U. S. NOT TO RECOGNIZE HUERTA

Present Regime Will Not Last Year Out, President Wilson Says.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send troops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Mexico to Grant Free Land to 50,000 Japanese.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—A note granting concessions to 50,000 Japanese for free lands in the State of Morelos will be sent to the Mikado of Japan in a few days.

LATEST NEWS

ROME, July 21.—The disbanded Swiss guards late to-day forced an entrance into the Vatican grounds and made a demonstration that terrorized the Pope and his attendants. The guards, in a disorganized body, broke their way into the antechamber, and rushing around within the grounds and in the building demanded in loud voices that they be given consideration in their demands. They finally left without doing violence to any one.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—War Department officials declared to-day that if Brigadier General R. K. Evans, in command of the Department of the Gulf, at Atlanta, Ga., has stated publicly that the United States will be compelled to intervene in Mexico, he will be given a sharp reprimand by the Secretary of War. It is an infraction of the rules of the War Department for any army officer to discuss military or political questions for publication.

Members of the City Council rode rough-shod Mayor Woodward Monday afternoon when by a vote of 18 to 7 they vetoed his measure providing for the consolidation of the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office, and by a 15 to 2 vote setting aside the resolution making an appropriation for an option on the $100,000 electric plant.

Dr. W. M. Lewis, of Carrollton, was bound over to the Grand Jury under $1,000 bond by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon, charged with registering at the Hotel Scoville with Miss Effie McCalmon, also of Carrollton, as his wife. The girl testified that this was the third time she had made the trip to Atlanta with Dr. Lewis. He denied having improper relations with her. Judge Broyles reprimanded him for the statement that he had registered as man and wife only to protect the girl. Miss McCalmon was ordered held until her father could be communicated with. Lewis is married and has two children. He expects to make bond this afternoon. He was placed under arrest Monday morning at a local sanitarium just after completing an operation.

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—With four wounded Chinamen imprisoned in her hold, the steamship Momus, from New York, came into port to-day with a tale of rioting during her passage.

As the vessel entered the Mississippi, 24 Chinamen coming to New Orleans as strikebreakers on the United Fruit Company wharves attempted to get out of the steerage onto the deck. They were opposed by Second Officer Procter, who fired on them. Mrs. A. L. Shaw, a stewardess, battled with the Chinese and saved Procter's life.

TAMPA, July 21.—The Californian, a Leyland liner, reached port to-day with 26 refugees from Tampico, Mexico, aboard. Seven of them formerly resided at Grafton, W. Va., and represented a missionary society. They reported that notices had been posted on their property warning them that it was time to go.

BOSTON, July 21.—That he might not meet death as a felon, Cardenio F. King, the former financier and stock plunger, who is serving a fifteen-year sentence in State prison, to-day was pardoned by telephone by the executive council. Physicians say there is little hope of saving King, who underwent an operation to-day.

DETROIT, July 21.—Mrs. Agnew Youdock, 30, appeared at police headquarters in Saginaw today and confessed she had slain two of her babies, one in Flint and the other in Beaverton. She says she smothered them.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Attorney General Charles W. Cobb, assigned to the Department of the Interior, to-day tendered his resignation to President Wilson. He was appointed by President Taft May 15, 1911, from San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Cobb will take up the practice of law in New York City. At the request of the Secretary of the Interior Lane he will remain in office until September 15.

JACKSON, MISS., July 21.—Suit to dissolve the merger of the Illinois Central Railroad and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad will be filed at Clarksdale, Coahoma County, Tuesday. The bill has been drawn by the Attorney General of Mississippi and charges violation of the State anti-trust laws. Penalties approximating $50,000,000 will be asked. The petition as completed to-day also asks that the charter of the Yazoo Valley road be forfeited.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate. Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scared.

This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.

The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatly has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbied with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.

As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Four Women Caught In Vice Net Escape From Martha Home

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a raid on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Doughetry, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Renfro, companion of A. N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Tripp's wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Strike on Healey Building Settled

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the building, and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

According to the terms of the agreement, only union men will be employed on the building. The strike was called because of the alleged failure of the painting and electrical contractors to employ union men exclusively.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overridden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.

The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuence. Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accuser of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Silicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Fighting Mincey.

According to Chief of Detectives Lanford, the mysterious trip of Conley from police headquarters with Detectives Starnes and Campbell ended at the corner of Electric avenue and Carter street, where W. H. Mincey, the insurance agent, declared in an affidavit the negro was sitting on the curb intoxicated the afternoon of the Phagan murder, and confessed that he had killed a girl that day.

Chief Lanford stated that an effort had been made by the detectives to have persons residing in that vicinity identify Conley as having seen him there at the time Mincey stated. However, no one had been able to do so. It was also declared that Conley had been taken around to a Butler street address where it is declared the negro was at the time Mincey swears the conversation on the curbing took place.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

5 Washington Ball Players Near Death

CHICAGO, July 21.—Ten drownings were on record to-day in Chicago and other cities of the Middle West. Five deaths were due to the dangerous undertow, running more treacherously yesterday than ever before in the memory of old Lake Michigan seamen.

Five members of the Washington American League baseball team were saved from drowning by life guards at the Chicago beach.

Policeman Slain by Cathedral Thieves

NEW YORK, July 21.—Before he could pull his gun on burglars who were robbing St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church in Brooklyn, Policeman John E. Cahill was shot and stabbed to death by the robbers early to-day.

His body was found in the rear of the church yard. The thieves escaped.

BIG STILL DESTROYED.

CLEVELAND.—Deputy Collector L. R. Cooley, accompanied by P. B. Bush and others, destroyed a 90-gallon illicit distillery and 1,500 gallons of beer on the property of H. A. Jarrard, in Shoal Creek district, White County. They found two storage houses containing meal, malt and blackstrap molasses.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of biliousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Mulhall Says Foes 'Shadowed' Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

COUNCIL ATTACKS TWO MORE VETOES

City Lawmakers Go After Record in Overriding Wishes of Mayor Woodward.

Members of Council at the meeting Monday afternoon will attempt to override two vetoes of Mayor Woodward. These will be their thirty-third and thirty-fourth efforts and they will set a record. During the former years of the Mayor's service his disapproval of councilmanic action was annulled 22 times by two-thirds votes of Council.

The first matter to come up will be the question of consolidating the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office. The Council resolution seeks to place Receiver Beauchamp under the Assessors. Mayor Woodward has the Receiver's side with the statement:

"About the only reason that I can see for consolidating these offices again is simply for the purpose of political patronage, a question that should not enter into this matter when the efficiency and the good of the city are taken into consideration."

Alderman James R. Nutting, author of the resolution, declares that the divided system has proved a failure, and blames it for the loss of almost $50,000 in revenue.

The other veto of the Mayor is on the resolution appropriating $5 for an option on the $100,000 electric plant feature of the new crematory. Mayor Woodward declares the whole proposition was knocked out by the Supreme Court and that he will not sign any check throwing away $5 of the city's money.

Alderman Nutting, Councilman Albert Thomson and others charge the Mayor's opposition is due to the fact that he is tied up with the Georgia Railway and Power Company interests.

CHURCH ANNOUNCES SOCIAL.

Loses Her Best Loved Playmate When Lad and His Inseparable Chum Drown.

Sorrow, using death as its weapon, struck twice to the heart of 14-year-old Mary Chastine Sunday, and in so doing cast a shadow over the entire vicinity of her home at No. 33 Humphries street, for she was its sunshine.

In the double stroke the lives of both the mother of the girl, Mrs. Arie Chastine, and her best-loved playmate, Jerry Moles, 15 years old, who lived across the street, were snuffed out, the former after an operation and the boy from drowning in the Chattahoochee River.

And, as if not satisfied, the Reaper added a third to his toll from the neighborhood in taking the life of Casey Daniels, No. 71 Hightower street, 15 years old, also a friend of Mary, who drowned with Jerry.

Inquest Into Death Called.

An inquest into the death of the boys was called by the Coroner.

The two boys went fishing Saturday afternoon in the Chattahoochee River at the end of the Marietta road.

As Casey Daniels was leaving home his mother warned him not to venture in the water.

"Please don't go to the river," said Mrs. Daniels to her son. "Go to some creek and fish like good boys. I am so afraid something will happen and that you both will drown."

Bodies Caught on Fishline.

When the boys did not return at nightfall their parents became alarmed and a party with lanterns searched the river bank. Sunday the search was renewed by about 100 persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon G. W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, located a fishing line hung across the river.

He climbed out of the boat in which he sat and found a ghastly burden caught in the hooks below. The depth of the water at this point is about fifteen feet. The bodies of the two boys were lying on the river bottom with their arms entwined.

They were clad only in undershirt and trousers. The remainder of their apparel was found later under bushes at the opposite side of the stream.

Both Poor Swimmers.

N. L. Moles, father of Jerry, thinks both boys were in bathing, that one of them got beyond his depth, and that the other boy tried to rescue his friend. Both were poor swimmers.

Casey Daniels was a member of the Junior Order of Mechanics. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters. All of the sisters and two of the brothers are married. They are M. L. Daniels, of No. 82 Stewart avenue; William R., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Timms, of East Point; Mrs. Etta Ellis, of Lula, Fla.; Mrs. Ora McAdoo and Mrs. Mamie Patton, of San Francisco. Two boys remain at home, Royal, 20, and Ernest, 18 years. Casey returned to Atlanta last Christmas after having been with his sister in San Francisco for three years.

Lads Worked Together.

Jerry Moles is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles; a sister, Elsie, 13 months old, and a brother, Bruce, who is 17. Jerry's father is employed at the Atlanta Woolen Mill.

Both boys worked at the Boston Brady Machine Works.

A double funeral for the two boys will be held at Union Tabernacle, in McDaniel street, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Interment will be at Westview.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

BOY-DYNAMITE—FUNERAL.

LEBANON, KY., July 21.—Twelve-year-old Edward England amused himself to-day throwing rocks into a quarry. One struck a dynamite cap, which exploded and killed the boy.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Good Forsyth Bill.

John F. Conroy and his diving models; the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Deiro, the famous accordionist; George Auger and company; Smith, Cook and Marie Branden; Shriner and Richards; the Be Anos.

That is the bill of vaudeville that is to be served at the Forsyth matinee and night all of this week. It is a wonderful combination of talent, one of the best groups of high-grade Keith vaudeville acts that have been assembled in Atlanta. Conroy and his models present an act that is declared to be the strongest drawing card in modern vaudeville. It is made up of a famous life-saver and two pretty girls who are expert in swimming and diving. A great pool tank is used and the stage setting is one of the handsomest that has been presented on any stage.

Tabloid at Bijou.

The Bijou is proving the popularity of musical comedy these days in the packed houses that have greeted every tabloid show of thes eason. The little Marietta street house is perfectly ventilated, cooled by the latest devices, and kept at a temperature that is a positive relief from the heat of the crowded pavements outside. For the week beginnig this afternoon the attraction will be "Good Morning, Judge," said to be the funniest tabloid on the circuit. The orignal methods of a rich brewer, who as Mayor is forced to act as judge of the municipal court, provoke mirth of the hilarious kind.

There will be the usual performances during the week, daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

"Les Miserables."

Realizing that there is a spirited demand on the part of the public for high-class photodramas Jake Wells has been devoting several months to preparations for presenting in the South the masterpieces of motography. He has just completed arrangements to present at the Grand this week the most magnificent product of kinemotography, Victor Hugo's immortal romance, "Les Miserables," in nine reels. This production, which cost over $100,000, was made in Paris and in the French countryside showing the actual scenes portrayed by the great master. The principal roles were enacted by the principal players of Paris.

ANSLEY PARK TO PROTEST DELAY ON STREETS

Citizens Will Demand That Paving Provided for Seven Months Ago Be Done at Once.

With almost seven months of the year gone and no street work done in Ansley Park, members of the Ansley Park Association, made up of residents and property owners of that section, are planning to make a protest to the City Council.

Many of the streets in that section practically are impassable. Though the avenues are lined with beautiful homes surrounded by well-kept lawns, the streets are cut into ruts and holes worse than any country roads. Neither the city nor the country has done any work to speak of in Ansley Park since it was incorporated.

As an aid toward a solution of the problem, The Georgian has made an investigation of the conditions from the city officials' viewpoint.

Owners to Pay Two-Thirds.

When the January budget was made up $19,931.25 was provided for repaving Peachtree circle from Fifteenth street to Prado, the property owners to pay $13,287.50 of the amount and the city to pay $6,643.75.

From the streets ordinary fund the Eighth Ward got $5,950, from the rock and chert fund $2,150 and from the chert repair fund $600.

From this appropriation only one block of street has been paved, Lombardy street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Not even a pick has been stuck in any other part of the park, and there have been seven months of the finest working weather the city construction department has ever known.

Although the property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost of the paving of Peachtree circle they have been tabooed on this street for more than a year.

Nothing Done on S. Prado.

While the residents have borne the condition with the patience of Job they declare they will not remain quiet any longer.

From the general fund $4,769 has been set aside for paving South Prado from Piedmont avenue to Prado. This is a favorite drive for autoists. It winds around with the beauty of a mountain pass. Attractive homes are built up along it. But it is worn full of deep holes and ridges, and though the money for its repair has been available since the first of the year no contract has been let—not even have bids been asked for.

The general funds are supposed to provide for repairs of streets. Repairs have been unknown to Ansley Park.

Chairman Orville H. Hall, of the Council Streets Committee, said Monday morning that the reason for this condition was that the city forces had been engaged in other sections.

Beaten by "Wire Pulling."

His statement would indicate that the Eighth Ward representatives had been completely outdone in the "wire pulling" contest that goes on between Councilmen over street work.

W. A. Hansel, Assistant Chief of Construction, said the contract had been let for "dolarway" paving on Peachtree circle, but that the contractor also was repaving Central avenue, and that he would have to finish that before going to Peachtree circle. He said he expected Central avenue to be finished in about ten days.

As to South Prado, he said a new process of bitulithic macadam would be tried there, but that they were waiting to see how the same sort of paving laid on Gordon street turned out before putting it down on South Prado.

Members of the Ansley Park Association are dissatisfied. They can not understand why they have not had some street work done this year.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of Carrollton, was arrested Monday morning and placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. He is charged with registering as man and wife at the Hotel Scoville, on Mitchell street, with Miss Effie McColman, who is held as a witness in the case. The trial will be held before Recorder Broyles Tuesday afternoon. The arrest was delayed until the physician had finished a difficult operation at a sanitarium.

According to the charges, Dr. Lewis arrived in Atlanta Monday morning with Miss McColman, registering at the Hotel Scoville with her as Dr. Lewis and wife.

This is denied by Dr. Lewis, who says someone, who evidently has it in for him, added the "and wife."

Dr. Lewis and the girl, who is only 19 years old, were arrested on information furnished to the police by an alleged friend of the couple, who saw them on the train Monday morning.

According to Dr. Lewis, the girl came to Atlanta with him to have some work done on her teeth. The girl says she came with the doctor with her parents' permission. The McColmans live in the country about ten miles from Carrollton.

Huerta gave out the report that Madero was killed while attempting to escape en route from the palace to the penitentiary.

HOUSE ASKED TO INCREASE LIST OF PENSIONS

Another Measure Bars Commercial Discrimination by Unfair Price Cuts.

The introduction of a bill by Senator Peyton, of the Thirty-first, prohibiting unfair commercial discrimination by slashing prices in one section of the State and boosting them in another, featured Monday evening's session of the State Senate.

Another important bill introduced was that by Senator Buetz extending the pension list to include the widows of Confederate veterans who married prior to 1875. Under the present law, widows are pensioned only when they were married prior to 1870.

Senator Stark, of the Thirty-third, introduced a bill providing for the regulation by the Railroad Commission of the rate of speed of railroad cars in the corporate limits of any city not exceeding 2,000 inhabitants.

Another bill introduced by Senator Searcy provides for an amendment to the code of 1910 so as to allow the transportation of negro prisoners in charge of deputy sheriffs in the white cars or compartments of railroad cars. Sheriffs and deputies say they are subject to riot when carrying negro prisoners in negro compartments.

A resolution providing for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator Bacon in joint session of the House and Senate Tuesday at noon was adopted by the Senate.

Monday marked the turning into the last half of the present session of the Legislature and was featured by the House transacting the smallest amount of work of any day of the 25 whic hhave passed.

Reconsideration of House Resolution, No. 56, which refers to the appointment of a commission to investigate the complaint of Georgia farmers against the damage to their crops by fumes from copper plants in Ducktown, Tenn., was asked by Representative Corn, and the session was extended ten minutes to accommodate him. His motion was lost by a heavy vote.

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fish and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

'TIGER' GETS FARM SENTENCE.

Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, who has set the entire House a-flutter.

She's a suffragist and is winning favor for "the cause."

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

GARRISON AT GALVESTON.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 21.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and Major General Leonard Wood to-day inspected Fort Crockett and later went to Texas City, where a review of the entire second division took place.

VIADUCT COMFORT BUILDING URGED

Park Board Member Receives Postals From Leading Citizens Pledging Support.

Thousands of Atlantans have joined in the demand for a public comfort building over Wall street, with main entrance from the Whitehall viaduct.

L. C. Green, member of the Park Board from the Fourth Ward, who started the movement, has received thousands of postal cards indorsing the movement and pledging support. These cards are from every class, and in the number are the leading citizens of Atlanta. Following are extracts from the postals received:

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox—I am heartily in favor of the movement to have the city erect a public comfort building.

V. H. Kriegshaber—It is a good thing. Push it along to completion.

L. J. Daniel—Yes, if on Whitehall viaduct extending out over Wall street opposite the Peters Building, entrance from viaduct. Under this viaduct or Pryor street underpass, no good.

E. A. Hartsock—I do most heartily indorse the movement, and I think it should go on the Whitehall viaduct, something like the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad office.

TIE TARIFF VOTE IN THE SENATE IMMINENT

Chamberlain's Decision to Vote Independent of Party Lines Imperils Passage of Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truth-light."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

DR. RIDLEY WINS CONVERTS.

There were eight professions of faith and five additions to the Central Baptist Church membership Sunday morning following a sermon by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley on "The Gospel as an Antidote for Sin."

FATALLY HURT IN FIRE.

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 21.—One man was fatally injured and several slightly burned in a tenement house fire here to-day. The flames were controlled after heavy damage had been done.

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expense incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4; one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused to-day to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

Dogs Have Valet, Fan, Bath, Room and Bed

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishment bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

150 Hours' Sleep Refreshes Woman

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

The Social World

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

The committee on arrangements will present a program at Taft Hall on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, when the woman suffrage issue will be discussed.

The meeting will be called to order and Dr. Percy J. Starnes will render a program of popular airs on the echo organ. As Dr. Starnes, one of the foremost organists in the world, is soon to leave Atlanta, and as the echo organ has never been heard before on a strictly public occasion, this will be a real treat. At 8:15 o'clock the speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Peel and will include, among many others, Mr. J. J. Spalding, Dr. Hughlett, R. L. Hope, Frank Rice, J. R. Smith, R. A. Broyles, E. R. FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:36 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have deeveted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germaf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge, wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn,
"'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly.
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that,"
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, cronched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

: : : Winning a Welcome : : :

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonstrations. The argument has been made that one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslike lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the band, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

: Our : Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many they are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

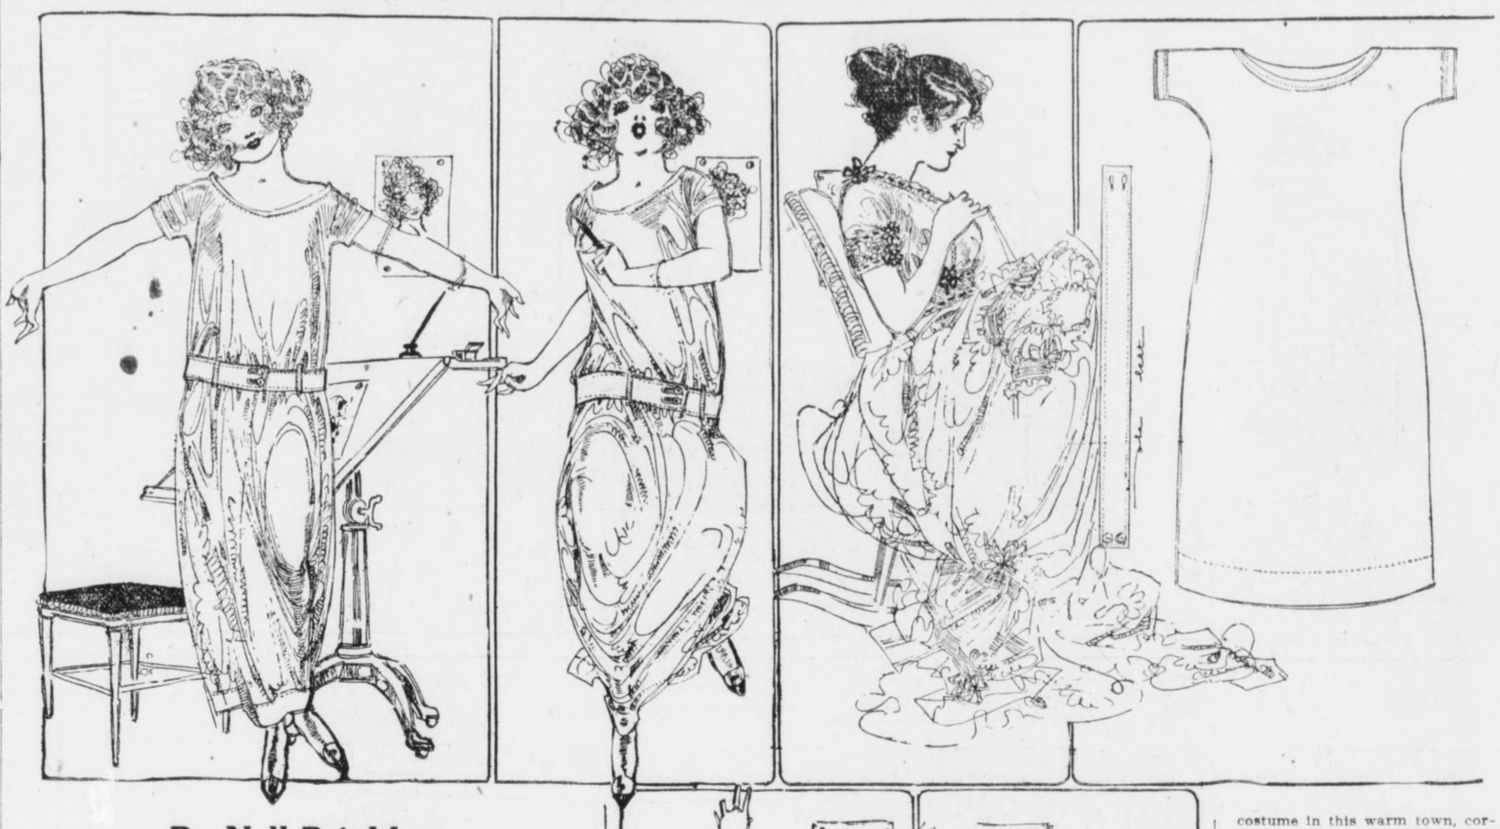

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

"Am I Not a Boy? Yes I Am---Not!" : : One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

By Nell Brinkley

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me moniee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious. I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 30 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly anticipation.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close. "And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

• • •

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

• • •

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

FORBES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

CHICAGO, July 21.—Harry Forbes, once bantamweight champion of the world, would reenter the boxing game. He is stirred to activity by seeing some of the present day performers in action, believing that he is easily better than most of them in this section of the country.

The Fox River Club of Aurora, of which Art Reid is matchmaker, is anxious to get Forbes into a contest and there is a chance that they will stage him with Jimmy Walsh, the English bantam star now in this city, within a short time.

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson. In the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle, Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the loser has a handicap of 1. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate show-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a gallant game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winner of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. Thornton, a few years ago a twirler for the Chicago National League Club, last night was placed in the padded cell of the county jail at Everett to be held for examination by the County sanity board. While pitching for Chicago he was struck on the head by a batted ball. He has never been quite sane since.

BOBBY WAUGH PUTS OUT REDMOND IN TEN ROUNDS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., July 21.—Bobby Waugh received a knockout decision over Jack Redmond, of Milwaukee, in the tenth round here yesterday when the latter's seconds threw a sponge into the ring after Redmond was helpless and stood with his hands at his side in the middle of the ring.

Crackers Open in Memphis To-day

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here, which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough batches.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

• • •

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

• • •

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Dooin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zeider was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

• • •

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

• • •

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of 'high-speed' oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 28 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

Contestants—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there

• • •

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fail in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

• • •

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

• • •

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

• • •

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

BASEBALL
Diamond News and Gossip

The fight for second place in both leagues is waxing hot. The Senators are right on the trail of the Naps, while the Pirates in their rush upward are likely soon to overhaul the Phillies.

• • •

The Yankees are continuing their mad fight to get out of the cellar position, opening up a series in Detroit with a victory.

• • •

Southpaw "Eddie" Plank pitched in world's series form yesterday and the Athletics shut out the Browns.

• • •

A fumble by Chapman in the ninth inning paved the way for the Red Sox victory over the Naps.

• • •

Big Jeff Tesreau and Walter Johnson are the strike out kings in their respective leagues. The Ozark bear has gauged 111 batsmen to retire, humbled by his prowess, while "wonderful Walter has breezed 127 batsmen.

• • •

Whether the Pirates will have a look-in on the pennant will be demonstrated in the series with the Giants beginning to-morrow. Four games are scheduled and the Pirates must get better than an even break to cut down the thirteen-game handicap separating them from the leaders.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

COBB WANTS TO QUIT DETROIT; LIKES BOSTON

BOSTON, July 21.—A Boston sporting writer is authority today for the following:

"Ty Cobb is anxious to get away from the Detroit Tigers, and he does not care who knows it. Also the mighty Tyrus would like very much to play here in Boston, but frankly admits he can not see how the Red Sox would want to give up their Tris Speaker.

"These statements are from Cobb himself, and come in a letter I received this morning from the Georgia Peach, in which he touched at some length upon the story so widely circulated last week to the effect that there was a Speaker-for-Cobb trade on, a story that President McAleer denied most emphatically. Cobb declares he has always liked Boston. 'The fans there always seem so fair,' he writes, and adds that he would like a place in the Red Sox batting order.

"Tyrus significantly says: 'There are two other American League cities in which I would like to play. I would welcome a change.'"

SWIMMER IS BLINDED BY WAVES IN LONG STRUGGLE

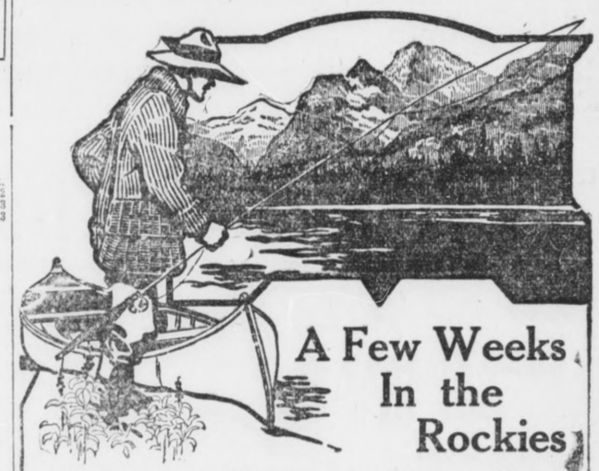

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Eliensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Eliensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Eliensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

COTTON DROPS ON COOLER WEATHER

Texas Showers and Low Cables Promote General Selling. Marked Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 4 to 12 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York; July, 12.16; August, 12.05; October, 11.53; Januar, 11.37.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.35; August, 11.97; October, 11.54; January, 11.54.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Our forecast of cooler weather over Sunday was entirely fulfilled. Records this morning show the heat spell completely broken and good rains fell in Arkansas, Oklahoma, parts of the lower Central States and generally in the eastern half of the Atlantics. Lighter showers, with some good rains, fell in North and East Texas.

Liverpool writes: "A large crop has been planted in Egypt; progress so far good and dependent only on the weather to materialize." Political news continues unfavorable. London says: "Complete collapse of authority by the powers is claimed."

First trades here were at a decline of 6 points and the market was quiet around opening figures all the morning. New York wires show a disposition in favor of the market on the ground that Texas had no general rains. But the small stock there and the firm hold by the spot houses on the near position is the main reason for the respect paid to the bull side.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market. They are ordering week to week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and fluting of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and promises to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

Clearings Gain, but Not to 1912 Level

GENERAL BUYING PUTS STOCKS UP

Improved Metal Trade and Investment Demand Causes Increased Activity.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅜ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady.

Increased strength and activity developed soon after the opening and throughout the forenoon numerous issues showed gains from 1 to 2 points. The heaviest trading was in Union Pacific and Steel, London being an important factor in all trading. Canadian moved up ⅞ and a gain of 1 point was made in Third avenue. Steel advanced ⅜.

Aggressive buying gave a strong tone to the market in the afternoon. The buying was based to some extent on cables asserting that the establishment of peace in the Balkans was near at hand. Further advances were made in Amalgamated, Utah and Chino Copper, and nearly all the railroads and industrials late in the afternoon rose to new high figures for the day.

The market closed strong. Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....84@85
Corn—No. 2 66
Oats—No. 2 .....39@40

CHICAGO, July 21.—Corn was the leader in speculation to-day, as it gained 1⅛@1¼ cent on buying credited to the countrl, which was brought about by the continued dry weather throughout the belt.

Wheat was up ⅛@⅝ and oats gained ⅜@⅝. The strength in corn held the other cereals and kept them from declining. There was a great deal of black rust talk, but the best authorities in the spring wheat country say there is no black rust at the moment and that wet cool weather it is not likely to make its appearance. The visible supply of wheat increased 433,000 bushels for the past week; the first increase in many moons. Corn decreased 1,607,000 bushels and oats increased 204,000 bushels. Cash transactions in grain at Chicago were 275,000 bushels wheat and 100,000 bushels each of corn and oats.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to incuce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate circles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 54 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin. Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Hentz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 30 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harraison for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,
For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

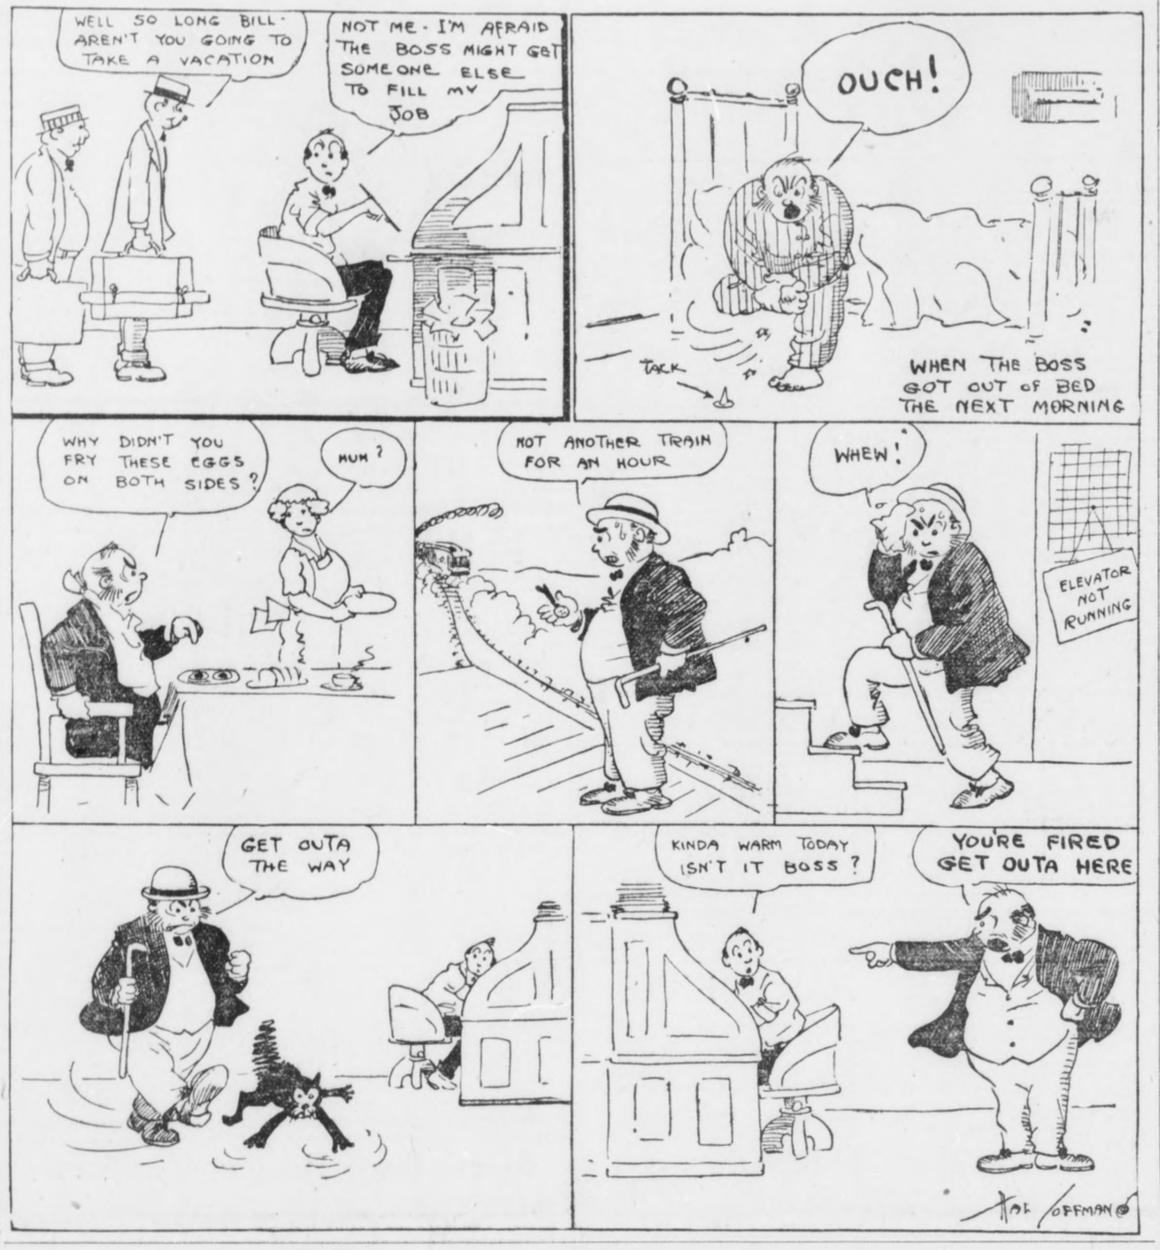

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

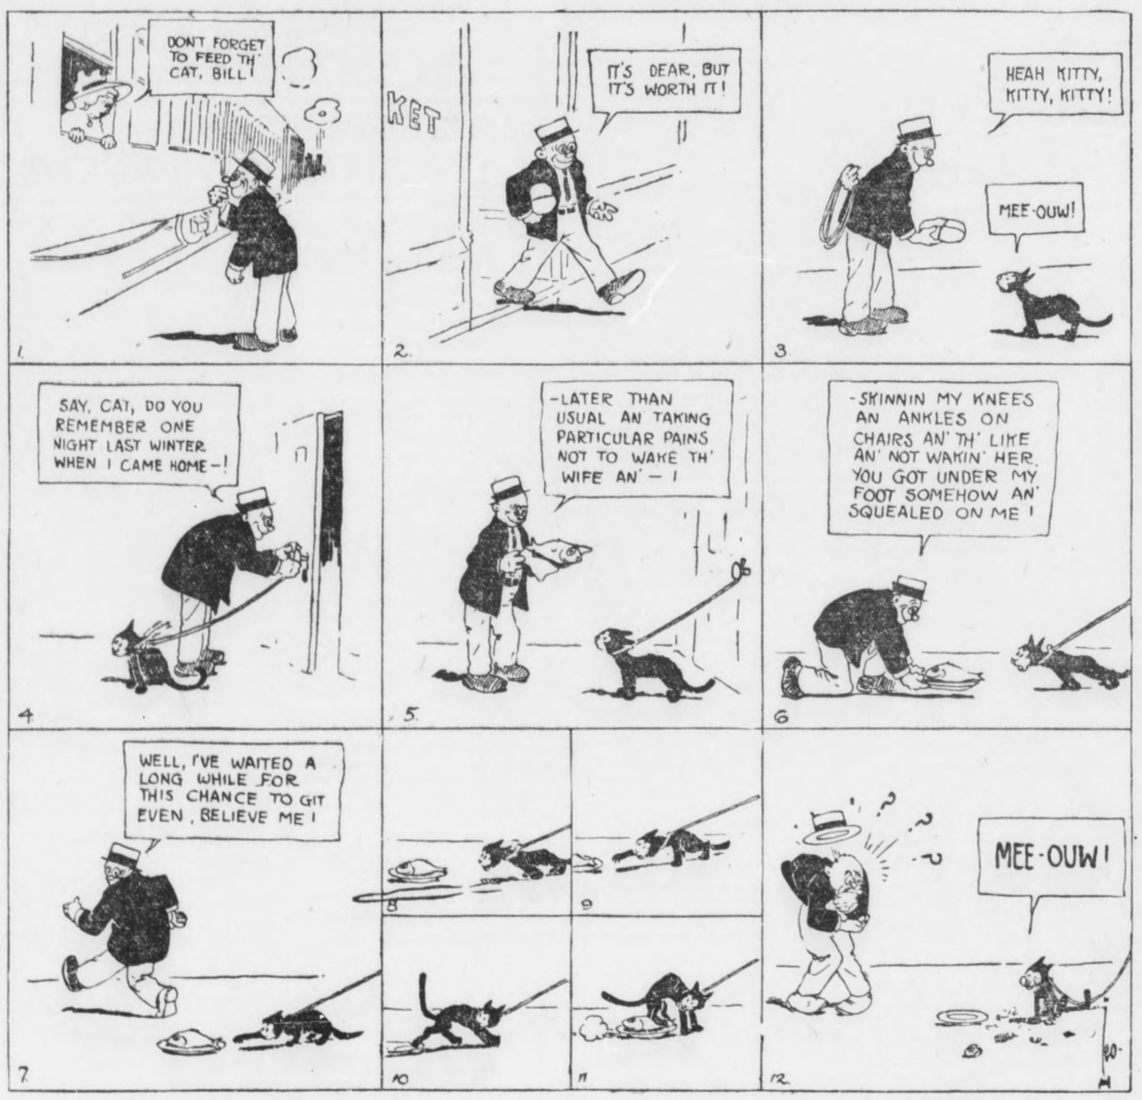

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

ACTION ON CONLEY HELD UP BY JURY

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overridden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.

The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuence. Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accuser of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Silicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered

LATEST NEWS

ROME, July 21.—The disbanded Swiss guards late to-day forced an entrance into the Vatican grounds and made a demonstration that terrorized the Pope and his attendants. The guards, in a disorganized body, broke their way into the antechamber, and rushing around within the grounds and in the building demanded in loud voices that they be given consideration in their demands. They finally left without doing violence to any one.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—War Department officials declared today that if Brigadier General R. K. Evans, in command of the Department of the Gulf, at Atlanta, Ga., has stated publicly that the United States will be compelled to intervene in Mexico, he will be given a sharp reprimand by the Secretary of War. It is an infraction of the rules of the War Department for any army officer to discuss military or political questions for publication.

Members of the City Council rode rough-shod Mayor Woodward Monday afternoon when by a vote of 18 to 7 they vetoed his measure providing for the consolidation of the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office, and by a 15 to 2 vote setting aside the resolution making an appropriation for an option on the $100,000 electric plant.

Dr. W. M. Lewis, of Carrollton, was bound over to the Grand Jury under $1,000 bond by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon, charged with registering at the Hotel Scoville with Miss Effie McCalmon, also of Carrollton, as his wife. The girl testified that this was the third time she had made the trip to Atlanta with Dr. Lewis. He denied having improper relations with her. Judge Broyles reprimanded him for the statement that he had registered as man and wife only to protect the girl. Miss McCalmon was ordered held until her father could be communicated with. Lewis is married and has two children. He expects to make bond this afternoon. He was placed under arrest Monday morning at a local sanitarium just after completing an operation.

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—With four wounded Chinamen imprisoned in her hold, the steamship Momus, from New York, came into port to-day with a tale of rioting during her passage.

As the vessel entered the Mississippi, 24 Chinamen coming to New Orleans as strikebreakers on the United Fruit Company wharves attempted to get out of the steerage onto the deck. They weer opposed by Second Officer Procter, who fired on them. Mrs. A. L. Shaw, a stewardess, battled with the Chinese and saved Procter's life.

TAMPA, July 21.—The Californian, a Leyland liner, reached port to-day with 26 refugees from Tampico, Mexico, aboard. Seven of them formerly resided at Grafton, W. Va., and represented a missionary society. They reported that notices had been posted on their property warning them that it was time to go.

BOSTON, July 21.—That he might not meet death as a felon, Cardenio F. King, the former financier and stock plunger, who is serving a fifteen-year sentence in State prison, to-day was pardoned by telephone by the executive council. Physicians say there is little hope of saving King, who underwent an operation to-day.

DETROIT, July 21.—Mrs. Agnew Youdock, 30, appeared at police headquarters in Saginaw today and confessed she had slain two of her babies, one in Flint and the other in Beaverton. She says she smothered them.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Attorney General Charles W. Cobb, assigned to the Department of the Interior, to-day tendered his resignation to President Wilson. He was appointed by President Taft May 15, 1911, from San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Cobb will take up the practice of law in New York City. At the request of the Secretary of the Interior Lane he will remain in office until September 15.

JACKSON, MISS., July 21.—Suit to dissolve the merger of the Illinois Central Railroad and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad will be filed at Clarksdale, Coahoma County, Tuesday. The bill has been drawn by the Attorney General of Mississippi and charges violation of the State anti-trust laws. Penalties approximating $50,000,000 will be asked. The petition as completed to-day also asks that the charter of the Yazoo Valley road be forfeited.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate. Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scared.

This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.

The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatly has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbied with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.

As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

U. S. NOT TO RECOGNIZE HUERTA

Present Regime Will Not Last Year Out, President Wilson Says.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department today.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Tripp'e wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the build... and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

SUSPENDED OFFICER JAILED.

SOLICITOR HALTS INDICTMENT OF JIM CONLEY

Grand Jury Defers Action After Dorsey Shows It Will Hamper Frank Prosecution.

that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Fighting Mincey.

According to Chief of Detectives Lanford, the mysterious trip of Conley from police headquarters with Detectives Starnes and Campbell ended at the corner of Electric avenue and Carter street, where W. H. Mincey, the insurance agent, declared in an affidavit the negro was sitting on the curb intoxicated the afternoon of the Phagan murder, and confessed that he had killed a girl that day.

Chief Lanford stated that an effort had been made by the detectives to have persons residing in that vicinity identify Conley as having seen him there at the time Mincey stated. However, no one had been able to do so. It was also declared that Conley had been taken around to a Butler street address where it is declared the negro was at the time Mincey swears the conversation on the curbing took place.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

5 Washington Ball Players Near Death

CHICAGO, July 21.—Ten drownings were on record to-day in Chicago and other cities of the Middle West. Five deaths were due to the dangerous undertow, running more treacherously yesterday than ever before in the memory of old Lake Michigan seamen.

Five members of the Washington American League baseball team were saved from drowning by life guards at the Chicago beach.

Policeman Slain by Cathedral Thieves

NEW YORK, July 21.—Before he could pull his gun on burglars who were robbing St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church in Brooklyn, Policeman John E. Cahill was shot and stabbed to death by the robbers early to-day.

His body was found in the rear of the church yard. The thieves escaped.

BIG STILL DESTROYED.

CLEVELAND.—Deputy Collector L. R. Cooley, accompanied by P. B. Bush and others, destroyed a 90-gallon illicit distillery and 1,500 gallons of beer on the property of H. A. Jarrard, in Shoal Creek district, White County. They found two storage houses containing meal, malt and blackstrap molasses.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of biliousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Mulhall Says Foes 'Shadowed' Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

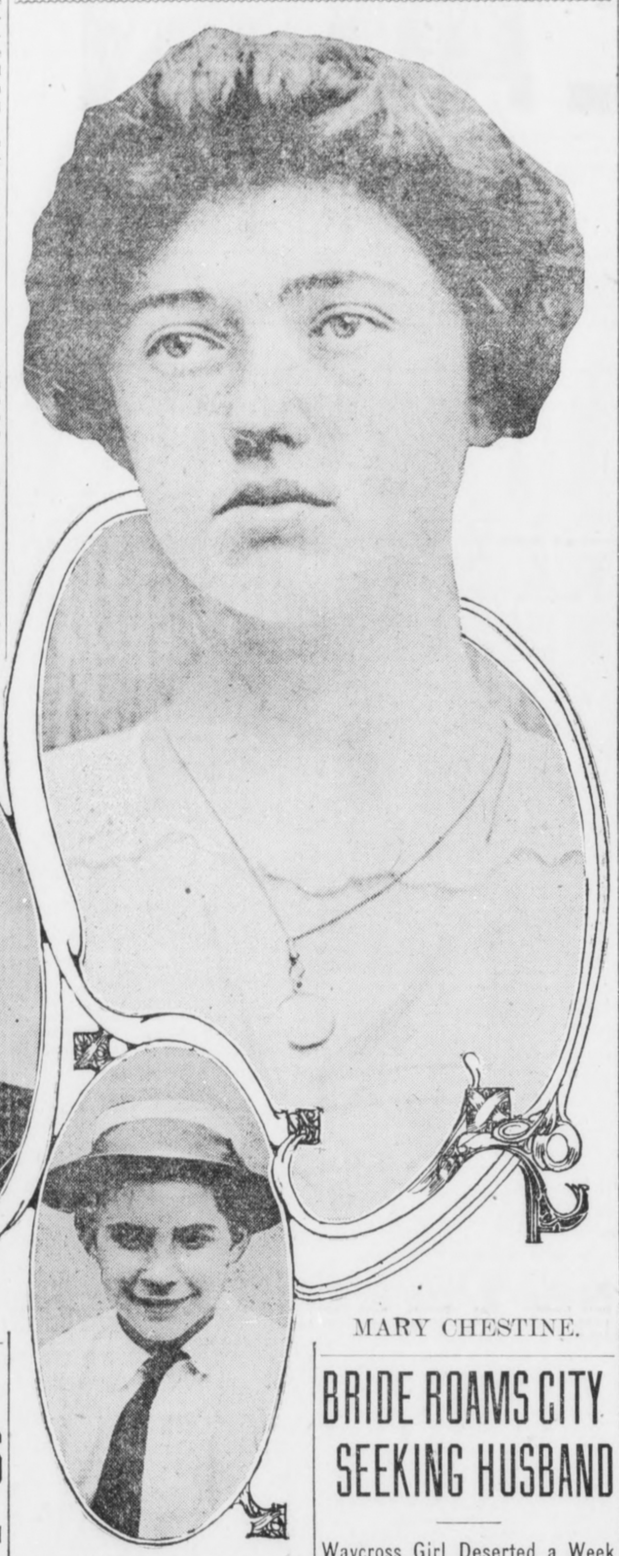

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

COUNCIL ATTACKS TWO MORE VETOES

City Lawmakers Go After Record in Overriding Wishes of Mayor Woodward.

Members of Council at the meeting Monday afternoon will attempt to override two vetoes of Mayor Woodward. These will be their thirty-third and thirty-fourth efforts and they will set a record. During the former years of the Mayor's service his disapproval of councilmanic action was annulled 22 times by two-thirds votes of Council.

The first matter to come up will be the question of consolidating the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office. The Council resolution seeks to place Receiver Beauchamp under the Assessors. Mayor Woodward has the Receiver's side with the statement:

"About the only reason that I can see for consolidating these offices again is simply for the purpose of political patronage, a question that should not enter into this matter when the efficiency and the good of the city are taken into consideration."

Alderman James R. Nutting, author of the resolution, declares that the divided system has proved a failure, and blames it for the loss of almost $50,000 in revenue.

The other veto of the Mayor is on the resolution appropriating $5 for an option on the $100,000 electric plant feature of the new crematory. Mayor Woodward declares the whole proposition was knocked out by the Supreme Court and that he will not sign any check throwing away $5 of the city's money.

Alderman Nutting, Councilman Albert Thomson and others charge the Mayor's opposition is due to the fact that he is tied up with the Georgia Railway and Power Company interests.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

JERRY MOLES.

Loses Her Best Loved Playmate When Lad and His Inseparable Chum Drown.

Sorrow, using death as its weapon, struck twice to the heart of 14-year-old Mary Chastine Sunday, and in so doing cast a shadow over the entire vicinity of her home at No. 33 Humphries street, for she was its sunshine.

In the double stroke the lives of both the mother of the girl, Mrs. Arie Chastine, and her best-loved playmate, Jerry Moles, 15 years old, who lived across the street, were snuffed out, the former after an operation and the boy from drowning in the Chattahoochee River.

And, as if not satisfied, the Reaper added a third to his toll from the neighborhood in taking the life of Casey Daniels, No. 71 Hightower street, 15 years old, also a friend of Mary, who drowned with Jerry.

Inquest Into Death Called.

An inquest into the death of the boys was called by the Coroner.

The two boys went fishing Saturday afternoon in the Chattahoochee River at the end of the Marietta road.

As Casey Daniels was leaving home his mother warned him not to venture in the water.

"Please don't go to the river," said Mrs. Daniels to her son. "Go to some creek and fish like good boys. I am so afraid something will happen and that you both will drown."

Bodies Caught on Fishline.

When the boys did not return at nightfall their parents became alarmed and a party with lanterns searched the river bank. Sunday the search was renewed by about 100 persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon G. W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, located a fishing line hung across the river.

He climbed out of the boat in which he sat and found a ghastly burden caught in the hooks below. The depth of the water at this point is about fifteen feet. The bodies of the two boys were lying on the river bottom with their arms entwined.

They were clad only in undershirt and trousers. The remainder of their apparel was found later under bushes at the opposite side of the stream.

Both Poor Swimmers.

N. L. Moles, father of Jerry, thinks both boys were in bathing, that one of them got beyond his depth, and that the other boy tried to rescue his friend. Both were poor swimmers.

Casey Daniels was a member of the Junior Order of Mechanics. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters. All of the sisters and two of the brothers are married. They are M. L. Daniels, of No. 82 Stewart avenue; William R., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Timms, of East Point; Mrs. Etta Ellis, of Lula, Fla.; Mrs. Ora McAdoo and Mrs. Mamie Patton, of San Francisco. Two boys remain at home, Royal, 20, and Ernest, 18 years. Casey returned to Atlanta last Christmas after having been with his sister in San Francisco for three years.

Lads Worked Together.

Jerry Moles is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles; a sister, Elsie, 13 months old, and a brother, Bruce, who is 17. Jerry's father is employed at the Atlanta Woolen Mill.

Both boys worked at the Boston Brady Machine Works.

A double funeral for the two boys will be held at Union Tabernacle, in McDaniel street, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Interment will be at Westview.

BOY-DYNAMITE—FUNERAL.

LEBANON, KY., July 21.—Twelve-year-old Edward England amused himself to-day throwing rocks into a quarry. One struck a dynamite cap, which exploded and killed the boy.

ANSLEY PARK TO PROTEST DELAY ON STREETS

Citizens Will Demand That Paving Provided for Seven Months Ago Be Done at Once.

With almost seven months of the year gone and no street work done in Ansley Park, members of the Ansley Park Association, made up of residents and property owners of that section, are planning to make a protest to the City Council.

Many of the streets in that section practically are impassable. Though the avenues are lined with beautiful homes surrounded by well-kept lawns, the streets are cut into ruts and holes worse than any country roads. Neither the city nor the country has done any work to speak of in Ansley Park since it was incorporated.

As an aid toward a solution of the problem, The Georgian has made an investigation of the conditions from the city officials' viewpoint.

Owners to Pay Two-Thirds.

When the January budget was made up $19,931.25 was provided for repaving Peachtree circle from Fifteenth street to Prado, the property owners to pay $13,287.50 of the amount and the city to pay $6,643.75.

From the streets ordinary fund the Eighth Ward got $5,950, from the rock and chert fund $2,150 and from the chert repair fund $600.

From this appropriation only one block of street has been paved, Lombardy street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Not even a pick has been stuck in any other part of the park, and there have been seven months of the finest working weather the city construction department has ever known.

Although the property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost of the paving of Peachtree circle they have been tabooed on this street for more than a year.

Nothing Done on S. Prado.

While the residents have borne the condition with the patience of Job they declare they will not remain quiet any longer.

From the general fund $4,769 has been set aside for paving South Prado from Piedmont avenue to Prado. This is a favorite drive for autoists. It winds around with the beauty of a mountain pass. Attractive homes are built up along it. But it is worn full of deep holes and ridges, and though the money for its repair has been available since the first of the year no contract has been let—not even have bids been asked for.

The general funds are supposed to provide for repairs of streets. Repairs have been unknown to Ansley Park.

Chairman Orville H. Hall, of the Council Streets Committee, said Monday morning that the reason for this condition was that the city forces had been engaged in other sections.

Beaten by "Wire Pulling."

His statement would indicate that the Eighth Ward representatives had been completely outdone in the "wire pulling" contest that goes on between Councilmen over street work.

W. A. Hansel, Assistant Chief of Construction, said the contract had been let for "dolarway" paving on Peachtree circle, but that the contractor also was repaving Central avenue, and that he would have to finish that before going to Peachtree circle. He said he expected Central avenue to be finished in about ten days.

As to South Prado, he said a new process of bitulithic macadam would be tried there, but that they were waiting to see how the same sort of paving laid on Gordon street turned out before putting it down on South Prado.

Members of the Ansley Park Association are dissatisfied. They can not understand why they have not had some street work done this year.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Good Forsyth Bill.

John F. Conroy and his diving models; the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Deiro, the famous accordionist; George Auger and company; Smith, Cook and Marie Branden; Shriner and Richards; the Be Anos.

That is the bill of vaudeville that is to be served at the Forsyth matinee and night all of this week. It is a wonderful combination of talent, one of the best groups of high-grade Keith vaudeville acts that have been assembled in Atlanta. Conroy and his models present an act that is declared to be the strongest drawing card in modern vaudeville. It is made up of a famous life-saver and two pretty girls who are expert in swimming and diving. A great pool tank is used and the stage setting is one of the handsomest that has been presented on any stage.

Tabloid at Bijou.

The Bijou is proving the popularity of musical comedy these days in the packed houses that have greeted every tabloid show of thes eason. The little Marietta street house is perfectly ventilated, cooled by the latest devices, and kept at a temperature that is a positive relief from the heat of the crowded pavements outside. For the week beginnig this afternoon the attraction will be "Good Morning, Judge," said to be the funniest tabloid on the circuit. The orignal methods of a rich brewer, who as Mayor is forced to act as judge of the municipal court, provoke mirth of the hilarious kind.

There will be the usual performances during the week, daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

"Les Miserables."

Realizing that there is a spirited demand on the part of the public for high-class photodramas Jake Wells has been devoting several months to preparations for presenting in the South the masterpieces of motography. He has just completed arrangements to present at the Grand this week the most magnificent product of kinemotography, Victor Hugo's immortal romance, "Les Miserables," in nine reels. This production, which cost over $100,000, was made in Paris and in the French countryside showing the actual scenes portrayed by the great master. The principal roles were enacted by the principal players of Paris.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

Sweethearts Visit Soldiers of Second At St. Simons Camp

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 21.—Sunday was a gala day for the Second Georgia Regiment, excursions bringing wives, sweethearts and friends of the men and officers from all over Middle Georgia. The surf was the chief attraction until the big dress parade in the afternoon. It was the best review so far held and was witnesesd by magnificent crowds.

Drills are being held in combat formations to-day leading up to the hike, bivouac and battle of Friday. The men will leave Thursday in heavy marching order prepared to cook their own meals, sleep in pup tents and begin the big battle before day Friday.

Fair Smokers May Puff in Buffet Cars

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women on transcontinental trains may smoke in the buffet car. The precedent was set by Miss Hester McKay, who said her father was a Chicago manufacturer. DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of Carrollton, was arrested Monday morning and placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. He is charged with registering as man and wife at the Hotel Scoville, on Mitchell street, with Miss Effie McColman, who is held as a witness in the case. The trial will be held before Recorder Broyles Tuesday afternoon. The arrest was delayed until the physician had finished a difficult operation at a sanitarium.

According to the charges, Dr. Lewis arrived in Atlanta Monday morning with Miss McColman, registering at the Hotel Scoville with her as Dr. Lewis and wife.

This is denied by Dr. Lewis, who says someone, who evidently has it in for him, added the "and wife."

Dr. Lewis and the girl, who is only 19 years old, were arrested on information furnished to the police by an alleged friend of the couple, who saw them on the train Monday morning.

According to Dr. Lewis, the girl came to Atlanta with him to have some work done on her teeth. The girl says she came with the doctor with her parents' permission. The McColmans live in the country about ten miles from Carrollton.

HOUSE ASKED TO INCREASE LIST OF PENSIONS

Another Measure Bars Commercial Discrimination by Unfair Price Cuts.

Another bill introduced by Senator Searcy provides for an amendment to the code of 1910 so as to allow the transportation of negro prisoners in charge of deputy sheriffs in the white cars or compartments of railroad cars. Sheriffs and deputies say they are subject to riot when carrying negro prisoners in negro compartments.

A resolution providing for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator Bacon in joint session of the House and Senate Tuesday at noon was adopted by the Senate.

Monday marked the turning into the last half of the present session of the Legislature and was featured by the House transacting the smallest amount of work of any day of the 25 whic hhave passed.

Reconsideration of House Resolution, No. 56, which refers to the appointment of a commission to investigate the complaint of Georgia farmers against the damage to their crops by fumes from copper plants in Ducktown, Tenn., was asked by Representative Corn, and the session was extended ten minutes to accommodate him. His motion was lost by a heavy vote.

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fish and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

GARRISON AT GALVESTON.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 21.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and Major General Leonard Wood to-day inspected Fort Crockett and later went to Texas City, where a review of the entire second division took place.

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

VIADUCT COMFORT BUILDING URGED

Park Board Member Receives Postals From Leading Citizens Pledging Support.

Thousands of Atlantans have joined in the demand for a public comfort building over Wall street, with main entrance from the Whitehall viaduct.

L. C. Green, member of the Park Board from the Fourth Ward, who started the movement, has received thousands of postal cards indorsing the movement and pledging support. These cards are from every class, and in the number are the leading citizens of Atlanta. Following are extracts from the postals received:

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox—I am heartily in favor of the movement to have the city erect a public comfort building.

V. H. Kriegshaber—It is a good thing. Push it along to completion.

L. J. Daniel—Yes, if on Whitehall viaduct extending out over Wall street opposite the Peters Building, entrance from viaduct. Under this viaduct or Pryor street underpass, no good.

E. A. Hartsock—I do most heartily indorse the movement, and I think it should go on the Whitehall viaduct, something like the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad office.

TIE TARIFF VOTE IN THE SENATE IMMINENT

Chamberlain's Decision to Vote Independent of Party Lines Imperils Passage of Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truth-light."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

DR. RIDLEY WINS CONVERTS.

There were eight professions of faith and five additions to the Central Baptist Church membership Sunday morning following a sermon by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley on "The Gospel as an Antidote for Sin."

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused to-day to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

Dogs Have Valet, Fan, Bath, Room and Bed

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishmen. bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

150 Hours' Sleep Refreshes Woman

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

"I have been with the Southern Business College for more than four years as lecturer and representative," said Professor Thomas L. Bryan to-day, "and, although I have been a preacher of the gospel for many years, I can say that there is no work more religious nor more important than that of training our young men and young women for business positions—giving them an earning capacity which will acquire for them independence through life.

"I have succeeded in arranging with the Southern to put on the foregoing midsummer special advertising proposition, which will be hailed with delight by the young people of the South.

"Phone, call or write and I will call upon you and give full information.

"Checks for Scholarships may be mailed from out-of-town purchasers and Scholarships will be forwarded to them immediately. The Scholarships will be good for entrance at any future time; therefore, if you wish to enter in August or September, or later, buy Scholarship now and save the big difference in cost.

"Nearly 50 pupils enter the Southern every month at the regular rates. These 50 half-priced Scholarships will, therefore, last only a few days. You will have to act at once.

"Remember, the two $55 Courses for the price of one until 50 Scholarships are sold."

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Pral Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prali, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgariah delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

The committee on arrangements will present a program at Taft Hall on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, when the woman suffrage issue will be discussed.

The meeting will be called to order and Dr. Percy J. Starnes will render a program of popular airs on the echo organ. As Dr. Starnes, one of the foremost organists in the world, is soon to leave Atlanta, and as the echo organ has never been heard before on a strictly public occasion, this will be a real treat. At 8:15 o'clock the speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Peel and will include, among many others, Mr. J. J. Spalding, Dr. Hughlett, R. L. Hope, Frank Rice, J. R. Smith, R. A. Broyles, E. R. FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have devoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germar wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn.
"'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly.
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well, what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"N.," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonstrations that one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslick lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the hand, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

: Our : Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many there are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these heads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

By Nell Brinkley

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious. I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 30 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter, grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me moniee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close.

"And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

• • •

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

• • •

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

FORBES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

CHICAGO, July 21.—Harry Forbes, once bantamweight champion of the world, would reenter the boxing game. He is stirred to activity by seeing some of the present day performers in action, believing that he is easily better than most of them in this section of the country.

The Fox River Club of Aurora, of which Art Reid is matchmaker, is anxious to get Forbes into a contest and there is a chance that they will stage him with Jimmy Walsh, the English bantam star now in this city, within a short time.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Walter Johnson, Bob Ainsmith, John Henry and Frank Laporte, of the Washington Baseball Club, were caught in the undertow while bathing at the Chicago Beach Hotel. Prompt work by life guards saved them from being carried out into the lake.

Gedeon, another player on the team, was washed against a post by a wave, and was rescued unconscious by life guards.

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson. In the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle, Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the loser has a handicap of 1. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate slow-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a gallant game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winner of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. Thornton, a few years ago a twirler for the Chicago National League Club, las tnight was placed in the padded cell of the county jail at Everett to be held for examination by the County sanity board. While pitching for Chicago he was struck on the head by a batted ball. He has never been quite sane since.

BOBBY WAUGH PUTS OUT REDMOND IN TEN ROUNDS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., July 21.—Bobby Waugh received a knockout decision over Jack Redmond, of Milwaukee, in the tenth round here yesterday when the latter's seconds threw a sponge into the ring after Redmond was helpless and stood with his hands at his side in the middle of the ring.

Crackers Open in Memphis To-day

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here, which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough battles.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

• • •

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

• • •

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Doolin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zeider was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

• • •

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

• • •

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of 'high-speed' oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwarthz.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there.

* * *

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fall in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

* * *

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

* * *

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

* * *

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

COBB WANTS TO QUIT DETROIT; LIKES BOSTON

BOSTON, July 21.—A Boston sporting writer is authority today for the following:

"Ty Cobb is anxious to get away from the Detroit Tigers, and he does not care who knows it. Also the mighty Tyrus would like very much to play here in Boston, but frankly admits he can not see how the Red Sox would want to give up their Tris Speaker.

"These statements are from Cobb himself, and come in a letter I received this morning from the Georgia Peach, in which he touched at some length upon the story so widely circulated last week to the effect that there was a Speaker-for-Cobb trade on, a story that President McAleer denied most emphatically. Cobb declares he has always liked Boston. 'The fans there always seem so fair,' he writes, and adds that he would like a place in the Red Sox batting order.

"Tyrus significantly says: 'There are two other American League cities in which I would like to play. I would welcome a change.'"

SWIMMER IS BLINDED BY WAVES IN LONG STRUGGLE

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Eliensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Eliensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Eliensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

COTTON DROPS ON COOLER WEATHER

Texas Showers and Low Cables Promote General Selling. Marked Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 4 to 12 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York; July, 12.16; August, 12.05; October, 11.53; Januar, 11.37.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans; July, 12.35; August, 11.97; October, 11.54; January, 11.54.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Our forecast of cooler weather over Sunday was entirely fulfilled. Records this morning show the heat spell completely broken and good rains fell in Arkansas, Oklahoma, parts of the lower Central States and generally in the eastern half of the Atlantics. Lighter showers, with some good rains, fell in North and East Texas.

Liverpool writes: "A large crop has been planted in Egypt; progress so far good and dependent only on the weather to materialize." Political news continues unfavorable. London says: "Complete collapse of authority by the powers is claimed."

First trades here were at a decline of 6 points and the market was quiet around opening figures all the morning. New York wires show a disposition in favor of the market on the ground that Texas had no general rains. But the small stock there and the firm hold by the spot houses on the near position is the main reason for the respect paid to the bull side.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market. They are ordering week by week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and fluting of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and promises to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

GENERAL BUYING PUTS STOCKS UP

Improved Metal Trade and Investment Demand Causes Increased Activity.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅞ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady.

Increased strength and activity developed soon after the, opening and throughout the forenoon numerous issues showed gains from 1 to 2 points. The heaviest trading was in Union Pacific and Steel, London being an important factor in all trading. Canadian moved up ⅞ and a gain of 1 point was made in Third avenue. Steel advanced ¾. Call money loaned at 2½.

Aggressive buying gave a strong tone to the market in the afternoon. The buying was based to some extent on cables asserting that the establishment of peace in the Balkans was near at hand. Further advances were made in Amalgamated, Utah and Chino Copper, and nearly all the railroads and industriais late in the afternoon rose to new high figures for the day.

The market closed strong. Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Wheat—No. 2 red	84@85
Corn—No. 2	66
Oats—No. 2	39@40

CHICAGO, July 21.—Corn was the leader in speculation to-day, as it gained 1⅛@1¼ cent on buying credited to the countri, which was brought about by the continued dry weather throughout the belt.

Wheat gained ⅛@⅞ and oats gained ⅜@½. The strength in corn held the other cereals and kept them from declining. There was a great deal of black rust talk, but the best authorities in the spring wheat country say there is no black rust at the moment and that with cool weather it is not likely to make its appearance. The visible supply of wheat increased 433,000 bushels for the past week; the first increase in many moons. Corn decreased 1,607,000 bushels and oats increased 204,000 bushels. Cash transactions in grain at Chicago were 275,000 bushels wheat and 100,000 bushels each of corn and oats.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to inauce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate circles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 54 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin, Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,
For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

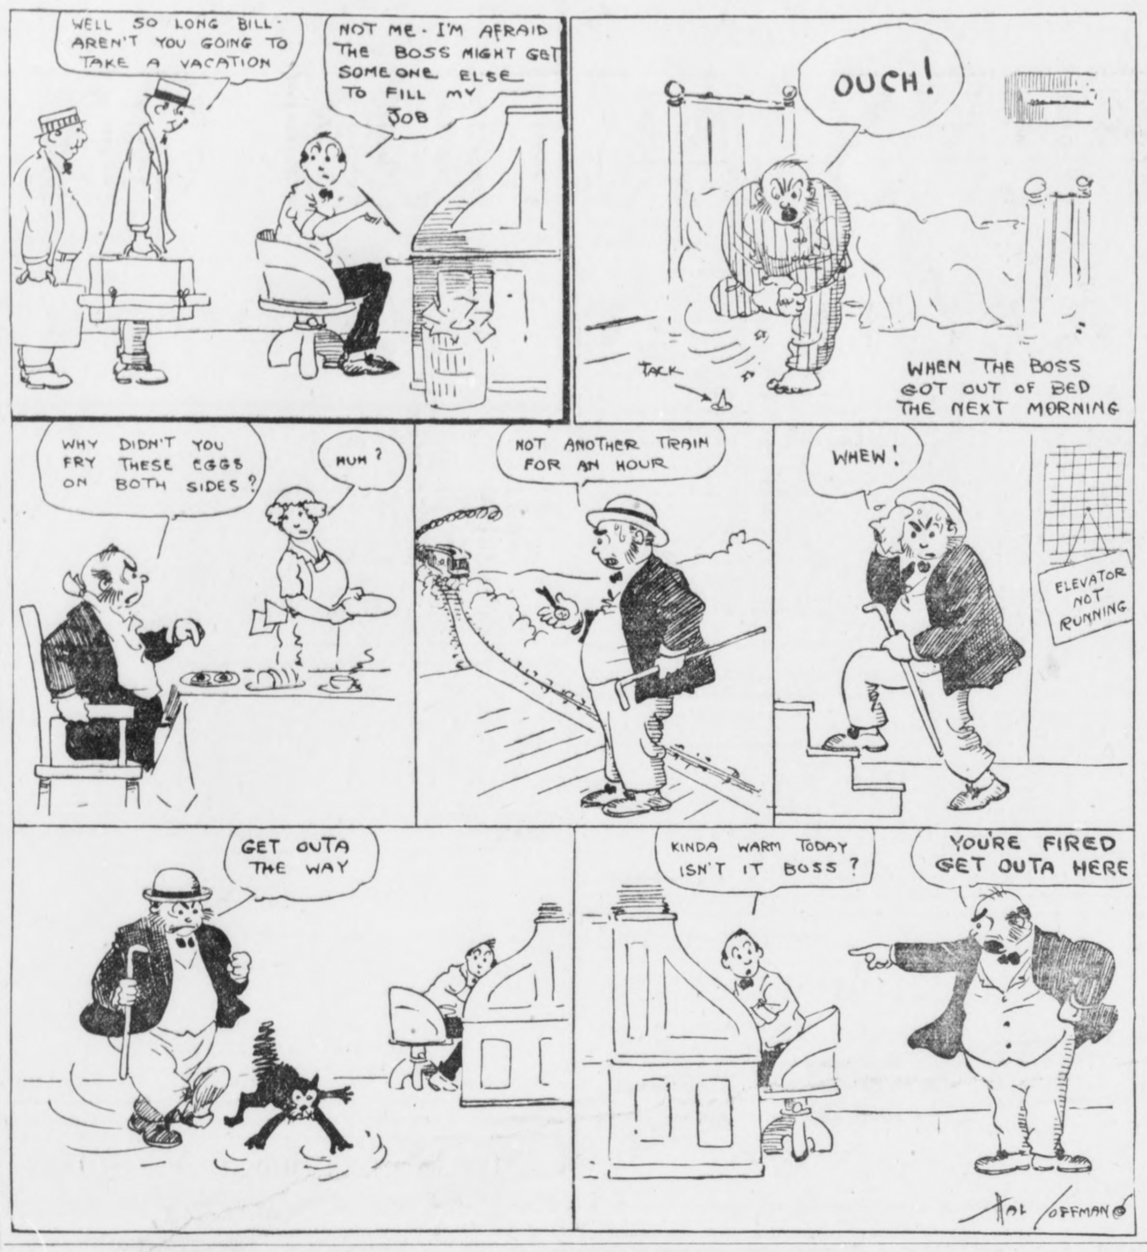

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

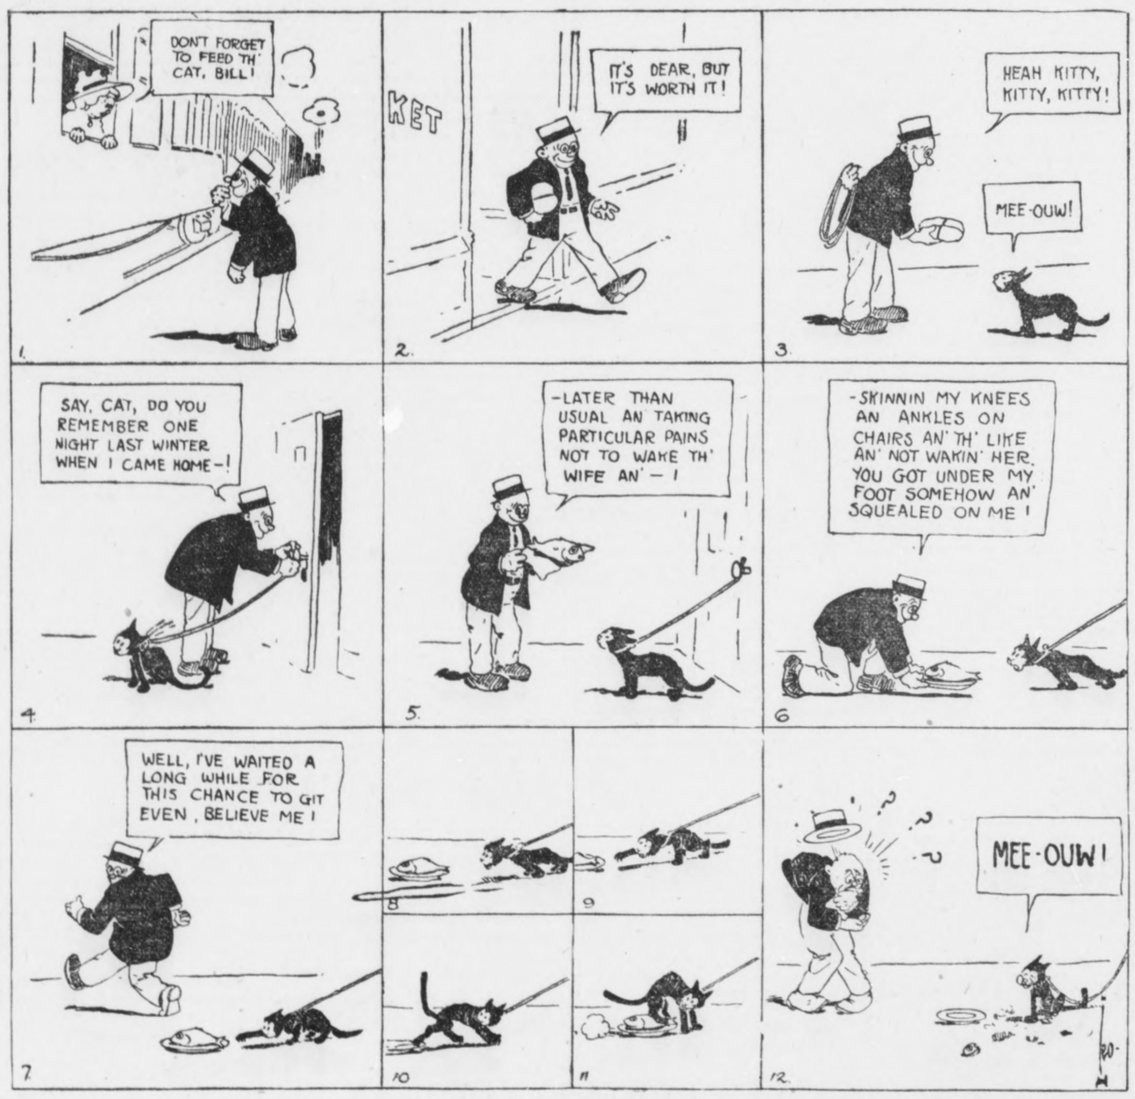

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a [illegible] that hygienic marriage would marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Knowledge

Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

JURY DEFERS ACTION ON CONLEY

U. S. Will Refuse to Recognize Huerta

END IS SEEN OF MEXICO REGIME

Will Not Last Year Out, President Says—Stronger Successor Is Hoped For.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Mexico to Grant Free Land to 50,000 Japanese.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—A note granting concessions to 50,000 Japanese for free lands in the State of Morelos will be sent to the Mikado of Japan in a few days.

LATEST NEWS

WASHINGTON, July 21.—War Department officials declared to-day that if Brigadier General R. K. Evans, in command of the Department of the Gulf, at Atlanta, Ga., has stated publicly that the United States will be compelled to intervene in Mexico, he will be given a sharp reprimand by the Secretary of War. It is an infraction of the rules of the War Department for any army officer to discuss military or political questions for publication.

Members of the City Council rode rough-shod Mayor Woodward Monday afternoon when by a vote of 18 to 7 they vetoed his measure providing for the consolidation of the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office, and by a 15 to 2 vote setting aside the resolution making an appropriation for an option on the $100,000 electric plant.

Dr. W. M. Lewis, of Carrollton, was bound over to the Grand Jury under $1,000 bond by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon, charged with registering at the Hotel Scoville with Miss Effie McCalmon, also of Carrollton, as his wife. The girl testified that this was the third time she had made the trip to Atlanta with Dr. Lewis. He denied having improper relations with her. Judge Broyles reprimanded him for the statement that he had registered as man and wife only to protect the girl. Miss McCalmon was ordered held until her father could be communicated with. Lewis is married and has two children. He expects to make bond this afternoon. He was placed under arrest Monday morning at a local sanitarium just after completing an operation.

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—With four wounded Chinamen imprisoned in her hold, the steamship Momus, from New York, came into port to-day with a tale of rioting during her passage.

As the vessel entered the Mississippi, 24 Chinamen coming to New Orleans as strikebreakers on the United Fruit Company wharves attempted to get out of the steerage onto the deck. They weer opposed by Second Officer Procter, who fired on them. Mrs. A. L. Shaw, a stewardess, battled with the Chinese and saved Procter's life.

TAMPA, July 21.—The Californian, a Leyland liner, reached port to-day with 26 refugees from Tampico, Mexico, aboard. Seven of them formerly resided at Grafton, W. Va., and represented a missionary society. They reported that notices had been posted on their property warning them that it was time to go.

BOSTON, July 21.—That he might not meet death as a felon, Cardenio F. King, the former financier and stock plunger, who is serving a fifteen-year sentence in State prison, to-day was pardoned by telephone by the executive council. Physicians say there is little hope of saving King, who underwent an operation to-day.

DETROIT, July 21.—Mrs. Agnew Youdock, 30, appeared at police headquarters in Saginaw today and confessed she had slain two of her babies, one in Flint and the other in Beaverton. She says she smothered them.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Attorney General Charles W. Cobb, assigned to the Department of the Interior, to-day tendered his resignation to President Wilson. He was appointed by President Taft May 15, 1911, from San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Cobb will take up the practice of law in New York City. At the request of the Secretary of the Interior Lane he will remain in office until September 15.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Revolutionary disturbances are rapidly spreading in China, according to advices to the State Department to-day. The dispatches confirm the reports that the Provincial Assembly of Kwang Tung has declared its independence. It is reported the Canton local government will send 15,000 troops against the Pekin Government. Fukien province also is reported to have seceded.

JACKSON, MISS., July 21.—Suit to dissolve the merger of the Illinois Central Railroad and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad will be filed at Clarksdale, Coahoma County, Tuesday. The bill has been drawn by the Attorney General of Mississippi and charges violation of the State anti-trust laws. Penalties approximating $50,000,000 will be asked. The petition as completed to-day also asks that the charter of the Yazoo Valley road be forfeited.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—After a conference with President Wilson to-day, Senator Owen, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, said that he believed the currency bill will be passed by both houses before the special session adjourns.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate. Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scared.

This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.

The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatly has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbied with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.

As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

Four Women Caught In Vice Net Escape From Martha Home

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a raid on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Doughetry, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Renfro, companion of A. N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Tripp's wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Strike on Healey Building Settled

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the building, and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

According to the terms of the agreement, only union men will be employed on the building. The strike was called because of the alleged failure of the painting and electrical contractors to employ union men exclusively.

BIRMINGHAM, July 21.—Mrs. Medora Newton, daughter of S. H. McMaster, formerly president of a Mobile bank, is in jail here charged with being an accessory to alleged burglaries by her husband, Louis Kittler, alias Newton. It is said that the young wife, dressed as a man, aided her husband.

Kittler had confessed to seventeen burglaries in and about Birmingham, but steadfastly declares his wife was not concerned in any of them.

As a girl Mrs. Newton was a member of one of Mobile's most exclusive society sets.

G. W. Sciple, Sr., Sued On Slander Charge

A suit for $25,000 damages was filed Monday against George W. Sciple, Sr., by Mrs. J. M. Hall, of No. 164 Ponce DeLeon avenue.

The suit is the outcome of a recent escapade of Mr. Sciple, in which he is alleged to have come to the home of Mrs. Hall in a state of intoxication and to have made defamatory remarks when he was refused permission to see Miss Myrtle Gilmer, a young woman rooming there. He pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct in the court of Recorder Broyles and paid a fine.

Mrs. Hall charges in her bill that Sciple slandered her and her home and that he placed her in a humiliating light before the public.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overridden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.

The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuence. Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accused of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Solicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Fighting Mincey.

According to Chief of Detectives Lanford, the mysterious trip of Conley from police headquarters with Detectives Starnes and Campbell ended at the corner of Electric avenue and Carter street, where W. H. Mincey, the insurance agent, declared in an affidavit the negro was sitting on the curb intoxicated the afternoon of the Phagan murder, and confessed that he had killed a girl that day.

Chief Lanford stated that an effort had been made by the detectives to have persons residing in that vicinity identify Conley as having seen him there at the time Mincey stated. However, no one had been able to do so. It was also declared that Conley had been taken around to a Butler street address where it is declared the negro was at the time Mincey swears the conversation on the curbing took place.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

5 Washington Ball Players Near Death

CHICAGO, July 21.—Ten drownings were on record to-day in Chicago and other cities of the Middle West. Five deaths were due to the dangerous undertow, running more treacherously yesterday than ever before in the memory of old Lake Michigan seamen.

Five members of the Washington American League baseball team were saved from drowning by life guards at the Chicago beach.

Policeman Slain by Cathedral Thieves

NEW YORK, July 21.—Before he could pull his gun on burglars who were robbing St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church in Brooklyn, Policeman John E. Cahill was shot and stabbed to death by the robbers early to-day.

His body was found in the rear of the church yard. The thieves escaped.

BIG STILL DESTROYED.

CLEVELAND.—Deputy Collector L. R. Cooley, accompanied by P. B. Bush and others, destroyed a 90-gallon illicit distillery and 1,500 gallons of beer on the property of H. A. Jarrard, in Shoal Creek district, White County. They found two storage houses containing meal, malt and blackstrap molasses.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of billiousness, and to entirely take the place of calome; without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Mulhall Says Foes 'Shadowed' Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

CASEY DANIELS.

COUNCIL ATTACKS TWO MORE VETOES

City Lawmakers Go After Record in Overriding Wishes of Mayor Woodward.

Members of Council at the meeting Monday afternoon will attempt to override two vetoes of Mayor Woodward. These will be their thirty-third and thirty-fourth efforts and they will set a record. During the former years of the Mayor's service his disapproval of councilmanic action was annulled 22 times by two-thirds votes of Council.

The first matter to come up will be the question of consolidating the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office. The Council resolution seeks to place Receiver Beauchamp under the Assessors. Mayor Woodward has the Receiver's side with the statement:

"About the only reason that I can see for consolidating these offices again is simply for the purpose of political patronage, a question that should not enter into this matter when the efficiency and the good of the city are taken into consideration."

Alderman James R. Nutting, author of the resolution, declares that the divided system has proved a failure, and blames it for the loss of almost $50,000 in revenue.

The other veto of the Mayor is on the resolution appropriating $5 for an option on the $100,000 electric plant feature of the new crematory. Mayor Woodward declares the whole proposition was knocked out by the Supreme Court and that he will not sign any check throwing away $5 of the city's money.

Alderman Nutting, Councilman Albert Thomson and others charge the Mayor's opposition is due to the fact that he is tied up with the Georgia Railway and Power Company interests.

DEATH ROBS GIRL OF MOTHER AND BOY 'PAL'

MARY CHESTINE.

JERRY MOLES.

Loses Her Best Loved Playmate When Lad and His Inseparable Chum Drown.

Sorrow, using death as its weapon, struck twice to the heart of 14-year-old Mary Chastine Sunday, and in so doing cast a shadow over the entire vicinity of her home at No. 33 Humphries street, for she was its sunshine.

In the double stroke the lives of both the mother of the girl, Mrs. Arie Chastine, and her best-loved playmate, Jerry Moles, 15 years old, who lived across the street, were snuffed out, the former after an operation and the boy from drowning in the Chattahoochee River.

And, as if not satisfied, the Reaper added a third to his toll from the neighborhood in taking the life of Casey Daniels, No. 71 Hightower street, 19 years old, also a friend of Mary, who drowned with Jerry.

Inquest Into Death Called.

An inquest into the death of the boys was called by the Coroner.

The two boys went fishing Saturday afternoon in the Chattahoochee River at the end of the Marietta road.

As Casey Daniels was leaving home his mother warned him not to venture in the water.

"Please don't go to the river," said Mrs. Daniels to her son. "Go to some creek and fish like good boys. I am so afraid something will happen and that you both will drown."

Bodies Caught on Fishline.

When the boys did not return at nightfall their parents became alarmed and a party with lanterns searched the river bank. Sunday the search was renewed by about 100 persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon G. W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, located a fishing line hung across the river.

He climbed out of the boat in which he sat and found a ghastly burden caught in the hooks below. The depth of the water at this point is about fifteen feet. The bodies of the two boys were lying on the river bottom with their arms entwined.

They were clad only in undershirt and trousers. The remainder of their apparel was found later under bushes at the opposite side of the stream.

Both Poor Swimmers.

N. L. Moles, father of Jerry, thinks both boys were in bathing, that one of them got beyond his depth, and that the other boy tried to rescue his friend. Both were poor swimmers.

Casey Daniels was a member of the Junior Order of Mechanics. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters. All of the sisters and two of the brothers are married. They are M. L. Daniels, of No. 82 Stewart avenue; William R., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Timms, of East Point; Mrs. Etta Ellis, of Lula, Fla.; Mrs. Ora McAdoo and Mrs. Mamie Patton, of San Francisco. Two boys remain at home, Royal, 20, and Ernest, 18 years. Casey returned to Atlanta last Christmas after having been with his sister in San Francisco for three years.

Lads Worked Together.

Jerry Moles is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles; a sister, Elsie, 13 months old, and a brother, Bruce, who is 17. Jerry's father is employed at the Atlanta Woolen Mill.

Both boys worked at the Boston Brady Machine Works.

A double funeral for the two boys will be held at Union Tabernacle, in McDaniel street, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Interment will be at Westview.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

BOY-DYNAMITE—FUNERAL.

LEBANON, KY., July 21.—Twelve-year-old Edward England amused himself to-day throwing rocks into a quarry. One struck a dynamite cap, which exploded and killed the boy.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Good Forsyth Bill.

John F. Conroy and his diving models; the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Deiro, the famous accordionist; George Auger and company; Smith, Cook and Marie Branden; Shriner and Richards; the Be Anos.

That is the bill of vaudeville that is to be served at the Forsyth matinee and night all of this week. It is a wonderful combination of talent, one of the best groups of high-grade Keith vaudeville acts that have been assembled in Atlanta. Conroy and his models present an act that is declared to be the strongest drawing card in modern vaudeville. It is made up of a famous life-saver and two pretty girls who are expert in swimming and diving. A great pool tank is used and the stage setting is one of the handsomest that has been presented on any stage.

Tabloid at Bijou.

The Bijou is proving the popularity of musical comedy these days in the packed houses that have greeted every tabloid show of thes eason. The little Marietta street house is perfectly ventilated, cooled by the latest devices, and kept at a temperature that is a positive relief from the heat of the crowded pavements outside. For the week beginnig this afternoon the attraction will be "Good Morning, Judge," said to be the funniest tabloid on the circuit. The orignal methods of a rich brewer, who as Mayor is forced to act as judge of the municipal court, provoke mirth of the hilarious kind.

There will be the usual performances during the week, daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

"Les Miserables."

Realizing that there is a spirited demand on the part of the public for high-class photodramas Jake Wells has been devoting several months to preparations for presenting in the South the masterpieces of motography. He has just completed arrangements to present at the Grand this week the most magnificent product of kinemotography, Victor Hugo's immortal romance, "Les Miserables," in nine reels. This production, which cost over $100,000, was made in Paris and in the French countryside showing the actual scenes portrayed by the great master. The principal roles were enacted by the principal players of Paris.

ANSLEY PARK TO PROTEST DELAY ON STREETS

Citizens Will Demand That Paving Provided for Seven Months Ago Be Done at Once.

With almost seven months of the year gone and no street work done in Ansley Park, members of the Ansley Park Association, made up of residents and property owners of that section, are planning to make a protest to the City Council.

Many of the streets in that section practically are impassable. Though the avenues are lined with beautiful homes surrounded by well-kept lawns, the streets are cut into ruts and holes worse than any country roads. Neither the city nor the country has done any work to speak of in Ansley Park since it was incorporated.

As an aid toward a solution of the problem, The Georgian has made an investigation of the conditions from the city officials' viewpoint.

Owners to Pay Two-Thirds.

When the January budget was made up $19,931.25 was provided for repaving Peachtree circle from Fifteenth street to Prado, the property owners to pay $13,287.50 of the amount and the city to pay $6,643.75

From the streets ordinary fund the Eighth Ward got $5,950, from the rock and chert fund $2,150 and from the chert repair fund $600.

From this appropriation only one block of street has been paved, Lombardy street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Not even a pick has been stuck in any other part of the park, and there have been seven months of the finest working weather the city construction department has ever known.

Although the property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost of the paving of Peachtree circle they have been tabooed on this street for more than a year.

Nothing Done on S. Prado.

While the residents have borne the condition with the patience of Job they declare they will not remain quiet any longer.

From the general fund $4,769 has been set aside for paving South Prado from Piedmont avenue to Prado. This is a favorite drive for autoists. It winds around with the beauty of a mountain pass. Attractive homes are built up along it. But it is worn full of deep holes and ridges, and though the money for its repair has been available since the first of the year no contract has been let—not even have bids been asked for.

The general funds are supposed to provide for repairs of streets. Repairs have been unknown to Ansley Park.

Chairman Orville H. Hall, of the Council Streets Committee, said Monday morning that the reason for this condition was that the city forces had been engaged in other sections.

Beaten by "Wire Pulling."

His statement would indicate that the Eighth Ward representatives had been completely outdone in the "wire pulling" contest that goes on between Councilmen over street work.

W. A. Hansel, Assistant Chief of Construction, said the contract had been let for "dolarway" paving on Peachtree circle, but that the contractor also was repaving Central avenue, and that he would have to finish that before going to Peachtree circle. He said he expected Central avenue to be finished in about ten days.

As to South Prado, he said a new process of bitulithic macadam would be tried there, but that they were waiting to see how the same sort of paving laid on Gordon street turned out before putting it down on South Prado.

Members of the Ansley Park Association are dissatisfied. They can not understand why they have not had some street work done this year.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of Carrollton, was arrested Monday morning and placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. He is charged with registering as man and wife at the Hotel Scoville, on Mitchell street, with Miss Effie McColman, who is held as a witness in the case. The trial will be held before Recorder Broyles Tuesday afternoon. The arrest was delayed until the physician had finished a difficult operation at a sanitarium.

According to the charges, Dr. Lewis arrived in Atlanta Monday morning with Miss McColman, registering at the Hotel Scoville with her as Dr. Lewis and wife.

This is denied by Dr. Lewis, who says someone who evidently has it in for him, added the "and wife."

Dr. Lewis and the girl, who is only 19 years old, were arrested on information furnished to the police by an alleged friend of the couple, who saw them on the train Monday morning.

According to Dr. Lewis, the girl came to Atlanta with him to have some work done on her teeth. The girl says she came with the doctor with her parents' permission. The McColmans live in the country about ten miles from Carrollton.

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And, he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fsh and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

'TIGER' GETS FARM SENTENCE.

COLUMBUS.—Langdon Bell, frequent violator of the prohibition law in Columbus, has been sentenced by Judge Tigner, of City Court, to pay a fine of $250 or serve six months on the State farm. Officers, however, refuse to send Bell to the farm, as there is a similar charge pending against him in the Superior Court.

HOUSE'S INTEREST IN SUFFRAGE ON INCREASE--HERE'S THE REASON

Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, who has set the entire House a-flutter.

She's a suffragist and is winning favor for "the cause."

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

GARRISON AT GALVESTON.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 21.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and Major General Leonard Wood to-day inspected Fort Crockett and later went to Texas City, where a review of the entire second division took place.

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

VIADUCT COMFORT BUILDING URGED

Park Board Member Receives Postals From Leading Citizens Pledging Support.

Thousands of Atlantans have joined in the demand for a public comfort building over Wall street, with main entrance from the Whitehall viaduct.

L. C. Green, member of the Park Board from the Fourth Ward, who started the movement, has received thousands of postal cards indorsing the movement and pledging support. These cards are from every class, and in the number are the leading citizens of Atlanta. Following are extracts from the postals received:

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox—I am heartily in favor of the movement to have the city erect a public comfort building.

V. H. Kriegshaber—It is a good thing. Push it along to completion.

L. J. Daniel—Yes, if on Whitehall viaduct extending out over Wall street opposite the Peters Building, entrance from viaduct. Under this viaduct or Pryor street underpass, no good.

E. A. Hartsock—I do most heartily indorse the movement, and I think it should go on the Whitehall viaduct, something like the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad office.

TIE TARIFF VOTE IN THE SENATE IMMINENT

Chamberlain's Decision to Vote Independent of Party Lines Imperils Passage of Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truth-light."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

DR. RIDLEY WINS CONVERTS.

There were eight professions of faith and five additions to the Central Baptist Church membership Sunday morning following a sermon by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley on "The Gospel as an Antidote for Sin."

FATALLY HURT IN FIRE.

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 21.—One man was fatally injured and several slightly burned in a tenement house fire here to-day. The flames were controlled after heavy damage had been done.

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused today to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

Dogs Have Valet, Fan, Bath, Room and Bed

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishment bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected, nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature, and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

Suffrage Issue To Be Discussed.

The committee on arrangements will present a program at Taft Hall on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, when the woman suffrage issue will be discussed.

The meeting will be called to order and Dr. Percy J. Starnes will render a program of popular airs on the echo organ. As Dr. Starnes, one of the foremost organists in the world, is soon to leave Atlanta, and as the echo organ has never been heard before on a strictly public occasion, this will be a real treat. At 8:15 o'clock the speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Peel and will include, among many others, Mr. J. J. Spalding, Dr. Hughlett, R. L. Hope, Frank Rice, J. R. Smith, R. A. Broyles, E. R. The public is invited and assured of an interesting evening. No matter how people feel about it, the women believe that such a discussion at this time will be welcomed by all thinking people.

Cowles-Weisiger.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cowles announce the marriage of their daughter, Maury Lee, to Mr. Carroll Weisiger, of Louisville, Ky., the wedding taking place Saturday evening, July 19, at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on West Peachtree street, Rev. Richard Orme Flinn officiating.

Although the engagement of these young people was known to a number of friends, their wedding comes as a surprise to them as it took place much sooner than was expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Weisiger left for a trip to Richmond, after which they will make their home in Louisville.

For Miss Robbins

Among the parties this week for Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, who is visiting Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, was the box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon at which Miss Margaret Ashford entertained, complimenting also her guest, Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens.

FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:36 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

For $4.00, $5.00 & 6.00 Dresses

Girls' Princess Slips of white nainsooks and lingerie cloth, variously trimmed with Valenciennes and torchon laces and embroideries, are reduced in this fashion for to-morrow---

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected, nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

The Social World

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Each table was decorated in phlox, and after dinner those who did not care to dance enjoyed the refreshing breezes on the cool terrace, where garlands of Japanese lanterns and fairy lamps added to the beauty of the terrace.

Among those attending the dinner dance were General and Mrs. Robert K. Evans, Captain and Mrs. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. William Schroder, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips McDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Wheatley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeGive, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

Suffrage Issue To Be Discussed.

The committee on arrangements will present a program at Taft Hall on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, when the woman suffrage issue will be discussed.

The meeting will be called to order and Dr. Percy J. Starnes will render a program of popular airs on the echo organ. As Dr. Starnes, one of the foremost organists in the world, is soon to leave Atlanta, and as the echo organ has never been heard before on a strictly public occasion, this will be a real treat. At 8:15 o'clock the speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Peel and will include, among many others, Mr. J. J. Spalding, Dr. Hughlett, R. L. Hope, Frank Rice, J. R. Smith, R. A. Broyles, E. R. FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:36 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have devoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germanf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge, wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first-trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn,
"'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly,
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another,
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Winning a Welcome

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonthat one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslike lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the band, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand, and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

Our Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many there are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

By Nell Brinkley

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious, I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-regression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 30 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter, grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the 'customs of "Harge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close. "And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

* * *

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

* * *

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson. In the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle, Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the loser has a handicap of 4. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate show-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a good game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winner of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. Thornton, a few years ago a twirler for the Chicago National League Club, has might was placed in the padded cell of the county jail at Everett to be held for examination by the County sanity board. While pitching for Chicago he was struck on the head by a batted ball. He has never been quite sane since.

BOBBY WAUGH PUTS OUT REDMOND IN TEN ROUNDS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., July 21.—Bobby Waugh received a knockout decision over Jack Redmond, of Milwaukee, in the tenth round here yesterday when the latter's seconds threw a sponge into the ring after Redmond was helpless and stood with his hands at his side in the middle of the ring.

Crackers Open in Memphis To-day

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here, which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough battles.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

* * *

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

* * *

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their flat fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Doolin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zelder was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

* * *

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

* * *

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of 'high-speed' oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwarthz.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there

• • •

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fail in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

• • •

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

• • •

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

• • •

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchi and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

COBB WANTS TO QUIT DETROIT; LIKES BOSTON

BOSTON, July 21.—A Boston sporting writer is authority today for the following:

"Ty Cobb is anxious to get away from the Detroit Tigers, and he does not care who knows it. Also the mighty Tyrus would like very much to play here in Boston, but frankly admits he can not see how the Red Sox would want to give up their Tris Speaker.

"These statements are from Cobb himself, and come in a letter I received this morning from the Georgia Peach, in which he touched at some length upon the story so widely circulated last week to the effect that there was a Speaker-for-Cobb trade on, a story that President McAleer denied most emphatically. Cobb declares he has always liked Boston. 'The fans there always seem so fair,' he writes, and adds that he would like a place in the Red Sox batting order.

"Tyrus significantly says: 'There are two other American League cities in which I would like to play. I would welcome a change.'"

SWIMMER IS BLINDED BY WAVES IN LONG STRUGGLE

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Eliensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Eliensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Eliensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

COTTON DROPS ON COOLER WEATHER

Texas Showers and Low Cables Promote General Selling. Marked Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 4 to 12 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York; July, 12.16; August, 12.05; October, 11.53; Januar, 11.37.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.35; August, 11.97; October, 11.54; January, 11.54.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Our forecast of cooler weather over Sunday was entirely fulfilled. Records this morning show the heat spell completely broken and good rains fell in Arkansas, Oklahoma, parts of the lower Central States and generally in the eastern half of the Atlantics. Lighter showers, with some good rains, fell in North and East Texas.

Liverpool writes: "A large crop has been planted in Egypt; progress so far good and dependent only on the weather to materialize." Political news continues unfavorable. London says: "Complete collapse of authority by the powers is claimed."

First trades here were at a decline of 6 points and the market was quiet around opening figures all the morning. New York wires show a disposition in favor of the market on the ground that Texas had no general rains. But the small stock there and the firm hold by the spot houses on the near position is the main reason for the respect paid to the bull side.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market. They are ordering by the week to week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and fluting of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and promises to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

Clearings Gain, but Not to 1912 Level

GENERAL BUYING PUTS STOCKS UP

Improved Metal Trade and Investment Demand Causes Increased Activity.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅞ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady. Increased strength and activity developed soon after the opening and throughout the forenoon numerous issues showed gains from 1 to 2 points. The heaviest trading was in Union Pacific and Steel, London being an important factor in all trading. Canadian moved up ⅞ and a gain of 1 point was made in Third avenue. Steel advanced ¾.

Call money loaned at 2¼.

Aggressive buying gave a strong tone to the market in the afternoon. The buying was based to some extent on cables asserting that the establishment of peace in the Balkans was near at hand. Further advances were made in Amalgamated, Utah and Chino Copper, and nearly all the railroads and industrials late in the afternoon rose to new high figures for the day.

The market closed strong. Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Wheat—No. 2 red	84@85
Corn—No. 2	66
Oats—No. 2	39@40

CHICAGO, July 21.—Corn was the leader in speculation to-day, as it gained 1⅛@1¼ cent on buying credited to the countri, which was brought about by the continued dry weather throughout the belt.

Wheat was up ½@⅝ and oats gained ⅛@½. The strength in corn held the other cereals and kept them from declining. There was a great deal of black rust talk, but the best authorities in the spring wheat country say there is no black rust at the moment and that with cool weather it is not likely to make its appearance. The visible supply of wheat increased 433,000 bushels for the past week; the first increase in many moons. Corn decreased 1,607,000 bushels and oats increased 204,000 bushels. Cash transactions in grain at Chicago were 275,000 bushels wheat and 100,000 bushels each of corn and oats.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise Is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some regularly must be exercised to induce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate circles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 54 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin, Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

ANSLEY PARK HOME.

THIS IS a seven-room two-story house with very large sleeping porch. It has hardwood floors and steam heated. It is brand-new and was built for a home, but on account of sickness owner has to sell. It is located near car line and on good, large lot. This is a real bargain at $7,000, and on good terms. See us at once about this, as it will surely sell at this price and terms.

MARIETTA ST. STORE.

ONE-STORY BRICK STORE on lot 47 feet front, running through to railroad. This side of North avenue. Price, $125 per foot—$50 per foot less than adjoining property sold for. Owner needs money for other business.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Hentz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 30 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,

For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

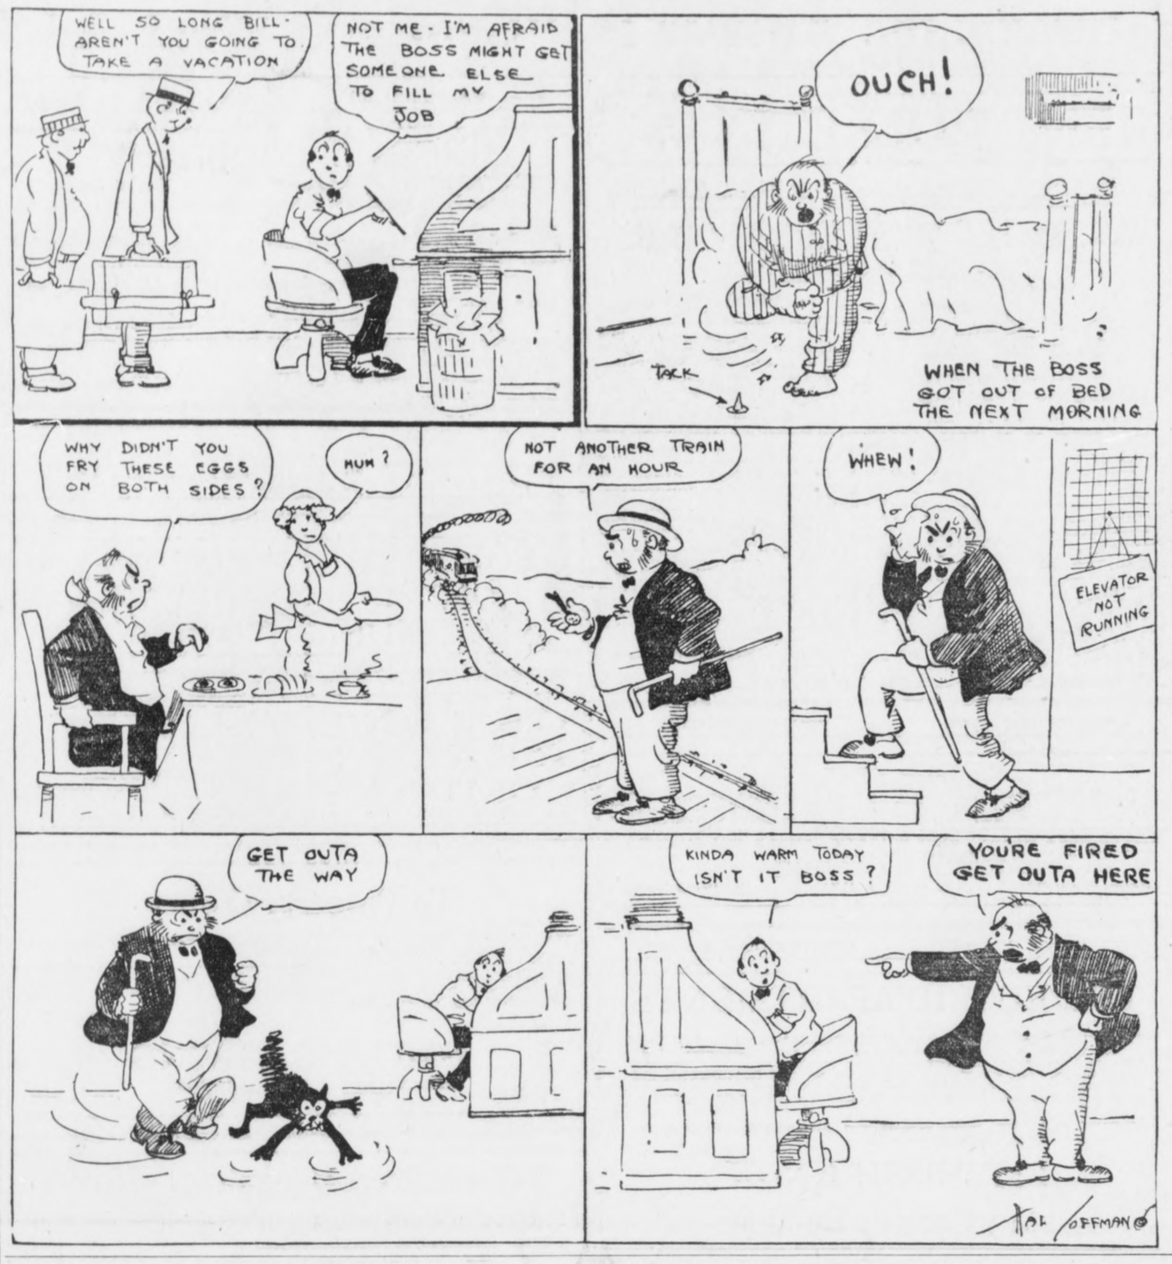

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

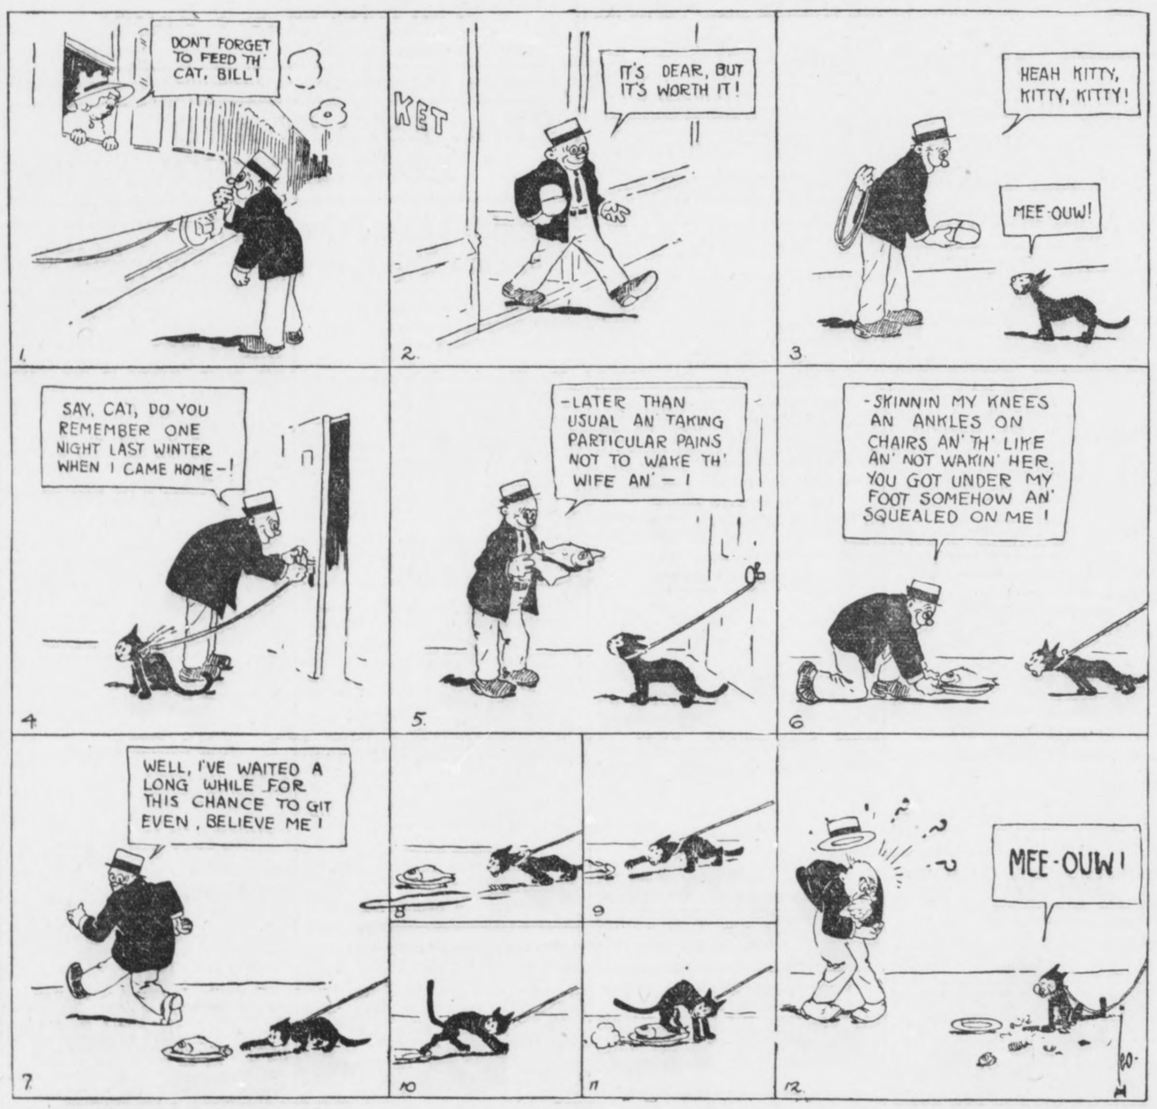

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Knowledge

Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

GRAND JURY DEFERS ACTION ON CONLEY

TALK OF POSTPONING FRANK TRIAL TILL FALL

MORE BLONDES THAN BRUNETTES ENTER SLOGAN BEAUTY CONTEST

Miss Luetta L. Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hart Porter, of No. 282 Crumley street, is the newest nominee in the "beauty button" contest. She is of the blonde type with golden brown hair and gray eyes.

An unusual commentary on the beauty contest is that more blondes than brunettes have been nominated. But the contest is not closed yet, and what the final result will be no one can tell. Also the brunettes who have been nominated are keeping well up with the blondes in votes.

A letter has come to the contest editor stating that photographs flatter some types of beauty while they do not do others justice.

That is true, but it depends on the particular photograph. That all the photographs so far published have made a good impression is shown by other letters of nomination, in which the writers state they are reluctant to enter their candidates after seeing so many pretty faces entered in the race.

Well, every one to his own taste. All readers of The Georgian and American still have the privilege of nominating and voting for whom they please. The votes will decide what girl's picture is to adorn the "500,000 Club" booster buttons.

Nominate your candidate and send in her photograph. Then get your friends to vote for her.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of Carrollton, was arrested Monday morning and placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. He is charged with registering as man and wife at the Hotel Scoville, on Mitchell street, with Miss Effie McColman, who is held as a witness in the case. The trial will be held before Recorder Broyles Tuesday afternoon. The arrest was delayed until the physician had finished a difficult operation at a sanitarium.

According to the charges, Dr. Lewis arrived in Atlanta Monday morning with Miss McColman, registering at the Hotel Scoville with her as Dr. Lewis and wife.

This is denied by Dr. Lewis, who says someone, who evidently has it in for him, added the "and wife."

Dr. Lewis and the girl, who is only 19 years old, were arrested on information furnished to the police by an alleged friend of the couple, who saw them on the train Monday morning.

According to Dr. Lewis, the girl came to Atlanta with him to have some work done on her teeth. The girl says she came with the doctor with her parents' permission. The McColmans live in the country about ten miles from Carrollton.

U. S. Will Refuse to Recognize Huerta

END IS SEEN OF MEXICO REGIME

Will Not Last Year Out, President Says—Stronger Successor Is Hoped For.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. it is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Mexico to Grant Free Land to 50,000 Japanese.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—A note granting concessions to 50,000 Japanese for free lands in the State of Morelos will be sent to the Mikado of Japan in a few days.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Mobile Society Girl Held as Accomplice Of Burglar Husband

BIRMINGHAM, July 21.—Mrs. Medora Newton, daughter of S. H. McMaster, formerly president of a Mobile bank, is in jail here charged with being an accessory to alleged burglaries by her husband, Louis Kittler, alias Newton. It is said that the young wife, dressed as a man, aided her husband.

Kittler had confessed to seventeen burglaries in and about Birmingham, but steadfastly declares his wife was not concerned in any of them.

As a girl Mrs. Newton was a member of one of Mobile's most exclusive society sets.

G. W. Sciple, Sr., Sued On Slander Charge

A suit for $25,000 damages was filed Monday against George W. Sciple, Sr., by Mrs. J. M. Hall, of No. 164 Ponce DeLeon avenue.

The suit is the outcome of a recent escapade of Mr. Sciple, in which he is alleged to have come to the hom of Mrs. Hall in a state of intoxication and to have made defamatory remarks when he was refused permission to see Miss Myrtle Gilmer, a young woman rooming there. He pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct in the court of Recorder Broyles and paid a fine.

Mrs. Hall charges in her bill that Sciple slandered her and her home and that he placed her in a humiliating light before the public.

Requisition Clerk to Wed Mayor's Typist

Comptroller Goldsmith's office in the City Hall has been the scene of a happy romance. While the Mayor and Council and Recorder have raged at each other, the requisition clerk and the stenographer have been thinking of gentler things; and now this engagement is announced:

"Mr. and Mrs. David Lafayette Thomas announce the engagement of their daughter, Eva Matilda, to Mr. William Evans Chambers, the ceremony to take place August 16."

Joe Hill Hall Urged For Mayor of Macon

MACON, July 21.—The local political situation was complicated to-day by the announcement from Joe Hill Hall that he is seriously considering the idea of running for Mayor, having been urged so to do by friends.

It is regarded as certain by those in touch with Mr. Hall that he will make a definite announcement of his candidacy within the next ten days.

ATHENS CONCERN BANKRUPT.

ATHENS, July 21.—The farm implement company of G. F. O'Kelly has gone into voluntary bankruptcy after a year in business. The liabilities are $8,000 with $4,000 assets. Most of the creditors are out-of-town firms. Charles E. Smith has been appointed receiver.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate. Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scared.

This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.

The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatly has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbied with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.

As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

Sweethearts Visit Soldiers of Second At St. Simons Camp

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 21.—Sunday was a gala day for the Second Georgia Regiment, excursions bringing wives, sweethearts and friends of the men and officers from all over Middle Georgia. All day the camp was alive with visitors interested in seeing how the men lived. Many dinner parties were given in camp during the day. The surf was the chief attraction until the big dress parade in the afternoon. It was the best review so far held and was witnesesd by magnificent crowds.

Drills are being held in combat formations to-day leading up to the hike, bivouac and battle of Friday. The men will leave Thursday in heavy marching order prepared to cook their own meals, sleep in pup tents and begin the big battle before day Friday.

To-day's officer of the day was E. W. Beck. The officer of the guard was J. H. Nutt. Both are of Griffin.

Four Women Caught In Vice Net Escape From Martha Home

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a raid on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Doughetry, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Renfro, companion of A. N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Tripp'e wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Strike on Healey Building Settled

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the building, and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

According to the terms of the agreement, only union men will be employed on the building. The strike was called because of the alleged failure of the painting and electrical contractors to employ union men exclusively.

Shoots Husband Who Stayed Out Too Late

SAVANNAH, July 21.—As a result of a quarrel with his wife, Joe Dare is in a critical condition in a hospital, with a bullet wound in his left breast, just over the heart, and his wife is in police station a nervous wreck from her experience. Both admit the wife fired the shot. Dare has been operated on and the bullet extracted, but his condition is so serious that his post-mortem statement has been taken.

The trouble between the couple seems to have followed the very late arrival of Dare at home.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overridden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.

The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuence. Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accuser of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Silicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Fighting Mincey.

According to Chief of Detectives Lanford, the mysterious trip of Conley from police headquarters with Detectives Starnes and Campbell ended at the corner of Electric avenue and Carter street, where W. H. Mincey, the insurance agent, declared in an affidavit the negro was sitting on the curb intoxicated the afternoon of the Phagan murder, and confessed that he had killed a girl that day.

Chief Lanford stated that an effort had been made by the detectives to have persons residing in that vicinity identify Conley as having seen him there at the time Mincey stated. However, no one had been able to do so. It was also declared that Conley had been taken around to a Butler street address where it is declared the negro was at the time Mincey swears the conversation on the curbing took place.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of biliousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Mulhall Says Foes 'Shadowed' Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

COUNCIL ATTACKS TWO MORE VETOES

City Lawmakers Go After Record in Overriding Wishes of Mayor Woodward.

Members of Council at the meeting Monday afternoo... will attempt to override two vetoes of Mayor Woodward. These will be their thirty-third and thirty-fourth efforts and they will set a record. During the former years of the Mayor's service his disapproval of councilmanic action was annulled 22 times by two-thirds votes of Council.

The first matter to come up will be the question of consolidating the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office. The Council resolution seeks to place Receiver Beauchamp under the Assessors. Mayor Woodward has the Receiver's side with the statement:

"About the only reason that I can see for consolidating these offices again is simply for the purpose of political patronage, a question that should not enter into this matter when the efficiency and the good of the city are taken into consideration."

Alderman James R. Nutting, author of the resolution, declares that the divided system has proved a failure, and blames it for the loss of almost $50,000 in revenue.

The other veto of the Mayor is on the resolution appropriating $5 for an option on the $100,000 electric plant feature of the new crematory. Mayor Woodward declares the whole proposition was knocked out by the Supreme Court and that he will not sign any check throwing away $5 of the city's money.

Alderman Nutting, Councilman Albert Thomson and others charge the Mayor's opposition is due to the fact that he is tied up with the Georgia Railway and Power Company interests.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

BOY-DYNAMITE—FUNERAL.

LEBANON, KY., July 21.—Twelve-year-old Edward England amused himself to-day throwing rocks into a quarry. One struck a dynamite cap, which exploded and killed the boy.

Loses Her Best Loved Playmate When Lad and His Inseparable Chum Drown.

Sorrow, using death as its weapon, struck twice to the heart of 14-year-old Mary Chastine Sunday, and in so doing cast a shadow over the entire vicinity of her home at No. 33 Humphries street, for she was its sunshine.

In the double stroke the lives of both the mother of the girl, Mrs. Arie Chastine, and her best-loved playmate, Jerry Moles, 15 years old, who lived across the street, were snuffed out, the former after an operation and the boy from drowning in the Chattahoochee River.

And, as if not satisfied, the Reaper added a third to his toll from the neighborhood in taking the life of Casey Daniels, No. 71 Hightower street, 15 years old, also a friend of Mary, who drowned with Jerry.

Inquest Into Death Called.

An inquest into the death of the boys was called by the Coroner.

The two boys went fishing Saturday afternoon in the Chattahoochee River at the end of the Marietta road.

As Casey Daniels was leaving home his mother warned him not to venture in the water.

"Please don't go to the river," said Mrs. Daniels to her son. "Go to some creek and fish like good boys. I am so afraid something will happen and that you both will drown."

Bodies Caught on Fishline.

When the boys did not return at nightfall their parents became alarmed and a party with lanterns searched the river bank. Sunday the search was renewed by about 100 persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon G. W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, located a fishing line hung across the river.

He climbed out of the boat in which he sat and found a ghastly burden caught in the hooks below. The depth of the water at this point is about fifteen feet. The bodies of the two boys were lying on the river bottom with their arms entwined.

They were clad only in undershirt and trousers. The remainder of their apparel was found later under bushes at the opposite side of the stream.

Both Poor Swimmers.

N. L. Moles, father of Jerry, thinks both boys were in bathing, that one of them got beyond his depth, and that the other boy tried to rescue his friend. Both were poor swimmers.

Casey Daniels was a member of the Junior Order of Mechanics. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters. All of the sisters and two of the brothers are married. They are M. L. Daniels, of No. 82 Stewart avenue; William R., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Timms, of East Point; Mrs. Etta Ellis, of Lula, Fla.; Mrs. Ora McAdoo and Mrs. Mamie Patton, of San Francisco. Two boys remain at home, Royal, 20, and Ernest, 18 years. Casey returned to Atlanta last Christmas after having been with his sister in San Francisco for three years.

Lads Worked Together.

Jerry Moles is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles; a sister, Elsie, 13 months old, and a brother, Bruce, who is 17. Jerry's father is employed at the Atlanta Woolen Mill.

Both boys worked at the Boston Brady Machine Works.

A double funeral for the two boys will be held at Union Tabernacle, in McDaniel street, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Interment will be at Westview.

ANSLEY PARK TO PROTEST DELAY ON STREETS

Citizens Will Demand That Paving Provided for Seven Months Ago Be Done at Once.

With almost seven months of the year gone and no street work done in Ansley Park, members of the Ansley Park Association, made up of residents and property owners of that section, are planning to make a protest to the City Council.

Many of the streets in that section practically are impassable. Though the avenues are lined with beautiful homes surrounded by well-kept lawns, the streets are cut into ruts and holes worse than any country roads. Neither the city nor the country has done any work to speak of in Ansley Park since it was incorporated.

As an aid toward a solution of the problem, The Georgian has made an investigation of the conditions from the city officials' viewpoint.

Owners to Pay Two-Thirds.

When the January budget was made up $19,931.25 was provided for repaving Peachtree circle from Fifteenth street to Prado, the property owners to pay $13,287.50 of the amount and the city to pay $6,643.75.

From the streets ordinary fund the Eighth Ward got $5,950, from the rock and chert fund $2,150 and from the chert repair fund $600.

From this appropriation only one block of street has been paved, Lombardy street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Not even a pick has been stuck in any other part of the park, and there have been seven months of the finest working weather the city construction department has ever known.

Although the property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost of the paving of Peachtree circle they have been tabooed on this street for more than a year.

Nothing Done on S. Prado.

While the residents have borne the condition with the patience of Job they declare they will not remain quiet any longer.

From the general fund $4,769 has been set aside for paving South Prado from Piedmont avenue to Prado. This is a favorite drive for autoists. It winds around with the beauty of a mountain pass. Attractive homes are built up along it. But it is worn full of deep holes and ridges, and though the money for its repair has been available since the first of the year no contract has been let—not even have bids been asked for.

The general funds are supposed to provide for repairs of streets. Repairs have been unknown to Ansley Park.

Chairman Orville H. Hall, of the Council Streets Committee, said Monday morning that the reason for this condition was that the city forces had been engaged in other sections.

Beaten by "Wire Pulling."

His statement would indicate that the Eighth Ward representatives had been completely outdone in the "wire pulling" contest that goes on between Councilmen over street work.

W. A. Hansel, Assistant Chief of Construction, said the contract had been let for "dolarway" paving on Peachtree circle, but that the contractor also was repaving Central avenue, and that he would have to finish that before going to Peachtree circle. He said he expected Central avenue to be finished in about ten days.

As to South Prado, he said a new process of bitulithic macadam would be tried there, but that they were waiting to see how the same sort of paving laid on Gordon street turned out before putting it down on South Prado.

Members of the Ansley Park Association are dissatisfied. They can not understand why they have not had some street work done this year.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK.

Good Forsyth Bill.

John F. Conroy and his diving models; the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Deiro, the famous accordionist; George Auger and company; Smith, Cook and Marie Branden; Shriner and Richards; the Be Anos.

That is the bill of vaudeville that is to be served at the Forsyth matinee and night all of this week. It is a wonderful combination of talent, one of the best groups of high-grade Keith vaudeville acts that have been assembled in Atlanta. Conroy and his models present an act that is declared to be the strongest drawing card in modern vaudeville. It is made up of a famous life-saver and two pretty girls who are expert in swimming and diving. A great pool tank is used and the stage setting is one of the handsomest that has been presented on any stage.

Tabloid at Bijou.

The Bijou is proving the popularity of musical comedy these days in the packed houses that have greeted every tabloid show of thes eason. The little Marietta street house is perfectly ventilated, cooled by the latest devices, and kept at a temperature that is a positive relief from the heat of the crowded pavements outside. For the week beginnig this afternoon the attraction will be "Good Morning, Judge," said to be the funniest tabloid on the circuit. The orignal methods of a rich brewer, who as Mayor is forced to act as judge of the municipal court, provoke mirth of the hilarious kind.

There will be the usual performances during the week, daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

"Les Miserables."

Realizing that there is a spirited demand on the part of the public for high-class photodramas Jake Wells has been devoting several months to preparations for presenting in the South the masterpieces of motography. He has just completed arrangements to present at the Grand this week the most magnificent product of kinemotography, Victor Hugo's immortal romance, "Les Miserables," in nine reels. This production, which cost over $100,000, was made in Paris and in the French countryside showing the actual scenes portrayed by the great master. The principal roles were enacted by the principal players of Paris.

HOUSE ASKED TO INCREASE LIST OF PENSIONS

Another Measure Bars Commercial Discrimination by Unfair Price Cuts.

The introduction of a bill by Senator Peyton, of the Thirty-first, prohibiting unfair commercial discrimination by slashing prices in one section of the State and boosting them in another, featured Monday evening's session of the State Senate.

Another important bill introduced was that by Senator Buetz extending the pension list to include the widows of Confederate veterans who married prior to 1875. Under the present law, widows are pensioned only when they were married prior to 1870.

Senator Stark, of the Thirty-third, introduced a bill providing for the regulation by the Railroad Commission of the rate of speed of railroad cars in the corporate limits of any city not exceeding 2,000 inhabitants.

Another bill introduced by Senator Searcy provides for an amendment to the code of 1910 so as to allow the transportation of negro prisoners in charge of deputy sheriffs in the white cars or compartments of railroad cars. Sheriffs and deputies say they are subject to riot when carrying negro prisoners in negro compartments.

A resolution providing for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator Bacon in joint session of the House and Senate Tuesday at noon was adopted by the Senate.

Monday marked the turning into the last half of the present session of the Legislature and was featured by the House transacting the smallest amount of work of any day of the 25 whic hhave passed.

Reconsideration of House Resolution, No. 56, which refers to the appointment of a commission to investigate the complaint of Georgia farmers against the damage to their crops by fumes from copper plants in Ducktown, Tenn., was asked by Representative Corn, and the session was extended ten minutes to accommodate him. His motion was lost by a heavy vote.

Jurors Doom Slayer As Church Bells Ring

SAVANNAH, July 21.—While church bells were tolling for worship last night, Henry Johnson, in Superior Court, heard the verdict read which declared him guilty of the murder of Joe Grant.

Judge Walter G. Charlton accepted the verdict in open court, with consent of counsel, but would not pass sentence. He based his acceptance of a Sabbath verdict on the decision of the Supreme Court in the Rawlings case at Valdosta. He called the jury's attention to the tolling of the bells and advised them to attend divine worship.

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK LUMB'S EXTRADITION

Judge Ellis Will Be Asked to Request Governor for Necessary Papers.

Appeal to Judge Ellis, of the Superior Court, to request Governor Slaton to appoint Attorney General Felder to prosecute the case in which extradition papers are desired for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, named as an accomplice of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, in the alleged poisoning of her husband, will be made by Colonel T. S. James, attorney for the Crawford heirs at law.

If the Governor grants the request, according to Attorney Jones, the attorneys for the Crawford heirs will consult the Attorney General in regard to making out requisition papers for the return of Lumb from New York.

Should the Attorney General advise such a course the attorneys will immediately get out the necessary extradition papers. Attorney James said he had no doubt requisition papers eventually would be obtained.

Colonel James' decision to wage a fight for the return of Lumb followed an informal conference with Governor Slaton early Monday morning. Besides Colonel James and A. Kemper, attorneys for the heirs; Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, representing Mrs. Crawford, were present at the conference to contest the granting of extradition papers.

According to Colonel James, the Governor declined to have anything to do with the matter until an application had been filed with him. He gave assurance, however, that extradition papers might be obtained before indictment if a proper case were made out.

Husband and Wife In Same Jail Cell

MACON, July 21.—James D. Nobles and wife, owners of a grocery store in the suburbs, are in the Bibb County jail on the charge of violating the prohibition law. They occupy the same cell.

Mrs. Nobles was arrested a month ago on a similar charge, but gave a $500 bond. Now she and her husband are accused as the result of a basketful of pint bottles of whisky being found behind the counter in their store.

Fair Smokers May Puff in Buffet Cars

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women on transcontinental trains may smoke in the buffet car. The precedent was set by Miss Hester McKay, who said her father was a Chicago manufacturer. She and several other women passengers on a train that was speeding toward Yellowstone Park to-day puffed cigarettes with the men in the buffet car.

Of the twenty male passengers in the car nineteen voted to allow the women to smoke.

BOYS AND GIRLS EAGER TO WIN AD PRIZES

Many Entries in Want Ad Contest Show Enthusiasm Over Georgian's offer for Light Work.

The busiest office in Atlanta Monday was that of the Want Ad Man, and it's going to keep busy, too. The way the boys and girls came in to enter the Want Ad Contest proved that the plan is going to be the one big success of the season.

It isn't every summer that the young folks have a chance to get an automobile for nothing but a few weeks of pleasant work and they are beginning to realize it. Of course, they won't all get the automobile, but there are pianos and motorcycles and a trip to California, gold watches and bikes and other prizes. Everybody has a chance.

The swarm of contestants kept circulating around so busily that the Want Ad Man had to go out and rent another office. He found it on the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, No. 21 Edgewood avenue, just a few steps from North Pryor street, and all the contest details will be handled there.

Ready for Opening.

The contest will open within a few days, and if you are coming in you had better come now, before the field gets crowded. Be sure to clip out the nomination blank printed on another page of this issue, fill it out and bring it to the Want Ad Man.

Don't think because there are many contestants that there isn't room for you. Atlanta is a big town, the whole territory is open to you, and you have just as good an opportunity to win as anyone else. But don't delay and let the others get a start on you. Read the daily advertisements and stories in The Georgian and keep up with the contest news.

Here are some of the young men and women who have entered the contest. They are bright young live wires, every one. Better get your name on the list:

Husband and Wife In Same Jail Cell

MACON, July 21.—James D. Nobles and wife, owners of a grocery store in the suburbs, are in the Bibb County jail on the charge of violating the prohibition law. They occupy the same cell.

Mrs. Nobles was arrested a month ago on a similar charge, but gave a $500 bond. Now she and her husband are accused as the result of a basketful of pint bottles of whisky being found behind the counter in their store.

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fsh and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

'TIGER' GETS FARM SENTENCE.

COLUMBUS.—Langdon Bell, frequent violator of the prohibition law in Columbus, has been sentenced by Judge Tigner, of City Court, to pay a fine of $250 or serve six months on the State farm. Officers, however, refuse to send Bell to the farm, as there is a similar charge pending against him in the Superior Court.

HOUSE'S INTEREST IN SUFFRAGE ON INCREASE--HERE'S THE REASON

Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, who has set the entire House a-flutter.

She's a suffragist and is winning favor for "the cause."

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

GARRISON AT GALVESTON.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 21.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and Major General Leonard Wood to-day inspected Fort Crockett and later went to Texas City, where a review of the entire second division took place.

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

VIADUCT COMFORT BUILDING URGED

Park Board Member Receives Postals From Leading Citizens Pledging Support.

Thousands of Atlantans have joined in the demand for a public comfort building over Wall street, with main entrance from the Whitehall viaduct.

L. C. Green, member of the Park Board from the Fourth Ward, who started the movement, has received thousands of postal cards indorsing the movement and pledging support. These cards are from every class, and in the number are the leading citizens of Atlanta. Following are extracts from the postals received:

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox—I am heartily in favor of the movement to have the city erect a public comfort building.

V. H. Kriegshaber—It is a good thing. Push it along to completion.

L. J. Daniel—Yes, if on Whitehall viaduct extending out over Wall street opposite the Peters Building, entrance from viaduct. Under this viaduct or Pryor street underpass, no good.

E. A. Hartsock—I do most heartily indorse the movement, and I think it should go on the Whitehall viaduct, something like the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad office.

TIE TARIFF VOTE IN THE SENATE IMMINENT

Chamberlain's Decision to Vote Independent of Party Lines Imperils Passage of Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truth-light."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

DR. RIDLEY WINS CONVERTS.

There were eight professions of faith and five additions to the Central Baptist Church membership Sunday morning following a sermon by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley on "The Gospel as an Antidote for Sin."

FATALLY HURT IN FIRE.

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 21.—One man was fatally injured and several slightly burned in a tenement house fire here to-day. The flames were controlled after heavy damage had been done.

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused today to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

Dogs Have Valet, Fan, Bath, Room and Bed

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishment bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government allenist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

The Social World

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

Vesper Club Dance.

FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. They have deevoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germanf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge which is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I xpess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfect wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn.
'Twas father this, and father that;
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly,
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty insisted that something was following them. But nothing further happened. They found no trace of any man excepting on the steps of the watch tower, where the dust was almost obliterated with footprints.

"This ghost wears shoes and climbs the stairs a lot, Rusty," commented Warren.

A Clew to the Ghost.

As they descended they were aware of an intermittent knocking sound that seemed to come from a distant part of the castle. Cautiously they followed they sound, and it led them toward the great banquet hall. As they approached through the lower apartments Jarvis began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonstrations that one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslike lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the hand, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

Our Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many they are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

"Am I Not a Boy? Yes I Am---Not!"

One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

By Nell Brinkley

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grease on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious. I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 20 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a grounding husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter, grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally lasts a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. Hel hel"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him: I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! Hel hel I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, hoarseness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after formula of a noted family doctor.

While finds for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

* * *

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

* * *

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close.

"And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

* * *

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

* * *

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

FORBES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

CHICAGO, July 21.—Harry Forbes, once bantamweight champion of the world, would reenter the boxing game. He is stirred to activity by seeing some of the present day performers in action, believing that he is easily better than most of them in this section of the country.

The Fox River Club of Aurora, of which Art Reid is matchmaker, is anxious to get Forbes into a contest and there is a chance that they will stage him with Jimmy Walsh, the English bantam star now in this city, within a short time.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Walter Johnson, Bob Ainsmith, John Henry and Frank Laporte, of the Washington Baseball Club, were caught in the undertow while bathing at the Chicago Beach Hotel. Prompt work by life guards saved them from being carried out into the lake.

Gedeon, another player on the team, was washed against a post by a wave, and was rescued unconscious by life guards.

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson. In the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle, Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the loser has a handicap of 7. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate show-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a gallant game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winner of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. Thornton, a few years ago a twirler for the Chicago National League Club, las tnight was placed in the padded cell of the county jail at Everett to be held for examination by the County sanity board. While pitching for Chicago he was struck on the head by a batted ball. He has never been quite sane since.

BOBBY WAUGH PUTS OUT REDMOND IN TEN ROUNDS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., July 21.—Bobby Waugh received a knockout decision over Jack Redmond, of Milwaukee, in the tenth round here yesterday when the latter's seconds threw a sponge into the ring after Redmond was helpless and stood with his hands at his side in the middle of the ring.

Crackers Open in Memphis To-day

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here, which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough battles.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

* * *

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

* * *

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Doolin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zeider was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

* * *

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

* * *

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of 'high-speed' oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwarthz.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

Contestants—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there.

• • •

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fail in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

• • •

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

• • •

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

• • •

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The fight for second place in both leagues is waxing hot. The Senators are right on the trail of the Naps, while the Pirates in their rush upward are likely soon to overhaul the Phillies.

• • •

The Yankees are continuing their mad fight to get out of the cellar position, opening up a series in Detroit with a victory.

• • •

Southpaw "Eddie" Plank pitched in world's series form yesterday and the Athletics shut out the Browns.

• • •

A fumble by Chapman in the ninth inning paved the way for the Red Sox victory over the Naps.

• • •

Big Jeff Tesreau and Walter Johnson are the strike out kings in their respective leagues. The Ozark bear has caused 111 batsmen to retire, humbled by his prowess, while "wonderful Walter has breezed 127 batsmen.

• • •

Whether the Pirates will have a look-in on the pennant will be demonstrated in the series with the Giants beginning to-morrow. Four games are scheduled and the Pirates must get better than an even break to cut down the thirteen game handicap separating them from the leaders.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Charlie White, the Chicago sensation, left Saturday night for Chicago. The easy manner in which Charlie handled Jake Abel at the Auditorium-Armory is still the talk of the town. White hopes to meet Frankie Whitney or some other good boy here in the near future.

• • •

Kid Young is now after a return match with Charlie Lee. The kid is of the opinion that he can beat Lee if given another chance, and has offered the latter a neat side bet.

• • •

Eddie Hanlon, who sprung a surprise by defeating Terry Nelson is now after bigger game. Hanlon says he will meet any 135-pound boy the promoters can secure to box him.

• • •

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White and K. O. Brown, is anxious to bring his middleweight battler to Atlanta. Brown fights Klaus at Butte, Mont., on August 2 in a 12-round combat.

• • •

Eddie Campi has finally secured a return engagement with Kid Williams. Tom McCarey is to stage the bout some time next month.

• • •

Charlie White bids fair to be one of the busiest lightweights in the country. Cincinnati wants White to box Johnny Griffiths; Kenosha is after Charlie to clash with Jack Britton; Winnipeg has wired White an offer to take on Freddie Welch, while Milwaukee is trying to clinch a White-Pal Brown match.

• • •

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, refuses to admit that his protege is all in. Joe writes from New Orleans that he still expects to see Thomas get to the top of the lightweight division. He would like to get Joe a match with Jake Abel.

• • •

Sailor Petroskey, the coast middleweight, has signed articles to box Bob McAllister in a scheduled twenty-round mill on August 8. They have agreed to weigh in at 160 pounds at 5 o'clock for a night fight.

• • •

Tommy Murphy's press agent is not working overtime these days. Perhaps the weather is too hot for him.

• • •

Billy Gibson hopes to cinch a match between Champion Willie Ritchie and Packey McFarland, the Chicago wizard. This would be some bout, and the talent should not overlook the wonderful Packey.

• • •

Arthur Pelky is studiously avoiding a meeting with Jess Willard, preferring a match with Gunboat Smith.

• • •

COBB WANTS TO QUIT DETROIT; LIKES BOSTON

BOSTON, July 21.—A Boston sporting writer is authority today for the following:

"Ty Cobb is anxious to get away from the Detroit Tigers, and he does not care who knows it. Also the mighty Tyrus would like very much to play here in Boston, but frankly admits he can not see how the Red Sox would want to give up their Tris Speaker.

"These statements are from Cobb himself, and come in a letter I received this morning from the Georgia Peach, in which he touched at some length upon the story so widely circulated last week to the effect that there was a Speaker-for-Cobb trade on, a story that President McAleer denied most emphatically. Cobb declares he has always liked Boston. 'The fans there always seem so fair,' he writes, and adds that he would like a place in the Red Sox batting order.

"Tyrus significantly says: 'There are two other American League cities in which I would like to play. I would welcome a change.'"

SWIMMER IS BLINDED BY WAVES IN LONG STRUGGLE

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Eliensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Eliensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Eliensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitnoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

COTTON DROPS ON COOLER WEATHER

Texas Showers and Low Cables Promote General Selling. Marked Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Our forecast of cooler weather over Sunday was entirely fulfilled. Records this morning show the heat spell completely broken and good rains fell in Arkansas, Oklahoma, parts of the lower Central States and generally in the eastern half of the Atlantics. Lighter showers with some good rains, fell in North and East Texas.

Liverpool writes: "A large crop has been planted in Egypt; progress so far good and dependent only on the weather to materialize." Political news continues unfavorable. London says: "Complete collapse of authority by the powers is claimed."

First trades here were at a decline of 6 points and the market was quiet around opening figures all the morning. New York wires show a disposition in favor of the market on the ground that Texas had no general rains. But the small stock there and the firm hold by the spot houses on the near position is the main reason for the respect paid to the bull side.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market. They are ordering week to week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and flouncing of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and continues to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

Clearings Gain, but Not to 1912 Level

GENERAL BUYING PUTS STOCKS UP

Improved Metal Trade and Investment Demand Causes Increased Activity.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅞ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady.

Increased strength and activity developed soon after the opening and throughout the forenoon numerous issues showed gains from 1 to 2 points. The heaviest trading was in Union Pacific and Steel, London being an important factor in all trading. Canadian moved up ⅞ and a gain of 1 point was made in Third avenue. Steel advanced ¾. Call money loaned at 2¼.

STOCK GOSSIP

It looks as if the large interests are accumulating stocks on all weak spots with the idea that they will be worth more money this fall. Climatic conditions continue to favor the growing crops, and the situation in Europe seems to be improving. Many news agencies predict a termination of the Balkan war within a few weeks. Would buy stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Steel and Coppers for the long pull.—G. D. Potter.

Twelve industrials declined .16. Twenty active rails declined .27.

Sentiment regarding the stock market is changing and the feeling of optimism is becoming more pronounced each day. The investment demand for securities is gradually increasing, as people realize that prices are low considering the excellent crop prospects we have throughout the entire country. Stocks advance as activity increases, which is always a favorable sign. We are of the opinion that this advance will continue and that prices will be considerably higher before it culminates.—G. D. Wheat—No. 2 red .....84@85
Corn—No. 2 66
Oats—No. 2 .....39@40

CHICAGO, July 21.—Wheat was ⅛c to ¼c higher this morning on strength shown at Liverpool and the more bullish situation abroad. Finley, Barrell & Co. circulated a claim that there is black rust in South Dakota wheat fields, and thus it is simply a question of weather from now until the maturity of the crop how much damage will be done. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago.

Continued hot weather in the corn belt caused an advance in the price of that cereal of a half cent this morning.

Oats were strong in sympathy with the upturn in other grains.

Provisions were fractionally off in sympathy with lower hog market.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

VISIBLE SUPPLY CHANGES.

Following shows the weekly visible supply changes of grain for the week:

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise Is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to induce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it, hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate cricles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 54 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin, Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Heintz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 30 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,
For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you skirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

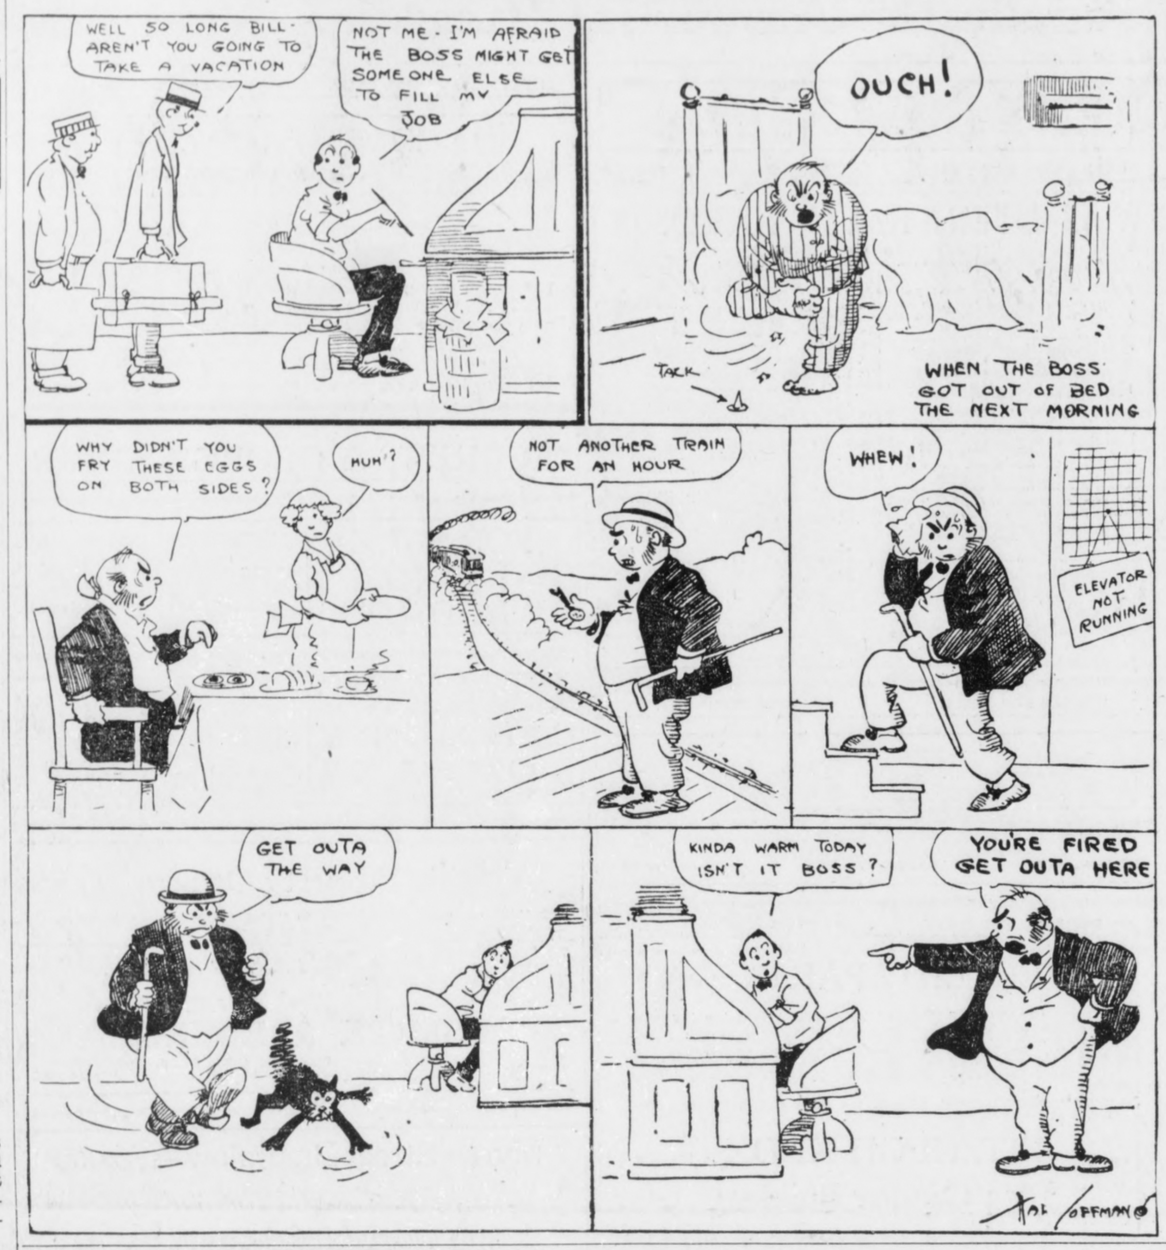

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

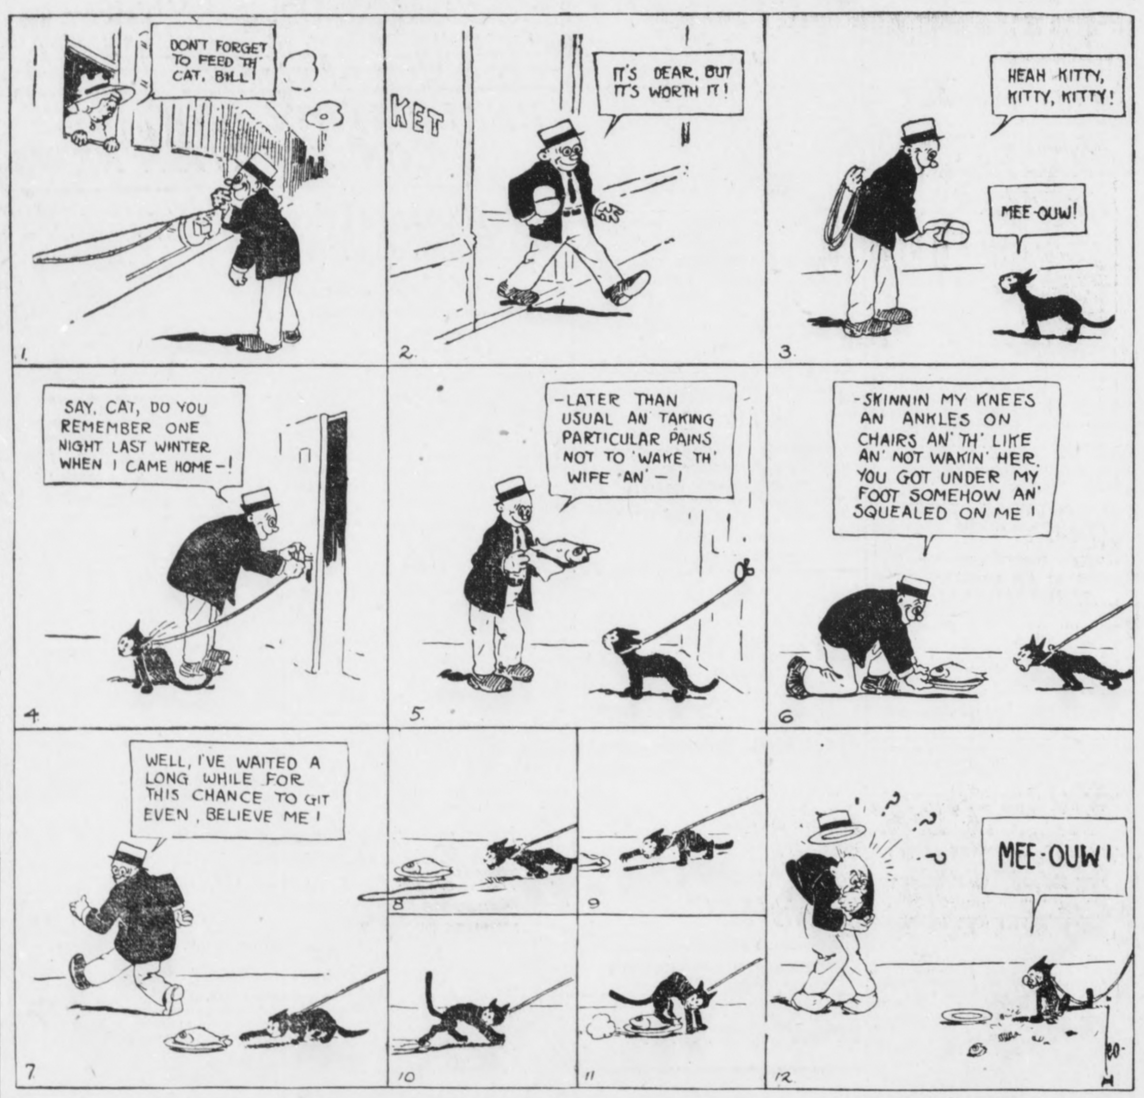

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

You Never Can Tell

When the Wife's Away

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Knowledge

Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

JURY DEFERS CONLEY ACTION

U. S. WILL REFUSE TO RECOGNIZE HUERTA

END IS SEEN OF MEXICO REGIME

Will Not Last Year Out, President Says—Stronger Successor Is Hoped For.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. it is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constiutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to th eterritory now under rebel control.

'Bloomer Girls' Play Ball Too Well; Boy Penetrates Disguise

WASHINGTON, July 21.—When the center fielder of the Chicago Bloomer Girls made a Ty Cobb throw from deep center to the home plate in yesterday's game at Union League Park with the Sparrows Point male team, a boy spectator became suspicious of the sex of the bloomer players. He jerked the blond wig off the head of the third baseman and exposed to the eyes of thousands of fans the closely cropped head of a man.

The rest of the "girls" made for the clubhouse, a square away, at top speed. They were besieged there by hundreds of angry spectators, who swept a squad of police aside, demanding their money back.

They were escorted by a police guard to the depot this morning.

Council to Try to Override Veto for Thirty-third Time

Council, at its meeting Monday afternoon, will make an effort to override Mayor James G. Woodward's veto for the thirty-third time. During the seven months of Mayor Woodward's administration Council, by a two-thirds vote, has annulled almost every veto, many on matters affecting the crematory.

Mayor Woodward has established a record for vetoing and Council set a new mark for overriding vetoes. It is said that during his former years in office as Mayor Mr. Woodward was overridden 22 times.

The issue that comes up Monday afternoon is a consolidation of the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office.

Cardinal Gibbons, 79, Says Life Is Ebbing

BALTIMORE, July 21.—"On Wednesday I shall be seventy-nine years old," said Cardinal Gibbons, as he sat in his study to-day. And then he added, in a gentle voice: "I do not think I will live much longer. My life is nearly spent.

"I will soon be an octogenarian," said the Cardinal, smilingly, "and nature must take its course. Almighty God has blessed me with a long life, and I am ready to answer whenever he sees fit to call me to render an account of my stewardship."

Of the twenty male passengers in the car nineteen voted to allow the women to smoke.

LADS' BODIES CAUGHT ON FISHLINE

All-Day Search Reveals Fate of Jerry Moles, 17, and Casey Daniels, 15 Years Old.

Inquest into the death of young Jerry Moles and Casey Daniels, who were drowned while fishing in the Chattahoochee River Saturday, began at Poole's Undertaking parlors at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Coroner Donehoo said the deaths would be thoroughly investigated.

The bodies were found Sunday afternoon hanging to a trotline by George W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, after an all-day search instituted at the request of the widowed mother of young Daniels, who says she had a premonition her son had been drowned.

Mr. Smith, who was a member of a large party of searchers who spent nearly the day trying to locate the boys, rowed out alone to the middle of the stream, where he found a trotline that ran from one end of the bank to the other.

Bodies Caught on Hooks.

Having attempted to draw the line up, Mr. Smith found that it was too heavy to manage, and this led to the discovery of the bodies of the two boys, which were found caught in the hooks about midway in the river.

Immediately following the discovery the county police notified Coroner Donehoo, who went to the scene of the tragedy to make an investigation. The bodies, which showed no bruises of any kind, were taken in charge by Poole.

Among the theories that have been advanced as to the cause of the death of the boys is that while boating one of them fell into the stream, and that in an effort to rescue him the other went down also.

Neither a Good Swimmer.

Another theory is that in trying to land a fish the lads capsized their boat in midstream. It is known that neither boy was a good swimmer and that for this reason Mrs. Moles, mother of young Jerry, had protested against the trip.

The boys, who were inseparable companions, left home early Saturday morning, promising their parents that they would be back by nightfall. Before leaving home, young Daniels turned over his week's wages to his mother, allowing himself only car fare for the trip down to the river.

When young Moles failed to return home Saturday night, Mrs. Daniels, becoming alarmed, telephoned the county police, who immediately began the search. It was not until 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, however, that her gravest fears were realized.

Boys Chums for Years.

Young Daniels, who is just 15 years old, lived with his mother at No. 71 Hightower street, while his companion, Jerry Moles, aged 17, resided with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles, at No. 34 Humphries street.

The boys had been inseparable companions for years, and are said to have been model youths.

The trouble between hte couple seems to have followed the very late arrival of Dare at home.

Drills are being held in combat formations to-day leading up to the hike, bivouac and battle of Friday. The men will leave Thursday in heavy marching order prepared to cook their own meals, sleep in pup tents and begin the big battle before day Friday.

To-day's officer of the day was E. W. Beck. The officer of the guard was J. H. Nutt. Both are of Griffin.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab on Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Jury Dooms Slayer As Church Bells Ring

SAVANNAH, July 21.—While church bells were tolling for worship last night, Henry Johnson, in Superior Court, heard the verdict read which declared him guilty of the murder of Joe Grant.

Judge Walter G. Charlton accepted the verdict in open court, with consent of counsel, but would not pass sentence. He based his acceptance of a Sabbath verdict on the decision of the Supreme Court in the Rawlings case at Valdosta. He called the jury's attention to the tolling of the bells and advised them to attend divine worship.

Madero Slain as He Slept, Says Widow

Huerta gave out the report that Madero was killed while attempting to escape en route from the palace to the penitentiary.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

FREQUENTLY STONE IS MAJORITY OF HOUSE

Rep. C. H. Stone, who would miss a meal any time for a chance to vote.

Always Votes on Local Bills—Clerk Depends on Him to Pass Many Laws.

Representative C. H. Stone of Taliaferro, frequently is as many as 106 members of the General Assembly at one time, and sometimes he is as many as 150.

Stone passes all the local bills. When one is up for passage, Clerk John T. Boifeuillet glances hastily in the direction of Stone, of Taliaferro, sees double, quadruple or sextuple, a dozen or so times, as the necessities of the occasion require, and announces, in stentorian tones, "On the passage of the bill, the ayes are 116 and the nays none!"

Stone knows that is him—that is, he knows he is the 116! Of course, he couldn't be the "none."

Stone conscientiously votes on all local bills. He would as soon think of forgetting his breakfast as forgetting to vote on a local bill.

Some members think Stone has a spite against himself or is doing penance for something, in that he never fails to hold up his hand when a local measure is hustling through, but Clerk Boifeuillet knows good and well that he can depend on Stone to pass 'em along, and that's why he always looks to Stone alone for the votes needed.

Stone is a fine fellow, however, as any man willing to sit there and pass great gobs and bunches of local bills every day or so must be. He is always in a good humor, and has a countenance that looks like Santa Claus' with the whiskers shaved off. He is immensely popular with his colleagues, and is rated safe and sane in all matters.

In his home town, Crawfordville, Stone is a leading citizen, influential and highly esteemed. He comes to the Legislature, as a matter of course, whenever he wishes to.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a raid on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Dougherty, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Penfro, companion of A. N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, caught in a hotel raid, and Myrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accuser of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Solicitor issued this statement:

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

Quotes Court Decision.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

Both Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, Frank's counsel, denied this. Mr. Arnold declared he and his colleagues were confident of securing the acquittal of their client and, therefore, were ready to go to trial at any time.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

"I can not conceive that these men, when they are in possession of the facts of the case, seriously will consider bringing an indictment for murder against Conley," said the Solicitor.

Foreman Beattie indicated that if a quorum were present and a decision were reached to go into the connection of Conley with the crime a number of witnesses would be served at once with subpenas and that an opportunity would be given for the presentation of all the important evidence against the negro.

Mincey Reported Here.

He said, however, that the report that the meeting Monday was called for the definite and prearranged purpose of indicting Conley was utterly false.

William H. Mincey, author of the sensational affidavit which accused Conley of confessing to the killing of a girl on the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered, has returned to Atlanta, it was reported Monday, and is prepared to go before the Grand Jury to repeat his story. Mincey has been in Rising Fawn, Ga., where he was located by The Georgian after the publication of his remarkable story. He maintains that every word of his accusation is true and that he is eager to take the stand and assist in the vindication of Frank.

Investors Must Pay Bank Stock Balances

WAYCROSS, July 21.—All subscriptions for stock in the Bank of Waycross, made shortly before the bank was closed here in November, 1907, are collectible, according to a decision just handed down in Superior Court. By this action a number of investors will have to pay for stock and stand assessments to pay off depositors.

Morgan V. Gress, of Jacksonville, had taken $5,000 of the new stock and in his fight to prevent payment declared his subscription was obtained through false and fraudulent representations by one of the directors of the bank.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of biliousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Hustlers in Race For Pony Outfits

Robert H. Brown, Murphy, N. C.

ONE MORE EXTRA VOTE OFFER IS TO BE MADE

Pony Contestants Took Advantage of Club Bonus—Nine Days of Race Remain.

Within a few days fifteen more ponies will arrive for the boys and girls in The Georgian and American contest. This means but one thing—the end of the contest draws near.

Another epoch in the competition ended Saturday night, when the bonus offer for clubs of $35, $25 and $15 closed. Almost every contestant took advantage of this generous allowance of extra votes and managed to get at least one club.

Another bonus offer will be announced at once, but those, if any, who have been "holding back" with the idea that the final bonus offer would be as much help to them as those preceding will be disappointed, for the reason that it would be unfair to give the tardy workers an even chance with those who "got busy" earlier in the game.

Monday over, but nine days remain in the contest—nine working days—a week and a half. These concluding days must be filled with endeavor by every contestant, for there is not one in the lot who is a sure winner—that much is certain.

No boy or girl can count with assurance on a pony. It is anyone's race as yet. Which is just as it should be from all points of view except the lazy boy's.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. "I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

ATLANTA GREEK BALKAN HERO; SAVED FLAG

John Mahos, Waiter, who Answered Call to Colors, Badly Wounded in Thrilling Dash.

Members of Atlanta's Greek colony Monday told a Georgian reporter stories of remarkable heroism and thrilling tragedy concerning their fellows who returned home to fight in the Balkan war. They are stories of individual acts and experience not related in the press dispatches.

Nick Mahos, one of the proprietors of the Manhattan Cafe, on Marietta street, has a brother lying in a hospital in Tepelene, suffering from three bullet wounds.

He is John Mahos, and had many acquaintances in Atlanta a few months ago when he was serving ham and eggs and club sandwiches in the cafe. In the Greek army he was given the rank of sergeant soon after enlisting. He was stationed at Tepelene, near the Albanian border, when his first opportunity came. In a letter to his brother here he tells of it.

Rescues Country's Flag.

The Albanians in a small village took possession of the military headquarters and replaced the Greek flag with the colors of Albania. Mahos' commander ordered him with a detachment to rescue the flag.

He obeyed like a soldier and reraised the flag. But half his men were killed and he was wounded three times.

George Phelis, at one time one of the proprietors of the Manhattan Cafe, has been active in the Balkan service and has written some thrilling accounts of inside conflicts. He was in Salonika when King George was assassinated and was well acquainted with the soldier that captured the assassin.

How Brave Brothers Fell.

Phelis has narrated the experiences of two Marcos brothers which throbs with the action of the old Greek classics.

The oldest boy, Leonidas, was sent to his father, and an uncle who had prospered in America took the younger, Aristos.

Aristos forgot his Greek and became a fully educated American citizen. Leonidas heard but little of his brother, but grew to be a loyal subject of King George.

It was a strange fate that brought them together in the Balkan war. Two volunteers had been asked for to deliver a message through the Turkish line to a general 25 miles away.

"Leonidas Marcos," answered a young man who held up his hand.

Aristos, hearing the name, said he, too, would go. Aristos could speak but little Greek and Leonidas could say less English. But they discovered they were brothers.

Because of the importance of the journey they were made to swear to do their duty. Leonidas swore by the flag of Greece. Aristos swore by the Stars and Stripes. Each was given a flag of his country.

They went. But when they returned they falteringly told that the general could not be found.

Killed by the Turks.

Angry, their commander threatened to shoot them as cowards. But they plead that they had been true to their trust and finally were sent the second time to deliver the message.

Their mutilated bodies were found a few days later by the general they were trying to reach. They had been captured by the Turks. Their hands and feet had been cut off.

The general whom they had sought explained to the commander of the brave young men that he had changed his position about twenty miles and was beyond reach.

Leonidas and Aristos were given a burial with every ceremony. Phelis writes that their heroism is as great as any of the war.

Wants Divorce From 'Silver-Spoon' Wife

PITTSBURG, July 21.—Declaring that his wife had been born with a silver spoon in her mouth, and that he had "grown tired trying to keep it there," F. W. Lego, a prominent merchant here, brought suit to-day for an absolute divorce against Mary Wendel Lego.

SHOOTS HIS STEPMOTHER.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

CALLS HERETICS PREACHERS OF TO-MORROW

Dr. J. B. Robins, Extolling Gospel of Progress, Likes Freshness of New Thought.

A man who gets no new idea in twenty years ought to have been dead twenty years ago.

Nothing counts in life but the progressive.

The heretics of to-day are the preachers of to-morrow, and it has always been so.

New phases of old thoughts are what we need and want.

The above statements by Dr. J. B. Robins, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Sunday created a decided impression upon his congregation. His sermon was built around Paul, comparing the life of modern man to the life of Paul.

"Nearly every church has banished some man who is now teaching the world, uplifting men and giving a bigger outlook on religion and life. The old ideals are dead. The new ideals must be shown to the people.

"The preachers of to-day must know in what their people are interested. They must find out what reaches, touches and draws them, and knowing these things, must offer the religion of Christ as related to their needs. I like the freshness of the new thought. I find something in it that I find nowhere else.

"In the progression of human life religion enlarges itself as well as other things. Let us think of this and help to give the world the things it needs."

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK LUMB'S EXTRADITION

Judge Ellis Will Be Asked to Request Governor for Necessary Papers.

Appeal to Judge Ellis, of the Superior Court, to request Governor Slaton to appoint Attorney General Felder to prosecute the case in which extradition papers are desired for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, named as an accomplice of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, in the alleged poisoning of her husband, will be made by Colonel T. S. James, attorney for the Crawford heirs at law.

If the Governor grants the request, according to Attorney Jones, the attorneys for the Crawford heirs will consult the Attorney General in regard to making out requisition papers for the return of Lumb from New York.

Should the Attorney General advise such a course the attorneys will immediately get out the necessary extradition papers. Attorney James said he had no doubt requisition papers eventually would be obtained.

Colonel James' decision to wage a fight for the return of Lumb followed an informal conference with Governor Slaton early Monday morning. Besides Colonel James and A. Kemper, attorneys for the heirs; Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, representing Mrs. Crawford, were present at the conference to contest the granting of extradition papers.

According to Colonel James, the Governor declined to have anything to do with the matter until an application had been filed with him. He gave assurance, however, that extradition papers might be obtained before indictment if a proper case were made out.

BOYS AND GIRLS EAGER TO WIN AD PRIZES

Many Entries in Want Ad Contest Show Enthusiasm Over Georgian's offer for Light Work.

The busiest office in Atlanta Monday was that of the Want Ad Man, and it's going to keep busy, too. The way the boys and girls came in to enter the Want Ad Contest proved that the plan is going to be the one big success of the season.

It isn't every summer that the young folks have a chance to get an automobile for nothing but a few weeks of pleasant work and they are beginning to realize it. Of course, they won't all get the automobile, but there are pianos and motorcycles and a trip to California, gold watches and bikes and other prizes. Everybody has a chance.

The swarm of contestants kept circulating around so busily that the Want Ad Man had to go out and rent another office. He found it on the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, No. 21 Edgewood avenue, just a few steps from North Pryor street, and all the contest details will be handled there.

Ready for Opening.

The contest will open within a few days, and if you are coming in you had better come now, before the field gets crowded. Be sure to clip out the nomination blank printed on another page of this issue, fill it out and bring it to the Want Ad Man.

Don't think because there are many contestants that there isn't room for you. Atlanta is a big town, the whole territory is open to you, and you have just as good an opportunity to win as anyone else. But don't delay and let the others get a start on you. Read the daily advertisements and stories in The Georgian and keep up with the contest news.

Here are some of the young men and women who have entered the contest. They are bright young live wires, every one. Better get your name on the list:

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not ne necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fish and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

TIGER' GETS FARM SENTENCE.

COLUMBUS.—Langdon Bell, frequent violator of the prohibition law in Columbus, has been sentenced by Judge Tigner, of City Court, to pay a fine of $250 or serve six months on the State farm. Officers, however, refuse to send Bell to the farm, as there is a similar charge pending against him in the Superior Court.

HOUSE'S INTEREST IN SUFFRAGE ON INCREASE--HERE'S THE REASON

Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, who has set the entire House a-flutter.

She's a suffragist and is winning favor for "the cause."

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

BURTON ATTACKS TARIFF BILL AS DESTRUCTIVE

Republican Senator Declares Nek Schedules Will Not Cut the Cost of Living.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused today to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishment bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

150 Hours' Sleep Refreshes Woman

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

Soda crackers are more nutritive than any other flour food. Uneeda Biscuit are the perfect soda crackers.

Though the cost is but five cents, Uneeda Biscuit are too good, too nourishing, too crisp, to be bought merely as an economy.

Buy them because of their freshness—because of their crispness—because of their goodness—because of their nourishment.

Always 5 cents. Always fresh, crisp and clean.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. it is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

SERUM CURE FOR INFLUENZA IS PERFECTED

Bad Colds Prevented by Newly Discovered Anti-Toxin, Says Philadelphia Doctor.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known as influenza, are being made by physicians of a medical laboratory near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr. Arthur Parker Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza.

Two years ago Dr. R. J. Allen, a London physician, conceived the theory that if "cold" germs" were inoculated into the blood of a person afflicted with influenza a cure was bound to result. He also maintained his theory would hold good as applied to the prevention of the ailment as well.

The theory was taken up in this country about a year ago. Dr. C. P. Brown, Dr. Webb, of Swarthmore, and Dr. Nathan Ward, now dead, started to experiment with the vaccine and finally declared they had found that their efforts to inject an organism into a person afflicted with influenza had been successful.

In a nutshell, they held that the "no disease twice" idea might be as applicable in cases of catarrh and influenza as in diphtheria, typhoid, scarlet fever or smallpox.

To various Philadelphia physicians, among whom were Dr. W. Wayne Babcock and Dr. L. F. Ashcraft, quantities of the vaccine were given. Dr. Babcock has treated fifty patients and says he has found that in many instances the patient was entirely cured of catarrh or influenza.

One stirring feature of the results of the vaccine he discovered was that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time.

There is a slight reaction, but after that it is declared the patient suffers no more, and when the "cold" disappears there is very little likelihood of it ever appearing again.

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have deevoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots or Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germaf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge, wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn,
'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly,
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty insisted that something was following them. But nothing further happened. They found no trace of any man excepting on the steps of the watch tower, where the dust was almost obliterated with footprints.

"This ghost wears shoes and climbs the stairs a lot, Rusty," commented Warren.

A Clew to the Ghost.

As they descended they were aware of an intermittent knocking sound that seemed to come from a distant part of the castle. Cautiously they followed they sound, and it led them toward the great banquet hall. As they approached through the lower apartments Jarvis began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped. "Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well, what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonstrations. I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

that one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my nicce.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslike lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the hand, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I care-

Our Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many they are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grease on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out or compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious, I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 30 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self-conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter, grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the chat-lished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close.

"And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

* * *

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

* * *

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

FORPES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

CHICAGO, July 21.—Harry Forbes, once bantamweight champion of the world, would reenter the boxing game. He is stirred to activity by seeing some of the present day performers in action, believing that he is easily better than most of them in this section of the country.

The Fox River Club of Aurora, of which Art Reid is matchmaker, is anxious to get Forbes into a contest and there is a chance that they will stage him with Jimmy Walsh, the English bantam star now in this city, within a short time.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Walter Johnson, Bob Ainsmith, John Henry and Frank Laporte, of the Washington Baseball Club, were caught in the undertow while bathing at the Chicago Beach Hotel. Prompt work by life guards saved them from being carried out into the lake.

Gedeon, another player on the team, was washed against a post by a wave, and was rescued unconscious by life guards.

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson in the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle. Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the lorer has a handicap of 1. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate show-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a gallant game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winner of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. BOBBY WAUGH PUTS OUT REDMOND IN TEN ROUNDS

Crackers Open in Memphis To-day

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here, which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough battles.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

* * *

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

* * *

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Doolin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zelder was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

* * *

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of high-speed oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwarthz.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

Contestants—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there.

* * *

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fail in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

* * *

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

* * *

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

* * *

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

Diamond News and Gossip

The fight for second place in both leagues is waxing hot. The Senators are right on the trail of the Naps, while the Pirates in their rush upward are likely soon to overhaul the Phillies.

The Yankees are continuing their mad fight to get out of the cellar position, opening up a series in Detroit with a victory.

* * *

Southpaw "Eddie" Plank pitched in world's series form yesterday and the Athletics shut out the Browns.

* * *

A fumble by Chapman in the ninth inning paved the way for the Red Sox victory over the Naps.

Big Jeff Tesreau and Walter Johnson are the strike out kings in their respective leagues. The Ozark bear has caused 111 batsmen to retire, humbled by his prowess, while Wonderful Walter has breezed 127 batsmen.

* * *

Whether the Pirates will have a lookin on the pennant will be demonstrated in the series with the Giants beginning to-morrow. Four games are scheduled and the Pirates must get better than an even break to cut down the thirteen-game handicap separating them from the leaders.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Charlie White, the Chicago sensation, left Saturday night for Chicago. The easy manner in which Charlie handled Jake Abel at the Auditorium-Armory is still the talk of the town. White hopes to meet Frankie Whitney or some other good boy here in the near future.

* * *

Kid Young is now after a return match with Charlie Lee. The kid is of the opinion that he can beat Lee if given another chance, and has offered the latter a neat side bet.

* * *

Eddie Hanlon, who sprung a surprise by defeating Terry Nelson is now after bigger game. Hanlon says he will meet any 135-pound boy the promoters can secure to box him.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White and K. O. Brown, is anxious to bring his middleweight battler to Atlanta. Brown fights Klaus at Butte, Mont., on August 2 in a 12-round combat.

* * *

Eddie Campi has finally secured a return engagement with Kid Williams. Tom McCarey is to stage the bout some time next month.

* * *

Charlie White bids fair to be one of the busiest lightweights in the country. Cincinnati wants White to box Johnny Griffiths; Kenosha is after Charlie to clash with Jack Britton; Winnipeg has wired White an offer to take on Freddie Welch, while Milwaukee is trying to clinch a White-Pal Brown match.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, refuses to admit that his protege is all in. Joe writes from New Orleans that he still expects to see Thomas get to the top of the lightweight division. He would like to get Joe a match with Jake Abel.

* * *

Sailor Petroskey, the coast middleweight, has signed articles to box Bob McAllister in a scheduled twenty-round mill on August 8. They have agreed to weigh in at 160 pounds at 5 o'clock for a night fight.

* * *

Tommy Murphy's press agent is not working overtime these days. Perhaps the weather is too hot for him.

* * *

Billy Gibson hopes to cinch a match between Champion Willie Ritchie and Packey McFarland, the Chicago wizard. This would be some bout, and the talent should not overlook the wonderful Packey.

* * *

Arthur Pelky is studiously avoiding a meeting with Jess Willard, preferring a match with Gunboat Smith.

* * *

Jeff O'Connell, the veteran lightweight, tried to come back the other night against Danny Goodman. The latter was awarded the decision after six rounds of hard fighting. The bout was staged at Aurora, Ill.

* * *

Kid Brooks is still waiting for Kid Duke to post a side bet for a return go. The pair clashed about two weeks ago, and Kid Duke claimed he had the better of his opponent. Ever since then Brooks has been after a return bout with his rival.

* * *

Frankie Whitney added another victory to his long list on Friday night. Whitney handed Phil Knight a neat lacing in a ten-round set-to at Denver, Colo. Whitney was scheduled to meet Unholz, but the latter was forced to call off the scrap on account of illness.

SHAMROCK IV NAME OF NEW CHALLENGER FOR 1912 CUP

LONDON, July 21.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht which will try for the America's cup in a series of races in 1914, the conditions for which have been signed and forwarded by the Royal Ulster Yacht Club to the New York Yacht Club, will be named Shamrock IV.

LARGE FORFEIT ASSURES WORLD BASEBALL TOUR

CHARLES A. COMISKEY, president of the Chicago White Sox, guaranteed the proposed world's tour of his club and the New York Giants. The Old Roman posted in Chicago yesterday a $15,000 forfeit to assure transportation. John J. McGraw has likewise posted a guarantee, but for only twenty-five people, half the number that Comiskey has covered.

Teams Sail November 19.

The teams will sail from Vancouver, B. C., on November 19, making the trip to the coast on a special train. Several exhibitions will be played en route.

"The trip will be made," said Ban Johnson yesterday, "whether or not either or both teams win a pennant or a world's series. Special dispensation, covering such an emergency, has been granted by the National Commission. In no case, however, would a team be advertised as a world's champion. I think the tourists will be largely composed of American and National League stars. Perhaps no more than half a dozen athletes of each club will be on hand for the long journey."

Johnson Praises Trip.

"I am going part of the way," concluded Mr. Johnson. "I shall take in China and Japan. I think the trip will be a great benefit to baseball. It will be a sight-seeing excursion for the party. The players will not be overworked. The number of games played will be comparatively few—not enough to interfere with the 1914 campaign in any way."

Lillian's Husband to Turn Beauty Doctor

PITTSBRG, July 21.—Lillian Russell's husband, Alexander P. Moore, president and editor of The Pittsburg Leader, which has for its political slogan, "For President in 1916, Theodore Roosevelt," will forsake journalism to manufacture his wife's beauty lotions, according to friends here. He is expected to resign when he returns from Europe in August.

It is reported that political and business interests have besought William Flinn, Bull Moose leader and principal backer of The Leader, to bring about a change.

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Ellensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the aBttery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Ellensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Ellensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to skim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta Clergymen Argue For and Against Measure Now Before Legislature.

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

Deaths and Burials Of a Day in Atlanta

Ruth Smith, six-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Smith, of No. 116 Powell street, died at the residence at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Funeral announcements later.

The funeral of Daniel R. Bramlett, who was killed some time ago in San Francisco, was held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Monday morning. Interment at Westview.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.16; August, 12.05; October, 11.53; January, 11.37.

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅞ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP

It looks as if the large interests are accumulating stocks on all weak spots with the idea that they will be worth more money this fall. Climatic conditions continue to favor the growing crops, and the situation in Europe seems to be improving. Many news agencies predict a termination of the Balkan war within a few weeks. Would buy stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Steel and Coppers for the long pull.—G. D. Potter.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market. They are ordering week to week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and fluting of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and promises to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Thompson, Towle & Co.: We expect to see a further advance in cotton.

Browning & Co.: We believe any change for the worse would cause a sharp advance.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Everything depends on the weather.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 21.—Wheat was ¼c to ¼c higher this morning on strength shown at Liverpool and the more bullish situation abroad. Finley, Barrell & Co. circulated a claim that there is black rust in South Dakota wheat fields, and thus it is simply a question of weather from now until the maturity of the crop how much damage will be done. Northwestern receipts were more than double those of a year ago.

Continued hot weather in the corn belt caused an advance in the price of that cereal of a half cent this morning.

Oats were strong in sympathy with the upturn in other grains.

Provisions were fractionally off in sympathy with lower hog market.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Brown Estate Lots Are Sold by Foster

Frontage of 800 Feet Changes Hands. Apartment Encroachment—Realty Election—Cash Sales.

Certain properties in the estate of the late Julius L. Brown are gradually being disposed of through the administrator, ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, and Atlanta real estate agents. Some time ago a tract was sold on Decatur street, semi-central property, at a good price, and the Julius Brown home on Washington street was put on the market.

The latest sale is of fifteen vacant lots fronting 800 feet on Little and Crew streets to a client of the Foster & Robson Agency, and of an adjoining lot for the Exchange Bank to Victor L. Smith. The prices are withheld. The sales were made by W. A. Foster, of the above agency.

The Joseph E. Brown property near the Soldiers' Home has been placed with an agency for subdivision.

Lots of Cash for Property.

Cash sales are again coming to the front. Judge W. R. Hammond has sold to Edward England through I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore Agency, the two-story frame house at No. 218 North Jackson street, between Adams street and East avenue, for $6,600 cash. This property is 55 by 200 feet and is on the north side of the street. Mr. England will make his home there.

Paul Nuckols has sold to Mrs. S. W. Goode a parcel on Auburn avenue just east of Piedmont, 25 by 112 feet, for $11,000 cash. The transaction was handled through A. S. Hook, of the Foster & Robson Agency. The property is improved with a two-story brick building.

Encroachment of Building.

An encroachment of four inches on the city's sidewalk by the Ponce DeLeon apartments at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon avenue has been reported to Building Inspector Hays by Assistant Inspector C. J. Bowen, and the matter will be taken before the City Council.

Frontage at this point is worth about $1,200 a foot. An effort was made to widen Peachtree here, it will be recalled, before the apartments were started, but the project fell through.

Ansley Park Car Line.

A quiet movement has been on foot for several weeks to get a car line through Ansley Park, and those who are interested in the project are hoping for success. The idea is to extend the Piedmont avenue line, which stops just a few hundred yards south of the city limits, through to Polo drive, over that thoroughfare's stone bridge and thence to Rock Springs.

The people of the Rock Springs section have been seeking a car line many months, and it seems to be simply a question of which route to choose to their neighborhood. The line, they have been assured, will be extended to Rock Springs, either through Ansley Park or by way of Piedmont avenue. Realizing what Edwin P. Ansley has done for the city, heavy owners in the Rock Springs section have felt inclined to pull for the Ansley Park route. The other way, however, would make it possible to widen Piedmont avenue.

"Ansley Park must soon have its car line," declared a well-known real estate dealer. "There are too many nickels for the street car company."

Sell Property for Taxes.

People who are accustomed to hunt real estate bargains in Atlanta will soon find their opportunity, although there won't be any chance to buy central or semi-central property at a reduction. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the Council Tax Committee, has discovered that the city holds overdue tax liens against $41,000 worth of property, mostly vacant lots, and he has ordered that they be sold. The date and the place of the sale will be announced later. Some of the property is improved with small buildings.

To Discuss Realty Loans.

An important meeting of the members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 314 of the State Capitol to urge the passage of the sinking fund investment bill, which provides for investing State reserve funds in real estate as a first lien as well as in bonds.

On the committee to see the proper authorities about this legislation are Harris G. White, president of the board; S. B. Turman, second vice president, and W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and a director of the board. They will not only appear before a legislative committee, but will use every effort between now and Tuesday to get all the real estate men to attend the meeting.

Representatives Field and Smith, of DeKalb, are the authors of the bill to repeal the measure of 1910, which restricts such loans to bonds. Real estate constitutes about 69 per cent of the taxable values in Fulton County and about 54 per cent in the State, and because of this it is held that such discrimination should not exist.

Results of Realty Elections.

"There is plenty of work before the Atlanta Real Estate Board in the next year," declared Harris G. White Friday night at the Cafe Durand, in accepting the position of president to succeed Charles P. Glover. "For some time I have been in close touch with the affairs of the board, and I know what it means to run this organization. I want all of you to make suggestions and take an active interest, and we are sure to demonstrate the need for the organization."

Mr. White's talk followed an impromptu parade around the room, escorted by Mr. Glover and S. B. Turman, with the land brokers singing "He's a jolly good fellow!" and things like that. Charles P. Glover spoke briefly on the duties of the past year and predicted success under President White. A vote of thanks was given him, S. B. Turman eulogized him and the members voted thanks to all the retiring officers.

Others elected were John J. Woodside, vice president; S. B. Turman, second vice president; Van B. Smith, secretary, and H. W. Dews, treasurer.

The following six directors were elected to serve until 1914: Forrest Adair, W. A. Foster, S. L. Dallas, G. M. McKinnon, J. H. Ewing and J. W. Dobbins. The following six will serve until 1915: Charles P. Glover, A. S. Hook, Edgar Marrs, T. B. Gay, A. J. West and S. E. Davidson. The following were elected to serve as the appraisement committee R. O. Cochran, T. C. Holmes, W. L. DuPree, H. W. Dillin, Fitzhugh Knox, R. R. Otis. One more will be appointed by the president owing to the resignation of Walker Dunson.

A change in the by-laws was effected, allowing six directors to be elected each year to serve for the ensuing two years. This will allow six members of the twelve to end their terms every year, and will facilitate the work of the board.

The appraisement committee was raised from five to seven, and the board of directors from eleven to twelve.

Realty Men's Good Luck—Oil.

The Atlanta real estate fraternity has received with more than ordinary interest the news that four of its members—B. M. Grant, T. J. Cheshire, Myron Freeman and J. M. Fraser, all of the Grant Agency—have struck oil on a 160-acre tract which they bought some time ago near Oklahoma City, Okla. For a time the prospect looked hopeless, but while Mr. Grant was at Toxaway this week he received a telegram that the well was flowing 150 barrels a day. Mr. Grant and D. C. Lyle, of the Georgia Realty Company, a stockholder in the developing concern, the Huguely Company, went

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,
For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

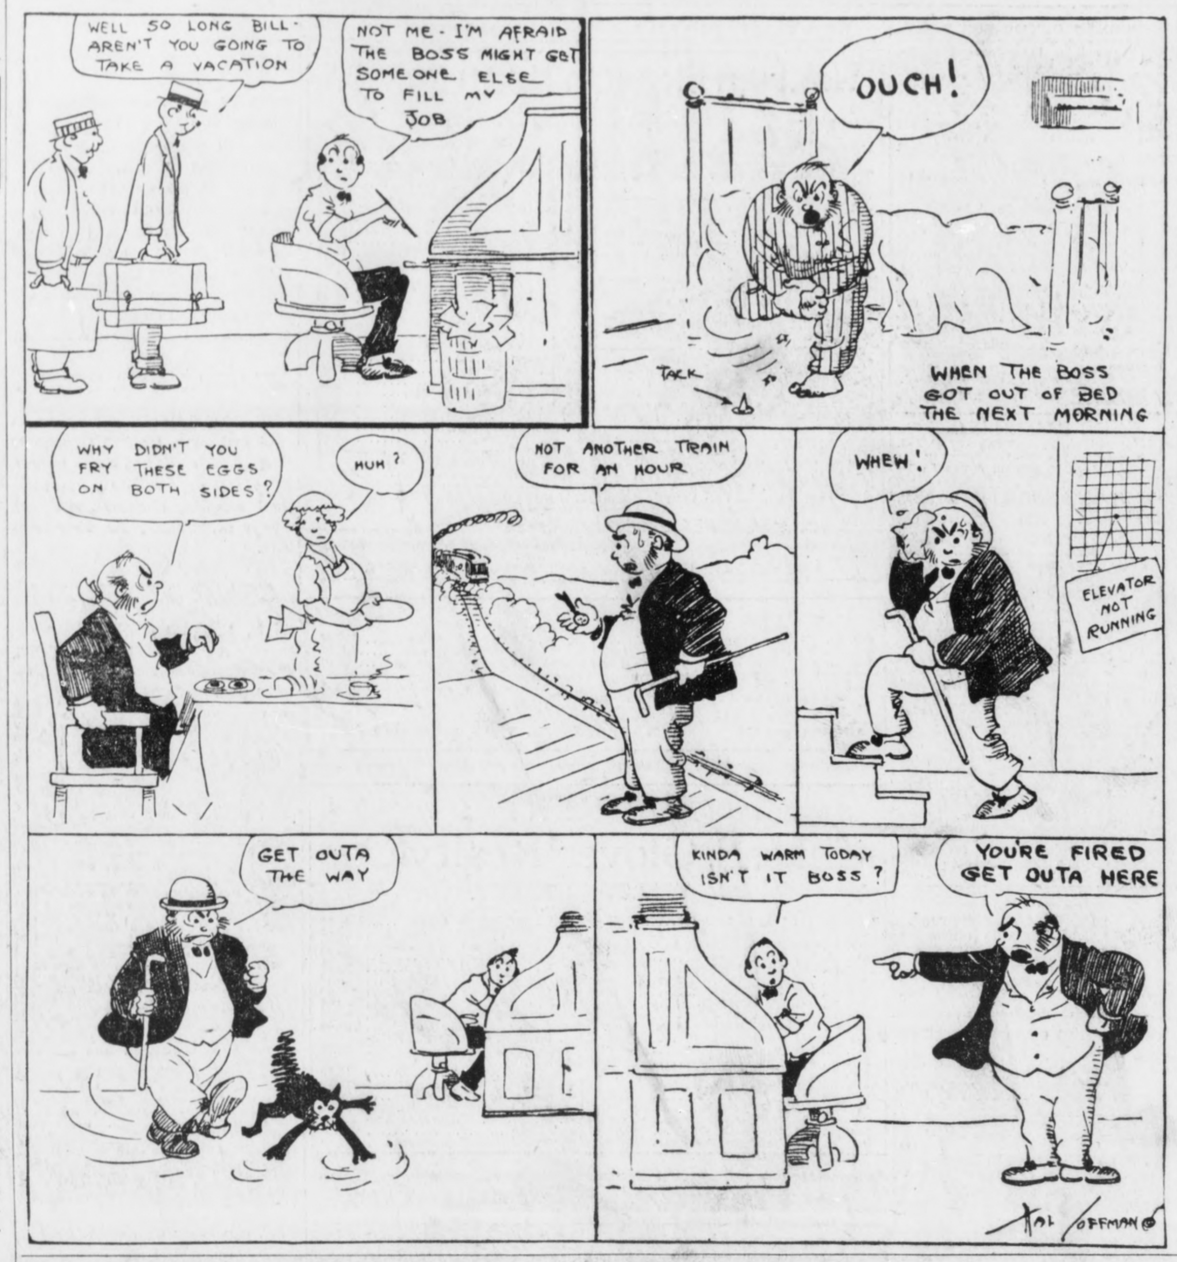

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

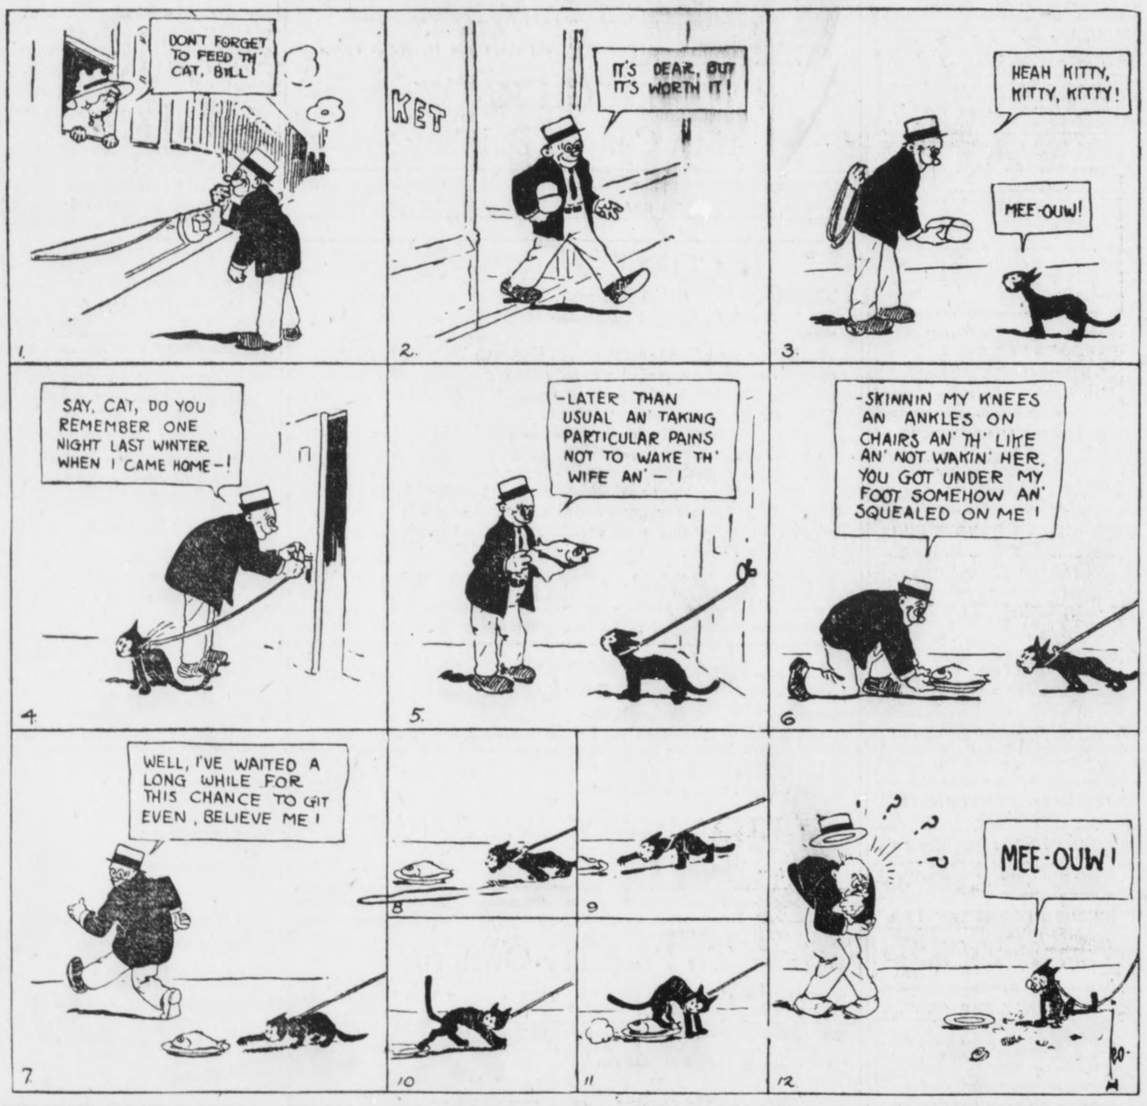

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

SPEAKER TO DEMAND REAL TAX REFORM

GRAND JURY MEETS TO CONSIDER CONLEY CASE

To Investigate Drowning of Boys

BURWELL TO END CLASH IN HOUSE

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

'Bloomer Girls' Play Ball Too Well; Boy Penetrates Disguise

WASHINGTON, July 21.—When the center fielder of the Chicago Bloomer Girls made a Ty Cobb throw from deep center to the home plate in yesterday's game at Union League Park with the Sparrows Point male team, a boy spectator became suspicious of the sex of the bloomer players. He jerked the blond wig off the head of the third baseman and exposed to the eyes of thousands of fans the closely cropped head of a man.

The rest of the "girls" made for the clubhouse, a square away, at top speed. They were besieged there by hundreds of angry spectators, who swept a squad of police aside, demanding their money back.

They were escorted by a police guard to the depot this morning.

Council to Try to Override Veto for Thirty-third Time

Council, at its meeting Monday afternoon, will make an effort to override Mayor James G. Woodward's veto for the thirty-third time. During the seven months of Mayor Woodward's administration Council, by a two-thirds vote, has annulled almost every veto, many on matters affecting the crematory.

Mayor Woodward has established a record for vetoing and Council set a new mark for overriding vetoes. It is said that during his former years in office as Mayor Mr. Woodward was overridden 22 times.

The issue that comes up Monday afternoon is a consolidation of the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office.

Choked to Death By High Collar

PITTSBURG, July 21.—Harry D. Wingert, a graduate of Western Reserve University, was choked to death by the collar he was wearing.

Wingert called at the office of a friend to consult him about the purchase of an automobile. Not finding his friend in his office, he went into a private room and sat down to wait.

While there the young man evidently was overcome by the heat and fell in a faint. He wore an extremely high and stiff collar, which strangled him to death.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Man Beaten to Death By Mob; Mayor Held

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, MINN., July 21.—Mayor Edeke, of Ranier, Minn., is out on bail to-day, charged with being an accessory to the murder of F. J. Couture, owner of the Ranier Hotel. James Kelly was in the county jail here, charged with the actual murder.

Couture was beaten to death by a crowd of men after he made a statement that no attempt was being made in Ranier to enforce the saloon-closing laws. Mayor Edeke is charged with being a member of the crowd.

LADS' BODIES CAUGHT ON FISHLINE

All-Day Search Reveals Fate of Jerry Moles, 17, and Casey Daniels, 15 Years Old.

Inquest into the death of young Jerry Moles and Casey Daniels, who were drowned while fishing in the Chattahoochee River Saturday, began at Poole's Undertaking parlors at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Coroner Donehoo said the deaths would be thoroughly investigated.

The bodies were found Sunday afternoon hanging to a trotline by George W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, after an all-day search instituted at the request of the widowed mother of young Daniels, who says she had a premonition her son had been drowned.

Mr. Smith, who was a member of a large party of searchers who spent nearly the day trying to locate the boys, rowed out alone to the middle of the stream, where he found a trotline that ran from one end of the bank to the other.

Bodies Caught on Hooks.

Having attempted to draw the line up, Mr. Smith found that it was too heavy to manage, and this led to the discovery of the bodies of the two boys, which were found caught in the hooks about midway in the river.

Immediately following the discovery the county police notified Coroner Donehoo, who went to the scene of the tragedy to make an investigation. The bodies, which showed no bruises of any kind, were taken in charge by Poole.

Among the theories that have been advanced as to the cause of the death of the boys is that while boating one of them fell into the stream, and that in an effort to rescue him the other went down also.

Neither a Good Swimmer.

Another theory is that in trying to land a fish the lads capsized their boat in midstream. It is known that neither boy was a good swimmer and that for this reason Mrs. Moles, mother of young Jerry, had protested against the trip.

The boys, who were inseparable companions, left home early Saturday morning, promising their parents that they would be back by nightfall. Before leaving home, young Daniels turned over his week's wages to his mother, allowing himself only car fare for the trip down to the river.

When young Moles failed to return home Saturday night, Mrs. Daniels, becoming alarmed, telephoned the county police, who immediately began the search. It was not until 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, however, that her gravest fears were realized.

Boys Chums for Years.

Young Daniels, who is just 15 years old, lived with his mother at No. 71 Hightower street, while his companion, Jerry Moles, aged 17, resided with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles, at No. 34 Humphries street.

The boys had been inseparable companions for years, and are said to have been model youths.

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

Alleged Rioters in Jail at Statenville

VALDOSTA, July 1.—R. S. Williams, of Haylow, who, with his two sons and two other men, is charged with inciting a near-riot at Howell, has been arrested and lodged in jail at Statenville on an order issued by Judge W. E. Thomas, of Superior Court.

Williams and his followers are said to have gone to Howell with the avowed intention of killing Ben Wethering, Town Marshal. According to reports received here, the trouble was caused by an attempt of Marshal Wetherington to arrest a son of the elder Williams.

Dalton Man's Slayer Caught in Tennessee

DALTON, July 21.—Sheriff Glenn, accompanied by local officers, has gone to Cleveland, Tenn., for Dan Hatfield, wanted here on a charge of murder. Hatfield was caught by Cleveland officials a week after killing Will Parrish in North Dalton. There was a reward of $50 for his apprehension.

According to two eyewitnesses, Hatfield killed Parrish in self-defense. They are both in jail, charged with being accessories to the murder.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

CALLS HERETICS PREACHERS OF TO-MORROW

Dr. J. B. Robins, Extolling Gospel of Progress, Likes Freshness of New Thought.

A man who gets no new idea in twenty years ought to have been dead twenty years ago.

Nothing counts in life but the progressive.

The heretics of to-day are the preachers of to-morrow, and it has always been so.

New phases of old thoughts are what we need and want.

The above statements by Dr. J. B. Robins, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Sunday created a decided impression upon his congregation. His sermon was built around Paul, comparing the life of modern man to the life of Paul.

"Nearly every church has banished some man who is now teaching the world, uplifting men and giving a bigger outlook on religion and life. The old ideals are dead. The new ideals must be shown to the people.

"The preachers of to-day must know in what their people are interested. They must find out what reaches, touches and draws them, and knowing these things, must offer the religion of Christ as related to their needs. I like the freshness of the new thought. I find something in it that I find nowhere else.

"In the progression of human life religion enlarges itself as well as other things. Let us think of this and help to give the world the things it needs."

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Boifeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

SERUM CURE FOR INFLUENZA IS PERFECTED

Bad Colds Prevented by Newly Discovered Anti-Toxin, Says Philadelphia Doctor.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known as influenza, are being made by physicians of a medical laboratory near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr. Arthur Parker Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza.

Two years ago Dr. R. J. Allen, a London physician, conceived the theory that if "cold" germs were inoculated into the blood of a person afflicted with influenza a cure was bound to result. He also maintained his theory would hold good as applied to the prevention of the ailment as well.

The theory was taken up in this country about a year ago. Dr. C. P. Brown, Dr. Webb, of Swarthmore, and Dr. Nathan Ward, new dead, started to experiment with the vaccine and finally declared they had found that their efforts to inject an organism into a person afflicted with influenza had been successful.

In a nutshell, they held that the "no disease twice" idea might be as applicable in cases of catarrh and influenza as in diphtheria, typhoid, scarlet fever or smallpox.

To various Philadelphia physicians, among whom were Dr. W. Wayne Babcock and Dr. L. F. Ashcraft, quantities of the vaccine were given. Dr. Babcock has treated fifty patients and says he has found that in many instances the patient was entirely cured of catarrh or influenza.

One stirring feature of the results of the vaccine he discovered was that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time.

There is a slight reaction, but after that it is declared the patient suffers no more, and when the "cold" disappears there is very little likelihood of it ever appearing again.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR WILL BE HEEDED

Foreman Declares Inquisitorial Body Will Not Ride "Roughshod" Over Dorsey.

With Solicitor Dorsey reaffirming his certainty that Jim Conley will not be indicted before the tral of Leo M. Frank and declaring that he will fight with all his vigor any movement in that direction, the Grand Jury members gathered in the Thrower Building Monday morning in response to the call of Foreman Beatie to decide whether they will reopen their investigation of the Phagan murder mystery.

A strong probability that no action would be taken during the day arose when it became known that there were only eighteen of the grand jurors in the city, a bare quorum. In the event that all of the eighteen did not appear, there still was the opportunity to go out and summon talesmen at random to serve on the Grand Jury, but no statement was made as to whether this legal privilege would be exercised.

No Witnesses Called.

Foreman Beatie announced that no witnesses had been summoned as yet, giving confirmation to the report that the meeting was called only for the purpose of passing on the petitions requesting the Grand Jury to reopen the murder investigation, and not for the purpose of proceeding at once to the definite consideration of Jim Conley's indictment.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

"I can not conceive that these men, when they are in possession of the facts of the case, seriously will consider bringing an indictment for murder against Conley," said the Solicitor.

Foreman Beattie indicated that if a quorum were present and a decision were reached to go into the connection of Conley with the crime a number of witnesses would be served at once with subpenas and that an opportunity would be given for the presentation of all the important evidence against the negro.

He said, however, that the report that the meeting Monday was called for the definite and prearranged purpose of indicting Conley was utterly false.

Not to Ignore Dorsey.

"We have no intention of riding roughshod over the Solicitor," he said. "The purpose of our meeting to-day merely is to become informed on the question and to determine if we are warranted in reopening the investigation with a view of bringing an indictment against Conley in case the evidence is sufficient.

"We propose only to discuss the matter informally and to have the Solicitor lay before us his reasons for desiring no action at this time. We have no desire to block the Solicitor in his prosecution of the case or to defeat the ends of justice in any manner. If we come to the conclusion that the investigation should be made, we have a list of witnesses we will ask to have called."

William H. Mincey, author of the sensational affidavit which accused Conley of confessing to the killing of a girl on the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered, has returned to Atlanta, it was reported Monday, and is prepared to go before the Grand Jury to repeat his story. Min-

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Frank, said Monday that no move would be made by the defense for a continuance of the case, which is set for trial a week from to-day. He asserted that the lawyers for Frank were prepared to go ahead with the trial at once.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Always Votes on Local Bills—Clerk Depends on Him to Pass Many Laws.

Representative C. H. Stone of Taliaferro, frequently is as many as 106 members of the General Assembly at one time, and sometimes he is as many as 150.

Stone passes all the local bills. When one is up for passage, Clerk John T. Boifeuillet glances hastily in the direction of Stone, of Taliaferro, sees double, quadruple or sextuple, a dozen or so times, as the necessities of the occasion require, and announces, in stentorian tones, "On the passage of the bill, the ayes are 116 and the nays none!"

Stone knows that is him—that is, he knows he is the 116! Of course, he couldn't be the "none."

Stone conscientiously votes on all local bills. He would as soon think of forgetting his breakfast as forgetting to vote on a local bill.

Some members think Stone has a spite against himself or is doing penance for something, in that he never fails to hold up his hand when a local measure is hustling through, but Clerk Boifeuillet knows good and well that he can depend on Stone to pass 'em along, and that's why he always looks to Stone alone for the votes needed.

Stone is a fine fellow, however, as any man willing to sit there and pass great gobs and bunches of local bills every day or so must be. He is always in a good humor, and has a countenance that looks like Santa Claus' with the whiskers shaved off. He is immensely popular with his colleagues, and is rated safe and sane in all matters.

In his home town, Crawfordville, Stone is a leading citizen, influential and highly esteemed. He comes to the Legislature, as a matter of course, whenever he wishes to.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta Clergymen Argue For and Against Measure Now Before Legislature.

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lectures?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The movement in the Legislature either to cripple or abolish the present game laws of the State is not popular, and probably will not get anywhere in particular.

The present game and fish laws have been on the statute books long enough now for the good to begin to show—and it is showing in many sections of the State. Undoubtedly there are more quail in the fields nowadays than there have been for years past, and the fishing situation in hundreds of streams has been vastly benefitted.

As a matter of fact, when the game laws were first enacted, the quail had all but become extinct in Georgia. Not only that, but net fishermen had devastated the streams of all the fish worth while. Last year, on the other hand, the quail shooting was unusually good, and everywhere comes reports of improved fishing conditions.

Who, therefore, should be the sense in crippling or in any way weakening the present game laws? Who, also, is demanding that they be tampered with?

The impression is that only the most selfish of interests are behind the movement to harm the game laws, even though some of the members advocating the same may not know that, and that the movement should not succeed.

Georgia was many years in getting to the point where it realized the necessity of preserving its game. Had the Legislature seen the point earlier, the situation might have been remedied much sooner than it was. And even after a beginning was made it still was many more years before the laws were made adequate. Now, however, they are adequate—strong and effective.

Just why they should be tampered with is not apparent to many people who have no selfish interests in them.

The day of the pot hunter is over in Georgia—or, surely ought to be over, anyway.

The General Assembly had a great time in Augusta Saturday, as everybody knew it would.

Nowhere is genuine Southern hospitality, at its best and in the more dignified meaning of the words, to be encountered as in the old city of Augusta. The people there are mostly of pure Georgia stock, the sons and daughters and grandsons and granddaughters of people there before them, away back yonder before the war.

Hospitality is repressed, but generous, in Augusta. Things are done for visitors, without those visitors realizing exactly how. Courtesy, quiet and unostentatious, is extended, without any fuss or feathers. Everything is most pleasant, most delightful, when Augusta is on the job of entertaining!

It was a long, dusty, hot trip to Augusta—there and back the same day—but it was altogether worth while. The Legislature gladly and willingly testifies to that!

Judge Carl Vinson's announcement for Congress has aroused considerable interest throughout the State, and particularly in the Tenth District.

Few men in Georgia deserve more credit than Carl Vinson. He began life with practically nothing, and while he does not own any great number of coupon bonds yet, he still is getting along from fair to middling well. He has served his county creditably in the House of Representatives, and last session was Speaker Pro Tem. If elected to Congress, he will make a first-class member—no doubt of that.

Vinson used to be a newsboy in Milledgeville, and later along became something of a magnate in that business. With the savings of several years, he went to Mercer University, where he graduated with distinction and honors.

He is now a practicing attorney in Milledgeville, and is judge of the County Court of Baldwin.

There are three opinions prevailing in the Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railroad—the State's biggest piece of property.

One faction inclines to sell the road outright, a second faction inclines to extend it to the Atlantic Ocean, and a third faction inclines to let it alone and re-lease it as it now is.

The present lease expires in 1919, and, therefore, the matter of the road's disposition is already a matter of great concern, and speculation is general as to just what will become of it.

The present Legislature will make no immediate specific recommendations, of course, because there not only is plenty of time left in which to adjust the matter, but anything this Legislature might do would, perhaps, be subject to revision by future Legislatures—unless a hard and fast bargain were entered into at once, which is not within the range of the probable.

The Western and Atlantic's release, or sale, or extension, is a problem of far-reaching complications, involving not only the finest property the State of Georgia has, but the settlement of a question pending between the State and Chattanooga, involving the State of Tennessee.

Prohibitionists generally in Georgia are watching developments in Macon with interested eyes.

A number of saloons in that city have been closed by process of injunction, under the act permitting the abatement of nuisances, and if that movement is sustained by the Supreme Court, it is contended that the prohibitionists of Georgia will need no further Tippins bills, Webb bill, or any other sort of bills, to make prohibition effective.

At least one case will be carried up promptly from the city of Macon as a test. Upon it prohibitionists are building their fondest hopes, while the other fellows are anxiously watching to see what happens.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN'S GREAT BASEBALL TEAM

All the important leagues of baseball are now in action. So are tens of thousands of fans. So are also the men who write of the doings of the diamond stars for those same fans to read.

It is the newspaper with the STAR TEAM of writers that makes the strongest appeal to baseball enthusiasts.

BUT—to be stars, baseball players and writers about the diamond warriors must be fair and square. That is an essential part of KNOWING THE GAME.

Here Is The Hearst Sunday American Team for 1913

CHRISTY MATHEWSON—For years the famous pitcher for the New York Giants. Known everywhere as one of the brainiest players in the business and one of the squarest in whatever he writes about the game of which he is master.

JOE AGLER—The Crackers' sensational first-sacker. He is giving local fans all the "inside" news of Billy Smith's aggregation. His comments on plays are immense.

W. S. FARNSWORTH—His stories of the big league teams are right up to the minute. Having traveled with the New York Yankees, New York Giants and Boston Red Sox during the past seven years, he is able to tell of the "workings" of the major league clubs.

PERCY H. WHITING—For over seven years he has been writing Southern League baseball. He is the dean of Southern diamond experts and has the largest following this side of the Mason and Dixon line. He is fearless in his writings and always tells the truth.

SAM CRANE—A big league ball player for years and personally acquainted with all the major leaguers. For the past twenty years he has been writing baseball and is considered the greatest student of the game in the world. He travels with the National League Champion Giants.

DAMON RUNYON—The wittiest baseball writer in the East. He tells of the big league games in a manner that has a laugh in every line. But he never gets away from baseball like most of the humorous followers of the diamond warriors.

W. J. McBETH—His "inside" stories of big league games cannot be beaten. He sticks to facts and figures and his predictions are followed by thousands of fans. He has traveled as "war correspondent" with nearly every big league team during the past ten years.

CHARLEY DRYDEN—The Mark Twain of baseball. For years he has traveled with New York, Philadelphia and Chicago teams and his writings are baseball classics. He is personally acquainted with every big league player and probably has the largest following of any baseball expert in the country.

A. H. C. MITCHELL—Considered the greatest expert in the New England States. His stories of last fall's world's series were marvels. He roasts when a roast is coming and praises when praise is due. He has been writing baseball for twenty years.

ALLEN SANGREE—He is well known in the South, having been here with big league teams on training trips for the past fifteen years. He will travel with the New York Yankees this season, and his stories of Russell Ford and Ed Sweeney, former Crackers, will be of especial interest to local fandom.

J. W. McCONAUGHY—Popular with Eastern baseball fans because of his fearless writings. He never gets away from the truth, but tells a straight, readable story. He has been writing baseball in St. Louis and New York for twelve years.

J. W. HEISMAN—Considered the greatest college coach in the South. His college stories are copied by every paper in this part of the United States. His predictions are seldom wrong, and his weekly review of Southern college teams cannot be beaten.

JOE BEAN—As coach of Marist he has led all the other prep school coaches a merry chase. A few years ago he was the star shortstop of the New York Giants. His stories are bright and interesting.

INNIS BROWN—For four years he was considered one of the greatest athletes that ever attended Vanderbilt. His baseball stories of college teams are read by every undergraduate and graduate in the South.

ATLANTA GREEK BALKAN HERO; SAVED FLAG

John Mahos, Waiter, who Answered Call to Colors, Badly Wounded in Thrilling Dash.

Members of Atlanta's Greek colony Monday told a Georgian reporter stories of remarkable heroism and thrilling tragedy concerning their fellows who returned home to fight in the Balkan war. They are stories of individual acts and experience not related in the press dispatches.

Nick Mahos, one of the proprietors of the Manhattan Cafe, on Marietta street, has a brother lying in a hospital in Tepelene, suffering from three bullet wounds.

He is John Mahos, and had many acquaintances in Atlanta a few months ago when he was serving ham and eggs and club sandwiches in the cafe. In the Greek army he was given the rank of sergeant soon after enlisting. He was stationed at Tepelene, near the Albanian border, when his first opportunity came. In a letter to his brother here he tells of it.

Rescues Country's Flag.

The Albanians in a small village took possession of the military headquarters and replaced the Greek flag with the colors of Albania. Mahos' commander ordered him with a detachment to rescue the flag.

He obeyed like a soldier and reraised the flag. But half his men were killed and he was wounded three times.

George Phelis, at one time one of the proprietors of the Manhattan Cafe, has been active in the Balkan service and has written some thrilling accounts of inside conflicts. He was in Salonika when King George was assassinated and was well acquainted with the soldier that captured the assassin.

How Brave Brothers Fell.

Phelis has narrated the experiences of two Marcos brothers which throbs with the action of the old Greek classics.

The oldest boy, Leonidas, was sent to his father, and an uncle who had prospered in America took the younger, Aristos.

Aristos forgot his Greek and became a fully educated American citizen. Leonidas heard but little of his brother, but grew to be a loyal subject of King George.

It was a strange fate that brought them together in the Balkan war. Two volunteers had been asked for to deliver a message through the Turkish line to a general 25 miles away.

"Leonidas Marcos," answered a young man who held up his hand.

Aristos, hearing the name, said he, too, would go. Aristos could speak but little Greek and Leonidas could say less English. But they discovered they were brothers.

Because of the importance of the journey they were made to swear to do their duty. Leonidas swore by the flag of Greece. Aristos swore by the Stars and Stripes. Each was given a flag of his country.

They went. But when they returned they falteringly told that the general could not be found.

Killed by the Turks.

Angry, their commander threatened to shoot them as cowards. But they plead that they had been true to their trust and finally were sent the second time to deliver the message.

Their mutilated bodies were found a few days later by the general they were trying to reach. They had been captured by the Turks. Their hands and feet had been cut off.

The general whom they had sought explained to the commander of the brave young men that he had changed his position about twenty miles and was beyond reach.

Leonidas and Aristos were given a burial with every ceremony. Phelis writes that their heroism is as great as any of the war.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Cardinal Gibbons, 79, Says Life Is Ebbing

BALTIMORE, July 21.—"On Wednesday I shall be seventy-nine years old," said Cardinal Gibbons, as he sat in his study to-day. And then he added, in a gentle voice: "I do not think I will live much longer. My life is nearly spent.

"I will soon be an octogenarian," said the Cardinal, smilingly, "and nature must take its course. Almighty God has blessed me with a long life, and I am ready to answer whenever he sees fit to call me to render an account of my stewardship."

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Wants Divorce From 'Silver-Spoon' Wife

PITTSBURG, July 21.—Declaring that his wife had been born with a silver spoon in her mouth, and that he had "grown tired trying to keep it there," F. W. Lego, a prominent merchant here, brought suit to-day for an absolute divorce against Mary Wendel Lego.

ONE MORE EXTRA VOTE OFFER IS TO BE MADE

Pony Contestants Took Advantage of Club Bonus—Nine Days of Race Remain.

Within a few days fifteen more ponies will arrive for the boys and girls in The Georgian and American contest. This means but one thing—the end of the contest draws near.

Another epoch in the competition ended Saturday night, when the bonus offer for clubs of $35, $25 and $15 closed. Almost every contestant took advantage of this generous allowance of extra votes and managed to get at least one club.

Another bonus offer will be announced at once, but those, if any, who have been "holding back" with the idea that the final bonus offer would be as much help to them as those preceding will be disappointed, for the reason that it would be unfair to give the tardy workers an even chance with those who "got busy" earlier in the game.

Monday over, but nine days remain in the contest—nine working days—a week and a half. These concluding days must be filled with endeavor by every contestant, for there is not one in the lot who is a sure winner—that much is certain.

No boy or girl can count with assurance on a pony. It is anyone's race as yet. Which is just as it should be from all points of view except the lazy boy's.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of biliousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have deevoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germanf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

Yqu are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora prp nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This has been a vary hot day down town, & I am afrade the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn.
"'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly.
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty insisted that something was following them. But nothing further happened. They found no trace of any man excepting on the steps of the watch tower, where the dust was almost obliterated with footprints.

"This ghost wears shoes and climbs the stairs a lot, Rusty," commented Warren.

A Clew to the Ghost.

As they descended they were aware of an intermittent knocking sound that seemed to come from a distant part of the castle. Cautiously they followed they sound, and it led them toward the great banquet hall. As they approached through the lower apartments Jarvis began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

: : : Winning a Welcome : : :

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well, what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that, horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I. "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonstrations. The argument has been made that one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old malden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslick lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the hand, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

Our Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed, the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many they are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

One Proof Is That I Wear an Apron

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room if you want to tell the maid you're "not at home."

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

By Nell Brinkley

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!'"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious, I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 20 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman bother and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 5,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread hanished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close.

"And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

* * *

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the Old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

* * *

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

FORBES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

V. TILSON WINS GOLF TOURNEY FROM H. BLOCK

THE President's Cup, most important of the mid-season tournaments of the Atlantic Athletic Club, has been won by V. V. Tilson. In the finals, after a grueling all-day struggle, Tilson defeated Hamilton Block 5-3. In the second flight, made up of the losers in the first round of the first flight, H. P. D. Cowee won from T. L. Cooper, 4-3.

The Tilson-Block match was bitterly contested. The winner was blessed with a handicap of 21 strokes, while the loser has a handicap of 7. Tilson had fairly breezed to the finals, running foul of but one tough match; and that one in the third round, when he defeated Bob Jones, Sr. Block, on the other hand, had been extended to the utmost in getting to the finals and had won two 19-hole matches in the course of his perilous career toward the ultimate show-down.

The final round between Tilson and Block was full of fine golf. The loser played a gallant game, but his opponent was plugging steadily along and, thanks to a husky handicap, was invincible.

Cowee, the winnef of the second flight, had comparatively easy sailing in the finals. He was never in trouble. Cowee, by the way, was put out of the first flight and back into second by the winner of the first flight tournament, V. Tilson.

Conzelman or Price Will Pitch

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 21.—Billy Smith is going to start Conzelman or Price against the Turtles in the first game of the series this afternoon, with Chapman catching. It is the manager's hope to take at least two of the three games here which will put the Crackers in pretty good shape for the coming engagements with Montgomery and Mobile, where the boys are looking for tough battles.

There isn't much to be said of the row yesterday. Wilson was mighty good in the first game, while Clarke, making his bow to the public, contributed to his own downfall with two errors and a wild pitch in the first inning. At that, the forkhander worked a good game all the rest of the way, the final count being 3 to 1.

* * *

RAIN broke up the second contest, with Price going at top speed and making the Pels look foolish in the first three innings. The Crackers had a big margin when the bottom fell out and drowned them out of an even break on the day and a victory on the series.

Jakey Atz was back in the New Orleans line-up, and, with Adams back of the wood, the Pels looked a good deal harder to beat than in the opening games.

* * *

THE boys reached here this morning full of pep and confidence, and believe they are going to clean up, especially if Conzelman pitches the "jump game." He seems to have something on the Turtles, having won both the games he has started against them.

Billy Smith had quite a time making room in his luggage for the big loving cup presented to him yesterday by his New Orleans admirers.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

LYNCH FINES SCRAPPERS.

NEW YORK, July 21.—President Lynch, of the National League, fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman Magee, of the St. Louis Club, $25 each for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELIEVE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced today that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will notbenecessary for him to stoop so much.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Dooin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zeider was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

* * *

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of 'high-speed' oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and he spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final Heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second Heat of Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third Heat of Special Match Race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

Contestants—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

MONTANA HAS BEST BOXING COMMISSION

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 21.—There's one safe and sane place on the fighting map where boxing will flourish for a long time, because it is run by the best hands and conducted for the sport's sake because they think it's good sport. That place is Butte, Mont. They are guarding the game there as carefully as it is possible to guard any sport, and the men who form the boxing commission in the State are a reputable and representative lot. And they are not following the lead of New York or any other State, nor are they going by any timeworn and dogeared precedents. They are handling the game on a fair and unbiased basis. Hence the game is flourishing there.

* * *

JUST now the Montana commission is made up of John F. Davies, a Butte attorney; Dr. Cooney, of Helena, and B. Markham, a Billings sport writer, with W. McGrath, a court clerk of Butte, acting as secretary. This commission is in constant ringside attendance at all of the contests and notes with great care all that transpires in even the minor bouts. The rules formulated by the commission are for the protection of the club as well as the boxer. Perhaps the strongest rule they have calls for a physical examination of the boxers three days before the contest, and the test is one of the most severe that could be framed. Tommy Walsh, who had Knockout Brown boxing there July 4 with Jimmy Howard, says the examination is the most thorough he ever saw, and predicts that many a man will fall in it during the coming winter season there. It is modeled on the lines of an army test.

* * *

ALL boxers are required to get on the scales the day before the contest, and if there is any trouble over the scaling, it will come up then and not the day of the battle or a few hours before. This does away with a lot of eleventh-hour hitches. At least one member of the commission is present at the scales, and there is no possibility of any shady work.

* * *

ONE of the best rules formulated by the commission is that requiring a club to furnish new sets of gloves for every bout, of no matter what importance. The preliminary boys, as well as the wind-up stars, are thus protected fully, and nobody is asked to use old, dried-up gloves that cut like knives. The gloves must be of the best make, too, and are carefully inspected by the commission before they are given to the boxers.

* * *

JUST now there are two boxing clubs in Butte, which is the boxing center of the State. Jack Regan operates the big club of the city, the one at which the Clabby-McGoorty contest was decided. Jack is the progressive young man who recently offered a purse of $12,000 for a twelve-round contest between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross. He expects to decide some of the biggest battles in the country during the winter. Jack's rival is the Copper City A. C., with Jerry McCarthy at its head. This is the club that decided the Brown-Howard encounter.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The fight for second place in both leagues is waxing hot. The Senators are right on the trail of the Naps, while the Pirates in their rush upward are likely soon to overhaul the Phillies.

* * *

The Yankees are continuing their mad fight to get out of the cellar position, opening up a series in Detroit with a victory.

* * *

Southpaw "Eddie" Plank pitched in world's series form yesterday and the Athletics shut out the Browns.

* * *

A fumble by Chapman in the ninth inning paved the way for the Red Sox victory over the Naps.

* * *

Big Jeff Tesreau and Walter Johnson are the strike out kings in their respective leagues. The Ozark bear has caused 111 batsmen to retire, humbled by his prowess, while "wonderful Walter" has breezed 127 batsmen.

* * *

Whether the Pirates will have a lookin on the pennant will be demonstrated in the series with the Giants beginning to-morrow. Four games are scheduled and the Pirates must get better than an even break to cut down the thirteen-game handicap separating them from the leaders.

Baldwin Makes a Hit on Coast

Leach Cross in for Hard Fight

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Matty Baldwin, who is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the New York dentist, Leach Cross, on Tuesday night, July 29, went through an impressive work-out at the St. Ignatius Club gym yesterday afternoon. While Baldwin did not extend himself at any time in his workouts, his ease of style and complete mastery of the boxing game were apparent, and Cross should have considerable difficulty in holding him off to the limit.

Leach Cross traveled six rounds with Louis Reese and Johnny O'Leary, going three with each, and in addition went through the full routine of gym work. Cross showed excellent form and appears to be in the best of condition.

Bud Anderson was able to leave the hospital yesterday for the first time and is now convalescing at his Venice apartment. Bud will remain at Venice until fully able to travel. He expects to be able to enter the ring again within two or three months.

Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee, who are to meet in the Vernon arena on Admission Day, were both interested spectators at the Cross workout yesterday. Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones, will be here in a few days, when the final arrangements for the bout will be completed.

Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is expected here to-morrow morning. It is understood that an agreement is under consideration whereby Ritchie is to box here on both Labor Day and on Thanksgiving, possibly taking on the winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout on the earlier date and Joe Rivers in November.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Charlie White, the Chicago sensation, left Saturday night for Chicago. The easy manner in which Charlie handled Jake Abel at the Auditorium-Armory is still the talk of the town. White hopes to meet Frankie Whitney or some other good boy here in the near future.

* * *

Kid Young is now after a return match with Charlie Lee. The kid is of the opinion that he can beat Lee if given another chance, and has offered the latter a neat side bet.

* * *

Eddie Hanlon, who sprung a surprise by defeating Terry Nelson is now after bigger game. Hanlon says he will meet any 135-pound boy the promoters can secure to box him.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White and K. O. Brown, is anxious to bring his middleweight battler to Atlanta. Brown fights Klaus at Butte, Mont., on August 2 in a 12-round combat.

* * *

Eddie Campi has finally secured a return engagement with Kid Williams. Tom McCarey is to stage the bout some time next month.

* * *

Charlie White bids fair to be one of the busiest lightweights in the country. Cincinnati wants White to box Johnny Griffiths; Kenosha is after Charlie to clash with Jack Britton; Winnipeg has wired White an offer to take on Freddie Welch, while Milwaukee is trying to clinch a White-Pal Brown match.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, refuses to admit that his protege is all in. Joe writes from New Orleans that he still expects to see Thomas get to the top of the lightweight division. He would like to get Joe a match with Jake Abel.

* * *

Sailor Petroskey, the coast middleweight, has signed articles to box Bob McAllister in a scheduled twenty-round mill on August 8. They have agreed th weigh in at 160 pounds at 5 o'clock for a night fight.

* * *

Tommy Murphy's press agent is not working overtime these days. Perhaps the weather is too hot for him.

* * *

Billy Gibson hopes to cinch a match between Champion Willie Ritchie and Packey McFarland, the Chicago wizard. This would be some bout, and the talent should not overlook the wonderful Packey.

* * *

Arthur Pelky is studiously avoiding a meeting with Jess Willard, preferring a match with Gunboat Smith.

* * *

Jeff O'Connell, the veteran lightweight, tried to come back the other night against Danny Goodman. The latter was awarded the decision after six rounds of hard fighting. The bout was staged at Aurora, Ill.

* * *

Kid Brooks is still waiting for Kid Duke to post a side bet for a return go. The pair clashed about two weeks ago, and Kid Duke claimed he had the better of his opponent. Ever since then, Brooks has been after a return bout with his rival.

* * *

Frankie Whitney added another victory to his long list on Friday night. Whitney handed Phil Knight a neat lacing in a ten-round set-to at Denver, Colo. Whitney was scheduled to meet Unholz, but the latter was forced to call off the scrap on account of illness.

SHAMROCK IV NAME OF NEW CHALLENGER FOR 1912 CUP

LONDON, July 21.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht which will try for the America's cup in a series of races in 1914, the conditions for which have been signed and forwarded by the Royal Ulster Yacht Club to the New York Yacht Club, will be named Shamrock IV.

LARGE FORFEIT ASSURES WORLD BASEBALL TOUR

CHARLES A. COMISKEY, president of the Chicago White Sox, guaranteed the proposed world's tour of his club and the New York Giants. The Old Roman posted in Chicago yesterday a $15,000 forfeit to assure transportation. John J. McGraw has likewise posted a guarantee, but for only twenty-five people, half the number that Comiskey has covered.

Teams Sail November 19.

The teams will sail from Vancouver, B. C., on November 19, making the trip to the coast on a special train. Several exhibitions will be played en route.

"The trip will be made," said Ban Johnson yesterday, "whether or not either or both teams win a pennant or a world's series. Special dispensation, covering such an emergency, has been granted by the National Commission. In no case, however, would a team be advertised as a world's champion. I think the tourists will be largely composed of American and National League stars. Perhaps no more than half a dozen athletes of each club will be on hand for the long journey.

Johnson Praises Trip.

"I am going part of the way," concluded Mr. Johnson. "I shall take in China and Japan. I think the trip will be a great benefit to baseball. It will be a sight-seeing excursion for the party. The players will not be overworked. The number of games played will be comparatively few—not enough to interfere with the 1914 campaign in any way."

Lillian's Husband to Turn Beauty Doctor

PITTSBRG, July 21.—Lillian Russell's husband, Alexander P. Moore, president and editor of The Pittsburg Leader, which has for its political slogan, "For President in 1916, Theodore Roosevelt," will forsake journalism to manufacture his wife's beauty lotions, according to friends here. He is expected to resign when he returns from Europe in August.

It is reported that political and business interests have besought William Flinn, Bull Moose leader and principal backer of The Leader, to bring about a change.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Brown Estate Lots Are Sold by Foster

Frontage of 800 Feet Changes Hands. Apartment Encroachment—Realty Election—Cash Sales.

Certain properties in the estate of the late Julius L. Brown are gradually being disposed of through the administrator, ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, and Atlanta real estate agents. Some time ago a tract was sold on Decatur street, semi-central property, at a good price, and the Julius Brown home on Washington street was put on the market.

The latest sale is of fifteen vacant lots fronting 800 feet on Little and Crew streets to a client of the Foster & Robson Agency, and of an adjoining lot for the Exchange Bank to Victor L. Smith. The prices are withheld. The sales were made by W. A. Foster, of the above agency.

The Joseph E. Brown property near the Soldiers' Home has been placed with an agency for subdivision.

Lots of Cash for Property.

Cash sales are again coming to the front. Judge W. R. Hammond has sold to Edward England through I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore Agency, the two-story frame house at No. 218 North Jackson street, between Adams street and East avenue, for $6,600 cash. This property is 55 by 200 feet and is on the north side of the street. Mr. England will make his home there.

Paul Nuckols has sold to Mrs. S. W. Goode a parcel on Auburn avenue just east of Piedmont, 25 by 112 feet, for $11,000 cash. The transaction was handled through A. S. Hook, of the Foster & Robson Agency. The property is improved with a two-story brick building.

Encroachment of Building.

An encroachment of four inches on the city's sidewalk by the Ponce DeLeon apartments at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon avenue has been reported to Building Inspector Hays by Assistant Inspector C. J. Bowen, and the matter will be taken before the City Council.

Frontage at this point is worth about $1,200 a foot. An effort was made to widen Peachtree here, it will be recalled, before the apartments were started, but the project fell through.

Ansley Park Car Line.

A quiet movement has been on foot for several weeks to get a car line through Ansley Park, and those who are interested in the project are hoping for success. The idea is to extend the Piedmont avenue line, which stops just a few hundred yards south of the city limits, through to Polo drive, over that thoroughfare's stone bridge and thence to Rock Springs.

The people of the Rock Springs section have been seeking a car line many months, and it seems to be simply a question of which route to choose to their neighborhood. The line, they have been assured, will be extended to Rock Springs, either through Ansley Park or by way of Piedmont avenue. Realizing what Edwin P. Ansley has done for the city, heavy owners in the Rock Springs section have felt inclined to pull for the Ansley Park route. The other way, however, would make it possible to widen Piedmont avenue.

"Ansley Park must soon have its car line," declared a well-known real estate dealer. "There are too many nickels for the street car company."

Sell Property for Taxes.

People who are accustomed to hunt real estate bargains in Atlanta will soon find their opportunity, although there won't be any chance to buy central or semi-central property at a reduction. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the Council Tax Committee, has discovered that the city holds overdue tax liens against $41,000 worth of property, mostly vacant lots, and he has ordered that they be sold. The date and the place of the sale will be announced later. Some of the property is improved with small buildings.

To Discuss Realty Loans.

An important meeting of the members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 314 of the State Capitol to urge the passage of the sinking fund investment bill, which provides for investing State reserve funds in real estate as a first lien as well as in bonds.

On the committee to see the proper authorities about this legislation are Harris G. White, president of the board; S. B. Turman, second vice president, and W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and a director of the board. They will not only appear before a legislative committee, but will use every effort between now and Tuesday to get all the real estate men to attend the meeting.

Representatitvee Field and Smith, of DeKalb, are the authors of the bill to repeal the measure of 1910, which restricts such loans to bonds. Real estate constitutes about 69 per cent of the taxable values in Fulton County and about 54 per cent in the State, and because of this it is held that such discrimination should not exist.

Results of Realty Elections.

"There is plenty of work before the Atlanta Real Estate Board in the next year," declared Harris G. White Friday night at the Cafe Durand, in accepting the position of president to succeed Charles P. Glover. "For some time I have been in close touch with the affairs of the board, and I know what it means to run this organization. I want all of you to make suggestions and take an active interest, and we are sure to demonstrate the need for the organization."

Mr. White's talk followed an impromptu parade around the room, escorted by Mr. Glover and S. B. Turman, with the land brokers singing "He's a jolly good fellow!" and things like that. Charles P. Glover spoke briefly on the duties of the past year and predicted success under President White. A vote of thanks was given him, S. B. Turman eulogized him and the members voted thanks to all the retiring officers.

Others elected were John J. Woodside, vice president; S. B. Turman, second vice president; Van B. Smith, secretary, and H. W. Dews, treasurer.

The following six directors were elected to serve until 1914: Forrest Adair, W. A. Foster, S. L. Dallas, G. M. McKinnon, J. H. Ewing and J. W. Dobbins. The following six will serve until 1915: Charles P. Glover, A. S. Hook, Edgar Morris, T. B. Gay, A. J. West and S. E. Davidson. The following were elected to serve as the appraisement committee R. O. Cochran, T. C. Holmes, W. L. DuPree, H. W. Dillin, Fitzhugh Knox, R. R. Otis. One more will be appointed by the president owing to the resignation of Walker Dunson.

A change in the by-laws was effected, allowing six directors to be elected each year to serve for the ensuing two years. This will allow six members of the twelve to end their terms every year, and will facilitate the work of the board.

The appraisement committee was raised from five to seven, and the board of directors from eleven to twelve.

Realty Men's Good Luck—Oil.

The Atlanta real estate fraternity has received with more than ordinary interest the news that four of its members—B. M. Grant, T. J. Cheshire, Myron Freeman and J. M. Fraser, all of the Grant Agency—have struck oil on a 160-acre tract which they bought some time ago near Oklahoma City, Okla. For a time the prospect looked hopeless, but while Mr. Grant was at Toxaway this week he received a telegram that the well was flowing 150 barrels a day. Mr. Grant and D. C. Lyle, of the Georgia Realty Company, a stockholder in the developing concern, the Huguely Company, went immediately to the scene.

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,

For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

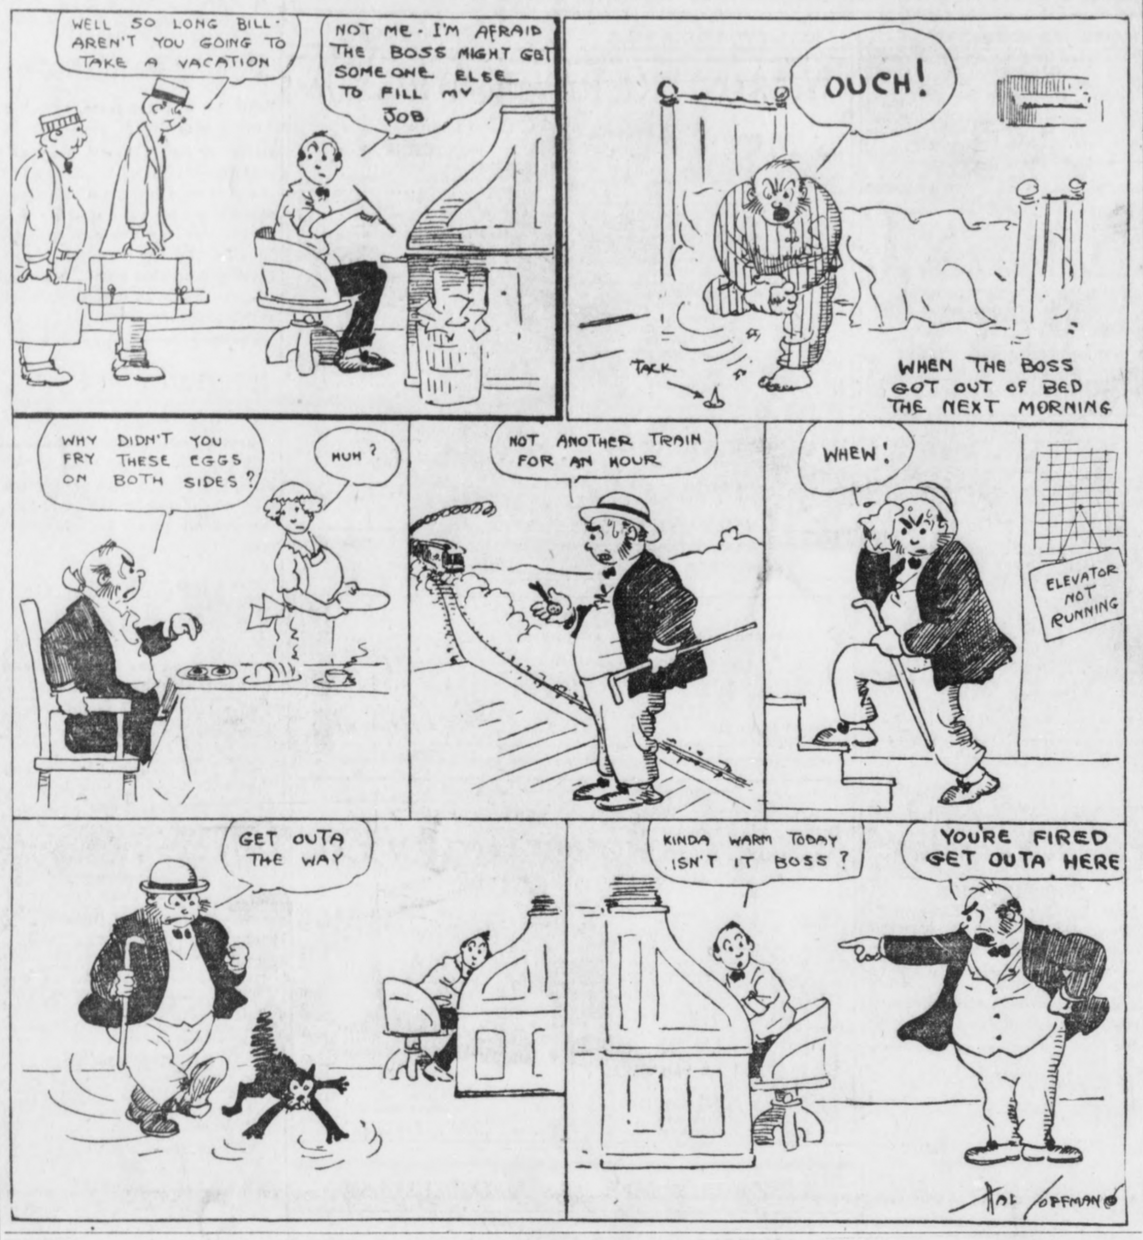

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

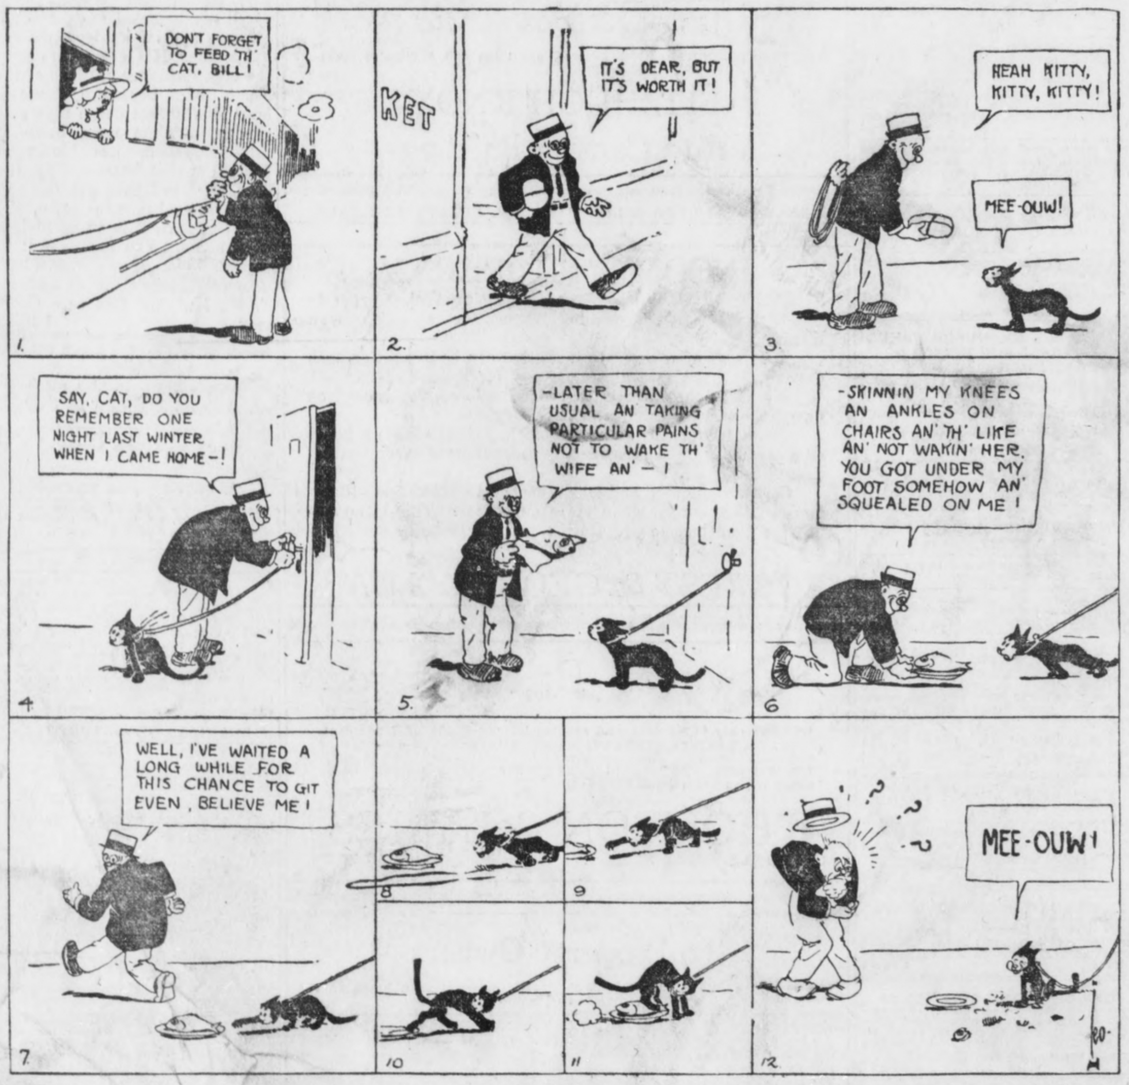

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Knowledge

Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

WILL NOT INDICT CONLEY, DORSEY SAYS

THROWS ACID AT WOMAN WITH HER HUSBAND

CROWD SEES ATTACK ON STREET

Peachtree Throng Sees Woman Tussle With Rival—Principals Make Escape.

Two women and a man who was said to be the husband of one engaged in a struggle before hundreds of pedestrians on Peachtree street in front of Parks-Chambers-Hardwick Company's store at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and fled before their names or the cause of the trouble could be discovered.

"Dr. Smith," shouted the second woman, who rushed up to the man and the woman in the store.

"Mrs. McRae again——"

The woman hurled a bottle of brownish liquid at her enemy. They clinched as they tussled toward the door, and those around said carbolic acid was used in the encounter.

Woman Makes Escape.

As a crowd rushed up the woman called Mrs. McRae hurried into the store and caught the elevator. She went to the third floor and hurried down the back stairs.

"Dr. Smith" and the woman who had made the attack hurried around the corner.

A policeman who was on the corner had rushed up. He said he talked with the woman called Mrs. McRae. She said her opponent was the divorced wife of Dr. Smith and that they had been separated for five years.

No Arrests Made.

The policeman said he noticed a little blood on the woman's arm. As all participants hurried away and no one who was present desired a prosecution the policeman said he would make no arrest.

Clerks in the store said they did not recognize any of the principals with the possible exception of the man. They were not sure about him, but thought he lived in a downtown hotel.

All they knew of the affair was what they saw and the exclamations of the woman said to be the divorced wife of the man.

The man, they said, seemed so bewildered by the fury of the woman who had attacked his companion that his only thought seemed to be to get away.

Chauffeur Faints At Wheel From Effects of Heat

J. L. Walton, 38 years old, a chauffeur residing at 16 Ashby street, collapsed from effects of the heat while driving his automobile down Peachtree street shortly after noon Saturday.

Walton slid down in his seat, releasing the steering wheel. A pedestrian, passing, noticed the man's plight, and, jumping into the machine, brought it to a stop.

Walton was rushed to the Grady Hospital in a semi-conscious state.

Prompt Arbitration Urged by Trainmen

Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, and A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors.

"Delay or failure to confirm such appointments only makes it more impossible for us to control the situation," they asserted.

Alderman J. H. Harwell, famed for his wit, Saturday asked Mayor Woodward if he ever expected to quit quarreling. Mayor Woodward replied that already he had quit. The bond commission was in session and proof of the change immediately was demanded.

"If you mean that, Jim, dance a jig while I pat," said Alderman Harwell.

Alderman Harwell patted his hands and kept time with his foot while Mayor Woodward cut a few fine capers across the committee room of the City Hall and the committeemen roared with laughter.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Mrs. Barbara Vaughn, of this city, who was shot in the forehead 30 years ago, was seized with a violent fit of sneezing at her home and the bullet dropped out of her nose.

BOARDER IS ACCUSED OF ARSON

Rooming House Keeper Also Says Man Tried to Poison Her. Jealous, Police Say.

Police investigation of the burning of the home of Mrs. A. C. Klapper, at No. 256 East Hunter street, Saturday morning, for which G. A. Vaughn, an employee of the Boston Trading Company and a roomer at the Klapper home, is held on suspicion of being the incendiary, took a new and unexpected turn Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Klapper, when questioned by Detective Coker, declared that Vaughn tried to poison her one day last week.

"I was sick," Mrs. Klapper said, "and asked Vaughn to bring me a glass of water. He was very nervous when he brought it, and I became suspicious that something was wrong. I looked into the glass, and lying on the bottom were some white powders. I was sure they were poison, and refused to drink the water. Vaughn offered to bring me another glass, but I refused to have it.

Calls Boarder Jealous.

"I am sure Vaughn tried to poison me. He is insanely jealous of me, and he has several times threatened to hurt me and to destroy my property."

Vaughn was taken from his cell and grilled by Detective Coker and Chief of Detectives Lanford for more than an hour Saturday morning, in the hope of getting him to admit some connection with the burning of the Klapper home. He was also asked about Mrs. Klapper's assertion that he tried to poison her.

He admitted taking her the water, but denied that there were any powders in the glass.

Love Affair Alleged.

The police say that Vaughn was in love with Mrs. Klapper, and declare that she admitted that he had paid her attentions for the past year or more.

In addition to the police investigation, State Fire Marshal W. R. Joyner announced Saturday morning that he has started a probe of the fire which destroyed the roof of Mrs. Klapper's home, causing damage of $500. According to the firemen, the blaze started in a closet in Vaughn's room on the second floor.

Vaughn was charged with trying to burn the building by Mrs. Klapper. According to the story she told the police, she quarreled with Vaughn before he went to work this morning, and Vaughn made threats and then went into his room.

Calls House Over Phone.

A few minutes later, she says, he hurried downstairs and went downtown. Half an hour later he called her on the telephone and asked if everything was all right, she says, and one of the other boarders who answered the phone told him the house was on fire. Vaughn immediately left his office and rushed to the scene of the fire. Mrs. Klapper was standing near the door wringing her hands, when Vaughn appeared and started into the house. She intercepted him.

"You've burned my house!" she screamed. "I'll have you arrested."

Mrs. Klapper began struggling with Vaughn, and Call Officer Watson came up. At the request of the woman, who declared she would prefer a formal charge against him, Vaughn was arrested and taken to police headquarters.

Slit Skirts Only for Old Folks, Says Judge

LEXINGTON, KY., July 20.—"Grown-up folks may wear slit gowns, but the young shall not," declared Judge J. P. Scott, of the Juvenile Court, here in sending Margaret Murphy, 16, to a convent for having improper guardianship. The girl was arrested while "joy riding" with a young man. She was dressed in a smart slit gown.

PACT SPLITS BOARD AND MAYOR

Both Swearingen and Jacksonville Trustees Want Place, but Can't Agree on Means.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 20.—The fight between the Board of Bond Trustees and Mayor Van C. Swearingen seems to be drawing to a close in one particular and widening in another. Both sides have agreed that the matter must be settled, but there is a division of opinion as to the manner in which it is to be brought about.

The Mayor wants to take the question to the courts and the Bond Trustees want to name a board of arbitrators. The point to be decided in this instance will be, where is the dividing line between the two different branches of the city government when it comes to authority over the police.

At a conference between the Mayor and four of the members of the Board of Bond Trustees the matter of suspending Chief Roach was not mentioned. Mayor Swearingen declares he considers the chief suspended and believes he would be sustained by the law and the courts.

City Attorney P. H. Odom on Saturday gave the Mayor an opinion in the case, in which he declared that the Mayor had the right to suspend the chief of the department. The Mayor has not as yet filed his charges against the new chief and stated today that he did not know when he would do so.

Seattle Sailors on Ship Under Guard; Socialists in Jail

SEATTLE, WASH., July ".—Sailors and officers from the reserve fleet who went ashore yesterday and raided Socialist and Industrial Workers of the Wolrd headquarters, doing $6,000 damage, are to-day under special patrol guard on the Virginia, the flagship of Rear Admiral Reynolds.

Many Industrial Workers are in jail, having sought refuge there last night from personal violence which they feared at the hands of the sailors and 100 militiamen and citizens who assisted them.

The city of Seattle has ordered an investigation, and naval authorities have requested a report on the conduct of the sailors.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, whose address incited the sailors, said his references to the undesirability of the red flag in America were not intended for local application.

Marshalls to Lose The 'Borrowed Baby'

WASHINGTON, July 20.—There is grief in the Marshall household and the Vice President has lost much of his accustomed cheerfulness, for the "borrowed baby," Thomas Marshall Sutherland, is going home.

The baby has been for two months the light and sunshine of the Vice Presidential apartment, but now he misses "mamma" and "mamma" misses him, so that, reluctantly, the Marshalls are going to return him to his parents, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. D Sutherland, in Berkley Springs, Md.

NEW ENTRY ENLIVENS BIG BEAUTY CONTEST

Athletic girl whose face friends say should adorn Booster Button

Search for Atlanta's prettiest is talk of the town.

Miss Helen Goodrich Considered Excellent Type. Race Is Gaining Popularity.

The beauty contest Saturday caught all eyes that hitherto have evaded its lure with the nomination of Miss Helen Goodrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Goodrich, of No. 801 Edgewood avenue, Inman Park.

The whole object of beauty, of course, is to attract the eye. The question of whose face is to adorn the "500,000 Club" booster buttons has come to dominate the talk of the town. Atlanta is famous for her pretty girls.

Miss Goodrich is a graceful, athletic girl with very rich brown hair and deep brown eyes. She is regarded as a fine type of Atlanta girl.

The beauty contest is to continue for some days yet. Who the prettiest girl is to be is as much a puzzle as it was at the beginning. Yet the question must be decided before the "500,000 Club" buttons can be ordered and the club actually organized.

Nominate your candidate at once and send in her photograph.

Proposal to Rename Street Stirs Council

Council is being stirred by the attempt to change the name of Murphy avenue to Whitehall street. Councilman T. J. Kimbrough, of the Tenth Ward, made the suggestion. An attempt to have the question taken up Friday was made by Mr. Kimbrough, but objection by Chairman Orville Hall on the grounds that property owners should be given a hearing held up the proposition. It is planned to continue Whitehall street to the city limits.

The Street Committee has under advisement also the changing of the names of McDaniel, Exposition and Lowndes streets.

Two Near Death in Auto-Trolley Crash

W. E. Jones, driver of a Coca-Cola auto truck, and the motorman of a Courtland street car had a narrow escape from death Saturday morning when truck and car collided at the corner of Courtland and Pine streets. The truck escaped damage, while the front of the car was wrecked.

Both Jones and the motorman jumped for their lives when they saw a collision was unavoidable. Passengers on the car were thrown about, but no injuries were reported.

Charges have been filed against Jones for reckless driving. He will be given a hearing in Recorder's Court Monday.

What, Woman Jury? 'No,' Says a Woman

CHICAGO, July 20.—A woman refused to-day to consent to a jury of twelve women, "tried and true," to try her case in court.

Mrs. Elizabeth Schank, a dressmaker, defendant in a suit over a $50 dress made for Mrs. R. Davenport, declared men, "who are the best judges of veracity," shall hear the case.

"What! a woman jury?" exclaimed Mrs. Schank, after talking with her lawyer. "Not on your life!"

Action on the bill introduced by Representative Aiken, of Brunswick, to provide for the refunding of the bonded indebtedness of municipalities was postponed when the measure was given a hearing Friday afternoon by the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

Judge Harry F. Dunwody, of Brunswick, appeared in favor of the bill, while Attorney John D. Little, of Atlanta, opposed it.

SOLICITOR IS CERTAIN NO BILL WILL BE FOUND

Attorneys for Defense Want Venire Drawn From Grand Jury Box.

Solicitor Dorsey expressed assurance Saturday afternoon that the Grand Jury never would indict Jim Conley before the trial of Leo M. Frank.

At the same time it became known that attorneys for the defense had made the usual move of asking that the jurors to pass on the guilt or innocence of Frank be drawn from the Grand Jury box instead of the petit jury box.

"There is no more chance that Jim Conley will be indicted," said the Solicitor, "than that the judge will accede to the remarkable request of the defense for a jury picked from the Grand Jury box."

Has Filed a Protest.

The Solicitor already has filed a protest against the proposed procedure which the defense is said to have suggested.

"It is irregular in the extreme," said the Solicitor. "It never has been done before to my knowledge. I am not informed as to its legality. That matter I have not looked up, but I have protested against it and will fight any such move."

The Solicitor's assurance that no indictment would be brought against Conley was taken to mean that he was in possession of evidence which he believed would be sufficient effectively to deter the jurors from charging the negro with the crime.

Can't Predict "No Bill."

"I can not believe that any Grand Jury, with the knowledge of the facts before it, could bring an indictment against Conley," he said.

Asked if he thought that a "no bill" on the charge of murder would be brought out against the negro, the Solicitor refused to make further comment.

He intimated, however, that he would be present at the hearing and that he would fight every effort to lay the formal charge of murder against Conley.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuses to Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to

MEXICO STEALS UNITED STATES CIPHER CODE

State Secrets in Envoy Wilson's Messages to Washington Bared. Powers Recall Ministers.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican Administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of the dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

At first it was suspected that an employee of the department in this city was to blame, but investigation proved this to be impossible. The telegrams were read only by three persons in Washington—the official telegrapher; Robert Rose, confidential secretary to Secretary of State Bryan, and the Secretary of State himself. All of these were above suspicion.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department then were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

As this information was, at times, highly uncomplimentary to the present Government in Mexico, the matter at once took on an international aspect, and the efforts of the department's agents to discover the "leak" were redoubled, but in vain.

Every effort will be made to locate the copy of the State Department code and destroy it. It would prove of immense value if it fell into the hands of a hostile nation, as it would be impossible to print another code and to distribute it all over the world in less than six months.

Italy Orders Minister Home From Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—It was learned to-day that the Italian Minister to Mexico secretly left here last night for Vera Cruz. Significance is attached to his departure, as it is believed he was urgently ordered to Rome.

This action is doubly impressive on account of the fact that Francis Stronge, the British Minister, has been succeeded by another and will leave here for London in a few days.

Mexico is becoming the storm center of international diplomacy apparently because of the attitude of the United States and the condition of growing anarchy here.

Ambassador Thinks He Will Lose Post.

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—Despite the statement of United States Ambassador Wilson that he expects to return here in his official capacity following his conference at Washington, it was learned to-day that the Ambassador secretly believes his days in officialdom are numbered.

Before his departure he ordered the removal of a costly silver service and other valuables from the United States Embassy to a United States warship at Vera Cruz. The families of some of the American attaches of the embassy have been sent to Vera Cruz for safety.

Interest was aroused by the announcement that the Minister of the Interior is working up a plan to concede a big part of the State of Morelos to 50,000 Japanese colonists.

Socialist Leader Takes Into His Home Disgraced Daughter of a Mehtodist Minister.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 20.—Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist leader, has issued what he terms his "challenge to the Christianity of Terre Haute."

He has taken into his home in the Indiana city Helen Cox, the daughter of a Methodist preacher. She had eloped with a member of a prominent family who divorced her and took their child. She was arrested for immorality. Debs met her on a visit to the jail and, as an emergency probation officer, took her into his home.

"The girl has been persecuted," he announced publicly. "Will Terre Haute help her or will its organized force be used to drive her to desperation? Let Terre Haute ask 'What would Christ do? Our family has opened our home to her.

"There is but one thing remarkable about opening our home to an unfortunate woman," he said later, when his action aroused widespread comment, "and it is that any one should consider it remarkable. This fact is significant. Persecution of these unfortunate girls is the rule, and so common that it attracts no attention. Kindness is so exceptional that it provokes widespread comment.

"The sinful woman is, as a rule, not a wicked woman, but a sick and suffering woman. As to our home, its door is open to the most sinful woman that was ever cast off by the Pharisees, who denied her while profiting by her shame. We believe, my wife and I ,that we are not only our brother's keeper, but our sister's keeper as well."

CHIEF UPHELD BY CITY FIRE BOARD

At the meeting of the City Board of Firemasters Friday afternoon Chief Cummings was sustained in his policy of discharging men who do not pay their debts.

A fireman had been discharged and he had complained to Mayor Woodward. The matter was brought to the attention of the board, but the fireman did not appear to defend himself.

The board decided to recommend to Council that the fire engine lot on Bellwood avenue in the Fifth Ward be exchanged for a lot on Marietta street.

The Marietta street lot is valued at $4,000, while the Bellwood avenue lot is worth only $2,500.

DORSEY OPPOSES INDICTING CONLEY

him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

"Even though Jim Conley should be indicted," Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford declared Saturday afternoon, "it will not hurt the State's case against Leo Frank. The evidence obtained against Frank is conclusive. We can convict him without the evidence of Jim Conley."

NEW APARTMENT HOUSE PROJECTS ON SIDEWALK

City Could Force Alteration of Ponce DeLeon's Front—Builders May Have to Pay $42,000.

An innocent little complaint made to Building Inspector Hays has brought about a complicated situation in the construction of the $500,000 Ponce DeLeon Apartments, at the southeast corner of Peachtree street and Ponce DeLeon avenue, and just south of the Georgian Terrace.

It has been found that the building has encroached four inches on the sidewalk space belonging to the city. The city has the right to demand that the ten-story building be made to conform to the line. This would necessitate a great deal of destruction and expense.

A probable solution lies in the fact that the city has the right to sell or give the strip to the builders.

Council To Be Petitioned.

Albert Howell, Jr., head of the Fulton Properties Company, which concern controls the Ponce DeLeon, was acquainted with the situation by the Building Inspector, and he declared that he would petition Council to let the building stand.

Last week C. J. Bowen, assistant building inspector, had the engineer survey the ground to determine whether or not a window on the Peachtree side projected 14 inches over the sidewalk in violation of the building code. It did, and a case was made. It was found also that through some mistake four inches of sidewalk had been taken for the building proper. The contractor has been instructed to make the alteration as to the window.

May Cost $42,000.

Mr. Howell expressed the belief that the city would let the building stand, and he is expected to have a resolution to this effect introduced soon.

Since there is a frontage of about 35 feet on Peachtree, the encroachment is over 11 2-3 square feet. Frontage at this point is worth about $1,200 for corners, which would figure about $17 a square foot.

The company owes the city by this calculation, therefore, about $192. S ould the city decide to ignore the depth, the price at $1,200 would be about $42,000.

High Price Paid for Decatur Store Site

Ground has been broken for a two-story brick building at Decatur on McDonough street, adjoining the City Hall. It will be occupied by George Brothers with a wholesale and retail department store. The building will cost about $6,000.

The sale of the lot for this building set a new price for McDonough street property, the 50 feet bringing $3,000, or $60 per front foot.

Fire Alarm System Ready for Testing

Test of Atlanta's new fire alarm system will be made next week by the Okenite Company, of New York.

Installation of this apparatus has been made under the moral obligation system at a cost of $106,000, but while the Supreme Court has declared such contracts on the part of the city illegal, representatives of the company state they feel no doubt about being paid in full for the contract.

WANT ADS EASY, SAYS BOY IN CONTEST

Important to Enter Now—Bring in Nomination Blank Early Monday.

"I've got more than a dozen want ads promised me right in the block where I live, and I want to win one of those bicycles," said the first boy at The Georgian's business office Saturday morning. "I'm going to do it, too.

"I got a want-ad promise at every house I went to except one, and the lady wasn't at home there. It's going to be easy. When does the contest start?"

The youngster—he was just over the 14-year-age limit—was put down in the list of contestants and told to come back Monday morning and receive instructions. There will be quite a gathering at The Georgian's office then, for many young men and women have entered and are going out to win that automobile, a trip to California, the piano or one of the dozens of other prizes offered winners in the contest.

The boy's experience proves how easy it is to get want ads for a paper with a reputation for bringing results. There is no family without a want of some kind. The mere suggestion that an advertisement of a few lines in The American or Georgian will bring that maid or yardboy or sell that discarded furniture usually is met with ready response.

There's no guessing in this contest, either—no grinding day and night in a scheme where you have to invest a dollar or two for a bare chance to win a box of candy. It is a strictly business proposition. Contestants will visit their acquaintances on a business mission and they will accomplish definite results. The winner gets the automobile, the next the piano, and so on down the list.

But remember the contest begins in a few days, and it is absolutely necessary that contestants bring in their nomination blanks, receive their instructions and get ready for active work.

The Want Ad Man would like to see every contestant at his office, No. 7 Edgewood avenue, Monday some time during the day. He has something important to tell them.

Investigation Into Assay Office Likely

WASHINGTON, July 20.—D. P. Kingsford, Superintendent of the New York Assay Office, has placed his resignation in the hands of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. The annual examination of the assay office in New York was completed by July 1, and a report of it has been in the hands of Secretary McAdoo for some time.

It is understood a detailed specification is in the hands of Secretary McAdoo dealing with the system of management. This specification does not aim at any person in particular. It is believed a general investigation may follow. The criticism is based on laxity.

Cleveland's 'Golden Rule' in Scrap Heap

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 20.—The Golden Rule policy in making arrests which made former Chief Kohler famous is a thing of the past. He who now imbibes too freely and obstructs traffic will help enrich the city's coffers instead of being escorted home by a policeman.

Chief Rowe declined to say he has relegated the Golden Rule to the scrap heap, but admits significantly: "One may draw his own conclusions from the figures."

The police blotter figures say there is no Golden Rule.

SOLONS INSPECT STATE COLLEGE AT AUGUSTA

Legislators Mix Business and Pleasure—Governor and Mrs. Slaton Guests of Honor.

AUGUSTA, July 20.—The special train bearing Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, President Randolph Anderson, of the Senate; Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the House, and a majority of the members of the General Assembly arrived in Augusta at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The special made its run on schedule time. As soon as it reached Augusta it was backed into the yards of the medical college and those on board detrained. The trip from Atlanta was not an unpleasant one, although the weather was extremely hot.

Meeting the train was a large number of Augustans, including Mayor L. C. Haynie and members of the City Council, Judge E. H. Callaway, president of the board of trustees of the medical college; Dr. W. H. Doughty, dean of the college, and members of the faculty.

The first visit of the Legislature to Augusta in more than a hundred years is no ordinary event, and the interest of the people in the medical college and in the lawmakers of Georgia was evidenced by the great crowd on hand. The members showed plainly their surprise and pleasure at what they saw. The former Orphan Asylum Building has been transformed into one of the most commodious and best equipped medical schools in the South. The equipment cost $40,000. This was raised in Augusta by popular subscription. Judge Collaway, Dr. Doughty and others showed the visitors over the buildings and grounds and the new university hospitals which are being erected.

After the inspection, lasting about an hour, the visitors were taken to Carmichael's Club for a barbecue dinner. During the afternoon they will be shown about the city and at 7 o'clock to-night their special will leave for Atlanta on the return trip.

$100,000,000 IN GOODS AWAIT NEW TARIFF

No Such Material Wealth as Now Is in Our Warehouses Ever Held in Nation's History.

NEW YORK, July 20.—More than $100,000,000 worth of merchandise is stored in the bonded warehouses of Greater New York to-day. Never on the face of the globe has there ever before been such an aggregation of everything that the soil yields and human industry produces.

The 56 great bonded warehouses are gorged almost to bursting with silks teas, coffees, spices, oils, rugs, carpets, toys, textile fabrics, knit goods, glassware and pottery, jute, hemp, wool, chemicals—with everything in which the merchants of the world trade.

More than 200,000 tons of sugar, worth over $12,000,000, are in bond. The New York Stock Company alone has 80,000 bags of coffee; its warehouses, with a capacity of $1,000,000 cubic feet, are filled.

Of this $100,000,000 worth of imports $70,000,000 is held pending changes in the tariff; $30,000,000 is made up of working stock which the great industrial plants must use immediately and of goods that come in free. The duties on the $70,000,000 worth that is being held deliberately in bond amount to $35,000,000 under the present tariff law. The owners are waiting to see how much of this $35,000,000 benevolent Uncle Sam will "knock off."

When the new bill becomes law millions of dollars a day will be paid into the Custom House and to railroads, and coasting vessels will be offered an enormous amount of freight. The importer who has his goods on hand will have a great advantage over competitors.

FIST FIGHT PUTS 'PEP' IN COURT'S PROCEEDINGS

Beavers Separates Auto Man and Druggist After Policeman Gets Bump on Head.

A "near-fight" between W. A. Graham, a druggist of No. 354 Ponce DeLeon avenue, and B. W. Torrence, an automobile dealer of No. 350 Ponce DeLeon avenue, enlivened the proceedings of Judge Broyles' court Saturday morning.

The fight came during the trial of Graham, against whom Torrence had made two cases. In one Graham was charged with allowing a vicious dog to run at large; in the other he was charged with keeping an obnoxious stable. Graham, while making his statement, declared that Torrence's small son had sat for some hours Friday on the Graham fence.

"You are a liar!" emphatically declared Torrence.

Then Graham hit at Torrence and Torrence hit at Graham. Torrence missed, but Graham's fist raised a bump on the forehead of Policeman O. R. Jones, who was standing in front of Torrence. Before any more blows could be struck Chief Beavers separated the combatants.

Judge Broyles dismissed the dog case, but fined Graham $5.75 on the charge of maintaining a nuisance. He fined Torrence $5.75 for contempt of court in calling Graham a liar.

RETURN OF LUMB IS FOUGHT BY DEFENSE

Crawford Lawyers Ask Delay in Extradition Till Indictment of Alleged Accomplice.

That a strenuous fight is on between the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford and the heirs-at-law of the late Joshua B. Crawford to prevent the return to Georgia of Fred Lumb, the New York barber named as an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in the alleged plot to poison her husband, became known Saturday morning.

Objections to the issuance of extradition papers before the indictment of Lumb have been filed with Governor Slaton by Attorney Reuben Arnold for Mrs. Crawford, and with Governor Sulzer of New York.

Attorney J. S. James, attorney for the Crawford heirs-at-law, declared Saturday morning that his future course in regard to bringing Lumb to Atlanta, in case he is apprehended by the New York police, would be governed by the results of an interview he expects to have with Governor Slaton Monday.

He intimated that should Governor Slaton refuse to issue extradition papers for Lumb before the indictment efforts would be made to have Lumb indicted at once as an accomplice.

He declared Governor Slaton would have to issue the papers if Lumb were under indictment.

"Despite Mrs. Crawford's assertions that she desires the return of Lumb, her attorneys are fighting us in our effort to bring him back," said James. "Colonel Arnold has filed a letter with Governor Slaton objecting to the issuance of the papers, and they also have filed objections with the Governor of New York."

Colonel James said detectives in New York have failed to locate Lumb.

'BEAR CAT RAG' IS FROWNED UPON BY THIS DAINTY ATLANTA DANCER

Miss Theodora Aline Warfield.

She appeared in classical poses with Geraldine Farrar and won local fame.

Successful Operatic Career Is Predicted for Gate City's Premiere Danseuse.

Which do you prefer—to do the "bear" or a classical dance?

An Atlanta girl who prefers classical dancing to the more modern rag is rather unusual, yet pretty Miss Theodora Aline Warfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Warfield, of No. 29 West North avenue, declares that she can not see why people dance the graceless modern dances, when the Grecian and other classical dances are far more artistic and almost as easy to learn.

That is, they are easy to learn if you have talent.

Since Miss Warfield was two years old she has been dancing, and always she is evolving new steps. Her dancing is not like Isadora Duncan's or Maude Allan's, or any of the famous classical dancers. It is entirely her own, and her friends declare it is the prettiest and most graceful possible.

Miss Warfield has appeared on the stage in Atlanta. She was the premiere danseuse at the past two performances of the Kirmess, and won great applause. She was presented with a beautiful silver-incrusted vase by the Elks Lodge, in recognition of their appreciation of her talent. At various private entertainments Miss Warfield has danced also, and has always won admiration and praise by the beauty and grace of her dancing.

Every one who has seen her dance has urged that she go on the stage, and her parents intend to prepare her for the opera. In addition to being a dancer of rare grace and beauty, she has an attractive voice, and it is being cultivated with her dancing.

Two years ago Miss Warfield sang in Atlanta with Geraldine Farrar, and Miss Farrar was enthusiastic in her praise. After finishing a course at a school here, Miss Warfield will go abroad to study languages and advanced artistic dancing. A wonderful career is predicted for her. There is no doubt that she will add her name to Atlanta's already brilliant Hall of Fame.

CUMMINS SAYS TARIFF WILL FAIL

Senator Scores 'Coercive' Methods by Wilson and Secret Caucus in Attack on Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Progressive Republican opposition to the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill was expressed to-day in the Senate by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, who condemned many of its provisions.

The Senator announced himself in favor of the income tax amendment, substantially as written by the Democrats, "if it could not be changed to better suit the exigencies of the situation."

Senator Cummins criticised President Wilson for bringing to bear the "coerce" executive influence upon the framers of the measure, and he also was sharp in his criticisms of "legislation by secret caucus."

"The tariff will increase importation and diminish home production of a great many things, and will force into idleness many workingmen," Cummins asserted. "It puts the products of agriculture, in the main, on the free list. It probably is true some of these commodities need no protective duty, but many of them do, and to treat the farmer as an outlaw is manifestly wrong.

"Second, the bill proceeds on the theory that the manufacturer of the finished product is entitled to raw material free of duty. This is all very well if the raw material can be produced in this country as cheaply as abroad, but if that costs more here to produce it, then the raw material of the manufacturer should be dutiable.

"Its duties are, upon many commodities, destructively inadequate, and the lesser industries of the country will suffer."

Augusta Shocked by Girl in Filmy Garb; Arrest Stops Riot

AUGUSTA, GA., July 20.—All Augusta is talking to-day of the arrest of Miss Edith Anderson, 1215 Jones street, Friday afternoon, because she appeared on Broad street, the main thoroughfare of the city, clad in a "transparent skirt," a dainty, filmy creation of lace through which twinkled stockings of a vivid green.

Miss Anderson appeared just as the afternoon dress parade was at its height. A stolid, unemotional copper stood swinging his stick on a busy corner of Broad street when Miss Anderson appeared. The copper saw the crowd coming, he saw men fighting small boys for places in the forefront, and he looked up.

"Why—why!" he stammered, mopping his fevered face. "Why—er—why—because—er—dawgone it!" He pointed downward with his nightstick, "You can't wear things like that in Augusty."

Miss Anderson smiled pityingly upon the officer, but accompanied him to headquarters.

First Auto Funeral Is Held in Atlanta

The first automobile funeral known to Georgia was conducted Friday afternoon by the Barclay & Brandon Company.

The company's new limousine hearse was used. This hearse is a magnificent model in French gray with hand-carved decorations. It cost $7,000 and represents the latest improvement in funeral directorship.

Pittsburg Bids the Slit Skirt Welcome

PITTSBURG, July 20.—"Why should I tell Pittsburg women what to wear? What do I know about it? Not on your life. Will I order any arrests? Well, I should say not! Are you trying to get me into trouble?"

With these words John F. Dailey, Director of the Department of Public Safety, disposed of the woman's dress question for Pittsburg.

"I think, for my part, the women are dressing all right," said the Director. "They know what they want to wear, and I believe in letting them wear it. At any rate, they'll do it whether we like it or not."

REVOLT IN CHINA SPLITS NATION; WAR NEAR

North Arrayed Against South. Foreigners in Danger—Rebels Threaten Public Buildings.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CANTON, CHINA, July 20.—A complete severance of political relations between Northern and Southern China was proclaimed here to-day. Business is at a standstill. Revolutionary leaders are threatening to seize the Government buildings.

A British torpedo boat is proceeding to this port from Hong Kong to protect British lives and interests.

The Governor General of Kwang Tung Province has proclaimed his territory independent of the Pekin Government and declares in the same proclamation that the Provincial Council has nominated him commander-in-chief of the revolutionary army.

U. S. Aiding Revolt?

That United States diplomacy as well as Japanese is supporting the revolutionaries trying to overthrow President Yuan Shih Kai was claimed by leaders of the Southern rebellion.

The Pekin Government, headed by President Yuan, is receiving the support of England, Germany and France. Developments indicate that the question of the proposed $100,000,000 Chinese loan enters into the situation. England, Germany and France subscribed pro rata shares to the loan, but the United States financiers were not allowed by their Government to participate.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, one of the leaders in the uprising which overthrew the Manchu Dynasty, and the first provisional President of China, and Dr. Wu Ting-fang, former Chinese Minister to the United States, are believed to be lukewarm to the rebel cause.

Rebels Lose a Battle.

Dr. Sun has left for Nanking, the provisional republican capital, where he may make open declaration of his loyalty to the southerners.

President Yuan is suspected of being an imperialist at heart. The southerners want a democrat.

Wu Chang remains loyal, but revolutionary sentiment is fast growing there.

Four thousand rebels were decisively defeated by 2,000 Government forces at Hsu-Chow-Fu, north of Kiang Su.

The ballroom will be open for dancing, and many others, in addition to those who go out for dinner, will motor out to spend the evening on the breeze-swept terrace.

The country club at East Lake will also have its usual week-end dinner dance. During the afternoon the tennis court and golf links are filled with those members who enjoy athletic sports, and later dinner will be served on the piazza overlooking the lake. Mrs. William Lawson Peel, who is known to be entirely neutral, has kindly consented to preside at the meeting and a number of the most prominent men and women speakers in Georgia will take part.

There will be no formal program, but all will be heard who so desire. Inasmuch as this is one of the leading questions of the day, everybody is interested in the forthcoming discussion, especially as many people have not yet formed an opinion on the matter and will welcome a discussion whereby both sides will be presented.

NATURAL CRANK, MAYOR'S SHOT AT BROYLES

"Dyspeptic, Fanatic, Stoneheart, Monomaniac" Are Other Terms in "Final" Retort.

Mayor Woodward Saturday said he was finally dismissing Recorder Nash R. Broyles from his mind with the statement:

"He is a natural dyspeptic, crank and a fanatic. If he ever had a heart it has turned to stone. Therefore, it is natural that he should become a monomaniac over the subject of using his czar-like authority in his own petty sphere. I don't care anything more about him."

Mayor Woodward again went over the head of Recorder Broyles Friday when he reduced the sentence of George Poulos, a restaurant keeper on Alabama street, who had been fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in the Stockade fo violating the prohibition law.

The Mayor said he was much surprised that the Recorder did not make the fine $49 and the sentence 29 days so as to stay outside the jurisdicition of the Mayor.

It was expected that Mayor Woodward would issue a full pardon but he didn't. He just reduced the fine to $49 and the sentence to 29 days.

'Conscience' Takes His Savings of Years

WASHINGTON, July 20.—A veteran of the Civil War, now a poor farmer in Ireland, with a large family dependent upon him, has sent to the Treasury Department $150 as a "conscience contribution" for some fraud he perpetrated upon the Government while a soldier 50 years ago.

The contribution, representing the savings of years, was sent through a Catholic priest to satisfy the gnawings of a troubled conscience.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I THINK Bobbie ought not to take up Latin next Fall, sed Ma, it is too hard for him. I doant see any sense in him lerning a ded langwidge.

You doant understand, sed Pa. The teechers at the skool knows best what Bobbie shud take up. Thay have deevoted thare whole life to reering the minds of the yung. Let him talk Latin if the teecher thinks he shud.

But the teecher doesn't say he must take Latin, sed Ma. The class has the rite to choose wether thay want to talk Latin or German. I think it wud be nicer for him to lern sum nice, homelike langwidge like German, so it will be useful to him in his every-day life. There is lots of Germans in this town, sed Ma, & if he shud happen to git a job clerking in a bank or a stoar, his Germarf wud help him moar than a ded langwidge like Latin. I doant know anything about the Latin, sed Ma. I doant think thare is any of them alive.

It always amuses me to hear a woman talk & talk & not say anything, sed Pa. You doant understand. Latin is a grate langwidge for any boy to lern. It gives him a insite into the English langwidge, wich is bilt up largely on Latin. That is why I have such a fine flow of langwidge, Pa sed; a flow of langwidge that I guess you offen wish you had wen I cum hoam lait, he sed to Ma.

How much Latin did you studdy, asked Ma.

I am a master at it, sed Pa. I studied it all the four years I was in the high skool. I studdied Cicero's invashun of Gaul & how Julius Caesar deefied Catiline in the Senate of Rome. How well I reemember them ringing words of his, Pa sed, when he shouted at Catiline: "Pax vobiscum, et cum spiritu tuo, nux vomica!" & then you ask me about Latin, Pa sed. Why, he sed to Ma, I cud set here all day & talk Latin to you if you wud understand any of it, but wen I am in one of my deep moods you doant even understand my fine English.

You are a perfeck wonder, arent you? sed Ma. Now let me tell you sumthing, & I am going to correck you rite in front of little Bobbie, beekaus I think it wud teech you a lesson. You are all mixed up in yure Latin. It was Julius Caesar which invaded Gaul, & it was Cicero which denounced Catiline in the Roman Senate. Am I rite, Bobbie?

You are rite, I toald Ma. I wasent thare, but I herd the teecher say so.

The teecher dident say so, or if the techer did say so the teecher is a fool, sed Pa. Why, I surely ought to know what I am talking about. I can see the lines in the text books now, ware Cicero tells about his first trip to Gaul. He sed "Omnia Gaul is trespassing parties such as E Pluribus Unum & ora pro nobisky." Doant tell me that I am rusty on my Latin, sed Pa, I know it as well as I know my own son. I reemember how one of the Gauls dident like Cicero & he sed "Cicero," says he, "Cicero, why do you cum here & lay waste our lands and deestroy our hoams," & Cicero sed to Gaul "Gaulia, de mortuis nil nisi bonum," which means in English, "Well, Gaul, I like yure gall!"

Doant anser your father, Bobbie, sed Ma. This bas been a vary hot day down town, & I am afraide the heet has went to his deer hed. Go & git sum cracked ice, Bobbie, & I will bring him around all rite.

Then we put cracked ice on Pa's hed and he went to sleep. I guess I will talk German insted of Latin.

A Study in Parents

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn,
"'Twas father this, and father that;"
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly,
"Step softly when you move about
"Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother,
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In spite of the heat of his gallop and the excitement of his pistol duel in the dark at the inn, the appalling stillness and loneliness of the place and the very real peril of his mission chilled him for a moment even more than the damp mists and the musty echoing corridor in which they found themselves when they pushed open the little gate. As for Rusty, he was frankly scared until his black skin was the rich color of cafe au lait.

"Marse Warren," he stammered, looking about him, "Ah—Ah! don't like this place—Ah—don't like it 'tall"

Warren could hear the bulky figure shaking in perfect panic of fright as he fumbled with the catch of his lantern and struck a match. He had taken care to draw his servitor into an embrasure where the gate guard stood in ancient times. They were thus out of the line of fire from the far angle of the short corridor.

"I'm not stuck on it myself, Rusty," he chuckled, as his first feeling of depression passed. "But we've got to go through with it."

When the faint glow of the lantern filled the little round cell in which they stood the old darky felt a little better.

"I reckon dasso," he conceded, "but I've afraid hit's gonna go through with us Marse Warren."

"I guess not, Rusty. If it does it'll have to carry off enough lead to break the back of any ordinary spook. Here—hold the light a moment."

He took off his coat and hung it in a narrow slot in the wall. Then he reached under his left arm and produced the blue-barreled, heavy-calibered revolver, broke it carefully, and reloaded the two chambers with care. The tinkle of the empty cartridge cases on the stone floor made Rusty start and shiver. The young man spun the cylinder to be sure that all was in working order and slipped the weapon back into the holster.

"Now for the ghost!" he exclaimed, cheerfully.

"Yes, sah," agreed Rusty, not cheerfully.

"Now, Rusty—no, don't light your lantern yet—take mine and hold it out in the corridor there as high as you can. If they figure on nailing us quick, here is their best chance. Just stand right there and hold it out and up. That's right. Now, just a moment."

He dropped on one knee and peered down the corridor. The light, directly above his head, gave a perfectly clear view. He saw that the passageway ended in a large room with a fireplace opposite the entrance. After a careful scrutiny he decided that there was no danger and they advanced, Rusty in the rear and still holding the light high. Thus while they were a fair mark, Warren was not blinded by the glare of his own light and could see with keenness to the farthermost range of its beams.

The First Scare.

Just as they stepped into the room there was a blood-curdling shriek and Warren's pistol leaped out as something brushed his cheek and struck Rusty full in the face. With a scream he sank to the floor. The lantern crashed and went out. There was another shriek down the corridor—and then the awful stillness, broken only by Rusty, groveling at his master's feet and clinging to his knees.

"Oh, Lordy—Lordy—Lordy! Marse Warren! Marse Warren!"

The suddenness of the assault daunted even Jarvis for a moment, but when Rusty felt him trembling it was with mirth.

"A broad-face bird!" the old darky was moaning. "The debbil—hit were!"

"Get up, Rusty, and light the lantern. It was only an owl."

It was some few moments before Rusty felt sufficiently steadied to advance. Jarvis swung the lantern about and took in the details of the lofty vaulted room. He decided that it must have been a smaller guard room for the defense of the postern. The height of the ceiling and the general vastness of everything convinced him of the futility of attempting to avoid ambush if that were planned. He could only hold himself in readiness to fire at the first hostile sound. He held his lantern in his left hand and his right was always clinging to the lapel of his coat within an inch or two of the pistol butt.

There was only one door leading out of this room, excepting the one by which they had entered. From the Princess' description of the place he fancied that it led into the main hall.

Strange Sounds.

The thickness of the walls made each door a little corridor of itself, and he adopted the early precaution with each succeeding one. A great white table at which a regiment might almost have been seated, numerous chairs of various ages, two great fireplaces and numberless trophies of arms on the walls were the only furnishings. Here Rusty got two shocks and Jarvis one. The old darky was frightened by the appearance of a figure in armor until his master pointed out half a score in the corners of the great room.

Suddenly both heard the sound of muffled footsteps, as if some one were running on heavy carpet, and they knew there was no carpet in all the vast stone halls. Before they could attempt to locate the sound there came two thuds, one light and one heavy, as if of a blow and a fall and then a low heart-chilling moan that seemed to come not from one of all the halls, but all of them.

IN DEADLY PERIL

Just before he came within the range of vision of the doorway he leaned forward and dashed his coat against the lamp. At the same instant he whipped out his pistol, crouched and did a baseball slide across the stone floor, on hip and shoulders, his eyes turned toward the door. There was a flash and a roar and a man's figure outlined against the moonlight and then almost as quickly as the two shots had sounded in the hotel, the Kentuckian's revolver spoke twice.

This was immediately answered by a moan that came unmistakably from Rusty.

"I wanna go home! I wanna go home!"

"Sh—h! steady—steady, Rusty!" exclaimed his master, in a low, tense, but cheery voice. "Noises can't hurt you."

They listened until the moan died down to the ghost of a whisper and then it swelled louder and louder until it filled the hall again, finally dying away. Rusty was on the floor again by this time, but Jarvis urged him up with tongue, toe and hand.

"You've got to get used to this, Rusty," he told him grimly. "There are owls and bats and rats all over this place that make all sorts of queer sounds, and, besides that, there are some men, just like you and me, who are helping out the other animals. As long as they stick to making the kind of noises that scared off these people down there we haven't anything to be afraid of. Come on!"

They explored several smaller rooms on the ground floor and pushed on up the stairs until they came to what was evidently the state banquet hall of the ancient Seguras. Besides a large table there were several smaller ones and a number of family portraits. A corridor, larger and more ornate, also hung with portraits, led into the armory. Another led to the main gate of the castle. Here also was a great fireplace with a broad and magnificent mantel, but empty of all ornaments.

A few creepy sounds pursued them, footsteps occasionally, and once Rusty began sniffing suspiciously. The knocking entirely ceased as they entered the armory, but Jarvis was certain that it had come from the banquet hall. In the big corridor the smell that attracted his attention was more pronounced, and when they came to the three broad steps that opened into the hall he exclaimed triumphantly but low:

"There! They've been in this room! Do you smell that, Rusty?"

"Marse Warren," declared the old darky, weakly, his eyes rolling with fright and his body with fatigue. "I'se so scairt I cain't smell nothin'."

"The room's full of it. Someone's been carrying a smoky lantern."

There was a heavy thud, apparently in the wall to one side. Rusty jumped.

"Good God'lmighty!" he moaned. Wha's dat?"

Jarvis swung the lantern about. "We've been in this room before," he said. He was used to the noises and had long since ceased to heed them openly, but their constant and unexpected recurrence was surely getting on his nerves.

"Is dis whar the poundin' come from?" asked Rusty, tremulously.

"I reckon," answered his master slowly, "that the pounding and the smoky lantern went together."

With every nerve and muscle at high tension Jarvis entered and began a minute inspection of the banquet hall. The recent pounding, the nearness of the sounds that had followed them in the last few minutes, convinced him that the final grapple would come soon. And at the thought the hand crept under the coat and gripped the pistol until the finger nails ached, and he moistened his lips.

He was stopping to inspect the fireplace when, with a half gurgle, half yell of terror, Rusty backed into him. The alarm and the shock of the collision almost unnerved him. With an oath he threw up his left arm, crouching to one knee as he wheeled about, revolver in hand.

"What's the matter?" he snarled. From the floor Rusty pointed toward the dark corners of the corridor they had just left. Standing at each side was a figure in armor. Jarvis laughed, but his voice quavered a little.

"Look—look at dem black things!" moaned the old darky. "See 'em standin' there?"

"These are the same black things that scared you before, Rusty," Jarvis patted his shoulder and helped him up. "Don't you remember?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

: : : Winning a Welcome : : :

"WELL, what have you there!" exclaimed Mrs. Morton, as Marjory, all out of breath, entered the room.

"Wait and see," mysteriously answered her daughter as she undid the wrapping paper.

"A canary?" cried Mrs. Morton. "What will you bring home next? Where and how did you get this bird?"

"Dorothy sent for me this morning and said that, although she was all ready to go to Atlantic City, she couldn't leave until she knew that her bird would be cared for during the summer. Her relatives absolutely refused to take the poor thing and she declared that if I was any kind of a friend this was my opportunity to prove it. So what could I do?"

"But, my dear, we never owned a bird. We don't understand anything about their food, drink, bath or habits. And every one says a bird is a dreadful care—they're always catching cold or molting or something."

"I know. I told Dorothy all that and she gave me written instructions, cautioning me to follow them implicitly."

"Listen!" said Marjory, unfolding a slip of paper. Bath Mondays and Thursdays. Cage to be covered at 8:30 each evening. Small lettuce leaf Mondays and Wednesdays. Sliced apple on Tuesdays. Fresh seed and water daily. Cage cleaned daily, and 1,000 other directions."

"It's an imposition!" declared Mrs. Morton. "It's not necessary for Dorothy to promenade the boardwalk at Atlantic City while we sit at home and worry over her pet."

After Morton had worked an hour that evening adjusting a bracket for the cage he said peevishly: "One does impose on one's friends abominably. Here we have a rank outsider simply thrust upon us through no fault of our own. Some people have—well, what you might call nerve."

At 8 o'clock the next morning Marjory's brother Bert came to breakfast with a scowling face.

"Where did that blooming bird hail from?" he demanded. "He has kept me awake since 5 o'clock with his everlasting singing."

Marjory's married sister soon ran in with her pet kitten, as was her custom. She was greeted with a scream from Marjory. "Mildred, don't you dare step into this house with that cat! Can't you see Dorothy's bird? Please, please go home—quick!"

"Very well," answered Mildred in icy tones. "If you care more for Dorothy's silly bird than for me and my darling Mopsy, we shall not trouble you any more with our unwelcome presence." Then the irate sister marched out of the room.

"I wish I had never seen that horrid bird or Dorothy, either!" lamented Marjory.

After two months' absence Dorothy returned and claimed her canary. The first evening after the bird's departure Marjory noticed that both her father and her mother kept gazing at the empty bracket where the bird had swung and sung.

Presently Bert exclaimed, "It beats all how empty this house seems without that bird."

Marjory wiped away a tear. "I've had the blues all day," she said. "I've missed Dickie so. If Dorothy had been the least bit appreciative she would have let me keep him a few weeks longer, anyway."

The next morning Morton on his way to his office stopped at a bird store and purchased a canary.

Mrs. Morton, before keeping her appointment at the dressmaker's, went to a bird dealer's and purchased a canary.

Bert, recollecting the empty bracket, on his return from business dropped in at a department store and purchased a canary.

Marjory, by this time firmly believing that no family is complete without a bird, took her savings and purchased a canary.

That evening every member of the family entered the dining room carrying a bird cage. Then they all beheld a canary in a cage that was hanging on a bracket. There was a card attached to the hook. On it Dorothy had written: "I hope this bird will partly take the place of the one you so lovingly cared for."

"Let's keep them all!" exclaimed Marjory.

"All but one," amended Mrs. Morton. "Mildred confided in me this morning that she has given Mopsy away, as she thinks she would rather have a bird than a kitten for a pet."

The Confessions of a Medium

Being an Expose of Fakery in Spiritualism, Clairvoyance, Palmistry, Etc.

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Copyright, 1913, International News Service.)

"BEHOLD the wonderful Hindu by whose mysterious power messages are written by the dead. Just take this pad, tear off a sheet, look carefully on each side to make sure nothing is written on it; write your initials or some word by which to identify it and the spirit of a friend in the land beyond will write you a message on the very same paper. The weirdest thing you have ever seen. Ah, you will try it, and you and you and you."

You pay your money and then write your initials. The marker carefully hands the paer to a brown-faced kneeling man—the Hindu—who places it in a curiously marked tube, puts on the cover, and seems to go into a convulsion and trance combined. He smites himself on the forehead, wildly waves his hand in the air, then points it straight at the tube, which he holds high above him, while he murmurs:

"Buddha, O Buddha! Tu a gama seo! Divine! Arro! Buddha reo diwia!"

Very Obvious.

Then he lifts the cover, takes out the paper, hands it to the barker, who pases it to you. Sure enough your initials are there and the long closely written message telling nothing surrounds it. Really it is a shame, for the wonderful "Hindu" to have wasted so much effort and given such a clever "foreign" prayer. Why not tell his dupes in the very beginning that the blank paper had been written on long before they initialed it—lemon juice being used, which appeared invisible until the acids inside the tube brought it out?

I have never bothered to try the foregoing myself; it is too obvious. But I have studied into the more scientific spirit or automatic writing, such as is being used to fool thousands out of their money; such experiments as many intelligent people declare could not be done except by supernatural means. I will show you how much they know about it.

One evening, a gentleman whom I did not know was brought to my home by a friend. He wanted to see if I could get several messages for him, and particularly an answer to a problem then bothering him. I told him I would try. A pad was placed before me, and I held a pencil, over which I placed a large napkin. While we were waiting for a communication we talked on the day's baseball game, the latest play, a startling murder that had just been holding the public attention.

"Has anything happened?" asked the gentleman.

"No," said I, "Not that I know of, but it is possible that it might have occurred without my being aware." So I raised the napkin and we saw a lot of scribbling.

"Well, that's something," I said. Oftentimes the spirit can not form the leters. He is like a child, but he gains power with experience. We will try again." This is what we found:

"I am answering your question."

"Don't do it. You are on the wrong path."

Much Obliged.

"Thank you," said the gentleman. "That sets me at ease. I know my father was troubled about a business deal I was about to enter. If he had said yes I would have gone ahead, but now it is off. Thank you, and good night."

I wrote both the scrawl and message knowingly and with the purpose of discovering whether the communication, so manifestly fraudulent, would be accepted as genuine. It was. And so strations. The argument has been made are thousands of other psychic demonthat one might give messages like the former, but where actual signatures and totally opposite styles of writing have appeared through the one medium in penmanship different to his own, only various spirits could have done them.

One night we were trying to get in touch with the great poet, Walt Whitman. I held the pencil, and suddenly my hand seemed to be possessed, and this is what happened:

Walt Whitman.

And there followed a poem which I am going to publish some time. The whole thing was in a handwriting which, when compared with that of the beloved free thinker, was identical, and the thoughts were thoroughly in his peculiar style!

Very Easy.

Again, on still another occasion, while I was surrounded by mystified friends, an old maiden lady wrote as follows, through my hand:

I want to talk to my niece.

It was slowly indited and scarcely similar to Walt Whitman's, or the bold businesslike lines of the father who wrote his troubled son. And still more wonderful than any of the previous messages was one which hasn't been deciphered yet, and, which I have been told, is a sort of ancient Greek.

No one person could have done the hundreds of different writings; no one person could have so closely produced known signatures of men like Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Napoleon. Yet I did them. It didn't take much study or practice to do them, either.

Now, the pencil and pen have not been the only writing materials I have used. Once I placed a paper in a typewriter and, together with my investigators, went out of the room, locked the door, came back in a few minutes, and found a message crudely typed on the page! No one had been in the room. This is how it was done: The paper had already been written on, but when I showed it the people saw only the opposite side, and when they were not looking I slipped the right side up into the machine. Just a bit of sleight of hand; but you couldn't change the opinion of those delvers into the mysteries that this was surely a manifestation any more than you could prove to them black was white! And they won't believe it until they see this.

Do you want to know about the wonderful slate writing? Two ordinary blank slates are shown you for examination. Then a pencil is put between them and a rubber band placed around them. A scratching of writing is heard, the medium removes the hand, and on one of the slates is scribbled a mysterious note, though no human hand came near it. When I had occasion to perform this psychic demonstration I carefully wrote my message beforehand and carefully covered the writing with a piece of black cardboard. During the "spirit writing" I had rubbed my finger nail on the side of my chair, and when I removed the band from the slates had dexterously changed the cardboard from over the writing to the other slate.

Why He Looked.

Bell—That man over there is staring straight at my nose.

Nell—Probably he's a reporter.

Bell—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?

Nell—They are supposed to keep their eyes on everything that turns up, aren't they?

Our Yesterdays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A GENERATION or more ago little girls made what they called charmstrings, stringing on cord a pretty or quaint button to mark the occasion of a new garment, or an event to which some romantic interest attached.

Our life is a making of a charmstring, and yesterdays are the buttons that are strung. Happy is the girl, and wise beyond her years, who puts on her charmstring nothing that will cause the blush of shame when she fingers the string in the years to come.

With trembling fingers and a tender light in her eyes she will touch a yesterday with pride in an achievement; another with a wistful sigh because of a hope that went wrong, other yesterdays will arouse memories of mirth, and every glance shows the miracle Time is working in making the color lighter of those yesterdays that in her youth were dark with despair.

Many Emotions.

She is proud, dejected, philosophical, hopeful, merry and sad in turn as she fingers her charmstring, but happy is she if in all her collecting she has put on the string no yesterday that calls a blush of shame!

The older women have their charmstrings almost completed; the charmstrings of the younger girls are in the making. The older women will look back with many regrets which the younger girls may be spared if they remember that every to-day becomes a yesterday unchanged and unchangeable after it has been strung with the days that went before it.

The yesterdays that represent time wasted will cause many heartaches when one is old and there is so little time left.

The yesterdays when the conventions and proprieties were flaunted are discolored in a way that never fades, and the stains grow deeper with the years.

The yesterday when in the arrogance of her youth a girl disobeyed and distressed her mother will be the first to catch and torment her eye when her mother is gone and the day of atonement is past.

The yesterdays, hundreds on hundreds of them, that tell a story of selfish pursuits, a wasting of time and opportunity, a frittering of money and physical and mental resource; how many they are; how appalling the number, and how tragic the story they tell! Oh, little girl, you whose charmstring is still in the making, are you thinking what anguish of spirit, what bitter regrets, what tears, these yesterdays will some day cause you?

The Unkind Word.

The unkind word, the opportunity to save, which became because of its neglect the means to destroy; the wisdom that was rejected and the folly that was accumulated; the triumph that was bought at the price of another's defeat, are you remembering, Little Girl, that these beads will appear dark and baneful and rob you of all joy in your string?

The prudent man puts his money at interest, counting on the day when the interest will keep him from want in his old age.

The wise man does greater than this—he puts his yesterdays out at interest knowing that "All the good days behind him are sponsors, who speak for him when he is silent, pay for him when he has no money, introduce him when he has no letters, and work for him when he is asleep."

There is no friend who will do more for you to-morrow, my dear Little Girl, than a good yesterday. Be like the wise man who makes of his past his sponsor, guide and protector.

Put on that string no yesterday of which some day you may be ashamed!

The honorable pattern for the comfy affair. It is good for athletic stunts—plenty of foot room if you want to tell the maid you're "not at home."

You can do your morning beauty exercises in it. You can pick up your eraser without bending your knees—which they say is most awfully good for you.

By Nell Brinkley

I KNOW plenty of lucky girls who do their little part of the world's work at home, as I do, away from the glare and the courtesy-killing violence of the big town. Almost all of them work in rigs that are either very pretty or very ugly and painfully uncomfy, or very comfy and ugly. Not one has one both pretty and comfy. Not one has a little outfit that is feminine yet boyish, pretty, and gives absolute leeway to young limbs and arms and waists that must bend over some sort of task. So I, who bend my back, too—who like to look pretty, too—who need, oh, much to be comfy while I scratch for a living and who envy little gids their half-socks and sandals, their bare knees and necks and heads, their rompers and lack of petti-skirts, I laid away my sentimental Billys and Bettys, who love one another—oh, so desperately—for one minute and "drawred" pics of working clothes. Oh, all kinds I made, I did. Those that were too pretty were too fussy, too—I shook my Scandinavian locks and crumpled them up. Those that were too comfy happened to be either utterly impractical or altogether too ugly for any girl to go any farther with. So I ripped them up.

Then I fell back on what every girl finds infinite strange relief in till she's a grandmother—my mother. I called her into consultation—and together with my wild ideas and insistence on beauty and her genius for understanding the subtle ways of a needle and thread and her smiling common sense, we evolved a thing of use and beauty and a joy forever. Seems to me most any man who had his rathers would like to see his sweetheart or his busy housebird of a mate in a work garb like this rather than in some of the bibbed frights, the tie-around kind that cut you in two, or that ancient, dishonored makeshift some women make do duty all day long—the kimono. And don't you know men folks are everlasting preachers about their women folks being comfy. This little work apron certainly is that.

Here are facts: I am usually short on those. That's mother's proof that I am a girl. Turn your Cheshire cat smiles away, Bettys and Billys, and let me tell how this honorable apron is made. I've made a faithful pattern from it spread out upon the floor. The real labor ones, where I get good and dirty—ink on my nose, grime on my elbows, grubby hands and all that—are made of blue and pink fine-checked zephyr gingham. Those that are just a little more company—to loaf about the house in these hot days—are made of cotton, crepe or anything pretty and washable that you like. Twenty-seven inches wide, if you please, the goods must be; then there need be no piecing on the sides. And twice 27 inches is plenty of foot-room. There is a hole for your head, very short sleeves, and just the two seams down the sides. The back is as innocent of fastening as the front. Nary a buttonhole or a hook and eye. That ought to please any cynic and make 'em sit up and crow. Just on a line below the hip bone there are two belt-straps back and front, and through these goes a belt a couple of inches wide, fastened with two buttons. On the humbler ones a bias fold and stitching about the neck and arms and a deep hem is all the decoration there is. On the niftiest ones there is narrow lace in the sleeves and neck and a belt of a different color. The belt fits closely, but doesn't pinch. That draws the apron into folds. These are facts.

Now for the beauty and the joy of it. You wouldn't believe how pretty it is on a girl. For it falls into every line of her body, gracefully and modestly, too. It has the same simple attraction that a little kid's clothes always have. There's the beauty of it—simplicity, good lines and any lovely color, and the joys of it—it goes over your head, the sleeves are a joke, the neck is low, it's as cool as a Lady Constance Richardson costume in this warm town, corsets with it are "taboo," it hasn't even a sash around the waist; you can reach, and catch, and throw a ball to your heart's desire. Under it, if it please you, when there is not going to be "people," there are only stockings, chemisette and knickers of china silk or thin muslin and sandals. When there is to be "people," a one-piece slip has to be added on underneath and slippers instead of sandals, if you please.

Sounds like a dream, this little outfit, but feels like a dream, too.

My clever little mother, whose own little gowns are pretty and sensible, too, and a picture of the apron I work in.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He! he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him; I die, you no payee up. Houp-la! He! he! I know you 'Angleesh!"

Youthful Definitions.

In order to give his scholars a firm grip on original composition, a schoolmaster believes in the value of what he calls "an exercise in framing definitions." After illustrating what was wanted, he set the little boys to write one sentence definitions of "boy" and "girl." Here are a few of the ideas evoked: "A boy is made of a lot of bones with flesh put round them. A girl is nearly the same, but we do not cut her hair." "A boy is born a baby." "A girl is only ribs out of a man's body." "A girl is God's sheep." "A boy is an ordinary creature made out of dust, and so is a girl."

The Poor Man's Wife

A Suggestion for the Woman Who Craves What She Can't Have on a Limited Income.

By DOROTHY DIX.

I HAVE received a letter from a woman who says, "Will you please write something on being a poor man's wife? I married when I was 15. I am now 24, and I am begining to see that it's a hard road that I have to travel, with no pleasures along the way, and nothing but the poorhouse at the end of the journey.

"My husband is a good man. He loves me dearly as I love him, but he's just a good plodder, one of the men who will never earn anything but a small wage as long as he lives. He is not ambitious. I am. He does not care for the refinements of life. He is satisfied with cheap, ugly clothes, a glass of beer and his pipe. I want pretty things and to occasionally go to the theater or some such place of amusement.

Lots of Them.

"I know I can never have the things I crave unless I earn the money for them myself, and I would gladly go out to work except that it would make the neighbors talk. What shall I do, eat my heart out with wanting things, or make the money to buy them?"

Go to work, sister, go to work. Go out and hunt you a job. See how much of a money-maker you really are. Find out how much toil and sweat, how much self-restraint and self-repression goes into the making of every dollar. Ascertain by actual experience the difference between the way a man speaks to a customer and an employee, between the way he treats you when you are in front of the counter and behind it.

The world is full of dissatisfied women who think that their husbands are not good business men, and that they should be making a great deal more money than they are. These ladies criticise and fault-find, and whine because their Johns can't supply them with diamonds and limousines, and they are perfectly certain that if they had a chance to do something out in the world, instead of being tied to a cook stove, they would make Hetty Green look like 30 cents as a financier, or put Maude Adams in the amateur class on the stage, or make Mrs. Humphry Ward wonder why she ever tried to break into literature.

There's just one piece of advice to give these disgruntled ladies, who are full of surging ambition, and that is to get out and let it surge, and see how far it takes them. If I were a man and had a wife who pined for a career far from the gas range and the sterilized milk bottle, I would not only encourage her to go to it, but I would force her to go forth and get the world's price tag pinned on her ability instead of her own valuation of it.

Such Is Fate.

For there's no sure cure for a career like trying to have one. There's nothing that knocks the self conceit out of us so completely as the jolt we get when we find out that instead of astounding a waiting world with our talent we can't even make a living by them.

I know at least a dozen fat, comfortable ladies, who live in fine houses and wear fine clothes, who are always telling me in melancholy accents of what great actresses, or writers, or opera singers, they could be, if only they hadn't been foolish enough to get married, and were not bound to the wheel of the domestic chariot. It must be a harrowing existence that these women lead their husbands, mourning over what-they-might-have-been, and heaven knows why the men haven't sense enough to make their blighted Lady Macbeths, or Tetrazzinis, or Laura Jean Libbys hustle out and try to realize their ambitions.

Believe me, one week of barn-storming would restore almost any stage-struck wife to sanity, and make her glad to return to a groundling husband who is good for three square meals a day. Also there is nothing so effective in making a near-literary lady devote herself to the cook book, instead of writing books, as to find out by actual experience that she can't sell a line she writes, and that she would starve if she had to depend on a pen instead of a husband.

So, sister, if you think you can make more money than your husband, and that you have greater intelligence than he, go out and try your luck. If you fail you will come back home more contented and be a more agreeable companion to your husband than the dissatisfied woman that went away.

And perhaps you will succeed. Very often the gray mare is the better horse. Many a woman has ten times the business sense of her husband.

In such a case there is no earthly reason why her talent should be thrown away and the family deprived of the benefit of them merely because she is a woman. A dollar is a dollar and has the same purchasing power, no matter whether it was earned by a feminine or a masculine hand.

Not to Blame.

Theorize as much about it as you please. Preach contentment all you like. The fact remains that it is bitter, grinding hard to be poor, to never have, to pine for pleasures and luxuries that are forever just out of your reach.

That is the lot of many a woman married to a man who hasn't the faculty for getting along, and nobody should blame such a wife when she starts out to win for herself the good things of life that she sees that her husband will never be able to get for her.

As a matter of fact, we have got to readjust our whole mental view of this subject. Modern conditions are such that many good, honest, industrious men can earn only enough money to supply the bare necessities of existence for their families. If there are any frills, the women must make them for themselves, and undoubtedly in this country, as in France, the time will soon come when it will be taken as a matter of course for the wife as well as the husband to be a money-earner.

And why not? What better way can a woman help her husband than in lifting part of the burden of the family support from his shoulders? And why should a woman grow bitter and dissatisfied longing for the pretty things that she has the ability and the energy to earn? Besides which, when the poor man's wife puts her shoulder to the wheel, too, and begins to tug along the family cart, it generally isn't a cart much longer. It's an automobile.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THIS is the season of the year when the country feels more than all else the need of one in authority who shall say what constitutes the proper length of a kin visit, the number of miles the kin traveled, the number of children brought along, etc., to be taken into consideration.

Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, feeling the nation's immediate need of his decisions on the kin question, called himself to order and sat in session extraordinary.

"It is a pity," he mused while chewing a point to his pencil, "that human beings are not like chickens. As soon as a chicken can scratch for himself he forgets that he has a lot of kin."

Then he handed down the following decisions:

"The member of the family deputized to write the letters telling the kin their visits will not be acceptable is hereby designated as the War Correspondent.

"It is his traditional duty to write welcome letters to all of mother's kin who say they are coming, and to refuse to let father's kin alight by ignoring their letters.

"A man may lightly dodge responsibility on the ground that he is not his brother's keeper, but I would have every man know that he must deal more seriously with his wife's relations.

"When mother's kin are guests, two kinds of dessert at every meal is the rule. No dessert when they are kin to father.

"When a woman's kin come very fast she owes no apology to her husband. She must accept it as her right and say nothing.

"If possible to enforce this decision, none of father's kin should be allowed in the house except as they appear in the back part of the family album.

"It is not a mark of poor breeding to dislike one's kin, and when ornery kin come to town the rustle in getting out of the way is pardonable if it drowns every other noise.

"When a man lends money to his kin, he must take it for granted that his wife will know all about it before he has made the loan.

"In bragging about visiting kin, don't brag hard. It is quite probable that when the visiting kin has stayed as long as ten days, you will find yourself saying, 'If he amounted to much at home, he wouldn't be staying here so long.'

"If father has to sleep on the couch when there is company, enough time should be asked between visitations to let him untie the knots in his legs.

"The only way in which a man can make his wife agree with him that her sister has stayed too long is to make love to the sister. However, sometimes this results in complications.

"As a general rule, it is better to brag on one's kin than to board them."

Here his pencil broke.

Things Worth Remembering

A lawsuit which has taken 50 years to decide, was an action brought by Charles L. Appleby against the City of New York for damages done to his property by a mob during the Civil War. Settlement has been reached by a compromise, the plaintiff receiving the amount of his original claim, $7,000, and dropping the demand for interest. When the suit was filed, Mr. Appleby was a comparatively young man. He is now 88, and has survived most of the judges and lawyers who have been connected with the case.

A curious custom will shortly be celebrated at Sawston, Cambridgeshire, England. The tenant of Huntingdon Farm is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking, the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

A pretty ceremony took place at Newcastle recently, when the customs of "Barge Day" were observed, and the Mayor and Corporation sailed up the river to "claim the soil" of the Tyne. The great moment of the ceremony is the landing, when the Mayor has the delightful, if invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases from the assembled crowd and giving her a kiss and a sovereign. The Sheriffs also choose a fair lady on whom to bestow a kiss and a gift, and the Mayoress is expected to make some useful present to the damsel kissed by his Worship.

Sergeant Kuertz won a wife and a house with a garden plot by drinking 30 pints of beer before breakfast at a restaurant at Breslau, Germany, and afterward, to show his steadiness of hand, he registered seven hits out of ten shots at an 800-yard target.

High speed is being added to luxury as a feature of Canadian travel. The Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to run what will be the fastest transcontinental train on the American continent. With an average speed of 50 miles an hour for 60 hours, and twelve hours allowed for stops, the new train will cover 3,000 miles between Montreal and Vancouver in 72 hours—a saving of 23 hours on the fastest train on this system now running.

The Perfect Baby Of the Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence Upon the Future Infant

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend. It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyous anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet.

Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., 139 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after a formula of a noted family doctor.

Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

NOW WHAT WILL CARRIGAN DO? 'ASK HUB FANS

By A. H. C. Mitchell.

BOSTON, July 12.—The question of the moment seems to be, "How will Bill Carrigan succeed as manager?" It is, of course, easier to ask the question than to answer it. In fact, it is impossible to answer it, because Bill has not had a chance to demonstrate his ability in a managerial capacity. However, it may be said that there is no good reason why he should not make a success of it. Ball players generally agree that Bill has baseball brains. He is a thinker, and as a catcher, he has to be a quick thinker or sit on the bench.

* * *

IT is the opinion of the writer that Wagner would not want the position if it were offered to him. He is perfectly content to be captain of the team. Wagner is really a very shy and diffident man. While he is a star ball player and a splendid captain, it is doubted if he would fit in well as a manager. Doubtless Wagner would say the same thing if he were asked about it.

* * *

WAGNER and Carrigan are the closest of friends and have been ever since they both became members of the squad. They are roommates. They comprised the "Board of Strategy" of the Red Sox organization last season when the team won the pennant. It is more than probable that this combination will resume business again now that Carrigan has been appointed manager. The meetings of the "Board" were discontinued during the world's series last fall, when Carrigan was not allowed to go behind the bat by Stahl, but was sent to the coaching line instead. It is asserted that Stahl was jealous of the publicity accorded the "Board" and decided to show all persons whom it might concern that he was the real, sole and only manager of the team. Of course, this report the writer has no first-hand information, but Stahl's actions in the series would seem to bear out the assertion.

* * *

IT is well that the change in managers is made when it is made. Carrigan will have the opportunity to become accustomed to his new duties. And if things go along all right he will have a chance to shape his team for next year. It is hardly within the range of possibilities for the Red Sox to win the pennant this year. It seems to be too late. But the team can make a good finish if properly handled, and that is the work cut out for Manager Bill. Carrigan has the respect and confidence of his players. Stahl was well liked, for that matter, but when the players realized that he was making wrong moves and not using the best judgment in the handling of his team it, no doubt, had a bad effect on them.

SANTA MONICA WILL GO AFTER SAVANNAH MARK

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—The Santa Monica road race, to be run on August 9, will be one event open for all cars of 600 cubic inches and under, covering the course 53 times for a total of 445 miles.

This announcement was made after a meeting of the Santa Monica road race committee, making a radical departure from previous runnings of the coast classic.

The most important reason advanced for making the change and increasing the distance by nearly 50 per cent was so that the contestants might go after the grand prize record for 400 miles made on the Savannah course.

Because the 120-horsepower Fiat with which Teddy Tetzlaff won the last race and established a new world's record is above the displacement restriction, the car has been eliminated from this year's race.

$20,000 FOR RITCHIE FOR THREE N. D. BOUTS

NEW YORK, July 12.—A $20,000 guarantee for three no-decision fights of ten rounds each awaits Willie Ritchie. Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of the St. Nicholas A. C., today is awaiting word from the champion as to whether he will accept or not. Joe Shugrue, Jack Britton and Packey McFarland are the men picked by Johnston. As there are no decisions rendered in this city, Ritchie can not lose his title unless he is knocked out.

Johnston is also willing to guarantee Ritchie $7,500 if he will box Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight champion.

WASHBURN AND LEROY QUALIFY FOR GOLF FINALS

NEW YORK, July 12.—Watson M. Washburn and Robert Leroy and Theo. R. Pell and Raymond D. Little will meet this afternoon in the final match of the Round Robin tennis doubles of the Westchester Country Club.

The Washburn-Leroy combination finished at the top of the first division yesterday by defeating Adee and Rawlins by the score of 6-3, 6-2. This victory gave the winners the right to play Pell and Little, leaders of the second division, for the trophies to-day.

TURNS DOWN BIG PRICE.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 12.—Ed Maier, president of the Venice Coast League Baseball Club, to-day refused an offer of $200,000 for the team and franchise by a syndicate which included John McGraw, of the New York National League Club.

GOLF TOURNEYS FOR JUNIORS IS NEEDED MOST

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, July 12. — The announcement of the age limit tournament at Shokie suggests another thought. There is an increasing number of age-limit tourneys in the golf world about Chicago and a decreasing number of open events for young golfers.

The age-limit events are excellent things, but the lack of junior events is hard upon the young golfers, who can only look forward to "coming of age" and the chance, in consequence, of bringing up future great golfers becomes smaller yearly.

Didn't Know Own Ability.

A player does not know his ability until he enters into competition with other players. In my own case, I did not know that I was a first flighter until my tournament scores disclosed the fact. The big championships, of course, are always open to players with a low handicap, but the field is usually large and the players' abilities closely matched. If the young players can only enter these tournaments he will soon quit competitive golf, for the champion is only made after years and years of hard work.

The beginner in the big tournaments would probably be so far surpassed that he would lose courage and drop out of the game, for the promising young player must be provided with an occasional victory to keep his heart up.

Youngsters Want Competition.

The business man enjoys golf as an exercise, but the youngster has hundreds of ways of getting exercise, and there is a chance that he may desert golf unless he has a better way of showing his skill. It is true that he will be sorry later on, but the average individual lives in the present.

Just now, there seem to be very few young golfers of exceptional promise, and this dearth may, in part, be attributed to lack of competitive opportunities. The championship next week may disclose some new lights, but the chances are that the old, familiar names will be seen at the top of the list of qualifiers and in the last four.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Willie Ritchie has been receiving so many offers for bouts from the different clubs all over the country that he has decided to inspect them all on August 4. The one that the champion considers the largest he will accept and will be ready to meet the opponent picked for him on Labor Day.

* * *

Packey McFarland, who does not believe in fighting during the hot months, has just made an announcement in Chicago to the effect that he has no intention of donning the mitts again until the second week in September. "I only hope that my next bout will be with Willie Ritchie," said Packey, "for I think that I can wrest his title from him."

* * *

Tommy Burns and his heavyweight, Arthur Pelky, are now in Frisco. Burns is trying to get his protege a match with Gunboat Smith on Labor Day. Pelky's chances of landing the mill, however, appear to be very small, as the lightweights are the big cards on the coast at the present time.

* * *

The Leach Cross-Matty Baldwin bout, scheduled to take place at Los Angeles on July 29, may be called off. McCarey refuses to give Leach more than $3,500 for his end of the purse, while Cross is holding out for $5,000.

* * *

Danny Goodman managed to outpoint Jeff McConnell in a 10-round battle at Aurora, Ill., last night. Goodman's aggressiveness earned him the shade.

* * *

Tommy Walsh, manager of George "Knockout" Brown, is a busy party these days getting his protege in shape for his engagement with Frank Klaus at Butte, Mont., next month. Brown is doing his training in Chicago. The middleweights are scheduled to go twelve rounds.

* * *

Coast fans are now touting Kid Williams as the bantamweight champion of the world. Tom McCarey handed the latter a belt for trimming Ledoux recently. Williams is to hold the belt until he is defeated by some boy of his weight.

* * *

Charlie White, the Chicago sensation, will make his next fight against Freddie Welch at Winnipeg. The pair are scheduled to meet in a 12-round set-to on August 15.

* * *

The middleweight division has another contender in Tim O'Neil, the Hammond, Ind., scrapper. The latter recently stopped Tom McMahon and is practically matched to meet Jim Clabby at Kenosha, Wis.

CHAPPELLE HAS NO PARTICULAR STAR FEATURE

By O. B. Keeler

NOW that it seems pretty definitely settled that Mr. Lawrence Chappelle, Milwaukee outfielder, cost the Chicago White Sox $18,000, or words to that effect, there may be some small curiosity as to the workings of a bit of baseball machinery that can get such an expensive rating in the big show.

That is to say, what sort of a new prize beauty is this Chappelle person.

Well, Chappy—as he was commonly known in the American Association—sports rather an odd distinctive feature. This is the fact that he hasn't any. He can hit; he can field and throw; he is no dub on the bases. But there is no one handle sticking out of Chappy's A. A. record that you can lay hold on and say: "Here is a wonder."

Chappy's best point probably is his hitting. That unquestionably was what attracted attention in the Callahan camp. Chappy did hit becomingly—in the A. A., which also developed Mr. Gavvy Cravath, of the Phillies. He is a big fellow—strong in the arms and shoulders, and able to take a free swing on a fast ball or a savage chop at a curve. He crowds the plate and worries the pitcher.

In the field he is a good, steady performer. He is a good judge of a fly ball and covers a fair territory. He can throw well, but hasn't the arm of Clarence Walker, of Kansas City. He is no speed demon, like Shelton, of Columbus, either in the field or on the towpath.

If Chappy turns out to be a paying investment for Comiskey, it will be because he is that really valuable thing in baseball—an all-round player.

WILLIE MEEHAN BEAT MANTELL

OAKLAND, CAL., July 12.—Willie Meehan, of San Francisco, won the decision over Frank Mantell, of Pawtucket, R. I., in a 10-round bout here last night.

Wolgast and Dundee Will Clash Sept. 9

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—Tom Jones has finally accepted terms of Promoter McCarey, of the Pacific A. C., and Ad Wolgast and Johnny Dundee are again matched to box at Vernon. September 9 has been set as the day for the battle. Jones has been holding out for a guarantee and a percentage as had been agreed upon for their previous match which was called off because of an injury to the Dutchman's hand. The winner of the Cross-Baldwin bout is to be matched with Joe Rivers at Vernon on Labor Day unless Champion Willie Ritchie will agree to reasonable terms for a bout with the Mexican on that date.

Cross started training to-day for his fight with Baldwin.

CONNIE MACK PRESENTS OLD UNIFORMS TO INDIANS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 12.—The baseball fan frequently wonders what becomes of the old uniforms, bats and gloves discarded by big league clubs. Much of their paraphernalia is used until it is so worn or damaged as to be of no further value, but every club manager has on file applications for outfittings no longer suitable for the major circuits.

Just at present the Indian team of St. Mary's Mission School at Omak, Wash., is proudly playing in uniforms formerly worn by the Athletics when they held the title of world's champions.

Manager Connie Mack was appealed to for some discarded suits early this spring, and in answer to the request forwarded not only uniforms, but gloves, bats and balls as well.

O'TOOLE BETTER, BUT CAN HARDLY WORK THIS YEAR

PITTSBURG, July 12.—Marty O'Toole, the Pirate $22,500 pitcher who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, has left St. Margaret's Hospital and is now at his home in Homewood.

Indications are that it will be many weeks before he takes his regular turn on the rubber again. Baseball men fear he will be of no further use to the team this season.

LYNCH FINES TWO CARDINALS.

NEW YORK, July 12.—President Lynch, of the National League, has fined Fielder Cathers and Second Baseman McGee, of the St. Louis club, $25 each, for their fist fight at the Polo Grounds last Thursday.

COFFROTH AFTER RITCHIE FOR GO ADMISSION DAY

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 12.—If James W. Coffroth, premier ring promoter, can induce Champion Willie Ritchie to don the gloves on Admission Day, Tommy Murphy, the Eastern lightweight, will be his opponent. James has the latter signed up and is angling with the champ.

But Ritchie is coy. He is not averse to taking a chance with any of the ringsters who want to wrest the lightweight crown from his head, but he wants to get the most money he can for taking a chance of losing his valuable asset.

He has offers of big sums to box in Vancouver, New Orleans and New York. He is willing to consider bids from anywhere, San Francisco included, and he informed Coffroth that some time, about August 4, he would consider all the bids and decide in favor of one of them. When asked if he would decide right away in case he was offered something big in the way of financial inducements, Ritchie said:

"No. Nothing doing in the acceptance line until August 4, when all bids must be in."

Coffroth is now matchmaker for three clubs here, the Shasta, Canal and Sunshine, and is planning bouts for these organizations.

Labor Day is another date in September for which Coffroth is planning something extra in the way of a pugilistic attraction. The match that looks best to him now is a heavyweight one, between Arthur Pelky and Gunboat Smith, the most prominent members of the unlimited class. Pelky will be here Monday with his manager, Tommy Burns, and Coffroth will endeavor to get them to sign articles to meet the Gunboat.

For his August date, Coffroth has a number of strings out. He plans to hold the August fight early in the month so that it will not be close to the two September dates, Labor Day being the first of September.

Leach Cross and his manager, Sam Wallach, had an interview with Coffroth, and Coffroth made a proposition to the New Yorker to Box Red Watson or Tommy Murphy in August.

"Scotty" Montieth, the manager of Johnny Dundee, was another visitor, and an offer was made him to bring Dundee up here from Los Angeles and meet Watson in August. Dundee has declared that he will not fight featherweights any more, and it would be a good try-out in the lightweight class to go against Watson. Coffroth also offered to match Dundee with Abe Attell if Montieth liked him better as an opponent.

DENVER, COLO., July 12.—Frank Whitney, the fighting carpenter, beat Phil Knight here last night in ten rounds.

SOX BUY A. A. CATCHER.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Nick Allen, catcher, who last season was a member of the Minneapolis American Association team, has been sold to the Chicago American League club.

LANGFORD GETS MATCH.

BILLIKEN TEAM TO BE SHIFTED TO LITTLE ROCK

MONTGOMERY, July 20.—Col. Robert Lee Hedges, president of the St. Louis American League Baseball Club, spent last Tuesday in Little Rock. His trip there was for diplomatic and financial reasons, which concern the ultimate taking over of the Montgomery club of the Southern Association by the St. Louis American League Club, and a shift of base being made from Montgomery to Little Rock.

Will Shift the Franchise.

Montgomery has not been supporting the excellent team which Manager Johnny Dobbs has installed there with any spirit, and Colonel Hedges declared, as late as Monday, that if he did secure the Montgomery club —which he was not seeking—there probably would be a shift of the franchise to some other city.

Inferentially, the Colonel's trip to Little Rock Tuesday was for the specific consideration of this shift, though the taciturnity customary in times of baseball political action was maintained about the American League office.

Necessary as a "Feeder."

With the tremendous competition among major league teams for embryonic talent it is almost a necessity that each major league club have at least one AA minor league club under its control that can turn into the big ring players fairly well developed. That, of course, would be Hedges' patent purpose in financing the Montgomery club.

Colonel Hedges returned from Little Rock Wednesday morning and said his trip there had been merely to receive the assurance of President William M. Kavanaugh, of the Southern League that the players upon whom he has a string on the Montgomery club would be protected for the Browns in the event the Montgomery franchise was sold.

SEVERAL BIG LEAGUE TEAMS PLAN TO TRAIN IN FLORIDA

JACKSONVILLE, July 20.—Next spring several of the big league teams will do their spring training in Florida. The Chicago Cubs are to go to Tampa, the Philadelphia Americans are coming to this city, and Miami is raising a fund of $5,000 to secure the Cincinnati Reds.

The plan being employed at the Magic City to raise the necessary funds is that of having ten men to deposit notes for $500 in one of the banks. The gate receipts for the exhibition games will be used to reemburse these men at the end of the training season.

The Cincinnati team has been mentioned, but the Miami fans are willing to take care of any big league aggregation which will wend its way southward. All they want is a look at a real, live ball player of the highest type.

JOHNSON WILL DECIDE WHITE-SOX-YANKS ROW

DETROIT, MICH., July 20.—President Johnson, of the American League, will decide the question raised by the recent trade between the New York and Chicago American League clubs involving Hal Chase, Rollie Zeider and Borton.

It will not be necessary to take the questions involved in the New York-Chicago trade before the National Commission, according to President Johnson. "As soon as I get the official report of the whole affair, I'll take care of the matter myself," he said.

PHIL CROSS AFTER BRITTON.

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—Joe Rivers Sam Wallach is after McCarey to stage a welterweight elimination contest here between Phil Cross and Jack Britton. If such a program can be carried out the winner would be matched with Packy McFarland in a final contest for the welterweight championship, a belt and title to go to the winner.

Makes Blotchy Skin Free of All Blemish

The Most Obstinate Skin Afflictions and Eruptions from Poisoned Blood Are Completely Cured Quickly.

This Picture Plainly Shows the Wonderful Change Wrought by S. S. S.

It is certainly remarkable how quickly the action of S. S. S. the famous blood purifier, shows itself in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood, or from the fine net work of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly selecting from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless.

It is a great mistake to rely upon cathartics to cure pimples or other facial eruptions. Not only do cathartics cause chronic constipation, but they thin the blood of its valuable and essential [illegible] ces.

Acne, or that condition of the skin known as pimples, often becomes so persistent that it will continue to old age if not checked by determined methods. And the same with blackheads. A knowledge of the skin and why it becomes the abiding place of so many eruptive conditions will show how futile it is to squeeze pimples or blackheads or put a coating over the skin with grease, powders or other external applications. To clear your skin and to make it stay so requires a stimulating influence in the corium, or the fine net work of tiny blood vessels below the outer and inner layers of skin.

You will be surprised and delighted at the quick change if you use S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. Its action in the skin is quite sensational. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 195 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

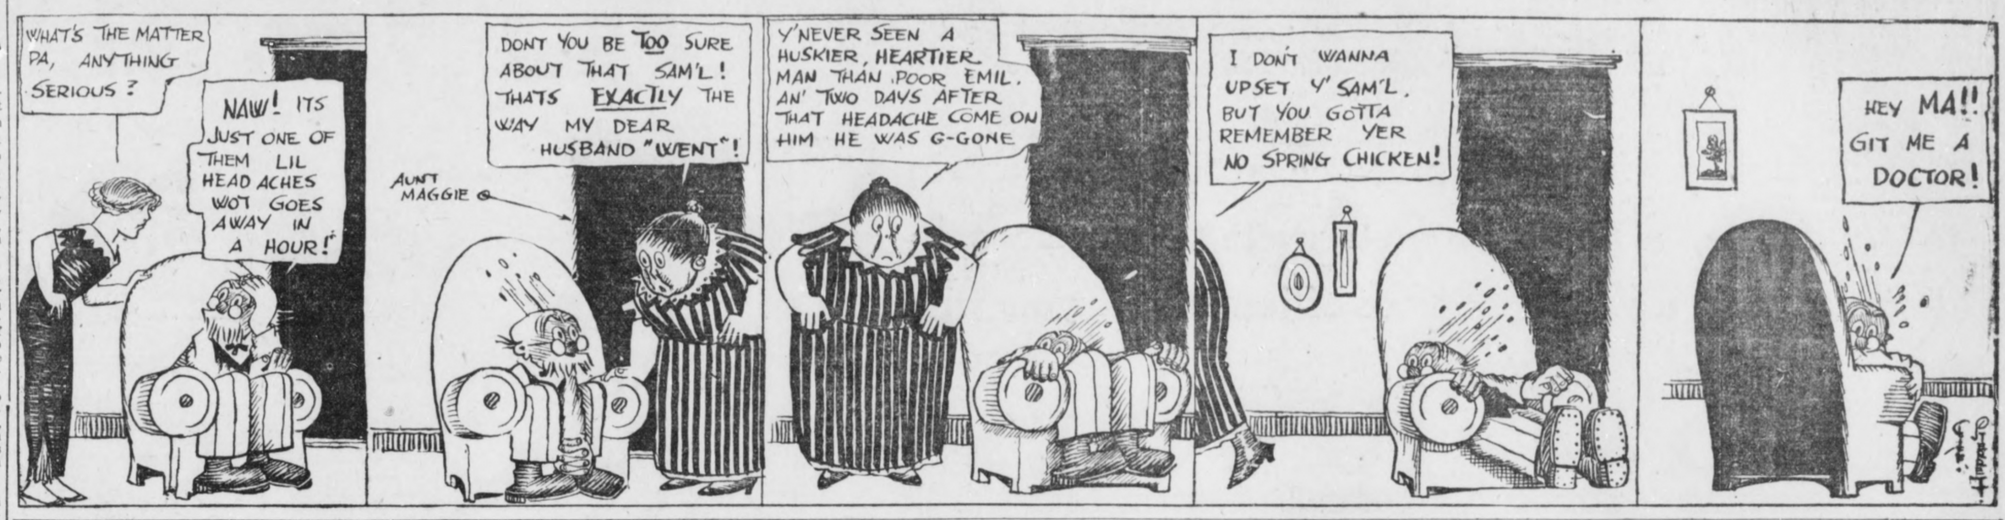

When you ask for S. S. S., look out for the common trick of trying to sell you something else. Don't be misled.

Dixie Moguls to Make Changes

Many Will Have New Job in '14

By Percy H. Whiting.

THERE'LL be some managerial changes in the Southern League when next season rolls around. They are beginning to crop out already.

The managers who are bound to stick are Bill Smith, in Atlanta; Carleton Molesworth, at Birmingham, and quite probably, Mike Finn, at Mobile.

Bill Smith has a two-year contract, so he is sure of his berth for another term. Molesworth appears a fixture. Mike Finn can undoubtedly have the Mobile job again if he wants it, but he may not. It's a pretty discouraging job, and on his showing this year, and for many years past, Honorable Mique is entitled to something better.

* * *

AND now for the guys who will NOT return to their old jobs. Put in the list of certainties Johnny Dobbs and Charley Frank.

Dobbs will go higher—maybe only to the American Association, more probably to the American League.

Charlie Frank will go—nobody knows where—but he will GO. That's a certainty. They are through with him in New Orleans. The Cleveland club owners, who own likewise the Pelican franchise, will send C. Frank sailing. Who will take his place nobody pretends to know. Maybe the Cleveland folks will come out in the open and admit the ownership by putting a Cleveland cast-off in as manager. Possibly they will play it safe by giving the job to Bill Bernhard, who was with Cleveland before he came to the Southern League. Or, maybe, they will play it safer still and put in some guy there who is game to tackle the tremendous task of cleaning up Pelicanville, running off the gamblers and putting the game there back in the position it belongs.

* * *

IN the rest of the cities there is uncertainty. It is to be expected that Elberfeld will be retained by Chattanooga. He has made good. But then, when two such explosive characters as O. B. Andrews, club president, and the Tabasco Kid are hooked up on any business deal, a split is always possible.

Presumably, Bill Schwartz can stick along at Nashville as long as he wants. But he isn't likely to stay a minute longer than it takes him to get a good job elsewhere. Bill is entitled to a better job than he has. He is a live guy.

The same goes for Bill Bernhard. He is hooked up with a dead crowd in a baseballically-speaking dead town. He would be tickled green to get a job somewhere else. He ought to do it. Continued association with that crowd of chronic losers—and losers through no fault of his—is robbing him of his pep, his "ambish," and his reputation. Bill is probably looking around for a job. He is entitled to one, too. He has done wonders with poor backing.

* * *

THIS seems to be a good year for the bench managers. Finn, Dobbs and Smith, who have ceased to be players, and do their hard work from the bench, have been making most of the race. But this does not necessarily prove anything.

As a rule, the only teams in this league which can afford bench managers can afford good ball clubs. There are too many exceptions this year, however, to make that rule worth a hang.

Really the two teams which have made the most marvelous showing—Mobile and Montgomery—are cheap teams. The Atlanta club and the Lookouts are the only high-priced aggregations that have caused a riffle this year.

CLARK JOINS CRACKERS; BRADY GIVEN RELEASE

NEW ORLEANS, July 20.—Pitcher George Clark, the left-hander turned over to Atlanta by Manager Clark Griffith, of the Washington Americans, joined the Crackers here yesterday.

Jim Brady, the veteran right-hander, was given his unconditional release and is now free to sign where he pleases. Every team in the league waived on him.

LOOKOUTS SECURE WALSH, SHORTSTOP, FROM BROWNS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 20. President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, announced to-day that he had secured Shortstop Dee Walsh from the St. Louis American League Club. Walsh will report immediately.

GEO. SUGGS MAY FIGURE IN REDS-PHILLIES TRADE

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—It was said here this afternoon that the Cincinnati and Philadelphia National League teams were negotiating for an exchange of players. It was reported that Pitcher Suggs, of Cincinnati, might come to Philadelphia in exchange for one of the utility men of the local club.

MORRIS MEETS BENEDICT.

JOPLIN, MO., July [illegible].—Negotiations have been completed for a fifteen-round bout between Carl Morris, of Sapulpa, Okla., and Al Benedict, of New York, to be fought in Joplin July 25.

LOOKOUTS GET WALSH.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July [illegible].—Shortstop "Dee" Walsh, sensational fielder with Mobile last year, has been bought by Chattanooga from the St. Louis Browns.

THOMAS AND DALY MATCHED.

EVANSVILLE, IND., July 20.—Young Joe Thomas, of St. Louis, and Jack Daly, of Indianapolis, both welterweights, who fought here a few weeks ago, have been matched for a fight at McLean, Ky., on Labor Day.

Sports and Such

WELCOME.

How dear to my heart is that line of the races,
When again in the paper each morn it is spied,
And I think of the dough that my trust oft misplaces:
"Public Stung—Favorite Is Disqualified!"

* * *

TY COBB, EVERS AND Zimmerman are the best friends of the umpires. They keep down competition for those jobs.

* * *

FREDDIE WELCH IS going to take enough time away from his work at the typewriter proving that he is lightweight champion of the world, to fight Johnny Dundee, which is an unusual proceeding for a box-fighter. Most of them prefer to stand or fall by their press agents.

* * *

KID WILLIAMS, THE wonderful little Baltimore bantam, is persistently violating what the National Commission would probably call the "ethics" of the profession. He insists on knocking out some guy about once a week.

* * *

THE SIGNING OF JOE JUDGE by McGraw is to be regretted, as it opens the way for some hardy jokesmith to say something about the need of a judge of ball players on the team.

* * *

THE PASTIME OF WALLOPING Joe Platts promises to become as popular as the grand old sport of lamming his fellow-countryman, B. Wells.

* * *

TOO MUCH.

The magnate spoke of "Ethics"—
It was his latest breath,
For he lay down on the carpet
And laughed himself to death.

* * *

MR. EBBETS TO THE contrary, baseball seems to be reaching the age of sophistication. The owners of the Boston club could see no more reason for keeping Jake Stahl than for treasuring the chopped-up tickets of the world's series games he won for them a few short months ago.

* * *

SPEAKING OF ETHICS, it is only about sixty hours ago that Ban Johnson and President McAleer solemnly avowed that there was not the slightest chance that Stahl would be ousted from the leadership of the world's champions.

* * *

THE CHIEF OBJECTION of the magnates to Ty Cobb is that he does not confine his running wild to the bases only.

* * *

LONG ISLAND MOTORISTS are threatening to appeal to the Game Warden against the practice of "planting" motor cops in artificial cover to nail them.

* * *

STAHL OUT, M'ALEER TO JOHNSON.

* * *

AS WAS EXPECTED, THERE is no sign of a movement toward the extradition of Jack Johnson. The Federal Government can not, in these skittish times, afford to antagonize the large White Hope vote.

* * *

IT HAS BEEN DISCOVERED that by jabbing a knife into a golf ball that contains an acid filler that game can be made nearly as interesting as motorcycling or aviation.

* * *

SELFISH.

There was a guy in our town
(He had a family, too),
Who let his life insurance lapse,
And bought a sail-canoe.

* * *

WHY GET EXCITED OVER the report that the White Sox have paid $15,000 for a minor leaguer? That sum will be made up in two Saturdays by merely those spectators (?) who give up a dollar or so to sit behind a post.

* * *

ROLLIE ZEIDER'S FEET ARE wasted in baseball. Any members so useful in sidestepping real work ought to be attached to a boxfight champion.

THIRD SACKERS LIKE R. WALLACE MIGHTY SCARCE

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 20.—When the count of 10 is tolled on Rhoderick Wallace as a major league player, then baseball will lose one of its greatest stars. But from present indications, Bob Wallace is going to establish a record for perpetual service in the big arena.

When this season opened the Scot started out on his eighteenth consecutive year. As has been the custom for the past few years, the high boss of the Browns has been trying to find a youthful successor for Wallace. A kid of more speed, a better batter, a better fielder and a better player all around has been sought.

But this spring has been the same as the others. The recruits have arrived and the recruits have gone, and Bob Wallace remains a member of the Browns, playing the same snappy and sensational infield that he did when he was in his prime.

Some Star at Third.

In the last three games at Sportsman's Park fans have seen Wallace operate at third base. That's the spot where the veteran really became a star when he was with the old Cleveland Spiders and when he came to St. Louis, when the franchises of Cleveland and St. Louis were transferred in 1899.

Suffering with a pair of bad legs and a sore right hip, Wallace has played as spectacularly as any third baseman who has been in the big circle.

The play de luxe executed by Wallace was in a recent conflict with the Yanks. It happened in the fifth inning. Fisher was on second, with one out, when Wolter bounded to Lavan. The shortstop made a high peg to Wallace, trying for Fisher.

No third baseman in the game would have completed the out. Wallace, stretching out, grabbed the high throw with his glove, and, with a quick swing, tagged Fisher as he slid into the bag.

Wallace didn't leap for the wild peg. Had he jumped he never could have made the swing to tag Fisher as he slid into the bag. It was a play that nobody but Wallace could have completed.

They Can't Get His Job.

Wallace started to slow up a few seasons ago. President Hedges, realizing this, instructed scouts to buy all the promising infielders. They did. Within the last few seasons, Roy Hartzell, Eddie Hallinan, Mike Balenti, Harry Shanley, Eddie Daley, Derrill Pratt, Dee Walsh, and now Johnny Lavan have been on the job.

The first collection of eight trying to push Wallace back to the minors. Hallinan, Daley, Shanley, Walsh, Balenti, Pratt and Hartzell failed. The first four are in the minors, while judgment upon Lavan will be delayed a bit until the rah-rah recruit gets more time to show that he can hit.

Bob Wallace isn't the same spry kid he was a dozen years ago, still fans at Sportman's Park, or even Robison Field have yet to see the athlete who compared with the Scot when he was in his prime.

If Wallace isn't ready to quit or go to the minors now. He isn't a regular with the Browns, but several major league owners have put in bids to Hedges for the marvel of marvels.

BASEBALL CONTRACTS.

The word "contract" is derived from the Attic verb "con," meaning to heave the bull. The other half of the word was thrown in merely to disguise its real meaning.

A baseball contract is an agreement, duly signed and witnessed, whereby a helpless youth gives up his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness until death do us part, or words to that effect. He does this voluntarily, even as the wayfarer gives up his goods and chattels to a perfect stranger who places the muzzle of a gatling gun athwart his heaving bosom.

A youth who has signed a baseball contract is perfectly free to do anything his manager orders. He is also free to resign whenever he pleases, but resigning is not popular among athletes, owing to the general prejudice against starving to death.

Under the present system of peonage a ball player is fully as important as an insect. In some instances, as in the case of Tyrus R. Cobb, the insect turns out to be a little busy bee, improving the shining hour, and the magnate gets stung. These magnates never seem to get over the habit of approaching a bee at the wrong end.

The life of the athlete is a merry one. He is wafted hither and yon in cool and refreshing sleeping cars and given free bed and fodder, even as the noble truck horse.

And when he fails to draw the requisite amount of kale at the gate he is handed a swift kick and headed in the direction of the boneyard. It is then, and not until then, that his contract becomes valuable, for, if he grows hungry he has the privilege of eating it.

Well might the athlete sing this national anthem:

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty
(So it is said.)
Land where I sign to play
My youthful life away
Forever and a day
To earn my bread!

Land where magnates stand
Together hand in hand
And thus repeat:
"You low-browed gents are free
To work for none but me,
Unless you do, by gee,
You do not eat!"

While we have the profoundest respect for the power of the law, we fear that in order to separate the Cub owner from that $3,000 Artie Hofman will have to call in the aid of a jimmy.

Fielder Jones is one of the few men who can burst into print by offering himself a $25,000 job and then refusing it.

We all have something for which we may be thankful. For instance, Mr. Coulon may congratulate himself on the fact that he was not in the shoes of Mr. Ledoux.

Mr. McAleer is willing to concede that Jake Stahl is the greatest baseball manager in the banking business.

While there is a controversy in the East over Sunday baseball, it is safe to say that neither St. Louis team is in danger of being found guilty of playing ball on Sunday—or on week-days.

Although these baseball dedications are becoming tiresome, the public would gather in vast numbers to dedicate the execution of a few popcorn merchants.

STEIN SONG.

Oh, it's always wet weather
When club owners get together,
(Etc.)

Aside from taking money from a blind man, it is hard to think of a more cruel and unusual act than protesting a game against Frank Chance.

Tom Lynch arises to remark that he thinks well of his umpires. The amazing part of it is that he has seen them at work.

SOMETHING ELSE AGAIN.

Old King Cole is a wonderful soul
His work is a perfect dream.
He makes them whiff till their arms are sore—
But not on a big league now.

Hub Perdue Has Won 11; Lost 7

Keeping Braves Out of Cellar

ALTHOUGH with a club that is now in sixth place, a good many points under the .500 mark, Hub Perdue, the former Nashville hurler, now with the Boston Braves, has won 11 and lost only 7 games this season. That's a percentage of .632 and is about 200 points ahead of that of his team.

The right-hander has won his last six contests, and has been returned the winner in nine of his last ten starts. That's a pretty good record for any pitcher, and it's no wonder that Johnny McGraw, of the Giants, was so anxious to get the big right-hander.

Perdue has been with the Braves a good many seasons, but it looks as if this would be the first time in his big league career that he will finish above the .500 mark. In order to do this, though, he must keep on pitching the kind of ball he has so far this campaign.

He Is a Giant Tamer.

Probably this is another reason that McGraw would like to get Perdue. Hub has faced the Giants four times this season. He has pitched twenty innings against the National League leaders, and in that time they have counted only seven tallies off him, while he owns two wins over them, and has not been beaten.

Winning six straight, the Braves' right-hander beat the Giants, Phillies, Cardinals, Pirates and the Superbas twice. He has been hit hard in a few of the games, but his teammates always came to the rescue and made more tallies than the other fellows could get off him.

Although he has won eleven and lost only six, Perdue has been hurling none too good ball. He has pitched 134 1-3 innings this campaign and in that time 63 tallies have been scored off him, while the opposition has batted his benders to places unoccupied 126 times. In other words, two hits off him have brought two tallies.

Keeps Team Above Bottom.

The best game Perdue has pitched was his first of the season, when, on the opening day of the National League season, he shut out the Giants, allowing them only two bingles. He has hurled only two shutouts this season, the other coming against the Pirates, who he let down with four bingles.

Perdue has been working in his regular turn for the Braves this year and it has been his good work that has kept the team from the bottom.

The only teams to beat him this season were the Cardinals, Cubs, Phillies and Superbas. The Cards and Phillies each own two wins over him, Perdue has beaten every club in the league with the exception of the Cubs. His record for the campaign follows:

RIVERS WANTS ANOTHER CRACK AT CHAMPIONSHIP

LOS ANGELES, July [illegible].—Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight, is today anxious to redeem himself in the eyes of the sporting public. Many fans accused Rivers of quitting in his recent fight with Ritchie, and the Mexican is willing to mingle with the champion again in order to wipe out the sting of ridicule.

Rivers will post $5,000 to go as a side bet if Ritchie will agree to battle within three months.

ACCUSE BULGARS OF MASSACRE OF 20,000

Plains Near Kavala Strewn With Victims—Fear Felt for Safety of Foreigners.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA July 20.—Twenty thousand Greeks and Mussulmans are reported to have been slaughtered by Bulgarian soldiers at Xanthi, 40 miles northeast of Kavala.

The Bulgarians, on their retreat, surrounded the town and, after bombarding it, set it on fire.

A dispatch bearer arrived here today with the information, all communication with Xanthi by wire having been cut off.

Fear is felt for the 71 foreigners in the city.

King to Lead Army Of Reprisal Into Sofia.

ATHENS, July 20.—A Salonika dispatch states that King Constantine probably will go to the front to lead the army which the Greeks, in cooperation with Servia and Roumania, will throw into Sofia.

"I intend to go to Sofia in person to avenge the atrocities of the Bulgarians," telegraphed the King to Foreign Minister Coromitas.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria is personally exonerated of blame for barbarities of Bulgar soldiers in Macedonia and Thrace by King Constantine in a report of a fresh atrocity. After the Bulgarians took the town of Doxa, he said, they massacred all the 3,000 inhabitants except 130. Blame for the outrages is laid upon the Bulgarian army officers by the Greek King.

The Greek army is 62 miles from Sofia, the Servians are 40 and the Roumanians only 25 miles away.

Minister of Marine Stratos estimates that 25,000 Greeks have been killed since the war with Bulgaria broke out. It is estimated that 75,000 innocents have been massacred by Bulgarian, Greek and Servian troops, for each government accuses the other, and there s documentary evidence to show bloody reprisals were made.

Two hundred thousand persons are homeless and starving. Five hundred towns and villages have been wiped out or depopulated. Reckoned from a commercial standpoint the damage from the second Balkan war in Macedonia and Thrace is $100,000,000.

Hospitals filled with wounded troops have been bombarded, men and women have been torn from limb to limb, while the blood-drunk soldiers danced about them. Mosques have been filled with women and children and burned while the army pipers played their instruments about the pyre.

Mutilated dead bodies are found in the deserted villages. Many of the victims are officers.

St. Petersburg Protects Interests of Bulgaria.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 20.—Russia will not allow Bulgaria to be treated with extreme humiliation by either the allies or Turkey. A note to this effect was handed in to-day at Constantinople, Athens, Belgrade and Bucharest. Russia, it is reported, will attempt to hold Adrianople for Bulgaria.

The Bulgarian Minister to Russia denied that Czar Ferdinand had fled from Sofia before an infuriated mob, accompanied by Crown Prince Boris.

Adrianople Menaced by Invading Turkish Army.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 20.—The vanguard of the Turkish army which is invading Thrace arrived in front of Adrianople to-day and an attack upon the city may be made next week, according to a dispatch received here to-day from the field.

The small Bulgarian force in the garrison at Adrianople has been busy strengthening the forts about the city.

Peace Advocates File Stories of Atrocities.

PARIS, July 20.—The most appalling horrors of war were pictured in dispatches received here to-day from points in the Balkans and from Athens. They will be compiled by the International Peace Society for use in its crusade for universal peace.

Corpses with the arms pulled out and the eyes gouged out are common sights. The Bulgars have taken a wanton delight in the torture of Greek Catholic priests. Cruelties of unimaginable horror have been invented.

Bulgaria's Foes Reported Ready to Treat for Peace.

VIENNA, July 20.—The Neue Freie Presse stated to-day that as a result of the recent conference at Uskub the belligerent Balkan states and Greece are prepared to enter into direct peace negotiations with Bulgaria. Montenegro will participate.

Boosters to Invite Photo Men in 1914

A delegation of Atlanta boosters, headed by Fred Houser, of the Atlanta Convention Bureau, will leave over the Western and Atlantic Railroad at 4:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon for Kansas City to attend the 1913 convention of the National Photographers' Association of America, which opens there July 21.

Other members of the delegation include E. H. Goodhart, president of the Ad Club; L. D. Hicks, of The Southern Ruralist, and several local photographers.

They will be joined at Chattanooga by a delegation of Chattanoogans, who are going to boost for Atlanta, and also by a number from Macon. They will be armed with souvenirs telling of the beauties of Atlanta, and will work hard to capture the 1914 convention for the Gate City.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

That the first contested appointment coming up for Governor Slaton's consideration should have been decided in favor of a Hoke Smith man—to use that ancient and honorable term in differentiating him from the other variety in Georgia—may be accepted, in all probability, as the first bit of evidence that Governor Slaton meant exactly what he said when he stated that he hoped to be, and would try to be, a Governor not of any faction in Georgia, but of all the people.

The Governor on Friday appointed Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville, trustee of the Georgia Normal and Industrial School, situated there, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Bell has been an adherent of the Smith factional end of Georgia politics in the past rather than of the Brown end.

There is no question whatever about the entire fitness of Mr. Bell for the position. Governor Slaton might have searched the State for months and not found a better man for the assignment.

These places on the boards of trustees of the State institutions—particularly the Georgia Normal and Industrial School—are considered positions of great honor and trust and are conferred upon the very best men that may be found. For that reason, while they are not sought with that degree of fervor characterizing the usual effort for office, they rarely are declined, and frequently there are warm contests for the same.

Mr. Bell, a Smith man, was aggressively backed by other Smith men before Governor Slaton. His opponent, a good man of the Brown persuasion, was pressed quite as aggressively by other Brown men.

The Governor, in this his first contested case, thought the Smith man the better fitted, for one reason and another, for the position, and the appointment was made accordingly.

And that looks like a fair and square beginning in the line of letting fitness and not faction control in the executive office under the new Governor.

"I wish," said Speaker Burwell today, "I had one thousand pages' jobs to give out.

"There are so many worthy and splendid young boys who come to me for appointments, and the number of appointments I have is so small that it is a continuous matter of embarrassment and regret to me that I am unable to gratify the very great majority of applicants.

"The pages of the House are mainly young fellows, and the experience they get during the sessions is very useful and well worth while to them. I wish I could give every boy who applies to me a job—but, of course, I cannot do that."

Senator McNeil, of Bibb County, is a very graceful speaker, and one of the substantial men of the Senate.

Not only that, he also is one of the best dressed men in either House. He effects very light clothing, both as to texture and color, and always looks as fresh and cool as one possibly may in such sizzling weather as that of late.

"If I could keep as cool as McNeil always looks," said Senator Parrish to-day, "I would be mighty happy, I tell you. But I fear no man can be as cool nowadays as McNeil seems to be eternally."

Governor Slaton was a very busy man all day Friday.

During his day or so absence in Brunswick, a very heavy mail piled up in the executive office, which had to be disposed of yesterday.

The Governor is more or less methodical and always tries—and usually succeeds—to get to-day's mail answered and put in charge of "Uncle Sam" to-day.

The proposed creation of the grand young county of Warner, to be whacked out of Talbot, Meriwether and Harris, has moved the poets of that vicinity to do their very worst.

Judge Henry Revill, editor of The Meriwether Vindicator, is very vehemently opposed to the new county of Warner, particularly in that it would cut pretty far into historic old Meriwether if set up.

A poet of Warner, viewing Judge Revill with evident and pronounced alarm, proposed over the initials C. M. W., recently this dainty quatrain in his honor's honor, the which has been published from one end of the new county to the other:

"Here's to the new county of Warner!
So good-bye to Greenville and Judge Revill.
When we get our new county and courthouse
They can go to the d——l."

The trouble about this, of course, is that few people will believe a person so whole-souled, companionable, good natured and altogether delightful as Judge Henry Revill ever will go to any such person, thing or state of mind as this poet suggests.

HUSTLING MARKS LAST DAY FOR EXTRAVOTES

Pony Man Says Bonus Doubles Power of Subscriptions—Competitors Urged to Utmost.

Saturday night the special bonus vote offer for pony contestants striving for The Georgian and American prizes comes to a close. Reports show some great hustling is being done.

As has been explained, liberal allowances of extra votes will be made for every club of $35, $25 or $15 paid in for subscriptions. In most cases these bonuses are so liberal as almost to double the regular voting strength of that amount of subscriptions.

"Think of it!" said the contest manager. "Voting power of subscriptions just doubled! Why, if I were a contestant I'd stir heaven and earth to make up a club, and when that had been accomplished I'd stir things up again to get another club. Every contestant ought to turn in at least one $35 club a day, and should try to get two. Then if he falls short of two $35 clubs he can undoubtedly turn in a $35 club and a $25 club. And that means a good bunch of votes."

"They can't keep me from it," said one of the hardest workers."

He means it, too! No acquaintance of his has been left unsolicited. So earnest is he in his desire to win one of the ponies that he is making the work almost his sole business.

This is the day of Miss Robert Harbour's birthday party. Many of her guests have told her they intend giving subscriptions to The Georgian and American as remembrances of her fifth anniversary. The celebration is at 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Read With Care; Facts to Know

Each One Means Success in Handling Your Fowls.

The decaying carcass of one dead fowl will cause you enough trouble in the shape of cholera or limberneck to make you wish you had never seen a chicken. Avoid all this trouble by looking after the little things about the poultry yards and runs. Clean up the premises. Many a thing in the shape of filth can be endured in cold weather that will not do at all when the weather gets hot.

Never throw soft food upon the ground to be trampled under foot and become sour and filthy, to say nothing of the waste.

When you see the setting hen inclined to stand up on her nest, you can just bet your best money that she is covered with mites, and the nest, too, has a full supply. A good plan is to investigate all the setters a number of times during the incubating period in order to get rid of the mites before they get the best of you and the hen, too.

During the hot, dry months it is a good plan to set hens upon the ground, or, if this can not be done conveniently, cover the bottom of the nest with a piece of damp sod, upon which place the nesting material. At this season, when everything is so dry, and the air has so little moisture in it, good eggs often fail to hatch on account of this lack of moisture. This is why one can help matters along so by the use of sod in the nest. It can be kept damp by pouring water over it about once a week.

No code or set rules can be secured that will fit your place well enough for you to adopt them verbatim. Conditions vary so much that the best thing to do is to accept any good thing that has been satisfactorily worked out, adapting it to your own conditions and surroundings. This applies in all branches of the poultry business.

Whitewash is a good thing about the poultry yards and houses. Whitewash everything but your methods, let them stand for just what they are worth. If you are not doing all you should or can to make your business a success, do not whitewash it by trying to make others believe, and yourself as well, that you are doing great things.

And still the question comes, which is the best breed for me to adopt that I may make a success in the poultry business? It depends very much upon which plan you prefer to pursue. Whether you want to raise broilers alone or a combination of broilers and egg production, or stock strictly for an egg farm. For broilers or broilers and eggs, the American breeds, such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds, are the best that can be obtained and will not disappoint. For stocking an egg farm where large numbers are kept, the Leghorn—White or Brown—with the preference rather in favor of the Whites, are used most extensively with the greatest success. Black Minorcas do not seem to thrive so well as the Leghorns, when kept in large numbers, but, as they lay a very large egg, they are very satisfactory to breed to keep for eggs for family supply.

Take care of the poultry house droppings; it is worth money to you as a fertilizer. We would advise a roomy compost pen, under cover, where the droppings can be kept and mixed with leaves or soil as it is thrown in. If you have not shed suitable for such a pen, set four posts at a suitable distance to support a cheap board or tarred paper roof. If you have never properly cared for them before you will be surprised how much valuable fertilizing material you will secure from a hundred hens. If you are arranging for new poultry yards, locate them permanently, and in the fall, set them with fruit trees—plums, pears, etc. Poultry and fruit of these kinds seem to work hand in hand. The trees will furnish shade for the chickens, while the chickens will gather the insects which ordinarily injure the fruit.

Feed your fowls judiciously that they may not eat up all the profits. Feed them enough, but do not allow the feed to be wasted. Fowls, when gorged with food, will not lay as well as those that have just enough to make them active and healthy. Cutting the corners is where the profit comes in, as a rule.

Do not go to killing off all your hens that do not lay up to the 250-a-year standard. Work off as high an average in your flock as you can, but do not insist upon the impossible. You read a good deal about the wonderful record of some individual hen has made, but the money-makers are the good, all-around, average flocks, giving us about 150 eggs to the hen. Let the good work go on.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Brown Estate Lots Are Sold by Foster

Frontage of 800 Feet Changes Hands. Apartment Encroachment—Realty Election—Cash Sales.

Certain properties in the estate of the late Julius L. Brown are gradually being disposed of through the administrator, ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, and Atlanta real estate agents. Some time ago a tract was sold on Decatur street, semi-central property, at a good price, and the Julius Brown home on Washington street was put on the market.

The latest sale is of fifteen vacant lots fronting 800 feet on Little and Crew streets to a client of the Foster & Robson Agency, and of an adjoining lot for the Exchange Bank to Victor L. Smith. The prices are withheld. The sales were made by W. A. Foster, of the above agency.

The Joseph E. Brown property near the Soldiers' Home has been placed with an agency for subdivision.

Lots of Cash for Property.

Cash sales are again coming to the front. Judge W. R. Hammond has sold to Edward England through I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore Agency, the two-story frame house at No. 218 North Jackson street, between Adams street and East avenue, for $6,600 cash. This property is 55 by 200 feet and is on the north side of the street. Mr. England will make his home there.

Paul Nuckols has sold to Mrs. S. W. Goode a parcel on Auburn avenue just east of Piedmont, 25 by 112 feet, for $11,000 cash. The transaction was handled through A. S. Hook, of the Foster & Robson Agency. The property is improved with a two-story brick building.

Encroachment of Building.

An encroachment of four inches on the city's sidewalk by the Ponce DeLeon apartments at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon avenue has been reported to Building Inspector Hays by Assistant Inspector C. J. Bowen, and the matter will be taken before the City Council.

Frontage at this point is worth about $1,200 a foot. An effort was made to widen Peachtree here, it will be recalled, before the apartments were started, but the project fell through.

Ansley Park Car Line.

A quiet movement has been on foot for several weeks to get a car line through Ansley Park, and those who are interested in the project are hoping for success. The idea is to extend the Piedmont avenue line, which stops just a few hundred yards south of the city limits, through to Polo drive, over that thoroughfare's stone bridge and thence to Rock Springs.

The people of the Rock Springs section have been seeking a car line many months, and it seems to be simply a question of which route to choose to their neighborhood. The line, they have been assured, will be extended to Rock Springs, either through Ansley Park or by way of Piedmont avenue. Realizing what Edwin P. Ansley has done for the city, heavy owners in the Rock Springs section have felt inclined to pull for the Ansley Park route. The other way, however, would make it possible to widen Piedmont avenue.

"Ansley Park must soon have its car line," declared a well-known real estate dealer. "There are too many nickels for the street car company."

Sell Property for Taxes.

People who are accustomed to hunt real estate bargains in Atlanta will soon find their opportunity, although there won't be any chance to buy central or semi-central property at a reduction. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the Council Tax Committee, has discovered that the city holds overdue tax liens against $41,000 worth of property, mostly vacant lots, and he has ordered that they be sold. The date and the place of the sale will be announced later. Some of the property is improved with small buildings.

To Discuss Realty Loans.

An important meeting of the members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 314 of the State Capitol to urge the passage of the sinking fund investment bill, which provides for investing State reserve funds in real estate as a first lien as well as in bonds.

On the committee to see the proper authorities about this legislation are Harris G. White, president of the board; S. B. Turman, second vice president, and W. A. Foster, of the Foster & Robson Agency, and a director of the board. They will not only appear before a legislative committee, but will use every effort between now and Tuesday to get all the real estate men to attend the meeting.

Representatives Field and Smith, of DeKalb, are the authors of the bill to repeal the measure of 1919, which restricts such loans to bonds. Real estate constitutes about 69 per cent of the taxable values in Fulton County and about 54 per cent in the State, and because of this it is held that such discrimination should not exist.

Results of Realty Elections.

"There is plenty of work before the Atlanta Real Estate Board in the next year," declared Harris G. White Friday night at the Cafe Durand, in accepting the position of president to succeed Charles P. Glover. "For some time I have been in close touch with the affairs of the board, and I know what it means to run this organization. I want all of you to make suggestions and take an active interest, and we are sure to demonstrate the need for the organization."

Mr. White's talk followed an impromptu parade around the room, escorted by Mr. Glover and S. B. Turman, with the land brokers singing "He's a jolly good fellow!" and things like that. Charles P. Glover spoke briefly on the duties of the past year and predicted success under President White. A vote of thanks was given him, S. B. Turman eulogized him and the members voted thanks to all the retiring officers.

Others elected were John J. Woodside, vice president; S. B. Turman, second vice president; Van B. Smith, secretary, and H. W. Dews, treasurer.

The following six directors were elected to serve until 1914: Forrest Adair, W. A. Foster, S. L. Dallas, G. M. McKinnon, J. H. Ewing and J. W

Strange Champions of Nature and States' Rights

The interests which have so far been able to prevent the city of San Francisco getting the right from the Government to provide a water supply from the Hetch Hetchy Valley have been flooding the country with literature intended to appeal to nature lovers, arguing against the alleged desecration of one of the great natural wonders of the West.

From this literature it might be supposed that the city of San Francisco meant to take the mountain gorge, blow it off the map with dynamite and grind it up into concrete.

Now, what San Francisco purposes doing in Hetch Hetchy is to substitute for the rough floor of the canyon a lake. It is not going to blow down any cliffs, or shut off any waterfalls or do anything else that would destroy or even lessen the beauty of this seldom visited, remote mountain fastness.

It is not the beauty of the Hetch Hetchy Valley that the pump and water company that at present enjoys a monopoly in San Francisco fears will be destroyed. It fears any interference with the perfection of a monopoly of a city's greatest necessity.

It is from the same unselfish source that proceeds the agitated torrent of indignation at possible national jurisdiction over a municipal utility.

All the objections to the Hetch Hetchy Valley plan were fully met in the bill by which it was hoped that California Bay cities would get the supply of pure water that is so necessary to them.

The most jealous guardians of States' rights scrutinized that bill and found in it no surrender of their principles.

It appears, however, that the issue of Federal versus State jurisdiction is going to be raised again. It would be a calamity if such an issue should defeat or even delay the relief these cities require.

When a private water company anxious to sell an archaic system to a city at an exorbitant figure, and a power company anxious to avoid any interference with its grip upon a rich franchise solemnly fare forth as the champions of scenic beauty and States' rights they are not convincing.

San Francisco is not a vandal, nor has it any deep purpose of Federalism.

It is merely a city that was well-nigh destroyed when its privately owned water supply failed at the critical moment, and it wishes to guard against the possibility of a repetition of that thing and provide itself with an adequate supply of pure mountain water that now runs to waste during the wet season in California.

Your Work Is Your Brain's Gymnasium

(Copyright, 1913.)

For "buyers" in big stores,
For clerks in little stores,
For office boys,

For typewriters, reporters, car conductors, household domestics, for all who are hired to work for others, this article is intended.

There is no greater mistake than skimping your work BECAUSE YOU ARE WORKING FOR ANOTHER, AND FEAR YOU MAY DO TOO MUCH.

For your own sake remember that whatever you do in the way of honest concentrated work you do FIRST OF ALL FOR YOURSELF.

Only one thing in the world can improve you and better your condition, and that thing is your own effort.

You begin life with certain mental faculties, and with certain muscular faculties. Their development or decay depends entirely on yourself.

No work that you do is worthless. It will NEVER pay you to neglect or slur the task that you have undertaken.

You may be idle, in the thought that you are indulging yourself at the expense of your employer. It is a dishonest thought, and it is a stupid thought at the same time.

You may rob your employer of the time that he pays for, but when you shirk your work you rob yourself first of all.

You may say that your employer pays you too little. Perhaps he does. But that is no reason for hurting your moral character through dishonesty. It is no excuse for failing to develop yourself.

The store, or factory, or office in which you work is to your mind what a gymnasium is to your muscles.

You enter a gymnasium AND PAY FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING THERE.

You do not say to yourself: "This gymnasium belongs to another man. The profits go to him, and so I'll not work hard."

On the contrary, you realize that the owner of the gymnasium gives you the chance to develop your muscles, and you thank him, although he makes you pay for the privilege. And you do your very best, on the trapeze, rings, parallel bars, or in any other direction.

Act in your work as you do in your gymnasium hours.

There is no kind of work that can fail to make you a better and more successful man if you work at it honestly and loyally.

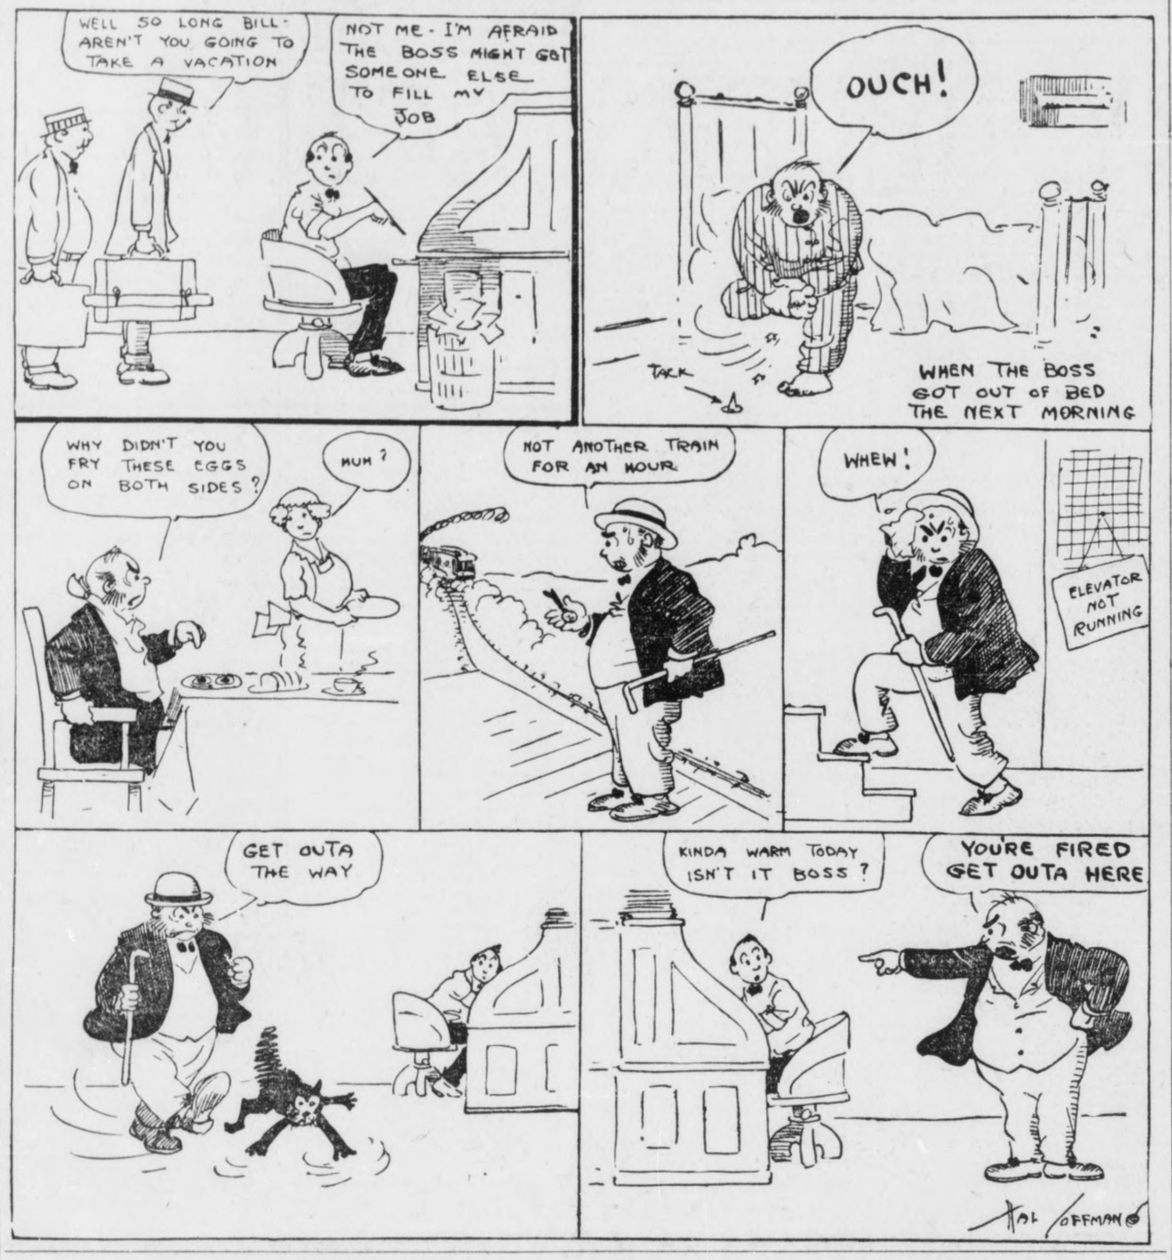

If you sweep an office, sweep it well. And begin punctually each day, remembering that punctuality acquired in sweeping an office may be used later in governing a city.

Train your mind through your work, whatever it is.

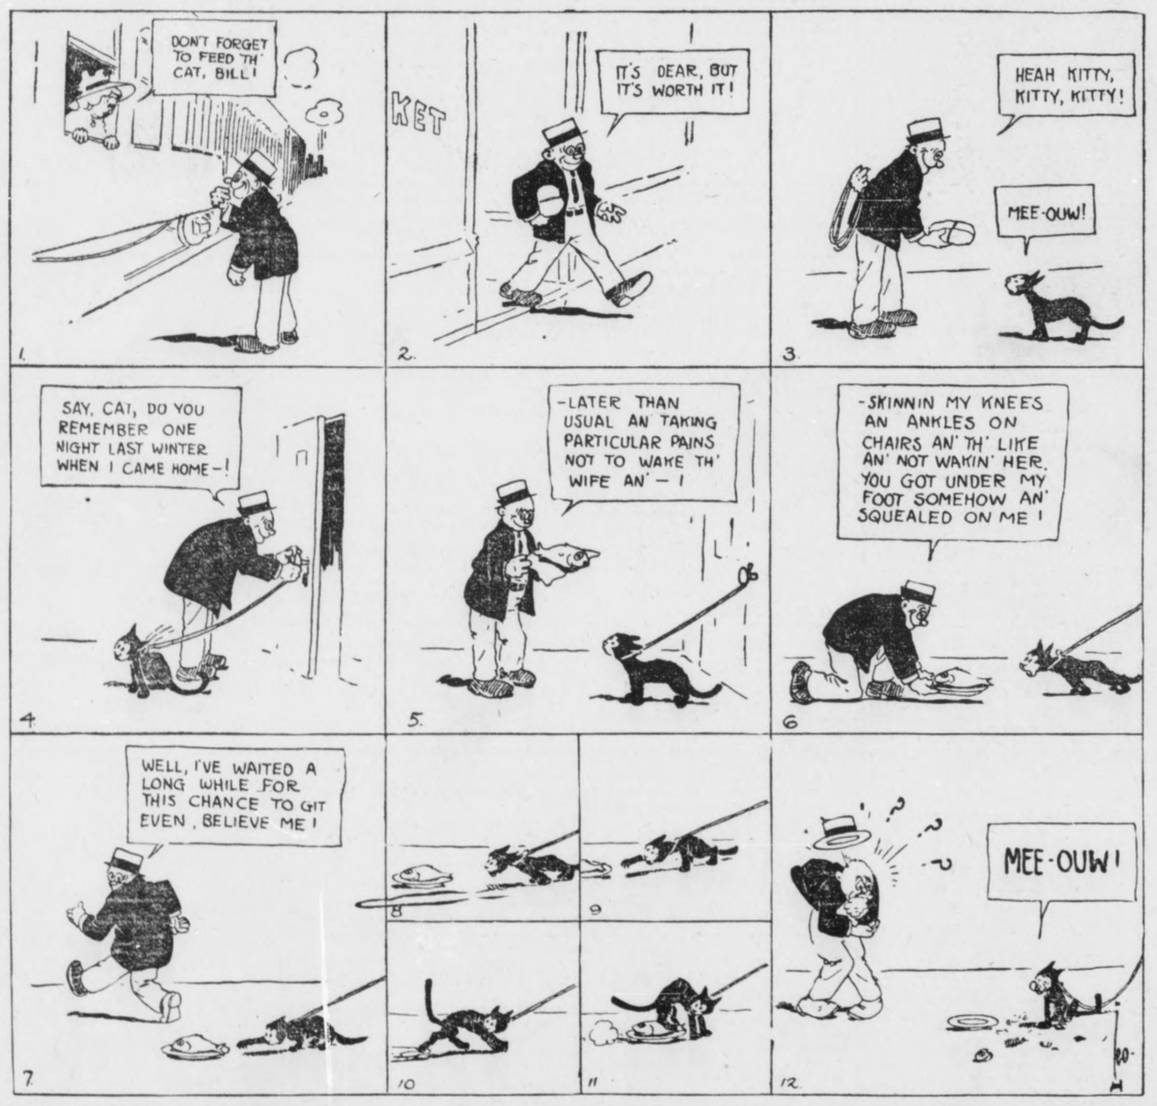

Study the lives of those who have succeeded. You will see that they did whatever they did as well as they could.

Edison was an ordinary telegraph operator. But he was not content with merely working as others worked. He worked very hard, devised means to make more valuable the instruments of his employers. Soon he was an employer himself, and what is far better than being an employer, he was a creator of new ideas and a benefactor of the world.

When the Wife's Away

CONCERNING THE HEALTH MARRIAGE BILL

Editor The Georgian:

A few days ago I noticed that the Senate Committee on Hygiene favorably recommended the so-called health marriage bill. This bill prohibits the issuing of a marriage license to anyone until he has passed a successful physical examination and presents a certificate of good health from some reputable physician.

It has been argued by some that hygienic marriage would tend to stem the great tide of the divorce evil. This argument is the weakest they have, for the fact that a man and woman are in a good state of health is certainly no guarantee of happiness, for nothing will insure happiness but love, and should this bill become a law, it will certainly put a ban on love marriage, which would tend to increase divorces rather than to decrease them.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Knowledge

Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it to-day, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will all become greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future.

"READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Worth Pondering On.

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of 17 could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived 500 years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion-blinded eyes.

Anyone who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians, will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is to-day and new hopes for the race.

Wise Not to Bother.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It is wise, indeed, not to "botner about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist.

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

How We Are Injured by Insects

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM.

NOW that the year has swung around to vacation time, it is worth while to note what Dr. Woods Hutchinson has to say on the pests of country life. From Dr. Hutchinson's book, "Common Diseases," sent out by the Houghton Mifflin Company, I gather the following for you:

"In most parts of the United States, during the season in which the weather permits one to sit out of doors with any comfort, life is rendered a burden by flies, gnats and mosquitoes unless behind the protection of screens.

"The real battle of the human species for the possession of the earth—nay, even for the right to exist upon its surface—must be fought, not with mammoths, but with mosquitoes; not with lions and tigers, but with flies and gnats; not with behemoths, but with bacilli.

"Our instinct to kill insects at sight is perfectly sound. Out of the quarter of a million species now known to science, a mere handful are even remotely helpful to man, and most of these only by their power of living upon other and more dangerous insects. On the other hand, thousands of species are actively hostile to man, to his food-plants and to his domestic animals. Whole tribes of men have been swept out of existence by the attack of insects carrying bacilli—as within the last two decades in Central Africa, by the dread 'sleeping sickness' carried by the tsetse fly. Whole nations have been weakened and crippled and whole civilizations retarded by another insect-borne disease, malaria.

"Closer study of the habits of the mosquito during the past five years has brought out the curious and at first sight incredible fact that the majority of these insects which carry disease, such as the malarial mosquito, the yellow fever mosquito and the house fly, can live and multiply, apparently, only in the immediate neighborhood of human habitations. In other words, they are literally domestic animals and part of our farm stock. This is absolutely true of the house fly and the yellow fever mosquito, neither of which is ever found more than a mile or two, and usually not more than a few hundred yards, away from human habitations.

"Dangerous and deadly as the mosquitoes are, they are only 'middlemen,' distributors, common carriers of evils which they have picked up from outside sources. For the most part these outside sources are diseased or dirty human beings. So that we have really ourselves to thank for most of the damage they do."

Pertinent Paragraphs

"Not yet, but soon," would appear to be Cavalieri's attitude on that engagement report.

Exercising its "Divine Right," the Coal Trust goes into the pocket of the consumer for that $4,000,000 tax levied by the State of Pennsylvania.
