaroo's tail to the shin.

Mrs. Armor Sees U. S. Without Bars in 1920

Declaring Colonel Theodore Roosevelt would not have sued for libel on the charge of drunkenness had he not read the signs of the times and seen the coming of nation-wide prohibition, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor delivered a stirring address at the First Methodist Church Tuesday night on a "Saloonless Nation in 1920."

Mrs. Armor declared that the temperance organizations of the country have set 1920 as the outside limit for all saloons to be abolished.

'Cure' for Headache Kills in 15 Minutes

NEW YORK, June 25.—Pouch Karchmarsky, 1627 West Fourteenth Street, alias Meyer Borisoff, died at his home fifteen minutes after he had taken a headache powder which has a wide sale. He became sick almost immediately after taking the powder, and died while a physician was preparing an emetic.

The doctor said the powder caused the death.

Farewell Dinner Is Given George Sutton

SEE THAT HEN'S TOE NAILS ARE CUT SHORT

Black Head Hen Is Broiler's Best Mother, Says University Professor.

BERKELEY, Cal., June 25.—If you want fine, vigorous chickens, see that your setting hens have short toe nails and that your roosters are ready for the gong and spoiling for a fight at the drop of the corn.

This is the advice of J. E. Dougherty, professor of agriculture at the University of California, who has just completed an exhaustive study in hen eugenics. The professor does not recommend a manicure artist and boxing instructor as attendants at a poultry farm, but mentions the scrappy cock and the short-toed hen as the best equipped by nature for survival as the fittest and the best product of natural selection.

Further, the hen carries on her head her certificate of health, declares Professor Dougherty. He declares that the black head hen with a short, blunt beak, full eyes, well developed wattles—of bright color, deep broad body and stock legs is the best endowed to scratch for her daily bread and worms and be the mother of the best broilers and squabs.

Healthy chicks must have vigorous parents. So it is urged that only those eggs be set which come from hens known to be of strong vitality. The yearling hen is better than the pullet. She should be of confident, proud bearing, and sleek, well-groomed appearance.

Police Rescue 1 of 2 Abducted Sisters

NEW YORK, June 25.—The police broke into an apartment on the lower East Side and rescued fifteen-year-old Margaret Cacopardi. The authorities believe a band of professional Italian abductors is operating here. Margaret and her sixteen-year-old sister, Josephine, were lured to the flat June 9. Josephine was taken away and Margaret has not seen her since.

At the Children's Society rooms Margaret named a young Italian known as Guiseppe Longo, who was arrested. He refused to tell the police anything.

Net Weaving Called Mate Hunter's Woe

HARTFORD, CONN., June 25.—"The reason so many happy courtships are followed by unhappy marriages is because the young women give too much time to weaving nets and not enough to building cages for men," said Monsignor James Joseph Fox, to graduates of Mount St. Joseph Seminary.

"The spirit of woman suffrage is largely responsible for the widespread decline in morals. Women lavish on dogs the tenderness and care God intended for children."

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me as if there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon measure means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.

The old saying—what is home without a mother—should add "Mother's Friend."

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Manager Dutton's Young Son Presses Nurses Into Service in His Practice Games.

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-massy, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

BRAVES DEATH TO BE NOBLE'S BRIDE

English Girl Weds Sir Joseph Tichborne Despite Threat of Claimant to Estates.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—Miss Denise Greville, whose life was threatened if she married Sir Joseph Tichborne, was wedded to Sir Joseph in Brompton Oratory to-day without incident.

Miss Greville's life was threatened by Theresa Doughty Tichborne, who claimed first to be a daughter of Arthur Orton, claimant of the Tichborne baronetcy and estates. Later she declared herself a daughter of Sir Roger Tichborne, who mysteriously disappeared half a century ago and about whose absence a romantic cloud of mystery had been woven.

Orton, in 1869, claimed to be Roger Tichborne and demanded the title and estates of the twelfth baronet. He came from Australia and the Tichborne family, convinced that Sir Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the Australian claimant. Then came a long and celebrated trial, but Orton's case was nonsuited. He was convicted of perjury and sent to jail for 14 years.

Orton, before he died in 1898, confessed he had been a butcher in London's East End.

The woman who posed as a daughter of Sir Roger and who was arrested yesterday has been remanded until Friday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Krusekopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

FANS, ALSO, MUST OBSERVE SUNDAYS

Recorder Closes "Baseball Parlor" With a Bang—In Class With Movies.

That phase of the Atlanta spirit so pronounced in baseball fans and that causes them to root for the home team as no other set of fans ever rooted must be placed in the ice chest Sundays.

Recorder Nash Broyles so decreed Tuesday afternoon when he ruled that the baseball parlors of "Caller" R. H. King at 9 Viaduct Way will not be permitted to open Sundays. This is the hall in which Atlanta fans assemble to witness the battle by innings flashed by telegraph when the Crackers are scrapping in foreign fields.

The baseball parlor is in the same class as moving picture theaters, penny arcades, and other such amusements, according to the Recorder.

King threw open his parlors for the game last Sunday, and a test case was promptly made against him.

Judge Broyles dismissed the case on the agreement of King to keep his place closed on Sunday.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

WASHINGTON, June 25.—When Mrs. William P. Borland, wife of Representative Borland, of Missouri, met her husband at the Union Station she nearly swooned. For Borland, smiling happily, emerged from the train shed with two chubby, giggling little girls.

The representative informed his wife he had adopted the youngsters at Kansas City when he found they were about to be sent to an orphan asylum.

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

1870 War Grudge Causes 1913 Attack

RIVERSIDE, CAL., June 25.—Still nursing a grudge engendered during the Franco-Prussian war C. A. Randig a German, assaulted D. H. Lague, a Frenchman, in the room of the latter in Bloomington as he slept, because he persisted in calling on Randig's daughter.

OBITUARY.

Mary Frances Ellis, 1-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Ellis, of 180 Grant Street, died at the home Tuesday. The funeral will be held at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Interment at Westview.

Miss Pearl Bertling, 20 years old, died at her home at Chamblee, Ga., Tuesday morning, after a brief illness with typhoid faver. She is survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bertling, and two sisters, Misses Hattie and Marie Bertling. The funeral will be held from the home at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Interment at Chamblee.

The funeral of Mrs. Lula A. Kelley, who died at a private sanitarium Tuesday night, was held from her late home, 100 Wabasn Avenue, Wednesday morning. Mrs. Kelley was 31 years old and is survived by her husband, J. A. Kelley, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Fawver, and six brothers and sisters. Interment at Westview.

The funeral of Joseph T. Peacock, who died Tuesday morning, will be held from the Poole Chapel at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday. Mr. Peacock was 65 years old and is survived by his wife, three sons, O. L., Edgar and Will Peacock, the latter of Columbus, Ohio, and the following brothers: The Rev. E. H. Peacock, of Atlanta; L. J. Peacock, of Lexington, N. C., and Thomas A. Peacock, of Anniston, Ala. Interment at Hollywood.

The funeral of Mrs. Ella L. Gollnick, who died at a private sanitarium Tuesday afternoon, will be held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning from St. Anthony's Church, the Rev. Father Jackson officiating. Mrs. Gollnick was 36 years old, the wife of P. P. Gollnick, proprietor of the Merchants' Printing Company in Marietta Street. She also is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Leola King; her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Henson; two brothers and four sisters. Interment at Westview.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

French President Is Given Great Ovation as He Drives Through Streets of London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Following her custom, Dowager Queen Alexandra drove through the city.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Aerial Courier Takes Dispatches to Poincare.

LONDON, June 25.—Bearing dispatches from the French Government to President Poincare of France, Aviator Slack, a British airman, arrived here from Paris to-day in his aeroplane. The courier made the trip without mishap, beating the regular mail time by many hours.

Bulgars Want Peace Or War to a Finish

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, SERVIA, June 25.—The Servian Government sent another note to St. Petersburg to-day relating to Czar Nicholas' offer to arbitrate the territorial dispute between Servia and Bulgaria.

At the same time dispatches from Sofia reported that Bulgaria would adopt more aggressive measures than have been taken if the Servian note does not accept Russia's offer of arbitration unconditionally.

Skirmishing between the outposts of the Servian and Bulgarian armies south of Uskub again was reported.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Copely Amory, Jr., found the fossils last summer while collecting specimens for the United States Alaskan Museum.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 48-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

PAY ME FOR CURES ONLY

If you have been taking treatment for weeks and months and paying out your hard earned money without being cured, don't you think it is high time to accept DR. HUGHES' GRAND OFFER?

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

My treatment will positively cure or I will make you no charge for the following diseases:

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections, Piles and Fistula and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women.

Newly contracted and chronic Cases of Burning, Itching and Inflammation stopped in 24 hours. I am against high and extortionate fees charged by some physicians and specialists. Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

Atlanta Regiment Will Have "Off Year" With Little Work at Saint Simons Outing.

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

Pope Pius is much distressed by reports of dissension among the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for eacn of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court today when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl" and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us." Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it.

Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE moment Warren entered Helen knew by the set lines of his mouth that something unusual had happened.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay three or four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or she is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Items of Interest

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

Would You Buy a Motor Car Without Ball Bearings?

Or a racing sulky? Or a sewing machine? Or a watch without jewels?

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Co.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

This is only one of the reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter is worth more money than any other typewriter ever made.

We can show you by actual demonstration how you can increase the efficiency of your stenographer and save yourself time and money.

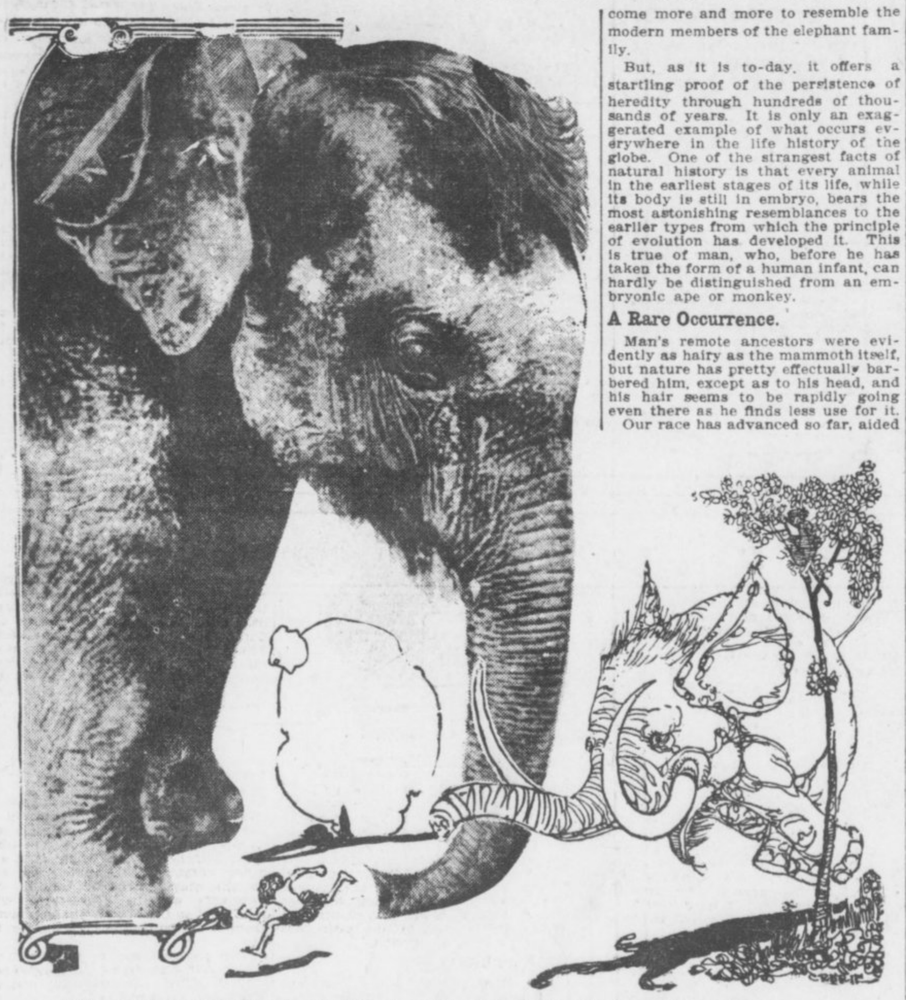
: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.



A Young Sumatran Elephant—Showing the Very Hairy Coat and Large Ear.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice, "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reokon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

"Well, all right; just tell me how I can get the money and I'll try it."

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

One glance was enough. Cain returned to the beating of his horse with redoubled vigor.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of ahe great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke's broad jowls shook from the force with which he snapped his jaws together.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

Write us to-day for our beautifully illustrated booklet, telling all about the freezer; it is ABSOLUTELY FREE—and receive our free trial offer.

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Here is the way Deacon Davis of the Davenport Democrat and Leader tells of the sale and career of Reed:

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

GRANEY TO BE REFEREE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 25.—Eddie Graney, promoter of the Ritchie-Rivers July 4 bout here, will be the third man in the ring when hostilities begin. At a conference the former blacksmith was chosen referee.

UHLAN GOES FAST MILE.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 25.—C. K. G. Billings' gelding Uhlan circled the mile course at North Randell yesterday in 2:04¼. Trotting to a sulky he went the route in 2:03 1-3.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

Hirsig Trades Glenn; After Major Players

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25.—President Hirsig announces he has sold Catcher Harry Glenn, last season with the Vols, to the St. Louis Cardinals for $2,000 and Pitcher Redding.

Glenn was farmed to Akron, Ohio, in the early part of this season, where he has been hitting at a terrific clip. Hirsig claims he has deals pending for a number of players from the major leagues in his efforts to strengthen the sliding Vols.

Racing at Belmont; Only Two-Day Meet

NEW YORK, June 25.—The two days' meet of the United Hunts Racing Association will open this afternoon at Belmont Park Terminal with a large field of entries. The second and closing day of the meet is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

The program is a varied one and embraces both jumping and flat races. Six events are carded for each day, including three flat races, two steeplechases and one hurdle event. The Sportsmen's Steeplechase Dinner Stakes, which is considered to be the most important race of the meet, has a fine field of starters and has aroused much interest. This race was closed by private subscription several weeks ago.

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlanta Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in getting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close race, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel, Swartz and Luther have been placed. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mile High Harry" has his machine in the fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—both of them new men at motor racing on the boards—have been thrown in the same heat with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arranged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each other four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a .352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

HEINE.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:
("————")

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"'Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently—Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"
Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

Crackers Open Memphis Series

Pelicans Cop Last in Frankville

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 25.—We're at Red Elm Park for three games with the Turtles, and if we don't cop two of them I'll buy you a hat when we get home. Conzelman will be on the mound this afternoon, with Chapman receiving.

We had punk luck the last time we visited Memphis, though it wasn't all luck at that. The Turtles got away with three of the four games. This trip our motto is "Rev-v-venge," and we're out to get it.

* * *

WE were trimmed in New Orleans yesterday to the tune of 4 to 2. Rube Evans had Gil Price bested a bit. Rube has everything, is airtight in the pinches and he held us at every stage of the game. There was nothing to it but lose.

It was a freakish game, with all kinds of crazy plays. Spencer's three-bagger got lost in the tall grass, and two men scored before Alperman could find the pill. Then Long fanned with the bases full. Bailey was called out at second, tried to argue it out with Umpire Stockdale and was given a holiday for the rest of the game.

* * *

THE Pelicans have absolutely the worst diamond in the league. The infield is so rough that the basemen are growing one leg longer than the other from standing in the holes. If one picks up a grounder it is the luck of heaven. I'm glad we've finished with Frankville for this round.

Piggy Paige Jumps Texas League Club

AUSTIN, TEX., June 25.—"Piggy" Paige, one of the Austin slabmen with whom Manager George Leidy expected to defeat Houston during the present four-game series, will not appear in battle array. The fans missed Paige from the uniformed ranks of the Senators and one of them asked George about it.

"Paige jumped the club and that's all there is to it," said George. "He cost us $150 and some salary money, threw a couple of games away and then skipped for parts unknown."

The jumping act referred to happened the day before the Senators invaded Houston for the series now in progress.

Austin secured Paige from the Nashville club of the Southern League. He reported just before the Senators left home for their swing through the southern wing of the circuit.

Leidy has asked President Allen, of the Texas League, to have Paige suspended for jumping a contract.

Louisiana Governor Bars Prize Fighting

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—"There will be no prize fight across the river."

These words from Governor Hall sealed the fate of the twenty-round fight scheduled between Jack Britton and Charley White at the West Side Athletic Club in McDonoughville, Jefferson parish, on July 4.

"That affair has been advertised all over the State as a twenty-round prize fight," the Governor continued. "It is nothing else than a twenty-round knock down and drag out prize fight, and directly in violation of the law. It will not take place."

BURNS LIKELY TO SUFFER FROM CANADIAN FIGHT LAW

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 25.—The charge of manslaughter against Tommy Burns will not be dropped as a result of yesterday's verdict in the Pelky case. The finding of the jury that the bout was a prize fight will give the prosecution a powerful lever against the promoter, and the Canadian law makes the promoter guilty of manslaughter in a fatal prize fight.

WARNS OF PERILS OF ANARCHY

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt.

It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law.

Compulsory arbitration should be required and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should be permitted to paralyze the powers of the public. As to the killing in Augusta of the three men, who by their deeds defied the militia, the suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of all and there comes times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Upward of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to inspire confidence and make it the proudest boast to say: "I, too, am a Georgian."—From Governor Brown's Message,

The farewell message of Governor Brown follows:

To the Genera. Assembly:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and unnecessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights for the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 30 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great braintrainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses, besides the burning of one store

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners, and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation, and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers:

"The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees in 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912, to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess one-tenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz. the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz, those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue; the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and reelected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as the labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced on all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselces alone. And as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlesly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated.

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce, travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitutfon of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a self-bridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia shall be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who by their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious pleas by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution, organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend;" (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylæ in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in lacedæmon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members, preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed. It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say: "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

To the candidate in this district having second highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, saddle and bridle complete, valued at $200.

To the candidate in this district having third highest number of votes will be awarded a pretty gold watch, valued at $15.

To the candidate in this district having fourth highest number of votes will be given a silver watch, valued at $7.50.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was considerable commission house buying at the opening of the cotton market to-day, and first prices were 2 to 9 points higher than Tuesday's final. Weather advices reported a lack of rain over the Western belt. Liverpool cables failed to make a strong showing at the opening, but quickly gained strength and closed with a sharp advance.

Interest was more plainly centered on new crops, which caused considerable strength in every option on the list. July and August, however, only opened 2 to 3 points higher. After the call new crops advanced still further, exercising a bullish influence upon old positions, with the results of July jumping 14 points over the opening, to 11.15, and August 13 points to 11.05.

Liverpool was reported a seller of January, but purchased July. Spot houses also bought July and August. The South was booked as a good buyer. Selling was scattered with very little for sale and the demand good. The ring was thought to be short and it took very little buying to put the market up.

The map indicates general rains in the belt in about 6 days, proceeded by moderate heat spell in the Northern quarter.

During the forenoon the market was inflexible with prices fluctuating narrowly, but firmly maintained at the early high point.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.13; August, 12.04; October, 11.55; January, 11.48.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.48; August, 12.15; October, 11.61; January, 11.63.

COTTON GOSSIP

Gossip has it that the "long" interest that liquidated cotton yesterday will try to buy it all back on any good reaction, and for this reason the boys were rather friendly to the long side for a turn.

* * *

Friday is July notice day. Nobody seems to have much idea what will happen. It is said that Liverpool will demand the cotton unless differences continue to narrow.

* * *

The buying looks to come from good sources and sentiment is more friendly to the bull side.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas part cloudy to clear; few light local showers. Oklahoma generally clear."

* * *

J. P. Morgan says the trouble in the money market is that legitimate call for capital is greater than the available supply.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map shows partly cloudy to fair weather in the belt; scattered light showers and no change in range of temperatures, except somewhat warmer in western Arkansas."

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "The bull has a hunch that cotton will corner itself in the old time way before the summer is done. The bears are convinced that fine weather and a big crop will break up anything that shows any resemblance to an actual cotton corner. With these opposing views as starting points, the talent at will may work out the theory of any ultimate result desired. Hence, the complex ramifications of the present day cotton market.

"There is no getting away from the fact that the weather is very nearly perfect cotton growing weather. The Government mentioned the need of rain in some sections, but the temperatures are right and it is hardly probable that the plant is actually suffering for moisture over any considerable area. Consequently, those people who say they believe the present day condition of the crop to be the best on record at this time of the year are referred to by their friends the enemy, as 'enthusiasts,' but no stronger terms are used. On the other hand when other people assert that the plant is smaller than is normally the case and that the season promises some important developments in the way of boll weevil activity, nobody takes side with them other than to protest that favorable weather should soon bring the plant up to standard size and that the farmers, through Government assistance, should now know how best to combat the ravages of the insect.

STOCK MARKET

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 25—A confused appearance obtained in the stock list at the opening of the market to-day and prices showed a division of sentiment. Trading was fairly active in United States Steel common and Union Pacific, the former losing ⅜ and the latter, after beginning ¼ lower, making a net gain of ¾. Amalgamated Coper was ⅝ lower, but subsequently rallied fractionally. American Can was under pressure as the result of the unfavorable bond showing it had made and shaded.

Atchison lost ⅛. Canadian Pacific at the outset was ¼ higher, but subsequently increased this to ¾. Chesapeake and Ohio was again weak, declining ¼. Among the other advances were Utah Copper ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ⅛, Norfolk and Western ¼, Mexican Petroleum 1, Lehigh Valley ¼, American Car and Foundry ⅛. New York Central lost ½.

The curb was steady.

Sentiment in London was cheerful. Americans in the London market was steady above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was harder on earnings. Other foreigners on the London Exchange were irregular.

New Dances Barred and Light Demanded

POMONA, CAL., June 25.—Here are the new rules just passed by the city Council governing dancing in this city:

Taboo—Tango, Texas Tommy, Turkey Trot, Bowery Rag, Coney Island Flip and all other "immodest" dances.

Every part of the dance hall must be brilliantly lighted.

Every dance hall must be supervised by a matron-censor of dance proprieties.

No girl under eighteen may attend any public dance unless accompanied by parent or guardian.

Widener Plans Best Hotel in the World

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Plans for one of the greatest and handsomest hotels in the world are being drawn up under the direction of P. A. B. Widener, who has acquired the Ritz Carlton Hotel and adjacent property.

The plans include a grand court, in which the millionaire intends to display some of his famous art treasures.

Pensacola Ships A $780,000 Cargo

PENSACOLA, June 25.—With 6,610 net tonnage and drawing 31 feet of water, the Iowa, a British steamship of the Gans line, the largest vessel ever to load here, sailed to-day for Bremen and Hamburg.

The total value of the cargo exceeds $780,000. The cargo includes tobacco, cotton, lumber, rosin and turpentine.

Columbus Lineman Killed.

COLUMBUS.—Robert Pierson, a lineman employed by the Columbus Power Company, was killed near LaGrange yesterday afternoon when 20 heavy poles rolled upon him. The body will be taken to Columbia, Ala., his old home, for interment.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 25.—The crop killer who has been in the spring wheat country will now be obliged to turn his attention to other factors than dry weather, as the entire country was visited with a thorough wetting down during the past 24 hours and this was reflected by the loss of ⅝ to ¾ in the wheat market at Chicago early this morning. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago at 280 cars, but those at Winnipeg were less than half for the same time in 1912.

There was a weak feeling in the wheat market at Liverpool, owing to favorable weather conditions abroad.

Corn was ¼ to ½ cent lower under favorable weather conditions and oats were off ¼ to ⅜.

Provisions were 2½ cents lower early in sympathy with the decline of 5 cents in the price of hogs at the yards.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—Rains west of the river may interfere somewhat with harvesting, but are certainly timely in the spring wheat country. We are likely to have a lower opening, but do not look for any big decline.

Corn—The weather is perfect for growing crop, which has a tendency to curtail new speculative buying.

Oats—Market looks lower with other grains, but there is a stronger feeling regarding the values of oats than prevails in corn, based on the belief that a great deal of damage has been done which can not be repaired.

Provisions are liable to have a setback.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 25.—Wheat opened ⅛ to ¼d lower. At 1:30 p. m. the market was ⅛ to ⅜d lower; closed ⅜ to ½d lower.

Corn opened unchanged. At 1:30 p. m. the market was ¼ to ½d lower; closed ¼ to ⅜d lower.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK.

Cattle receipts light; market quiet and unchanged. Hog receipts normal; market steady.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.50; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, 4.00@5.00.

Good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, 4.75@5.50; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, 4.25@4.75.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.25; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, 4.00@4.50; mixed common cows, if fat, 600 to 800, 3.25@4.00; good butcher bulls, if fat, 3.50@4.25.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200 averages, 8.60@8.80; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160 average, 8.40@8.60; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140 average, 8.25@8.50; light pigs, 80 to 100 average, 7.50@7.75; heavy rough hogs, 200 to 250 average, 7.75@8.00.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs; mash and peanut fattened ½c to 1½c under.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris Rothschold & Co.: "We continue to be friendly to cotton."

Hayden Stone & Co.: "As the market is easily influenced by any unfavorable news the need of rain over a large central area will be a factor for the moment."

Logan & Bryan: "Would take advantage of reactions to make moderate purchase."

Goodlake Indicted on Wife Slaying Charge

CHATTANOOGA, June 25.—Chas. W. Goodlake was indicted by the Grand Jury of the Criminal Court of Meigs County for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Bettie Minor Goodlake, at her home at Cottonport several weeks ago.

Hearing of his case was continued until October.

AMERICANS FIND BETTER CROPS IN EUROPE

U. S. Commissioners Learn Foreigners Possess More Skill Than Farmers at Home.

BY KENYON BUTTERFIELD.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 25.—The marked and cordial hospitality with which the American Commission has been received everywhere on its travels through Europe was reflected again in Berlin. In all countries visited every effort has been made by both Government officials and heads of agricultural institutions to facilitate our work.

Perhaps the one greatest advantage which the trip has brought is the fact that a comparatively large number of men representing diversified interests in the United States have come in contact with the work of European agricultural co-operative institutions and their leaders.

Interest in Agriculture.

I have been much impressed with the deep interest displayed in agriculture as a whole here, both among the Government officials and business men. A similar interest is being awakened in our own country, but in Europe it is very clear and defined. It is based on the conviction that the welfare of the farmers is not a class interest, but a national interest; that the promotion and development of agriculture are essential parts of a national policy.

I also have been impressed with the extent of the political activities and influence of the farming classes in some of the European countries. This, of course, may account in part for the interest the Governments take in agriculture.

Skill Shown in Farming.

Even the most superfluous observation of conditions in Europe cannot fail to impress one with the remarkable skill shown in farming here. For example, the average yield of wheat in Germany is thirty bushels to the acre—more than double that in the United States. In the best farming districts it rises to between forty-five and fifty bushels, and this in a country with a rainfall of only twenty inches a year.

The organization of co-operative institutions in addition to relatively cheap labor probably has had much to do in bringing about this skillful farming. It has given the farmer capital at a low interest and on easy terms as well as the possibility of disposing of his products to advantage. The success of the methods employed are also due partly to the system of agricultural education, and as a consequence to the application of science to practical agriculture.

SOUTH DAKOTA WHEAT CROP 50 POINTS BELOW AVERAGE

CHICAGO, June 25.—B. W. Snow wires from Millbank, S. Dak: "From Jim River to Minnesota line to-day, east half Jim valley fully as bad as west Eight counties are in burnt district, involving 1,100,000 acres. The average condition reported by these counties June 1 was 97 per cent. Their average is now lowered 50 points. There is still some wheat in Brown and Spink Counties that good rains now would save for fair yield, being forced in heading at 8 inches high.

"From Clark County east the situation is reversed. Stand is fair and crop green and vigorous. Much of it perfect in appearance. This includes the eight northeast counties with little above 1,000,000 acres, which will average at least 95 for condition. No drouth damage here, but ground very dry clear to bottom of roots and plant would go to pieces with a few days of hot, windy weather. At best the State will fall much short of last year."

SMALL CHANGE LOOKED FOR IN PRICE OF GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 25.—The Inter Ocean says: "For the present a majority of traders are not looking for much change either way. Unless there is further deterioration in the spring wheat crop, it is the general belief that the buying power will have to increase materially to maintain a higher level.

"Speculators from down State say that corn has been hurt by the hot weather and that it was unfavorable for cultivation; that farmers are not selling freely and country interior elevator stocks have been cleaned out, both of corn and oats. There are so many damage reports coming in on oats that the bulls are lowering their estimates on the crop, and speculators generally are favorable to the buying side on all breaks.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

$1,500 Each—Adair & Weinmeister, 219-223 East, Avenue; two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company has leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

A farm tract of 136 acres 3 1-2 miles from Buckhead in North Fulton County has been put on the market at "old farm prices" by the Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. This is one of the largest tracts offered in that section for some months.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

The Georgian heartily indorses the greater part of the message. However, there are one or two portions of the message on which The Georgian finds itself unable to agree with Governor Brown.

In discussing some questions, the Governor goes much further than some in his place would care to go—even dare to go.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

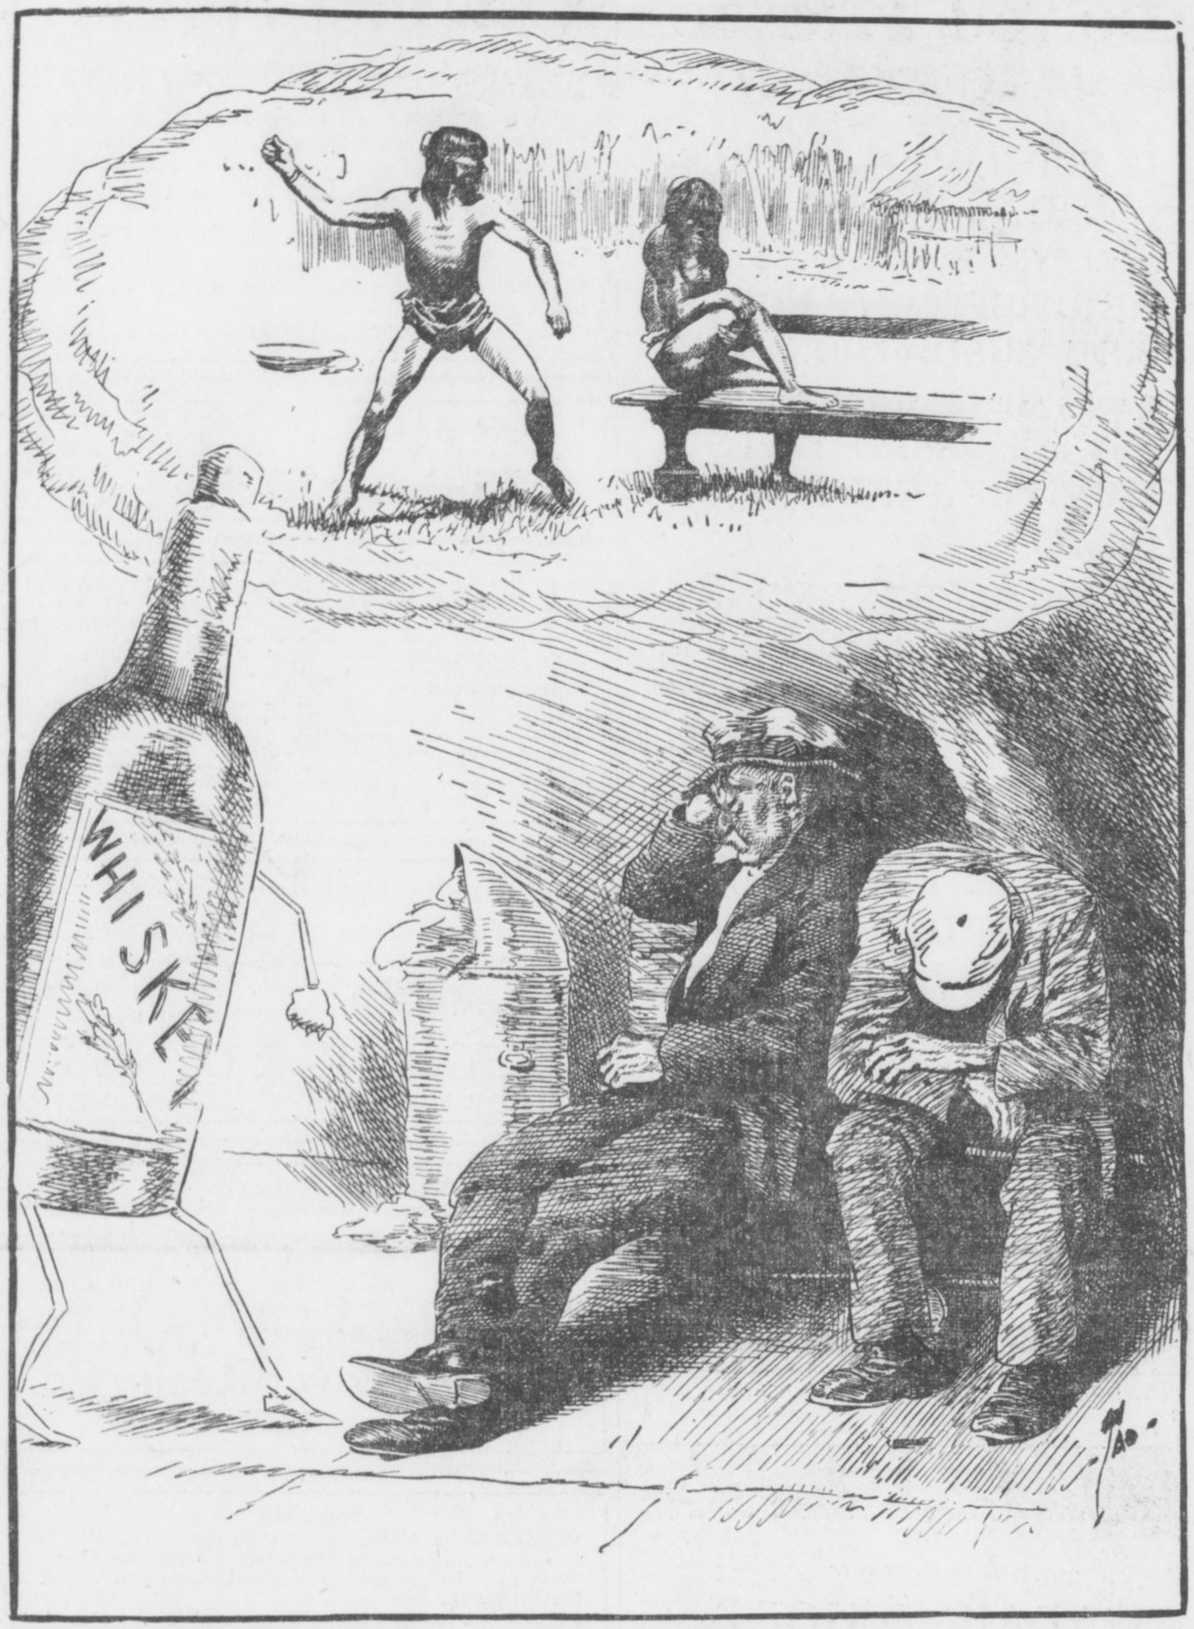
Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

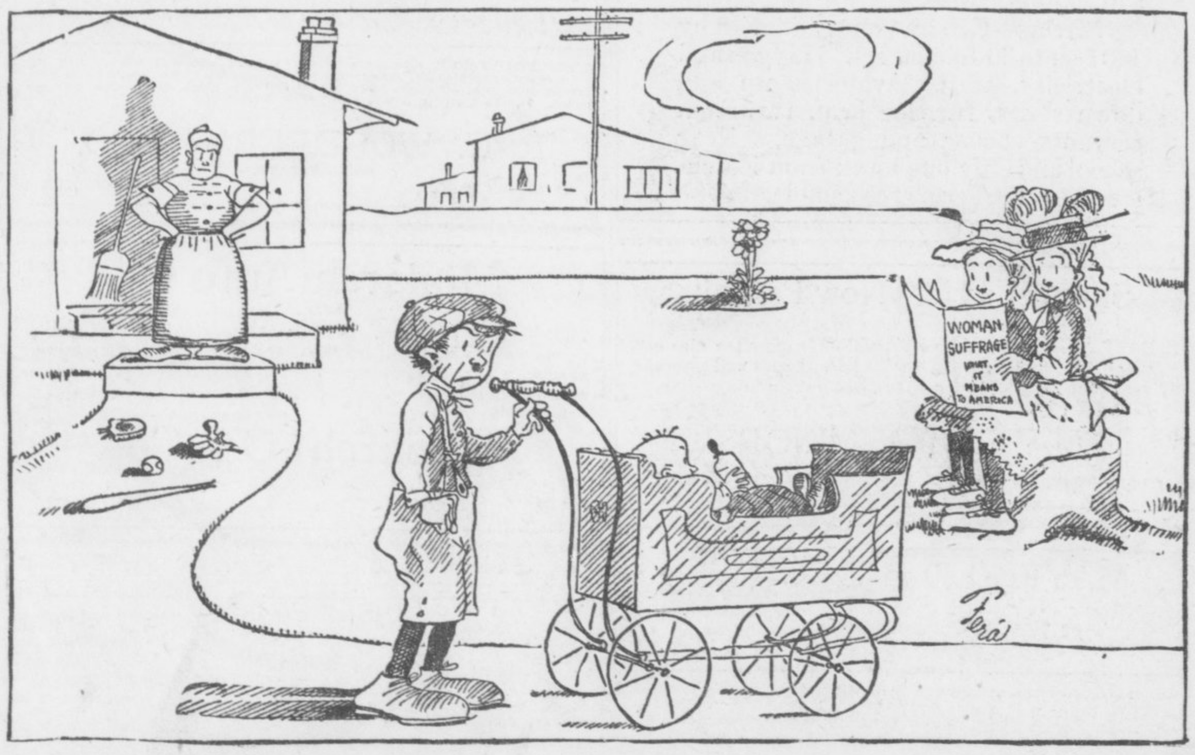
The Hardest Hitter



The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

Whiskey, with its mailed fist, always leaves a mark. The man on the bench NEVER gets a chance to win.

One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistice of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

CONLEY PUT ON GRILL STICKS TO STORY

Police Try in Vain to Get Him to Add Materially to His Important Affidavit.

Puzzled by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by Monteen Stover. He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 12 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Stover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clearer Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain this apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the factory foreman. Which statement is believed by the State is not known. What explanation is made by the negro for lying in regard to the matter also is conjectural.

Mary Phagan left her home on April 26 at about 11:50 o'clock. Living in Bellwood, it is regarded as unlikely that she reached the factory in less than 25 minutes, or at 12:15. Monteen Stover has testified that she visited the factory at about 12:10, which would be just before Mary Phagan had entered the factory, if the times testified to are correct.

Conley, on this account, has been asked if he saw, from his vantage point behind the boxes, Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, and Lemmie Quinn enter at 12:20, why he did not see Mary Phagan when she entered in the interval between the visits of the Stover girl and Lemmie Quinn.

Sticks to His Story.

Another point on which he has been questioned is as to how he could have left his home at the time he has testified and visit all the saloons of which he has told and still meet Frank at Nelson and Forsyth Streets as Frank was on his way to Montag Bros'. factory. Frank, according to the statements of members of the Montag firm, was in their building by 10 o'clock. Yet the things that Conley has testified to doing would have taken him until considerably after 10 o'clock, according to a conservative estimate.

He also has been quizzed on other points in his testimony which appear at variance with the facts, but he has stuck steadfastly to the story told in his last affidavit. Solicitor Dorsey has said that he has been unable to shake the negro in any important particular.

Deny Hoke Smith Story.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, made strenuous denial Wednesday that any effort had been made to connect Senator Hoke Smith witht he defense. A similar denial was made by Herbert Haas, associated with Mr. Rosser in the defense. Neither was able to say how the rumor had started.

Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, said that the State would be prepared Monday to fight the subpenas duces tecum issued by the lawyers for the defense. It is regarded as improbable, however, that the defense will bring the matter to an issue until the trial begins July 28.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Local thundershowers Wednesday and probably Thursday.

Warm West Winds, 90 Degrees, Maybe Showers for To-day

"Clear and warm, with possible thundershowers in the late afternoon," is the weather forecast for Wednesday of C. F. VonHerrmann, of the United States Weather Bureau.

Rising temperature at 7, 8 and 9 o'clock of 74, 78 and 80, respectively, indicated a high maximum for Wednesday. The 90 mark will be reached, and possibly passed, as it was Tuesday, when 92 was the top notch.

West winds will prevail Wednesday—warm winds, too.

International Board Bryan Peace Feature

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Further details of the Bryan peace proposal have been made public. The points of dispute between the United States and any other nation shall be investigated by an international commission.

President Wilson proposes that the joint commission be composed of five members, one from each nation to the dispute, one to be chosen by each of these nations from the citizens of another nation, and the fifth member of the commission to be agreed upon by the two Governments.

Eighteen nations have accepted the proposal.

Masterpiece, Lost For Ages, Unearthed

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Carlo Dolci's masterpiece "Salome" with the head of John the Baptist, missing for centuries from the galleries of the old world, is hanging in Memorial Hall here.

The discovery has just been made through the restoration of the painting by Pasquale Farina. For nine years this painting of the greatest artist of his period, depicting one of the famous scenes of sacred history, has hung a dim and dingy, paint covered nondescript entitled "Youth and Love," by Carlo Dolci.

Whips Crusader for Attack on Women

BALTIMORE, June 25.—Incensed by a letter which appeared in a local paper to-day, in which William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland maligned the wives, daughters and sons of Baltimore's best known citizens, Robert Lee Ullman, twenty-six years old, invaded the office of the Anti-Saloon League here and dog-whipped and struck Anderson a blow under the left eye and discolored the optic.

Ullman was arrested.

Pull Teeth of Webb Liquor Shipping Law

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Webb law forbidding interstate shipments of liquor into "dry States" is not a criminal statute and violations of it cannot be prosecuted in United States courts. Attorney General McReynolds so delcared in instructions sent to every United States attorney in the country.

This is the first time the Department of Justice has construed the Webb law which was declared unconstitutional by former President Taft.

Leg Bone Transfer Cures Tuberculosis

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 25.—What the physicians said was one of the most sensational operations of modern surgery was performed at a private clinic at a local hospital by Dr. Fred H. Albee of New York. A piece of bone was taken from a man's leg, transferred to his shin, affected by tuberculosis, the result being to correct the curvature and cure the tuberculosis.

The bone war grafted by the use of strands from a kangaroo's tail to the shin.

Reply of U. S. Will 'Satisfy' Japanese

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The information was given by an official close to the administration that the negotiations between Japan and the United States on the California land law had reached a point from which "there would be no further difficulty."

The intimation was made that the forthcoming reply of the Secretary of State to the last Japanese note would be "satisfactory to Japan."

50-DAY WAR TO ABOLISH CHAINGANG OPENED

Men and Religion Movement Unites With Churches and Penal Reformers in Fight.

Marion M. Jackson, of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, explained Wednesday the stirring "chaingang bulletin" in Tuesday's newspapers as the first gun in a 50-day warfare on a penal system "unrivaled outside of Russia for revolting and demoralizing features."

It was fired as the members of the Legislature were gathering for the opening of the session, and the campaign will be continued determinedly and unremittingly until the last bill is introduced and the last vote taken.

No such plan of battle ever has been mapped out against Georgia's notorious chaingangs. Its strength is due to an alliance between the forces of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which represents all of the evangelical churches of Atlanta, and the Prison Association of Georgia, which has Philip Weltner as its secretary and moving spirit.

Every Church Is Enlisted.

Every church and every penal reform organization in the State will be enlisted in the fight. Sunday, July 6, will be set apart in the churches throughout Georgia for sermons and addresses to acquaint people with the conditions which are described by those who have investigated them as a disgraceful commentary on the civilization and humanity of the South's foremost Commonwealth.

And this year Mr. Weltner and Mr. Jackson and their aides are assured of victory. They are confident that the great wave of horror that will sweep over the State at the shocking revelations will force the legislators to submit to the unmistakable sentiment of their constituents, if, indeed, they do not inaugurate a movement for reform on their own account.

A dark picture of the environment of Georgia's chaingang convicts was painted by Mr. Jackson in his opening bulletin. He said Wednesday that he had not dared portray half the horrors and demoralizing features. He declared that the conditions were a shame and a disgrace to any enlightened people.

Brands System as Rotten.

"Outside the actual physical suffering visited upon the men and the repulsive and insanitary conditions in which they are forced to live, the whole system is rotten and demoralizing," said Mr. Jackson.

"If a man goes into the chaingang with any manhood and goodness in his makeup he is pretty likely to be rid of these qualities by the time he has passed through his dark-age imprisonment. Boys and first offenders, many of whom are not really bad, but who have made a mistake, a slip, are chained to the hardened criminals, and by the time they are released they have received an effective schooling in all forms of vice and crime.

"One has only to go to the chaingangs in some of the counties to see boys in their 'teens chained next to some beast who has been guilty of the most vicious and heinous of crimes. Such an outrageous system, instead of acting as a reformatory, has exactly the opposite effect. The State is thus thwarting its own purposes.

No Provision for Women.

"Neither has Georgia made any adequate provision for its women wrongdoers and its delinquent girls. The stockade is the only place that Fulton County has to send its female offenders, and no one will attempt to say that this is a proper place to imprison a girl or a woman.

"The Prison Association of Georgia, enlisting the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, proposes to change these conditions—at this session of the Legislature if possible. I am confident that much will be done this year.

"We intend to have the chaingang abolished. We do not mean to take the men off the roads—work is good for them—but we shall fight to have those conditions wiped out which wreck the health, which destroy the

Police Rescue 1 of 2 Abducted Sisters

NEW YORK, June 25.—The police broke into an apartment on the lower East Side and rescued fifteen-year-old Margaret Cacopardi. The authorities believe a band of propressional Italian abductors is operating here. Margaret and her sixteen-year-old sister, Josephine, were lured to the flat June 9. Josephine was taken away and Margaret has not seen her since.

At the Children's Society rooms Margaret named a young Italian known as Guiseppe Longo, who was arrested. He refused to tell the police anything.

Going on Vacation? Leave P. O. Address

Postmaster Hugh McKee announced Tuesday that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address order.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to disposition of mail.

Wife Dances to Death in Husband's Arms

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mrs. Edna Wagner of Brooklyn died from an acute attack of heart disease, brought on by dancing the tango, turkey trot and the one-step for four consecutive hours with her husband at a marathon dance.

More than a thousand couples started. Only five were left at the end of more than four hours. Suddenly Mrs. Wagner fell from her husband's arms to the sidewalk, dead.

Works 9,000 Hours on Freak Dresser

LONG BEACH, June 25.—Having worked 9,000 hours on a beautiful dresser, which she fashioned from 340 different kinds of wood, B. Fisher has placed his finished work on exhibition.

The 9,000 hours of work were divided into 900 days, 10 hours a day being the schedule.

There are 324 separate pieces of wood in the top of the dresser, 1,000 in each drawer front and 309 in each draw handle.

John D. Sees Fruit of 'Save Pennies' Advice

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 25.—When John D. Rockefeller, with Mrs. Rockefeller, attended the Children's Day exercises in the First Baptist Church he saw his advice about saving pennies carried to a fruitful end.

The little girls of the primary class earned and saved their pennies for the Baptist chapel car, and when the bank was opened by the pastor 130 pennies were found. Mr. Rockefeller appeared much pleased.

'Cure' for Headache Kills in 15 Minutes

NEW YORK, June 25.—Pouch Karchmarsky, 1627 West Fourteenth Street, alias Meyer Borisoff, died at his home fifteen minutes after he had taken a headache powder which has a wide sale. He became sick almost immediately after taking the powder, and died while a physician was preparing an emetic.

The doctor said the powder caused the death.

Morgan Paintings to Go to Hartford

HARTFORD, CONN., June 25.—According to information received today by a relative of the Morgan family, some of the priceless Morgan art treasures are to have their permanent abode in this city in the Morgan Memorial erected by the late financier to the memory of his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, and turned over to the trustees last week.

Senator Shadowed by Sleuth at Mines

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Senator Martine of New Jersey intends to report to the Senate this week that he was constantly shadowed by detectives during his stay in West Virginia in connection with the investigation among the coal mines.

ANDERSON IS WINNER AS SENATE OPENS

Legislature Starts Its Two Months Grind—Sensational Fight by Drys Appears a Failure.

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 met in both branches at 10 o'clock this morning, the entire membership of the Senate and the House being present.

It was evident before the Senate was called to order that Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, likely had won his fight for the Presidency.

Up to last night this race remained very much in doubt, but this morning the impression was fixed in the minds of practically all the Senators that Anderson had "put it over" his distinguished opponent.

The two Houses were called to order by Secretary of the Senate Charles S. Northen and Clerk of the House John T. Boifeuillet.

Bulwell Choice for Speaker.

William H. Burwell, of Hancock, was named Speaker by acclamation, both of his opponents having withdrawn during the day yesterday.

A last-minute effort to shake loose Anderson's strength was made by the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, through its president, the Rev. H. M. Dubose, who addressed a letter to both candidates asking them how they stood on the matter of legislation to perfect the Webb bill in Georgia.

Allen answered that he favored such legislation, unqualifiedly, and, while Anderson was a little more guarded in his reply, it was of an apparently satisfying nature, for little if anything came of the effort to break down the Anderson line-up.

Several Senators, admittedly undecided betwen the Baldwin County man and the Chatham County man, went over to Anderson last night, thus cinching his victory.

Fight Leaves No Scars.

Notwithstanding the redhotness of this fight, the best of feeling prevails in the Senate to-day, and it seems likely that there will be no scars left to remind Senators unpleasantly of the contest as the session gets under way.

Charles S. Northen and John T. Boifeuillet were renamed Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House, respectively. These two veteran officials have been on their jobs for years, and there was no opposition to either.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth District, looks like a winner President Pro Tem of the Senate. He is a new member of the Legislature, and within the past few days has achieved immense popularity among his colleagues. He generally is looked upon as a fine man for the position to which he was named.

Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, seems to be slated for Speaker Pro Tem. He is an old member and appears to have won his fight handily.

An immensec rowd thronged the Capitol long before either house met for business.

Old Floor Leaders Missing.

While the race for the Presidency of the Senate was the only contest that promised to be at all exciting, the galleries were packed nevertheless when the House met. The present Lgislature is composed almost entirely of new material, but the impression has gone abroad that it is rather above the average in point of ability.

Outside of Burwell, the new Speaker, and one or two others, none of the old floor leaders of the last Legislature were to be seen in the new.

Many of the veterans were there, but merely as lookers-on. Joe Hill Hall, upon motion of Representative Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was accorded the unusual distinction of the freedom of the floor during the sessions by unanimous vote. This was a genuine tribute to his popularity.

After both houses had been organized Governor Brown's interesting farewell message was delivered to the General Assembly.

ENGLISHWOMEN PELT POINCARE WITH ROSES

French President Is Given Great Ovation as He Drives Through Streets of London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 25.—A remarkable demonstration of friendship was given in the streets of London today when President Raymond Poincare of France was driven from York House to Guild Hall, where he was entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor of London, and the corporation of the City of London.

The French executive was driven through troop lined streets and was escorted by the horse guards. The route was lined with spectators, who kept up a continual cheer for the French president.

This was "Alexandra Day" in London and many society women, dressed in white, sold flowers in the streets for charity. Purchasers along the route taken by President Poincare on his way to Guild Hall pelted the French executive with roses.

Following her custom, Dowager Queen Alexandra drove through the city.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon the rose sellers stationed outside of Gloucester House, where he lives.

Widener Plans Best Hotel in the World

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Plans for one of the greatest and handsomest hotels in the world are being drawn up under the direction of P. A. B. Widener, who has acquired the Ritz Carlton Hotel and adjacent property.

The plans include a grand court, in which the millionaire intends to display some of his famous art treasures.

GRIM WARNING TO PLOTTERS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 25.—As a warning to all plotters the bodies of twelve Turkish reactionaries hanged yesterday for the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha were allowed to swing upon the gibbet in Bayazid Square 24 hours.

Cannot Advise King on Suffrage Appeal

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 25.—Mrs. Flora Anna Steele, president of the Women Writers' Suffrage League, has received a letter from the home office signed by the Under Secretary of State, referring to the league's recent letter to the King and Queen. The reply reads:

"Madam—I am directed to inform you that the petition has been referred by the King to the Secretary of State (McKenna) who is unable to advise His Majesty to take action thereon."

Vatican Grounds Will Be Enlarged

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, June 25.—A plan to enlarge the Vatican grounds by the addition of an adjoining pine woodland, in order to give Pope Pius a larger area for his walks, has been taken up in view of the precarious health of the Pontiff.

The holy see is understood to have opened negotiations for the purchase of the woodland from Prince Torlonia.

Bride Given Ground Facing Alamo Field

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., June 25.—Among the wedding presents received by Miss Bessie Yoakum when she became Mrs. Larkin on June 4 was a piece of property fronting on the Alamo plaza, within a stone's throw from the historic old Alamo. It was given to her by her father, B. F. Yoakum.

Much of the battle in which the heroes of the Alamo were killed was fought on the spot.

BROWN ASKS ASSEMBLY FOR VITAL REFORMS

Governor, in Farewell Message to Legislature, Frankly Cites Needs of the State.

Governor Joseph M. Brown sent in his farewell message to the General Assembly of Georgia immediately after its organization.

The message is written in the Governor's characteristically vigorous and straightforward style, and is almost sensational in its frankness in part, particularly in dealing with the question of union labor.

Governor Brown brought unionism of labor up for a strong arraignment. He cited two labor strikes of recent occurrence—that of the employees of the street car company in Augusta and that of Georgia Railroad employees. Both, he declared, were wholly unjust and precipitated violence directly in opposition to the State laws. He set forth the union label as carrying more authority than the Great Seal of the Commonwealth.

The Governor declared that by the tactics it pursued in forcing wage scales up and stamping out competition from non-union men, organized labor had resolved itself into the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, selling labor at whatever price it chose and using methods which assumed an anarchistic nature.

Highway Commission Urged.

The Governor, after touching briefly upon several matters heretofore called to the General Assembly's attention in previous messages, takes up the questions of public highways, double tracking railroads, inheritance taxes, bank examiners, vital statistics and the Ducktown copper mines, in which the State has direct interests.

In the matter of good roads the Governor recommends the creation of a Highway Commission; in the matter of double tracking the railroads he recommends that the Railroad Commission be given express authority to go into that matter enhaustively; in the matter of an inheritance tax he repeats his recommendations of 1909; in the matter of bank examiners he recommends that the present number be increased sufficiently to meet the State's needs, and in the matter of vital statistics he recommends that the scope of the Agricultural Department's work be greatly increased.

The Governor's Message.

The executive communication, omitting in detail the questions referred to briefly, as outlined, reads as follows:

Vigilant measures were taken to prevent any interruption of the French President's tour of the city by militant suffragettes. President Poincare seemed amused at the thought of violence from women.

To the General Assembly:

Upon your assumption of the responsibilities of legislation for the welfare of the people of this great Commonwealth, I extend to you a cordial greeting, with the heartfelt hope that our Almighty Guide will lead your minds into the channels of wisdom and deliberation. I can not doubt that the people have shown careful discernment in the choice of members of both of your houses, hence it is with confidence that I lay before you the views which I deem worthy your consideration, recommending their enactment into laws which I believe will enhance the well-being of the State.

These views affecting the proper use of the ballot—the freeman's inherited right—the safety of person from disease and casualty, the economical, but judicious, expenditure of the people's money and the equitable levying of taxes for collecting the same, and other matters are such as experience and observation in the Executive Office have convinced me are necessary for the protection of the people and their progress on orderly lines.

I can not refrain from premising with the statement that the words "Justice" and "Equality" are the bases upon which is built our governmental structure. Without justice government is a mockery, without equality we can not have a republic. Therefore, if we be patriots, our life lines, our ambitions and endeavors cluster around these fateful words.

Registration Laws Defective.

First for consideration, I call your attention to the serious defects and un-

INAUGURATION WILL BE FREE FROM POMP

Oath To Be Administered Simply Saturday—Slaton Will Read Message to Legislature.

Simplicity will mark the inauguration Saturday of John M. Slaton as Governor of Georgia. The ceremony will not vary materially from that attending the taking of a smaller office. Formerly the inauguration was the most pompous occasion Atlanta knew.

Chief Justice W. H. Fish will administer the oath. In accordance with custom, the oath will be taken at high noon and will be followed by Governor Slaton's address.

The address will be short, compared with inaugural addresses in the past. It will require about 30 minutes to deliver. But Governor Slaton puts much in a few words, and his address will be complete.

There will be no ceremonies beyond the administering of the oath. Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton will meet in the Governor's reception room and remain there until notified that the House and Senate are in joint session in the House chamber. Then they will go to the hall, where the oath will be administered.

The inaugural reception will be held at the Governor's Mansion next week.

Governor Slaton will deliver his message orally. He, like President Wilson, believes an oral presentation of a message has greater weight than a written one.

Following the inaugural address, Governor and Mrs. Slaton will accompany Governor and Mrs. Brown to the mansion, where Governor Brown will give his last official dinner and formally turn over the home to Governor Slaton.

There is a remote possibility the inauguration will not be held Saturday. It hinges upon the election of the President of the Senate, as the election returns can not be canvassed until the two houses are formally organized. With J. Randolph Anderson and Judge John T. Allen claiming they will win the office, many believe there will be a deadlock for several days.

'Parasol Cop' Like Toad Under a Stool

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The parasol cop is the latest thing and the advance guard. Policeman J. C. Holmes, is stationed at Fifteenth and New York Avenues. He stands there under a huge parasol fastened in the middle of the street for all the world like a toad under a toadstool.

Fossil Camel Bones Found in the Yukon

WASHINGTON, June 25—The discovery of fossil bones of a camel within the Arctic circle in Alaska has been announced by the Smithsonian Institution. The find tends to support the theory, experts say, of the existence of a wide Asiatic-Alaskan land connection of comparatively recent date.

Copely Amory, Jr., found the fossils last summer while collecting specimens for the United States Alaskan Museum.

Woman Prosecutor Convicts Embezzler

Judge L. S. Roan Wednesday will sentence Oscar A. Donehoo for embezzling $200. The jury returned a verdict of guilty late yesterday.

Mrs. Alice Donehoo, a sister-in-law, who appeared in the role of prosecutor, declared Oscar Donehoo was executor of his father, C. M. Donehoo, and that she was due $200 which she had been unable to get.

Woman Acquitted Of Slaying Infant

WAYCROSS, June 25.—After remaining out for five hours, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case against Mrs. W. C. Lanier, charged with complicity in the murder of her day-old infant.

Lanier is under a life sentence for the child's death.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The new Legislature seems to average up pretty high in the quality of its membership.

The general impression is that it is a first-class body of men, and may be looked upon as apt to acquit itself well of the important work there is ahead.

After both Houses are well under way, it will be found, so this writer thinks, that the contests for the Speakership of the House and the Presidency of the Senate will leave few if any scars.

The contests have been waged, in the main, in a manly way, and the results will be accepted unquestioningly and uncomplainingly.

To be sure, there will be for a time a little soreness here and there, and maybe there will be a few who fail to recover rapidly from their naturally keen disappointments, but eventually things will settle down to a friendly basis and the work of the General Assembly is sure to go forward in mutual respect and consideration among the members.

After all, only one man could win the Presidency of the Senate and only one man could be Speaker. Experienced and able men have been picked out to preside in both Houses.

The General Assembly will make a big hit with the people now, if it gets right down to business, forgets the preliminary battles, and enacts those reforms the people are expecting, and have been given the right to expect, of it.

Judge William Josiah Nunnally of Floyd, although he has been in Atlanta only a day or so, already is well acquainted with half of the Legislature and is making himself known to the other half just as fast as he can.

Not only is Judge Nunnally sure to take high rank as a constructive Legislator, but he is evidently going to become immensely popular with his colleagues. He is a "fine fellow," all right, and everybody seems to have found it out early in the game.

Tinsley Ragland of Talbot, has his trusty little snickersnee out for the proposed new county of Warner.

Ragland lives in Talbot, from which a section of the new county is proposed to be taken, and he will not listen. He says his county needs in its business all the territory it now has and that he will fight 'em to a finish, and if necessary die, before anything shall be whacked from grand old Talbot.

Believe Tinsley, there will be nothing doing in the county of Warner line this year.

Representative W. H. Connor of Spalding, proposes to introduce some highly important legislation in the present House.

For one thing, he proposes to have a uniform school system over the State and to use the same books in all public schools. He thinks that the printing contract should be let out to the lowest bidder, and that the books shall be supplied to the pupils at the actual cost to the State.

According to Mr. Connor's arguments the average cost of text books annually per pupil now is about $6.20; and that, if his provision should be enacted, the price would be brought down to about 75 cents per pupil, which would effect a saving in Georgia each year of some $4,000,000. In his studies of this question, Mr. Connor has learned that many other States in the United States are operating identically the very law that he proposes and that their experience has been that a tremendous saving was effected. Since these principles have been tried out in Spalding County, Mr. Connor thinks the State should give heed to them.

In the State of Ohio, where this law is in operation, the school books cost each pupil annually 62 cents; in Pennsylvania, 70 cents; in Maryland, 63 cents; in Maine, 88 cents.

Since this is the year when the State Board of Education is to sign contracts for the public school books for another five years, and also since the board has determined not to sign any contract till after the Legislature has passed, Mr. Connor intends to push his measure with all his might, until it shall have been considered by the representatives of the people of Georgia.

The Honorable Joe Hill Hall, of the free State of Bibb, blew—that's exactly the right word—into the Kimball House lobby to-day, and began passing the time o' day with everybody.

Hither and yon, and also everywhere he went, he got the glad hand, palm up! Everybody was doing it—shaking hands with "Uncle Joe" and wishing him mighty well!

He is one of the real leaders who will be missed this year from the floor of the House. For years he was a member, and the imprint of his fine mind and courage is upon the statute books forever.

A member of the House who already has made himself solid with everybody is "Charlie" Picquet, of Augusta.

He is not much over four feet tall, but he is all there, what there is of him.

He formerly was City Recorder of Augusta, and in that office he made himself so popular with all sorts of folks that his election to the Legislature was the result.

He is likely to be heard from in the House in more ways than one.

Unless it declares a number of non-legislative days as it goes along, the Legislature should be in Atlanta's appreciative midst until August 13.

It is limited by the constitution of the State to 50 days in its annual sittings, but it has upon occasions declared a number of days "non-legislative," and thus stretched out its sittings.

Once it left one day unused, and adjourned from December 14 to the following March. As a rule, however, it runs through its 50 days without any omissions.

There has been talk from time to time of changing the date of the Legislature's meeting from June back to October, but that likely will not be done soon, if ever.

Bulgars Want Peace Or War to a Finish

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, SERVIA, June 25.—The Servian Government sent another note to St. Petersburg to-day relating to Czar Nicholas' offer to arbitrate the territorial dispute between Servia and Bulgaria.

At the same time dispatches from Sofia reported that Bulgaria would adopt more aggressive measures than have been taken if the Servian note does not accept Russia's offer of arbitration unconditionally.

Skirmishing between the outposts of the Servian and Bulgarian armies south of Uskub again was reported.

$100,000 Lead Plant Coming to Atlanta

Work on a $100,000 lead plant, to be erected by the United Lead Company of New York City, at the corner of East and Bishop Streets, will begin within a few weeks under the direction of H. J. Carr and Company, contractors. The company has taken out a charter to do business in Georgia, and the Atlanta branch will be known as the Georgia Lead Works.

The plant will be a steel building 200 feet long. The United Lead Company plans a big business, and it is said the yearly pay roll will exceed $60,000.

Net Weaving Called Mate Hunter's Woe

HARTFORD, CONN., June 25—"The reason so many happy courtships are followed by unhappy marriages is because the young women give too much time to weaving nets and not enough to building cages for men," said Monsignor James Joseph Fox, to graduates of Mount St. Joseph Seminary.

"The spirit of woman suffrage is largely responsible for the widespread decline in morals. Women lavish on dogs the tenderness and care God intended for children."

moral fiber, which blunt the sensibilities and which make habitual criminals out of boys and first offenders.

"We want to do away with the stripes and the chains and the insanitary, disgusting conditions.

Compensation for Families.

"We will advocate some sort of compensation for the wives and children of the men who are serving time. As it is at present the families of the convicts are made to suffer almost as much as the prisoners themselves.

"It will be our suggestion that a parole or probation system be introduced with the indeterminate sentence. Accompanying this will be the grades and classification of prisoners, with merits and demerits.

"The boys and first offenders should be segregated from the vicious and habitual criminals.

"A State industrial school for girls should be established and more adequate provision made for the boys and the women.

"We will propose that stripes be abolished except for the lowest grade of prisoners and that the others be clothed so as not to make them ridiculous.

Would Teach Illiterate.

"Instruction during a short period of the day will be suggested for the illiterate prisoners.

"This is only an incomplete outline of some of the reforms that will be submitted for the approval of the Legislature. In brief, we will combat everything in the present system that militates against the reclamation of the prisoner or which threatens his health or lowers his self-respect.

"Several bills already have been drafted and others are in preparation. We expect that the Legislature this year will be impressed by their necessity and will pass them without opposition."

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Not Quite Right on Picture Language

A story is told of a couple of Atlanta tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and consequently had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "?" beneath it and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight.

Adroit Answer to Turn Away Wrath

An Atlanta lawyer told this story at one of the clubs the other night. Some time ago, a man fell into an open coal hole, sued for damages, and was awarded a substantial amount. When he received a bill from his lawyer, however, he was stunned again, and as soon as he could get into hustling shape he hastened to see him.

"Your bill is outrageous!" exclaimed the client to the legal one. "It is more than three-fourths of the amount I recovered."

"Quite true," was the calm response of the lawyer, "but you mustn't forget that I furnished the skill and legal learning for the case."

"Yes," excitedly cried the client, "but I furnished the case."

"Oh, as far as that goes," was the scornful reply of the lawyer, "anybody can fall down a coal hole!"

Willing to Learn The Correct Way

Herbert and Helen, both of Atlanta, were sitting on the beach at Tybee in the moonlight when, moved by an impulse Herbert could not resist, he suddenly kissed her.

"Oh, Herbert!" she exclaimed, "that's not right."

"I'm very sorry, Helen," replied Herbert humbly. "I did the best I knew how. Won't you show me the proper way?"

$30,000 RAILROAD JOB FOR BRANTLEY

Former Congressman to Represent 100 Systems of the South. Will Keep Atlanta Offices.

Former Congressman William G. Brantley, of Atlanta, has been appointed as one of three men to represent the railroads of the United States before the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to information that has come to Atlanta. Mr. Brantley will represent the roads of the Southeast territory, comprising 100 systems south of the Mason and Dixon line. The other two men will represent the railroads of the Eastern and Western States.

The details of the appointment and the salary connected with the position have not been given out. It is generally understood, however, that the Western representative of the railroads has signed a five-year contract at an annual salary of about $30,000. It is supposed that the contracts of Mr. Brantley and the Eastern representative are virtually the same.

It is probable that Mr. Brantley's work, for at least the first five years, will be to represent the roads in an advisory capacity during the finding of a physical valuation of the railroads of the United States, which the Interstate Commerce Commission is now undertaking. It is estimated that the commission will pass on $15,000,000,000 worth of railroad property, and the valuation arrived at will be the basis for future taxation and rate making.

Mr. Brantley will soon open offices in Washington to facilitate the handling of his work, though he will retain his offices in Atlanta and spend a portion of his time here.

Interment at Hollywood.

The funeral of W. B. Henson, who died at his home, 28 Clark Street, at 9 o'clock Monday morning, will be held from the residence at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Clark was 36 years old and is survived by his wife. Interment at Hollywood.

Mary Frances Ellis, 1-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Ellis, of 180 Grant Street, died at the home Tuesday. The funeral will be held at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Interment at Westview.

AMERICANS FIND BETTER CROPS IN EUROPE

U. S. Commissioners Learn Foreigners Possess More Skill Than Farmers at Home.

BY KENYON BUTTERFIELD.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 25.—The marked and cordial hospitality with which the American Commission has been received everywhere on its travels through Europe was reflected again in Berlin. In all countries visited every effort has been made by both Government officials and heads of agricultural institutions to facilitate our work.

Perhaps the one greatest advantage which the trip has brought is the fact that a comparatively large number of men representing diversified interests in the United States have come in contact with the work of European agricultural co-operative institutions and their leaders.

Interest in Agriculture.

I have been much impressed with the deep interest displayed in agriculture as a whole here, both among the Government officials and business men. A similar interest is being awakened in our own country, but in Europe it is very clear and defined. It is based on the conviction that the welfare of the farmers is not a class interest, but a national interest; that the promotion and development of agriculture are essential parts of a national policy.

I also have been impressed with the extent of the political activities and influence of the farming classes in some of the European countries. This, of course, may account in part for the interest the Governments take in agriculture.

Skill Shown in Farming.

Even the most superfluous observation of conditions in Europe cannot fail to impress one with the remarkable skill shown in farming here. For example, the average yield of wheat in Germany is thirty bushels to the acre—more than double that in the United States. In the best farming districts it rises to between forty-five and fifty bushels, and this in a country with a rainfall of only twenty inches a year.

The organization of co-operative institutions in addition to relatively cheap labor probably has had much to do in bringing about this skillful farming. It has given the farmer capital at a low interest and on easy terms as well as the possibility of disposing of his products to advantage. The success of the methods employed are also due partly to the system of agricultural education, and as a consequence to the application of science to practical agriculture.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic, and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

DEAD KILL BOND ISSUES, SAYS CANDLER

Wants Law Changed So Living Alone Can Have Voice in Municipal Elections.

"Of course, the city of Atlanta needs a bond issue. The only question is what departments of the city government are most in need and how much they need."

In these words Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the subcommittee of a general committee from the General Council, outlined his position. Judge Candler's subcommittee will suggest to the general committee the amount of bonds needed by the city and recommend an equitable apportionment between the departments.

"As I understand it," Judge Candler explained, "there is no question about the need of more money than the tax levy provides. Public improvements can not be carried on without additional funds, and the funds can not be provided except by bond issue. Our duty as subcommitteemen consists only in ascertaining how much money the different departments need. That is the way I understand it."

Judge Candler believes the Legislature, which assembles Wednesday, will adopt a constitutional amendment for submission to the people making it impossible for dead men and stay-at-homes to kill proposed bond issues.

"I want a constitutional amendment adopted giving cities the power to issue bonds upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting," he said. "The way it is now, an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total enrollment at the last preceding registration is required. Say, for instance, we were holding a bond election now. Well, the registration was last year. Several men who registered last year have died, and the way the law is now every one of those dead men kills the votes of two live men who favor the bond issue. I think that is wrong."

Judge Candler pointed out that stay-at-homes, or men out of the State, exerted the same influence.

"It looks to me like there is no question about the adoption of the amendment by the present Legislature," said Judge Candler.

Girls Writing Book Will Simplify Laws

CLEVELAND, O., June 25.—The embryo lawyer of to-day, who will be the brilliant pleader of to-morrow, will owe a debt of gratitude to two Cleveland girls for a massive volume filled with simple interpretations of Ohio's laws. The girls are Miss Ruth Winch, 22, daughter of Judge Louis H. Winch, and Miss Ruth Jenkins, 18. The book is being prepared by the girls under the supervision of Judge Winch, and will be known as "The History of the Laws of Ohio."

Zionists Tell Plan of Palestine Colony

CINCINNATI, O., June 25.—At the sixteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists here the annual message of the honorary president, Dr. Harry Freidenwald, explained fully the purpose of the federation.

"It is not our idea to send all Jews back to Palestine," he said, "but to place all Jews in a position where independence is assured them. Primarily, the move is for the relief of the Russian Jew."

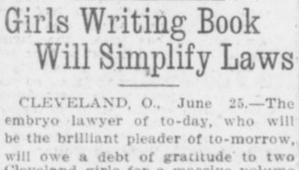
Luncheon Lurch Is New Capital Dance

WASHINGTON, June 25.—"The luncheon lurch" is quite the newest dance in Washington. Leaders of society have caught on to the new steps which, to be properly danced, should be indulged in just before luncheon. Probably the luch part would fit better after luncheon.

It is a variation of the tango and the turkey trot.

MOTHER'S FRIEND IN EVERY HOME

Comfort and Safety Assured Before the Arrival of the Stork.



The old saying—what is home without a mother—should add "Mother's Friend."

In thousands of American homes there is a bottle of this splendid and famous remedy that has aided many a woman through the trying ordeal, saved her from suffering and pain, kept her in health of mind and body in advance of baby's coming and had a most wonderful influence in developing a healthy, lovely disposition in the child.

There is no other remedy so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant those fibers and muscles which nature is expanding and soothes the inflammation of breast glands.

Mother's Friend is an external remedy, acts quickly and not only banishes all distress in advance, but assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother. Thus she becomes a healthy woman with all her strength preserved to thoroughly enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend can be had at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle, and is really one of the greatest blessings ever discovered for expectant mothers. Lad Plays Ball on Piedmont Roof

Hits Homer From Aerial Ball Lot

Sphere Cracks Cabman in Street

Manager Dutton's Young Son Presses Nurses Into Service in His Practice Games.

Eight-year-old Lear Dutton spat on his hands, rubbed them in the dirt, and pounded vigorously on the home plate with his bat.

The pitcher wound up carefully. The ball came shooting across the plate. Lear started running with the crack of the bat against the leather. He rounded first base and stopped, watching the flight of the ball. He had knocked it out of the lot!

While the embryo Wagner stood amazed, there came the sound of a subdued crack, and a frightened darky voice floated up to the ball diamond.

"Who done dat? Laws-a-massy, it's rainin' baseballs!"

That was merely one of the incidents in a game on the most remarkable baseball grounds in Atlanta—the roof of the ten-story Piedmont Hotel. The grounds are those of Lear Dutton, the son of Manager H. N. Dutton, of the hotel, and his team is composed of his nurse and employees of the hotel.

Occupants of offices in the Candler Building and other skyscrapers overlooking the hotel often have watched the little figure darting like mad about the bases, while the older and stiffer ones chased the ball from end to end of the roof.

Since the incident of the home run over the roof, when the ball struck a negro cab driver in the street below, Lear has about closed his roof league season.

However, for the benefit of Georgian readers, Lear staged a game on the roof Tuesday afternoon, and says if the police don't interfere with him he'll play every day from now until the close of the season.

Lear is an unusual boy in a great many ways. Not only did he conceive and put into execution the idea of playing baseball on the roof of his father's hotel, but he is the one boy in a thousand who does not want to be a baseball player, a soldier, a policeman or a fireman when he grows up.

"I'm going to be a mechanical engineer," Lear said. "Papa says it is a very useful occupation."

Lear is one of the pitchers on a team of boys who call themselves the "Courtlands," and says his club has won only fifty games so far this year.

Average Weight Jury Hears Anti-fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Standing room was at a premium in the United States Federal Court to-day when twelve men of average weight were sworn in as jurors in the case of the Government against Marjorie Hamilton, the "calendar girl," and her husband, Walter C. Cunningham, accused of using the mails to defraud by advertising anti-fat remedies.

Interest centers in the eighteen fat women whom Federal agents have brought to Denver to testify that they tried the fat cure and grew more corpulent. They have asked the Government to quarter them at different hotels and to furnish guards to keep reporters and photographers away.

1,500 Milwaukee's Bars Face Closing

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 25.—Milwaukee saloons to the number of 1,500 may be forced to close July 1, because of the rejection by the Wisconsin Legislature of a bill to legalize the number of saloon licenses now in existence. The rejection by the Legislature of the proposed saloon measure means saloons which have changed locations are illegally licensed.

Congressman Adopts 2 Children on Train

WASHINGTON, June 25.—When Mrs. William P. Borland, wife of Representative Borland, of Missouri, met her husband at the Union Station she nearly swooned. For Borland, smiling happily, emerged from the train shed with two chubby, giggling little girls.

The representative informed his wife he had adopted the youngsters at Kansas City when he found they were about to be sent to an orphan asylum.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis" is in its second week at the Grand, and gives every promise that the attendance records of last week, when more than 25,000 paid admissions will be eclipsed. The picture is not only an educational classic, dealing with a story that has been read by millions of people, but it is the most thrilling entertainment that has been enacted on a stage.

The pictures are magnificent, just the proper size, and produced in such an expert fashion that the scenes are thoroughly realistic. There's not a flicker, only a soft and pleasing light, and though the exhibition requires two and one-quarter hours to present, there is nothing that is in the slightest tiresome.

There will be matinee performances daily and evening exhibitions daily the rest of the week.

THIS WILLIAM TELL SLAIN.

BERLIN, June 25.—A student named Krusekopf of Halle was shot and killed while trying to imitate William Tell's feat with the apple. He placed a glass of beer on his head and dared four of his fellow students to shoot at it with revolvers.

'Model' Beats 'Morn'; Chicago Ousts Her

CHICAGO, June 25.—"Asti's Model," tried on the same charge as the one of which Miss "September Morn" was acquitted recently, to-day was found guilty of being "a shock to Chicago's morals." Judge Rooney fined her $7.50 and banished her from show windows.

"Asti's Model" depicts a young woman, nude, seated on a couch gazing into space. Her thick auburn hair falls below her waist. A copy of the painting was displayed to the jury.

Rudolph Fractman, owner of the picture and the shop where it was displayed, said the picture was placed on display by mistake.

'End Seat Hogs' to Receive Heavy Fines

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Washington's "end seat hogs" will soon be amenable to law. Commissioner Rudolph has taken the subject up with the Utilities Commission.

Convictions for refusing to "move up" will probably be punished by a heavy fine. A woman and a baby narrowly escaped death in alighting from a car because a fat man obstructed the passage.

SEASIDE HOLIDAY FOR THE FIFTH'S 1913 CAMP

Atlanta Regiment Will Have "Off Year" With Little Work at Saint Simons Outing.

A score or so officers and nearly 600 men of the line composing the Fifth Regiment of Georgia will leave Atlanta on the night of July 8 for an eight-day camp at St. Simons Island, off the coast near Brunswick, and the boys in khaki expect to make it the greatest camping trip in the history of the regiment.

Two special trains over the A., B. & A. Railroad have been engaged for the trip, and the commissary department has placed orders for enough food to fill all Atlanta for at least one meal. It will be one vacation trip, too, which doesn't mean extra expense, for khaki uniforms and flannel shirts will be the rule, and no white ducks, silk hosiery or Panamas will be needed.

Uncle Sam will foot the bills. This will be the regular "off year" camp of the regiment. One summer it goes to maneuvers, which are all hard work. The next it takes a seashore holiday, with only a few hours of drill in the cool of the morning.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy has been in correspondence with the merchants and manufacturers who have employees in the regiment, urging that they arrange vacation schedules so the soldiers can take their holidays at the right time for the camp. He has met with an unusually hearty response. One Whitehall Street merchant wrote:

"I have ten men of the regiment in my store, and I'm going to get them all at once, though it practically will close one department. I believe in the Fifth Regiment and believe Atlanta business men should encourage it."

Mrs. Armor Sees U. S. Without Bars in 1920

Declaring Colonel Theodore Roosevelt would not have sued for libel on the charge of drunkenness had he not read the signs of the times and seen the coming of nation-wide prohibition, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor delivered a stirring address at the First Methodist Church Tuesday night on a "Saloonless Nation in 1920."

Mrs. Armor declared that the temperance organizations of the country have set 1920 as the outside limit for all saloons to be abolished.

INCOME TAX SETS $3,000 MINIMUM

Amendment to Section Making $4,000 Low Limit Also Provides Exemptions.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Incomes of more than $3,000 a year will be taxed by the Underwood tariff bill, according to a draft of the amended section just made public by the Senate Finance Committee.

An exemption of $1,000 is made for a dependent wife or husband and $500 additional for each of not more than two children. The Underwood bill, as passed by the House, taxed incomes of more than $4,000.

Mutual insurance company incomes are relieved from taxation to whatever degree the companies are genuinely mutual. The inquisitorial clauses, the dumping clause and right of the secretary and treasury to determine the existence of a foreign market are stricken from the administrative features.

The draft is that which will be presented to the Democratic caucus.

Gymnastic Union's Meet On in Denver

DENVER, COLO., June 24.—Theodore Stempfel, of Indianapolis, president of the Northern American Gymnastic Union, and his party were welcomed to Denver to-day at the formal opening of the thirty-first bundesturnfest of the organization.

The program of events for the week of festivities which begins to-morrow includes athletic prize contests and prize singing competitions. An allegorical pageant, which will include 50 floats representing the development of German activities in the United States, will be the feature of Thursday's program.

Sweethearts for 18 Years at Last Wed

MOBILE, June 28.—John D. Maxwell, master mechanic of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad at Mobile, and Miss Saveria Ferrara, also of Mobile, were quietly married by Judge Maher, of the Second City Court at Algiers, La., last night.

The couple were old sweethearts, and had planned to marry eighteen years ago, but became estranged. Recently did they decide to carry out the old plans, both having steadfastly remained true to the vow that they would never marry any other.

New Dances Barred and Light Demanded

POMONA, CAL., June 25.—Here are the new rules just passed by the city Council governing dancing in this city:

Taboo—Tango, Texas Tommy, Turkey Trot, Bowery Rag, Coney Island Flip and all other "immodest" dances.

Every part of the dance hall must be brilliantly lighted.

Every dance hall must be supervised by a matron-censor of dance proprieties.

No girl under eighteen may attend any public dance unless accompanied by parent or guardian.

Papa Spanks Wedded Daughter; Is Freed

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 25.—Mrs. Mary Brauert, a divorcee, went to the home of her father, Joseph Bokas, and demanded that he give her presents she had given her brother, which the latter had turned over to the father. Papa Bokas got a shingle, drew the astonished Mrs. Brauert across his knees and gave her a sound spanking.

The daughter had the father arrested, but Judge Cull held that he had a right to spank his daughter, even if she were married and twenty-five.

2 NEW AMERICAN CARDINALS LIKELY

Consistory To Be Held in October—Pope Distressed by Rumors of Dissension.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 25.—It was learned to-day from a source close to the Vatican that Pope Pius X has decided to call another consistory in October, when nine new Cardinals will be created. One American prelate, and perhaps two, are almost certain to be elevated to the sacred college.

Pope Pius is much distressed by reports of dissension among the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

According to these reports, the Liberals, led by Cardinal Rampolla, are trying to bring about the removal of Cardinal Merry Del Val from his office of Papal Secretary of State.

If they are successful, Cardinal Falconio, former papal delegate to the United States, probably will be chosen on a compromise.

U. S. Clerks Swim to Jobs in Washington

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The newest way to go to work in Washington is to swim. This is the way young United States clerks work it:

They leave their homes in a bathing suit, and on reaching the Potomac dive and strike out diagonally across the river. The nearest boathouse is about a mile, and on reaching it they change their bathing suits for their street clothes. After work they repair to the boathouse, change their clothes, don their bathing suits and swim back home.

GOVERNOR, IN HIS FAREWELL MESSAGE, ASSAILS LABOR UNIONS

LEGISLATURE ASKED FOR GOOD ROADS BOARD

necessary barriers in the registration law now upon the statute book. The requirement that the registration lists shall be closed six months in advance of regular elections is more drastic than that in any other State in the Union, and imposes unnecessary hardships upon the country people of this State.

The same barrier to franchise rights in the choice of State and County officers prevails in only a less degree against the voters in the cities. Yet, in their municipal elections, the latter are allowed as short a time as they desire for registration. With some of them this limit is less than 30 days. Hence, I earnestly recommend that your honorable bodies make such changes in the registration laws as well protect all voters alike in their proper rights for exercising the franchise.

Under the present law upward of 20,000 white voters in Fulton County alone are deprived of the right to vote by the operation of the law in question. And the total number of disfranchised throughout the State exceeds 75,000. The continuance of the law, as framed, on the statute book will bring reproach upon the State.

Farm Credit System.

The farm credit system which has wrought such extraordinary results for good to the dwellers upon the farms in Germany and some other European countries has attracted wide attention within the past twelve months in this country.

I attended a conference of the Governors at the White House, called by President Taft, in December, 1912, for the purpose of discussing this system. Experts appointed by the United States Government and by the Governors of some of the States are now investigating this subject in foreign countries. Georgia is represented in this investigation.

That our people may have direct information uopn this subject, I recommend that your honorable bodies appoint a joint committee to whom shall be added about three or five other citizens of Georgia to be named by the Governor, for the purpose of securing and placing before our people the most available plan of securing for our farmers at the lowest rates of interest such money as they may need for the conduct of their affairs.

When we realize that in Germany a farmer can borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent, whereas in Georgia the gross rate paid runs from 12 per cent sometimes to even 20 per cent, the importance of this subject can be readily realized as being paramount.

Near Beer Tax Evasion.

The law providing for the collection of a license tax for the sale of near beer is so drawn that the payment of this tax has been delayed or evaded by very many dealers.

To prevent excuses for delay in paying this tax in future, I recommend that you place the duty of its collection upon some of the county officers with proper compensation therefor and also provide adequate penalties for failure to make prompt payment.

Prison Commission.

I would suggest that the Prison Commission be given authority and directed to inspect jails. It is more important that persons detained merely for trial be properly cared for than that those already convicted of crime be treated well.

Many good women have urged me to advocate the enactment of a law providing for the inspection by women of those quarters occupied by female prisoners. I deem the suggestion a good one and well in keeping with the demands of actual propriety and broad humanity, and as such commend it to you.

In this connection I will state that it has been proposed in some circles to restore the practice of whipping female convicts in order to maintain discipline. I respectfully suggest that such a return to a practice semi-barbarous in its nature would not be in keeping with the enlightened spirit of our modern civilization.

The point has been raised in the public press and in some other circles that the State ought to allow moderate wages to convicts in the penitentiary, such wages to be paid to the families of these convicts whose protector and provider the State holds in confinement. I scarcely think that we are ready to take such a step; but in the event it be seriously considered, I respectfully suggest that, inasmuch as the convict is immured because of his taking the life of another, or of some damage done to others, if wages be allowed by the State they should be paid mostly, if not entirely, to the family whom the convict has deprived of its protector and supporter.

Charge to Juries.

Experience having shown that in capital cases trial juries from time to time have requested the presiding judge to recharge them upon certain points where their memory had failed to retain the instructions in his charge, I respectfully suggest that it be required that in all capital cases the presiding judge shall, after reading his charge to the jury, hand a copy of it to the foreman to be taken into the jury room for consideration in their deliberations.

It is a known fact that a number of the trial judges of this State, after conviction by juries, pass sentences in conformity with the law and then suspend them, such suspension to last during the pleasure of the judge. Although this procedure by these judges has been declared unlawful by the Supreme Court, yet the practice is persisted in. I do not assert that this practice is in itself against public policy, but undoubtedly it should be in conformity with the law if it is to be continued. Hence, I recommend that your honorable bodies enact such legislation upon this subject as your wisdom suggests.

District Agricultural Schools.

The District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools having been taken into the University system of the State, I respectfully suggest that the co-operative relationship between the State University, through the State College of Agriculture, and the above district schools be made closer than they have heretofore been. To this end I suggest that the Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture appoint at least one member from its Board of Trustees to be an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees of the District Agricultural and Mechanical School in his Congressional District; whereby each of said district schools will have thereon one trustee of the State College of Agriculture. Such member should be required to attend the annual commencement exercises of the district school to which he is assigned and should have full privilege and authority to act with the Board of Trustees of the district school at that and all other meetings of the said district school, and should make to the trustees of the State College of Agriculture, after said commencement exercises, a full report of the conditions, progress, etc., of the said District Agricultural and Mechanical Schools.

The Board of Trustees of the State College of Agriculture should also be clothed with power to exercise such authority over the district schools as will cause them to conform to a general plan.

State University Support.

The demands of modern civilization are trending toward the greatest development of the human mind. That State which trains the brains of its young manhood and womanhood to the exercise of the highest powers is the State which by natural process takes and holds the leadership over her civic sisters. The strongly developed mental faculties of a people have greater weight in the control of world powers than the broadsides of battleships. Genius makes conquests more abiding than are made by guns, and the strength in the trained brains of a people holds greater security than strength in the most elaborately constructed forts.

And while you are appropriating money and enacting laws for the more efficient and extended cultivation of the soil of our State, hold ever in mind that the cultivation which will bring the greatest crops and choicest fruits is the cultivation of the minds of her youth.

Hence, I urge you to build up as rapidly as Georgia's resources will admit the State University which our forefathers created and which, with its branch colleges and other high educational institutions, can develop the mental powers of our young people of both sexes for keeping this great State abreast of her most ambitious rivals.

Before passing from this subject I can not refrain from the statement that the charm of the University of Georgia is its democracy. From a close observation of the conduct of its affairs for the past four years, I am prepared to assert with pride that the son of the poorest parents in the State has equal consideration by the faculty with the son of the richest.

Merit and application open the gates of opportunity to all alike, and it is especially pleasing to note that the citizens of Athens extend impartial kindness to all the students regardless of rank or wealth.

The State, therefore, has a selfish interest, and pardonably so, in every dollar she appropriates to maintain to highest efficiency this, her great braintrainer.

School of Technology.

It is impossible to measure the value to the State of the School of Technology. The high standard which its graduates hold is finding its reflex in the technical development of the Commonwealth from the mountains to the seaboard. The modern demands for education of this character in the architectural and mechanical development of our people are so imperative that we can not afford to let this great institution of learning lose aught of the high grade of efficiency now characterizing it.

It undoubtedly is true that this school has lost several of its leading instructors by reason of the inadequate compensation they received. I, therefore, urge you to appropriate the sum of $10,000 as an addition to the annual maintenance fund of the said school, making same immediately available.

I also recommend the addition of $7,500 each to the annual maintenance funds of the Georgia Normal School and the Georgia Normal and Industrial School.

Payment of School Teachers.

In my annual message to your predecessors last year I stated that the condition of the treasury had permitted the payment of but 10 per cent of the amount due for expenses of the common schools. I regret to report that, the appropriations having increased in greater proportion than the State's income, it has been impossible to pay any amount as yet of the common school appropriation for this year.

During the past three months we have made inquiry into the question of the payment of teachers; that is, we have sought to get the truth of conditions as they are.

The result of the investigation proves that the evil has not been exaggerated by those who have decried it.

Briefly, we found that approximately one-third of all the teachers in the public schools of the State in 1912 were forced to wait from two to twelve months for their pay, or, in lieu of waiting, had to discount their claims at from 8 to 25 per cent.

A great proportion of those who received prompt payments were paid with funds borrowed by local boards of education, who were required to pay from 6 to 12 per cent for the money.

Concretely, we estimate from the reports received that advances made to boards or teachers during 1912 amounted to approximately $2,000,000, and that these advances cost at least $75,000 in interest or discount.

Loss of Efficiency.

Thus, it is clear that the waste in money due to delayed remittances from the State is great, and there must be an equal loss in efficiency resulting from the indifference fostered by the faulty and difficult method of financing the schools.

With $1,000,000 more revenue available during the spring and summer months the State would be able to make prompt monthly remittances to the school systems, and thus would practically overcome the difficulties now labored under, and growing worse.

Therefore, I urge upon you the necessity for taking such steps as will enable the Executive Office to make prompt monthly payments as due on the appropriation to the public schools.

The information gathered as the result of the investigation above referred to is on file in the Executive Office subject to your wishes.

Economy in Appropriations.

While there has been a gratifying increase in the taxable valuations of the property in the State, yet the demands for expenses to maintain schools and other educational institutions and the civil list require more than the present income of the State. Hence, I urge your honorable bodies to exercise great discernment and care in the matter of appropriating the people's money; and that, so far as can be made practicable without militating against the actual needs of the State's institutions and the conduct of the government, you exercise the strictest economy.

Lawlessness in Certain Counties.

Within the past few months certain lawless persons have posted notices in Forsyth, Dawson, Cobb and other counties, warning all negroes to move from those counties under penalty of destruction of their homes and lives. Several of such threatened outrages have been perpetrated through the dynamiting of houses, besides the burning of one store.

I am reliably informed that quite a number of farms in Forsyth County have been practically abandoned this year for lack of labor, which has fled before these threats. The State can not tolerate such a condition of affairs. She can not allow even a just resentment against lawless individuals to take the shape of wholesale intimidation of labor necessary for the conduct of farms and industrial enterprises.

There is no reason why farms should lost their productive power and why the white women of this State should be driven to the cook stoves and wash pots simply because certain people blindly strike down all of one class in retaliation for the nefarious deeds of individuals in that class. The application of the law is to the individual who violates it, and all who are law-abiding are entitled to and must have the protection of the law.

I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a statute which will meet the situation above indicated, and punish all who would impair the powers of honest labor. The penalty for dynamiting or burning residences should be fixed at $500 for each offense, and rewards of such amounts, not greater than $200 per person, should be authorized for the arrest, with proof to convict, of every one guilty of posting threatening notices or using other measures for intimidating people and driving them from their homes.

Railroad Commission Reduction.

Unnecessary offices which levy additional taxes upon the people should be abolished. It is against public polity to maintain sinecures. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to your honorable bodies the reduction of the membership of the Railroad Commission from five members to three.

When it is considered that only one member of the five is required by law to devote his entire time to the service of the office, and that the larger number of members makes that body cumbersome, as well as needlessly expensive, it is patent that it is to the State's interest to reduce the number of Commissioners, and also to dispense with the office of special attorney for the Railroad Commission.

I will add that the Interstate Commerce Commission has assumed the authority to raise intrastate rates when it seems that these rates injuriously affect interstate rates. The lower courts have upheld that Commission in this action. The Supreme Court of the United States has practically upheld this position in a recent decision, hence it would appear that a blow has been struck the Railroad Commissions of the States. In such event it would clearly be a waste of the people's money to maintain as many as five members on this Commission for the purpose mainly of supervising the occasional building of depots and the collection of statistical information.

Furthermore, it is well known that the number of members of this Commission was increased in 1907 for the purpose of installing what were termed "port rates." Yet, although the advocates of "port rates" have been in the majority on the commission from September, 1907, to June, 1909, and from November, 1911, to this date, there has been no effort made by the Commission to even promulgate "port rates." Hence, as "port rates" have been proven to be a campaign theory, which it is impracticable to make effective, it is manifestly contrary to the public interest to maintain five members on this board at the expense of the taxpayers.

Criminal Law Reform.

Inasmuch as our penal laws have undergone little change during the past half century, it might be timely for you to make inquiry looking to amendments necessitated by changed conditions and modern developments.

I wish to direct your attention to one important change that is needed. In misdemeanor cases where prison penalties with alternative fines are imposed leave should be given for payment of the fine, or the pro rata portion of the fine due at any time before the completion of the prison or chaingang sentence. In most court jurisdictions it is held that once the fine alternative is rejected, and the period for accepting it elapsed, the fine can not be paid except by commutation from this office. In no case will they pro rate the penalty, deducting, as they do in cities, for the period of time served by the prisoner.

This is manifestly unjust, amounting to a special penalty on poverty and misfortune. A great many persons are unable to raise the amount of the alternative fine when it is imposed upon them, but later do raise it, or a sufficient amount, allowing for the time served to meet the intent of the sentence imposed. The only way they can get relief is by coming to the Executive Office with applications for clemency, which puts them to unnecessary expense and this office to much trouble, all of which could be obviated by your providing an automatic method for prisoners to pay their fines at any time before sentence is completed.

Pardon Clerk Recommended.

Applications for executive clemency are becoming more and more burdensome on the Executive Office. During the past eighteen months this office has been forced to consider nearly 1,000 of such appeals. Outside the assistance rendered by the Prison Commission, the Executive Office each week is forced to read and answer scores of letters, and see or otherwise deal with scores of callers relating to such applications. Inasmuch as the Constitution places full responsibility in these matters on the Governor, he is in duty bound to examine each record and to make such investigations and inquiries in addition to those made by the Commission as he thinks proper.

The result is that this work takes up a large proportion of the time of the Executive Office, precluding attention to other important business. In addition to this, lack of time makes it impossible for this office to pursue investigation of many cases as thoroughly as their importance demands.

Therefore, I recommend that you provide the Governor with a pardon clerk, or attorney, who shall devote his entire time to assisting in handling applications for executive clemency.

Better Tax Assessing.

Again permit me to repeat the recommendation made in my general message of last year, and previous ones during a former administration, relative to the urgent need of a better method of assessing property for taxation.

All who have studied the question agree that if property now escaping taxation, and other property bearing less than its equitable burden, were required to contribute their just part to the support of the State government our revenues would be augmented to the extent of the deficit, which is now of serious consequence.

It is but simple honesty to demand that all property be required to bear its just share of the expenses of the government which gives it protection. Therefore, I recommend that you amend the tax law so as to provide a method of assessment for, and equalizing of, taxes more just than now prevails.

Compulsory Arbitration Necessary.

During the fall of last year there occurred a strike by the employees of the street car company in Augusta, and another strike by certain employees of the Georgia Railroad, which, for a number of days, prevented the public from having the benefit of the operation of these common carriers.

By the census of 1910, the city of Augusta had a population of 41,040 people, and the counties served by the Georgia Railroad had an aggregate of 582,182. These figures give an idea of the widespread wrong which these striking employees committed.

These two corporations were chartered by the State for the purpose of conducting commerce and the carriage of passengers. The primary object of their charters was service to the public. Consequently, when the charters were granted and these roads were built a contract was virtually entered into by the owners of these properties and the State whereby the former bound themselves to perform the duties of common carriers for the public, and the latter bound herself to protect them in the peaceable performance of those duties.

Not one word was said in those charters giving the owners the right to suspend operation of the roads to the detriment of public convenience, or giving the employees the same right. So long, therefore, as either of those companies attempts to perform the duty it assumed the State is under obligation to use extreme force, if necessary, to protect it in thus serving the public.

"Labor Trust" Scored.

Furthermore, in the amended Railroad Commission law, as embodied in Sections 2663 and 2664 of the Code of Georgia, the Railroad Commission is authorized to require all common carriers and other public service companies under its supervision "to establish and maintain such public service and facilities as may be reasonable and just." Also, "to order and compel the operation of sufficient and proper passenger service when in its judgment inefficient or insufficient service is being rendered the public or any community."

Again, it has been very aptly said by one writing on the status of the State in relationship to the common carriers:

"The power to fix rates and charges for transportation is an attribute of sovereignty, because in operating a public highway a transportation corporation exercises the power of a sovereign. This power over public highways constructed for public use to accommodate public travel and secure public convenience is a matter of public concern and is absolutely essential to government."

Hence, it necessarily follows that any person or combination of persons who obstructs, intimidates or otherwise prevents the operation of the common carriers strikes a blow at the interests of the public and puts his or their will in conflict with the mandate of the sovereign.

Augusta Strike Rebellion.

There is no escape, therefore, from the conclusion that those employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad put themselves in a state of open rebellion to the laws of Georgia. They ignored the cardinal tenet of republican government, viz.: "There shall be equal rights to all, special privileges to none," and arrogated to themselves the exercise of special privileges for settling their quarrels with their respective managements at the expense and serious inconvenience of the public, and in a manner which embodied defiance of the law which requires all dwellers in the State having differences which they can not peaceably adjust to submit them to the State's courts.

Again, their acts in leaving the service of the employing companies, and in virtually encouraging the formation of mobs to intimidate and personally assault those citizens whom these common carriers induced to take the places they had vacated, that the carriers might obey the law which created them, was logically a claim which can be expressed in these words: "This is your property, but it is my job on it. I and my partners, the union, will defend our mutual rights to exclusive ownership of the position which we hold on your property. We will determine for you whom you shall hire and whom you shall not hire, and what wages you shall pay. While it is true that we have not invested a dollar in this public service utility and you have invested millions in it, yet we have vested rights in these positions, rights which we have acquired by usurpation, and we will hold them, while defying the laws of the State and subjecting the public to serious inconvenience and loss, even against you. On your property chartered to serve the public we are supreme over you, supreme over the public, supreme over the law. The union label carries more authority than does your Great Seal of State."

"Labor Exacts Tax."

In considering the status of the public service corporations and their employees, there is one factor which can not be ignored. This is embodied in the following words found in the last annual report of the Railroad Commission of Georgia:

"In 1908, the railroads operating in Georgia employed in Georgia, 34,809 persons; in 1912, they employed 39,691.

"The wages paid these 39,691 employees in 1912 exceeded the wages paid the 34,809 employees in 1908, $5,771,104.93 more than in 1908. This, however, was to a larger number of employees. The individual wage scales show that had the number of employees for 1912 been kept the same as in 1908, they are being paid $3,668,725.21 more than in 1908.

"In other words, the 34,809 employees in 1908 received $3,668,725.21 more in 1912, which is an average increase to each railroad employee in Georgia in 1912 over 1908 of more than $105 fer annum.

"The Commission has taken ten trunk line roads in the State, to dit: the Southern, the Seaboard, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, the Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the Central of Georgia and the Western and Atlantic and their wage accounts show that they paid in 1912, to the same number of employees as in 1908, in wages, $2,604,794.90 more than in 1908.

"The individual wage scale further shows that by far the largest increase in wages has been paid to employees belonging to labor unions, such as engineers, firemen, conductors, train hands, etc."

In other words, while the average increase to each of the 34,809 employees in 1912 over 1908 was $105.00 per annum, the average increase to each member of a labor union was larger by far, in some instances, doubtless approximating $300 or more.

Holds Unions Menace.

Hence, we are brought face to face with the fact that these unions, or combinations of employees, not only on public service corporations but, as is generally known, on practically all other corporations have forced their wages up above those received by workmen in all other departments of life who have not formed these aggressively militant combinations. Tens of thousands of other citizens who are not in these unions, therefore, are confronted by the fact that the unions are levying a tax upon them to the extent that they are forcing from the employers an inequitable proportion of the wages paid to the general classes in the State.

If the State not only authorizes these unions, or combinations, to exact higher wages than others receive, but also permits them by authority of law or by winking at their violations of it to hold up the general public and rob it of the facilities for transportation, then she can not claim the right to protect any farmer or other person employing labor against his employees who might strike and proclaim to him that nobody else should work his crop for him; that if he hired any other employees they would burn his dwelling and barns, and, if needs be, kill him and his new employees to establish their supremacy over him and his property.

And if the State says to owners of railroads, factories, etc., "You shall pay tax on this property which you have created or bought, but another class shall control it. I hold you responsible for keeping it in condition for safely serving the public, but I allow them the privilege of wrecking it, or of deprivng the public of the use of it," then how can she protect a farmer or any other citizen in the right to control his property?

Settlement of Strikes.

The same courts established by the Constitution and composed of judges elected by the people and jurors chosen from the people are open to the members of labor unions on the same guarantee of equality as they are to farmers and all other classes in the State, and no method of settlement of quarrels by labor unions which results in inconvenience and damage to the public should be tolerated.

Again, upon this point, it is generally understood that when the members of one of these unions strike against the employing company, the members of the same union on other companies are assessed to support the strikers until the strike is ended. If this be true, the organization in question could assess one-tenth or one-fortieth of the amount and employ counsel to take the cause of the controversy into court and could have justice secured without damaging any of the interests of the public.

Or, if the strikers are not thus supported by their brother members, they could assess themselves a sum insignificant beside the gross amount of wages lost during the period of the strike and could have their case adjudicated in the courts without inflicting damage upon the unoffending public.

In either case they would go before judges and juries of their fellow citizens in precisely the same manner as every other one is required and compelled to do; and it is impossible for all other classes to concede that the members of labor unions have any preferential privileges suggesting, if not actually applying the process of anarchy when they—the masses—are required to submit to the process of law.

Justice Not Measured by Votes.

The mere fact that the laborers on a public service utility or in a factory have more votes than the owners of these properties have, has no bearing on the legal status of the case. Justice is not measured by the number of votes any more than by the weight of dollars. Each party is under the law. Each is entitled to the protection of its own rights in court. Neither is entitled to interfere with the rights of the other either in court or out of court.

It should be further borne in mind in this connection that it is primarily the poor people who are subjected to inconvenience and damage by the acts of strikers. In Augusta, for example, the rich could use their own conveyances or hire others for the purpose of coming into town and going out to their homes, but the poorer classes in some instances were compelled to walk two miles each way to reach their places of employment and to return home; whereas, had these striking employees of the street car company abstained from the unlawful acts they committed in preventing the operation of that public utility, these laborers in the humbler ranks of life could have come from and returned to their homes at trifling cost. And the poorer people at the stations on the Georgia Railroad were subjected at many points, to great privations which the rich were able to protect themselves against.

Therefore, in such cases it is the striker, who, in his blind recklessness, puts his feet in the bread tray of the poor man and interferes with or deprives him of the right to live—the cardinal right of humanity.

Public Has Rights.

Summing up the status of a strike by employees on a public service corporation, we can not fail to know that there are more than two parties to such strikes. There is a third party, the public, which is subjected to unmerited and unnecessary inconvenience and loss. And above all, there is a fourth party, viz. the State, whose Constitution the strikers have ignored and whose laws they have trampled under foot. Concerning this fourth, and greatest, party, I will add:

The criss which a strike on a public service corporation brings upon the masses of the people is not only a menace to their power to procure the necessities of life, but is also a challenge to the very sovereignty of the State in that it arrogates to itself the power to prevent the railroads from performing the special functions for which the State granted their charters, viz. those of being common carriers of persons and property.

There is no power in Georgia greater than the power of the State herself, and that power holds mastery over and gives direction to every other power which she permits within her borders. She is supreme in potential activites, whenever she finds it needful to exert them. She exacts allegiance and will not divide it. She ordains one process for all, and holds any rival process as rebellion. She is no respecter of persons in the enforcement of her laws.

State Greater Than Man.

It is needless then to say that the State would not permit the management to shut down the operation of a street car line or a railroad. It is manifest, therefore, that the acts of the employees in preventing such operation is equally indefensible, equally condemnable, and that they should be just as inflexibly held accountable to the laws of the State. No man, no combination of men, is greater than the State and her laws.

I have stressed the views herein advanced because the object lessons given by the striking employees of the street car company in Augusta and of the Georgia Railroad have been a practical service of notice by the labor union to the State of Georgia that its law within her borders is greater than her law; that the allegiance of its members to it is more binding than the allegiance they owe to her.

The Executive Office has not made this issue: the State of Georgia has not made it. The labor union has openly and recklessly thrown down the gauntlet. The State, therefore, can not shrink from her duty to her Constitution and her people.

Public Welfare Threatened.

It is a matter of current note that the power of the labor union to hurt the general public and to terrorize public men anxious to retain offices of honor and trust has been found in the fact that in several communities it votes solidly in blocks of scores or hundreds for those who cater to it and against those who refuse to bow to its demands; but I call your attention to the fact that, besides multitudes in the cities and towns whose interests are jeopardized by its exactions, there are upward of 200,000 voters in the rural portions of this State whose welfare can only be protected by holding the members of the labor union to the same non-interference with the rights of others and the same accountability to law which they admit as governing themselves. They will certainly claim that the labor union men, individually and collectively, are no better and have no greater rights than they.

I will add that it is no answer at all to say that labor can not get its rights in any other way than by a strike and boycott. The courts are as open to the labor union man as to the farmer, and there is not the slightest reason why the latter should be required to settle his difference in the State's way, which injures no third party, and that the labor union man be left free to damage everybody else while settling his difference by a strike.

He, therefore, who would remain in public life would do well to merit the approval of those myriads of law-abiding and peace-loving citizens beside whose numbers the labor union's is a trifle.

Calls It "Labor Trust."

Finally, on this subject, I will observe that the trend of the laws of the present day is to the suppression of combinations, generally styled trusts, organized for the restraint of trade. These trusts are condemned by law because they endeavor to force from business all competitors save those in their guild and to exact out of the people unduly high prices for products they handle.

Yet, while it is a matter of public note that the labor trust is the most widespread and aggressively exacting trust in America, politicians pander to it, statesmen stand in awe of it, and the public seems helpless in its grasp. Why? Because it votes in blocks of thousands in almost every State in the Union. It is composed of allied organizations which stand as one man against all other elements of society.

Recent events have shown that some of the leaders of one of these organizations have been sentenced by a United States Court to imprisonment for crimes or violence against those who did not yield to their exactions, and the members have bailed them out and reelected them to high offices in the organization. Such a development is appalling to every lover of law. Yet it is an object lesson which tells more vividly than words that the labor union holds itself as being higher than the law.

Unions in Minority.

The labor unions have but a small minority of the people of Georgia, yet, by combinations which work through strikes and kindred methods, they are aggressively levying a toll upon all the other elements of our citizenship. In other words, they have organized a trust and demand that all other people buy labor at whatever price they choose to put upon it—and that price is higher than other workmen in like occupations receive and higher by far than the people have ever paid before. And contemporaneously, they are endeavoring to force from employment all similar workmen who do not join their orders. To attempt, as non-union men, to compete with them as laborers means to be treated with open contumely, attended sometimes by personal violence. To hire non-union men means for employers to be boycotted and not infrequently to suffer serious damage to their property.

Equal Oportunity Choked.

Therefore, as the labor unions have combined against all other classes in their determination to defeat the equality of opportunity assured by the laws of the State the necessity is forced on all other classes to stand together in the refusal to concede to the unions the preferential privileges they are endeavoring to exact for themselces alone. And, as the unions have their passwords, the password of all other citizens should be: "The Law."

It is not improper here for me to declare that not all of the members of the labor unions are wilful violators of law. A very large percentage of them love their State and would not knowingly do any one an injustice. Yet they are the victims of a system which is breeding anarchy, which has already put the State's Constitution in contempt, which has relentlesly wronged hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens who have not offended them, which, in plain words, has applied lynch law methods to millions of dollars worth of property. I pass no harsh criticism on them, but every person who reverences the law must condemn the reckless disregard of the rights of the public which has characterized their leaders. And the State must, with unmistakable clearnes, not only condemn these acts, but must force the doers of them as clearly to know that she will not suffer such occurrences to be repeated

"Law Should Protect."

It is a cardinal principle of civilization that law-abiding people should be protected in the enjoyments of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The State does not interfere with her orderly citizens in the possession of these rights, and it is the intent of her Constitution that no one within her borders shall be permitted so to interfere.

I have no more interest in this matter than has any other average citizen of Georgia; but, as her Chief Executive, whose duty to obey her laws by enforcing them is supreme over every ambition and personal interest, I have noted the recurring instances of open contempt of her Constitution, of inconvenience and damage recklessly inflicted upon multitudes of her citizens by one class, and of brutal assaults upon working men who were engaged in obeying her laws and serving the people by operating the public utilities which she had chartered and whose operation she had commanded, and I would be unworthy of the confidence with which the electorate has honored me should I fail to lay these facts before you and call upon you to enact such statutes as will force all classes and all individuals to equal allegiance to the State and equal obedience to her laws.

Upwards of two millions of people in Georgia will look with no patience upon the continuance of a condition which leaves their basic rights in life at the mercy of the star chamber of the labor union.

Compulsory Arbitration.

Under the conditions I have portrayed it has been made the duty of the State, therefore, to protect her citizens from such unlawful happenings in the future. Compulsory arbitration should be required by law, and neither the management nor the employees of a public service corporation should under any circumstances be permitted to paralyze or otherwise interfere with the powers of the public for the transportation of persons and property, or for any other service for which the corporation was chartered.

I, therefore, respectfully impress upon you the importance of enacting such laws at your present session to the end that the masses of the people shall not again suffer from the acts of any who, for their own selfish interest, would impede commerce travel or other public need or convenience. And the same law should govern every factory wherein capital and labor come in conflict.

I also respectfully suggest that you amend Section 2664 of the Code of Georgia by requiring the Railroad Commission to promptly advise the Governor of the stoppage of performance of the duties for which it was chartered by any public service corporation when combinations of persons unlawfully prevent its operation, thus damaging the interests of the public, and that he thereupon issue a proclamation requiring the sheriffs of all counties in which said public service corporation's working property lies to summon posse comitatus to protect said corporation in the performance of its chartered duties; and that, in the event the resistance to law by disorderly parties be too great for the civil authorities in any county or counties to overcome, the judge or judges, sheriff or sheriffs shall promptly notify the Governor, who shall thereupon use the militia, or such portions of it as may be needed, to enforce the State's laws which require the operation of said public service corporation or corporations for the welfare of the people.

Suspension of Sheriffs.

I also respectfully suggest that you enact a law authorizing the Governor to suspend a sheriff whenever he finds it proven that said sheriff has willfully failed to do his duty in protecting the people of his county against acts of lawbreakers, and to appoint a sheriff to serve until after a new sheriff is chosen by the people at the next regular election.

Such a law prevails in several other States, and that it is needed in Georgia was proven in at least one glaring instance during the period of the strike on the Georgia Railroad last year.

It should be furthermore provided that a sheriff thus removed shall not be eligible for election to any office in the county of his residence until at least two years after he has been thus removed by the Governor.

Laws Affecting the Militia.

The Constitution of Georgia, Article 10, Section 1, says:

"A well regulated militia being essential to the peace and security of the State, the General Assembly shall have authority to provide by law how the militia of this State shall be organized, officered, trained, armed and equipped; and of whom it shall consist."

The words "essential to the peace and security of the State," are proof that the makers of this Constitution, which we have taken an oath to execute, deemed that there were likely to come crises in which the civil authorities would not be able to maintain peace and protect life and property. The genius, the very soul, of that Constitution is democracy, yet its every paragraph proves that it is a self-bridled democracy. Its provisions leave every law-abiding citizen fullest liberty for exerting his powers in any legitimate occupation, but places a constant curb on crime, with penalties to be applied to every one who will interfere with the rights of those who obey it.

The great minds which made it realized that attempts to supplant or dethrone the law must not be temporized with, but must be promptly met by trained force which would maintain protection to the people through the supremacy and majesty of the law.

Creation of Militarism.

Hence, they have clothed your honorable bodies with the authority above indicated and by plain inference have made the same your duty.

Therefore, if the use of the militia of the State be "militarism" it is clear that the Constitution creates "militarism" and ordains that such shall be the instrument of its enforcement when lawless elements in any community, contending only with the civil authorities, set that Constitution and the statutes at defiance and imperil the lives and property of the people. The same Constitution declares that "protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete." This is but an amplification of the ancient maxim: "The safety of the people is the supreme law."

And we must not ignore the fact that on her Great Seal of State, amid the columns, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation" which uphold the arch of the Constitution, Georgia presents to the world's view the figure of a soldier holding a drawn sword, thus symbolizing the fact that inside the very temple of peace she holds the type of martial power, power loyal and ever ready to protect that Constitution and the peace which it commands.

Use of the Militia.

During the past summer and fall, the use of the military was called for, in the manner prescribed by law, to protect the public against lawlessness resulting from the strike by street car employees in Augusta; and also from threatened attempts to prevent the process of the State's laws in Cumming, Ga.

It was a deplorable fact that in Augusta three persons put themselves in insubordination to the military law, one, if not two, of them in an open and defiant manner intended to lead to destruction, by a mob, of property in custody of soldiery placed by the State to guard it; hence, were killed in the exercise of their unlawful acts. No one except these can be blamed for their deaths.

Deeds done in defiance of the military law must necessarily meet penalties just as deeds done against the civil laws must meet the same. It is well known that extreme acts of violation of the civil laws have for their penalty death, and this, when dire necessity comes, the State inflicts.

Militia Not a Bluff.

It can not be admitted, therefore, that when lawless parties, by threats of incendiarism and personal violence, terrorize a community and prevent the civil authorities from enforcing the laws, and the military is called out, that the latter should be instructed to refrain from rigorous measures, even from the infliction of death, for the protection of the peaceable and law-abiding members of the community. The Constitution manifestly does not intend that the militia shall be used simply as a bluff.

Such use would put the Constitution itself in contempt and absolutely invite anarchy. The very word "militia" carries with it the knowledge that its weapons are guns and other means of destroying life if extreme necessity for securing impartial and complete protection for the law-abiding so demands.

We must not overlook the fact that the Constitution provides that the sheriff of any county may summon posse comitatus when the elements of violence threaten to subvert the law in his county. But the militia is the State's posse comitatus, to be used when the sheriff's posse comitatus is too weak to protect the peace and good name of the State. If then the posse comitatus of the Sheriff of Richmond County had have killed the three men before referred to, in Augusta, no law-abiding citizen would have condemned it. There is, therefore, absolutely no reason for condemning the State's militia for a like defense of the State's authority. No man must give a dare to the State.

Trial by Military.

As to the trial by a military court of the officers and men concerned in the killing in Augusta of the three men who by their deeds defied the militia whom the State had put in charge of the city, for the preservation of life and property, I will say that the State has both the legal and the moral right to fix whatever process she deems appropriate. In some of her civil courts she requires trial by jury, in others juries are omitted. In municipal courts persons are deprived of liberty without the verdict of juries. She, therefore, ordains such court procedure as she deems fitting to the crime, the local conditions or the emergency.

In her law governing the case under review she did not choose to fix a status, half fish and half fowl, to adjudicate in a civil court acts done under military government which the civil authorities had requested to supersede their own. Here was no usurpation of the rights of a free people; they made the status themselves.

There was no degredation of their manhood. That manhood is as upright and as self-respecting in decreeing the temporary supremacy of the military to stamp out anarchy as it is in times of peace when the civil process is properly the only authority. The suppression of anarchy is the right and duty of a free, law-loving people, and there come times when they must shoot it to death just as they shoot down foreign invaders.

Enemies of Law.

And no specious pleas by enemies of law and no theoretical treatises by alarmed sentimentalists should weigh against the logical process which law, in times of peril, must take to insure its supremacy over the hydra of anarchy. And, while I hold in high honor the patriotic devotion of some of our best citizens who have deemed the use of the military as a menace to the security of our institutions, yet I must say firmly that the man at headquarters, who, the Constitution declares, shall be a conservator of the peace throughout the State, and the man on the scene of danger, are better fitted to judge whether the soldiery is needed to protect life and property, as is provided by the Constitution and the statutes, than can be any people living many miles from the zone of peril.

Now, as to the personnel of the militia, I call your attention to the fact that its members are not foreigners or hirelings. They are not the Governor's soldiers, organized by his order to display his power; they are your soldiers, by the mandate of your Constitution, organized to protect your homes, your lives, your civilization. They are your own flesh and blood, your sons or brothers, who, thrusting not themselves into the arena of danger, but called thither by the operation of your statutes, leave their occupations, sometimes losing their present income, and submit to inconvenience, endure privations, and stand ready to sacrifice even life itself to shield you and to uphold the dignity of your laws.

Part of Government.

Instead, therefore, of being held as a thing apart, the Constitution makes them an integral factor of your government; instead of being an excrescence, they are your strong arm never to be exerted save when your other elements of strength are inadequate or helpless; then, with the force of a thunderbolt.

And in their patriotic willingness to lay down even life itself to protect you and your laws, they embody the words of our Divine Lord: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend:" (John 15-13.) And should any of them lose lives in the service for which your very Constitution has ordained their organization, they merit the paraphrase of the simple, yet sublime, epitaph which his countrymen placed over Leonidas and the Spartan band who fell at Thermopylæ in defense of their country, viz.: "Go, stranger, tell it in lacedæmon that we died in obedience to her laws."

Let me say, therefore, that Georgia's name should be the synonym of good faith; that when she guarantees impartial and complete protection she must make her guarantee good; that the uniform of a soldier who unselfishly leaves home comforts and hazards his life for the protection of the laws of the State and the lives of her people is a badge of honor. And a twenty-year-old youth, standing in uniform with gun in hand for the protection of the law, is more to be honored than are 10,000 men who directly or indirectly lift hands for anarchy, class preference, or class tyranny, for that youth represents not militarism in its formal sense, but he is the ultimate resort of the law.

Upholding the Law.

The present law prescribing the manner of using the militia of the State was passed unanimously by the Senate and almost unanimously by the House of Representatives. Both factions united in enacting it after considering it for more than a year. Undoubtedly a potent factor in securing the enactment of the law was the knowledge that, while many good people are moving into Georgia, yet there are also elements with practices and views widely at variance with these adhered to by our native population.

Consequently we must assume that it is the judgment of a vast majority of the people of Georgia that the military must be used as military when emergencies demand. The General Assembly, therefore, does not have to apologize for making this law; and the Governor does not have to apologize for ordering its enforcement. And the militia does not have to apologize for obeying the order the Governor transmitted to it. Each performed a high duty which the people for their protection had ordained.

Some of the happenings in Georgia during the present year have trended inevitably toward bringing your Constitution into contempt. It is for you, therefore, to say whether you are going to surrender this State to anarchy or whether you are going to preserve it for law. It is for you to say whether you are going to allow one class, with less than 30,000 members, preferential privileges to the detriment and danger of the remainder of the public with upwards of 330,000 voters or whether you will enforce your process against all law-breakers alike.

Mobs and Lynchings.

It is for you to say whether you will allow barns to be burned, residences dynamited and people driven from their homes, thus destroying property valuations and depriving certain counties of needed laborers; and whether you will allow mobs to force sheriffs and jailers, before the muzzles of guns, to surrender prisoners in the State's custody, who are then taken out and unlawfully killed. It is for you to say whether you will allow the statutes you enact to be made a mockery or whether all men in all classes shall obey them in the same manner. You have the power to enact laws which will control every situation I have portrayed.

Yet, I am in the line of duty and self-respect when I say: Do not make it the Governor's duty to enforce a law and then condemn him for doing it. Any Governor, true to his oath, will enforce it regardless of condemnation. And do not, even by inference, command a militiaman, a sheriff or other agent of the State to imperil his life and possibly lose it, to protect your lives and property and uphold the dignity of your Constitution, and then fire into his back from the State House whence his orders came. Do not enact laws which you intend shall not be enforced, or which you would allow to be tampered with. There is no middle ground between law and anarchy.

The people of Georgia are jealous of their liberties, but they are not going to suffer their statutes defeated and their Constitution made contemptible under the false plea of liberty. That license which styles itself liberty, which would subordinate the rights of the public to the selfish interests of classes or which would substitute the process of anarchy for the process of law, has no place in any State inhabited by freemen. True liberty sits side by side with the enthroned law.

Enactment of Laws.

In conclusion, allow me to urge upon you thoughtful care in the enactment of statutes for the public welfare. The laws of Georgia should be deliberately framed and so broad and just as to be graven on the very hearts of her people; they should inspire confidence and willing loyalty which would make it the proudest boast to say: "I too am a Georgian!" And the authority of the State and of her municipalities should be so reverenced that a Sheriff's badge and a policeman's club would command as great respect as does the baton of a marshal of France.

100 Moors Slain in Battle.

RESINOL HEALS BABY'S SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

If baby is suffering with summer eczema, prickly heat, heat rash, chafing, insect bites, or any of the other distressing hot weather skin irritations, give him a warm bath with Resinol Soap and put a little Resinol Ointment on the sore places. The itching and smarting stop at once, sleep becomes possible, and, under this gentle, easy treatment, the trouble soon disappears.

After that, a daily bath with Resinol Soap is usually enough to keep baby's delicate, easily irritated skin clear and healthy through the hottest summer weather.

You need never hesitate to use Resinol. It is a doctor's prescription that has been used by other physicians for eighteen years in the treatment of all sorts of skin affections. It contains absolutely nothing that could injure the tenderest skin. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense if you prefer. Send to Dept. 48-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for liberal samples.

Make State and County tax returns now. Office corner Pryor and Hunter Streets. T. M. Armistead, Tax Receiver.

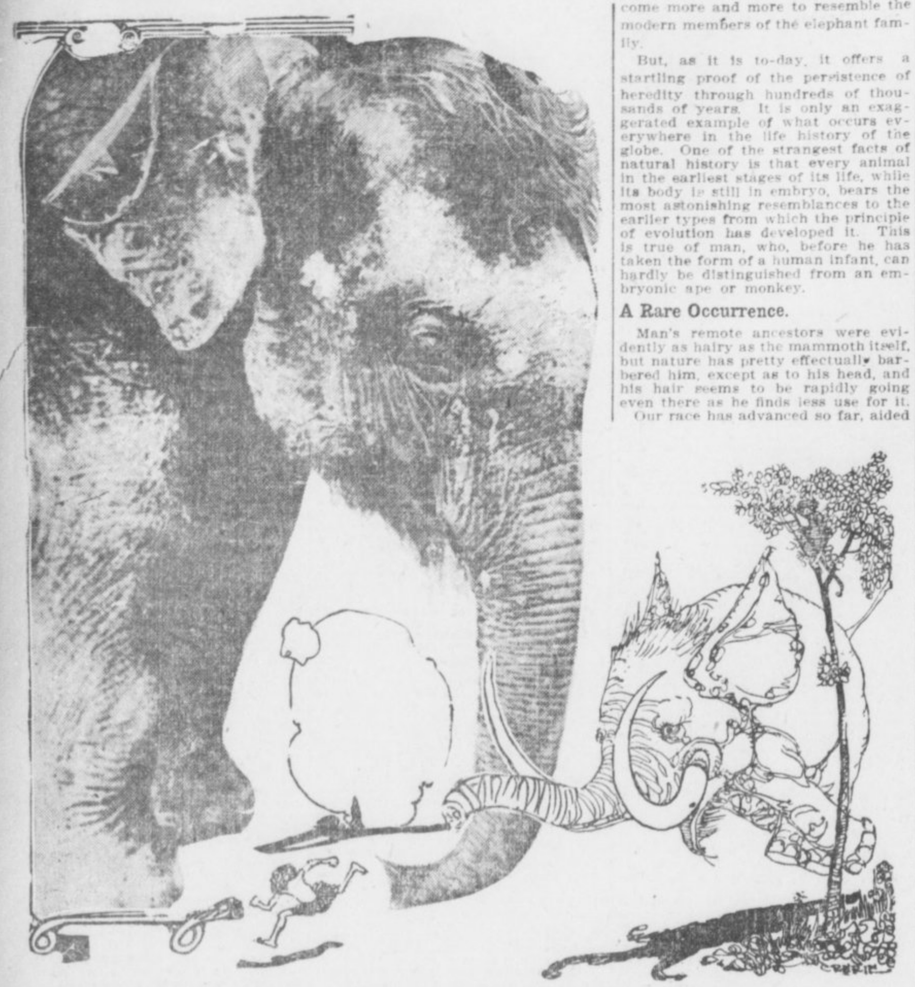
: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.



A Young Sumatran Elephant—Showing the Very Hairy Coat and Large Ear.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice. "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

"Well, all right; just tell me how I can get the money and I'll try it."

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

One glance was enough. Cain returned to the beating of his horse with redoubled vigor.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of ahe great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally destrous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke's broad jowls shook from the force with which he snapped his jaws together.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

Write us to-day for our beautifully illustrated booklet, telling all about the freezer; it is ABSOLUTELY FREE—and receive our free trial offer.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us." Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a magpie for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it.

Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up. HAL COFFMAN.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE moment Warren entered Helen knew by the set lines of his mouth that something unusual had happened.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay three or four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or she is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Items of Interest

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 173,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

Would You Buy a Motor Car Without Ball Bearings?

Or a racing sulky? Or a sewing machine? Or a watch without jewels?

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Co.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

This is only one of the reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter is worth more money than any other typewriter ever made.

We can show you by actual demonstration how you can increase the efficiency of your stenographer and save yourself time and money.

Our Atlanta Branch is located at 121 N. Pryor Street, and we will welcome a call at any time or we will send a representative to talk over your particular problems with you.

ATLANTA LAD MAY BREAK IN WORLD SERIES

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE city of Atlanta may be represented in the next world's series. Of course several things will have to "go through" to make it turn out this way, but anyhow Milton Reed, Jr., of Atlanta, shortstop of the Davenport Club of the Three I League, has been sold to the Philadelphia Nationals for the largest price ever paid for a Three I League player.

If the Philadelphia team wins the National League pennant—and it might happen—"Milt" will surely be entitled to a slice of the world's championship money. He joins the Phillies August 19, and if he is kept to the end of the season, as of course he will be, he will be in on the big division. And it might just happen that he would get in a game—even if only as a pinch hitter.

* * *

REED will not go to the big leagues for the first time this fall. Though only a kid, he has been tried in a half-hearted way by the St. Louis Nationals. He was with that club when internal ructions had everybody in the air and he got only half a chance. He was too young and too erratic to make a go of it.

This season with Davenport Reed has been going like wildfire.

Here is the way Deacon Davis of the Davenport Democrat and Leader tells of the sale and career of Reed:

Reed will join Red Dooin and his league-leaders August 19. The contract provides for a 60-day option and the Blue Sox management wish to keep the clever Southerner here as long as possible in order that they may have more time to secure a man to fill the position.

Love at First Sight.

Here is the story of Reed's captivity of the heart of Billy Neal, the Philly scout: Billy blew into Peoria Friday. He registered and hied himself immediately to the ball park, where the Hose and Distillers were mixing it.

There he sat, a disinterested spectator, and watched the game until he noticed, when the Hose took the field, the rangy, springy daring short fielder.

"Who can this be," muttered Billy to himself, for he had never heard of Reed before.

Then Billy declares that he enjoyed about an hour and a half as well as he ever did in his life.

"It was fun for me to watch that boy work. He is one of the speediest infielders I have ever seen. He has nerve, 'pep,' confidence—in fact, I think he has everything," said Billy after he had Hayes' name securely affixed to a contract.

After the game the veteran skull-hunter broke for the Fey Hotel and talked to Battling Tom O'Leary (ex-Cracker, by the way) about Reed. Dan referred him to Hayes, and after staying in Peoria Saturday he went to Chicago Sunday and came to Davenport Monday for the conference which resulted as stated above.

Neal Tickled With Deal.

Neal told Hayes while he was here Monday that he had never conducted a deal as long as he had been scouting that gave him the pleasure this one does. "He's a marvel," is the way he expressed it.

According to their custom the local club officials refuse to divulge the price paid for Reed. Jim sits tight, grins appreciatively and says nothing about the price, but he has a habit of slipping ball players up every year. All he murmurs is this: "We got our own price for him."

Reed played some college ball and started his professional career in the Cotton States. Here he attracted the attention of a Cardinal scout and was purchased by the St. Louis Club in the fall of 1911. He was sold in the spring without a try-out to the Springfield Club, where he stayed until August 15 last year when he was sold to the Hose for $500.

Early this spring he was in fine form, but for a few weeks after the season opened he was handicapped by a bad "charley-horse." During the last month he has hit his stride and has been burning up the league since that time.

* * *

IT is understood that the price paid for Reed was $2,700. If so, the Davenport Club gathered in a nice profit on the deal.

Reed has been a promising ball player ever since he was a bit of a kid. His work with Marist was sensational. He has always been a wonderful hitter.

Joe Jackson Laid Off; Too Rough on Sunday

CHICAGO, June 25.—President Johnson, of the American League, announced the indefinite suspension of Joe Jackson, the Cleveland batting hero, for his conduct in the double-header with Detroit at Cleveland last Sunday, and declared he would write Manager Birmingham severely censuring him for the affair.

"Cleveland is a peculiar city," said Mr. Johnson. "The trouble provoked by Jackson might have started a riot, and anything approaching that would result in the abolition of Sunday baseball in Cleveland.

"It is only recently that we have been able to play Sunday games there. The failure of Birmingham to realize this and to handle his players so as to prevent danger of disturbances on the field on big days convinces me he is not competent to manage an American League team.

"I have not fixed the length of Jackson's suspension, but his punishment should be severe under the circumstances."

British Golf Crack Keeps Championship

HOY LAKE, ENGLAND, June 25.—J. H. Taylor, four times holder of the British open golf championship, won it again at a score of 304 for the four rounds. His score in the first round was 73 in the second 75, in the third 77, and in the fourth 79 strokes.

Last year's champion, Edward Ray, was second, with 312 strokes, his score by rounds being 73, 74, 81 and 84. Harry Vardon, open champion five times, tied with Michael Moran, the Irish champion, taking third and fourth places with 313 each.

John J. McDermott, open golf champion of the United States, tied for fifth with T. C. Renouf, their totals being 315 each.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Boston team is the big surprise of the National League race so far. Stallings has whipped an apparently hopeless team into a winning combination that at present is hovering about the top of the second division in spite of the fact that it has been fighting its battles away from home recently. Stallings took a couple of pitching possibilities that had never displayed any too much previously, namely, Perdue and Tyler, and built a ball team around them. He has worked over this club of his and has drilled much baseball into the players. They are not overlooking many opportunities and watch closely for the slips of their opponents, which is one of the big secrets of a winning ball club.

Brooklyn has done fairly well on this Western trip; in fact, all the Eastern teams have, with the exception of Philadelphia. Dahlen insists that his team will finish in the first division, and I never saw a Brooklyn bunch with so much fight in it as this one has. I guess it is trying to live up to the looks of its new ball park. You know there is an old belief in baseball that a new stand means a pennant, but Brooklyn will have to do a terrific amount of hustling to make good on this. All the supposedly weaker teams in the league are fighting better this season than I ever saw them before.

* * *

FRANK FARRELL has made a determined effort to stop gambling at the Polo Grounds by shutting out the petty gamblers who make books. This is a move in the right direction. It is the fans of this stamp that hurl most of the abuse at the umpires and players and who drive some men out of a city by their constant pestering. Professional gamblers are a great detriment to baseball and the one real danger which it confronts.

* * *

IT looks as if we are going to have an argument over Lathrop, the Notre Dame pitcher, who has reported to the Giants. He is also claimed by Comiskey. McGraw and the "Old Roman" are very good friends, except when they both desire the same incipient star pitcher. Then they are both fighters. Comiskey's claim is that the coach at Notre Dame induced the desirable twirler to sign an agreement that he would play with the White Sox when he finished college, but "Dick" Kinsella, the Giants' scout, went one better and got Lathrop's name to a New York contract. Comiskey threatens to put the matter up to the National Commission for settlement, and how this body will decide is doubtful, but the odds are in favor of Comiskey. Still, McGraw has the pitcher now, and possession is said to be nine points of the law.

* * *

IT is evident from his efforts to obtain pitchers that McGraw appreciates their value to a ball club. When the Giants' staff was going poorly last spring, we were trailing along in the second division or just hanging into the first. But when the pitchers came around into shape, we sprinted and are still sprinting. Philadelphia led while the pitching staff was going nicely, but, with the deterioration of the twirlers, the club has cracked.

THEY are going to make another stab at a race meeting to-night at the Atlanta Motordome and if rain does not interfere they should have a corker.

The program committee has worked overtime in getting things evened up so that each heat will be a great race. They have studied the ability of the various riders at the various distances, the speed of the machines and other available dope and have then chucked the riders in the heats in such a way as to make every heat a close race, with the thrilling finish certain in the finals.

For instance in the opening heat of the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes Renel, Swartz and Luther have been placed. These men are practically even, with a terrific race likely between Swartz and Renel provided "Mile High Harry" has his machine in the fine condition he believes it to be.

Watch Out for Glenn.

In the next heat Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Henry Lewis—Both of them new men at motor racing on the boards—have been thrown in the same heat with George Lockner, who hasn't been going very well thus far and has only one third place to his credit in the standing table.

So it goes through the whole list of events. Riders of equal speed are in the same heats. And the thing is so arranged that Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards, the two fastest men at the track thus far, will face each other four times in what should be one of the greatest series of contests ever decided over an American board track.

The full program for Wednesday night follows:

Woodward Sweepstakes.

First heat, 2 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 2, Harry Swartz; No. 6, Fred Luther. Second heat, 2 miles—No. 10, Harry Glenn; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 4, George Lockner. Third heat, 2 miles—No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Third heat, 3 miles—No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 5, Wilmer Richards. Fourth heat, final, 3 miles—For winner of each heat and second man in fastest heat.

Special match race, to be announced later.

Robertson in Lead; Elberfeld Is Second

Dave Robertson, the Mobile slugger, is again at the top of the Southern League batting list. The Mobile outfielder secured four hits out of five times at bat yesterday, and is now hitting at a .352 clip.

Elberfeld is second, with a mark of .347. Long dropped a few points yesterday, and is now hitting but .333.

Wallie Smith and Welchonce still remain high up and a batting streak for either would make it real interesting for the leaders.

The afternoon was waning fast
When from the baseball yard there passed
A youth whose heart was sad and sore,
And at his boss these words he swore:

"Try not that stuff!" John Evers said,
"Twill bring a fine upon your head!"
He beat it toward the shower bath
And said in accents full of wrath:

And as he beat it from the place
He answered with a smiling face:
"Although I am the worst of chumps
I have not said unto the umps:

We have it from various sources that Prof. Zim speaks two languages fluently—Bronx and Profane.

We note by the sporting papers that the high cost of living has hit ball players. Boyish pranks on the Cub menu card are now quoted at $200 per throw.

There are thirty-third degree fight fans in our midst, but it takes one who has been raised (or lowered) to the nth degree to become enthused over the news that Carl Morris and Marty Cutler are engaged to perform an alleged battle.

Reading reports from St. Louis and remembering what happened to Jim Scott, one is led to suspect that Orvie Overall has been riding a motorcycle.

Possibly H. Zim has been celebrating his alma mater's victory over Yale on water. At the same time, it would be hard to imagine H. Zim celebrating a victory on water.

CATFISH.

(Being inside baseball which C. Dryden has been kind enough to hand to us.)

Al Bridwell smiled at Mister Klem;
He merely looked and said:
"Ahem!"
Or some such break as that he chanced to make,
And Klem remarked in accents hard
"You beat it from this baseball yard—
I'm simply chasing you for old-time's sake."

Pelicans Cop Last in Frankville

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 25.—We're at Red Elm Park for three games with the Turtles, and if we don't cop two of them I'll buy you a hat when we get home. Conzelman will be on the mound this afternoon, with Chapman receiving.

We had punk luck the last time we visited Memphis, though it wasn't all luck at that. The Turtles got away with three of the four games. This trip our motto is "Rev-v-venge," and we're out to get it.

* * *

WE were trimmed in New Orleans yesterday to the tune of 4 to 2. Rube Evans had Gil Price bested a bit. Rube has everything, is airtight in the pinches and he held us at every stage of the game. There was nothing to it but lose.

It was a freakish game, with all kinds of crazy plays. Spencer's three-bagger got lost in the tall grass, and two men scored before Alperman could find the pill. Then Long fanned with the bases full. Bailey was called out at second, tried to argue it out with Umpire Stockdale and was given a holiday for the rest of the game.

* * *

THE Pelicans have absolutely the worst diamond in the league. The infield is so rough that the basemen are growing one leg longer than the other from standing in the holes. If one picks up a grounder it is the luck of heaven. I'm glad we've finished with Frankville for this round.

Piggy Paige Jumps Texas League Club

AUSTIN, TEX., June 25.—"Piggy" Paige, one of the Austin slabmen with whom Manager George Leidy expected to defeat Houston during the present four-game series, will not appear in battle array. The fans missed Paige from the uniformed ranks of the Senators anu one of them asked George about it.

"Paige jumped the club and that's all there is to it," said George. "He cost us $150 and some salary money, threw a couple of games away and then skipped for parts unknown."

The jumping act referred to happened the day before the Senators invaded Houston for the series now in progress.

Austin secured Paige from the Nashville club of the Southern League. He reported just before the Senators left home for their swing through the southern wing of the circuit.

Leidy has asked President Allen, of the Texas League, to have Paige suspended for jumping a contract.

Louisiana Governor Bars Prize Fighting

NEW ORLEANS, June 25.—"There will be no prize fight across the river."

These words from Governor Hall sealed the fate of the twenty-round fight scheduled between Jack Britton and Charley White at the West Side Athletic Club in McDonoughville, Jefferson parish, on July 4.

"That affair has been advertised all over the State as a twenty-round prize fight," the Governor continued. "It is nothing else than a twenty-round knock down and drag out prize fight, and directly in violation of the law. It will not take place."

KILBANE LEAVES COAST; MAY MEET JACK WHITE

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 25.—Champion Kilbane, accompanied by his wife, Manager Dunn and his family, left yesterday for Cleveland. Kilbane, just before departing, said he wants to come back here again soon if a match can be arranged for him.

JACK O'CONNOR IS SUING THE St. Looey club for $25,000 for releasing him. Surely, the Brown owners feel that it was worth the money.

SHORTY FOLEY SAYS: "A prophet is not without honor if he puts on the reverse english in the shape of a strong qualification." For instance, Christy Mathewson predicts that the Giants will win the pennant unless the Phillies, Cubs and Pirates happen to.

BURNS LIKELY TO SUFFER FROM CANADIAN FIGHT LAW

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 25.—The charge of manslaughter against Tommy Burns will not be dropped as a result of yesterday's verdict in the Pelky case. The finding of the jury that the bout was a prize fight will give the prosecution a powerful lever against the promoter, and the Canadian law makes the promoter guilty of manslaughter in a fatal prize fight.

WISCONSIN SOON TO GET LIBERAL BOXING LAWS

MADISON, WIS., June 25.—The Hedding bill creating a State Boxing Commission and legalizing ten-round, no-decision boxing exhibitions, was ordered to the third reading in the Upper House of the Wisconsin Legislature last night. It will come up for final action on Thursday.

The bill has passed the Lower House and if it gets through the upper will go to the Governor for approval. The vote on advancing the bill was 12 to 11.

Campi Beats Ledoux To Jelly on Coast

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—Eddie Campi, more clever and faster than ever, outjabbed, outpunched, outgeneraled and out everything else the French bantam weight champion, Charley Ledoux, earning a 20-round decision in the ring here.

Ledoux is willing, game and durable. There his credit ends. Charley took a whipping that would have made Battling Nelson jealous. As it is, the boy's best friends won't be able to recognize him until the flaxseed poultices and raw beef strips have had healing time.

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

C. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

$1,500 Each—Adair & Weinmeister, 219-223 East Avenue; two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. P. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company has leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side. Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

A farm tract of 136 acres 3 1-2 miles from Buckhead in North Fulton County has been put on the market at "old farm prices" by the Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. This is one of the largest tracts offered in that section for some months.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 106 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

In discussing some questions, the Governor goes much further than some in his place would care to go—even dare to go.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

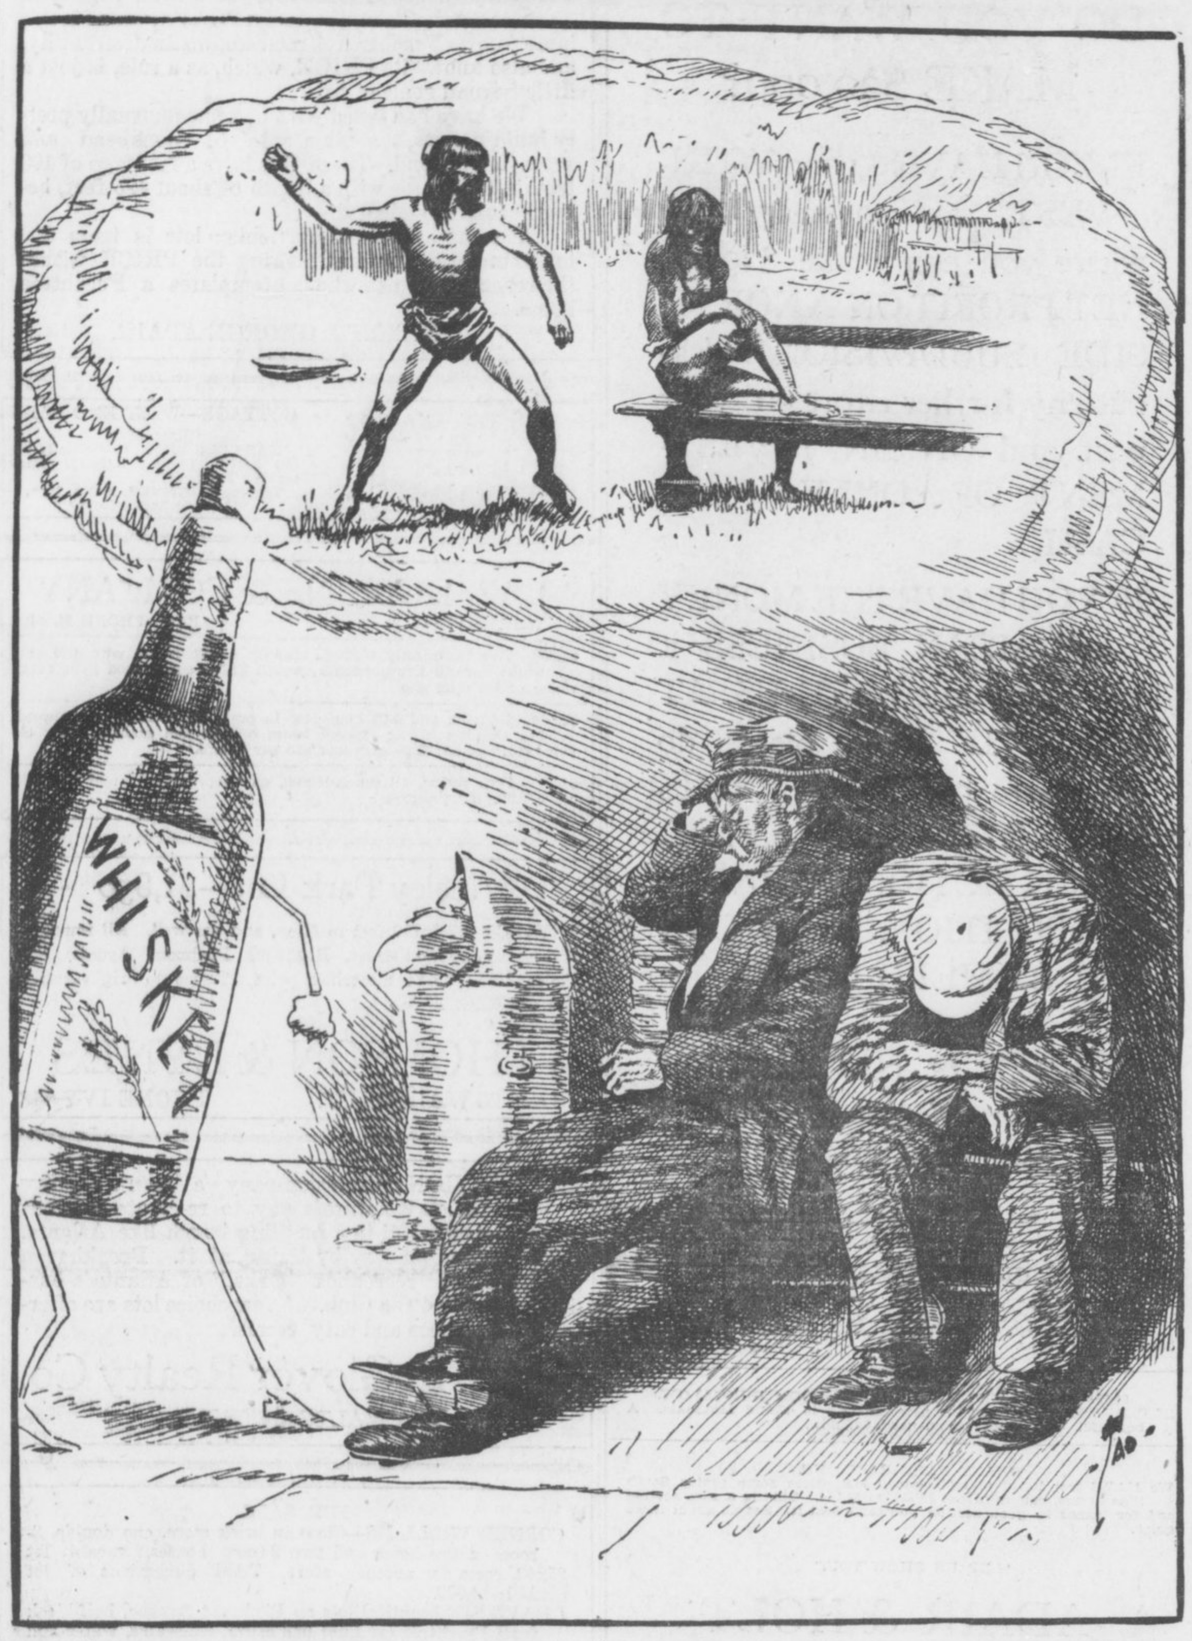
They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

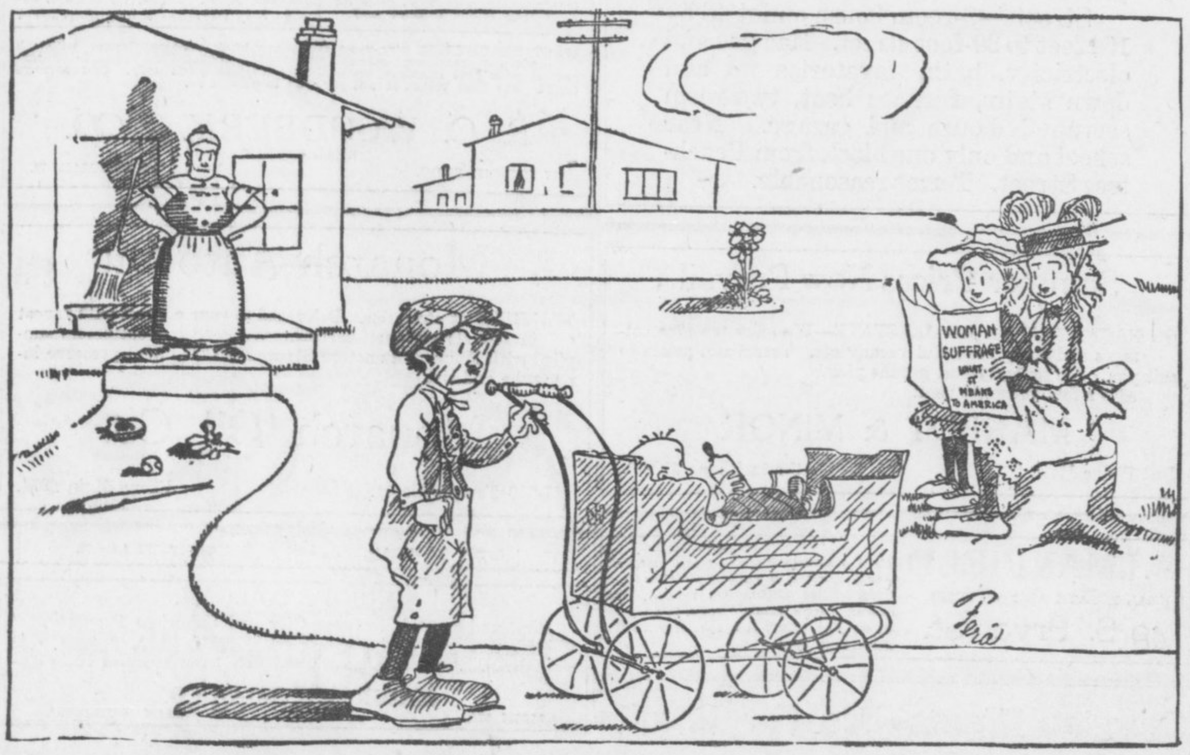
The Hardest Hitter



The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

Whiskey, with its mailed fist, always leaves a mark. The man on the bench NEVER gets a chance to win.

One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on

The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

$100,000 OF PAINTER'S POLICIES PAID

Penn Mutual Settles Insurance Claims—Viscera of Fertilizer Man Eagerly Sought.

JACKSONVILLE, June 24.—The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company has just paid $100,000 in cash on three policies held by the late E. O. Painter in that company. One policy for $50,000 and one for $3,000 were paid to the widow, while the third for $47,000 was paid to the estate.

H. S. Hill, supervisor for the company, came here, closed up the transaction and left for Philadelphia in a few hours.

No policies held in other companies have been settled.

Three Interests Seek Painter's Organs.

BALTIMORE, June 24.—Determined that if the viscera of E. O. Painter, the late Jacksonville fertilizer man, are to be turned over to anyone, he shall be the one to receive them, C. D. Abbott, the Coroner of Jacksonville, arrived in this city to-day. On the same train came ex-Judge J. A. Stewart, of Deland, brother-in-law of the dead man and personal representative of the Painter family, who is equally determined that the family shall receive the coveted organs. Attorneys for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company are just as determined that the one-time vitals shall go to Dr. George Whipple, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Three Factions to Meet.

The warring factions will meet this afternoon before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court. The bonding company with which Painter had an accident insurance policy for $20,000 will demand that the organs be placed in the hands of a receiver on the ground that the analysis has not been completed. Coroner Abbott will demand that the organs be turned over to him on the theory that he has jurisdiction until an official verdict is given. Judge Stewart will contend that the analysis has been finished, no trace of poison found, and that the organs should be given to the family of the dead man.

Coroner Prepared to Fight.

Coroner Abbott has brought a deputy sheriff, J. M. Haddock, of Jacksonville, along with him to back up his fight. The deputy is armed with all of the authority of the State of Florida to seize the organs, and he is just as determined as is the Coroner that they shall come into possession of Justice Abbott.

"By law those organs are still in my hands," said Coroner Abbott when seen at the Emerson Hotel shortly after his arrival to-day. "It was I who ordered the analysis, and until my jury has given a verdict in the case the body of the dead man is certainly in my possession.

"Until Saturday I understood that the report of the analysis sent me by Dr. Glaser was of the entire viscera. Then I learned that the analysis was only of Mr. Painter's stomach, and so I have hurried to Baltimore to take possession of the organs and see that the analysis of all of the organs is made.

"I may let Dr. Glaser complete the analysis or I may put them in the hands of some other chemist. But you can rest assured that I am the one who will have to say by whom the analysis shall be made."

Benefit Ball to Aid Yanceys; Fund for 7 Nearly at Standstill

The fund for the widow and six children of Dave Yancey, the brave court deputy who was stabbed to death by a negro, is almost at a standstill.

Several of the deputies have been busy in the past few days selling tickets to a ball to be given Friday night at the Owls' Club, and through this it is hoped to raise $300 or $400. The tickets may be had at 25 cents each from N. A. Garner or D. L. Goodlin, Jr., in Solicitor Dorsey's office, or from Harry E. Latham, at the office of the Solicitor of the City Court.

Following is a letter received Monday by The Georgian from an unknown person who inclosed $1 to be added to the fund:

"I intended sending my mite long ago, but procrastinated. There must be many more like me, for big-hearted Atlanta means to help that good family. Hence, please keep on asking. Much more will come."

Princess 'Pat' Again Reported Engaged To German Prince

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—For the second time in seven years the engagement of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, British Governor General of Canada, to Prince Adolph Friedrich, heir to the Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was "reliably reported" to-day.

Princess Patricia, known as the "most lovely and most likable of the English princesses," has been reported engaged many times. Among those mentioned as the possible husband of the beautiful princess were King Manuel, while he was crown prince; Count Turin, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel; the Duke of the Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michél, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso.

The princess is 27 and the prince 31 years old.

Mary Tribble Grows Weak; Hope Lessens

Little hope was entertained Tuesday for the recovery of Mary Tribble, the 7-year-old girl whose two weeks of mysterious paralysis is supposed to have resulted from eating chalk with poisonous coloring matter.

The decline in her condition was noticed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Simon L. Katzoff sought to restore a normal circulation by an hour's massage, and he substituted an electric treatment for this with the same end in view, but with little effect.

Dr. Katzoff is not at all convinced that the girl was poisoned by the chalk. The same symptoms, he believes, might have been caused by any one of a half dozen other circumstances.

Judge Newman 70; Doesn't Stop Work

The celebration of his seventieth birthday did not make Judge William T. Newman, of the United States District Court, pause on his work Monday. Had not a number of telegrams of congratulation come to the court room, few would have known that the distinguished jurist had just reached the Biblical threescore and ten years.

Judge Newman has been a resident of Atlanta since the war. He was City Attorney in the seventies, and was made a Federal judge during the administration of President Cleveland.

W.C.T.U. PLAN DEFEAT OF ANDERSON BY PRAYER

Bitter Attack Made on Savannah Candidate for Senate Speakership—Called Saloon's Ally.

With a bristling attack by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, W. C. T. U. State president, women temperance workers of the State to-day took up in earnest the fight on Senator J. R. Anderson, one of the two leading candidates for President of the Senate, which convenes to-morrow.

State Senators were f[illegible] with letters protesting against Tre[illegible]son's candidacy and denoun[illegible]priations van-nah man as a foe of [illegible] and an ally of the liquor [illegible] Bureaus.

Prayers will be o[illegible]ons in the fight, women June 24.—R[illegible]state joining in pleas to aid of New, prevent the election [illegible] Houston.

Judge Allen is Anderson's most formidable opponent and has vigorously denied that his rival had the fight won. What effect the women's attack will have is problematical, but it means that the opening session of the Senate to-morrow will be no tame affair.

Mrs. Patterson's Letter.

Here is the letter local temperance workers have received from Mrs. Patterson, writing from Griffin:

"Dear Friends and Co-workers:

"Senator J. R. Anderson, of Savannah, claims a majority vote for President of the Senate. Now, behold what meat this Caesar has fed upon that he has grown so great. He has fought the temperance forces at every point, led the filibuster, delayed legislation, defeated prohibition measures and all in favor of the liquor interests. He represents a community that openly defies the State laws. He is personally interested in the brewery and is secretary and treasurer of the Brewers' Association of his city.

"He has recently sent out a statement saying he opposed the saloon, but favors beer. This is the Model League's trick to conjure with. Mr. Anderson is so notorious for liquor and that gang that his elevation to this position would be heralded throughout the nation as a great victory for the brewers and distillers, and, indeed, it would be. Georgia led the late prohibition movement, and,to thus repudiate it at this time will hurt the cause the nation over.

Sees Peril in Election.

"If Mr. Anderson is elected to any place of power, we will suffer to thus place him where he might become Governor of the State, where he could defy the law of the State and manipulate everything, for the liquor interest is too hazardous to even consider.

"Our men are asleep, and only a few of those awake to the situation seem but little concerned. Oh, women, to your tents! Pray as you have never prayed! Lay this matter, by God's help, upon the hearts of the praying men and women of your community. I do not mean stay on your knees, but I mean to get this matter so on your heart that it is never a moment off your mind for the next few days, and that sincere desire, like incense from the altar, ascend unceasingly to God for the defeat of this enemy of our State and cause.

Urges Prayer on June 24.

"Then, on June 24, let us fast and pray that God's will be done in the election of a safe man as President of the Senate.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If you are not moved to white heat over the situation, pray God to move you. Study Isaiah 58, get the conditions of prevailing prayer, and, like Jacob of old, hold on until He bless thee.

'Continued Sultry Weather' Best That Forecaster Offers

Not even a cloud interposed itself between the sun and the city of Atlanta Tuesday, and the result was a sultry and sweltering day. Although the temperature was only 88 at 12 o'clock and 89 an hour later, it seemed much hotter.

The outlook for cooler weather, based on a fall in the maximum temperature Monday, signally failed to materialize Tuesday. The 89 maximum mark of the day before was exceeded shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday, and 30 minutes later the mercury was hesitating less than one-tenth of a degree below 90.

"Continued warm Tuesday night and Wednesday," was the prediction.

At 7 o'clock Tuesday morning the temperature was 72. An hour later it was 81. At 10 o'clock the 84 mark was attained. At 11 o'clock it was 86, and then came the 88 and 89 marks with the mercury still rising.

Festival Concerts Planned for Every Sunday in Future

Officers were elected and a special committee named to confer with the Auditorium Committee of the City Council looking to less interruption of the Sunday concerts, at an annual meeting of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Monday afternoon.

The Auditorium Committee, of which V. H. Kriegshaber is chairman, will seek to remedy the condition whereby Sunday concerts often are canceled because of poultry shows, conventions and other auditorium affairs. A determined effort will be made to have concerts every Sunday.

All of the old officers were elected, including W. L. Peel, president; George W. Wilkinson and Ben Lee Crew, vice president; C. B. Bidwell, treasurer; Victor L. Smith, secretary, and R. S. Wessells, assistant secretary.

Indian Teacher to Be Buried by Army

The funeral of Thomas Jefferson, an aged inmate of the Salvation Army Industrial Home, who died Sunday night following injuries received last Thursday from being struck by an automobile, will take place at Westview Cemetery at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Jefferson, for eighteen years a teacher on an Indian reservation, had been an inmate of the home for about two months. He was 70 years old.

All the men living at the home will attend the funeral, and the pallbearers will be selected from them. The regular Salvation Army service will be held over the grave and the band will play "Home, Sweet Home."

Committee Meets to Fix Convention Date

W. A. Wimbish, chairman of the committee appointed by President Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, to fix a date for the State convention to discuss the disposal of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has called a meeting of his committee for Tuesday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

In addition to fixing the date of the convention, which probably will be early in July, the committee probably will arrange the basis of representation for the gathering. It is proposed to have delegates here from every county, as well as representatives of various lines of industry.

Seeress Disappears With Macon Jewels

MACON, June 24.—Madame Thelma, who has been in Macon for several months, advertising and practicing as a fortune teller and seeress, has suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. Jewels and other valuables of patrons worth several thousand dollars are also missing. She told her customers to let her sleep over their jewels for two nights and she would be better able to tell their fortunes.

Private detectives have been employed to locate the woman, with the view of prosecuting unless she returns the valuables.

Little Miss Lobbies For Father

Burwell Banks on His Daughter

Mascot in Race for Speakership

Lyra Reid Burwell, 3 years old, and her father, William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, to whom he will owe a large measure of his success if he wins speakehship of Georgia House.

"You Are Going to Vote for My Daddy, Aren't You?" She Says, and It's Hard to Resist.

Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, who is a candidate for Speaker of the House, believes in mascots.

That's the reason why he had his charming little daughter, Lyra Reid, open his headquarters.

Also, it is why he brings her down every day to keep house for him, while he buttonholes visitors and runs down into the lobby now and then to see what the enemy is up to.

Little Miss Burwell is just three and a half years of age, but already she has developed a keen political intelligence.

She knows her papa needs to jolly along his friends and keep them interested in his cause nowadays, and she governs herself accordingly.

She is an exceedingly bright little lady, and her powers of conversation are marked for her rather youthful estate.

She can say, and does, in the most winsome of manners, "You are going to vote for my daddy, aren't you, mister?" to every visitor who seems worth cultivating.

Few, so far, have been able to resist her.

If every promise she has exacted stays put, the gentleman from Hancock will win the Speakership, in a walk, and will owe much of his victory to his charming little daughter, moreover.

GOVERNOR NAMES EXPO COMMITTEE

There was much exposition talk in the Capitol Tuesday morning. Governor Brown announced the Georgia Commission for the Panama Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915, while a request was received from the Anglo-American Exposition to be held in London in 1914 that Georgia arrange for an exhibit there.

Announcement of the Georgia Commission for the San Francisco Exposition is interesting, in view of the fact that it has been pending before the Chief Executive of Georgia for several years.

Following are the commissioners appointed:

From the State at Large—Frank Weldon, Esq., of Atlanta; ex-officio members, the Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Geologist; First Congressional District, Jacob Collins, of Savannah; R. C. Nealy, of Waynesboro. Second, Major R. E. L. Spence, of Albany; W. W. Banks, of Tifton. Third, Frank Lanier, of Americus; Charles Jack Shipp, of Cordele. Fourth, J. D. Massey, of Columbus; Lee Mandeville, of Carrollton. Fifth, R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta; J. R. Smith, of Atlanta. Sixth, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon; B. S. Willingham, of Forsyth. Seventh, John M. Vandiver, of Rome; E. P. Dobbs, of Athens; Dr. J. S. Daniels, of Danielsville. Ninth, Colonel S. C. Dunlap, of Gainesville; R. T. Jones, of Canton. Tenth, Thomas W. Loyless, of Augusta; Albert S. Hatch, of Augusta. Eleventh, G. R. Ashley, of Valdosta; J. W. Quincey, of Douglas. Twelfth, H. H. Stanley, of Dublin; J. Hunter Johnson, of Jeffersonville.

BOTH SIDES CALLED IN CONFERENCE BY JUDGE; TRIAL SET FOR JULY 28

Dorsey, Beavers and Lanford Summoned to Appear June 30 With All Affidavits They Have Secured Relative to the Phagan Slaying Case.

Just before the conference with both sides in the Frank case started Judge Roan intimated strongly that he would set the case for July 14 or July 28 and hold it in some more commodious court room than the one in which he sits on the fourth floor of the Thrower building. Judge Roan's personal inclination leans to a date in July, and it is not likely that the State or defense will object to acceding to his wishes.

The date was definitely fixed for July 28 at the conference.

The first important legal move by the defense in the battle for the life and freedom of Leo Frank, accused of the strangling of Mary Phagan, was made Tuesday in the issuance of subpenas duces tecum for the prime movers in the prosecution of the factory superintendent.

The following have been subpenaed to appear:

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, who will prosecute the prisoner.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who took an active part in the collection of evidence.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, who was the leader in obtaining incriminating affidavits.

Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott, to whom is generally given credit for the admissions gained from Conley.

All other city detectives who have worked on the case.

All of them are ordered to produce any affidavits they may have bearing on the case in court June 30, indicating that the defense will be prepared to go on with the trial at that time.

Judge Roan, however, had called a conference of the attorneys on both sides of the case for 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when he announced that he would set the date definitely after the attorneys had been given an opportunity to say whether or not their cases would be in shape to present if the trial were called the last of this month.

Plan to Use Same Evidence.

The startling move on the part of the defense was taken to mean that Frank's lawyers propose to use to free their client the very evidence the detectives and Solicitor General have collected to send him to the gallows.

The most significant demand is made upon Chief Beavers, who is commanded to bring into court the famed series of affidavits made by the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. It is evident that Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, who are conducting the defense, intend to tear the contradictory stories of the negro to tatters and make his statements appear so utterly ridiculous and improbable that the jury not only will refuse to accept them, but will interpret them as an effort of Conley to get from under the blame for a crime that he committed himself.

Chief Beavers is asked to bring into court the written statement made by Conley May 18 in the presence of Detective John R. Black and Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott; also the affidavit sworn to by Conley before G. C. Febuary in the presence of Chief Lanford and Detectives Black and Scott May 24, the affidavit made by Conley May 28, the affidavit made by the negro May 29 in the presence of Lanford, Campbell and Scott and all other written statements of the negro in the possession or control of the Chief.

Girls Also Are Called.

Chief Beavers is asked, in addition, to bring all the statements of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman; Monteen Stover, the girl who testified that Frank was not in his office when she went for her money; W. M. Matthews, and Miss Grace Hicks, the girl who first identified the dead body as that of Mary Phagan.

The defense has persistently ridiculed the stories of Jim Conley and characterized them as cunning fabrications to shift the blame on Frank's shoulders.

With the other affidavits, which for the most part are given credence by the defense, the attempt will be merely to show that the evidence which the prosecution holds to point toward the guilt of Frank only more firmly fixes it upon the shoulders of the negro sweeper, and that the State from time to time has shifted the ground on which it based its theory that Frank was guilty.

Hooper Calls Move a Trick.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, branded the move of the defense as a thinly veiled trick to impeach the testimony of the witnesses called by the State, and said that it was not at all unlikely that the subpenaes would be resisted.

He intimated his belief that it was the intention of the defense to use the affidavits as a comparison with the testimony of the affiants when took the stand in an effort to pick our every discrepancy and thus seek to discredit the witnesses.

Before the conference between Judge Roan and the attorneys on the opposing sides began in the afternoon, the judge announced that he would be the one who would set the date for the trial, after consulting the convenience of the attorneys.

He said that he desired to preclude the possibility that the case would be called for June 30 and the witnesses summoned and then one or another of the attorneys ask for a postponement. He expressed it as his purpose to carry the case through to its completion once it was started.

The judge said that he did not believe it right, in view of the warm weather, to call an umber of witnesses and then delay the case further. He said that after the attorneys on the two sides had been heard he would set the date himself.

Arnold Not Decided.

Reuben Arnold, one of the attorneys for the defense, said that he did not see how the defense could make any definite agreement on the date at this time, becaus of the possible contingencies that might arise before the trial. Solicitor Dorsey has announced that he was prepared to go ahead with the trial at any time.

That Leo M. Frank will go at once on trial for his life next Monday when he is brought before the court on the charge of strangling little Mary Phagan was the strong probability discussed in court circles Tuesday.

The prosecution has announced that

PHAGAN DEFENSE CALLS STATE'S LEADERS

its case has been practically complete for days. The defense has said that all its vital witnesses have been found. There has been no intimation that a continuance will be asked unless it be for some contingency as the illness of Frank or of an important witness.

The defense has been non-committal. The attorneys have not said that they would ask for a postponement. They also have refused to say that they would not seek a delay.

Rosser Reticent.

Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, has carefully avoided answering the direct question whether he would be ready for trial on that day. Reuben R. Arnold, associated with him, said the case was complete, but he, too, evaded a statement as to whether they would consent for the trial to begin next week.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is making his preparations for the trial on the supposition that the defense will be ready, and he will urge before the court that the case be tried on the date set. He summoned the first witnesses Monday and Tuesday, and when court opens next Monday he will have the corridors filled with persons who will testify against Frank. His preparations could not be more complete if he had received an announcement from the defense that no continuance would be asked.

Both the prosecution and the defense will have at least twelve vital witnesses. The inability of one to attend the trial, unless by death or removal from the jurisdiction of the court, would necessitate a continuance until this witness could attend the trial.

Arnold's Stand.

Attorney Arnold openly admitted that if one of his important witnesses was not able to appear in Frank's behalf when the case was called, he would move for a continuance and would not consider going to trial on the chance of the witness appearing later.

J. M. Gantt, one of the first to be arrested as a suspect, will be one of the most important witnesses for the State.

Developments since he testified at the Coroner's inquest, it is understood, have made his evidence of the utmost importance. He was one of the few witnesses to go before the Grand Jury when Frank was indicted, and he was closely questioned by the Solicitor Monday afternoon when he finished questioning Conley. It is said that evidence that could have been given by him in the examinations before the Conley affidavit was made, but was considered of no relative importance then, is now of vital interest to the State and he will be one of the star witnesses.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. SLAYING SUSPECT TRAPPED IN LIES Hewell Mystery at Dublin Not Cleared Up—Fourteen Arrests Already Made.

DUBLIN, June 24.—Jim Lewis, one of fourteen negroes arrested on suspicion in connection with the mysterious double murder of T. J. Hewell and his aged wife, has told several different tales as to his whereabouts Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday. All of his assertions that the officers have had time to run down have proven false.

When arrested at Scott, a few small bloodstains were plainly visible on his overalls, but on being taken out of the calaboose to be brought to this city the stains were just barely discernable, as Lewis had evidently been rubbing them so as to obliterate them as much as possible.

Investigation is still going on, and other arrests may follow.

Although officers have refused to make known the names of the other suspects, it has been learned that three arrested near Long Branch were Sam Irwin, Tom Green and one known as "Little Joe."

Jim Kellam, one of the negroes arrested Sunday, is still in custody, but the other two have been released, as the evidence against them was not strong enough to warrant their being held.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Hewell have been sent to Griffin for interment this afternoon.

The Coroner's jury held another star chamber session last night, examing six witnesses. Another session will be held to-morrow night.

Once Insane; Saved From Gun by Yell

The timely appearance of Police Sergeant Luck saved Isom Petree, 490 Whitehall Street, a paroled inmate of an insane asylum, from being shot by A. J. Leslie, of 20 South Humphries Street, Tuesday morning about 3:30 o'clock. Leslie saw Petree trying to break into the front window of his home, and was in the act of firing when Sergeant Luck passed the house on a bicycle. He shouted at Petree, and the young man ran around the corner of the house before Leslie could shoot.

Petree, since his parole from the insane asylum, has been living at the home of his parents, and a man has been employed to watch him. Early Tuesday morning the guard went to sleep, and young Petree slipped out of the house without his hat and coat.

Bandit Sandbags and Robs Cabinetmaker

W. W. Christian, 16 Larkin Street, a cabinetmaker, was sandbagged Monday night at Tattnall and Stonewall Streets. The robber took $14 and a pocketknife.

According to a morning newspaper account, Christian was in the act of giving the stranger a cigarette when he was struck. Christian, who declared Tuesday morning that he never smoked one of the paper tubes in his life, said he had stopped to inform the man that he did not smoke cigarettes.

Finds Destroyer of Mediterranean Fly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—After years of world-wide investigation, a parasite has been discovered which may destroy the Mediterranean fly, according to Dr. Filippo Silvestri, noted Italian entomologist.

Dr. Silvestri spent eight months in Western Africa and Algeria and discovered a tiny wasp which feeds upon the dread pest that has exterminated and devastated entire countries of fruit trees and vines.

Outwalks Weston, Collapses on Road

STAMFORD, CONN., June 24.—John Ennis, the aged pedestrian who three weeks ago started 24 hours after Edward Payson Weston from New York, intended to defeat Weston in his walk to Minneapolis, is seriously ill at his home here to-day.

Mr. Ennis collapsed on the road Thursday last after having passed Weston, and was taken home by his son, J. Frank Ennis, who accompanied him.

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BETTER

Drivers Who Ran Down Photographer and Newsie Are Out on Bonds.

Two victims of automobile accidents, C. W. Motes, photographer, and John Nickers, newsboy, were reported resting comfortably at their homes Tuesday morning.

Major Stevens, driver of the car which knocked down Mr. Motes, and E. V. D. Manning, operator of the truck which ran down young Nickers Monday afternoon, will be tried in police court Tuesday afternoon. Both are out on bond.

Mr. Motes was knocked down by Hugh Inman's automobile as he was crossing Whitehall near the intersection of Alabama Street. Patrolman Davis picked up the victim and ordered the chauffeur to carry him to the apartments of his daughter, 500 Spring Street. He did not regain consciousness for an hour.

Young Nickers was run down near the Grady Monument by a postoffice auto truck.

Foreign Wheat Crops Show Big Increase

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A cablegram received here to-day by the Secretary of Agriculture from the International Institution of Agriculture of Rome, reports increase in wheat crops of several countries over last year. The estimates of production this year and its percentage of last year's crop follows:

Wheat, Bulgaria 67,977,000 bushels, or 100.6 per cent.
Italy, 183,719,000 bushels, or 110.9 per cent.
India, 358,316,000 bushels, or 96.7 per cent.
Japan, 27,029,000 bushels, or 105.2 per cent.
Barley, Japan, 101,073,000 bushels, or 101.5 per cent.
Sugar beets, Belgium 84.7 per cent.
Denmark, 102.3 per cent.
France, 94.36 per cent.
Hungary, 107.8 per cent.

Georgia Farmer to Try Irrigation Plan

COLUMBUS, June 24.—F. W. Stanley, of the Irrigation Bureau of the United States Agricultural Department, has investigated irrigation plans of Arthur Bussey, one of the largest farmers in West Georgia.

Mr. Bussey owns several thousand acres of land at Riverside, twelve miles south of the city, which is pronounced by Mr. Stanley to be one of the finest farms he has seen in the South. On 150 acres of this land irrigation is to be tried. The land has been surveyed, the grade lines established and everything ready for actual work on the trenches.

Charters Launch to Save Prisoner's Life

CARABELLE, FLA., June 24.—In a chartered launch, J. C. Hagen has been spirited from here to Apalachicola for safe-keeping by Constable S. J. Long, who feared violence because of the slaying of Joseph C. Saunders. Hagen, engineer at Camp's mill, shot and instantly killed Saunders in front of the Gulf View Hotel late yesterday. The cause is unknown.

Saunders was a member of the Town Council, second lieutenant of the local military company and high in secret orders.

Tuberculosis Serum Fails in Experiment

NEW YORK, June 24.—VonRuck's new tuberculosis vaccine does not confer complete active immunity—at least upon guinea pigs—says a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Dr. R. S. Cummings, formerly of Barlow's Sanitarium, Los Angeles.

In his experiment he treated ten apparently healthy guinea pigs for ten weeks with Von Ruck's vaccine, and five weeks after they had completed the course he injected live tubercle bacilli. All died.

WILSON MONEY TALK INDORSED BY BANKERS

Believe Currency Legislation Is Safe in Hands of President and Congress.

At a meeting of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, held in their offices on Tuesday morning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, we have read with interest and approval the President's message to Congress, asking for the passage of some kind of remedial currency legislation for the relief of the banking and commercial interests of the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, First that we indorse heartily the spirit and purpose of said message.

Resolved, further, That it is the belief of the banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, representing the agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests of Atlanta and the prosperous Southeast, that a satisfactory bill for the reform of banking and currency laws should be passed at this session of Congress.

Resolved, further, That we believe that the combined wisdom of the President, the House and the Senate, after hearing from the banking, commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests of the country, can and will evolve a currency bill that will be satisfactory to the banks and beneficial to the nation.

Another Georgian Gets Swiss Post

MACON, June 24.—Dr. E. P. Frazier, Macon capitalist, with a fondness for Europe, has been appointed vice-consul at Vevey, Switzerland. Mrs. Frazier and the children are spending the summer there now.

When Dr. Frazier found the Government had no representative at Vevey he secured indorsements, and through the influence of Representative Bartlett, obtained the place. He sails Saturday. He is the second Georgian to be named for a Swiss post, Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, going as Minister to Switzerland.

Boy, Bitten by Snake, Will Likely Recover

SAVANNAH, June 24.—While picking huckleberries near his home at Bethesda, Edward, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jackson, was bitten on the leg by a four-foot rattlesnake. Superintendent Chapman, of the Bethesda Orphanage, cut open the wound and sucked the poison from the wound, after which the boy was rushed to the Savannah Hospital, where his condition is said to be favorable.

The lad's father was afraid to suck the wound because of an abscessed tooth. The snake was killed.

11,000 Cincinnati Workers on Strike

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Eleven thousand garment workers to-day obeyed the order to strike, and work in the majority of factories was completely tied up.

Workers demand 48 hours per week. Operators offer a 50-hour week. Former work was 54 hours.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—There was no sign of a break to-day in the deadlock of the ice manufacturers and their striking drivers, helpers, engineers and firemen. Hotter weather caused much suffering.

Rome Lawyer Sued For Total Divorce

ROME, June 24.—Accused of cruel treatment by his wife, J. Sante Crawford, well-known attorney, court stenographer and politician, to-day was sued for total divorce by his wife, who was a Miss McClaine. Mrs. Crawford alleges cruel treatment in her petition.

Both parties are well known, and each is prominently connected throughout the State. Crawford's family lived for years in Polk County, and his wife has relatives in Atlanta and Chattanooga. Mrs. Crawford is a very handsome woman.

The Crawfords have one child, a boy 10 years of age.

Nicholson Declines Post in Portugal

WASHINGTON, June 24.—President Wilson's ambassadorial troubles were augmented to-day when he was forced to accept the declination of Meredith Nicholson to serve as Minister to Portugal. Nicholson informed the President that family matters precluded his acceptance.

According to Secretary of State Bryan, an effort is now being made to place Mr. Nicholson in some other European diplomatic post.

Wilsons Exchange Anniversary Gifts

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mrs. Wilson to-day presented her husband with a pair of gold cuff buttons bearing the seal of the United States in raised enamel.

The President presented his wife with a handsome pearl necklace containing 28 jewels.

The occasion of the exchange of gifts was the fact that the day is the twenty-eighth anniversary of their marriage.

Race for Senate Presidency Is Still in Doubt

Deadlock and Dark Horse Election Suggested

Legislature's Opening Session To Be Called Wednesday Morning at 10 o'Clock.

Our only hope is in God. To Him be the honor and glory ever.

"Trusting and praying sincerely,
"Yours,
"MRS. T. E. PATTERSON."

The letter to the Senators repeats the same charges and opens with the declaration:

"In behalf of the womanhood, the childhood and the best interests of the State, 4,000 loyal white ribboners of this great Commonwealth do hereby earnestly petition you as a State Senator not to support J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, for President of the Senate."

Contest for Presidency Has Phophets Guessing.

Although not less than 90 per cent of the membership of the new Legislature is in Atlanta, and notwithstanding the fact that slate-making and caucusing have been much the order of the day for the past 24 hours, the badly mixed race for the presidency of the Senate remains to-day as much "up in the air" as ever.

Burwell of Hancock is conceded to have his fight fought to a practical finish. He will be the next Speaker of the House.

Sheppard Withdraws.

Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter County, to-day withdrew from the Speakership race, leaving the contest to go to a finish between Representative Burwell, of Hancock, and Representative Hardeman, of Jackson.

Mr. Sheppard withdrew with the simple statement that he had concluded he had little, if any, chance to win and that his getting out was not to be construed as favoring or disfavoring any of the two remaining candidates.

Expected to Aid Burwell.

The Sheppard vote, however, is expected to go rather solidly to Burwell, apparently making that gentleman's chances of election just that much more certain.

Representative Hardeman says he will remain in the race to the finish, and still believes that he has a chance of election, but the impression undoubtedly is that Burwell has won the race and that it is all over but the voting. His friends claim not less than 130 votes on the first ballot, which is well over two-thirds of the House membership.

Whether the next President of the Senate will be Allen or Anderson, however, no political prophet of genuine repute ventures to guess just now.

All night long and all the morning friends of both men were actively at work, undertaking to pledge this Senator or to shake loose that one from his real or imaginary allegiance.

Both Allen and Anderson claim more than enough to elect on the first ballot. Allen says he has 25 or more, and Anderson says he has 28. That is 9 more members than there are in the Senate, and it is generally agreed that Senators Sweat and Tyson have 4 or 5 votes between them.

Corporation Interest Charged.

Allen's friends are claiming that the big corporations and one or two big manufacturing interests are moving strenuously in Anderson's behalf, and that to elect him President of the Senate will be to place the Senate organization largely in their hands.

Anderson's friends have not noticed this [illegible] r, and appear to be littl[illegible]

Bo[illegible] ll known and each has [illegible] most loyal following, very [illegible] evidence as the fight progresses.

Rumors come from both sides to the effect that the opposing candidate will retire before the balloting takes place to-morrow, but each man vehemently denies any intention of quitting before the race is finished, and the impression is that neither will.

Senator Anderson held a caucus of his supporters in the Kimball House last night, at which the famous "twenty-eight" he says he has on his "list" were expected to be on hand. Only fifteen showed up for the conference, but it was explained that those not on hand had sent notices of their unwavering support, nevertheless.

Judge Allen has called no formal conference of his supporters, but they dropped into his headquarters, one by one, all during the day, and he expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the situation.

Deadlock Possibility Discussed.

Occasionally one hears the possibility of a deadlock discussed, and the opinion advanced that neither Allen nor Anderson will win the race eventually. This idea is not generally entertained, however, although there does appear to be rather a pretty chance for a deadlock to occur.

In that event the next President of the Senate might be Judge Sweat, Senator Tyson or some Senator not yet figuring in the problem in any manner.

Discussing the race to-day, Senator Anderson said: "I have it won; that's settled. Judge Allen never can get my Senators away from me—they will stick, and I have more than I need."

Judge Allen said: "I not only have had the race won all along, but since the game opened in Atlanta several Senators have changed and have voluntarily assured me of their support. I suppose, of course, that Senator Anderson thinks he has the strength he claims, but he has not—he can not have. My votes are pledged to me unqualifiedly."

In these circumstances there is nothing to it but for the innocent bystander to pick his favorite, if he has one, and let it go at that.

Much Legislation Framed.

Outside the speakership race, which seems all over but the shouting, and the presidency of the Senate race, one hears little else discussed in the Kimball House lobby, where, as of yore, the politicians and statesmen, real and near, most do congregate in the Capital City.

Much legislation is being outlined, of course, and many bills are being framed up, both for passage and for the toboggan, but talk of this nature generally is of the heart-to-heart, man-to-man variety, and one hears little of it when three or more are gathered together.

The General Assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, in both branches. After the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House have rapped for order, the members will be sworn in, after which organization will effected immediately.

Preparations have been made for a packed capitol at the opening session, as the interest in the organization of both the Senate and the House is very keen.

An interesting feature of Wednesday's session will be the reading of the outgoing Governor's message. It will be sent in just after presiding officers have been named in both Houses and the executive has been notified that the Legislature is ready for business.

BULGARIANS AND SERVIANS IN BATTLE

Russia Orders Peace When Sixty Thousand of Ferdinand's Soldiers Oppose Allies.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, June 24.—Fighting has begun between the main Servian and Bulgarian armies, facing each other along the Vardar River, 30 miles south of Uskub.

On account of the hostility between the Serbs and Bulgars and because of the strength of the two armies it is feared any serious clash will precipitate another Balkan war.

Bulgaria has about 60,000 troops in the field.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 24.—This was a critical day in the Balkan situation with the four nations of the Balkan league on the brink of a fresh war.

The Russian Ambassadors at Sofia and Belgrade were instructed to demand that the Bulgarian and Servian Governments accept Russia's offer of arbitration without reservation. Russia is acting as the agent of the powers.

The powers have served notice they will not allow any redivision of territory won from Turkey, even if the Balkan states do go to war over the apportionment of the spoils.

BELGRADE, June 24.—King Peter has declined to accept the resignation of Premier Pasitch because of the dangerous political conditions in the Balkans.

The anti-government party is calling for war, but conservatives believe a war against Bulgaria would not be popular with the people.

CREMATORY ACT MUST INSURE INDEMNITY

Mayor Tells on What Conditions He Will Come to Terms—Work Continued by Company.

Early solution of the crematory problem depends on the wording of the new contract. Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he would raise no further objection to the price, and that if the second contract was drawn up in accordance with his ideas, the conflict between himself and the General Council would end.

Mayor Woodward insists on two features of the new contract. It must make no reference to the old contract, nullified by injunction, and it must carry a bond indemnifying the city if the crematory is not finished on time and according to specifications.

Superior Court Judge J. T. Pendleton signed an injunction Monday restraining the city and the Destructor Company from carrying out the first contract. Representatives of the Destructor Company announced they would continue work pending a new contract.

C. P. Goree, the Mayor's attorney, said any kind of work on the crematory would be in violation of the injunction and he would cite persons involved for contempt. Evins & Spence, attorneys for the Destructor Company, failed to convert Goree to their view.

The work continued, anyway, and Goree had not taken action Tuesday morning. It is presumed Goree is acting on the Mayor's orders.

The new crematory contract, passed at the last meeting, will come up again at the July meeting. If passed it must go to the Mayor. If he vetoes it another three weeks will elapse before Council can pass it over his veto.

In view of this delay, settlement of the controversy over the right of the Destructor Company to continue work in the interim becomes vital to the health of the city, as July, August and September are the three months the crematory is needed most.

Bichloride Victim Did Not Die in Vain

CHICAGO, June 24.—The death of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets thinking them toothache medicine, may be the means of saving scores of lives that are snuffed out annually by the poison drug. Council is considering three ordinances to prevent promiscuous sale of bichloride.

Since wide publicity was given the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, there have been six deaths in Chicago from the same poison, taken purposely or by mistake.

Augusta Sells More Levee Bonds July 10

AUGUSTA, June 24.—The Augusta City Council has fixed July 10 as the date for opening of bids for the third installment of city of Augusta flood protection bonds. The amount will be $250,000. Already $500,000 of the bonds have been sold. The total issue was for $1,000,000.

Contracts have been let for more than $600,000 levee work. It is expected that by next March the city will be protected from a 37-foot tide. Protection against a 45-foot river will be afforded when the levee is completed.

Society Raffles Is Given 10-Year Term

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Owen D. Conn, the "hundred thousand dollar society burglar," was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This is his sixth and longest prison term.

Conn eloped with and later deserted Mrs. Mabel Clarkson, wife of the Rev. Nestor K. Clarkson, of Chicago. She abandoned her husband and five children.

Small Boys Starts Engine to Disaster

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 24—A small boy went into the New York Central Railroad roundhouse here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the throttle and jumped.

The locomotive ran wild and crashed into a freight train coming from the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludake was killed, and William Froelich died a short time later.

Pastors Smite the Pellet With Churchly Zeal But Majors Draft None From Ministerial League

"Washington Street Howlers" Defeat Ridley's 'Hinky-Dinks,' Who Protest Game.

Sixteen Baptist ministers of Atlanta opened their mail with fingers that trembled Tuesday morning, and then sixteen Baptist ministers sorrowfully laid down various letters and heaved a sigh of disappointment, and sixteen "Aw, shucks!" were uttered in sixteen ministerial homes.

For the sixteen, aided by two laymen, had a baseball game at the waterworks ball grounds yesterday, after the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association meeting, and the presence of several foreign-looking gentlemen in the crowd had given rise to various hopes. The ministers hoped earnestly to receive letters imploring them to cease smiting the devil and his works and come to the majors to smite the works of Reach and Spalding.

Dr. John E. White had eyes on "Smoky Joe" Wood's job, and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist Church, had designs on Christy Mathewson's place. And Dr. Hugh Wallace certainly thought his coaching would spell the release of Artie Latham or Herman Schaeffer.

Dr. John E. White's team, the "Washington Street Howlers," were on the long end of the score, but Dr. Ridley's "Hinky-Dinks" claim they will protest the game, on the grounds that the "Howlers" played two ringers. Dr. White took the stand, however, that these young men were eligible, because they are good church members and have ministerial tendencies. Whereat Dr. Ridley remarked that his team was playing preachers and not ministerial tendencies, and what was more, the ministerial tendencies could play ball which was bad.

Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, who has been batting 1.000 in the Evangelist League, made the first run of the game, a sacrifice to Dr. White's reading of a little paper-covered book on "How to Pitch; or, Bean the First Man at the Plate." Dr. White beaned Dr. Riley, and then, his enemies declare, tried to bean Dr. W. T. Smith. Dr. Smith, however, beaned the ball and Dr. Riley slid in, to the accompaniment of cheers from representatives of the "Clothes Cleaners' Union," assembled to take care of the remains.

The players changed positions several times before the game was over, but they started out like this: Howlers—John E. White, first base; John Spalding, second base; Parker, pitcher; C. W. Daniel, center field; A. F. O'Kelly, catcher; Hugh Wallace, third base; W. B. Riley, shortstop; W. T. Smith, left field; E. B. Gill, right field. "Hinky-Dinks"—Hicks, second base; Caleb A. Ridley, pitcher; Hawkins, catcher; J. W. Hambrick, right field; A. H. Gordon, left field; W. M. Sentell, center field; L. W. Warren, third base; J. F. Williams, first base; Fleury, shortstop.

But the ball game wasn't the only thing the preachers did during the day. Before the athletic and vocal test they had a real old-fashioned basket dinner, in which fried chicken, sandwiches deviled eggs and angel food were among the delicacies used to put an edge on the athletes.

What? Sure, they drank grape-juice.

Seaman Ends Life as Squad Hunts for Him

SAVANNAH, June 24.—T. Eason, a seaman on the United States cruiser Tacoma, now in port after a cruise in Southern waters, committed suicide to-day in a public square. The man had overstayed his shore leave and a squad was coming to arrest him when he shot himself through the brain.

Eason is said to have been despondent for some time.

Surgeon Looks Into Lungs in Rare Cases

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Dr. R. S. Skillern, of the local Medical-Chirurgical Hospital, reports using with success an instrument known as the bronchoscope, U-shaped, with a mirror and electric light arrangement, which has enabled him to look into the lungs and effect the removal of foreign objects, such as collar buttons, safety pins, nails and dried peas, in rare operations.

PLANS TO PROTECT U.S. EXPENDITURES

Fitzgerald Would Have Treasury Pass on Appropriations to Government Bureaus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, to-day declared two things will have to be done if Government appropriations are to be kept within sane limits. He said:

"The Secretary of the Treasury should be compelled to revise estimates of Government departments submitted to Congress, and Congress should be deprived of power to augment any request for money or to originate legislation imposing obligations upon the treasury."

According to Fitzgerald's view, the tendency to tack legislation on appropriation bills is dangerous and has bad results. Fitzgerald urged that the Appropriations Committee be increased in membership to 30.

Fitzgerald's suggestion is that the Appropriations Committee actually fix the amounts of money to be granted to various Government bureaus, but that other committees may retain the power to decide upon the scope of the needs of these departments.

Fitzgerald attacked a suggestion for the creation of a general committee to allot to various appropriating committees of the House the various sums available for each.

King George Greets Poincaire; Guarded Against Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—Tremendous enthusiasm marked the arrival here to-day of President Poincare, of France. The French President, with his suite, arrived early this afternoon from Portsmouth. He was welcomed by King George in person at the Victoria station. Great crowds filled the streets about the depot and cheered lustily.

Escorted by soldiers, King George and President Poincare went to St. James Palace. Hundreds of police and detectives were on duty to prevent any interruption of the procession by militant suffragettes.

To-night President Poincare will be guest of honor at a state ball at Buckingham Palace. Rudyard Kipling has written a poem in honor of the visit of the French executive.

Partial Confession By Accused Slayer

COLUMBUS, June 24.—Homer Carmack, arrested on suspicion in connection with the murder of J. J. Folks, a Phenix City, Ala., merchant, was carried to Opelika, county seat of Lee County, Alabama, to-day and placed in jail. Carmack made a partial confession, in which he implicated two other men, both of whom deny his charges.

Carmack belongs to one of the most prominent families in Phenix City.

WILSON LIKELY TO RIDE OVER M'REYNOLDS

Statement Cancelling Delay in White Slave Case, but Letting McNab Out, Is Near.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—That the resignation of District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco will be accepted immediately, and will be coupled with the appointment of his successor, was the statement made to-day by a White House official close to the President.

President Wilson instructed Attorney General McReynolds at the cabinet meeting to-day to submit to him this afternoon a full report of the McNab-Caminetti case. This report will be delivered in person by the Attorney General late to-day.

After the President has examined it he will issue a statement in which he is expected to announce, beside the McNab pleas, cancellation of the postponement of the Diggs and Caminetti white slave cases, ordering their immediate trial.

Would Over-Ride McReynolds.

Should the President take this action he will over-ride the head of the Department of Justice in postponing the Camnetti trial.

At the request of Secretary of Labor Wilson at to-day's cabinet meeting the Attorney General and the Secretary of Labor were called upon by the President to tell their sides of the case.

The chief executive showed disapproval of the action of the Department of Justice which he had previously upheld in public.

In calcelling the postponement of the Caminetti case the President is acting in accord with consensus of opinion of his cabinet, which disapproved the postponement, which was ordered at the request of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti.

Public Opinion Strong.

Secretary of the Interior Lane and Secretary of the Navy Daniels told the President very firmly that the action of the Department of Justice placed the administration in an embarrassing light before the country. The President decided it was better to over-ride the Attorney General than combat public opinion.

It is understood the President's statement will take no cognizance of the fact that the elder Caminetti, personal friend of Secretary Bryan, will be unable to be present at his son's trial.

Church and Civic Bodies Uphold McNab.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 24.—Church and civic bodies of Sacramento to-day went on record as condemning the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering the postponement of the trials of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti on charges of violating the white slave law.

Resolutions went to President Wilson asking him to order the trial to proceed, and asking that District Attorney McNab's resignation be not accepted. Fifteen women's organizations uphold McNab.

Pontiff Repeatedly Has Expressed Desire to See American Prelate Soon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 24.—It is understood here that Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, will visit Rome in September owing to the desire repeatedly expressed by the Holy Father to see him in the near future.

Cardinal Farley used to visit the Pope in Venice when he was Patriarch there, and ever since those days there has been a bond of intimacy between the two, which has grown stronger with the passing years.

The Dominican fathers, to whom the Church of Santa Maria sopra Minerva is intrusted—it being also the titular church of the New York Cardinal—except to arrange some special functions during his sojourn in Rome.

Cardinal Merry del Val is also said to desire to see Cardinal Farley, as is also Cardinal de Lai, in his capacity of Secretary of the Consistorial Congregation, which has the Pope as president and deals with all the affairs of the American episcopacy.

Mrs. Stetson Heretic, Scientist Declares

BOSTON, June 24.—Alfred Farlow, chairman of the publication committee of the Christian Science Church, in reply to a claim of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, of New York, that she is the head of the church and the "true authority on the teachings of Mrs. Eddy," declared Mrs. Stetson is not even a member of the church.

Macon Judge Bars Occult Testimony

MACON, June 24.—When Mrs. Dixie Jatrett Haygood Abbott, the so-called "Dixie Magnet," was testifying in a habeas corpus hearing before Judge H. A. Matthews, in Bibb Superior Court, she declared on the witness stand that she was a "seeress" and could tell what was in the judge's mind. Asked if she had seen a certain child, she replied that she had seen the child in her "second sight—in her second mind." Judge Matthews refused to admit this as competent testimony.

The judge held in favor of the mother in the case of O. S. Shipman vs. Mrs. Martha Shipman, involving the custody of a 6-year-old girl for whom the father sued out the habeas corpus writ.

Chaingangs in Georgia

"You have turned justice into gall."---Amos vi:12

Six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine souls are in our chaingangs.

At dawn, the striped suits appear, the shackles clank in our city streets and country roads.

Women and children shuddering pass them as they work and sweat under the eyes of armed men until darkness draws near to hide the marks of their infamy.

AGAIN THEY ARE CHAINED TOGETHER.

And like monstrous striped snakes with men for vertebrae and chains for spinal cords, the squads in the gathering gloom squirm, shuffling and clinking their weary way back into camp.

A gang halts before a door. They stand, excepting one. He runs forward, drawing from between them the rattling chain now unlocked. To the ground it drops.

The men enter a long dimly lighted room.

On both sides beds are jammed together forming an aisle. In its center at intervals are boxes or cans, and tubs. Around its length goes another chain.

The men remove their clothes. They cannot get off their shackles. Begins a horrible clanking. The chain is being passed from shackle to shackle linking man to man. Repeatedly it crashes to the floor between them. At last, its ends are bolted to the wall on both sides of the door. They are again one in their wretchedness.

Here and there one drags the chain to a tub and washes. Man after man uses the same foul water.

Then comes food borne on a hand-barrow.

Each man gets his rations.

Seated on his bed, he eats.

Before his face waits the unspeakable box, hideous receptacle for unnamable human filth.

CHAINED TOGETHER, THE MEN LIE DOWN TO SLEEP.

To their mutual misery—to the lash hanging at the door—to the sting of conscience and the agony of memory in the long hours of the night are added the bite of the leg shackle on the naked skin and the clank of the endless chain as they turn and toss trying to rest.

Georgia daily thus degrades and drives men deeper into hell.

Statistics are meager as to the thousands of misdemeanor, or short term, men.

But two thousand eight hundred and ninety of the six thousand one hundred and thirty-nine are felony convicts. They are under long sentence.

Among these are two twelve-year-old boys, and two of thirteen.

Three of fourteen, eleven of fifteen, twenty of sixteen.

Thirty of seventeen, eighty-five of eighteen, ninety-one of nineteen.

One hundred and twenty-three of twenty, and one hundred and sixty-three of twenty-one.

Children are out of place in convict camps.

YOU SHOULD NOT CHAIN FIRST OFFENDERS TO HARDENED CRIMINALS.

Ancients fettered a living man to a corpse to kill him by the decay of the dead.

You would not kill the young man who has slipped.

But you do worse; you chain him to the old offender, the moral leper: you thus poison his soul and devote him to a living death of crime.

He comes forth the habitual criminal, a menace to the living.

When folly weds cruelty, their offspring is this affront to God and man.

From it save the boy.

Sixteen hundred and forty-five of these long term men have wives.

At home? Have they homes? You know not.

You are therefore punishing sixteen hundred and forty-five women and, without doubt, over five thousand children. You deprive them of their support.

WHY? WHAT IS THEIR OFFENSE? THEIR BIRTH.

But their fathers and husbands have committed crimes?

Yes. And in defiling zebra suits and clanking chains they pay.

They build your roads; under the fear of your lash, they work; but their degradation and heart-breaking labor brings no morsel of food to those women and children; their shame does not clothe their wives and babies.

Shall the sons—

Shall the daughters—

Shall the wives follow in their steps, since great Georgia takes their all, the labor of these men, and gives nothing in return?

Boast not of our roads to-day. Each foot of them has been built at frightful cost—the sorrow and suffering of women and children, and the humiliating degradation of men. Rather should we be ashamed.

TO BUILD ROADS IS WISE.

But to make criminals in order to build roads is madness. And to crush men, women and children in the building is not to be endured.

Neither is necessary.

Roads can be built, and men made in the building. Elsewhere it is being done.

It can and will be done in Georgia.

You will help.

Speak to your representatives in the House and in the Senate.

Ask them to support those measures that will enable our officials to free us from our disgrace.

It is due to lack of thought, and not to criminally heartless intent; men in authority do not willfully degrade and hurt their fellow creatures.

In Christ's name forget politics! Stop and think!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW BILL DRAWN TO END CHILD LABOR EVIL

Hooper Alexander Will Work for Law to Supersede Present Confusing Statutes.

Promise of much needed reform in the child labor situation in Georgia is given in a bill Hooper Alexander has drafted and which Tuesday he predicted would be enacted into law. Technicalities and frills have been cut out of the measure, and its sponsor asserts it will cure many of the glaring evils in the industrial system today.

Both the National Child Labor Committee and the Cotton Manufacturers' Association have indorsed the measure. Mr. Alexander, therefore, believes it will be enacted into law unless certain Atlanta merchants muster more opposition than he thinks they can.

Mr. Alexander is a member of the Atlanta committee of the National Child Labor Committee. It was at the request of the local and national committees, also of the cotton manufacturers, that he drew his bill.

Ultimate age Limit 14 Years.

Instead of writing a blanket prohibition forbidding all child labor and then tacking on a myriad of exceptions which might void the whole law from a constitutional standpoint, Mr. Alexander listed certain lines of employment in which children under certain ages should not be permitted to work under any circumstances or conditions. The inhibition applies to mills, factories, workshops, laundries, public service and mercantile establishments.

The full effect of the law, which will be attained after 1915, is to prevent the working of children in any of these lines under 14 years of age.

Present Law Confusing.

Georgia has a child labor law already—several of them—but the provisions and conditions attached thereto and made a part thereof so befuddle the main issue, Mr. Alexander asserts, that the whole collection is confusing, and no headway has been made in enforcement. Mr. Alexander has sought to avoid confusion by putting into one bill of less than two typewritten pages all the restrictions on child labor necessary, and writing them in such simple language as to render judicial interpretation unnecessary.

Spick 'n Span Halls Await Legislators

When Georgia's legislators gather at the Capitol Wednesday, they will find themselves in a place of beauty, for skilled workers have renovated the House of Representatives and the Senate chambers.

Every desk has been repolished. Dirt which accumulated during the winter has been removed by vacuum cleaners. Everything will be spick and span for Governor Slaton's inauguration.

New York Mayors Want Sunday Ball

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Mayors of first, second and third class cities of New York State, in a letter sent to Governor Sulzer by Secretary William P. Copes, of the Conference of Mayors, went on record in favor of the repeal of laws prohibiting Sunday baseball.

A vote taken by the Mayors was: For Sunday baseball, 27; against, 5; not voting, 18. Legislative action is asked for.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Miss Vanderbilt Scores a Hit.

Bright, snappy vaudeville that makes one forget it's not exactly theater weather, is the offering at the Forsyth this week.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, captivating and sprightly as of yore, and her teammate, George Moore, are the best of the six acts. With some of their old songs and a liberal portion of new ones, they scored tremendously with the first-nighters. Miss Vanderbilt's clever dancing is the big feature of the act.

The headline number has real competition in the act of the Six Musical Cuttys. Three young women and three young men play a wide variety of instruments and a wider variety of music so well that they have difficulty in getting away from the enthusiastic audience.

Head, a swimmer and diver, does remarkable aquatic feats in a tank sunk in the center of the stage and thrown into relief in large mirrors. She is warmly received by swimming fans—and they are plentiful in Atlanta.

Other acts are the Four Hayamas, clever Jap acrobats; Dorothy Richmond and company in a pleasing comedy sketch; Minnie Allen, a singer; Doc O'Neal, one of the many imitators of James J. Morton, and the Pathe pictures.

Big Crowd Sees "Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" began the second week of its run at the Grand before a large crowd Monday night. This will be the last week of the presentation of this remarkable film in Atlanta. It will be taken from here to Birmingham and then on to other cities of the South.

The wonderful success of the photoplay in this city was all that retained it here for a second week's engagement. As usual, there will be two performances daily, one in the afternoon and an evening presentation. Incidentally, the Grand is well equipped with fans and the great auditorium is more comfortable during the hot weather than many other places.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Whatever may be the outcome of the somewhat strenuous race for the Presidency of the State Senate, that handsome and altogether satisfactory Clerk of the House, Uncle John T. Bullyfoot (spelled Boifeuillet) has his job nailed down with twenty-penny spikes, and will be elected with gusto and by acclamation!

Since away back before he can remember, Uncle John has been regularly elected Clerk of the House.

It is one habit the Georgia Legislature seems neither able nor inclined to shake off. Every time a new House gathers itself together to save the State, the first thing it does is to name Old John Bullyfoot clerk. It is obsessed of an idea that the State cannot be saved, possibly, without Uncle John right there in the conning tower, at the great Grand Chief Saver's side.

Once upon a melancholy time, somebody undertook to dispute Uncle John's right and title to the Clerkship of the House. Poor, misguided, reckless undertaker—everybody has forgotten his name, and his career upon the scene of action was pathetically brief.

Since then, the Legislature just hands Uncle John that Clerkship thing regularly and lets it go at that!

Once every two years, it is Uncle John's proud honor and distinction to boss the House temporarily. When first it gets itself together, Uncle John presides, pending its election of a Speaker.

Sometimes these Speakership contests drag along for hours, and Uncle John has an opportunity to revel, even to gloat, if the spirit so moves him—although, nobody ever saw Bullyfoot gloat in his life!—in his supreme authority, but mostly, and it looks as if that is to be the case this year, Uncle John's period of bossism is short, and he soon is called upon to turn the gavel over to his successor, the duly elected Speaker.

Uncle John has been busy to-day getting things ready in the Capitol for the meeting of the General Assembly Wednesday.

Eduardo Wohlwender, of Columbus, Representative-elect from Muscogee County, is in Atlanta's deliciously delighted midst, at last, and is ready for the Legislative grind.

Herr Wohlwender—who now and then is mistaken for an Irishman—is known to Legislative fame as the "Flying Dutchman," and has more friends than most anybody.

He is a whirlwind in debate, and a terror to his enemies, when under full steam ahead oratorically.

A lot of people, fearful that Wohlwender would not get here on time for the opening of the session, will be very much relieved to know that all is well, and that Mein Herr is on the job!

Following the customary Sunday school services at the First Baptist Church in Dalton Sunday morning, the school held a joint meeting, resolutions being adopted memoralizing the Representative from Whitfield County to introduce a bill in the approaching session of the Legislature to provide a State law fixing a penalty for those violating the Webb law in reference to the shipping of intoxicants from a "wet" State into a prohibition State.

Dr. E. Jackson, the superintendent, spoke in opposition to the resolution, holding that it was against the policy of the Baptist church to mix in affairs of State. Mayor J. F. Harris insisted that it was not an action on the part of the church, but on the part of citizens assembled there. Dr. Jackson then held that a mass meeting should be called and held outside the church building, and others agreed with him. The resolution was, however, adopted, the argument being a good-natured one.

Whitfield County is in Judge Fite's circuit, and the Judge is known to have some very pronounced views with respect to the Webb law.

Hooper Alexander, candidate for Governor against John M. Slaton, has been mingling freely of late in the Kimball House lobby, with associates of former days in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Alexander is thoroughly well liked by those who worked with him, and he has been warmly welcomed in the whirlpool of Kimball lobby politics, where every one is insisting that the water is fine.

Ware County's Representatives in the Legislature and the Senator from that district have been requested by joint resolutions of the Ware County Medical Society and the Public Health Committee of the Board of Trade to favor and aid in the passage of Legislation that will provide for the muzzling of all dogs in Georgia for a period of one year at least.

In the event the Representatives find that a State muzzling law cannot be passed, they will introduce a local act, providing for the muzzling of all dogs in Ware for twelve months. This County has seen too much of hydrophobia in recent months and proposes to exert every possible effort to stamp out the disease that has already taken two lives and may take more.

Since the crusade against dogs started in Waycross a large number have been killed. Owners of good and valuable dogs are aiding the authorities in the enforcement of the dog ordinance, but those who do not are being fined and made to comply with the provisions.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Savannah, who was to have been a member of the present House of Representatives, has been receiving the warm and hearty congratulations of his friends and near-Legislative associates upon the nomination by President Wilson to be Minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall's nomination has been confirmed by the Senate, and he will leave shortly for his European post.

He is generally regarded as ideally fitted for such an assignment as Minister to Switzerland.

MANY TAX REFORM SCHEMES OFFERED

Next to the race for the presidency of the Senate and the speakership of the House, tax reform is proving the livest topic of conversation at the Kimball House. That something must be done quickly by the General Assembly is the sentiment of virtually every legislator. Suggestions are varied.

A "tax discoverer" is what Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion, will propose. This "discoverer" will be similar in all respects to Alabama's back-tax commissioner. His duties will be to follow the tax collector. If the property owner has not made a just return on his property, it will be his duty to issue an increase against him; and if the property owner declines to accept, then he shall lay the matter before a board of arbitration.

There is expected to be opposition to an adoption of a tax recision at this session, but it is not believed it will be sufficiently strong to prevent its immediate adoption.

Among those who have bills to provide for tax reform are Lipscomb of Clarke, Moon of Troup and Gower of Crisp.

Decatur Women and Trade Board to Meet

DON'T OVERLOOK A BET, URGES PONY MAN

Every Vote Will Be Needed—Advises Contestants to Work in the Evenings.

How many votes will it take to win? is a question frequently asked by candidates in The Georgian and American pony contest.

The answer is that it will take as many as the condidates can rake and scrape together by July 31. Certainly it will take a few more than your nearest competitor has, and your nearest competitor is going to get just as many as he possibly can, and probably he is as active and as energetic and has as many friends as you.

Subscriptions secured now are worth so much more than they will be in a few days, when the bonus offer expires, that you can afford to waste no time.

Here is a suggestion from a contestant who is making a splendid showing:

"Don't stop when evening comes. Evening is one of the best times for getting subscriptions. After the late meal you will find the 'man of the house' at home, and at leisure. Perhape he will be reading the newspaper. It is an excellent time to approach him, for he will not be in such a hurry to be rid of you as he would be in business hours. Use the telephone to tell him you are coming."

One phase of the contest which seems to be misunderstood by many of the contestants is "holding back" votes. It does not pay. It has been said that all the world loves a lover, and it is equally true that all the world loves a winner. Suppose you have 100,000 votes in hand, and have voted but 3,000 of them. Your name is at the bottom of the list, while the leader has voted his fully 90,000. It is natural for anyone you approach to think that you have no chance, and no one likes to back a loser. If, on the other hand, you show that you are right up in the running, every one will feel more inclined to assist.

Boy Washes Hands; They Catch Afire

CHICAGO, June 24.—Vernon Balch, 8 years old, son of Oscar Balch, 611 North Kenilwood Avenue, Oak Park, was burned on the hands and arms when a paint-removing solution with which he was washing his hands become ignited by friction.

The boy's father, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was also burned on the hands and arms.

Alabama Man Slays Wife and Children; Commits Suicide

MOBILE, June 24.—Clay Mills, a prominent turpentine operator at Atmore, Ala., near here, to-day shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Gussie Mills, and two of his children, and then committed suicide. One small child survives.

Mrs. Mills was of a prominent Mobile family. The cause of the tragedy has not been learned.

Attorney General's Mother Badly Hurt

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., June 24.—Mrs. Ellen McReynolds, aged 73, mother of Attorney General James C. McReynolds, was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a fall from her carriage as she was returning to her home after making a call on Joseph W. Folk, former Governor of Missouri, who was here to deliver a lecture.

During her visit with Governor Folk, Mrs. McReynolds said:

"Joe, you and Jimmy could break up all the trusts, couldn't you?"

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Her Economy Didn't Suit Him.

"Woman is very unreasonable," said the old gentleman on a Buckhead car. "I remember that my wife and I were talking over our affairs one day and we agreed that it had come to the point where we must both economize.

"'Yes, my dear,' I said to my wife, 'we must both economize, both!'

"'Very well, Henry,' she said, with a tired air of submission; 'you shave yourself and I'll cut your hair.'"

He Also Possessed Vivid Imagination.

The Atlanta man was hale and hearty at 10 a. m.

At 10:05 some one handed him a patent medicine almanac.

The man glanced at it and became interested. He read it through from cover to cover.

At 10:35 he was suffering from diabetes, Bright's disease, malaria, dyspepsia, insomnia, lumbago, blood poisoning, cancer of the stomach, sciatica, scrofula and rheumatism.

How to Teach the Atlanta Man.

"Why don't they make arithmetics with practical examples like this?" asked the West End man.

"If you buy a dozen shirtwaists at $5.50 a dozen, and sell eight of them at $1.75 apiece, then mark down the price to $1.50, sell three and take the other home to your wife, holding out a dollar of her pin money, what is your percentage of profit, allowing 10 per cent for rent and 7 1-2 per cent for saleswoman and advertising?"

5-YEAR SECRECY PHTHISIS CURE INGREDIENT

"Contratoxin" Is Name of New Alleged Remedy for Consumption—Discoverer Modest.

LONDON, June 24.—Dr. Frederick Mehnarto, of Heidelberg, who is now residing in London, announces in the latest issue of the Lancet, the particulars of a new alleged consumption cure discovered by him and called "contratoxin."

Two hundred patients are now apparently cured, he asserts, after having been treated with this injection at the Margaret Street and Mount Vernon hospitals. All of the patients were pledged to secrecy before the experimenting began.

The doctors at the Margaret Street Hospital, who have been applying the treatment, positively refuse to give any information or details, as they do not consider that the treatment has yet had a fair trial.

Dr. Mehnarto writes:

"Contratoxin consists of the blood plasma of various animals mixed in proportions calculated to produce a lytic action on various micro-organisms without reducing zysis of the human red corpuscles. In the production of contratoxin advantage is taken of the fact that some reptilian plasmas act as haemolytic agents, while others act as coagutant agents.

The practical value of this fact is that when horses' or sheep's blood is sensitized by a combination of both types of reptilian plasma the red corpuscles are no longer capable of being dissolved by distilled water and at the same time the blood becomes powerfully bacteriolytic."

Boys Flee From Industrial Home

MACON, GA., June 24.—While the trustees of the Georgia Industrial Home were investigating the whipping on last Friday of Marvin Williford, a 10-year-old inmate, by W. F. Armor, farm overseer, two more of the orphan boys ran away. They were located by policemen and returned to the home. In two weeks six boys have left the home.

The trustees to-day heard the statement of Armor. Their finding will not be announced until to-morrow. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, wife of the farm overseer, canceled lecture engagements to be here at his investigation.

REUNION TESTS GETTYSBURG'S HOSPITALITY

Village Scurries for Food for 250,000 Visitors—Vanguard Is Arriving.

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 24.—The vanguard of the 250,000 strangers who will take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg next week arrived to-day. As this is a town of only 4,000 inhabitants, the people are panic-stricken at the outlook. Every hotel for ten miles around already is bought out with reservations, and it is feared many visitors will have to sleep in the open and go hungry.

So badly frightened are the townspeople at the outlook that many have bought provisions to last them two weeks, fearing a famine when the celebration takes place.

The Sons of Veterans already are encamped on the outskirts and the Pennsylvania Veterans of the G. A. R will be here Thursday. Forty-five thousand veterans will be under canvas.

State to Provide for All Veterans Attending.

HARRISBURG, PA., June 24.—Provision has been made by the State Senate to care for all veterans who may attend the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg in excess of 40,000, the number for which provision previously had been made.

An item of $35,000 was inserted in the general appropriation bill to meet the cost of transportation, where veterans are entitled to it and quarters and subsistence at Gettysburg.

The commission believes about 50,000 veterans will attend the celebration.

Marshall Heads Senate Gettysburg Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Vice President Marshall to-day designated as a Senate committee to attend the Gettysburg semi-centennial ceremonies Senators Newlands, Bankhead, Shively, Du Pont, Thornton, Nelson, Works and Bradley.

The Senate had designated the Vice President himself as a member of the committee.

600 or 700 Georgia Veterans to Attend.

Assurance that sufficient money had been appropriated to entertain every veteran who desires to attend the Gettysburg reunion was received by Governor Brown Tuesday morning in a telegram from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission.

At first it was thought that only 500 veterans from Georgia could be entertained, but the telegram means as many as can attend will be cared for.

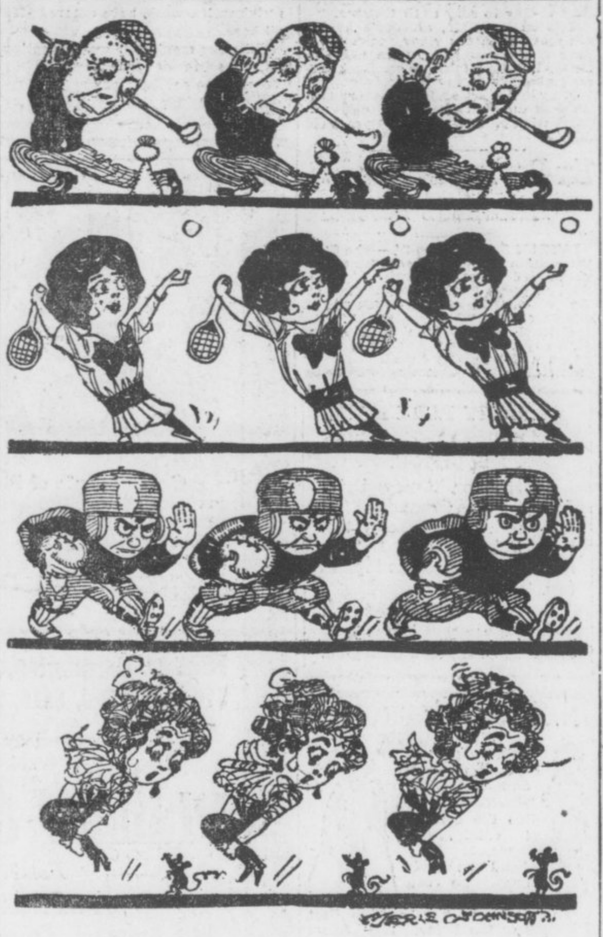
General A. J. West, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the Georgia delegation. He has been active in the effort to work up a full attendance. From 600 and 700 Confederate veterans from Georgia will make the trip. Many Georgia Federal veterans also have signified their intention of attending.

Enters Girl's Room At 2 A. M.; Arrested

AUGUSTA, June 24.—O. B. Oakes, until recently of Atlanta, city salesman for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, with branch offices here, was arrested by the police after having entered the bed room of a young woman at 2 o'clock in the morning. He claimed he made a mistake and was seeking the manager of his concern, who roomed at the house.

Oakes was released, after a few hours in jail, as he showed evidence of having borne a good character previously and after his friends had stated that he was drinking when he entered the house.

FRESH BALLET THEMES ARE FOUND IN SPORTS



Some possible interpretations. Vaslav Nijinski, premier Russian danseuse, declares that each age has its dance, and that the national sports of each country will lend themselves to stage adaptation. The artist depicts what may be shortly expected here if this statement is true.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Vaslav Nijinski, which is a name and not an epithet, thank you, is to stand for a new epoch in the dance. Nijinski is the foremost of the Russian dancers, who is able to get more expression and art from the muscles of the great toe than most masters can command from a whole ballet.

Wherefore the Russian speaks with authority, and when that authority says that each age has its dance and that the dance takes its color and its action from the real doings of the particular age, you may be sure that you are getting no idle chatter from a mere dreamer. It is expert testimony.

According to Nijinski the dancer must represent something. The type must be distinctive of something that age is doing off the stage.

Thus, there is to come the Rockefeller ballet, with the clammy financial part of the period in the far background along with vivisection and the discovery of new and strange germs. Rockefeller plays golf, so the ballet will present Rockefeller by getting golfy. It is the Nijinski idea that a chorus of fairies wearing golf togs, pursued by Cupid caddies carrying sixty pounds of plumbers' tools that are essential to make one happy while on the links, will justly represent the era of Jawn D.

They are to balance airily as though about to drive into the top gallery, swing in rhythmic cadence and poise as though peering over the long green to see where in thunder the ball anded. Then they are to jog toward the setting sun in fairy troop and go through the various other antics that beset one who is possessed of the devil of golf.

Further drawing upon sport for inspiration, the great Russian artist sees in tennis an outlet for the spirit of the dance. The tennis court at the White House where Theodore Roosevelt used to disport himself, along with Jimmy Garfield, Lawrence Murphy and other patriots who could swing the racket, affords the most just field for the study of the possibilities of the departure. White trousers and skirts will take the places of the tights. The arms only will be bare. The feet will wear tennis shoes. A net, which, mayhap, may be stretched between the players and the audience in case the dance is bad, will be a part of the stage property.

Before and behind this net the new order will have the girlies and chorus men dancing and whirling, so that the spectator may imagine that the score, instead of being in B flat, is 15 love.

Nor would the artiste stop with tennis. The football field offers a chance to mark the stage off with lines like the sidewalks whereon the children play hopscotch and the dancers, arrayed in padded clothing, shaggy hair, will dash madly about, trying to put their feet upon the faces of their neighbors and to kick, in the name of aesthetic art, the shins of those in the immediate vicinity.

To this, says Nijinski, we are coming.

EVELYN THAW A 'BALLY BOLD' DANCE STAR

London Unable to Decide Whether to Approve or Denounce American Sensation.

LONDON, June 24.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's wild Bacchanalian dance at the Hippodrome with Jack Clifford is the latest London sensation and one of the most discussed ones that ever agitated this much-enduring city.

The public is divided between admiration of the beauty of the dancer and the grace and cleverness of her dancing revels on the one hand, and its amazement at her wild abandon, embracings, posturings and her expressions of primitive emotion.

"A bally bold and devilish fascinatin' dance, y'know," is the apt comment made by one enthusiastic clubman in the foyer after seeing the young American's performance. This criticism has been quoted right and left and the phrase "bally bold" is now heard wherever the Hippodrome's latest hit is discussed.

Mrs. Thaw has been giving out aesthetic and high-minded interviews. She denies exploiting her Thaw name or her wide reputation merely to get a vaudeville salary, and says she returned to the stage merely to support herself and her baby. The public was prepared to see something quite decorus when she appeared on the stage with Jack Clifford.

The actual dance was a stunning surprise. Mrs. Thaw and Clifford whirled, embraced, separated and galloped about in frenzied emotion. The girl, of course, is the feature. Clifford, while a wonderfully clever dancer, is merely the lay figure, so to speak, on which Mrs. Thaw's dance is draped. The word "draped" is expressive in this case, because Mrs. Thaw clings to Clifford like ivy to an oak in some parts of the dance. They embrace and are closely entangled. Suddenly they dash apart. Then they speed together again, dancing madly all the while, whirling and spinning in a veritable orgy of motion.

It is about as barbaric and primitive a dance and about as frank in its emotional expression as any London has gazed on yet.

Hetty Green's Home Is Taxed at $112,000

Ragtime Artists Will Pit Fingers Against Player-Piano Again

The second attempt to settle the question of Atlanta's champion ragtime player will be made this afternoon at Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street.

At this time several of Atlanta's most expert pianists will compete with a Weatherholt player-piano and all the varieties of ragtime will be produced.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, will act again as judge, and indications are that a large crowd will be present to witness the contest.

The first contestant will begin playing at 3 o'clock. Everybody who enjoys ragtime is invited to attend. It's free.

Says Too Easy Life Makes Girls Lazy

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mme. Malvina Cavallazzi, who retired last week as head of the Metropolitan Opera House ballet school to return to Italy, declared American girls are the most graceful and intelligent in the world, but lacked perseverance and patience.

"Things come to them so easily that it makes them lazy and fitful," she said.

Important Sayings

By important people on topics of live interest

"The matter of leprosy is one of great concern to the whole nation because of the communicability as well as the widespread distribution of the disease. Humane segregation and treatment is necessary and will ultimately have to be provided if the States are to answer to their responsibility for the care and the control of this disease."—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, in an address at St. Paul, Minn., declaring that leprosy is on the increase.

"While our high schools supply excellent preparation for college life and train our young men and women thoroughly well for higher education, they do not help the solution of this great problem of industrial education. A thorough reorganization and upbuilding of the public and common schools is necessary. New methods, new ideas and ideals must be instituted."—Abrams Elkus, in address at City College, New York.

MILITIA ENGAGES IN SHAM BATTLE

Spectacular Feature of Encampment Is Gone Into With the Earnestness of War.

CAMP BROWN, ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., June 24.—A spectacular sham battle with all its incidental maneuvers was the most interesting feature arranged for to-day's military program at the annual militia encampment.

The soldiers were prepared to go into the mock engagement with all the earnestness of actual warfare. Brush-beating and scout work, advance guard and rear guard work were arranged as features of the preliminary skirmishes.

Adjutant General Joseph VanHolt Nash is expected to visit the camp to-morrow or Thursday. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector instructor of the cavalry of the National Guard, made an inspection of the camp Monday. The tent in charge of Corporal W. J. Nolan and tenanted by Albert Jones, William Rhodes, G. E. Govan and Frank Hunt was declared the model tent by the inspecting officer. The highest commendation was given the street of Company L.

Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson, of Atlanta, inspector of small arms practice, has made targets to be used in pistol practice to-morrow. The 20 officers of the squadron are the only ones who will take part in the pistol practice.

Barker to Manage Newly Built Road

The new Gainesville and Northwestern Railroad will have as its vice president and general manager B. S. Barker, of Atlanta, commercial agent of the Southern. Mr. Barker has tendered his resignation for July 1, and will go to Gainesville to his new office.

Mr. Barker has been in the employ of railroads for 25 years. The new road has just been completed. It extends through Hall and White Counties, with its terminus at North Helen, a booming town.

O'NEAL STRIKES SHACKLES.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 24.—Two important humanitarian orders have been issued by Governor O'Neal. All shackles must be removed from convicts and cities must cease leasing their convicts.

Trousers for Women Their Only Salvation

CHICAGO, June 24.—Woman's greatest handicap is pretty clothes. If a woman's clothes are pretty they may lead to her downfall. If they are not pretty they keep her back in the race with man in business and professional fields.

These things were related to the national convention of neurologists and alienists by Dr. Albert E. Sterne, of Indianapolis, and Dr. H. C. R. Norriss, of Enderlen, N. Dak. The two doctors agreed that the only thing to do was clothe woman in trousers.

AS THE SUMMER TERM BOOMS THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE PLACING MANY PUPILS IN POSITIONS

The Popular Business School, With a Large and Efficient Faculty, Is Daily Sending Out Its Well-Trained Pupils Into Good-Paying Positions.

MISS MAE GARNER,
Who has just completed course in the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and secured Steno-Bookkeeper's Position with Messrs. Collier & Co., of Barnesville, Ga.

Several new pupils have just entered the Southern Shorthand and Business University, and they could not have selected a better time to begin a Business Course than the present.

Miss Mae Garner, one of the recent bright pupils, has been placed by the managers of the Southern in a good steno-bookkeeper's position with Messrs. Collier & Co., a prominent firm in Barnesville, Ga.

"I like my place fine, so far," writes Miss Garner, and it is stated that the firm is pleased with the services of Miss Garner.

Several others have been placed in good positions by the Southern during the past week, Mr. Parkinson, Miss Davis, Mr. Stripling, Mr. Mackey, Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Meredith being among them.

No trouble to secure a position if the business man to whom you apply knows that you are a graduate of the Southern.

"I am informed that your school is the best in the South," writes a prospect, and similar statements are frequently made by those writing to the Southern for information.

"It looks more businesslike here than in any other business school I have visited," said one of the callers upon the managers of the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"Your school seems to have a large attendance, and from the favorable information I have gathered, I have decided to place my son with you."

The foregoing remarks were made to the managers of the Southern by a gentleman who made a very thorough investigation of business schools.

Business Men's Indorsement.

Those desiring to become expert stenographers and high-class bookkeepers are requested to follow the course of the gentleman above referred to—

Make diligent inquiry among Atlanta's prominent business men—

Then the task of deciding where to take your business course will be an easy one.

The people admire the Southern's businesslike appearance.

They like its large, wide-awake, enthusiastic and efficient faculty.

They are pleased with the way in which the business men speak of it.

Write, call or phone for catalogue, and enter now. Address,

A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, 10 West Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Thomas L. Bryan, representative and lecturer.

The Social World

The initial social event of the week was a brilliant supper party Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder for members and patrons and patronesses of the Players' Club.

As a surprise to Mrs. Felder, president of the club, under whom members produced a successful play, "Neurasthenia," by Francis Crowninshield. The play was given on the terrace, and depicted the foibles of the fashionable inmates of an expensive sanitarium.

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin took the leading role, representing a victim of an affair of the heart. Others taking part were Mrs. Ransom Wright, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Claude Weller, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Messrs. Claude Weller, Ransom Wright, Tom Donaldson, Frank Taylor and Wallace Draper.

The play was enthusiastically received.

Supper was served on the terrace from flower-laden tables surrounding a long table adorned with fairy lamps and flowers, from which the aspics, etc., were served.

Following the performance, there was dancing in the ball room. Mrs. Felder wore straw colored chiffon, embroidered with corsage of lace and sash and girdle of pale blue satin. A leghorn hat adorned with blue plumes completed the toilet.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett.

Mrs. W. N. Bennett will give a tea Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Laurette Lewis, a bride-elect of July. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. J. S. Griggs, Mrs. W. A. Niall, Mrs. George Shepard, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. L. B. Mower, Mrs. E. H. Ginn, Mrs. Jere Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Dozier.

Misses Clementine LeVert and Beatrice Tyler will preside at one punch table, and Misses Pauline Griggs and Caroline Larendon at another. A large number of guests will be entertained, the tea to take the place of a wedding reception.

Assisting Mrs. Slaton.

Mrs. William L. Peel, national officer; Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. Howard McCall, State officers, will assist Mrs. Slaton and the officers and members of Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., in the garden party to be given at the country home of Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree Road on Wednesday afternoon. It is regretted that Mrs. S. W. Foster, State regent, will not attend on account of a recent bereavement.

The garden party will be one of the largest and most interesting events of the week, and all friends of the Atlanta Chapter and of Mrs. Slaton, who was at one time a former regent of the chapter, are invited to attend the affair, for which a small admission will be charged.

Reynolds-Booger.

Miss Elizabeth Louise Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reynolds, of Philadelphia, a debutante of last year, was married on Sunday evening to Professor Elbert W. G. Booger, of Atlanta. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and was followed by a reception in the drawing room of the bride's home.

On Wednesday the couple leave for a three months' trip through Europe.

Porch Party for Visitors.

Mr. Thomas Branch will give a porch party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Anna Willingham's guest, Miss Annie Tyler, of Sandersville, Ga.

Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Saturday, June 28, is shower day for Wesley Memorial Hospital, and donations will be received by a committee of ladies from the Woman's Auxiliary. Goods may be sent direct to the hospital and cash sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 501 South Pryor Street.

Bible Class to Picnic.

Bible Class No. 2 of the Second Baptist Church will have its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 25, at the cement pavilion at Grant Park. Dr. White will make an address, as will also Superintendent Spalding.

Party for Visitors.

Miss Estelle Weaver entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Thursday afternoon for Miss Louise Couper's guests, Misses LaGrange Cothran and Katherine Graves, of Rome.

Miss Helen Jones Entertains.

The largest affair of Tuesday afternoon was a tea given by Miss Helen Jones in honor of her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va. Young girls and young men were entertained.

Guests were received in the drawing room, where there were decorations of pink and white sweetpeas and roses with wild flowers. The tea table was adorned with a basket of daisies, surrounded by pink unshaded tapers and minor details in pink. Misses Margaret McCarty and Eleanor Macey served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Adam Jones, Misses Nellie Kiser Stewart, Clifford West, Margaret Northen, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, San Antonio, Texas; Mignon McCarty and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Miss Jones wore white charmeuse satin with draperies in blue chiffon. Miss Buckner wore pink chiffon with panniers made over pink satin. Mrs. Jones wore white embroidered French mull.

An orchestra played through the calling hours. The affair was one of the happiest events of the week.

Stillman-Porter Wedding.

Miss Margaret Porter and Dr. Lowe Stillman were married Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in Columbia Avenue. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue crepe poplin with a small blue hat and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Dr. and Mrs. Stillman went for an automobile trip through South Georgia. They will go to housekeeping at 285 East Fourth Street.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain informally at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Martin Dunbar's guests, Misses Thelma Dargan, of Jacksonville, and Maude Miller, of St. Louis. The affair will be one of a series of parties tendered the visitors.

Series of Parties.

Misses Katherine Graves and LaGrange Cothran, of Rome, who have been visiting Miss Louise Cooper for the past week, are having many parties given in their honor. Miss Estelle Weaver gave a matinee party Tuesday. Miss Margaret Traylor gave a bridge Wednesday afternoon, Miss Josephine Stoney will entertain at a luncheon Thursday. Miss Katherine Darby will give a dance Thursday evening, and Mrs. Paul Baker will entertain Friday.

Miss Cothran will return home Thursday. Miss Graves will leave Saturday.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Sidney Hoberton gave an informal luncheon Tuesday for Miss Martha Francis, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Douthit will take place Saturday evening. Six girls were her guests.

MARY MANNERING OBSTINATE; SUED

Almost Runs Down Man and Boy in Auto, Then Refuses to Make Apology.

DETROIT, MICH., June 24.—Because she refused to apologize for her alleged carelessness in jeopardizing the lives of a representative of a Chicago packing concern and the latter's 8-year-old son, Mary Mannering Wadsworth, actress and wife of Frederick E. Wadsworth, a Grosse Point millionaire, must appear in court to face charges of violating traffic ordinances.

Mrs. Wadsworth was driving her motor car through a crowded downtown street, when the complainant and his son crossed in front of her machine to escape being run down by two heavy trucks. The complainant declares that the auto brushed his and his son's bodies.

He called up the Wadsworth residence last night and demanded an apology. Mr. Wadsworth is said to have answered the telephone and declared his wife would not make amends for her action. The complainant declared he would prosecute Miss Mannering and was invited to proceed with the action, which he did.

COMMITTEES PUT ON BOND ISSUE WORK

Thomson Names One Body to Work Up Support and Another to Determine Need.

Councilman A. D. Thomson, chairman of the committee of fifteen investigating the feasibility of a general bond issue, has apportioned the preliminary work between two subcommittees. Upon the report of these subcommittees the recommendations of the whole committee will hinge.

Alderman John S. Candler is chairman of the submittee appointed to investigate the need of a bond issue, the other members being Alderman L N. Ragsdale and Councilman A. R. Colcord. Councilman W. G. Humphrey heads the second subcommittee, which is charged with ascertaining what support the bond issue would receive. The associate members are Councilman Orville H. Hall and Alderman J. H. Harwell.

Judge Candler was one of the original advocates of the proposition. He also is leading a fight to induce the incoming Legislature to submit a constiutional amendment permitting all municipalities to issued bonds upon a two-thirds vote of the people voting in the bond election. At present two-thirds of the voters registered at the last preceding registration must vote in favor of the issue. Judge Candler says it is next to impossible to get two-thirds of the registered voters to the polls on any day except a national election.

The hard work in connection with the bond issue will be done by Councilman W. G. Humphrey's committee, which might be called a campaign committee. Chairman Thomson, of the whole committee, said Tuesday it was necessary to gain the support of the Mayor, the newspapers and certain civic organizations before any bond issue would have the slightest chance of adoption. It is up to Mr. Humphrey and his committee either to get this support, or report their difficulties to the whole committee.

The support investigating committee is what is known as a Woodward committee. Mr. Humphrey is chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Hall is chairman of the Streets and Sidewalks Committee and Mr. Harwell head the Sewers and Drains Committee. The Mayor appointed them all. They have not always worked in harmony with him, but it is generally believed they can gain his support for the bond issue. The whole bond committee, however, is hopeful of the Mayor's support from the beginning. No dates have been set for meetings of the sub-committees.

Convict Escapes at Tybee.

SAVANNAH.—Three convicts engaged in work on the Inlet road at the south end of Tybee Island made a dash for liberty, giving the guests, police force and residents at the resort an exciting man hunt. Two of the convicts were captured after one had been shot. The third swam Horsepen Creek and escaped.

Venus Tells How To Be Perfect Fight Shy of Hobbles, She Says Sweets, Too, Have To Be Barred

Miss Ideal Believes Athletic Figure Is Inherited, but Regular Exercise Helps.

If you want to be perfect—or nearly so—take lots of exercise, regularly—not to-day and then next week—be regular in your habits, don't overeat, never eat sweets and bar the hobble skirts, even if you are out of fashion. That's the recipe given by Miss Ideal at the Forsyth, said to be the most perfectly formed woman on the stage.

Miss Ideal, whose real name is Miss Irene Deal, of Brookline, Mass., is not only an expert swimmer, diver, horseback rider, baseball player, and what not, but she is a preacher—or, rather, a teacher to thousands of women who visit her to learn how to become "ideal."

Of course, few can really become ideal, and, in fact, Miss Ideal is always frank to tell them so, she says; but she tells them a few things they may do easily to correct themselves.

Hobble Skirt Denounced.

Follow the rules, she says, and, even if you can't be a Venus, you can be healthier and will feel better than you ever did in your life.

And that means what has been enumerated already, with emphasis on "bar the sweets." The hobble skirt, she says, should be barred because it impedes good, healthy sort of walking.

"But don't you wear one yourself?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes," was the reply; "but I do it just as little as possible—just enough to keep from being stared at on the street as an extraordinary woman, you know, for I don't like them one bit. They were never made for women who take exercise."

Despite the fact that she has been indulging in all sorts of sports since early childhood, Miss Ideal doesn't attribute her state of perfection to her own efforts alone. In other words, she is a strong believer in the power of heredity. She believes "ideal" people must be built up through generations. She takes this position in view of the fact that all the members of her immediate family have athletic tendencies, her father and mother both being good swimmers, her father an expert on skis and her brother a professional baseball player.

She Plays Baseball.

She, too, is quite a baseball player, and has often pitched her team to victory.

Arrangements are being made by Manager Cardoza, of the Forsyth, to have Miss Ideal give an exhibtion at Piedmont Park this week. Miss Ideal has offered also a trophy to amateur swimmers and divers at the Forsyth.

Clark Eats Mustard Greens and Hog Jowl

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Speaker Champ Clark had a mess of black mustard greens and hog jowl for dinner. Afterward he declared this dish to be "fit for a king's table," and said it was the best food he had had since he left Missouri last November.

Rally at Ellijay to Promote Highway

Citizens of Ellijay will hold a big barbecue and good roads rally on July 4 in the interest of an automobile highway from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C. The committee in charge includes W. A. Cox, W. H. Shippen, E. W. Watkins, A. H. Burtz and H. M. Ellington.

SLEUTHS PROBING GEORGIA LYNCHING

AMERICUS, June 24.—Detectives are investigating the lynching of Will Redding, the negro who shot Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, Saturday night This became manifest to-day as the detectives were especially busy collecting data. Inquiry here affords no information as to who sent the detectives to the city. They were not brought here by local authorities.

Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of the Sumter Superior Court, will return from Columbus to-night. He said when he left for Columbus upon his return he would have a thorough investigation of the lynching made. If the evidence is sufficient Judge Littlejohn said he would call a special session of the Grand Jury at once to deal with the lynchers.

A strong public sentiment against the lynching has developed. At first this was not so generally manifest, but since the passing of resolutions by all of the churches on Sunday condemning the lynching the sentiment has crystallized almost in unanimous fashion in favor of a session of the Grand Jury to investigate the matter.

On account of the fact that the lynchers wore no masks and were entirely open in their procedure, an investigation of the affair by the Grand Jury would likely lead to sensational developments. Practically everyone in the mob is known here, if those who know will give evidence.

Though he is still in a critical condition, Chief Barrow is resting as well as could be expected, according to the statement issued to-day by his physician. A favorable symptom is the freedom from fever and the fact that the patient has great will power and nerve control, which may save his life in spite of his advanced age. He is 72 years old.

Mayor's Secretary to Attend T. M. A. Meet

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor James G. Woodward, will leave Saturday for an extensive tour of the North, the West, the Northwest and the Southwest. His business "excuse" is that he must attend the T. M. A. national convention in Spokane, Wash., next month.

Leaving Atlanta, Mr. Hammond will pass through Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Paul on the way to Spokane. After the T. M. A. convention he will take in Seattle and Portland, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and San Francisco, then swing back to Atlanta through Dallas, Houston and New Orleans.

Auto Hits Chicken Coop; 3 Badly Hurt

RALEIGH, June 24.—Rushing from an impending storm, Mrs. John Borden, her four children and three guests, all prominent in North Carolina, were thrown from an automobile at Goldsboro when their machine, driven by a negro chauffeur, struck a chicken coop and turned turtle.

Miss Mary Borden, a pretty 19-year-old girl, sustained a broken jawbone and loss of teeth; Mrs. R. B. Miller, daughter of the late Richard H. Battle, broken ribs and a shoulder blade, and Mrs. D. R. Kornegay, a broken shoulder and face cuts.

Mrs. Borden and daughters, Mary and Virginia, had been out of a hospital only one week, all three convalescing from operations.

GREAT-GRANDFATHER TO WED.

MACON, June 24.—Policeman L. M. Avant, 75 years of age, will be married to-morrow to Miss Elizabeth Gibson, 35 years of age, of Forsyth. Mr. Avant has eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

HORSEWHIPS GIRL CHAINED TO WALL

AUGUSTA, June 24.—A young girl chained to the wall by her neck, hanging limp and insensible, with blood dripping from her arms and shoulders, with a man about 40 years of age standing over her with the butt of a horsewhip poised for the next blow, was the sight that met the eyes of Patrolman R. M. Moore when he entered a back room at 902 Twelfth Street, answering a "hurry-up" call to police headquarters. Already Nellie Johnson, the insensible girl, was slowly strangling.

Officer Moore first lent aid to the girl and then turned to the man, J. J. Johnson, her father, and snapped steel handcuffs upon his wrists. The patrol wagon was called and the man and girl were carried to police headquarters.

Illinois Suffrage Law Thought Invalid

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 24.—Belief that Attorney General Lucey had declared the Illinois woman suffrage bill unconstitutional in the opinion he sent to Governor Dunne to-day was strengthened this afternoon when the Governor, in conference with William L. O'Connell, of Chicago, and others, deserted his offices for the Executive Mansion and denied himself to all callers.

Out-of-the-Ordinary Mid-Summer Hats

At $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00

We use out-of-the-ordinary advisedly. They are, beautifully.

Through our connection with the shop of Estelle Mershon, 20 East 46th Street, New York, we keep in closest touch with millinery styles as they appear in the great metropolis.

We are apprised of the new things at once, and then our splendid corps of milliners sets to work—the result is $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats that differ from those about town. But you must see just how they do differ.

Right now, and there are fresh ones every day—literally, every day—there are a number of particularly dainty white and light colored hats of hemp and peanut straw, with feathers and wings placed at "dangerous" angles, with crowns wreathed with flowers, with crowns covered with white maline. One at $5.00 of notable charm has a crown wrapped with white brocade silk; a bow of the same silk stands upright in the back—the unusual part is the way the silk is edged with maline. It is $5.00. But this is but one of many. See them all.

You, too, will say the prettiest $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 hats are at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's.

Wanted Silks With Prices Cut to Thirds and Halves

The Selling Will Start at Nine o'Clock

A Silk Sale to reckon with!

The reasons:

—Here is a variety that rather fully covers the whole silk question.

—Qualities are as fine as we can buy in regular season for "regular" selling. They are best at their prices.

—Styles are those chosen because they were choice, distinctive.

And

—Prices are now cut down to a third and a half.

Certainly all the elements that would go to make a Silk Opportunity mark this event. Now, then, to your needs! What are they? A dress, a waist, a skirt, a suit, a coat—it matters little, just read on—

$1.69 For $3 to $4 a Yd. Silks

Yes, $1.69 a yard, for $3.00 and $4.00 crepe meteors and charmeuse, fabrics fashion will favor as fondly in the fall as she has this season. They drape and "cling" more gracefully, perhaps, than any other silks. And you may select from mais, brown, helio, apricot, taupe, Alice and wistaria. All are 44 inches wide.

69c For $1.50 to $2.25 a Yd. Silks

Perhaps the finest values of the sale are among these. We miss our guess if the crowds are not thick around them. There are 36-inch chiffon taffetas in plain and two-toned shades—light blue, green, mais, yellow, tan, lilac and blue, tan and blue, green and rose, black and green; there are bordered foulards; there are figured chiffons, small designs in exquisite shades, white eoliennes, marquisettes, colors for evening dresses—all 44 inches wide and none was less than $1.50 a yard!

79c For $1 a Yd. Wash Silks

For wash silks that seem to grow in popular favor as the weather grows warmer. The silk shirt—for men as well as for women—is the cool shirt. And these silks are the dependable kinds that are true to their name—wash silks. Plain and corded, white and black, white and helio, white and navy, white and gray. Stripes of various widths, 33 inches wide.

49c For 85c and $1 Yd. Foulards

The quality is told by the names they bear—but the patterns! Choosing a dress will be a delight, for here is variety—there are black and white stripes, there are little cubes and flowers and dots thrown across surfaces of brown, tan, navy, gray, wistaria and heliotrope. No question, one to your liking. 23 and 24 inches wide.

A Greater-Than-Ever Remnant Day in the Wash Goods

At Nine o'Clock

The Wash Goods buyer's return from New York with great quantities of new merchandise meant a crusade against short lengths—now they are gathered, every kind, making up the largest and finest quantity of remnants we have offered this season.

To-morrow at nine o'clock we will let you at them!

It will be a splendid time to select waists, skirts, dresses and underwear for yourself and children. Hardly a wanted wash material is not represented—for they are remnants, you know, and only wanted materials become remnants.

Colored Cottons

A world of ginghams, one kind after another; checks, stripes, plaids, zephyr ginghams, fine imported ginghams, colorings that are fast and as pretty as can be; bordered, figured, striped and plain voiles and marquisettes, crepes, in such great demand, figured and plain shades, soisettes, piques, cotton suitings that look like linen, silk mulls, percales, galateas, kimono crepes, and still the list could be extended to include practically every kind of colored cottons, the light, filmy kinds, the substantial kinds.

Linens

Even table linens are included. Dress linens, the smooth French finish and the rough ramie linens in white and colors, linen lawns, cambrics, crashes, pillow casing, huck toweling, butcher's linen, brown apron linen and crashes.

White Goods

Flaxon, plain and checked and striped, dimities, linens, percales, India linons, batistes, French and Persian lawns, French and English nainsooks, madras figured and striped, dotted swisses, curtain swisses, lingerie cloth, repps, poplins, piques and others.

Stay the Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"PERPLEXED," who seems to have a distorted notion of the valuation of man's love, wishes to know if she and a friend whose woe is of the same texture shall change their dispositions and win the love of man, or remain as they are and stay single.

In this manner she describes her plight: Both girls are good looking, they are agreeable, as well educated as other girls, and dressed better than many, yet no man comes wooing.

"We do not allow men to hug and kiss us," Perplexed writes, "because we know they hug and kiss other girls and talk vilely about them afterward, and we don't want to be talked about in that way. For the reason that we are reserved, and do not chatter senselessly, run after the men, and act crazy about them, we are left severely alone. We would like to go to dances, parties and theaters with the boys, but they don't seem to care to take us. Should we change our dispositions, or remain the same as we are and stay single?"

Remain as you are, Perplexed, and don't get the notion into your foolish little head that that necessarily means you will remain single. The girl who has many lovers seldom marries. The girl who goes with this boy to-day and another boy to-morrow, proving by the number of men who dangle around that she possesses a certain kind of popularity, is never the girl who marries first, and seldom the girl who marries well.

The man worth while, my dear, may seek a mapple for an evening's amusement, but he will look elsewhere when seeking a partner for life. He never marries a girl who gives him a kiss for the mere asking, and who, he knows, kissed A yesterday and B the day before, and left some mark of affection on every letter in the alphabet.

Must Be Young.

You did not state your age, but I am sure you are extremely young, for only the youthful look at life so darkly. At eighteen you consider yourself a hopeless spinster, and when you are twenty-eight you will be less alarmed both at your years and your pending fate.

Neither will you call that pending fate a "doom," as you do now, finding more reason every day you live that you did not make a choice when too young to choose wisely and that your happy girlhood has been prolonged.

To talk of changing your disposition in the hope of attracting a lover is idiocy. You are as the Lord and your mother made you, and I am glad that the product of their efforts is something natural and sane. It is a joy to know of two girls who do not strut and ogle and flirt and paint and powder and preen their feathers to attract the men.

It is pleasant to learn there exists two young women who do not walk out as if dressed for market, and who do not impress all sane beholders with the opinion that they are making a very great display of very inferior wares.

Increased Pleasure.

My dears, be just as you are! Go to the theaters with your mother. It will increase your pleasure in the play to know you are giving pleasure to her. There are dances to which you can go and have a good time, though only girls attend. There are no bars to any good, wholesome amusement to keep out women unless some male escort attends.

Don't mope because your lover is long on the way, and don't shed any tears if he never comes, finding consolation in the remembrance that many to whom a lover has come would change places with you if they could.

It is finer and better, my dears, to remain single because the right man failed to appear than to know the plight of the millions of women whose terror of spinsterhood was so great they married the wrong one.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

She wondered what had become of Tom.

CHAPTER XII.

JENNIE and her girl friend went to a place that the girl knew about for Jennie to get some clothes—on credit. She got a pretty large amount of things—in proportion to her salary—most of which she did not need—but they looked so pretty she just COULDN'T help but get them—lace collars, silk stockings, a willow plume and numerous other things—for which Jennie was to start paying $1.50 a week.

It sounded SO easy to Jennie, and she was quite delighted. When Jennie brought the things home her friend wanted to know where she got them, but Jennie would not tell her—except that she got them awfully cheap—only $1.50 a week until they were paid for—and, besides, NOW she could dress like the other girls she had seen.

Jennie's friend, the boarding house keeper, told her she couldn't afford the $1.50 a week. With her car fare, that would hardly leave anything out of her salary of $8 per week. Jennie got real angry, and "she guessed it was her money; she worked for it, and she could have $1.50 out of it each week." But Jennie's friend knew now she would have to skimp more than ever to get along—for $1.50 a week will buy quite a bit of food if one plans and spends it wisely. Jennie had good, plain little frocks before, which she and her mother used to make together, and which she always looked well in. Whole heaps better than the overdressed girls she now wanted to look like.

So Jennie sat up late that night feverishly making over her dresses, and as she sewed she could not help but wonder what had become of Tom—and wonder what he would think if he should see her when she was all dressed up.

Do You Know That—

During their 300 years' rule of Russia the Romanoffs—the reigning family—have never been assigned a stated income. The Czars have always been allowed to take what they like from the imperial treasury. At present the civil list for the whole of the imperial family stands at $8,000,000 a year; but this figure, having been fixed by the Czar himself, could be increased, if he so desired, without any formalities. He has, moreover, vast private resources, his Siberian properties alone bringing in an annual revenue of $7,000,000.

Probably the most practical discovery made by the ill-fated Scott expedition to the South Pole was a great coal field, said to be at least 650 miles long. Its width has not been ascertained. Australian reports are to the effect that the coal has been analyzed and is declared to be of workable quality. It is one of the largest deposits in the world.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He was an optimistic soul and a sportsman—a combination that made him a good friend to bookies, both directly and indirectly. His pals, whom he infected with his enthusiasm, followed his tips blindly, with more often than not disastrous results.

"See what you've done," wailed one of his friends after a race. "And you told me I could put my shirt on that horse."

"And did you?"

"Yes—worse luck."

"Well, then," replied the optimistic sportsman, "see the money you'll save on laundry bills."

"I wish I was a star," the dude sighed, smiling at his own poetic fancy.

"I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily.

His heart beat tumultuously.

"And why?" he asked, tenderly, at the same time taking her unresisting little hand in his own. "And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

"Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell freezing upon his soul, "because then you would come around only once in fifteen years."

And he took his hat and went out into the shimmering moonlight.

A writer in a magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

:: :: The Sins of the Parents :: ::

We Are Only Just Beginning to Have Some Conscience About Making Our Children Pay Our Debts to Nature.

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the hardest laws of life is that the sins of the parents are visited upon the children. This has been true from the days of Adam down, but we are only just now beginning to be enlightened enough to have some conscience about making our children pay our debts to nature, and to realize that we have no right to pass on our physical, mental and moral afflictions to another generation.

The crime of crimes is for diseased parents to bring into the world a child that is doomed to suffering and sickness, and to weakness and failure before ever it is born, or one in whose veins runs the tainted blood that leads almost inevitably to the prison or the insane asylum. By the side of that murder is a small matter. To give life is just as serious a matter as to take it, and often far crueler, because those who are killed have only an instant's pain, whereas the unfit must go through weary years of an existence that is a perpetual torture.

The Consequences.

The sins of the parents are visited on the children morally just as much as they are physically, and there can be no stronger incentive for people to live decent lives than that their children must reap as they have sown. It is the parents who open or shut the doors of opportunity to their children. The son and daughter of the father and mother who are honored and respected find that the world is, at least, willing to give them their chance, while the children of the drunkard, the thief or the woman whose name is on the lips of scandal are handicapped at every turn and condemned before they have had a chance to prove themselves.

A boy may be as honest as the day, but "like father like son," says the merchant to himself, if the father has been dishonest, and so he refuses to give the youth a place in his store. The girl may be as pure as a lily, but if her mother has the reputation of being a light woman, "she's her mother's daughter," says the young man in his thought, and he looks elsewhere for a wife.

The children are punished for the sins of the parents. We may think this unjust, but it is one of the inexorable laws of fate that there is no way to avoid.

Recently I have had two very pathetic letters from two young business women, each of whom has made a fine place for herself in the commercial world, but each of whom is being called on to suffer for the sins of her mother.

One of these girls writes that her mother is a confirmed drunkard, and that although everything has been done to try to break her of her evil habit, she comes home two or three evenings a week reeling drunk. The girl spends her hard-earned money buying furniture and comforts for the home, and the mother, when she can get money no other way, sells and pawns the furniture for drink.

This girl has been cut off from all the natural pleasures of her time of life by her mother's sin. She can not ask any of her acquaintances to such a home. She dare not invite any young man to visit her for fear that he will see the hideous skeleton of this debauched mother that she tries to keep hidden in her own closet. She is even ostracized by the girls that used to be her old friends.

An Irregular Life.

The other girl's mother is leading an irregular life. This girl says that she was so ashamed of her mother's conduct that she would never tell any of the girls in the store where she lived for fear they would come to see her, and so find out about her mother. At last she fell sick and they did come, and when they knew her secret they refused to have anything to do with her when she went back to work. She was also engaged to be married to a worthy young man, but when she revealed to him how her mother lived he broke off the match because he was not willing to marry into such a family.

These girls both say that they have clung to their mothers, trying to hold them up, and hoping that love for them would make the erring women repent and lead better lives, but they have become discouraged, they see their own lives being wasted and ruined, and they want to know what is the right thing for them to do.

My advice would be to get up and go so far away from home that the shadow of their mother's shame could not fall across their lives, and to where they will have a chance to be judged on their own merits instead of being condemned for the faults of their parents.

Owe a Debt.

Children owe a debt to their parents, but it is so very little in comparison with the debt that parents owe their children that it is not to be considered in a case like this. More than that, when the parents misbehave themselves they forfeit their rights to their children's consideration.

A mother who has become a degraded sot, and who loves liquor better than she does her children, certainly has no claim upon the affections and duty of the daughter she disgraces. The girl can do her no good by staying with her and being dragged down herself into the pit the mother has digged with her weakness, and if she is wise she will steal her heart against a maudlin pity for her mother, and go and lead her own life, and get what happiness she can out of it, independent of her mother.

Nor is there any reason why the girl, whose mother has chosen the broad road, should keep her mother company. If the mother refuses to lead a decent life her daughter is just as much justified in declining to associate with her as she would with any other woman of ill-repute. As long as she stays with her mother her garments will be bespattered with mud, and so the sooner she gets away from her environment the better for her.

The prodigal son or daughter has an unending claim on the forgiveness and help of the parents, because whatever he or she is the parents are responsible for, but the children are not responsible for their prodigal parents and owe them nothing.

Items of Interest

Roof gardens are not uncommon in the city of London; but the fowl-run on the top of Market Buildings, No. 29 Mincing Lane, is probably unique. Mr. Woollard, the caretaker of Market Buildings, resides with his wife and family in the topmost story of the block, and his yard, or garden, is the flat part of the roof. There he determined, about two years and a half ago, to vary his hobby as an amateur gardener with a little poultry farming, to which end, being a handy man, he erected fowl houses and bought some of the best hens obtainable, with a view to egg-laying. Since then, save in the brief non-laying season, he and his family have had all the eggs they wanted.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 154,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 172,000 yards (98 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the managers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artistes acting for the purpose of advertisement.

Game, according to English law, includes hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, black game, ptarmigan and bustard.

When One Is Old

By Frances L. Garside

A MAN discovers that his wife is looking old ten years before he makes the discovery about himself.

After a man passes 50 the number of times the hero saves the heroine in the book doesn't count for as much with him as the size of the type the story is printed in.

It is another sign you are growing old if you feel grateful to those who like you.

A woman who is made a grandmother for the first time wants to be congratulated, but when a man is made a grandfather, throw cold water in his face to bring him to.

Another sign of age: When a man would rather gossip about wickedness than engage in it.

The years that shrink a man cause his wife to grow larger and fatter. It seems as if there must always be just so much material in the family.

"They are getting old," children say of their parents with a sigh that implies the hope that they won't get too old.

This is what all the great ambitions finally come to: That one may have a welcome corner and enough to eat when one is old, be of no trouble to any one, and that one's final illness may be brief.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Stunned When Warren Announces That He Is Going to Paris Alone.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE moment Warren entered Helen knew by the set lines of his mouth that something unusual had happened.

There were some things that past experience could never teach Helen, and one of them was not to purr over Warren at such times. When he came home with that grim expression, she knew that he always wanted to be let strictly alone, yet she could never resist fluttering about him with anxious questions.

"Dear, what is it? Has anything happened? You look so tired and worried."

"Oh, for heaven's sake let me alone," as he shook her off and went in to wash up for dinner.

All through dinner Helen's anxious solicitude only irritated him more. It was not until they left the table that he announced with grim defiance:

"Well, I found out to-day that I'll have to go to Paris on that Livingston case."

"To PARIS!"

"The Kaiser Wilhelm sails Tuesday," he went on, coldly ignoring her astonishment. "Looks now as though I'd have to go on that."

"But, Warren, I—I—Why I didn't know you were THINKING of going to Paris! You never even mentioned it."

"Took mighty good care not to. You always stew over things, so that I never tell you anything until I have to."

A Shock.

"But Paris! PARIS!" Helen gazed up with widening eyes, for it was just dawning on her what a trip to Paris would mean. "Oh, dear, it'll be such a WONDERFUL trip! And I've always wanted to go there more than anywhere else in the world. But Tuesday—do you think we CAN get ready by Tuesday?"

"I can. You're not going," brutally.

"Not going!" It was hardly more than a whisper.

"Now, for Heaven's sake, don't try to be tragic. No, you're NOT going—and that settles it! Now we'll not have any scene, either. I'm going on a business trip, a hurried one, too, and there's no earthly sense in dragging you along."

Helen sat as though stunned. Then realizing that her very silence was irritating him, she asked mechanically:

"How long will you be gone?"

"Can't tell. Maybe not more than six weeks, possibly three months."

"Three months!"

"Oh, cut the stage business. Everything I say you repeat with a tragic gasp. 'Paris!' 'Not going!' 'Three months!'" rasping out the words in exaggerated mimicry. "Great heavens, can't a man ever go on a business trip without his wife? And if I took you—what would you do after you got there? You can't speak French—and I'll have no time to bother with you. Think I'm going to pay three or four hundred extra for your passage—just to have you sitting over there in a hotel? Well, I guess not. Now drop it—I've got to work."

And Warren got out a bundle of papers he had brought from the office and settled himself at the desk.

Helen was blindly fingering through her work basket. In a dazed sort of way she wound up spools and thrust scattered pins and needles in the tiny strawberry cushion.

A Foreboding.

Her glance fell on her engagement ring finger—now so pathetically bare. Had the loss of her ring been a foreboding of this? Suddenly she dropped the work basket and rushed into her room, lest Warren should see her tears. On the bed she buried her face in the pillow so the sound of her sobbing would not reach him.

There had been hardly an hour in the last week since she had lost her ring that she had not looked for it somewhere, and always with that sick feeling of dread that if she did not find it, it would in some way mean some estrangement between Warren and her. And now—now he was going to Paris for three months! She tried to think of what the days and nights would be without him. The whole world had grown suddenly black.

Then she heard Warren's voice calling her. She started up, hastily brushing away the tears.

"Where did you put that long envelope of papers I brought home last night?" he shouted impatiently.

"Why, isn't it in the desk drawer there? Wait, I'll come and get it," hurriedly fluffing the powder puff over her face to hide the tear stains.

But when she had found the envelope, he glanced at her sharply.

"What's the matter with you? Suppose we don't have anything but tears and hysterics until I leave, eh?"

"Warren, that isn't fair! I haven't said one word. I haven't begged you to take me nor made a single complaint."

"Because you know too darn well it wouldn't do any good. But you'll be going around here with a long, woe-begone face. Gad, you love to pose as a martyr. I'll be mighty glad to get off—I can tell you that."

Sleepless Moments.

Warren worked over his papers until after eleven, and when he finally went to bed, Helen was already there. Her face was turned to the wall and her eyes were closed. In a few moments he was asleep. But Helen, with the ache in her throat and her heart, lay there staring at the wall, which reflected in waving shadows the dim light from the street.

At length she could stand it no longer. Quietly she slipped out of bed and into the front room. She sank into a low chair by her open window and gazed out into the night. It was warm and sultry, and the faint breeze hardly stirred the thin curtains. There was no moon, and only a few stars shone in the dark, cloudy sky.

Often Helen had found peace in the soothing stillness of the night, but now her thoughts were too tumultuous and the ache in her heart too acute.

She had lost her engagement ring—and now Warren was leaving her to go abroad. The fear that he was growing farther from her, which was always in the background of Helen's thoughts, was stronger than ever.

Toward dawn the air grew chill and damp, but still she sat there. Suddenly there was the creaking sound of a step, then the bedroom door opened and Warren came out.

"Hello, what're you doing here?"

"Nothing, dear," starting up. "I—I just couldn't sleep."

He touched the button by the door and switched on the light. Perhaps there was something in her white-drawn face as she shrank blinking from the sudden glare that touched him, for he said, with unaccustomed gentleness:

"You'd better come back to bed—you'll catch cold." He felt her arm through her thin nightgown. "Why, you're chilled through! How long have you been out here? What's this—your sleeve's all wet!"

She tried to draw away, but he held her.

"You've been sitting there crying half the night—that it?" The words were sharp, but the voice was, for Warren, strangely gentle. "So that's the way you act when you think I'm going away for a few weeks. Well, you are a little fool! Now, none of that!"

Helen had turned suddenly and hid her face in his shoulder, her slender body quivering with soundless sobs. He switched out the light again, and for a moment stood awkwardly smoothing her hair.

"Now, that'll do! You've cried enough for one night. Come on back to bed and get some sleep or you'll be sick—then you can't go at all."

Through a film of tears, Helen looked up. Only the light from the street lit the room, but he could see her eager, quivering wistfulness, and for once it did not irritate him.

"All right, Kitten, I guess we can fix it for you to go. Now, come on to bed and don't think any more about it."

"But, dear—the expense!" faltered Helen, who, woman like, now that she had her heart's desire, felt that perhaps she could put it from her. "You know I don't want to make it hard for you—maybe I shouldn't go, after all."

"Now, you leave the expense to me. I'll see to that. And if it'll make you feel easier, you may as well know you were scheduled to go all along. But a lot of things went wrong at the office to-day, and I felt a bit bearish—that's all. Now, come on to bed—or we'll both have double pneumonia."

A CLEAN SCALP MEANS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

HERPICIDE

There is nothing "just as good" as Newbro's Herpicide. Some dealers will even go so far as to tell you they have something better.

That dealer has an axe to grind.

You can't stop his grinding, but you can prevent him grinding it at your expense.

There is one sure, swift way to do it. Go where you can get what you ask for.

You wouldn't be obliged to do this very often, as fortunately the majority of druggists are honest and conscientious.

Newbro's Herpicide has been so long and favorably known as "the original dandruff destroyer" that no one should be deceived.

When you need a hair remedy, you don't want one which merely promises to kill the dandruff germ and prevent the hair from falling.

You want one that will do it.

Herpicide does it.

The hair becomes soft and lustrous. There is life, snap and beauty where formerly the hair was dead, dull and brittle.

Applications of this wonderful prophylactic may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver to the Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

has worked out the principle of ball bearings in the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter. Every typebar is ball bearing; the carriage and capital shift travel on ball bearings and wherever friction would naturally develop, it is lessened to the vanishing point by ball bearings.

This means, in a typewriter, greater speed, closer adjustments, and consequently, greater accuracy and neater typewritten work.

This is only one of the reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter is worth more money than any other typewriter ever made.

We can show you by actual demonstration how you can increase the efficiency of your stenographer and save yourself time and money.

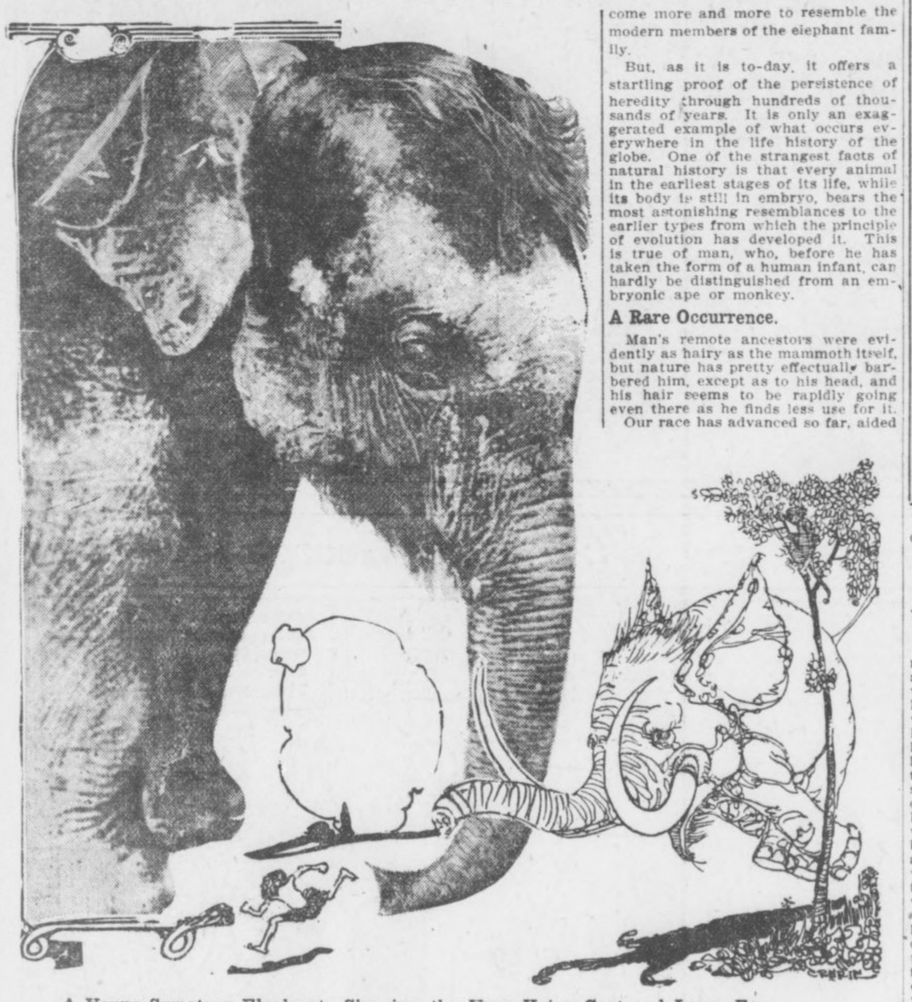
: A Descendant of the Mammoth :

The London "Zoo" Has a Baby Elephant From Sumatra That Bears Traces of Descent From Extinct Monsters of Pre-Glacial Times.



A Young Sumatran Elephant—Showing the Very Hairy Coat and Large Ear.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SUPPOSE that some traveler in a remote land should come upon a living animal bearing unmistakable indications of being a lineal descendant of the famous "diplodocus," whose gigantic skeleton is the most astonishing thing to be seen in Mr. Carnegie's Pittsburg Museum. There would be a great stir in the scientific world over such an apparition from the abyss of time, and a corresponding arousal of popular interest in the wonders and mysteries of natural history.

Hardly less interesting is the news from London that a young Sumatran elephant in the "Zoo" there has developed the long, coarse, red hair of the extinct mammoth.

It has a mop hanging over its forehead that would suffice for twenty college sophomores; it wears trailing whiskers on its chin, and sports mammoth "mutton chops" in front of its ears. Its whole body is more or less hairy, and it proclaims in many ways that it belongs to a different species from the ordinary Indian elephant, and approaches nearer than any other existing animal to those Brobdingnagian beasts which, ages ago, roamed over Europe and Asia, occasionally frightening cave men and women, and leaving their huge hairy bodies, and mighty ivory tusks, imbedded in the prehistoric swamps of Siberia and Alaska.

This elephantine baby, with its earmarks of mammoth descent, is only eighteen months old, and it is believed, as it grows older and bigger, the traces of its ancient ancestry will gradually disappear, and it will come more and more to resemble the modern members of the elephant family.

But, as it is to-day, it offers a startling proof of the persistence of heredity through hundreds of thousands of years. It is only an exaggerated example of what occurs everywhere in the life history of the globe. One of the strangest facts of natural history is that every animal in the earliest stages of its life, while its body is still in embryo, bears the most astonishing resemblances to the earlier types from which the principle of evolution has developed it. This is true of man, who, before he has taken the form of a human infant, can hardly be distinguished from an embryonic ape or monkey.

A Rare Occurrence.

Man's remote ancestors were evidently as hairy as the mammoth itself, but nature has pretty effectually barbered him, except as to his head, and his hair seems to be rapidly going even there as he finds less use for it.

Our race has advanced so far, aided by the influence of its highly developed brain, that it is only very rarely that a striking likeness to our simian ancestors is seen after the early formative stages of life are passed, but the Sumatran elephants appear to retain their ancestral marks during their babyhood, or beyond, and this may be taken as an indication that, comparatively speaking, but a short time has elapsed since they were a race of real mammoths.

The elephant baby that is now attracting the attention of naturalists in London is as great a curiosity in his way as would be a hairy, ape-like man, found living in some tropical jungle, and if his family had possessed any means of handing down its traditions since the Glacial Period what an astonishing revelation of strange globe-history would be placed before us!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life. Mildred visits Gordon Kelly's home in the mountains and is astonished at the evidences of luxury and refinement she finds there. Gordon is caught in a storm and is made prisoner by four strange men. He is forced to write a letter to Mildred. In it he tries to convey a hint of his whereabouts.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forrest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured, in his egotism, that with Gordon out of the way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that trip up into the mountains never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about 15 miles, uphill all the way. He notified the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a ride of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey.

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain, with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the farther side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice. "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said. "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where? How?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

Not So Easy.

With the careless movement he would have used to draw a handkerchief (had he possessed that useful article) from his pocket, the black-bearded man reached a hand behind him and when it came into view again it held a wicked-looking six-shooter. The demonstration was sufficient. The color left Cain's face as quickly as it had mounted and he became very pale. There was a painful pause. The three men on the bench shifted uneasily.

"I—beg your pardon," stammered Cain, feeling as though he ought to say something to relieve the tension. The mountaineers made no answer. Cain glanced from one to the other of them. Finally he managed to say:

"It's getting late; I must be going."

There was no answer to this remark, either. Cain hesitated a moment, then started to walk in the direction of his horse.

"Come on back yere." The bearded man spoke in a quiet tone, but Cain stopped instantly and turned.

"W-what do you want?" he asked in a faint voice.

"Settle," said the bearded man, laconically.

Cain gulped once or twice and then answered:

"Why, I paid you for your work."

"Tain't enough."

"I—I didn't bring any money with me—very little," stammered Cain.

"Git some."

Cain brightened up. "All right," he said; "I'll send it to you same as before."

"I reckon not; you git it up yere and you stay right yere till it comes." The black-bearded man, it seemed, could talk when he wanted to.

Caught in Net.

Cold sweat broke out on Cain's face. It dawned on him that he was caught in the same net that held Gordon Kelly for weeks. He knew now why the bearded man had brought him to this deserted spot instead of telling him when they met down the road that Gordon Kelly had escaped. He rapidly turned the whole situation over in his mind and then endeavored to parley with the mountaineers.

"I don't see any way to get any money up here to you unless I go home and get it," he said.

Not even the shrug of a shoulder did Cain receive in acknowledgment of this statement. He tried pleading, and said in a half whine:

"You men know I have treated you all right. I've done just what I said I'd do. I'm a man of my word. If you will let me go back to Atlanta, I promise you on my honor as a gentleman that I will send you the money, as soon as I get there."

This would have been the proper place for a word or two of incredulity, but none was offered by the bearded man. Cain tried several forms of entreaty without getting a rise out of his listeners, and then said:

"Well, all right; just tell me how I can get the money and I'll try it."

The leader of the gang, who had been leaning against the cabin, went indoors and returned with a pencil and a stenographer's notebook, which he handed to Cain. The book was what was left of one they had procured for Gordon Kelly, and had been used by him in writing the few letters he was allowed to write. Cain seated himself on the ground with his back against the cabin and prepared to write. Before beginning, however, he said to the bearded man:

"Can I have something to eat? I haven't eaten since early this morning."

A Dash to Escape.

The three men arose from the bench. One of them went indoors to start a fire, another took a pail and went to a nearby spring for water, and the third began gathering an armful of wood from a small pile a few feet behind the cabin. The black-bearded man, rating Cain an arrant coward (which he was), but choosing the wrong time, picked up the bench and carried it through the door of the cabin. Cain dropped book and pencil, whipped out his knife, ran to where his horse was tied, cut the bridle, jumped in the saddle and dug his heels in the side of the animal. He was over the brow of the incline before the mountaineers were aware that he had flown. With an oath, the black-bearded man hastened to his own horse and started in pursuit.

Cain's horse probably knew the way he came better than Cain himself did. At any rate, the man had no means of guiding the animal, and was forced to let the brute take his own course, as the ends of the bridle were dangling from the bit. He urged him all he could with his heels, and by pounding him in the ribs with his fist. Despite the poor going under him, the horse covered the distance to where the road crossed Pew Creek in fast time. Once straightened out on the main road, Cain urged his horse all the harder, and only after they had covered a quarter of a mile did Cain venture to look around to see if there was a pursuer.

One glance was enough. Cain returned to the beating of his horse with redoubled vigor.

Night was coming on and soon it was so dark that Cain could hardly see his hand before him. But the horse kept plunging ahead, urged by the frightened rider. Cain feared to stop and listen. He feared to turn his horse aside and let his pursuer pass him by lest the heavy breathing of his jaded horse should be heard. Surely Tam O'Shanter, in his flight from the ghosts of Alloway, had a no more fearsome ride than did Forrest Cain down the mountain road that night.

A Wild Ride.

At last, when his horse seemed about to drop from exhaustion, Cain allowed him to come to a walk. He slipped from the saddle and, securing the strips of leather that dangled from the bit, he tied a knot in them and then stopped to listen. At first he could hear no sound, but soon, in the stillness of the night, he heard the four distinct hoofbeats of a walking horse. The black-bearded man was in close pursuit, but he, too, was giving his horse a breathing spell. Cain vaulted in the saddle and forced his horse to the limit.

It seemed to Cain as if the race would never end, but at last he heard the screech of a locomotive and he knew he was quite near the railroad. But a moment later he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. He drew his knife from his pocket, opened it and cruelly jabbed the ribs and quivering flanks of his horse. The animal, ready to drop from fatigue, sprang forward under the pain. Cain saw the flashing headlight of the locomotive. The train was approaching the crossing. Horses and horsemen were nearing the track. Cain made one supreme effort to get his mount over the crossing before the train could get there. He was too late. Despite the roar of the passing train, he heard the pounding of horses' hoofs close behind him.

Dashing up to the crossing, Cain leaped from the saddle and ran to the slow-moving train. Three cars painted white came along together. Cain reached up and clutched a grab-handle and was jerked from the ground. At the same instant came the crash of a six-shooter. Cain's grip loosened and he fell. An unearthly shriek rose high above the roar of the train and ended suddenly, as though not half spent. The train passed on and then all was quiet.

Farnsworth, the Atlanta newspaperman, saw all this and heard the piercing scream that came from under the rumbling cars. He heard, too, the loud breathing of horses and was aware that a man was standing near him; the man who had fired the shot, doubtless. The train seemed an age in passing, but finally the tail lights flashed by. Farnsworth walked to the spot whence came that horrid screech, and his foot came in contact with a shapeless mass. He struck a match and gazed down on the crushed and lifeless body of Forrest Cain.

Turning suddenly, Farnsworth saw a black-whiskered man peering over his shoulder. The match was struck from his hand, and the stranger, mounting his foam-flecked horse, rode off in the darkness.

CHAPTER XL.

ALTHOUGH the cyclone in which Gordon Kelly was caught passed several miles to the West of the bungalow where Mildred Deery lived, that young woman was terrified by the electrical storm that pervaded the whole mountain section. Gordon did not call on the telephone that night as was his custom and she was disappointed, but concluded that the storm put the line out of order. The first she knew that anything had happened to Gordon was shortly after sunrise next morning when Steve arrived at the bungalow in a car. Slipping on a kimono, Mildred went to her bedroom window and demanded to know what was wanted. Steve asked if his master was there. On being told that he was not, Steve related to Mildred how they had gone together to repair one of the telephone instruments, that he had been sent back for a tool, that a cyclone had swept close to where he had left his master and that when he returned to the spot Gordon had disappeared. Fearing his master had been caught in the cyclone, Steve had hurried back to the mansion and searching parties were sent out. They worked until late in the night without success. On the chance that Gordon might be at the bungalow (it turned out that the telephone between the mansion and the bungalow was out of order) Steve had driven there in the car to make inquiries.

Mildred was almost frantic when Steve finished his story.

"Hasn't anything been done this morning to find him?" she cried.

"Oh, yes, Mis' Mildred, dey was jes' start'n out to hunt when Ah lef," replied the colored boy. "Ef Mr. Gordon ain't yere, ah mus' go right on back, Mis' Mildred," he added.

"Wait!" exclaimed the girl, very much excited. "I'm going back with you."

Hurriedly informing her mother of what she had just heard, Mildred hastily dressed and ran to the door. Just outside the doorsill she saw a piece of paper under a stone. She seized it and read the note Gordon had written to her on the first night of his captivity. She uttered a glad cry and rushed into the house to tell her mother. Returning in a few moments she leaped into the car and ordered Steve to drive to the mansion as fast as possible.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the thirty-second installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 33d installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and, with a pull at the cord, sent the shade flying upward. For seconds there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammering on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

"Dan, Take Her Back."

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the Inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Dan, take her back!" he said, feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The Inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The Confession.

Burke was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself over to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last, his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

He pressed the button-call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Glider?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. * * * He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke's broad jowls shook from the force with which he snapped his jaws together.

Burke Reflected.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the Third Degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Glider and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Gordon here in just five minutes. * * * Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

THE

Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer

Just pack it—that's all! The freezer will do the rest. No crank to turn—no hard work—no dasher to clean—no glass to break—no hoops to fall off.

Be Wise! Make Your Own Ice Cream

Of course, you know that home-made ice creams, sherbets or ices are superior from every viewpoint. They are always sweet, pure and wholesome; there is a flavor and genuine goodness about them that is not found in the general run of factory products. Besides that, when you make your own preparations you know that the ingredients are always pure, and that the can is clean and sanitary. The main reason why ice cream is made in but comparatively few homes, is the work and bother connected with the old-fashioned crank freezer. That is one reason why the arrival of

will be hailed with delight by every one who is fond of ice creams, etc., because it eliminates the tedious turning of the crank entirely, and produces creams, sherbets and ices that will make your mouth water. That is one reason, but there are many others.

DON'T YOU KNOW that the enjoyment of a dish largely depends upon the manner in which it is served? Could you imagine a daintier and more appetizing manner of serving ice creams than provided for by the "Ice-Kist?"

WELSH LEADING 134-POUNDERS; RITCHIE DODGES

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, June 24.—Now that Ritchie and Rivers have agreed to meet—134 pounds ringside—it looks as if we may expect Freddie Welsh to "peep" for be it remembered that the clever Briton is really the lightweight champion of the world. Matt Wells was the only one who ever gained a decision over him (at weight), and as he defeated Wells right back again, it stamps him as the premier. When it comes to willingness and readiness to furnish battle to all comers, never objecting to any opponent that is proposed, he stands forth in a class by himself.

Just at this writing Freddie is in Vancouver under the care and watchful eye of Harry Pollok. All the time the pair are keeping their eyes on the main chance, and both seem to be at a loss to understand why Ritchie refused the splendid offer of the Edmonton Athletic Club—which would have netted him almost double the amount of money he'll receive from the Ritchie-Rivers battle, according to Freddie's proposition. Instead of hurrying East, as they had planned, Welsh will be kept in the West ready to meet any man of his weight in the world.

• • •

"FREDDIE has come a long, long way to bring back the bacon," is the way in which Harry Pollok puts it. We agree with you, Harry, but great prizes are not gathered without effort, and before Welsh gets through he probably will have the reward he covets, by taking back with him the American title. If they will allow him to come into the ring at 134 pounds same as Ritchie and Rivers are doing in the present case—we haven't a lightweight representative that can stand off the English champion.

• • •

ACTION within the roped inclosure speaks volumes in comparison to that class of fighters who battle through the newspaper columns. Strange as it may seem, we are living in a period that abounds with newspaper champions as compared with those who seek to battle on the turf. Then there is the glare of the footlights, so attractive to the champion and yet so detrimental to his welfare in the ring. Nothing so quickly unfits a titleholder for strenuous campaigning as a season "in burlesque" or "vaudeville."

Pels Refused Delay; Wants Case Settled

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 24.—President Jones' plea for a delay of two weeks in settlement of the Kutina-Bagby-Snedecor squabble with the New Orleans club was refused today by President Kavanaugh, who has notified the Montgomery clug that he stands ready to dispose of the case without delay.

President Kavanaugh has been notified by Manager Frank that he stands ready to meet Jones in any city that he may choose. Jones must either accept the proposal or else protest will be filed by the New Orleans club against Bagby and Kutina playing with Montgomery.

BURNS HOLDS COULON TO HARD TEN-ROUND DRAW

For four rounds the two boxed toe to toe without either gaining the advantage. The fifth round went to Burns by a big margin; the sixth was even, and Coulon won the seventh. In the eighth and ninth both seemed tired. Coulon started in the tenth, with a rush, but Burns, it was claimed, had a shade the ...er of the round.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 187 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League season is half over Tuesday—that is, as far as the Cracker club is concerned. Up to Tuesday the Crackers have had 70 games scheduled, or half the allotment. Of course rain has interfered with a few and the Crackers have not played 70 games, but they will catch up the rest as double-headers later in the season.

The end of the first half of the season finds a number of players bunched for batting honors. But right close to the top stands Harry Welchonce. If he makes a good, hard drive he stands a swell chance of leading the batters of the league this year. If he does he will break a league record.

He will be the first player who ever won the Southern League batting honors two years in succession, or even two years not in succession.

• • •

TOMMY LONG seems set to break some records, too. If Tommy keeps at his present clip he will pile up something like 195 for the season—figured on the last crop of averages.

This will be more hits than any batter ever made before in Southern League history.

For another thing Tommy will run up a total of 128 runs, which is vastly more than any other man ever made who led the Southern League in batting.

At present 15 Southern Leaguers are batting .300 or better. If they keep it up they will not establish a new record, for in 1901 the league numbered 40 hitters going at a .300 clip. However, only four years in the past have there been over 15 .300 hitters in the league.

• • •

THE fancy batting of the Crackers has been one of the interesting features of the Southern League season. But the real one is the closeness of the race.

Seldom in league history have the teams all been as well bunched for as long a time as this year. Right now every team in the league except New Orleans has a corking chance to win the pennant.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The Red Sox, Senators and White Sox are engaged in a mighty tussle for third place honors in the American League. Each team has held the position for at least one day during the past week. Just now the Senators are third with .541, and the White Sox fifth with .531.

• • •

Cravath, of the Phillies, fattened his batting average off the offerings of James, the Braves' twirler, yesterday, getting a single, two doubles and a home run in five times up.

• • •

With the score 6 to 2 against them, the Reds began an uphill fight in the sixth inning of their game against the Pirates yesterday and won out by a 7 to 6 score.

• • •

Five doubles, three triples and a home run, added to six singles, gave the Phillies an 8 to 3 victory over the Braves yesterday.

• • •

Doc Johnson, Cleveland's new first sacker, may be out of the game for several days as the result of injuries received Sunday in a collision with Ty Cobb, who was so badly bumped he had to retire from the game at once.

• • •

The Dodgers won the first game from the Giants in the tenth inning on a home run by Zach Wheat, making their seventh straight victory, but lost the second, 5 to 1.

• • •

The Athletics hammered the offerings of the Red Sox pitchers to all parts of the field yesterday and won an easy 13 to 4 victory.

• • •

Included in the fifteen hits amassed by the Athletics were a single, double and triple by Baker, two home runs by Barry, a double and two singles by Walsh, a double and a single by Collins, two singles each by Oldring and McInnis and a single by Eddie Murphy.

• • •

In Brooklyn there is a movement afoot to have the nickname of the Brooklyn Club changed from the Dodgers to the Giant Killers or something equally bloodthirsty. Last year the Dodgers were the softest sort of picking for the New Yorkers. This year the Dodgers have taken five out of seven games from McGraw's aggregation and one of the two Giant victories was a 13-inning affair.

Sports and Such

THE OFFICIAL MOUTHPIECE of the American League—a Western sporting paper—quotes C. Webb Murphy, the saturnine boss of the Cubs, as saying that he is against wealthy ball players, and heartily indorses this view.

In a way, this is sort of premature. So long as the present crop of magnates are in action no ball player is likely to strain his back carrying his wealth around. But "these remarks," says the solemn commentator, "are directed against the ball player who considers a couple of hours on the diamond each day his 'work,' to be staged for the benefit of 'boobs' who pay to see him and others go through a drill that is only endured because 'it gets the coin.'"

• • •

NO DOUBT IT IS VERY SAD. Think of the man with soul so dead that he plays baseball only for the money there is in it, when his bosses are building concrete and steel grandstands and tying him and all of his chances in this world and the next into contracts that you couldn't make a hole in with a diamond drill, solely to keep a lot of people out in the open air and give them wholesome recreation!

The ball player hasn't quite the magnate's contempt for the "boob in the stand." But the magnate——

• • •

DURING THE LAST WORLD series a bunch of Boston fans, with a band and banners, formed a Loyal Rooters' Club and blew wads of dough going and risked their lives on the New Haven road to cheer for Boston at every game.

By getting in early with their money and paying what was asked and pulling political wires, they managed to have seats reserved for them—up until the last game in Boston. Figuring properly that they had no come-back, the management of the club ignored their reservation for that game and sold out their seats, knowing that the "Loyal Rooters" would pay anyway and stand up if necessary. That's what they did—they stood up.

• • •

HOW CAN YOU BLAME THE ball player for taking the same view of the man in the stand as the magnate?

ATLANTANS WIN IN NEW ORLEANS TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The second day of the Gulf States tennis tournament began today with a long list of players.

The first day's important results were:

Nat Thornton, Atlanta, Southern champion, easily disposed of Mayfield, New Orleans, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

B. Grant, Atlanta, defeated Hochendole, Baton Rouge, 6-2, 6-4.

Richardson, New Orleans, defeated M. E. Carter, Memphis, 6-2, 6-2.

Laverich, New Orleans, won from Mansfield, Atlanta, 3-4, 6-4. Shelton, Dallas, defeated Words, New Orleans, 6-1, 6-0. Wardell, Memphis, defeated Henderson, New Orleans, 6-2, 6-4.

McGinnis, New Orleans, defeated Reede, Memphis, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Smith and Mansfield, Atlanta, defeated Lawrence and Hiller, New Orleans, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Easy for Thornton.

The surprise of the day was the match between Abe Leverich and E. S. Mansfield. The first set had not gone far before Leverich began showing his power. Leverich won in straight sets.

ROSS BEATS CLARK.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24.—Hugh Ross won a hard fought ten-round bout here last night from Kid Clark, of Columbus.

LAKE TOXAWAY.

Improved Service Via Southern Railway.

Effective Sunday, June 22, an electric lighted, twelve section drawing room sleeping car will be operated daily, leaving Atlanta at 8:45 p. m. and arriving at Lake Toxaway 8:10 a. m. Twelve section drawing room sleeping car on the same train arriving Asheville 7 a. m., thus affording excellent service to Western North Carolina, the "Land of the Sky."

Pelkey Is Cleared Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 24.—Arthur Pelkey, the pugilist, was acquitted of a manslaughter charge which was placed against him as a result of the death of Luther McCarty, who died in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Burns arena here May 24 last.

It was charged by the government that McCarty died as the result of a blow administered by Pelkey. The jury was out 45 minutes and the verdict was to the effect that the contest was a prize fight, but that Pelkey was not guilty of manslaughter inasmuch as the blow he struck was not intended to cause fatal results.

A big demonstration followed the announcement of the verdict, and as Pelkey stepped from the prisoner's box he was warmly congratulated.

Pelkey probably will continue his career in the prize ring, and an announcement of his next fight is expected in the near future.

PELS TRIUMPH OVER CRACKERS IN HOT GAME

PELICAN BALL PARK, NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—A fluke triple by Spencer in the eighth inning, scoring two runs gave the Pelicans a 4 to 1 victory over the Crackers here this afternoon. Spencer later scored on an error by smith. Up to the time of the timely wallop, Price and Evans were having a merry pitching-go, with honors slightly in favor of the latter.

FIRST INNING.

Long popped to Snedecor. Welchonce went out, Evans to Snedecor. Alperman flied to Hendrix. NOTHING DOING.

Kyle beat out a clow one to third for a hit. Clancy bunted to Smith, forcing Kyle at second to Alperman. McDowell walked. Hendrix fanned. Spencer grounded to Alperman, forcing McDowell at second, Alperman to Bisland. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Bailey hit in front of plate and was called out by Stockdale for running over first and was put out of the park for disputing the decision. Smith went out, Williams to Snedecor. Bisland went out, Evans to Snedecor. NOTHING DOING.

Williams went out, Alperman to Agler. Snedecor went out, Smith to Agler. Adams flied to Welchonce. NOTHING DOING.

THIRD INNING.

Agler fled to Spencer. Dunn went out, Clancy to Snedecor. Price faned. NOTHING DOING.

Evans popped to Bisland. Kyle went out to Agler unassisted. Clancy fanned. NOTHING DOING.

FOURTH INNING.

Long went out, McDowell to Snedecor. Welchonce went out, Clancy to Snedecor. Alperman walked. Rohe flied to Hendrix. NOTHING DOING.

Mathewson Proves He's There With Pep

NEW YORK, June 24.—The "Old Master" showed in the second game with Brooklyn that, like the well-made violin, the work of the real artist, and one of the favorite products of Kentucky, he improves with age. Christopher Mathewson pitched just 70 balls to show that the Dodgers were beatable.

The art lay in Matty's making the Brooklyns hit to the fielders. The one run he permitted Brooklyn to make never should have happened. He made a Dodger hit a fly. A fielder muffed the ball and a runner reached third base. No attempt to stop the tally was made on the next batter, the Giants, with a safe advantage, having decided to put out the last three invaders as quickly as possible.

RUBE MARQUARD PLAYS WITNESS AGAINST THIEF

NEW YORK, June 24.—"Rube" Marquard was a witness yesterday in the Court of General Sessions against William H. Keene, of 71 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. Keene, formerly an elevator operator, pleaded guilty to robbing ten apartments in the house, one of which was occupied by the Giants' pitcher and his wife, Blossom Seely. Judge Foster sentenced him to Elmira Reformatory.

"Rube" and his wife identified and recovered a moleskin and $500 worth of silver.

THE SANE FOURTH.

In bygone ages on the Fourth the nation went insane,
And handed out a flock of noise that racked a person's brain,
And on the Fifth all maimed it tossed upon a bed of pain.
The orators got up and shot a lot of atmosphere
That echoed over glade and glen and grated on the ear,
And there was no escape for us—we could not choose but hear.

How sweet to think that we have long outlived those lowbrow days,
And do not celebrate as though we were a lot of jays.
How sweet to think we celebrate in lofty, cultured ways.
It sends a thrill through every heart when Hogan wallops Flynn
And wins the lightweight title with a wallop on the chin.
How sweet to ponder on the age of culture we are in!

One is not surprised to read that aviation is gaining in popularity in England. An aeroplane race is about the only form of pastime a suffragette can't bust up.

Speaking of aviation, Fred Falkenberg is giving a great little exhibition of volplaning.

One can imagine a gambler being barred from the park if the said gambler has six bits in his mitt. At least, one can if one has one strong imagination.

How cool and refreshing the loud, shrieking gale!
But now to keep cool I am forced to go inter

Records Sure to Fall at 'Drome

Track Is Safest One Ever Built

BEFORE the 1913 racing season at the Atlanta Motordrome is brought to a conclusion by cold weather this fall there is a good possibility that world's records for a four-lap track may be broken. From all the evidence in hand now it seems that this track at the old show grounds is the best and safest that Jack Prince has ever constructed.

What indicates this most strongly is the fact that not an accident has happened there yet. Two race meets have been pulled off, one by daylight and one at night. In both of them nine or more races were run. And not a man went down. This is very unusual. Ordinarily, where the track is new and some of the riders are green the first meeting is the signal for a grand and glorious tumble. But it has not happened this time.

Accidents Must Come.

Of course, accidents will happen before long. They are an inevitable part of the game, just as they are of automobile racing, bicyle raing, football and all the strenuous sports. Every rider who goes on the track knows well that he may be carried off on a stretcher. Every time a rider mounts a machine he knows that in another five minutes it may be only a shapeless mass of junk. But this is the chance they take.

The fact that everything has gone so well on the local track thus far inclines local riders to the belief that records can be broken when the machines get right. The limit of the track is the limit of the machine. They will go as fast as they can, with no unusual danger to the riders.

It Is Up to Machines.

This being true, the speed possibilities of the track are unlimited.

By the time the Eastern and Northern champions are ready to come South this fall for the championship meets the riders here will have their machines going their very best. They will have to extend themselves to the utmost to make a showing. The result will almost certainly be some new records.

There is likely to be fast going Wednesday night at the Motordrome. The riders need the money. Nine races will be run, as usual, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes the big feature. This will be an affair with mile heats and a five-mile final. The Motordrome Purse will be at three-mile heats, with a three-mile final.

PIRATES SIGN THREE MEN FROM MINORS AND COLLEGES

PITTSBURG, June 24.—Manager Fred Clarke has signed Fred Kommers, the star outfielder of the Springfield team of the Three I League. Last week Clarke left on a mysterious journey, and the object of his quest was not known until to-day. Besides Kommers, Infielder Pert, of the University of Arkansas, and Outfielder Earl Topham, of Bucknell, will join the Pirate crew.

ENVOY PRAISES FARM CREDIT OF EUROPE

Dr. Clearence J. Owens, Director General of Commercial Congress, Gives Views.

By DR. CLARENCE J. OWENS.
Director General of the American Commission to Investigate European Agricultural Co-operation and Managing Director of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 24.—"The investigation of the commission thus far has given promise of a report to be made to the American people that should result in widening and defining agitation in the United States in favor of the establishment of an agricultural credit system and the adoption of co-operative methods in farming.

"By reason of its division into sections the commission has been able, in a comparatively short time spent in Europe, to make thorough studies of the credit and co-operative systems in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany, and even the cotton situation in Egypt, which is of particular importance to the farmers of our South.

Inquiry Goes Deep.

"From Berlin the commission goes to Dresden, spending about seven days more in Germany, then taking up its studies in France, England and Ireland. Although, of course, no discussion has been held by the commission to determined the consensus of opinion regarding the adaptability of the various systems to American conditions and though it is impossible now to say what form our report to the American people will take, the investigation has probed deep enough to show the great assistance rendered to agriculture by these systems.

"It must be borne in mind that the co-operative idea in Europe rests upon the natural foundation of community life of the farmers.

"In America we have no such farming villages. The men who make up our rural villages are chiefly middlemen, merchants or retired farmers. In Europe, on the contrary, farmers all live in villages, and walk to their farms to work, while American farmers live in comparatively isolated houses. Because of this condition, and several other factors, American farmers have developed an almost extreme individualism, which though it has added greatly to the strength of the nation in the character of its men, has not made for economic advancement.

Mortgage System Adaptable.

"Just how far the co-operative idea can be made to progress in the face of such conditions is difficult to say. From our studies thus far, it seems probable, that the mortgage credit systems of Europe can be adapted with certain changes to American conditions, as well as the systems of farmers' educational-political unions so highly developed in Germany and Germanic Austria, which will, I believe, afford a lesson of great value to American farmers.

"In every country visited, every courtesy has been shown the commission by governments, by bankers and by the representatives of agricultural systems. In Italy we were welcomed by the King. Since the day of our landing in Europe every consideration has been extended us and I am glad to announce that we will leave the Continent under no less enjoyable circumstances, for President Poincaire of France, I am informed, will receive the commission in Paris, which is the last city to be visited on the Continent."

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 24.—The market has been very quiet to-day, trading light, but ruled very steady, with little cotton for sale. The demand has been generally good. Liverpool reported a buyer, also some Southern buying spot people bought July on all soft spots.

* * *

Pell & Co. were said to have sold considerable cotton yesterday through Riordan, the latter's sales totaling about 20,000 bales on top of 40,000 or 50,000 bales sold Saturday. Dick Bros. and Shearson were also sellers.

* * *

* * *

The July condition report to be made public July 3, giving the condition of the crop to June 25 and an estimate of the acreage. The report is beginning to cast its shadow over the market and cause traders to hesitate about making new commitments for fear Washington may spring another surprise.

* * *

The impression seems to prevail that the market has declined enough for the present, owing to the heavy selling during the past three days, and it is very natural to believe that a short interest exists and a good reaction is in order from a technical standpoint.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally part cloudy to cloudy. Oklahoma generally cloudy; no rain in either State.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Timely rains and favorable weather sustain bearish confidence in an ultimately lower price level, but big people show so much faith in the integrity of the July position which in turn influences all the fall deliveries that bearish enthusiasm can not develop. Yesterday a prominent operator bought a block of July across the ring and New York letters credited some prominent men with the belief that Liverpool longs will put the screws on the July position there. Of course, the low price people expect good crop weather to continue. They also expect the controlled July position to climb, and they fear that October and December will be lifted sympathetically."

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "The pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate temperatures above the seasonal average the coming week in the Southern States, the Great Central Valleys and the Plains States, while on the Pacific slope and in the region of the Great Lakes and the Middle Atlantic and New England States, temperatures will be about normal.

"A reaction from the prevailing moderate temperature to seasonably warm weather will set in over the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States by Wednesday.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally light and local and confined principally to the Northern States and the Rocky Mountain region. No important storm is charted to cross the country the coming week."

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Generally fair weather will continue to-night and Wednesday in the Gulf States, New England and the interior of New York. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be overcast with local showers and thunderstorms.

Moderately warm weather will prevail over the eastern half of the country during the next thirty-six hours.

General Forecast.

Following is the general forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Cloudy and warm; probably light showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina and South Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Fair in northwest, showers in the peninsula to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Western Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska—Unsettled, with probably showers.

South Dakota and North Dakota—Cloudy to cooler.

Kansas—Fair and warmer.

GOVERNMENT WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Mean temperatures were from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Texas, where there was a deficiency of from 1 to 3 degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over eastern Tennessee. Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 74 to 82 over the eastern, from 80 to 82 over the central and from 78 to 82 over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 74 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 82 degrees, occurred at a number of stations located in all portions of the cotton-growing States.

Precipitation occurred generally over the cotton region, except that in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, northeastern Texas, scattered localities in Louisiana, eastern and southern Mississippi, western Alabama and parts of southern Georgia there was no rain. The precipitation was unevenly distributed. More than 2 inches occurred in parts of Texas. The greatest weekly amount, 25.20 inches, occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The cotton seed oil market was higher to-day on active covering by refiners in old crop deliveries and speculative buying of later months. There was good profit-taking on the advance, which resulted in a setback of a couple of points. Strength in lard was also a stimulating factor.

SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Spot Houses Support Old Crops, While Wall Street Sells—Sentiment Bearish.

NEW YORK, June 24.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call, however, selling developed and prices fell off about 5 points. The buying was inspired by strength in the English market. The larger spot houses again centered their attention on the July position; also August. The buying of the new crops was scattered.

The weather map was considered favorable. Wall Street was apparently the leading seller.

During the forenoon the selling was light and scattered, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points over the opening range. It is generally believed that the ring is short, owing to the heavy selling during the past few days, and it is only natural that a good reaction is in order.

During the late forenoon the market was quiet, but ruled steady. The buying continued general, mainly on Cordill's report on Georgia, which was somewhat mixed and had a stimulating eeffct, as his reports up to this time of the season has been very favorable. Liverpool and the South were reported good buyers.

On the other hand, the Government weekly weather report was construed as bearish, resulting in active selling by Wall Street and the uptown crowd. There is a disposition on the part of local traders to sell the market short on the favorable conditions that have existed up to this time, but many operators hesitate in the face of the contined good demand for spots.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 1 point off to 3 points higher than the final quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The weather map shows very favorable conditions. Partly cloudy to fair weather; scattered showers, rather general over the Atlantics, with some good rains in the Carolinas; even temperatures, warm nights, good growing weather. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair weather, with scattered thundershowers; range of temperature stationary.

Liverpool came in rather poor, but shows larger spots sales; total 8,000, at 2 points lower quotations. Political news is that Bulgaria refuses further peace negotiations and that financial war has been started on the Continent by France refusing loans.

The market here advanced from the start, mainly on the report on Georgia by Mr. Cordill, which does not show the improvement that was expected. Under the circumstances, it is thought that the July Bureau report can at the outside give 1 to 2 points' improvement for the belt, which would be a condition between 80 and 81, and as the acreage increase, owing to the acreage correction made by Washington in May, is expected to be between 1 and 2 per cent, it is thought that the July bureau may again make a bullish impression on the trade.

Selling was therefore rather light today, the more so as a bullish visible statement is expected for Friday. Trading was quiet, with prices steady around 11.53 for December.

WILSON'S MESSAGE SENDS STOCKS UP

Encouraging Crop Accounts Also Stimulating Factor—Speculative Situation Stronger.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A stronger speculative situation, induced chiefly by President Wilson's message on the need of currency reform, was evident at the opening of the stock market to-day and advances ranged from fractions to over two points. The local market followed the London trend, Americans being higher there.

The charpest advance was in Canadian Pacific, which went to 218 shortly after the opening for a gain of 2½. The copper group was strong, Amalgamated opening 1¼ higher. Utah copper gained 1⅛, while Chino climbed fractionally.

Among the other advances were United States Steel common, 1; Union Pacific, 1¼; Reading, 1⅜; Pennsylvania, ¾; Northern Pacific, ⅞; Missouri Pacific, 1; Lehigh Valley, ⅞; Erie, ½; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; Atchison, ¼; American Can, ⅞.

The curb was steady.

Trading was low in the last hour and price changes for the most part were only slightly changed from the midday level.

Amalgamated Copper, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chino and Northern Pacific were fractionally under the midday level, but ranged above the low quotations for the morning. Union Pacific sold around 145⅝ for a net gain of 2½ on the day. Steel sold at 56¼ for a net gain of 1⅜. Reading crossed 158 for a gain of 1¾ on the day.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged; other bonds dull.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Conflicting Crop Advices and Bad Cable News Cause General Buying.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....97 @99½
Corn—No. 2 ....60½
Oats—No. 2 ....38½@39

CHICAGO, June 24.—A nervous market was seen in wheat early on the unsettled feeling abroad, the conflicting crop reports from the spring wheat country and the fact that many speculators were anxious to sell while others were just as anxious to buy. Western receipts were larger than a year ago, with 403 cars to-day and 151 for the corresponding day in 1912. July shorts were inclined to cover. The volume of trade was small.

Closing prices for grain showed advances all around ⅛@½c for wheat, ⅜@½c for corn and ⅛@⅜c for oats. The strength shown at Minneapolis and the buying of July there by one of the larger millers was the bullish influence at Chicago toward the close of the day.

There are many uncertainties surrounding the crop situation in the Northwest and there are also many uncertainties surrounding the harvesting of the winter wheat crop. For these reasons the average speculator the average speculator is feeling his way rather than making large commitments.

Provisions showed but little change for week.

CHINCH BUGS DOING DAMAGE.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Lots of reports coming in from Illinois and Iowa on the poor outlook of oats. Springfield, Ill., says chinch bugs are doing much damage south of there. John Inglis wires from Park River, N. Dak.: "Grafton to Park River, wheat not holding up. Light showers of little benefit. Drying wind to-day."

Clement Curtis says reports this morning show no improvement in oats. Iowa condition is 10 per cent below last month. Rains too late to help crop through central section. Minneapolis says elevator people there getting bad reports from North Dakota and South Dakota to-day.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS BAD.

CHICAGO, June 24.—W. B. Snow wires from Redfield, S. Dak., June 23: "Through Brown, McPherson, Edmunds, Faulk and Spink Counties west of James River district is reported as bad, involving about 600 acres. Was a failure last year, and most of it for three consecutive years. Present situation promises the fourth failure. Nothing but general soaking rains at once can save any part of it. Oats the same. Corn holding its own.

"General situation east of James River reported as satisfactory."

Freak Chicken Dies On Way to School

NORTH ADAMS, June 24.—Two beaks, three eyes and two necks was too much for any chicken to carry around—so the freak hatched by a Bracewell Avenue hen died on the way to school, where the children were going to show it to their playmates.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

Boys! Fans! All Lovers of BASEBALL!

Do You Know---

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?
How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"
Why the straight overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?
The proper way to make a double play at second?
How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?
Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?
The proper way to field a ground ball?
How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?
The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?
Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?
All these questions and many more are answered in

"How to Play Baseball"
By JOHN J. McGRAW

The greatest book on baseball ever written will tell you fully, clearly, entertainingly, how, why and when all these and a thousand and one other things should be done in baseball. It's a book of 192 pages, with thirty-two superb half-tone illustrations of Big League stars in actual play, and bound in either rich, red cloth or heavy, durable paper covers of similar richness and color. In paper, printing and binding, it is the equal of any $1.00 and $1.50 novel, but by special arrangement with Manager McGraw, and for a limited period only,

MOTHER DENIES PLOTTING TO KILL BABY

Acquittal or Mistrial Predicted in Case of Mrs. Nina Lanier at Waycross.

WALCROSS, June 24.—With the State resting its case to-day opinion is freely expressed that the jury, trying the case of Mrs. Nina Lanier, charged with killing her baby son, within an hour after the case reaches it will return a verdict of not guilty or will fail to reach an agreement.

Circumstancial evidence alone has been brought out so far and the testimony of several witnesses to-day failed to connect Mrs. Lanier directly with the killing of the bady. Dr. D. M. Bradley, city health officer, told of his investigation of the case and of the arrest of Mrs. Lanier's husband on the charge of violating the city ordinance covering the removal of bodies from the city. He said there was no apparent effort at concealment and that Lanier merely said he was not aware of such a law.

Physicians Testify.

Dr. M. M. Johnson testified that he did not think the marks found on the baby's body could have resulted from jolts of the coffin while in transit from Pierce County to Waycross and said his opinion was death resulted from violent and external means such as strangulation or smothering. He declared his examination of the marks on the neck indicated that some one had choked the baby.

Dr. A. Fleming testified that the marks on the neck could have been post mortem marks and that the skull fracture was not sufficient to justify the conclusion that a blow had been dealt. The baby on the head.

Interest in the trial reached its height when the defense called Mrs. Lanier to the stand. Wavering slightly as she went to the witness chair, she immediately broke into tears and for a moment could not speak.

Mrs. Lanier's Story.

In a low, quiet voice, her eyes scanning the faces of the jury, Mrs. Lanier finally told her story of the baby's death. She said she fell asleep shortly after the birth of her child and when a noise in the room awoke her, saw her husband sitting on her bed.

"He looked worried and distressed," she said, "and I asked him what was the trouble. He told me the baby was dead. I did not say anything because I hardly knew what to say. We loved the baby and I wanted to go to the undertakers with it. I thought it had been carried there. I certainly did nothing to cause death and I don't think my husband did. If I said anything about wanting the baby to die to Dr. Lattimer I don't remember it."

The concluding arguments will be made this afternoon and the case will go to the jury.

Plate to be Replaced on Mast of Maine

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The bronze plate placed on the mainmast of the battleship Maine by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Havana, Cuba, will be restored to the historic old spar when it is erected in Arlington National Cemetery, to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the ill-fated battleship.

The Havana Chapter of the Daughters have won the consent of the Navy Department that the order be given.

Nation-Wide Search For Lost Atlantan

The police are searching for A. F. Croal, 38 years of age, of 48 Formwalt Street, who disappeared two weeks ago, leaving a note telling his wife he had gone to New York.

After a quiet investigation failed to reveal any trace of the man, Mrs. Croal appealed to Chief Beavers. A nation--wide hunt is on. Relatives of Mrs. Croal in New York say Croal is not there, so far as they know.

Held Under Bond for Concealing Property

SAVANNAH, June 24.—P. A. Mack, a Sylvania merchant and Screven County farmer, held under bond charged with concealing assets from the trustee in bankruptcy, has been given a hearing before United States Commissioner Cooper Morcock.

Merchandise alleged to have been removed from Mack's store and hidden in warehouses, barns, stable lofts and cane fields has been recovered. Mack claims that no goods were taken away or hidden after J. W. Overstreet was appointed trustee.

Americans Win in World's Tennis Play

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

WIMBLEDON, ENG., June 24.—Maurice McLoughlin, of California, beat Glendinning, of England, and R. Norris Williams, also of the United States, defeated Turnbull, of England, in the second round of the world tennis championships to-day.

PULMOTOR SAVES BOY'S LIFE.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 24.—Two boys drowned, but the life of a third saved by a pulmotor at Itons Levee this afternoon. The lads were playing on a raft when it capsized.

World's Good Roads Congress in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 24.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the opening of the third International Road Congress declared that improved highways took high rank among the first needs of humanity. The members of the congress, numbering 2,500, include many of the greatest road experts in the world.

They intend to travel over hundreds of miles of typical English and Scottish roads and to make a close study of those highways. They will cross stretches of road made of more than twenty different materials and will learn full particulars regarding each stretch.

Too Oriental to Suit Gotham; Paris Next!

NEW YORK, June 24.—Because New York has finally turned a cold shoulder upon Mrs. Jack Gouraud she decided to-day to make her home in Paris.

Mrs. Gouraud, who was Miss Aimee Crocker, California heiress, already has sold her town house, for which she once refused $850,000.

For years Mrs. Gouraud has been regarded as one of the most eccentric women in America. The Oriental performances staged at her home were of sensational order.

Plano Heads Resign To Halt Prosecution

CHICAGO, June 24.—Criminal prosecution by the Government of the directors of the Independent Harvester Company, of Plano, Ill., may be forestalled by the resignation today of the entire directorate of the company.

The firm's officers are accused of using the mails to defraud in setting forth the value of stock in the $10,000,000 corporation. The directors resigned at the proposal of the Government.

Boy Scouts Start on 1,000-Mile Relay Run

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning President Wilson leaned forward from the portico of the White House and handed a small tube to a boy attired in running clothes who dashed off northward. The boy was Frank Reed, the perfect Boy Scout, who had been selected as the first of the Scouts to relay the President's message of congratulation to Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago.

Running night and day, 1,000 Boy Scouts hope to deliver the message within less than four days.

Special Court Term For Vice War Trials

MACON, June 24.—A special session of the Superior Court will be held during two weeks beginning June 30 for the trial of 70 liquor dealers charged with violating the prohibition law; twelve clubs similarly indicted, 35 women accused of operating disorderly houses, and fifteen property owners, charged with renting houses for immoral purposes.

Jesse C. Harris, attorney, who was indicted for perjury in connection with the alleged election frauds last year, will be called to trial on July 2.

Norway to Have Big Wireless to America

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY, June 24. The committee of the Norwegian Parliament has unanimously recommended approval of the contract arranged between the Marconi Company and the late Norwegian Government providing for a wireless service between Norway and America.

Under a modified contract the Norwegian Government is to spend $560,000 for a station at Stavanger, which will be connected with a station at Boston.

Some Good Home Made Remedies For Lice and Mites

How to Find and What to Use to Kill the Small Creatures That Cause the Fowls So Much Misery.

It is the old story of chicken mites and lice. We are sure a good many up-to-date poultry people get tired of hearing about them, but it is the one theme that will bear going over time and again and do a lot of good each time it is rehashed, for there are so many who have not had it rubbed in on them hard enough to be able to detect the troubles that are constantly bobbing up as a result of the ravages of these pests.

All forms of apparent debility and lack of vigor results from fowls being almost eaten up by the mites. Setting hens leave their nests in disgust, as it were, stalking about as if they were sick after the nest has been invaded by them. She stands them as long as her constitution will hold up under it and then she quits the nest from sheer exhaustion.

They tackle the old rooster until we see him walking about as though he did not have a friend in the world, with his "slow and measured trend."

With all these symptoms the owner will tell you about them and say with all sincerity of intent that they do not know what in the world is the matter with their chickens, and they are sure they have no lice or mites on them. They have no doubt given them a casual look over and have failed to detect the little rascals in their quick movements. Then, too, the little mites have an inborn habit of working upon the hens all night, but leaving them at daylight, hiding in the cracks and crevices of the roost poles to be ready at a moment's notice to renew the attack.

It is really as essential to be able to detect the presence of these marauders as it is to know what to do for them when found. Their pet breeding place is between the end of the roost pole and the support, turn the pole over and you will usually see them in all their glory, see them in all their glory.

Now for a remedy. For treating the house and contents use the following— we call it a "lice paint"—to a half gallon of kerosene add one pint of crude carbolic acid and shake thoroughly before using. Use this to paint the roost poles and the sides of the house if need be, allowing it to run down under the ends of the poles to get to the breeding places. This should be done about an hour or two before roosting time. In that way you will get many of the little pests off the hens as they sit on the pole at night in addition to cleaning them from the poles.

Where it is to be used for the roosting places of young and growing chicks, we would add another pint of kerosene to the above mixture.

For a good home-made lice powder we can recommend the following: One can not do without such a powder to clean up the stragglers which the lice paint fails to reach. To three pints of gasoline add one pint of crude carbolic acid. (It should be of a good grade). Mix thoroughly in a granite or earthenware pan stirring thoroughly, then add enough land plaster or plaster of paris until all the liquid has been thoroughly absorbed. Then spread out on a heavy piece of wrapping paper or something similar to allow the surplus moisture to evaporate. When it has become thoroughly dry it should be powdered or broken up by running it through a sieve of some kind. An old piece of fly screen wire netting will do the trick. It is then ready to box up and sift into the feathers of the fowls working it back will to the skin. A pound baking powder can with a lot of nail holes punched in the lid makes a good sifting box.

This powder, if well made, is as effective as any of the high-priced powders on the market. It is specially recommended for those who live remote from good supply houses and can not get good fresh marketable powders. Do not be afraid to use these remedies, and particularly the roost paint. Once a month is not too often when the weather is hot and these insects multiply rapidly.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks

BOARD WANTED.

YOUNG MAN would like to get board for a week or ten days somewhere in North Georgia or Carolina. Write full particulars to P. O. Box 570, Atlanta, Ga. 6-24-43

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Steady Enhancement In Ponce DeLeon Lot

Geo. Ware Turns Unique Trade—To Start $100,000 Building—South Side Progress.

A transaction in Tuesday's real estate market shows the steady enhancement of property in good residential neighborhoods. On February 24, 1912, a client of the Ware & Harper real estate agency bought the southwest corner of Ponce DeLeon and Highland Avenues, 250 feet on the former street and 90 feet on the latter, for $15,000. The plot was resold May 11 for $18,500, and on June 20 Dr. M. A. Massoud, the present owner, bought the Highland Avenue frontage and 150 feet of the Ponce DeLeon frontage for $16,500, leaving a strip of 100 by 90 feet on the latter thoroughfare. Five days later Dr. Massoud refused $18,500 for the corner 150 by 90 feet. All the transactions were handled by George Ware, of the above-named agency.

There was formerly a two-story frame house on this corner, but the house has been moved back on the 100-by-90-foot lot on Ponce DeLeon. Dr. Massoud has indefinite plans for an apartment house.

Mr. Ware also announced the sale of 53 Orme Street, a six-room cottage on a 43-by-100-foot lot, for Mrs. M. S. Hewitt to a client for $5,500. This was bought less than a year ago for $3,750, and six months before that had sold for $3,000 in a trade.

Winder Street Purchase.

O. B. Stevens, formerly State Railroad Commissioner, got into the local real estate market Tuesday with a sale of 27 Winder Street to B. F. House for $1,050, through H. W. Grant, of the Ralph O. Cochran Company. The property consists of a small house on a 47 1-2-by-100-foot lot near the Seaboard Railroad yards.

Soon to Build Factory.

H. J. Carr, contractor for the new $100,000 building of the Georgia Lead Works, on Bishop Street, near the Atlanta Steel Works, applied at Building Inspector Hays' office Tuesday morning for a permit to make this improvement. Since the building will be outside the city limits no permit will be necessary. The contractors are expected to break ground in a few days. The lead concern, it is understood, has a 99-year lease on the ground where the factory will be located. The company will have a payroll of about $60,000 a year.

BUILDING PERMITS.

$9,000—Hall Association, Jr. O. U. A. M., 28-30 Capitol Avenue; two-story brick building. Day work.

$3,000—Capital City Laundry, 48 Trinity Avenue; alterations. H. J. Carr & Co.

$1,500 Each—Adair & Weinmeister, 219-223 East Avenue; two one-story frame dwellings. Day work.

Cochran Renting Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented the following houses in the past few days, and a steady demand is reported:

No. 117 Garden Street, for P. J. McNamara to C. J. Mobley; 38 Avon Avenue, to W. N. Thomas for W. F. Stephens; 4 Marion Street, for J. W. Stokes to N. E. Markham; 122 Julian Street, for L. L. Barge to G. C. Blankenship; 17 Formwalt Street, for M. L. Roberts to H. G. Kennedy.

The company hs leased 258 Bellwood Avenue to H. L. Watkins for Pete Riley, for a period of three years, and a house on Hall Street to D. V. Davis for R. O. Cochran, trustee, for one year.

South Siders' Meeting.

The old Second and Third Ward Improvement Clubs which thrived some months ago, but soon became more or less inactive, will be revived Thursday night, when the formal organization of the South Side Improvement Club will take place at the Pryor Street public school. Primarily, the object of this meeting is to urge the repaving of South Pryor Street, but an object of quite as much importance is the rebirth of a live organization whose existence shall be permanent and whose aim shall be to look out for the interests of the South Side. A large crowd is expected at the meeting.

Meaning in Sheriff's Sales.

A well-known real estate man has pointed out a significant thing in the announcement of Sheriff's sales for June, which will be held at the court house door Tuesday, July 1. It is the fact that there are to be only two sales of real estate on mortgage foreclosure.

"Some time ago," said this land dealer, "it was not uncommon to see seven columns of sales advertised by the Sheriff. The change means that people are meeting their obligations unusually well—that this is a good loan town, and that loans are conservative."

Architects for Apartment.

Walker & Chase, the well-known Candler Building architects, have chosen to draw the plans for the L'Engle Apartments, which will soon be built at the southeast corner of East Pine and North Jackson Streets. Walker & Chase have done such structures as the Pickwick Apartments, the Byrd Printing Company Building, the Chapman-McNair Building and the Reuben Arnold Building.

Progress on South Side.

Some interesting features have been noted of late by people who have explored the changing South Side Prominent among these are the railroad and manufacturing development on Lee Street, West End, along the Central of Georgia Railway; the improvements to streets, and extensive subdivision work and erection of houses.

In the Adair subdivision bounded by Stewart Avenue on the east, Pierce Street on the north, Allene Avenue on the west and the Atlanta and West Point belt line on the south, there is a total of 100 houses, many new homes, tiled sidewalks and paved streets, improvements which have been made within the past three years. The Tenth Ward School is also in this subdivision, and the subdivisionists have given the city a 10-acre tract for a park for school children.

Another interesting subdivision is William J. Davis' Westview Park. This tract also contains 100 acres and about the same number of houses. It is reached by way of Gordon Road, Westview Avenue and Cascade Road.

Sewer work, widening and regrading are going on fast on Georgia Avenue and Glenn Street, the idea being to open up a direct highway from West End to Grant Park, which will save a mile over the present through-town route.

Stewart Avenue 250 feet southeasterly toward Wells Street from Whitehall Street is due to be widened soon. J. R. Smith gave a six-foot strip on the southwest side of the street and the city bought six feet on the opposite side, but has never cut it away.

The Selig Apartment at the northeast corner of Washington and Bass Streets is fast going up. Brick work is completed to the second story.

There are many other evidences of progress on the South Side, a section that has long been noted for the beauty of its homes.

Interest in Paving Project.

A great deal of interest centers in the proposition to repave South Pryor Street, and indications point to a large meeting Thursday night at the Pryor Street School building. The call for the meeting has been issued by members of the South Side Improvement Club, which has done a great deal of construction work for the section.

The paving committee is composed of John W. Alexander, Sol Cronheim, G. D. Kitchens, Henry Alexander, H. Cronheim, J. L. Poole, J. L. McCord, Press Huddleston, C. H. Kelley, R. B. Deavors, C. L. Dean, C. D. Knight, H. Weinberg, Lee F. Dreyfus, C. E. Register, A. Abelson, A. M. Moore, J. L. Merrill, Joseph Franklin and J. H. Bradfield.

Small Acreage Sale.

George L. Slater has bought from the H. L. Cope estate, through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, four acres of land on the Cascade Road, West End, for $2,400 cash. The property is near Gordon Street.

Hotel Ansley Opening.

The new Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of James and North Forsyth Streets, will be opened Monday, June 30, the opening having been postponed from June 16. The Ansley represents an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, and is one of the handsomest structures in the South.

Farm Tract on Sale.

A farm tract of 136 acres 3 1-2 miles from Buckhead in North Fulton County has been put on the market at "old farm prices" by the Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency. This is one of the largest tracts offered in that section for some months.

To Sell Wylie Property.

John R. Wylie, executor of the estate of the late Captain David G. Wylie, and Bun Wylie, agent, will sell at auction before the court house door Tuesday, July 1, the northwest corner of Spring and West Fifth Streets and the lot adjoining it on the west. The terms will be one-half cash and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The first-named lot fronts 100 feet on Spring Street and 130 feet on West Fifth Street, and on it is a two-story brick residence valued at $12,000. The latter is 60 by 120 feet, and contains a double flat that cost $7,500 to build and which rents at $900 a year. Steve R. Johnston will be the auctioneer.

Thirty years ago Captain Wylie bought property in this neighborhood for $150 an acre. Recently subdivision lots in it sold at the rate of approximately $20,000 an acre.

Finishing Road Work.

Work on Peachtree Road from Buckhead northeast to the Fulton County line is nearly complete. The convicts are working back to Buckhead and have nearly reached the place where they started some weeks ago. The road is about 80 feet wide and presents a splendid appearance. On one side of the single car track three vehicles can stand abreast, and the other side is nearly wide enough for four.

Governor Brown's Message--

A Statesman's Views of Some of the Most Important Problems in Georgia.

Governor Joseph M. Brown's retiring message to the General Assembly is a remarkably clear statement of the views of a remarkably clear-thinking executive.

It should be read carefully and analytically by every Georgian, for it considers exhaustively many questions of grave import and far-reaching consequence.

Governor Brown, not unlike other men of real force and worth in the world, will find many people who agree with what he says, and many others who dissent.

In discussing some questions, the Governor goes much further than some in his place would care to go—even dare to go.

It is distinctly to his credit, however, that he falters not in setting down the things he believes. He is a statesman, not a politician. He is fully entitled to have that much said of him, on the eve of his vacating the governorship.

Governor Brown will be heard from again in Georgia politics. His friends are too loyal to give him up, too appreciative of his services to see him retire.

The impression is that he still is very much alive, and that he will continue very much alive for many days to come.

This is as it should be. Men of his type and character are needed in Georgia—MEN WHO RESPECT THE LAW, and insist that within it dwells the greatest and surest protection to society and the State, and who have the courage of their convictions and the manhood to speak them frankly and freely, as may seem necessary now and then.

In bidding him good-bye as Chief Magistrate of Georgia, the Georgian extends to Governor Brown its good wishes and the assurance of its high regard.

Is Woman, Like a Rabbit, Made to Breed?

G. B. Shaw Says That the English Statesman So Consider Her. A Good Many Statesmen in America Have the Same Idea.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Shaw, the clever, red-headed Irishman, says that the British Prime Minister "puts one's mother on the footing of a rabbit."

It is not a bad description. Others besides Asquith look upon woman merely as a breeding machine, made to produce a human being at intervals, and to do housework and take care of some man between whiles.

In this country are many men with that opinion—the more shame to them.

But, luckily, there are also men more fortunate in their experience of women than those who look upon their own mothers as dull machines, unfit to vote, unable to think.

Americans and English, Irish, Germans and others are proud of the fact that their mothers were something more "than a species of a rabbit;" something more than mere slaves, to drudge in the household and let superior beings in coat and trousers think for them.

The number and the power of those that would treat women as rabbits or breeding machines are diminishing. The number of those who realize that women must solve their problems, as men have solved their problems, WITH THE BALLOT, is fortunately increasing.

That extraordinarily courageous young woman, Miss Davison, who was killed on the Derby race track the other day, settled one foolish argument against suffrage.

Idiots were fond of saying that women could not vote because they lacked physical courage.

The favorite argument of the fool was "Since women can't go to war, can't fight, can't be policemen, and can't catch burglars, how can they expect to vote?"

Miss Davison, who lies in her grave, having given her life to make an impression on dull-minded stupidity, has settled once and for all the silly argument about woman's courage.

She determined to rebuke the Queen of England, who had forbidden women to wear equal suffrage badges.

She went to the Derby race track, determined to seize the King's horse by the bridle and pull him to the ground.

Do you know what kind of an undertaking that was?

Imagine twenty horses flashing over the turf at the rate of thirty miles an hour or faster. Ask yourself if YOU could identify the colors of one particular jockey riding for the King, rush out into that crowd of horses, seize that particular horse and drag him to the ground.

That is exactly what Miss Davison did. She killed herself in doing it, but she disposed of the asinine argument that woman ought not to vote because she hasn't courage.

How many men do you suppose you could find in the British Army able to do what that woman did?

Another woman who has discouraged the silly talk against woman's courage and determination is that magnificent leader and heroic fighter, Mrs. Pankhurst.

Feeble and past middle age, she has defied successfully the whole power of England.

They have locked her up and she has starved herself, until they have been forced to let her out, for fear that she would die on their hands.

She will die in the end, of course, and before long probably. Meanwhile, she has demonstrated that woman, weak as she is, in spite of the cowardly and brutal treatment to which she is subjected, will find a way to assert and get her rights.

Woman is NOT a mere breeding machine, a human rabbit, and she doesn't propose to be treated as such forever.

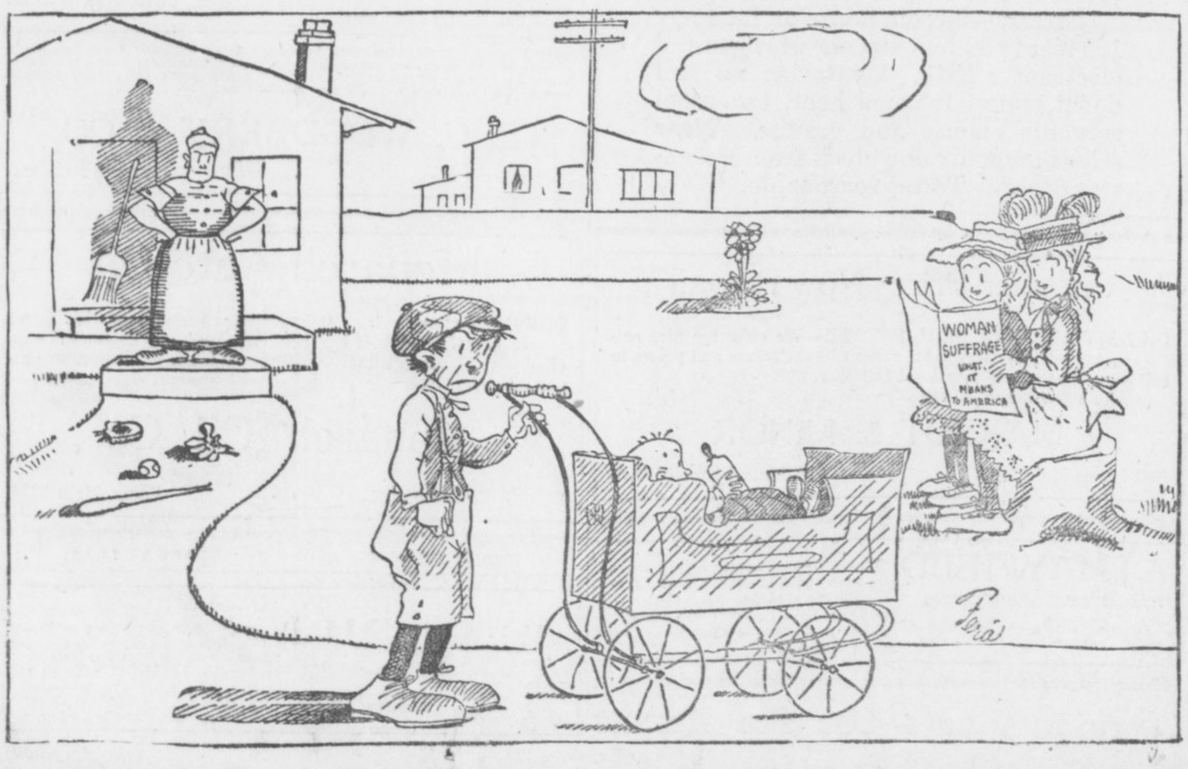
Men will find that out sooner or later, and may it be SOONER.

The Hardest Hitter

The Bontoc Igorrotes of the Philippine Islands play what they call a slapping game. One man sits on a bench; the other slaps him with all his might on the thigh. Should blood show beneath the skin the slapper wins. If blood does not show the man on the bench has a chance to draw blood to the surface of the other man's skin, and so on.

Whiskey, with its mailed fist, always leaves a mark. The man on the bench NEVER gets a chance to win.

One Vote Against It



John Temple Graves

Writes on The Common Sense of Tariffs

If We Can Get the Extension of Our Markets While We Are Getting the Reduction of Our Tariff, He Says, We Will Undoubtedly Be Doing a Wise and Beneficial Thing.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHETHER high or low, protective or revenue, our tariff laws have always been built upon one and the same model.

Whig, Democrat or Republican, the point of view of the matter was always the same. The Walker, Wilson, McKinley, Dingley and Payne laws are like the Underwood bill, in that they all look inward. They are all intended to produce a certain amount of revenue, and primarily or incidentally to benefit, "protect" it is called, someone in the country at the expense of someone else in the country.

Or if it be a free trade provision to destroy someone's advantage for someone else's benefit, this latter is a case of putting the bottom rail on top.

The clashing interests are those of one group against another, of one section against another, of producer against consumer, or of middleman against one or both, but always the clash of interest is American against American. We may shut the foreigner's goods out or we may let them in, but always in the interest of someone of our own groups, or factions, or industries as against the others.

The "Reciprocal" Idea.

Never have our legislators grasped the "RECIPROCAL" idea—the idea of the great INTERNATIONAL value of a tariff law. Never have they sought to use the TARIFF AS A LEVER TO PRY OPEN THE WORLD'S MARKETS FOR THE ENTRY OF THE PRODUCTS OF OUR SKILL, INDUSTRY AND LABOR. Never except with one eye and sometimes both eyes, squinting backward over their shoulders.

The idea of presenting a united front is not now, and never has been, adequately considered.

As against all the world we have certain natural and certain acquired advantages, and in respect to particular nations we are at certain disadvantages.

To Extend Our Markets.

Every country able to do so is fully and capably exploiting these our disadvantages. Whether it be Germany or France, Venezuela or Brazil, each has found that particular weak spot in our tariff armor which concerns it and each is driving the knife in full up to the hilt.

But we fritter away our advantages and we fight among ourselves.

Reciprocity is the policy. To give other nations an open way to our markets in the things we need, and to secure in full return an open way to their markets for our most desired product. This is the fair, reasonable policy. A reduction of the tariff may be a good thing. AN EXTENSION OF OUR MARKETS IS CERTAINLY A GOOD THING.

If we can get the extension of our markets while we are getting the reduction of our tariff we will undoubtedly be doing a wise and beneficial thing. THERE SEEMS NO OTHER WAY IN WHICH WE CAN DO THIS SO LOGICALLY AND SO SURELY AS BY RECIPROCITY.

Japanese Labor Cheap, but Not Good

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

I NEVER glance into Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," without finding some interesting view of the human problem. This vista of Japanese labor is timely:

"In the very outset, the assumed parallel between Japan's rise as a military power and her predicted rise as an industrial power should be branded as the groundless non sequitur that it is. 'All our present has its roots in the past,' as my first Japanese acquaintance said to me; and we ignore fundamental facts when we forget that, for centuries unnumbered, Japan existed for the soldier, as the rose bush for the blossom. The man of martial courage was the goal of all her striving, the end of all her travail. Society was a military aristocracy, the Samurai the privileged class. And at the same time commerce was despised as dishonorable and industry merely tolerated as a necessary evil.

"In the race she has to run, moreover, the Mikado-land has no such advantages as many of our people have been led to believe. In America it has long been my conviction that cheap labor is never cheap; that so-called 'cheap labor' is a curse to any community—not because it is cheap, but because it is inefficient. The so-called cheap negro labor in the South, for example, I have come to regard as perhaps the dearest on the continent.

"Here in Japan, however, I was quite prepared to find that this theory would not hold good. By reason of conditions in a primitive stage of industrial organization, I thought that I might find cheap labor with all the advantages (in so far as there are any), and few of the disadvantages, encountered elsewhere. But it is not so. An American factory owner in Osaka, summing up his Job's trials with raw Japanese labor, used exactly my own phrase in a newspaper article a few days ago. 'Cheap labor is never cheap.' And all my investigations have convinced me that the remark is as applicable in Japan as it is in America or England.

"The per capita wages of Japanese laborers in Japan are, of course, amazingly low. The latest 1910 statistics of Japan, as furnished by their Department of Finance, indicates a daily wage (American money) of 40 cents for carpenters, 31 1-4 cents for shoemakers, 34 cents for blacksmiths, 25 1-2 cents for compositors, 19 1-2 cents for male farm laborers and 22 cents for male weavers, and 12 cents for female. In the cotton factories I visited, those of the better sort, the wages run from 5 cents a day for the youngest children to 25 cents a day for good women workers.

"But in spite of the fact that such figures as these were well known to my Japanese host (one of the Emperor's privy councillors, and a man of much travel and culture), he expressed the conclusion that Japanese factory labor when reduced to terms of efficiency is not greatly cheaper than European, an opinion which has since grown rather trite, in view of the number of times that I have heard it."

Atlanta girls have taken to "wishing sashes." The wearer makes a wish as she ties on the sash, and has to wear it until the wish is realized. Seems to me we should pick out a mighty easy wish, for fear of having to sleep through a hot night with a heavy sash bound around us.
