CITIZENS OF U.S. IN PERIL AS MEXICAN WAR GROWS

Rebel Forces Swarm Seven States and Problem of Deporting Americans Faces Government. Powers Call for Protection.

Madero's Brother Takes Field, While Huerta Is Unable to Send Aid to Disease Stricken Torreon—Communication Cut.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Official information has reached the State Department that rebel activities throughout Mexico are increasing, and that the Constitutionalists are gaining ground every 24 hours.

Rebel campaigns are strong in seven States—Sonora, Coahuilla, Chihuahua, Tabasco, Aguas Callentes, Zacatecas and Yucatan.

This has brought increased peril to the United States citizens. There are in Mexico at the present time 8,000 Americans. Officials of the Latin-American Bureau stated to-day that it would require at least $100 each to remove all the Americans from the zone of warfare in Mexico, or a total of $800,000.

3,200 Americans to Stay.

According to information received at the bureau, it is believed that about 3,200 Americans have decided to stay in Mexico, leaving 4,800 to be removed.

According to these officials, this country will have to expend nearly $500,000 to rescue its citizens.

Official reports have been received showing that the rebels are slowly closing in on Mexico City, and it is probable that at the time set for the national "election" on October 26 Huerta will be in control of only the territory surrounding his capital.

Other striking developments of the Mexican situation to-day were:

News that an epidemic of disease had broken out in Torreon, where there are many Americans.

About 100 American and 18 other foreigners are marching overland from Torreon to Tampico and Monterey. All these Americans would be practically helpless if any attack were made upon them by the rebel forces.

Spain and a few other foreign Governments, as well as the Chinese Government, have requested the State Department to protect their citizens in Mexico.

Madero Leading Revolt.

Raoul Madero, brother of Francisco I. Madero, late President of Mexico, has organized a new revolt and has taRen the field as the head of 1,500 men and is marching on Aguas Callentes, the chief city of the State of the same name.

The sanitary and other vital conditions at plague stricken Torreon, as reported to the State Department by Consul Silliman, at Caltillo, reveal a shocking state of affairs. The city is isolated from Mexico. General Bravo, the Federal officer in command, is unable to have serum, antitoxin or even food brought into the city.

Mexican Smugglers Taken in U. S. in Battle.

CARRIZO SPRINGS, TEXAS, Sept. 13.—After a short but terrific fight, the band of Mexican ammunition smugglers which killed Deputy Sheriff M. Ortiz were captured near here to-day by a detachment of United States troops. One Mexican was killed and two badly wounded during the engagement.

Members of the band which numbered fourteen and which was led by an American were brought to Wind Mill Ranch, where they are being held to-night pending orders from Colonel Sibley, in command of the post here.

For 48 hours the American troops rode through the thorny brush after the smugglers. They were finally located near the Wind Mill Ranch and the soldiers closed in on them. Lieutenant McLane ordered his troopers to fire. At the first volley one of the fugitives fell dead. Two more threw up their hands and toppled from their horses.

Realizing escape was cut off, the American leader hoisted a white handkerchief upon the end of a rifle while his companions threw their firearms to the ground and held their arms in the air.

BREWSTER HELD FOR FIGHT OVER PAIR OF SHOES

Son of Prominent Atlanta Attorney Is Charged With Striking Marietta Street Merchant.

IS RELEASED ON BOND

Law Student Takes Part of Cook, Who Had Made Purchase of Footwear.

W. E. Brewster, son of Colonel P. H. Brewster, of the law firm of Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heyman, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of disorderly conduct growing out of an altercation with Abraham Fleshner, a merchant at No. 220 Marietta street. Young Brewster was taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon and later released on a $15.75 bond.

The difficulty arose over the purchase of a pair of shoes by Brewster's negro cook.

Brewster, according to the merchant's story to the police, came into his store about 8 o'clock Saturday night and began to argue about the shoes which the negro cook had purchased, and which she later returned on the grounds that they were not satisfactory. In the trouble which followed Brewster is said to have struck the merchant in the face. He was placed under arrest by policemen, who were called to the scene.

Young Brewster at the present time is taking a course in law at the university preparatory to entering the firm with which his father is connected.

Dog Is Principal Beneficiary in Will

Wealthy Wisconsin Man Leaves Pet to Friend, but Forgets Him Otherwise.

LACROSSE, WIS., Sept. 13.—A dog—just a mangy animal with no pedigree at all, but known as the best friend of his owner, the late John Hanson, of Hamilton—is mentioned as the principal bequest in the will of Hanson, which was filed for probate to-day.

Hanson left much other property—fine farms and a strongbox filled with mortgages—but before disposing of anything else he bequeathed the dog, with much detail as to the way he should be treated, to his friend, Lars Fjedstad, of Lacrosse.

The dog is all Fjedstad receives from the estate, which is distributed among the relatives in Wisconsin and Norway.

Golf Holds Wilson In Vermont Hills

President's Summer Home Has Greatest Number of Guests of This Season.

WINDSOR, VT., Sept. 13.—Golf and automobiling were on President Wilson's program to-day. The bracing air of Cornish has had such an exhilarating effect on him that he may stay here several days longer than he planned when he left Washington.

Harlakenden House now has the greatest number of house guests it has had this summer. The Misses Lucy and Marion Smith, of New Orleans, and Miss Katherine Minahan, of Orange, N. J., are among them. The latter, who is a member of the cast of "The Good Little Devil," participated in the performance of "The Sanctuary" Friday evening by whistling the music of "The Hermit Trush," which Miss Margaret Wilson sang.

GOVERNOR DENIES NEGRO CHILD SLAYER A PARDON

Will Varner, a negro, of Newton County, must go to the gallows in spite of the appeal made to Governor Slaton. Varner shot and killed his young stepchild while trying to shoot his wife because she refused to return to him.

'Professor' Beavers To Teach Etiquette

Chief to Preside at School Where Patrolmen Will Learn Rules of Propriety.

Atlanta police are going to school following an official call Saturday night by Chief Beavers, who declared that, although his men were fine fellows, he was not fully satisfied with their "etiquette." The first session will be held next Tuesday night.

Tentative rules adopted by the Chief indicate such instruction as the "proper care of the nails," the "how and when to say 'pardon'"—in fact, everything which comes in the category of proper "etiquette."

School will be divided into three divisions of three platoons each, according to the Chief.

Princess Calls 'Trot' Dances Beauty Foes

'American Girls Are Losing Their Freshness and Sweetness as Result of Revels.'

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Princess Lowenstein, the widow of a Russian nobleman and soldier who fell in the Philippines at the time Aguinaldo was captured, warns American girls against turkey trotting as a foe to beauty.

"These wild new dances," the Princess said, "which your girls are doing day in and day out, are showing their effects. The dancers get to look like old, haggard women. The American girl is noted for her looks, and justly, too.

"But she will certainly lose all her freshness and sweetness if she persists in keeping up this everlasting bacchanalian dancing."

Marshall at Last Finds $2,000 House

Vice President Keeps Location Secret Fearing a Raise in Rent by Landlord.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—After long months of weary house hunting, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have found a house which comes well within the $2,000 the Vice President feels he can afford for house rent out of his $12,000 salary.

Lest some envious person see their house and try to raise the bid on it, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall are refusing to tell its exact location.

It is admitted, however, that it is on the fashionable Avenue of the Presidents.

Vincent Astor Buys Hydro-Aeroplane

Turns Deaf Ear to Friends Who Would Dissuade Him From Flights.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Vincent Astor arrived at Rhinebeck to-day on his yacht, the Noma, and brought along a hydro-aeroplane, in which he plans to make some trial flights in the next few days.

His friends are trying to dissuade him from the project, but he is determined to make a trial of the air and water craft by flying up and down the Hudson. The machine is a Curtiss model.

Washington Society Hears of Wylie Suit

Reported She Will at Last Seek Freedom From Her Eloping Husband.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Society is discussing with great interest a rumor that Mrs. Horace Wylie is about to begin proceedings to obtain a divorce from her eloping husband which will enable him to marry the companion of his flight, Mrs. Philip Hichborn.

Should Mrs. Wylie take the step which friends have been urging her to take it will probably end one of the most distressing chapters in the social history of the capital.

The 400 here had hardly recovered from the shock of the elopment of Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn when it was again startled by the suicide of Philip Hichborn, the deserted husband. Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn were living in France at the time of the suicide and it is said that the shock nearly prostrated Mrs. Hoyt, mother of Mrs. Hichborn.

CHINA COMPLIES WITH DEMANDS OF JAPANESE

Special Cable to The American.

PEKIN, Sept. 13.—Japan's demands, presented to China two days ago in connection with the killing of Japanese subjects and the trampling of the Japanese flag by Chinese, were accepted in their entirety to-day by the Pekin Government.

Hill Gets New Atlanta Judgeship

Roan Goes to Appellate Bench

Changes Likely Effective Oct. 6

In center is Judge Benjamin H. Hill, named to the judgeship of the newly created Atlanta circuit. This picture was taken Saturday at the Georgian Terrace Hotel. Below are Judge L. S. Roan, on right, and Charles S. Reid, snapped at the barbecue given court officials and attaches Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner.

Reid Is Given Stone Mountain Place—Napier Succeeds Him as Solicitor.

Benjamin H. Hill, ranking judge of the appellate court bench, widely known as a jurist of notable accomplishments, and member of a family distinguished in Georgia's history, was appointed Saturday by Governor J. M. Slaton to the judgeship of the new Atlanta circuit created by the last session of the State Legislature.

Four appointments making important changes on the Georgia bench were announced simultaneously by the Governor. They were:

Benjamin H. Hill, from the State Court of Appeals to the new division of the Atlanta circuit.

L. S. Roan, from the judgeship of the Stone Mountain circuit to Judge Hill's place on the appellate court bench.

Charles S. Reid, Solicitor General of the Stone Mountain circuit, to the judgeship of the same circuit.

George M. Napier, of Decatur, as Solicitor General of the Stone Mountain circuit to succeed Reid.

All of the appointments probably will go into effect October 6, the date upon which the new docket of the Court of Appeals will be called.

14-CENT COTTON AND BUMPER CROP FORETELL REIGN OF PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT GEORGIA

Fine Yield of Corn, Oats and Hay, With Top Prices for Staple's By-Products, Is Expected to Give the State Its Banner Year.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM IS EVIDENT IN ALL BUSINESS

Strict Economy Practiced by Farmers Makes Margin of Profit Tremendous---Bankers Are Jubilant, While Merchants Predict Great Season.

By M. A. ROSE.

Georgia, the whole Southeast, and Atlanta—because it is the commercial and financial center of the Southeast—will enter upon one of the most prosperous eras any section of the nation ever has enjoyed when the cotton crop is moving in earnest this fall—by October 1 at the latest.

In 1911, all seasons put their heads together in kindly conspiracy, and Georgia grew 2,768,627 bales of cottton, the greatest crop the historic State ever knew. It is the fashion to quote 1911 as the most wonderful year the State could expect. Unmistakable signs show 1913 will overtop 1911.

Here is the proof:

In 1911 Georgia grew, or let us say gathered—for it grew thousands of bales which never were ginned or even picked—2,768,627 bales of cotton. But the whole South grew 15,622,701 bales, excluding linters. Prices were correspondingly low. Georgia got about $124,500,000 for its 1911 crop.

Almost ready for the gins to-day are 2,250,000 bales. Indications are that this crop will bring Georgia $155,500,000, for 14-cent middling cotton is a probability, not a possibility.

Of this $155,000,000 a much greater proportion will be profit than accrued from the banner crop. Four reasons are apparent: This is a yield produced at less cost than any previous crop; drouth in the West will make the total yield short of the world's actual needs, particularly as the left-over supply is abnormally small; Georgia will spend less for corn, hay and oats than ever before, having record-breaking crops of all three food-stuffs; the shortage of corn, hay and oats will mean good prices for that most important by-product of cottton, cotton seed.

SHORT CORN CROP INEVITABLE.

Consider the last first, because it has been overlooked generally.

Drouth in Kansas and the other great agricultural States of the West and Southwest makes a short crop of corn inevitable. Corn is selling at an abnormally high price—around 77 cents at Chicago and St. Louis for the actual stuff.

Seventy-seven cent corn means high beef and pork. It's pretty expensive to fatten hogs or cattle for market on that sort of diet. High pork spells high lard. High lard means greater demand for cotton seed oil products, so much so that the cotton seed oil speculator watches the lard market as closely as he does the oil quotations. Expensive feed, too, means a shortage of cattle for slaughter and a shortage of blood and bone fertilizer, the packers' by-product, which is just where cotton seed meal fertilizers may reap a harvest. Expensive corn, again, insures greater demand for cotton seed hulls as cattle feed.

No one wants to go on record as saying that cotton seed will sell at a record price. But it is evident it will not be a drug on the market. Already cotton seed is selling for $20 a ton and better in South Georgia.

Crushers say Georgia will send 900,000 tons of seed to oil mills this fall. At $20 a ton that is $180,000,000. Add that to $155,000,000 for the lint—it makes one dizzy!

Back to the first reason for Georgia's enormous prospective profits. Everyone recognizes that economy has been the watchword for the year. The farmer has bought as little as possible at the store. He has borrowed as little money as possible. He has cut down his supply of fertilizer. The old harness, the old wagon, the same old mule, the same overalls, have served another season. Small expense and good selling price make excellent profits.

LITTLE COTTON IN WEST.

Texas and Oklahoma, experts say, will produce not more than 4,000,000 bales this year, as against 5,278,500 in 1911. Alabama and Mississippi show severe deterioration through the combined malevolence of bad weather and insects. Louisiana never has been a factor in the cotton world since the boll weevil invaded the Creole State. The Southeast will make, in proportion, the best crop of all the belt.

All this would be of little avail if the Georgia farmer had to spend all the money he got for corn, hay and oats to feed his mules. In past years he has done this, but this year he will not. Georgia this year produced the largest corn crop in its history. The hay and oat crops also were good. It would be ruinous to spend the proceeds even from 14-cent cotton for 77-cent corn. Fortunately, in 1913 Georgia will not.

PROSPERITY ERA SEEN BY GEORGIA BANKERS

Biggest Money Crop in Years Believed To Be Already Assured Farmers, While City Merchants Are Jubilant.

There is some difference of opinion just now as to the probable size of the crop in this State. Gentlemen otherwise calm and serene are wont to grow purplish of face and thump desks when the subject is argued.

J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture for the State, says Georgia will gin 2,000,000 bales of cotton. He believes dry weather has lopped 400,000 to 500,000 bales from the early prospect.

A. P. Coles, who has made the estimate for the Central Bank and Trust Corporation for seven years and missed it not more than 50,000 bales in the seven, puts the crop at 2,600,000 bales. A favorite estimate is 2,500,000 bales. Other figures stand in order between these two extremes.

GREAT PROFIT ASSURED.

Just to stay out of the argument, 2,250,000 bales has been selected as the basis for computations given here. It does not affect the argument. If the crop is 2,000,000 bales, Georgia still will make an enormous profit. If Georgia's crop is 2,600,00 bales—all the better.

As to 14-cent cotton—it is not an impossibility, but a probability. Thirteen cents now is being paid at Savannah for middling. That part of the crop which has been ginned is being sold freely. Although little has been said about it, there undoubtedly is a good deal of "distress cotton" on the market—cotton sold to pay debts which are pressing. With continued reports of bad weather in the West, or anything like an early frost, and consequent shortened yield, the market may jump again.

And there is little cotton left for the mills of the world to use. The visible supply at the end of the cotton year, August 30, was in round figures only 2,000,000 bales. The crop has been estimated at 12,900,000 bales. That leaves 14,900,000 bales for the world to use, and the mills of Europe, Japan, India, China and the United States want 16,000,000 bales yearly now, the best authorities agree.

It looks like a "bull" year.

Georgia has been through the test of fire. The year has been an ordeal. But harvest time finds sagacious business men in jubilant mood. Cheerfulness amounting almost to exultation is the keynote of sentiment to-day among the shrewdest. Expressions of the city's recognized leaders are unanimous in their forecast of prosperity.

Georgia Is To Be Envied, Declares Governor Slaton

GEORGIA is to be envied. The season now opening will bring to this most favored State the blessings of plenty and prosperity dispensed with lavish hand. Every circumstance is in collusion to make this a record year.

Georgia this year will make a reasonable cotton crop. The other States will have short yields. Georgia's, then, will be big in relation to the total, and every Georgian should get good prices for his cotton.

But that is not all. The best part of it is that not all the millions which come into the State for cotton will go out this year for hay, corn and oats. Georgia this year raised what seems conceded to be the largest corn crop in its history. It has hay and oats in large quantities as well, while the nation's yields of all these feed stuffs is short, because of drouth.

Georgia has every climate from the cold winters of North Georgia, which serve to perfect the apples of Habersham County, to the almost tropical mildness of the coast, where you can see rice fields. Between are corn and cotton, oats and hay, peaches and melons, sugar cane, yams and potatoes. We depend, not on ditches which may go dry, but upon the kindly rains from the Almighty, and are not disappointed. And in this wonderful State live the nation's finest people.

What more could Georgia ask?

---GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

Looks for Huge Crop, Easily 2,600,000 Bales

A. P. Coles, of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, is convinced there will be a huge crop in Georgia, and he never before has missed it far. He writes to the country banks:

"We have made careful inquiry and considerable personal inspection of the crops of Georgia. Information compiled from reliable sources leads us to believe that we are on the eve of harvesting a bumper crop in Georgia, not only of cotton, but of corn. We believe that with an open fall and a reasonably late frost the cotton crop in Georgia will easily reach 2,600,000 bales and that the corn crop is probably by far the best that has ever been produced in this State, all of which means prosperity in Georgia, at least temporarily.

"There is no reason why a sufficient amount of funds can not be obtained to move the cotton crop, provided the bankers, farmers and merchants work in harmony. Country bankers, especially those located in the cotton districts, should endeavor to educate the farmers to the habit of depositing checks received for the sale of cotton and paying their debts by check. This would go a long way toward relieving the currency stringency during the cotton-moving period.

"We confidently expect a prosperous fall and good business."

City Banker's Views Give Cheerful Analysis

"I see no reason," says Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, "why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity.

"Now, just take stock of the year just closing. Notwithstanding the fact that the cotton crop for 1912 was 1,000,000 bales short of the 1911 crop, there have been no failures of importance among banks or business houses. The failures were few and, in Georgia, of comparatively little importance. That shows the banks and mercantile houses were in good shape financially and could take care of their customers who have gone through a period of depression which was more or less world-wide.

"The fall season opens with every assurance of a cotton crop 500,000 bales larger than last year and raised at less expense than any previous crop ever grown; better and more scientifically cultivated. From every point of view this augurs a splendid trade for fall.

"If the crop experiences no backset, we can reasonably expect excellent fall collections. The farmers will be able to pay their obligations to the country merchant. He will be able to pay the wholesalers in the cities, and the wholesalers in turn will reduce their indebtedness to the city banks.

"This is sure to make money easier after the crop moves, and all lines of business are bound to feel the good effect of the splendid period of prosperity now so promising.

"I believe the further consideration by the Senate of the currency bill and the expressed desire of the Senate committee to get all the facts connected with the proposed legislation is certain to lead to the passage of a wise and conservatively planned measure.

"If this is true, and such a bill is passed, it will eliminate for all time the danger to the country which arises every fall from the fear of having insufficient currency to move the crops. This will, therefore, be of special benefit to the South and the West, and I see no reason why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity."

'Flush' Year Is Time To Learn Economy

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, is not given to hyperbole. Yet he waxes enthusiastic when drawn into conversation about the crop outlook and the business prospects for Georgia this season.

"There is a general cheerful feeling," he explains. "Some of the country merchants and the city wholesalers report the best business they have had for several seasons, and, of course, they expect to do even better when the cotton crop moves.

"Outstanding obligations—some of them, to tell the exact truth, older than they should be—will be wiped out by the present crop and settlements passing from hand to hand up the line should make money easier all around.

"But this is the time when I would preach thrift. It is something of an absurdity to preach thrift to a man who is 'broke.' But now that the Georgia farmer and the Georgia merchant have money in their pockets, or at least have money in sight, they should practice thrift. They should fortify themselves for the possible lean years. I hope there will be no lean years, but history teaches us to believe there will be.

"Remember recent history. That is all I would ask. Remember the banner crop of 1911, the extravagances which followed, and then the short crop of 1912, and what befell. If only the farmer will keep his money from burning a hole in his pocket, this season will result in permanent good for Georgia."

Chamber of Commerce Prophesies Rapid Growth

As head of a life insurance company and president of the Chamber of Commerce, Wilmer L. Moore has exceptional opportunities to study the trend of events and the condition of business. From rather an apprehensive mood in the spring, Mr. Moore has been converted into an optimist of the extreme type.

"Everything looks good to me," says Mr. Moore. "The Chamber of Commerce foresees unrivaled prosperity for Atlanta, and remarkable expansion. Plans and projects in sight, new factories and business houses inquiring for locations, and a dozen other hopeful signs give rise to our optimism.

"Business done by life insurance companies is as good a barometer of general conditions as any, I imagine. And without making any unusual effort we are doing a greater volume of business than ever before.

"Reports to us from our agents all over the South show the crop conditions in this section to be exceptionally good. Coarse grains and cotton promise great yields, and this, too, in a year when the yield of other sections will be curtailed, and prices consequently go higher. There will be business this coming year for every man of energy and enterprise, and the South will go straight ahead with its development."

Country Banker Expects Moderate Crop, Big Prices

It is interesting to know what the country banker thinks of all this. P. D. Rich, of Colquitt, was in Atlanta the past week.

The country banker, as typified by Mr. Rich, does not believe Georgia is going to make such a wonderful crop. He doesn't think it will go to 2,500,000 bales. He does think prices for cotton will be high and that Georgia, with two million, or, say, two million and a quarter bales, will get more money than it has in some years for huge crops.

The country banker finds himself able to get all the money he needs in New York and Atlanta at a rate which is not excessive.

He believes that the remarkable ginners' report of September 1 does not spell a great crop so much as it does an early movement.

Crushers Foresee Busy Season in Southeast

Cotton seed crushers are preparing for one of the greatest years in their history in Georgia. They expect a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and expect to crush, in round figures, 900,000 tons of seed, or just about the same amount as was crushed in 1911 when the banner crop was grown.

L. G. Neal, vice president of the Empire Cotton Oil Company, one of the largest corporations in the Georgia cotton seed trade, says the Empire's mills in South Georgia, numbering seven, have been operating about ten days.

"Seed now is bringing about $20 a ton," said Mr. Neal, "and is yielding about 39 gallons of good quality oil to the ton. With the exception of the fact that there is considerable moisture in the seed, there are no untoward factors to be considered this year. We look for an excellent season."

Wholesalers Are Busy Replenishing Retail Stocks

Willis E. Ragan, one of the city's prominent wholesalers and holder of extensive real estate, believes the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras it has known for years.

"We have a splendid 'house trade,'" said Mr. Ragan. "Buyers both from the city and country are thronging into the wholesale houses to replenish stocks with the advent of fall retail buying.

"It seems to me the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The cotton crop looks fine, and the price does, too. All indications are that the farmers are selling as quickly as possible and paying their debts. Everyone is feeling good and looking forward to the best business in many years. The outlook is excellent."

"Business is good. It has increased greatly this season, and shows every promise of growing even more," says Ernest L. Rhodes, wholesale milliner.

"The Atlanta houses in our line have had a remarkable volume of sales. How much of this is due to general business conditions and how much to the energy and enterprise of Atlanta jobbers, continually invading new territory, territory which always has been conceded heretofore to other cities, I can not tell without close analysis of sales records. But in all probability, the greater business is due to both factors.

"At any rate, sales are larger. That's the main thing, after all.

"If the farmers, the retailers and the merchants who sell to them will now only take advantage of their prosperity to liquidate their obligations, then we shall have ideal conditions. And I believe this will be done."

Whitehall Street Filled With Autumn Shoppers

Along Whitehall street, the center of city retail trade, the sentiment has been brighter throughout the year than in some other localities. City retail trade has held up unexpectedly well. Atlanta has not felt the depression reported from smaller centers. But the advent of fall weather, or perhaps just a foretaste of it, has put life into business in a way which has surprised even these merchants.

"We are reordering certain lines already. That, to any one acquainted with the retail business, is the most emphatic presentation I can make of business conditions in Whitehall street," said W. H. Brittain, president and manager of High's. "Our September business to date is much larger than it was at this time last year. People are eager for new things. Mail orders have started coming in rapidly. It is a regular revival of trade.

"Shoppers are numerous. It is not a question of going out after them. They are coming to the stores. People are anxious for the new things, for the better class of merchandise. Stocks have been low. Every one has bought sparingly since the first of the year, and the result now is an active movement all along the line."

"Just a little more cool weather, such as we have had a few days this past week," said J. P. Allen, "and fall business will surprise every one. People are anxious to buy. The stores are crowded. The salespeople are busy. The retailers have every cause to congratulate themselves."

Early Trade Opening Amazes Col. F. J. Paxon

F. J. Paxon is amazed at the early opening of the fall trade.

"I was surprised," says Mr. Paxon, "to return here in August and find fall ready-to-wear goods moving well. Millinery is moving particularly early. There has been a good increase in sales volume. Both the number of sales and the average amount of sales has increased.

"We expect a remarkable year, a steady growth and a rapid one through the next year.

"I am speaking not only for the business with which I am most intimately connected, but also for other enterprises in Atlanta of which I have accurate knowledge, when I say that the resumption of activity already seen, with the cotton crop not generally moving yet, is something at which to marvel.

"Georgia is to be envied, and nothing at the conference of Governors in the West attracted more attention than Governor Slaton's speech in which he extolled the virtues of his State."

Suffragette Jokes Under Ban

Keith Bars Them in Theaters

Vaudeville Magnate Won to Cause Forbids Performers From Making Light of It.

Once upon a time, and not so long ago as six months, you went to a vaudeville show and found yourself laughing—or frowning, according to your convictions—at the merry jests that were cracked in the name of woman suffrage. That was truly once upon a time. It occurs no more at the Forsyth Theater in Atlanta, nor in any of those showhouses on the Keith vaudeville circuit.

The secret of the new order is that Mr. B. F. Keith, magnate of the two-a-day world, has been converted to woman suffrage. Or so it seems. Possessing at least some authority, he posted the notice that in his theaters all jokes tending to make light of the "votes for women" movement would be barred.

Suffragettes everywhere were gleeful. No person likes to see the cause that is near and dear to his heart placed in the class of the mother-in-law and the hobble skirt for actor people to make fun of.

The order of Mr. Keith does not apply to the Forsyth in Atlanta directly. He owns personally a string of houses in the East, and it is only these that he can command. But because he is Mr. Keith and the head of what is probably the most extensive booking agency for vaudeville people, his wishes are somewhat like commands. No actor who travels out of the Keith offices, whether he play in the Keith theaters or not, is going to risk offending the great man. And so the suffrage joke has fallen into lean days.

The Keith mandate is one of a series that marks the regeneration of the variety stage. Some years ago Mr. Keith ordered that words bordering on the profane should not be spoken in his houses. Last winter he barred the ancient mother-in-law joke. Now the suffrage prohibition.

WOMEN DROWN IN CLOUDBURST AT GOLDFIELD

Storm Sweeps Through Nevada Town and Thousands Are Lost in Property Damage.

GOLDFIELD, NEV., Sept. 13.—Two women were drowned and many thousands of dollars' damage done by a cloudburst and electric storm sweeping through the center of this town, beginning at 11 o'clock to-day and lasting three hours. Scores of houses were swept down through the two principal gulches in the camp by torrents several feet deep. Telegraph poles and bridges were destroyed and electric power cut off.

Crowds of volunteers are helping in the recovery of damaged property belonging to the sufferers. No serious interruption was caused to the mines.

The dead are Mrs. Degarmo, wife of a liveryman, and an unknown Frenchwoman.

All the buildings on First street were practically demolished. Many lives were saved by bravery of the rescuers.

COLLEGE HEAD STRIKES FATHER IN FAMILY ROW

President of Franklin Declares Epithet Hurled at Mother Provoked Assault on Aged Sire.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Sept. 13.—With the Grand Jury ordered to investigate the attack made by Dr. I. A. Hanley, president of Franklin College, upon his father, Calvin Hanley, at the latter's home in Middleton Thursday, excitement has become intense. Dr. Hanley was threatened with violence by friends of his aged father to-day when he came from Indianapolis.

Earlier Dr. Hanley issued a statement declaring the attack was justified because his father had treated his mother inhumanly, and that he was forced to the attack when he learned his father "called my mother an unspeakable name and wished she were in hell."

Dr. Hanley, a leading educator of Indianapolis, formerly pastor of the Rockefeller church in Cleveland, came, it is understood, to the home of his father and demanded an apology.

When the apology for the alleged insult was not forthcoming, the son proposed whipping the father, and in resisting, the older man fell and suffered serious injury.

In his statement Dr. Hanley admitted striking the blow.

"I tried not to hurt my father seriously," he said, "and I don't think that I did. I was brought to the deed by my father's continued cruelty to mother.

"For 25 years my mother has suffered inhuman treatment, and I have stood by, but when I heard he called my mother an unspeakable name and wished she were 'in hell,' I could be still no longer.

"I owe everything to my mother. When I was a boy my father would want me to leave school to help on the farm. But mother picked the apples or gathered the corn that I might not miss a day from school.

"But despite everything, I still love my father, and I will do anything to help him. Only he shall not abuse mother.

"I know not what effect this bitter experience will have on my future usefulness. Whatever that may be, I do not see how I could have done otherwise. I now know I ought to have taken matters in hand years ago."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Washington will soon lose "its most beautiful woman," for Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the newly appointed military attache of the American Embassy in Paris will accompany her husband to the French capital in a few days.

Prince Christian of Prussia, during his recent American visit, saw Mrs. Cosby in Washington and exclaimed: "There is the most beautiful American woman I have ever seen." Mrs. Cosby has a fragile, delicate beauty, and her arms and hands have been pronounced by sculptors to be faultless in proportion.

West Point Schools Break Roll Record

Great Growth Is Noted and Building Is Remodeled to Meet Demands.

WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The forty-fifth annual session of the West Point public schools has opened, with the largest enrollment of pupils since their organization.

The Board of Education, anticipating an overflow of pupils, had made every preparation in the way of room and teachers.

The building is equipped with sanitary drinking fountains, electric lights, electric bells, electric clocks, telephones and all other modern conveniences.

The chair of English and history recently made vacant by the death of Miss Naomi Wells is being filled temporarily by Mrs. C. F. Pattillo, of West Point.

Mr. Walter P. Thomas, who is now serving his seventh year as superintendent, is devoting his time and efforts for the continuous growth and betterment of the schools.

Immortals to Hear Lecture on 'Tango'

Jean Richepin Will Address Academy on Subject, but It's a Play, Not a Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Paris has been excited for some days past by the report that Jean Richepin, the distinguished dramatist, who in his younger days forsook his family hearth for the love of a great actress, is about to defy conventions and stir up more scandal by addressing the immortals of the French Academy on the subject of "The Tango."

It now turns out that the "tango" of M. Richepin is a new comedy which he has completed for the Theatre Marigny in collaboration with Madame Richepin.

Next month, at a public meeting of the venerable academy, he will read extracts from the play.

MRS. GODBEE ALONE CALM IN FACE OF LIFE TERM

Woman Sentenced to Spend Rest of Days in Prison Is Confident of Final Victory—Reassures Friends Who Crowd Her Cell.

Hearing of Argument for New Trial Set for October 21 in Augusta—Daughter Is Pathetic Figure in Sensational Case.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—As calmly as she heard herself sentenced to life imprisonment, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee sits in her cell in the Jenkins County jail to-night, and hopefully discusses with her friends the prospects of obtaining a new trial. For the public she has not a word, coolly dismissing all would-be interviewers. But to her friends she readily gives audience.

Not for a moment has the woman revealed a lack of composure. Women who know her well have come weeping to her in jail; there are many men, also, to express sympathy. Some of them she greets with a slight smile, and none is as composed as she.

"I'll be freed in the long run," is her invariable response to all her sympathizers. To some she even has expressed the firm belief that her petition for a new trial will be granted.

Judge Frank Saffold, her attorney, will file immediately the formal motion for a new trial, supplementing it with extensive grounds of appeal later, probably the last of next week. The hearing has been set for October 21 in Augusta.

Many there are who believe Mrs. Godbee's calmness is due not so much to self-control and coolness of nerve as to actual indifference. Her remark is recalled, made to one of her sisters soon after judgment was pronounced on her:

"My life and liberty mean nothing to me personally. For twenty years I have been unhappy. As long as I live it will be that way. It is only for my children that I lived in the past, and for them only did I desire an acquittal."

Daughter Is Overcome.

The children, particularly her beautiful daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, are overcome by the result of the trial. They, surrounded by friends, hearing nothing but encouraging assurances that their mother would be acquitted, were hopeful of a favorable verdict. Miss Sarah Godbee gave way to her grief as she heard the judgment of the jury, and for several tense, dramatic minutes her sobs, sounding through the otherwise still courtroom, thrilled the crowds who heard her.

The girl had bravely held her place at her mother's side since the day when Mrs. Godbee shot her divorced husband, Judge Walter Godbee, and his young bride, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee. Judge Godbee was the girl's own father, but unhesitatingly she went to her mother's side and remained with her, cheerful through all the ordeal, holding her mother's hand, and patting her mother's arm and shoulder throughout the time of the trial.

But when the jury came out, and the girl, her fists clenched, her body rigid, leaned forward and heard the verdict, all her courage went. She gave a little cry, and her head fell on her mother's breast. Then it was that the mother became the comforter, and the daughter the comforted.

Finally Led to Home.

After a while the mother arose at the Sheriff's touch on her shoulder, and followed him to the jail, which is near the courthouse. The girl arose also, but, nearing the jail gates, her grief broke out afresh, and she seemed hysterical. At the jail she stopped, and could go no farther, making no resistance to girl friends who led her to her home.

Several persons there were, however, who went with Mrs. Godbee into the jail, and hardly for a minute has her cell been empty to-day. Later, several hours after the jury verdict came, the daughter came back, her face haggard and set, and for the moment the appearance of youth gone. She was calm until she entered the cell, and then she succumbed again to her emotion.

The verdict of life imprisonment, pronounced by Judge Hammond this morning, came as a result of Mrs. Godbee's trial for killing the young wife of Judge Godbee. Both the man and the woman were shot at the same time, and two charges of murder were entered. It is likely that Mrs. Godbee will not be tried on the charge of killing her former husband, as her commitment to jail on the life sentence will preclude the possibility of further punishment, except that of death. And it was never conceived probable that Mrs. Godbee, being a woman, would be sent to the gallows.

The sentence to life imprisonment was the most that was expected. Except Mrs. Godbee's personal friends, no one expected absolute acquittal for her, but few, on the other hand, expected the life sentence. Her conviction of the charge of manslaughter was considered the most likely outcome of either of the two trials. Consequently the town of Millen, and the county of Jenkins, where Mrs. Godbee has lived since infancy, and where she is known to every man, woman and child, is a bit awed by the judgment.

Trial Most Sensational.

The trial has been the most sensational event in the history of the county, except only the crime which made the trial necessary. From every part of the county and from neighboring counties, men and women have come, on trains, by buggies, wagons, even riding in automobiles, to watch the course of the woman's hearing. Through all the volleys of curious gazes Mrs. Godbee has sat unmoved, cool, apparently indifferent. And she remains so to-night, with the prospect of a life in prison ahead, and with little probability, according to the public opinion, of obtaining a new hearing.

Fair Belles of the '70's Hold Gay Reunion in Atlanta

Days of Black Joe Dobbs' String Band Are Revived

Most Beautiful and Courted Girls of Period After War Recall Old Memories.

Mrs. Brader Barker called the reporter "honey" and told him to sit by her side.

"Julia!" said Mrs. William Scott, disapprovingly.

"Well, why shouldn't I call him 'honey?'" asked Mrs. Barker. "I'm a grandmother. So are we all."

The reporter, who had been piloted to the group of five by their screams of laughter, was surprised that it should be so. He remarked that he would never have guessed it.

"Oh, shucks," said Mrs. Barker, "you didn't have to say that. We've heard a lot of men talk like that. They're all alike."

They had truly heard many compliments before the reporter's sincere tribute. During the '70's they were the belles of Atlanta, the five most popular, most beautiful, most courted of all the very gay set in Atlanta after the war. They were girls together, and were debutantes together, and loved the same boys—they confessed it—and were brides along about the same time.

Hold a Reunion.

And Saturday afternoon they gathered at the home of Mrs. W. E. Austin, at Fifteenth and Peachtree streets, to talk over for the first time in years and years the days when they were belles in Georgia's capital.

The five were Mrs. W. E. Austin, Mrs. William Scott, Mrs. Brader Barker, Mrs. Arthur Caldwell and Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, all living in Atlanta except Mrs. Scott. It was Mrs. Scott's trip from her home in Tampa, Fla., to visit her sister, Mrs. Austin, that was the occasion for the reunion and the reincarnation of the days of panniers, and tarlatan dresses and many petticoats.

The talk dealt most lovingly with Professor Nichols' dancing school where the patricians of Atlanta in the '70's gathered and danced to the music of black Joe Dobbs' old string band.

"And, Mattie, do you remember how we used to say 'put your little foot right there,' when we danced and pointed?" This to Mrs. Austin, who was Mattie Jones in the other days.

"Yes, we had little feet, too." Something like a smile of pride.

"And how Fannie Rich waltzed?"

"Yes, and how the girl put her hair up with sugar water, and got it so stiff she couldn't put comb or rake through it. Wasn't she a fright?"

"Who was that?"

"Little 'Sissie' Moore."

Danced Every Number.

The other four looked accusingly at Mrs. Wylie.

"Was it really you, Lollie Belle?" they asked.

"Well," she said, "at least I danced all the dances, and didn't sit them out like Mattie there did. But, then, more of the boys loved her."

Mrs. Austin demurred modestly.

"But they did," protested the others. "But we were all in love with Guy Townsend, I think, and Edward McCandless. Weren't they the handsomest men in the world then?"

Silence for a sigh's space. Then—

"Except my husband."

The five of them had spoken together. Another silence.

Kisses Were Epochal.

"But we didn't love in those days of old Atlanta as they do now, so tempestuously," said one. "About kissing. The year after we were engaged my husband kissed me only once. We felt bound to ask our parents if it was proper.

"I remember the night he kissed me. He had on a chinchilla overcoat and a beaver hat, and he was the handsomest man in the world. And when he kissed me his hat fell off and rolled down the steps."

The reporter looked around to see who it was making this astounding confession. The five of the belles of the seventies sat there, the same rapt expression on every face. And he never knew.

Then Mrs. Valdwell, Miss Blanche Glenn she was in the seventies, turned the subject.

"Ella," she asked Mrs. Scott, "how many wiggle-tails did you drink out of Professor Smith's well, do you suppose?"

Mrs. Scott laughed, and then explained to the reporter.

"You see, we all went to Professor Smith's school—Hoke Smith's father, he was. And we drank gallons and gallons of water out of the well, before we found it was full to the brim with wiggle-tails. It was a terrible period that followed the discovery."

A shock of memory came to Mrs. Austin.

Schoolgirl Ordeals.

"And do you remember how he made me sit with Winston Grubb?" she cried. It seems that Professor Smith's particular mode of punishment was to make his girls sit with the boys they liked. The ordeal, these five ladies announced, was terrible.

"But when he made me sit with Jim Shuttles I was ready to die," announced Mrs. Wylie.

"All those boys, oh, dear——"

"But we had a good time——"

"Better than the girls have now, even if they don't wear so many clothes——"

"Oh, those clothes! The more petticoats we had on, the better. And we were always buttoned up to our chins, and our skirts were wide, and nobody wore dresses you could see through."

"It was a better day for girls, then, wasn't it, Blanche? Even if there was no turkey trot or tango?"

Mystery of the Petticoat.

"We were happy, sure enough. And that night he took me to the Rex ball——"

"He? Who?"

"Why, my husband."

"You always were in love with him, weren't you, even when all those others thought they were first?"

"Yes; but wasn't Harry Hightower a handsome man?"

"I thought so until the night he danced with the girl with the red flannel petticoat. Do you remember?"

"That was the night that——"

"That what?"

"Oh, nothing." But a tender smile came.

Daughter of the Convicted Woman Is Heartbroken

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—The least concerned person in the whole Godbee drama is the woman who was convicted. She held a regular levee at the jail this afternoon, where she was surrounded by her relatives and friends. She is wholly indifferent as to whether she gets a new trial and seems absolutely unmoved by the prospects of life servitude in the State penitentiary.

The one pathetic figure is the daughter, Sarah Godbee, a strikingly handsome blonde. Her grief is pitiful. From the time the sentence was pronounced until the time for her to retire to-night her arm was constantly around her mother's waist or her golden head was snuggling against her mother's breast. She had cried until her pretty blue eyes were red. The Sheriff consented for her to remain in the jail with her mother during the night.

"Poor mother," she sobbed, "I am so afraid for you; I know you did perfectly right, and I know you didn't intend to shoot that woman, but they all seemed so unkind and so anxious to see you punished. I feel like my heart will break."

"Don't cry, my little pet," her mother replied, "it will be all right, my sweetheart. I will get a new trial and will come clear. We didn't expect to have to go to trial, and we will come out better the next time when we are prepared."

But to the other women she was not so hopeful. "It means nothing in the world to me personally. I don't care whether I stay here the rest of my natural life or go. Life for the last twenty-five years has been so much a burden and so unhappy that nothing matters now. I often wonder why I didn't end it all long ago, long before I let that man blight my life and every hope.

"It was only for my children that I hoped to go free. I wanted to live on with them—all I have in the world."

Millen, whose tragedies in the last month have put it prominently on the map, to-night was quiet for the first time since August 18, when Mrs. Godbee met her divorced husband and his new bride in the postoffice and shot them down. Since that time excitement has been at fever pitch.

Following closely on the Godbee tragedy, Rufus Bryant, a former court bailiff, shot Mrs. Belle Newton, a pretty divorcee, and then turned the revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his brain.

The following night a negress was murdered by strangulation. The next day two white women were shot by a negro boy.

Mother of Slain Bride Rejoices Over Verdict.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—Mrs. W. G. Boyer, mother of the bride slain by Mrs. Edna Godbee, retired early to-night and rested well for the first time since her daughter was shot down in the Millen postoffice.

"I can rest now," she said. "I feel for the first time since my little girl was shot like the guilty always will be punished. I had grave misgivings when everyone seemed so confident she would be acquitted. I did not want her hanged, because I do not believe in capital punishment, but I do think life imprisonment is what she so justly deserved.

"A woman like she is is a menace to society and a bad example to women. She is only safe when removed beyond our social system. If she had been acquitted, other crimes would have followed. Our American laws are too light on transgressors. Too often red-handed murderers escape punishment. It leads others to do wrong. This woman's life should be an example.

"I am sorry for her children, and I feel some sympathy for her as a mother, but she robbed me of my little girl—the child I thought more of than my own life—and I can't help but feel relieved that she has been punished."

Mrs. Boyer was too ill to be in court when the verdict was returned and sentence pronounced. Her son, Archibald, ran the two blocks to the hotel where she is stopping and told her. She rallied almost immediately.

"Thank God," she said. "I can go home now."

EXPLORER NEARLY DIES IN FAR NORTH

Simmons, Back From Labrador, Tells Thrilling Stories of Adventure in Uncharted Regions.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—After penetrating to the center of the vast uncharted region of Labrador and suffering hardships comparable with those of Peary and Scott, Price A. Simmons, a Northern explorer, former famous halfback of Yale, returned to this city to-day and narrated his thrilling experiences.

In the early stages of the journey he lost one of his guides, whose brains were dashed out on the rocks when a canoe upset.

His instruments, which also were in the canoe, were lost.

Simmons' route was through the unexplored section of Labrador with Rigolet, on the Atlantic seaboard, as his goal.

When the guide was killed in Rocky River Simmons packed the body 60 miles to Shiel, an Indian settlement, where it was buried.

Along the upper Fraser, Simmons found the cairn of Heskith Pritchard, English novelist and explorer, erected in 1906. On it was blazed: "Only a wilderness and dreary waste ahead."

Simmons scratched beneath it with a stone: "You are damned right."

On the upper Fraser, Simmons' camp was attacked by two bears while the party was hunting caribou and most of their provisions eaten. Faced with starvation, they were obliged to make a dash back to civilization. On the way one of the guides broke one of his legs and the rest of the party had to pack him in.

Dismembered Body Not Annette Day's

Cliffside Slaying Remains as Deep Mystery as Ever When Latest Identification Fails.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Identification of the dismembered body of the girl victim of the Cliffside murder mystery as that of Annette Day, of Brooklyn, was rejected to-day by the mother and second brother of Miss Day. The police now confess themselves baffled.

Clew after clew has been run down, only to prove worthless. Little hope is held out either for the identification of the victim or the detection of the murderer unless the waters of the bay or river should give up the missing head and other portions of the body for which diligent search is being made.

Passenger Stabbed On a Decatur Car

Detectives Hold W. M. Jackson on Complaint of Trolley Crew. Victim In Hospital.

W. M. Jackson, of No. 271 Whiteford street, was arrested by Detectives Davis and Sturdivant late Saturday night, on the complaint of the crew of a Decatur street car, who declared that Jackson had stabbed a fellow passenger and had jumped to the street.

During the chase for the fugitive the wounded man escaped in the darkness. He was located later at the Grady Hospital, and gave his name as Samuel Goss, No. 47 Harold street. His wound was not serious.

NEGRO DOG CATCHER IS NABBED BY OWN RACE

While pursuing his duties as city dog catcher Saturday night Johnson Lewis, a negro, was set upon near North avenue and Williams street by members of his own race. Lewis, who ran, was forced to fire into the crowd near Owens street and finally called in to his assistance Special Officers Gorman and Evans, who rescued him from the angry mob.

JUDGE WRIGHT PUTS 7 IN JAIL FOR CONTEMPT

Preacher, Rich Farmer, Four Other Men and Woman Are Held Without Bail.

ROME, GA., Sept. 13.—Chattooga County has been shaken by the arrest of seven of its most prominent citizens for alleged contempt of court by order of Judge Wright. They now are lodged in jail at Summerville. They are: The Rev. W. M. Hill, a Methodist minister; William Bagley, a wealthy farmer, Baptist deacon and Masonic officer; W. H. Dempsey, Washington Reynolds, his son, Ben, and William Hayes, all farmers, and the latter's wife, Ethel Bagley Hayes.

The other prisoner is a young girl who makes serious charges against young Hayes. The alleged contempt consists of an attempt to settle out of court the ugly charges against Hayes and Bagley.

The story began several months ago when Hayes, a young farmer, was accused by the daughter of Washington Reynolds. When warrants were issued for him he promised to marry the girl, but it is said that warrants never were served and that instead of marrying Miss Reynolds he married Miss Ethel Bagley. Soon after the ceremony, the old warrant was served and Hayes was jailed. Hayes' father-in-law, Bagley, refused to go on his bond.

Accuses Father-in-law.

Angered at the refusal of her father to go on her husband's bond Mrs. Bagley, the young wife, retaliated by telling a sordid story which involved the elder Bagley and a woman of his own family. Bagley was indicted and placed under a $10,000 bond. Thus the matter stood when court convened last week.

The case was docketed to be tried during the term, but the court soon heard strange rumors of attempts to compromise the case and of the sending away of the witnesses. Solicitor Innis probed the matter and asked for contempt proceedings. The result was the jailing of the seven without bond. The evidence showed that Reynolds was to receive $150 for dropping the prosecution of Young Hayes and that Mrs. Hayes was to leave the country and not appear as a witness in the charges against her father. The Rev. Mr. Hill was said to be the moving spirit of the compromise and all the witnesses and parties were to go before the Justice of the Peace and make an oath of agreement. According to the testimony they went to the home of Justice W. L. Hawkins, who doubted the legality of the proceedings, but was reassured by the preacher. The next Saturday the seven were put in jail by order of Judge Wright.

Minister Weeps at Hearing.

At the hearing the Rev. Mr. Hill wept and declared his innocence of any wrong motive, and said that he believed he was carrying on God's work in getting the compromise; that he was carrying out the divine mandate, "Blessed are the peacemakers." The judge refused to discriminate between the prisoners and remanded him to jail.

The affair has created a tremendous sensation, owing to the wealth and prominence of the prisoners. In his charge Judge Wright declared the case of contempt to be one of the most flagrant he has ever had under his jurisdiction.

When arrested Hayes and his wife already had started for the Alabama line. They previously had gone across, but came back when the Sheriff arrested them.

Madame Riano Best Dancer in Capital

Beautiful American Wife of Spanish Ambassador Adept Both at Old and New Rythms.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The premier danseuse of Washington society is Madame Riano, the beautiful American wife of the Ambassador from Spain, who is adept not only at the new dances, but also has learned the intricate Spanish folk dances from the Spaniards themselves and has caught their peculiarly graceful and soulful dance rhythm.

Madame Riano practices faithfully each day. She wears dancing length gowns in place of trains, and strangers in Washington often are surprised to learn that the girlish dancer is the wife of the distinguished diplomat, to whom she has been married ten years. Madame Riano was Miss Alice Ward, of Washington, and her marriage to the then Secretary of the Spanish Legation here was an international romance.

SAY CHECK WAS WORTHLESS.

C. W. Marcus, of Lawrence, S. C., was arrested Saturday night at the instance of the Burns Detective Agency on the charge of passing a worthless check for $165 on the American National Bank of Macon.

Feudist Brought in On Slaying Charge

Hughes-Wright Trouble Recalled When Mountaineer Is Captured by Deputy Marshal.

A feud among mountaineers of North Georgia, which resulted more than a year ago in the death of Moultrie Hughes and his infant son in Fannin County, was recalled Saturday when John Wright, charged with being one of Hughes' slayers, was brought to Atlanta a prisoner.

Wright has been a fugitive from justice since the time of the shooting, and was captured only Friday by deputies of the United States Marshal's office.

Besides being indicted in the Fannin County courts for murder, Wright and his alleged accomplice, Frank Rudicil, were indicted in the Federal Court for conspiracy. Hence the arrest at the hands of the Federal authorities.

W. T. Candler Faces Gun Play Charge

Street Car Conductor Makes Accusations Which Will Be Heard September 16.

Charges that Walter T. Candler, son of Asa G. Candler, flourished a revolver and threatened to shoot him, entered with the police Saturday by a street car conductor, will be heard by Recorder Broyles September 16.

According to the story of the street carman, Candler, driving an automobile along Marietta street at Broad, narrowly missed running over him. The conductor remonstrated, he told the police, and Mr. Candler told him to keep off the streets. Words became more heated, until a revolver appeared in the hand of the man in the automobile, according to the conductor. Candler was arrested.

Attorneys Fight in Recorder's Court

Thomas Bishop and Charles Hillier Fined In Clash at Judge Broyles' Bar.

A bloodless battle between Attorneys Thomas Bishop and Charles Hillier occurred under the very nose of Judge Broyles in the Recorder's Court Saturday afternoon, when, without regard to their whereabouts, the two men exchanged several poorly directed blows.

The only casualties were financial, the men, arrested and arraigned immediately, being fined $15.75 each.

The trouble arose when Bishop told Miller that he had violated professional ethics, alleging that he had solicited a client through an agent.

SULZER OFFER TO RESIGN AND ESCAPE FAILS

Chairman of Impeachment Board Declares Another Suggestion Was Made for a Compromise.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—"Governor Sulzer, through an emissary, offered to resign if we would drop the impeachment proceedings against him. We declined to do so."

This statement was made to-night by Aaron Levy, chairman of the Assembly board of impeachment, after he had been informed that D. Cady Herrick, of counsel for the impeached Governor, had denounced as false a similar statement made earlier in the day.

"A direct offer came to the impeachment board," added Mr. Levy, "through a lawyer who spoke of himself as a lifelong friend of Governor Sulzer. He is well known as a former judge in this city. He told us he had been authorized by Governor Sulzer to see us about abandoning the impeachment. He said: 'Governor Sulzer is willing to resign if you will let the impeachment proceedings drop. He is tired of it all.'

Suggest Compromise.

"When I told him that it was beyond our power to drop the proceedings now, he suggested that a man like Alton B. Parker be selected by both sides to compromise the matter.

"I informed him we have evidence against Governor Sulzer which would warrant his removal, and the matter would have to take its course."

When Herrick, at Albany, heard of this statement, he telegraphed Levy:

"I ask you what the name of the prominent lawyer is. Either you are stating a falsehood or you have been imposed upon. Governor Sulzer has no intention of resigning."

Brewer's Testimony Startling.

According to Mr. Levy, the board of impeachment now has evidence that since the beginning of the impeachment proceedings Governor Sulzer has written to prospective witnesses urging them not to appear and testify against him.

Charles Dersch, of the American Malting Company, was a witness before the board of impeachment today. He testified privately that he had collected nearly $50,000 for Sulzer's campaign, which was not accounted for by the Governor in his statement of campaign contributions.

The $50,000, it was said, had been collected from the brewing and malting interests.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

FRIENDS OF CHARTER, IN NEW APPEAL, ASK STUDY OF ITS PROVISIONS

George Hillyer, Chairman of Committee, Presents Epitome of Document, Outlining Proposed Changes. Asks Careful Reading by Voters.

Leaders in the fight for the new charter issued another appeal for support Saturday night along with an epitome of the document.

The appeal is signed by George Hillyer, chairman, and A. H. Davis, secretary of the campaign committee. They urge every voter to study carefully the changes provided.

Here follows the statement in full:

To the Voters of Atlanta:

On September 24 you will be given an opportunity by your ballot to select for this city a complete, concise, revised and rearranged charter.

The Legislature has already passed this charter, subject to the ratification of a majority of the voters in this election. If adopted, its provisions become effective January 1, 1914.

This charter is not essentially different from the present charter. The difference involves matters of detail, and does not change the basic principles of Atlanta's present form of government.

It was drafted by the members of the City Council, aided by a committee of citizens, and was adopted by the former body before it was passed by the Legislature.

The main idea in drafting this charter was to give to Atlanta a charter harmonious and consistent all the way through, to eliminate many obsolete matters, and to group together and in logical order the sections bearing upon particular subjects.

When it is remembered that Atlanta's present charter was granted by the General Assembly in 1874—nearly 40 years ago—that it has been amended time and time again, that it has no logical or systematic arrangement of contents, that many of its provisions are now unnecessary and obsolete, the necessity of a complete, revised and up-to-date charter is made apparent.

No changes from the present charter have been made, except such as have been suggested by the wisdom and experience of 39 years.

While this 1913 charter is much shorter than the present one, we shall not burden you with its length, but ask that you read the explanation below, giving briefly all the essential changes from our present charter.

Sanitary Tax Abolished.

The annual sanitary tax of $3 per house is abolished. This seems to be a relic of village days, to be removed as soon as the growth of the city permits, and that time has now arrived. This will give a very substantial reduction in taxes for all property owners, especially for the small home owners, who, in many cases, now pay almost as much sanitary tax as all other taxes combined. However, the tax rate of $1.25 remains as at present, and there is no other change in the present tax system.

Number of Boards Reduced.

This charter reduces the number of city boards. Those provided for are:

Board of Education.
Board of Public Safety.
Board of Health, Hospitals and Charities.
Board of Public Works.
Board of Water Commissioners.
Board of Public Recreation.
Board of Trustees of Carnegie Library.

Some of these boards are new and are the result of consolidating the work of two or more of the present boards. They will consist of one member from each ward, to be elected by the General Council, whose terms will be fixed by ordinance.

The same general provisions are established for all, to wit: There is a head of each of the several departments, and the boards will exercise supervision over such heads of departments and the other officers of such departments and the management thereof, but one board is not given greater power than the other, all having the same general authority with reference to their particular departments.

All heads of departments are to be elected by the boards, instead, as at present, of having some elected by the boards, some elected by Council and some elected by the people.

Health, Hospitals, Charities.

The Grady Hospital Board is abolished. The Grady Hospital, the Battle Hill Anti-Tuberculosis Sanitarium, the City Warden, the sanitary department and the health department are all put under one board, to be known as the Board of Health, Hospitals and Charities. The head of each of these departments will be elected by the board.

Board of Public Recreation.

The Cemetery Commission and the Park Board are abolished, and the city cemeteries and the city parks are put under the Board of Public Recreation. All municipal cemeteries, in the lapse of time, become public parks, and the reason for grouping cemeteries with parks is, therefore, apparent.

Board of Public Safety.

This board takes the place of the Police Board and the Board of Firemasters, thus combining, for more efficient and continuous supervision, these two co-ordinate departments. Of course, there will be a chief of each department, as at present, to be elected by the board.

Board of Public Works.

The repair and construction of streets, sewers and bridges is put under a new board, called the Board of Public Works. The citizens from each ward are given representation on this as on all other boards, and a hearing is assured on any and all complaints that they may desire to make, as well as on all protests against proposed improvements which they think the city should hear. The Board of Public Works is intended to systematize the street and sewer work under a continuous line of endeavor, such as the board should work out from year to year, instead of following changes in views of the Committee on Streets and Committee on Sewers annually appointed.

Pay for Board Members.

A new feature is here adopted, to wit: Each board member will receive $5 for attending the monthly meeting of his board. This is an effort to apply the wisdom of banks and other large business corporations in securing full attendance of board members. If every board member is present at the regular monthly meeting of his board, good work is certain to be done.

Sinking Fund Commission.

The Sinking Fund Commission is continued as at present.

Waterworks Not Salable.

This charter provides that our waterworks shall never be sold, transferred, leased or in any way alienated or incumbered, and further provides that any action that would look to any sale, transfer, ease or incumbrance shall be absolutely void, and, further, that any official voting for such sale, transfer, lease or incumbrance shall be subject to impeachment.

City Purchasing Agent.

This charter authorizes the Mayor and General Council, in their discretion, to create the position of city purchasing agent.

Civil Service Retained.

Civil service, as adopted a few years ago, and which now seems to be working well, is retained in its present form.

Officers Elected by People.

It is provided that the following officials shall be elected, as at present, by the people: Mayor, Aldermen, Councilmen, City Clerk, Marshal, Recorder, City Attorney, Treasurer, Tax Collector, Comptroller, City Electrician and Building Inspector.

Representative Government.

This charter retains the principle of representative government. The General Council will still be made up of members from the various wards, and each of the boards will have a member from each of the wards of the city. Thus is retained to YOU, Mr. Voter, the right to confer with, to suggest, to commend or to complain to your direct representatives whenever occasion demands.

Two Separate Propositions.

Two features of the charter are to be voted upon separately. One is the section reducing the Recorder's authority of a fine of $500 and 60 days' sentence of labor or imprisonment (the present law) to a fine of not exceeding $200, with a 30-day sentence.

The other section is the one providing for initiative, referendum and recall.

This charter proposes an initiative on the basis of 10 per cent of the registered voters, a referendum on the basis of 15 per cent of the registered voters, and a recall on the basis of 25 per cent of the registered voters, the recall applying not only to the Mayor, Aldermen, Councilmen and other officers elected by the people, but also to all board members and all heads of departments. The figures given show the proportion of voters required on petitions calling elections for the purposes named.

Chance for Fair Trial.

These percentages seem neither too small nor too large, and will give the citizens an opportunity to give these provisions a fair trial whenever desired. Both these provisions, however, are subject to separate vote, and may be ratified or rejected without reference to the balance of the charter.

The above should give you a clear and concise idea of the proposed revised charter which you are asked to accept or reject on September 24.

A number of good citizens have given much of their time, in conjunction with Council members, in the preparation of this charter. They have no more interest in its passage than you should have. They know the need of a better revised and up-to-date charter for this city. They submit to you this brief outline, giving the general changes from the old charter, so that you can the more intelligently vote upon it.

If you are interested in doing what seems best for the city, in giving to Atlanta a modern and up-to-date charter, yet preserving to the people the right to govern themselves, come out on September 24 and VOTE FOR THIS CHARTER.

By F. S. JACOBS

THERE was a time when kissing in the good old-fashioned way
Was altogether ruled by what the lady had to say;
If she said "Yes," the couple didn't ask for better right.
But fell into a close embrace and smacked with all their might.
But times, it seems, are changing; loving couples when enclinched
Are apt to be disturbed thus wise: "Hey, stop it; you are pinched."

IN olden days, the moonlight always played a goodly part
In scenery befitting demonstrations of the heart;
Dan Cupid made a throneroom out of every cozy nook,
And lovers came there wooing and defied the world to look;
But now, when couples wander out to sit beneath the moon,
They're apt to be admonished thus: "This ain't no place to spoon."

THE moonlight hasn't changed a bit; its beams are still of gold;
And ways of kissing are the same as in the days of old;
The eager swain still has to bow before his lady's will,
And even parents' wishes are respected by them still;
But, to kiss or not to kiss, it seems, now hinges on the law
Regardless of the say-so of the lady or her ma.

HOUSE PAYS HONOR TO 'TIM' SULLIVAN

Adjournment Mark of Respect to Memory of New York Leader Killed by Train.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Announcement of the tragic fate of Representative Timothy (Big Tim) Sullivan was made in the House tonight by Representative Gittins, of New York, and the House adjourned as a mark of respect. A committee was appointed by Speaker Clark to attend the funeral.

Representative Sullivan had not taken the oath of office or served in the present Congress. His salary was paid to the committee of his estate. No mileage or secretary hire was allowed. A special election to fill the vacancy will be held under the supervision of the State of New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—News of "Big Tim's" death became public thirteen days after it occurred, when the former East Side politician was struck and almost instantly killed by a train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Pelham Parkway on August 31.

When he disappeared from the home of his brother, Patrick H. Sullivan, in New York, it was said that he was visiting a friend out of the city. Larry Mulligan, stepbrother of Sullivan, identified his body to-day. A policeman who knew the boss had seen the body in the Twenty-sixth street morgue and notified the family.

"Big Tim" was 50 years old and left a fortune estimated at about $2,000,000. About a year ago he became mentally unbalanced and claimed that he was being persecuted by members of his family. He had been under the guard of a private detective for some time, but managed to escape him on the day of the tragedy.

ATLANTA MAN WEDS.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 13.—G. H. Akers, of Atlanta, and Miss Amy S. Underwood were married here this afternoon by Judge H. B. Abernethy. The couple returned to Atlanta to live.

LUSITANIA BRINGS BODY OF GAYNOR

All Liverpool Honors New York Mayor's Memory—Remains in State on Ship.

Special Cable to The American.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 13.—With flags at half-mast the Lusitania sailed for New York at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Mayor Gaynor's body lies in a stateroom amidships, covered with the Stars and Stripes and a union jack.

Half an hour before sailing Rufus Gaynor, the Moyor's son, stepped aboard.

"I thank all classes of Liverpool people for their kindness and courtesy," he said. "They have done magnificent honor to my father's body. Our family will never forget it."

The principal stores in Liverpool put up their shutters this moring as a mark of respect to the dead Mayor. Every flag in the city was flown at half-mast.

Before Rufus Gaynor sailed the American Consul made an official call at the Adelphi Hotel and conveyed to him the assurance of sympathy from Liverpool's American colony.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The vacancy at the head of the Gaynor ticket will not be filled. Representatives of 63 of the 64 Gaynor organizations are to meet on Monday to declare in favor of John Purroy Mitchell, the fusion candidate for Mayor.

WOULD ERECT MONUMENT TO THE SPOONERS

Ban on Kissing Doomed—Van Dyke Wants 'September Morn' in Bronze to Honor Wooers.

A canvass of the Police Commission Saturday indicates that friends of Cupid will win in their fight against the police ban on spooning and kissing.

The patrons of the little God of Love not only will be given the liberty of the moonlit parks and the deep shadows around Georgia's State Capitol building, but Alderman A. H. VanDyke would erect a monument to them in the little park that adjoins the City Hall. He would have it a fountain with a bronze figure of Chabas' "September Morn" in the center.

Alderman VanDyke's position is extreme, of course, but Mayor James G. Woodward, Carlos H. Mason, chairman of the Police Commission, a majority of both the Police Commission and the City Council are no less eager to give lovers all the liberty possible within the limits of decency. There is not one of them but who declares that sitting on a park bench or the Capitol steps and perhaps taking an occasional kiss is entirely within the rights of every young man and young woman.

Spooning Becomes Big Issue.

Since two plainclothes officers arrested two couples on the Capitol grounds for spooning the right of people to yield to the lure of moonlight nights and Cupid has been the one issue in Atlanta politics. It has eclipsed the sordid contests for the adoption of a new charter and the election of a new Council.

Officials have expressed their views in most positive terms. Eminent judges have expatiated upon it. Park officials have announced that there were no such rigid restrictions over their domains, and the custodian of the Capitol grounds has declared that he would protect the lovers.

In response to the outcry the Police Commission has called a special meeting to consider the whole matter for Wednesday night. It promises to be the most largely attended meeting of that body ever held.

Three Fear Entering Wedge.

Only three members of the commission have allowed their positions to remain doubtful. They are B. Lee Smith, W. A. Vernoy and J. N. McEachern. So intense are they in their support of Police Chief Beavers' strict law enforcement policy that they fear the granting of what have been termed the natural liberties of the Indian summer might be an entering wedge to crush Chief Beavers. So they have remained silent, except in the executive session of the Police Commission.

Eloquent pleas from Carlos Mason and Robert Clark, the bachelor members of the commission, are expected to restrain their opposition. Anyway, nine of the twelve members are openly in favor of restraining the overzealous police officers.

Chairman Mason tersely expressed what is regarded as the attitude of these nine.

Won't Allow Persecution.

"The uniformed policemen are not the ones who have caused this trouble," he said. "It is the work of the 'vice squad' and the plainclothes officers. If the stories of the young couples arrested prove to be true, the officers have gone too far, and the commission will act accordingly.

"The situation has brought up the issue of individual rights. Whatever action is taken on these specific cases the Police Commission will not tolerate persecution of anyone. I am confident that action will be taken to insure the people of Atlanta that the police will not be permitted to molest innocent recreation."

ATTACKS POLICEMAN WITH RAZOR IN PATROL WAGON

Brandishing a razor, Ernest Thomas, a negro prisoner, attacked Police Officer J. H. Hooten while the two were riding in a patrol wagon to the police station Saturday night. Only the quick interference of Horace Tanner, another negro prisoner in the wagon, prevented serious injury to the officer.

Tanner was released as a reward for his work. Both negroes had been arrested for disorderly conduct.

J. I. McCammon as he appeared on Peachtree street in pair of slit trousers.

Slit Trousers Give Peachtree St. Shock

Being possessed of as neat an ankle as you would care to look at, J. I. McCammons, a Peachtree street merchant, objects not a bit to display the charms of the latest design in trousers that fashion has decreed. And so he donned the slit trousers, blood brother of the slit skirt of feminine styles.

The effect as revealed on Peachtree Saturday was startling, to say the least. The outer seam of the trousers, which were of a vivid check pattern, was slit six inches or more from the bottom. The slit was flanked by rows of buttons. And through the gaping opening gleamed Mr. McCammons' red silk socks.

All Peachtree looked and wondered, in some degree, but the excitement created was rather short-lived, as the daring wearer of the slit trousers escaped within doors before the verdict of the street assumed a material form.

SLEUTHS ADMIT EXPRESS HAUL BAFFLES THEM

Scene of Activity in Search for $71,000 Shifts to Principal Transfer Points.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The scene of the sensational $71,000 express robbery has shifted from Savannah to Florence, S. C., Richmond, Washington, Jersey City and New York, the principal transfer points.

The clew that the detectives brought General Manager Heckaday yesterday that led him to state that an arrest would be made in a few hours turned out to be a wild-goose chase. The officials frankly admit they are up against the most baffling robbery in the history of the company.

The payment check system that has made it impossible for any one employee to make away with the company's funds and cover up his tracks has failed, according to Special Agent Weaver. The arrest will probably be made, if it is ever made, at the other end of the line.

When the strong box supposed to have contained the large shipment of money arrived at Savannah the agent here opened the box in the presence of two employees. The seals were intact; there were waybills for $250 and envelopes containing that amount. There was some litter in the bottom of the trunk afterward found to be the torn envelopes of the larger shipment.

The fact that the money had been stolen or was missing did not become known until the banks here called upon the agent for the money and the search was started. The waybills covering the large shipment of money were made out in New York. The messenger who brought the trunk from Jersey City to Florence never saw the waybills. This makes it almost an impossibility for him or any messenger who handled the trunk after he did to know anything of the robbery.

CRUELTIES TO PRISONERS ON CANAL CHARGED

Shake-up in Police Department of Zone Predicted as Result of Accusations.

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 13.—News has been received here in letters from Colon, Panama, that revelations recently made of the treatment of prisoners in the Canal Zone penitentiary at Gamboa have created a sensation among Americans there.

Considerable criticism of the police department is heard, not only in regard to the penitentiary but in connection with other matters.

The present indications are that a big shake-up soon will take place.

It was claimed that there were 72 men, whites and blacks, crowded into each of two cells 30 feet square. There was one drinking cup in a cell for the 72 men, it was charged.

The prisoners work upon the roads, under the fierce rays of the tropical sun, and return at night covered with dust and perspiration. It was charged that notwithstanding these conditions they were allowed a bath but twice a week, on Sundays and Wednesdays.

It was claimed that there was no sewage facilities in the building. It was charged, furthermore, that some of the prisoners were subjected to tortures worthy of the medieval ages. A door was placed across one corner of a room, leaving barely sufficient space in which to place a man. In the tropics any closed room soon becomes stifling, and this manner of punishment is said to have been almost unbearable.

Rings were used to hold the arms of prisoners above their heads for hours at a time when the warden thought that the punishment was not sufficient, it is said.

CONFESSES MAIL THEFTS.

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 13.—Edward Beverly, driver of a transfer mail wagon, confessed here to-day to robbing a parcel post pouch of valuable packages.

FEEL HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS? CLEAN YOUR LIVER! A DIME A BOX

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue, it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken to-night straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

CURRENCY BILL FAULTS SHOWN BY TOMBSTONE

Minnesota Member Says Money Reform Plan Means Death of People's Rights.

CRITICIZES POLITICAL BOARD

Other Republicans Follow Him in Asserting Nation's Finances Will Become Party Prize.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Although the Owen-Glass currency bill is to receive the support of the Democrats and of many Republicans in both the House and Senate, members of the minority in the House to-day opened their attack on it with criticisms of the Democratic secret caucuses by which the bill was framed.

General debate on the bill ended in the House to-night. Beginning Monday, the bill will be taken up for amendment in five-minute debate. The Democratic leaders have decided only amendments affecting the phraseology will be accepted and these must be approved by the Democratic committee. No chance is to be taken on material changes. It is expected to pass the House next Saturday night.

Prophesying the death of the people's privileges through the control by politicians of the finances of the country under Owen-Glass currency reform, Representative George R. Smith, of Minnesota, Republican member of the Banking and Currency Committee, led the assault to-day. He used a miniature tombstone to illustrate his argument.

Assail Board's Make-up.

Taking their cue from him, other Republicans assailed the make-up of the Government board of control. They insisted that under the plan proposed the finances of the country would be made a prize for which every political party would struggle and that the prize would assume proportions greater than those of the tariff, taxes and patronage distribution.

Seven disks were painted on the Smith tombstone to represent the seven members of the board. Brown disks represented the Secretaries of Treasury and Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency, who would change with each administration, and four blue disks, representing other appointees of the President for a term of years.

These members of the reserve board supported a column on which was compared the financial values of industry, agriculture, commerce and capital, which form the basis of the proposed new plan of finance.

Calls Plan Dangerous.

"A more dangerous and unwarranted method of legislation has never been perpetrated in the face of the fact that the country as a whole has demanded that this legislation should be non-partisan," declared Mr. Smith. "By reason of the manner in which the Federal board is appointed, this bill involves the substitution of political control for control by banks.

"The power of national banks feared by President Jackson was a pygmy compared with the power conferred by this bill on the Federal board and which is made the prize of each national election."

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS INVITED TO CONFERENCE

Officers and teachers of the Atlanta Sunday schools have received a request from B. Carter Millikin, of New York, to meet him Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Central Congregational Church for a conference on missionary education. Mr. Millikin has charge of the jubilee mission study classes.

"OW!" Corns? Use "GETS-IT"

"GETS-IT," the New-Plan Corn Cure, Makes Any Corn Shrivel, Vanish.

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"Madam, If You'd Use 'GETS-IT' for Corns, You Could Wear Any Tight Shoe Easily!"

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence Company, Chicago.

The Bryan Lecture as a Money Maker.

Since entering President Wilson's Cabinet Mr. Bryan has spent much time on the Chautauqua circuit. He received his traveling expenses, a guarantee of $250 for each lecture and 50 per cent of all receipts in excess of $500. These lectures have been delivered since March 4:

July 13—Hendersonville, N. C., $250.
July 17—Mountain Lake Park, Ind., $250.
July 20—Winona Lake, Ind., two free.
July 21—Gary, Ind., $375.
July 22—Oelwein, Iowa, $250.
July 24—Adel, Iowa, $500.
July 23—Panora, Iowa, $250.
Aug. 28—Lambertville, N. J., $400.
Sept. 1—Chestertown, Md., $250.
Sept. 8—Salisbury, Md., $750.
Sept. 9—Crisfield, Md., $250.
Sept. 10—Media, Pa., $250.
Sept. 10—Glenolden, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12—Phoenixville, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12.—Woodbury, N. J., $250.
Sept. 13—Charleston, W. Va., $250.
Sept. 13—Woodstock, Va., $250.
Total, $5,025.

WOODSTOCK, VA., Sept. 13.—William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, addressed a large gathering here to-night and pocketed $250 and his specified share of the gate receipts. He came from Charleston, W. Va., and will go on to Staunton, President Wilson's birthplace, on Tuesday.

The performance, or rather the lecture, compared favorably with that in Media, Pa., a few days ago and at Glenolden.

Glenolden had the advantage of Media, because at the former place no popcorn or pink lemonade booths were allowed outside. At Glenolden these accessories of the circus were not lacking. The peanut privilege, while not a lucrative one, was a noisy one. "Peanuts, chocolates and chewing gum."

"Ice cream cones and brick ice cream!" These cries greeted Mr. Bryan as he came up in an automobile that was parked with half a hundred more on the old circus lot where the chautauqua tent was pitched.

"There Isn't Any Elephant."

A little boy who insisted upon having peanuts as he was dragged along by his mother declared he wanted them to feed the elephant.

"There isn't any elephant, Willie," said his mother.

"Yes, there is; they got a tent," he wailed as she moved on with him to where the crowd was in line.

There must have been several persons under the same impression as to the use to which the tent was being put, because the almost incessant cracking of well-roasted goobers in the rear seats punctuated the lecture of the Secretary and at times made it difficult for those in the extreme rear seats to hear clearly.

The really disappointed boys, however, were those who carried water for the band and the other talent to get free tickets and those who crawled in under the canvas who found the show not up to expectations to the juvenile portion of the crowd.

Lament of a Canvasman.

One of the canvasmen who had a seat along the side of the tent wall surrounding the lot aired his woes while Mr. Bryan was speaking.

"I'm sorry I joined," he wailed. "This ain't a regular show, and the boss canvasman is a Swarthmore student. What he don't know about putting up a big tent would fill a book. What they ought to do with this business is take there here Tyroleans. That boy champion is good and is as fine a yodler as there is in the business, and I have been seeing concerts with circuses for a long time way back with the Sells show. They ought to take and consolidate them and that band and then go into Philly and get a good lot and play two a day right along.

Bryan Could Commute.

"Mr. Bryan could commute from Washington. We could let him close the afternoon show and put him on number one for the night show, and we would get some money. These people are amateurs. I'm sorry I joined out. You see the way it was, I used to be with the old Forepaugh show, and when I saw the tent I just naturally asked for work."

Contrary to the general opinion, the artists dividing time with Bryan and holding the crowd until he arrives do not feel particularly puffed up over the fact that they are on the same bill with him.

Gus Oechner, the champion yodler, at Media, this afternoon, was congratulated on getting a bigger hand than Mr. Bryan at the close of his act.

"That ain't much," said another. "Anna Umley got a better hand than he did on her zither act."

"No, we are not sore at his taking the spotlight," said one of the troupe, after changing to street clothes and taking his make-up off. "Mr. Graus, our manager, will tell you we have played with some of the best. We don't care where they put us on a bill. We can follow an animal act or juggler or any of the rest of them.

"Why, we would not be afraid to let Mr. Bryan take the middle of the bill or go on No. 4. Say, that cuckoo song that Oechner sings won the championship in Switzerland for him. It was a great contest. See, the program says it," and he pointed to where, in small type on the inside, it was announced "the boy yodler of the troupe won the championship in a great contest in Switzerland."

Mr. Bryan has announced diplomatically that he was going to remain on the Chautauqua circuit. He said there were now 1,000 of them. He spoke of the pleasure he felt in addressing the members and audiences they drew, and what a proud privilege it was of his to do so, and said:

French Paper Sees in His Performance Reason for Success of Tammany.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The Times' leading editorial on foreign affairs, edited and usually written by Andre Tardieu, one of the under secretaries of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and accepted generally by the European press as directly inspired utterances reflecting the opinions of foreign office heads, is devoted to-night to ridiculing Secretary of State Bryan for his appearance with a traveling tent show.

The caption over the editorial is "The Bryan Sketch," and his part in the show is treated as vaudeville.

The editorial says Mr. Bryan's enterprise is especially dangerous in this age, when the tendency of the public is to despise diplomacy as futile, or at least to refuse to take diplomats seriously.

"A few more samples of this kind and the public will lose all faith," it goes on. It is pointed out that Mr. Bryan's "antics" really call for an essay on American manners and morals, illustrating once again that in the United States a political career is esteemed as a most mediocre profession, hence inferior men have been predominant in American politics throughout the last century, all citizens of marked ability and of pronounced intelligence religiously keeping out of politics, and the really able men going into business, from which position they use politicians, but never hold office.

Thus Tammany has prospered, to poison America's magnificent soil." It also says the best American tradition of dignity is now entirely confined to "out-of-the-way" Boston and similar corners, from which types of men like Olney and Lodge must witness the "vaudevillian" Secretary of State, whereas the "widest chasm separates these responsible citizens from the public's approval."

:: Not for Money ::

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Secretary Bryan has cabled to a French newspaper that he is lecturing not for money, but simply to educate the people.

YOUNG man, if you lack the acquisitive knack,
If your money fades into thin air,
Don't think there's no chance in the realm of finance
And give away to utter despair.
You can easily be in the class with John D.,
George Gould and Charles W. Morse,
If you'll merely come through with a dollar or two
On the Doc's educational course.

GO and hear how the Doc whose bland soul it would shock
To think of the evil called greed,
Counts his house every night lest the treasurer might
Get away with an overlooked seed.
Though he looks upon cash as the veriest trash,
He'll teach you to keep it by force;
Not a cent will you burn if your lesson you learn
In the Doc's educational course.

YOU'LL observe how it pays to spend years, months and days
In hunting a job you can't land,
If the spotlight you keep while less foxy men sleep
And always go round with a band.
You will learn that to grace a good Cabinet place
As an ad. beats a two-headed horse,
You will never know need if you'll only pay heed
To the Doc's educational course.

HOW kind of the Doc, who has tucked in his sock
All he'd need for the next thousand years,
Thus to bustle around and tell youths how to found
Good, solid, financial careers!
And if all the while he sees with a smile
More dollars heap up in the vault
And his holdings accrue while he educates you,
Remember, it isn't his fault!

J. WYLIE SMITH HELD IN TOWER ON NEW CHARGE

Former Soldier of Fortune in Mexico Arrested on Warrants Accusing Him of Forgery.

J. Wylie Smith, a romantic figure because of his stirring adventures as a soldier of fortune in Mexico while a fugitive from Georgia, slept last night in the Tower, a prisoner. Arrested late Saturday on warrants sworn out by T. M. Hamilton, of Hapeville, charging forgeries involving $2,200, he was unable to furnish the required bail of $1,000 in each of two cases.

Smith was allowed the freedom of the prison until bedtime, and himself answered a telephone inquiry as to the case, stating that he would secure to-day the amount necessary for bail, and expressing his belief that he would be cleared of the charges.

Smith last night told a story of persecution at Hamilton's hands, and said he could prove it. He said Hamilton, who had begged him to return from Mexico, was trying to find a scapegoat. He refused to do Hamilton's bidding, he said, and in consequence was again thrown into jail. The charges brought Saturday, Smith declared, are baseless.

"Some facts that will be interesting are going to be brought out of this affair," he promised. "I will be vindicated when the matter comes to trial."

Hamilton declared the arrest of Smith was asked because of transactions in 1911, in which, he claimed, Smith used forged notes. He said the arrest comes as the result of a long period of effort to land Smith.

Smith is in very bad physical condition. Because of this and since he is on bond given in other cases, Judge Girardeau was willing to release him on his own recognizance. Hamilton insisted that bond be made, however.

Dream Gives Woman Method of Speech

Keyboard of Typewriter Comes to Blind Mute While She Is Sleeping.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—A revelation which came to her in a dream in answer to prayers has given Mrs. Ella Clark Bennett a novel though perfect means of communication. She is deaf, blind and dumb.

"One night I dreamed that if I placed letters, like those one finds on a typewriter, on my hand and learned the location of those letters," said Mrs. Bennett, through an interpreter, "people touching the letters could spell out words for me and thus talk to me."

Afterward, she says, she had the letters of the alphabet painted on a glove.

Mrs. Bennett lives with Mrs. Jennie Bloom, No. 1208 Lincoln street, who has also become proficient in Mrs. Bennett's new method of communication.

Gets $1,000 Clothes, $400 Ring, Jilts Him

Pretty Nina Lloyd, 18, Pleased With Everything Orangeman Buys Except Marriage License.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Jilted by 18-year-old Nina Lloyd, after he had given her a $400 diamond engagement ring and $1,000 to buy her trousseau, Charles W. Lee, a wealthy orange planter of Miami, Fla., to-day swore out a warrant for the arrest of the young woman, charging pretense. She was held on $300 bail by Justice Comly.

After several months of the tenderest sort of correspondence, Lee told the court, he came prepared to marry pretty Nina. She appeared more than willing, he testified, and waxed enthusiastic when he took her to a department store and allowed her to select a trousseau that would have pleased a society queen. But when he bought a marriage license she refused to marry him.

Commission Halts Lumber Rate Raise

Southern Timber Dealers Go East to Fight Proposed Advance in Tariff.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day suspended until next March the operation of proposed advanced rates on the transportation of lumber in carload lots from North Carolina, Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee points to Eastern seaboard cities.

The new rates would have been double the present tariff on certain classes of lumber. North Carolina dealers representing $15,000,000 in capital went East to fight the proposed increase in freight rates.

GRAFT CHARGE MADE AGAINST U. S. DIPLOMAT

Husband of Hallie Erminie Rives Reported Recalled From Italy by State Department.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Post Wheeler, Secretary of the American Embassy at Rome, is said to have been recalled to Washington to explain certain charges of abuses of diplomatic exemption from customs duties.

It is said that the question of his return to Rome will depend upon the outcome of his conference with Secretary of State Bryan.

Secretary Bryan to-day declined to discuss the reported charges against Wheeler.

Mrs. Wheeler was formerly Hallie Erminie Rives, the novelist. Mr. Wheeler is also well known as a novelist, poet and journalist.

An American, whose name is withheld by the State Department, made the charge against Wheeler. So far as known the Italian Government has not taken any action, and the department is moving slowly, believing that Wheeler may be the victim of personal animus.

Italy permits diplomats and their attaches to receive goods from other countries without paying duties, and unconfirmed rumors in connection with Wheeler's case intimate that he is charged with taking advantage of diplomatic courtesy by turning it to his commercial advantage.

As soon as the first intimation of accusations were received here the department communicated with Ambassador O'Brien. He immediately cabled back that there was no truth in the reports that Wheeler had taken advantage of the Italian courtesy to traffic in gasoline.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMostofUsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleaning after dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation, never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

ITALIAN TOWN GIVES THANKS TO MR. HEARST

Resolutions of Gratitude Passed for His Aid After Eruption of Vesuvius in 1906.

Special Cable to The American.

NAPLES, Sept. 13.—A memorial to the 105 mothers and children crushed to death during the eruption of 1906 under the roof of the small chapel in San Giuseppe Vesuviano, where they sought refuge against the overpowering fall of ashes and rocks, was unveiled to-day in the presence of the civil and military authorities of Naples, the Mayor of each town in the Vesuvian district and a large crowd of representative citizens.

A feature of the ceremony was a resolution of the Town Council of San Giuseppe Vesuviano thanking Mr. Hearst and his newspapers for the substantial help sent to the afflicted district at the time of the eruption.

The monument, consisting of a base nine feet high and a twelve-foot marble column surmounted by a Pompeian capital, the work of the sculptor Arizo, of Naples, marks the site where on the night of April 8, 1906, the stricken mothers repaired with their infants to pray for deliverance from the impending catastrophe.

Resolution of Thanks.

While they prayed the roof of the flimsy structure collapsed under the accumulated deposit of ashes and all were crushed to death.

The Hearst newspapers collected for the sufferers more than $35,000, which was handed to the Italian Red Cross Society. A small balance of $206 afterward was devoted to the erection of the memorial which the local population had decided to build.

During the ceremony Lawyer Silvio Cola, chairman of the memorial committee, before unveiling the monument, read resolutions thanking Mr. Hearst for his generous help. The resolutions, engrossed upon parchment, were then handed to Judge Palmieri, who was present as Mr. Hearst's representative.

Banquet to Judge Palmieri.

Later a banquet was given in honor of Judge Palmieri. In an address the Baron Quarante di San Severine cited many actions of Mr. Hearst which, he pointed out, entitled him to the gratitude of Italians, both in Italy and in America. He mentioned also the stand taken by all the Hearst newspapers during the Italo-Turkish war, and the many fights made by those publications against laws restricting immigration.

Every reference to Mr. Hearst was loudly cheered.

Speaking as the representative of Mr. Hearst, Judge Palmieri thanked the committee and the municipality for the noble way in which they expressed their gratitude to one of Italy's most sincere friends in America. Mr. Hearst's name, which is engraved in large letters at the base of the column, was joined to those of the Queen and King of Italy in a toast which all drank standing.

Plennie Miner Is Host at Joyous Barbecue

Judge Roan, Dorsey and Frank Jurors Guests

Chief Deputy Announces He Will Aid Sheriff Mangum—Feast Pronounced Best Ever.

Friends of genial Plennie Miner, chief deputy sheriff, are to-day declaring him to be the greatest of hosts following a barbecue and fish fry given by him at Germania Park Saturday afternoon. In the cool depths of a grass-covered ravine the appetizing spread was served. "The best I ever ate," was the unanimous verdict.

The gathering was noticeable for its political representation, but though there were politicians in plenty, the absence of political discussion was marked. The nearest to a political reference was a remark which Mr. Miner made in a short talk. This was that he would not desert his old friend J. Wheeler Mangum and run against him for Sheriff.

Talks were made by Judge L. S. Roan, Solicitor Dorsey and others, each making a happy reference to Miner's ability as a host. At Judge Roan's suggestion three cheers were given the chief deputy.

The guests met at the Thrower Building at 12:30 o'clock, where 40 automobiles were in waiting to transport them to the barbecue grounds. Noticeable among the guests were the men who composed the Frank jury, who developed a great friendship for Mr. Miner during the famous trial.

The spread was all that the epicure could ask for. Daintily cooked channel cat disappeared with wonderful rapidity, as did Brunswick stew and barbecue, for which the Germania Park cooks are famous.

Both Judge Roan and Solicitor Dorsey congratulated Mr. Miner and his assistants on the splendid manner in which recent troublous trials had been handled, declaring only his ability as an officer of the law exceeded his capacity as host.

Refrigeration Experts to Eat Eggs That Were Young When Columbus Was a Boy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Eggs that were young when Columbus was a boy, fowls that have passed the Osler limit—in cold storage, fruits of a bygone summer and roses of yesterday, together with grapejuice married to preservatives, will be the principal items at the cold storage banquet to be given to the delegates to International Congress of Refrigeration during its Washington sessions beginning September 15.

Not only will there be a strong suspicion that everything served is a cold storage product, but this will be certified to by the management of the feast. If this unique poison squad survives the feast there will be speeches by Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Dr. Carl Alsberg, Chief Chemist of the United States, and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of pure food fame.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 13.—Mariners entering and leaving this port hereafter will use the new straight channel just opened, which, at low water, affords a depth of 28 feet, and at high water a depth of 33 feet, and which will be made deeper in a year or two. The new course was laid out when the Atlantic fleet was here last November, and since then it has been brought to perfection. It greatly improves the port facilities.

QUINTODDY SIMS OFFERS OATS TOO CHEAPLY; ARRESTED

A bargain-day sale of oats, costing $3 per sack, at $1 per," led to the arrest Saturday night of Quintoddy Sims, a negro, charged with stealing 103 sacks of grain from a Central of Georgia freight car. Sims implicated another negro, his "pal," whom the police are seeking.

During the past few weeks, large quantities of oats and other grain have disappeared from cars unloading under the Forsyth street bridge.

HILL NAMED TO PLACE ON NEW ATLANTA BENCH

Judge Roan Succeeds Noted Jurist in Appeals Court—Reid to Stone Mountain.

Something may arise to postpone the change in official positions, but probably not. The delay of nearly a month was made by Governor Slaton to permit the appointees to get the work now on hand out of the way.

Has Work Pending.

Judge Hill has a number of decisions yet to write and there are several pending in which it is desirable that all three of the present judges should participate.

The motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, is set to be heard before Judge Roan October 4.

Judge Hill in his new position will receive a salary of $5,000 annually. Judge Roan will receive $4,000 as a member of the appellate court. Mr. Reid will get a salary of $3,000 as judge of the Stone Mountain circuit, and Mr. Napier, the new Solicitor General, will be paid in fees.

Governor Slaton's action set at rest a great amount of conjecture. Speculation has been rife since the creation of the new judgeship as to who would get the plum. Judge Hill and Judge Roan were the leading candidates, although several others had been mentioned. Judge Roan loses $1,000 of his present salary by the new arrangement. As judge of the Stone Mountain circuit he received a salary of $3,000, and for presiding over the criminal division of the Fulton County Superior Court he received an additional $2,000.

Was Federal Prosecutor.

Judge Hill was Solicitor General of Fulton County from 1877 to 1885, a position in which his brother, Charles D. Hill, succeeded him. Grover Cleveland, in his first administration as President, made him United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia.

On the death of his father in 1882, Governor Colquitt tendered him the unexpired term of the elder Hill in the United States Senate. The position was declined in a letter that was widely published with most favorable comments. He later was defeated for the unexpired term by two votes by Pope Barrow.

After the expiration of his term as United States Attorney, he was appointed by Judge Newman, Justice White and Judge Pardee as Standing Master in Chancery in the Circuit of the United States for the Fifth Judicial Circuit. He was elected to the Court of Appeals along with Judge Powell and Judge Russell, and upon the organization of the court in January, 1907, he was selected as chief judge.

Has Heavy Grind.

The work of the Court of Appeals has been exceptionally heavy, the court deciding over 5,000 cases, reported in twelve volumes. Judge Hill participated in the decision of every case and wrote many of the most important opinions. Inasmuch as the Court of Appeals has exclusive jurisdiction of all criminal appeals, except where there is a conviction for a capital offense, Judge Hill has had remarkable experience in the interpretation and enforcement of the criminal law.

His duties in the new judgeship primarily will be to try all the felonies in Fulton County, although his jurisdiction as to other matters will be the same as the other judges of the Superior Court. He gives up a place on a court of last resort with a term of six years, to which he was elected last October, for a lower position, with the necessity of going before the people for election next summer. The work, however, is less arduous and the salary is $1,000 more.

Judge R. B. Russell will succeed Judge Hill as the chief judge of the Court of Appeals.

Judge Roan Able.

Judge Roan has presided over some of Georgia's most famous criminal trials. He has been judge of the Stone Mountain circuit for a long term of years and has gained the reputation of being one of the most able criminal jurists in the State.

Solicitor Reid lives at Palmetto, Campbell County, and has been the prosecutor in the Stone Mountain circuit for several years. He has made an enviable record in his position and his appointment was regarded practically as certain.

George M. Napier is of the firm of Napier, Wright & Cox, with offices in the Atlanta National Bank Building. His home is in Decatur.

ONE BATTLESHIP POLICY PERILS THOUSAND JOBS

Assistant Secretary of Navy Declares It Will Soon Reduce Nation's Fighting Strength.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The one-battleship policy of Congress will not only strike a severe blow at the defensive power of the United States, but will throw out of employment thousands of men who depend upon navy yards work for their daily bread, it was learned here to-day.

The dangers of a continuation of the policy were set forth as follows by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy:

1. A decrease of the fighting strength of the American navy by six first class ships by 1916.

2. The discharge of thousands of employees of navy yards throughout the United States within the next four months.

3. The resultant loss of the Government corps of expert mechanics skilled in battleship and big gun construction.

"There are ten battleships scheduled for retirement from the ranks of the navy during the next four years," said Mr. Roosevelt.

"This is in compliance with the well-established estimates of navy experts that the life of a battleship is fifteen years. Four will go out of commission this year and two will pass the age limit each succeeding year until 1916. A continuance of the one-battleship policy, therefore, will mean the loss of six fighting vessels to the navy.

"Repair of the battleship fleet has been practically accomplished by the navy yards, and from now on this work will not rise above the normal. Also all of the large contracts for new battleships have been let, and unless Congress enacts a larger navy program, the navy yard forces must inevitably be reduced."

Mr. Roosevelt admitted that work now being done by private contractors should go to Government shops.

"Money could be saved by this program," he said, "and the work would be as well if not better done. Bills providing for the building of big gun and armor plate foundries are now pending in Congress."

Navy yard employees have set afoot a petition to Secretary Daniels and President Wilson calling attention to the present state of affairs. They will present the petition to the Secretary and urge upon him a four-battleship program. Commandant Jones, of the Washington Navy Yard, which was recently hit by the discharge of 40 expert machinists, predicted to-day that these petitions would come to naught.

"It is up to Congress to give the men more work," said Jones. "We have all the men we can handle under the present battleship program, unless the Government wants to give them armchairs and newspapers and pay first-class machinists salaries for the rest of the winter."

MAMMA, DADDY AND CHILDREN ALL LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "Fruit Laxative" Cleanses Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful to-night means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping.

Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

Gives Barber Ring; Finds He's Married

Handsome Jacksonville Divorcee Has Tonsorial Apollo Arrested When He Reports Gem Lost.

The shock experienced by a handsome and wealthy divorcee of Jacksonville, Fla., when she discovered that a good looking barber on whose finger she had placed a $200 diamond ring was a married man was described tearfully to-day before Magistrate Gorman.

The divorcee was Mrs. E. A. Herbert, the former wife of a rich Jacksonville real estate man, and the barber in the case was Howard Carroll, who has the figure and face of a matinee idol.

Mrs. Herbert had caused Carroll's arrest on the charge of larceny of the ring.

Mrs. Herbert testified that when, on the next day, she saw that the diamond was missing from the finger of her barber, she asked him what had become of it, he replied that he had lost it.

WAR MESSAGE AGAIN FLASHED ON KENNESAW

Sherman's "Hold the Fort, for I am Coming" Is Sent by Veteran.

OLD STATION REVIVED

Ceremonies Are Witnessed as Prelude to Encampment of G. A. R. at Chattanooga.

With the flag that flashed General Sherman's famous message of "Hold the fort, for I am coming" to General Corse at Allatoona Pass 50 years ago, Lieutenant George C. Round, of Manassas, Va., formerly of Sherman's signal corps, together with Pierre P. Hurlburt, of No. 42 Grady place, Atlanta, and Major J. A. Commerford, of Marietta, both Union veterans, stood on the site of the old Civil War signal station on the summit of Kennesaw Mountain Saturday afternoon and flashed the same message to an imaginary battlefield at the pass.

Lieutenant Round is president of the United States Veteran Signal Corps Association, and performed the rites of re-establishing the old signal station used by Sherman and considered one of the most important of the war, as a part of the Grand Army reunion at Chattanooga.

Mr. Hurlburt assisted him as flagman, and Major Commerford served as bugler. The station was re-established on the exact spot from which General Sherman sent his famous message over the head of Hood's army in the valley, to General Corse at Rome, ordering him to proceed to Allatoona Pass and defend the stores of the Union army stationed at that place.

The ceremonies of opening the station and sending the message were witnessed by a delegation of Marietta citizens, headed by Secretary J. L. Stringer, of the Board of Trade.

After the sending of the famous message, Lieutenant Round flashed a message to the North, South, East and West. Three of these messages were taken from the wise sayings of Moses, from the Book of Leviticus, and were as follows:

To the North—"Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound throughout your land."

To the South—"Ye shall proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

To the East—"Ye shall hallow the fiftieth year; it shall be a jubilee unto you; ye shall return every man unto his possession."

The message flashed to the West was the chorus of a song written by Mrs. Mary Speed Mercer, of Elm City, N. C., during the Manassas jubilee in 1911, as follows:

"America! All hail to thee!
Thanks be to God, who made us free!
North, South, East and West, hand clasped in hand,
United we thy children stand!"

In flashing the signals, Lieutenant Round used the same field glasses he used as a signal officer during the war, and read from the Bible he carried in his knapsack during the four years of strife.

Lieutenant Round spent Saturday night with Mr. Hurlburt at the latter's home at No. 42 Grady place, and leaves to-day for Chattanooga to attend the G. A. R. reunion.

Mrs. Ottley Visiting Shiloh Field

Monument Site To Be Selected

Georgia U.D.C.'s to Honor Heroes

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, director for Georgia of the Shiloh Monument Association ,who on battlefield to select site for shaft.

Atlanta Director With President General of Association to Decide on Spot for Shaft.

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, director of Georgia for the Shiloh Monument Fund, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is in Tennessee with the president general of the Shiloh Monument Association to select a suitable site for the monument the association is about to erect to commemorate the heroism of the Confederate soldiers who fought in the memorable encounter which lasted two days at Pittsburg Landing.

For several years the Confederate Daughters have been directing some of their time and money toward the proposed monument, and each State has had its Shiloh director, who has spoken before the various chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and worked for the fund.

The Atlanta Chapter pledged $50 last year to the fund, which pledge was met in the spring. Thirty-nine other U. D. C. chapters have contributed to the monument fund from Georgia.

Shiloh Day was observed with Mrs J. K. Ottley as chairman on April 6, at which time a beautiful literary and musical program was rendered in the Woman's Club. At that time papers were read from the president of the Mississippi Division, from Mrs. Battle, a prominent Daughter of the Confederacy of Texas, and a group of poems read by Mrs. Elizabeth Fry Page, the poet laureate of the Tennessee Division.

The monument will be erected in the Shiloh National Military Park, near Pittsburg Landing, on the Tennessee River, and will be one of the handsomest monuments among the many the Daughters of the Confederacy have erected to the Confederate soldiers.

Mrs. Ottley is the guest of the president general of the Shiloh Monument Association in Tennessee and will spend several days in that State before returning to Atlanta.

GEORGIA BABIES ARE NEGLECTED, BOARD ASSERTS

Four Rules Laid Down to Guide Mothers in Selecting Attendant for Children.

Georgia mothers, as a rule, do not exercise sufficient care in selecting nurses for their babies, declares the State Board of Health, in a warning issued Saturday describing some of the dangers to which helpless infants are exposed because of this negligence.

Too often, says the board, the thoughtless mother employs the first negro girl who happens to be available, without inquiring at all as to her health, moral character and intelligence. Such mothers forget that the baby is left for hours at a time in the sole care of this nurse, and that it may suffer permanent harm if improperly handled, neglected or exposed to disease.

Four rules are laid down by the Georgia Board of Health, by which a girl or woman must be judged before she should be employed to take care of a baby. They are as follows:

The nurse must be healthy.

The nurse must be neat and clean about her own person.

The nurse must be of good moral character.

The nurse must have intelligence.

Don't employ anybody to take care of your baby unless that person comes up to these four requirements, says the State Board.

Wife's War Helps 'Spooning' Crusade

Pays $15 Fine for Disturbance at Husband's Bakery, but Ends Flirtations There.

Despite the fact that she was forced to pay a $15.75 fine in Recorder's Court Saturday for raising a disturbance at her husband's bakery at No. 251 Peachtree street, Mrs. Jamie Zakas probably has put a stop to any and all things which might be construed to be spooning in the bakery.

Mrs. Zakas charged that she saw women enter the bakery and talk with her husband in a way that did not suit her. Zakas denied the charge, saying the women were ordinary customers.

WOODWARD TO DEMAND TEST OF CREMATORY

Mayor Announces He Will Refuse to Sign Voucher Until Contract Is Met.

Declaring that the methods of the Destructor Company of New York, which is building the new crematory, was a "stall" and that he would refuse absolutely to sign a voucher for the payment of the $135,000 still due until the plant had been turned over to the city and an average test of the capacity made, Mayor James G. Woodward Saturday night renewed the old crematory fight.

The Mayor's statement followed fast on the heels of the statement of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, chairman of the Council Sanitary Committee, who declared Saturday he was convinced that the city was being robbed by the contract with the Destructor Company. The Councilman's criticism of the plant was inspired by the belief that it will not come up to the contract specifications.

Mayor Woodward's criticism of the plant was as sharp as that of Ashley.

"I am convinced that the company is stalling now in order to put off the test as long as possible," said the Mayor. "But that stall won't go, for I am going to insist on an average test after the plant has been turned over to the city. In fact, I am not going to sign the voucher for that $125,000 which we still owe them until the contract has been carried out to the letter.

"I still contend that we have made a bad bargain, for we are paying $276,000 for a 250-ton plant, whereas Milwaukee has a 300-ton plant which cost only $210,000. If I could have received some support in my original fight we could have a fully-equipped crematory plant at a cost of only $108,000."

According to the Mayor, the Destructor Company is paying $25 per day forfeiture dating from August 15, when, it is claimed, the plant should have been completed.

Governor Slaton has devoted the whole of three evenings to the study of evidence in the case, as transcribed in the court records. It is known that he considers the case of much significance.

Soil Commissioner Gives 'Movie' Talks

Weekly Reports on Cotton Crop Another Feature Launched by Price and Aide, Hughes.

James E. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture, and his assistant, Dan Hughes, are working on two propositions which are expected to result in much good to the farmers throughout the State. One is the issuance of cotton reports weekly, which will contain full information as to the condition of the crops and movement. The other is the giving of moving picture lectures in the different counties of the State.

The moving picture lectures are an innovation. Agriculture in all its phases during the history of the world is depicted, modern farming, of course, playing the most important part.

WILSON URGED TO SEE GEORGIA FAIR AT MACON

Senator Hoke Smith Believes President Will Accept Bid If He Comes South.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Mayor John T. Moore has received a letter from Hoke Smith, junior Senator from Georgia, in which he stated that he was doing everything in his power to induce President Woodrow Wilson to visit Macon during the Georgia State Fair.

Senator Smith stated that he had every reason to believe that if the President is in this section of the South that he will pay a visit to the State Fair, and that President Wilson had promised to give the invitation of the Macon people every consideration.

Nine counties will have agricultural exhibits at the Georgia State Fair—nearly twice as many as exhibited last year.

The counties already enrolled are Cobb, Houston, Bibb, Worth, Bulloch, Bartow, Milton, Hall and Irwin.

It is expected that Cobb and Houston will be the principal contenders for the first prize of $1,000.

Mrs. Vanderbilt passed judgment for the cash prizes and ribbons offered for the best pumpkins and corn and other products of the estate. The fair is to be an annual fall event in the future.

WAR TREASURE UNEARTHED ON TALBOTS ISLAND

Strangers Dig Up Three Boxes and Negro Finds Pistol of Revolutionary Days.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—A mystery comes to this city bordering on one of the treasure stories of Captain Kidd, and as a result Dr. W. B. Burroughs is in possession of an old flint and steel pistol of the type used in the Revolutionary War.

A few days ago John Edwards, a negro, was at St. Marys, and while there a party of strangers engaged him to take them to Talbots Island, which is near Fernandina. When the party reached the island, they landed and instructed Edwards to wait on the shore until they returned. The strangers came back in two hours and had in their possession three boxes.

After he had taken his passengers back to St. Marys, Edwards returned to the island. He searched about the place and found three square holes, out of which the boxes had been lifted. In one of the sinks he found the pistol.

Yesterday the negro came to Brunswick and showed the relic to Dr. Burroughs, who, being a collector of war-time guns, purchased it. It is believed the boxes the strangers carried from the island contained treasure or were valuables buried there during the Civil War by residents of St. Marys or Fernandina. The island is not inhabited, and it is thought the men had learned of the burial of the boxes by some of their ancestors. No other solution was offered, as none of the party has ever been heard from or seen since that time by the negro.

Americans' Absence Stuns Hotel Keepers

August Is Disastrous to Both Bonifaces and Tradesmen in Southern Germany.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—The hotel keepers and tradesmen in certain quarters of South Germany are dismayed by the marked decrease in American tourist traffic; August was almost disastrous to them.

The Munich hotel proprietors were hit hardest and are complaining loudly. This loss of American patronage is due largely, it is said, to the agitation by certain Americans in Munich against the systematic exploitation to which travelers are subjected in that city. Experienced tourists, tired of paying double prices for everything, are shunning Munich and going to Berlin and other North German cities.

Sues Husband Who Gave Her $1.25 Year

Mrs. Vivian Miller Hogan Declares She Was Allowed to Go Hungry Several Times.

Mrs. Vivian Miller Hogan brought suit for divorce from Homer Glazener Hogan Saturday, alleging he has given her only $1.25 in more than a year and that he has allowed her to go hungry upon several occasions. Mrs. Hogan asks also an injunction restraining her husband from visiting her at her father's home.

After living with her parents for some time and refusing to pay board, she declares, Hogan left the house in August, complaining that it was inconvenient and that he was going home to live.

Hogan is a stenographer, according to the bill.

Wife's Pitiful Note Makes Convict Flee

Despondent After Reading Letter, Federal 'Trusty' Runs Away, but Is Caught.

Made despondent by the pitiful tone of a letter he received from his wife, Charles F. Vick, a "trusty" prisoner in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, ran away Saturday afternoon when he was sent outside the walls in charge of a cartload of farm produce.

Within a few hours, however, he was caught near Henrico, a small station on the Southern Railway several miles south of the prison, by a Mr. Clarke, who volunteered his services to Warden W. H. Moyer in pursuing the fugitive.

Vick had not doffed his prison clothes and was easily detected. He made no resistance. Vick was sent here from Richmond, Va., on the charge of robbing a postoffice.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

UNDERWOOD FOR RETAINING DUTY ON MANGANESE

Two Tariff Conferees Hold Out for Protecting Product Controlled by Steel Trust.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Chairman Underwood, of the Ways and Means Committee, and A. Mitchell Palmer, both of whom represent States where the Steel Trust has extensive plants, insist that a duty shall be placed on ferro-manganese. This is the product controlled absolutely in this country by the Steel Trust. The Independents must buy it abroad and pay the duty. The item was discussed by the tariff conferees again to-day.

The House members demand a duty on the ground that the revenue is needed. The Senate insists upon keeping the product on the free list because the Steel Trust refuses to sell it to the Independents. The House rate of 15 per cent is equivalent to $8 a ton. The high protective Aldrich-Payne law assesses a duty of only $2.50 a ton.

Senate conferees are asking why the House insists so keenly on this item of vital importance to the Steel Trust, and the House conferees say "we need the revenue." The indications, after to-day's session of the committee, were that a small duty would be the compromise.

Wine Fight Settled.

The big fight between the California, Ohio and Missouri wine growers on the liquor schedule was settled to-day by eliminating entirely the Senate amendment. The proposition is to be referred to a joint committee of the Finance and Ways and Means Committees, with instructions to report a bill at the next session dealing with the whole problem.

The elimination of the imposition of the brandy tax on the California product and the special tax of 25 cents a gallon on the Eastern product cuts off upward of $7,000,000 estimated revenue, which, added to the $2,500,000 on bananas to be restored to the free list on the order of the President, shows a loss thus far in the Senate bill of almost $10,000,000 in revenues.

Senate conferees are counting on this to persuade the House managers to agree to the Senate's increase on the higher grades of cotton textiles. This subject was up for discussion the greater part of the day. The Senate made a reclassification creating a differential of 2 1-2 per cent as between plain and colored threads, yarns and cloths. No conclusion was reached on the cotton schedule.

Wheat Clause Debated.

The disputed question of the countervailing duty on wheat was discussed and then passed over, each side standing firm.

Shortly after 6 o'clock to-night the conferees completed the cotton and flax schedules with the exception of the paragraph covering the rates on threads and yarns used in the manufacture of cotton cloths and on cloths themselves.

The rates on stockings were increased slightly over those made by the Senate, which were a little in excess of the House provisions.

Harpist Singers Plan to Spread Old Gospel Hymns

Taint of Ragtime Seen in Modern Church Music

1,000 Delegates to Musical Association Convention Will Close Sessions at Auditorium Today.

With more than 1,000 delegates and visitors in attendance at the Auditorium, the Sacred Harp Musical Association will enter this morning on the third and last day of its annual convention. The sessions will close this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Colonel J. S. James, of Atlanta, has been elected president of the organization for the twelfth consecutive time, and plans have been adopted at this convention for the spreading of the old-time gospel melodies on a scale never attempted before.

Delegates are at the large gathering from States as far distant as Texas. Georgia, of course, is the most largely represented, but singers are here in goodly numbers from Alabama, Florida, Tennessee, Louisiana and North and South Carolina. The meeting will be held again in Atlanta in 1914.

The members of this unique musical organization hold the opinion that the church music of to-day is badly tainted with operatic, secular and ragtime strains, and they are setting forth with no inconsiderable zest to demonstrate that the old-time church music of their forefathers is the best, after all. Modern musical composition, they maintain, serves to drive away instead of to promote religion and religious feeling.

They rehearsed yesterday with all the fervor and spirit of the camp meeting days many of the songs that are contained in their hymnal, a book compiled especially for their own use.

They employ the so-called fournote system which was originated by their ancestors before musical instruments in churches came into vogue in the South. The majority of the songs they sing were contained in the Sacred Harp book compiled by B. F. White in 1844. With slight revisions and additions, this is the hymnal used to-day.

"We wish to reproduce the gospel music written in the South before the war and to immortalize it in its original form," explained C. J. Griggs, vice president, last night. "Most of the delegates here are familiar with the other forms of music. Not a few of them, in fact, are instructors in the more modern music, but they wish to preserve the old melodies that their fathers sang years ago."

The rapid growth of the organization, which had its birth in Atlanta thirteen years ago, has rendered the care of the large conventions a serious problem and caused the introduction of a resolution yesterday by M. D. Farris, one of the founders, in which it was proposed to divide the expense of the convention up among the districts represented instead of leaving it all for the convention city.

STICKY TEXAS ROADS STALL PATHFINDER

Transcontinental Tourist Forced to Turn Back After Short Trip Out of Town.

WEST, TEXAS, Sept. 13.—Pathfinder Ferguson struck a serious obstacle in the Southern transcontinental tour this afternoon when he attempted to make his way from West to Hillsboro, sixteen miles.

Mr. Ferguson was warned he would find the roads impassable. Declaring that seeing is believing, he drove his automobile through a sea of mud for a short distance out of West, but was forced to turn back.

In that distance, he found three cars stalled in the black, waxy mud and more or less patiently waiting for mule teams to pull them out. This section of Texas has been visited by heavy rains during the past three days. Much of the highway is composed of black waxy mud.

"I found the road just as I had been warned it would be," said Mr. Ferguson, with a smile, as he returned to West. "It is impossible to get through at present. I will stay here and await weather developments."

Mr. Ferguson's trip from Waco to West, nineteen miles, earlier in the day, was accomplished easily. Part of the way is gravel and the going was good, despite enormous rainfalls. An enthusiastic welcome awaits Mr. Ferguson when he reaches Hillsboro. He plans to reach Dallas Tuesday.

Deer Poachers in So. Georgia Active

Horns and Butchered Meat Found in Vandals' Tracks on Private Preserves.

THOMASVILLE, Sept. 13.—Reports of recent violations of the game law in this and Grady County are not without foundation. Deer have been found dead in some of the swamps, and horns and pieces of butchered meat have been discovered. Tracks have been found leading into preserves.

Near the Grady County line one place which is well stocked with deer has suffered heavily from these depredations, and the owners are making every effort to find the parties who violated the game law.

Both deer and turkeys are plentiful here this year, and it is expected the hunting will be very fine, and parties who have no respect for the game laws will undoubtedly be prosecuted if caught.

THREATENS TO THROW CHIEF OUT OF OFFICE

Jacksonville Mayor and Police Clash—Fight for Control of Department Grows.

Roach thrown bodily out of his office and another officer substituted in his stead if he did not attend to his own business. Captain Harry Hall also was ordered to attend to his own business by the Mayor.

Both are alleged to have defied the Mayor and told him to take any steps regarding them he wished.

Poetess Enjoys After-Dinner Cigar

Sister of President Lowell, of Harvard, Makes No Attempt to Hide Smoking.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—That Miss Amy Lowell, poetess, sister of President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, made a regular habit of smoking an after-dinner cigar on the deck of the Cunarder Laconia, was the assertion made by her fellow passengers on the vessel, which arrived Wednesday from Liverpool.

No attempt to conceal her penchant for cigars was made by Miss Lowell, these passengers say.

To newspaper men at the dock Miss Lowell admitted that she was interested in suffrage, though she denied any sympathy with the militants and insisted that she supported them very "mildly." Miss Lowell's age, a matter of some discussion among her fellow passengers, is understood to be about 45.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. British Military Authorities Inquire Into Remarkable Air Maneuvers in France.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Inquiries are being made by British military aeroplane agents concerning certain remarkable aerial experiments said to have been made this week at Bordeaux. A corporal in an aeroplane, it is stated, won an altitude race against a dirigible engaged in the French military maneuvers. From its superior height the aeroplane dropped sham projectiles on the airship which in actual warfare would certainly have destroyed the craft at which they were aimed.

Young Husband Objects to Her Calling Him Up Twenty Times a Day.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13.—Because his bride of a month insisted on showering her attentions on him and calling him up over the telephone at his place of business from fifteen to twenty times a day, Elmer C. Mittler, a minor, to-day filed suit for divorce through his next friend.

Mittler, in his petition, declares that these ceaseless telephone calls so provoked his employers that he was discharged and lost a good job which he had held for three years.

THAW'S WAY TO SUPREME COURT PAVED BY WRIT

Fugitive's Counsel Head Off Extradition, and Open Avenue for Appeal to Highest Bench.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 13.—Asking a writ of habeas corpus in the United States District Court this afternoon, counsel for Harry K. Thaw have headed off extradition and paved the way for a possible appeal to the United State Supreme Court.

Judge Aldrich, who granted the application for the writ, to-day made it returnable at Littleton Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Thaw's attorneys were Nathaniel E. Martin, of Concord, and Merrill Shurtleff, of Lancaster.

New York State was not represented by counsel at the hearing. Proceedings were in chambers, none except the judge, his clerk and counsel being admitted.

Besides granting the application for the writ, Judge Aldrich also issued an injunction restraining all parties from interfering in any way with Thaw or with the service from the writ pending the hearing next Tuesday. Copies of the writ were served later in the day at Colebrook on Sheriff Drew, Attorney General Tuttle and William Travers Jerome.

Sheriff Hornbeck, of Dutchess County, New York, who arrived here last night with extradition papers and a warrant for the arrest of Thaw, could not see Governor Felker to-day.

Jerome Furious as He Hears of Writ.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—William Travers Jerome and his coterie were furious this afternoon when informed of the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus by Judge Aldrich, of the United States District Court at Concord, restraining Sheriff Drew from turning Harry K. Thaw over to the New York authorities.

"The obtaining of this writ is an absolute violation of a gentleman's agreement between Moses I. Grossman and myself," said Jerome angrily. "Furthermore, it is absolutely irregular. Grossman and I agreed that no legal action should be taken until Governor Felker had an opportunity to consider the matter."

Grossman, who has been retained as an extradition expert to fight against the return of Thaw to Matteawan, smiled when Jerome's statement was repeated to him. He said:

Explains Two Writs.

"I secured the writ in order to have two strings to our bow. The way is now open to a test of Thaw's rights either in State or Federal courts. We secured the writ to prevent New York officers from seizing Thaw and rushing him away the moment Governor Felker signed the Executive warrant."

All bets are off now, sai dJerome.

"I won't say what fireworks may be discharged to-night or to-morrow," he continued. "The Thaw people may expect anything from us now, because of the breaking of the agreement. It is not improbable that Grossman will be called up for contempt in seeking to use the Federal courts a sa means to secure what is practically an injunction against the New York officers."

At 6 o'clock to-night Fred A. Hornbeck, Sheriff of Duchess County, arrived here from Albany with the requisition papers signed by Acting Governor Glynn, of New York, and calling on Governor Felker to send Thaw back to New York.

The requisition papers will be taken to Concord Monday and will be presented to Governor Felker on Tuesday.

If Governor Felker sets the date for the hearing later in the week Thaw's presence in Colebrook will be assured for several days.

Petition Cheers Thaw.

Thaw was greatly cheered this evening when he was shown a copy of the petition, which is signed by 2,000 citizens of Colebrook asking Governor Felker not to extradite him.

Thaw gave to a representative of the Hearst newspapers a copy of a letter which was written by his mother to Governor Felker. The letter reads as follows:

To His Excellency Governor Felker:

I address your excellency in the interest of my son, H. K. Thaw, who after being deprived of the liberty the average acquitted man would have immediately received after a verdict of not guilty upon the ground of the defendant's insanity at the time of the commission of the act charged under the indictment, has for five and a half years endured untold hardships and indignities in one of New York's worst penal institutions. Finally despairing of securing fair treatment by habeas corpus proceedings, he took the only recourse left, a flight for the freedom denied through malice.

May I beg that your excellency may secure to him in whatever way proper a fair and impartial hearing during the impending proceedings?

Yours sincerely,
MARY C. THAW.

HARRY THAW is shown being escorted by the Sheriff at Colebrook, N. H., after his forced entrance in the country from which he fled.

PLUNGES 100 FEET, BUT WILL RECOVER

Hindu Falls Headforemost From Smokestack in Savannah. Both Wrists Broken.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—While at work on a smokestack 100 feet in the air at the Atlantic Coast Line docks, Vangaather Cooley, a Hindu, lost his footing and plunged to the ground below.

Both wrists were broken, one knee and his right arm broken, one hip dislocated, and he was hurt about the head. It is said he has a chance to recover.

Other workmen saw Cooley slipping from the high smokestack, on which a new cover was being put. They shouted a warning. The Hindu made frantic efforts to save himself, but in vain. He shot headforemost into space.

He was taken to the United States Marine Hospital for treatment.

SUES PULLMAN COMPANY FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 13.—Because those in charge of the car would not assist her into an upper berth or give her a lower one and would not look after her baggage, which was lost, Mrs. G. C. Mattox, of Kissimmee, has entered suit in Federal Court against the Pullman Company for $10,000.

FIST OF WOMAN ROUTS MASHERS

Pair of Men Routed When Young Matron Resents Their Approach With Blows.

LOGANSPORT, IND., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Jessie James stood on a corner in the business district to-day conversing with her father, John Gingaman, and near by, gazing at her, were grouped five mashers. Mrs. James bade her father good-bye and started away.

"Oh, you chicken! Busy?" cried one of the group.

Wheeling around, Mrs. James stepped back to the group, and smilingly inquired, "Who spoke?"

One of the crowd stepped out and asked: "Where you going?"

Mrs. James slammed her fist against his face and he staggered. Before he could recover she struck again, a fair, straight blow, which put him to the sidewalk.

Then she rushed upon the other four, who crowded against a building. Her attack was so unexpected and forceful that the quartet had felt the effects of her fists before one of them fought back and knocked Mrs. James across the sidewalk and against a mail box.

She stooped, grabbed a loose paving brick and let it fly. It landed on the head of the man she had knocked down, and who had risen and was running away. The others followed and boarded an outgoing interurban car.

From the corner to the place where they took the car a trail of blood marked the passing of the one against whose head Mrs. James' brick collided.

"Sometimes I carry a gun," said Mrs. James to the crowd that gathered about her. "I am glad I did not have it to-day. Hereafter I will carry it, and if I am addressed as I was to-day I'll kill the man who does it."

WALRAVEN TO QUIT RACE FOR COUNCIL SEAT

Seventh Ward Place Now Will Go to Jesse Armistead Without a Contest.

Additional proof of the collapse of the "open town" ticket for Council was given Saturday afternoon in an absolutely reliable report that Dan S. Walraven would withdraw as a candidate for Alderman from the Seventh Ward.

Mr. Walraven wanted to withdraw several days ago in exchange for pledges of support for Police Commissioner from the Seventh Ward, according to authentic gossip. His plans failed for this coup, and when he put up the necessary $95 entrance fee it was thought he was in the fight to the finish.

Mr. Walraven never had announced a platform, but the active efforts in his behalf of T. M. Webb, proprietor of two downtown locker clubs, and the efforts of his friends to get the support of Mayor Woodward and other advocates of a more liberal police policy stamped him as an "open town" man.

Armistead to Get Place.

The Seventh Ward Aldermanic seat now will go to Jesse Armistead without a contest. Strange to say, he had the support of Mayor Woodward and the anti-Woodward faction in Council. He was chairman of the Seventh Ward campaign committee of Aldine Chambers in the last mayoralty election; but also he is president of the Typographical Union, Mayor Woodward's own union. This latter affiliation of Mr. Armistead is said to be the cause of Mayor Woodward's support of him.

Friends of Mr. Walraven had declared that both Mr. Walraven and Mr. Armistead would withdraw from the race in favor of Marcellus Anderson. Mr. Anderson was said to have pledged his support to Mr. Walraven for Police Commissioner. Mr. Armistead kicked out of the game and was conceded to be to a supporter of Fred Lester for Police Commissioner before the Walraven-Anderson supporters realized what was up.

Only a remnant of the "open town" advocates remain in the field. Amos Braselton is making the issue between him and Albert D. Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward a more liberal police policy.

Braselton More Liberal.

"I have no idea of trying to bring back the 'houses in our midst,'" said Mr. Braselton, "but I'll guarantee to support a far more liberal policy than my opponent has."

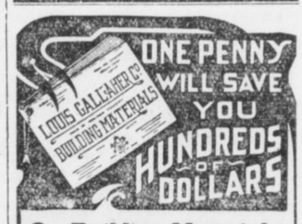
Mr. Thomson has not taken up the challenge as yet, but he declares he will put plenty of ginger into the race before it is over.

Alderman J. E. Everett, for whose seat they are fighting, declared that he was for Counciman Thomson for the Aldermanic place Saturday afternoon.

"I want to thank my friends for efforts to have me re-elected," he said. "City Attorney James L. Mayson advises me that the charter time limit prevents me running again.

"I will take pleasure in casting my vote for Counciman Albert Thomson."

Fight Bitter on Charter.



Interesting as the Councilmanic contests are, they will be set aside until after September 24 for the new charter fight. With an assurance of remaining firmly in the saddle for another year, the old crowd of city officials have started a determined fight to get the new charter adopted.

Mayor Woodward has started out with even more spirit to kill the charter. He declares that it is a "fraud in the name of reform, and that it will intrench the 'ring' more strongly."

On account of his aggressive attitude, the issue has become more or less a Woodward issue. The anti-Woodward element hopes to repudiate the administration of the Mayor by passing this charter over his opposition.

Organist Hall Will Play His Own Works

Free Concert at Auditorium To-day Promises To Be Most Remarkable Ever Heard Here.

An original military march, entitled "Gettysburg Reunion," and dedicated to the heroes of the blue and gray, will be one of the features at the free Sunday concert by Organist Frederick Hall, of Philadelphia, this afternoon at the Auditorium. The program will be in many respects the most remarkable ever offered in Atlanta. Mr. Hall will play two or three of his other compositions.

The other original composition he will play is entitled "Rouen Reminiscence," and is his interpretation of a melody which he heard a barefooted French street urchin singing in one of the narrow winding streets leading up the hill to the great cathedral.

The concert will begin promptly at 4 o'clock, and everybody is invited. Mr. Hall is a candidate for the position of city organist in Atlanta, left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

'YANKEE' ARMY ONCE MORE ON SOUTHERN SOIL

G. A. R. Given Warmest of Dixie's Greetings When Veterans of Blue Arrive for Encampment.

CHATTANOOGA IS CROWDED

Homes Are Thrown Open to Accommodate Soldiers Who Invaded City 50 Years Ago.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Chattanooga has put on her gayest dress, and with flags and bunting, flowers and decorations of all kinds, is today anxiously awaiting the opening of the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic on Monday.

This year's encampment marks an auspicious occasion in the history of the G. A. R., for it is not only the first reunion of Northern veterans ever held in the real South, but it is also the centennial of some of the most famous battles fought during the Civil War in the vicinity of this city.

Fifty years ago the armies of the North and South entered into deadly combat on the fields of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga falls on the last two days of the encampment, September 19 and 20.

Already the city is crowded with thousands of veterans and visitors, and each incoming train adds to the number. Although no official figures have been given out, it is estimated that more than 200,000 strangers will be here by Monday morning, when the city of Chattanooga tenders an official reception to the visiting veterans at the Hotel Patten.

Commander-in-Chief Arrives.

The G. A. R. commander-in-chief, Alfred B. Beers, of Bridgeport, Conn., has arrived and will take a prominent part in the reception and the events of the following days. This reception will introduce the visitors to the citizens of Chattanooga and will be an elaborate social function, one of the largest that Chattanooga has ever undertaken. A committee composed of leading citizens, under the chairmanship of the Hon. A. W. Chambliss, a prominent member of the local bar, has been at work for some time arranging the details of the reception.

The Chattanooga Encampment Association, in conjunction with the local chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and similar organizations, have seen to all arrangements for the housing of the veterans and visitors during the encampment.

Because of the limited hotel accommodations the home of private citizens have been thrown open. Most of the arriving visitors had secured their accommodations several weeks ago and they are being conducted to their places of residence for the week with the utmost dispatch. The same plan of caring for the vast crowds as was used during the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans last May is being pursued in administering to the wants of their one-time enemies.

Confederates on Committees.

Many prominent Confederate veterans have served on the various committees, and the success of the encampment, which is already assured, is due in no small measure to the work of these veterans, who have thrown themselves into the task of entertaining the men who once faced them on the battlefield. The encampment will in a way be a reunion for the veterans of both the North and South. General Bennet H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, who was largely instrumental in securing the peace memorial which will be dedicated in this city in 1915, will in all likelihood be a visitor at the present encampment.

Everything possible has been done to make the week a gala one. Many special features for the entertainment of the veterans and visitors have been arranged, among them being the Battle Above the Clouds," reproduced in fireworks on Lookout Mountain. This spectacle, taking place on the bench or shelf halfway up the side of the mountain, where during the conflict both sides were enveloped in a cloud which obscured the view and prevented the contestants from seeing each other, will be visible for miles from the surrounding country.

Another feature in the fireworks line has been decided upon for Signal Point on Walden's Ridge, north of the city. This point was used as a signal station by the Union army in 1863, and a large signal fire will blaze forth from this point every night during the encampment. The fire will be visible from four States.

Sham Battle a Feature.

Another event will be the sham battle on the field of Chickamauga between regiments of the regular army, concluding at historic Snodgrass Hill, where 50 years ago Generals Thomas, Brannan, Steedman and others checked the advances of the Confederates and saved the Union army.

On Saturday, the last day of the encampment, the survivors of the battle of Chickamauga will meet on the battlefield at 10 o'clock in the morning at a point where the regimental monuments of the Twentieth Brigade of the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps are located.

Georgia Inventor Plans Flight Across Atlantic

Passenger Airship Service to Europe Proposed

Multiplane Intended to Make Regular Schedule Over Ocean Is Being Built in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A Georgia man, with ambitious vision, is planning an aeroplane trip across the Atlantic Ocean. The time for the venture is not far distant, and the busy hammering and filing that can be heard in the workshop near Savannah tells that every preparation is being made.

It is Captain Matthew A. Batson, a retired army officer, who will make this challenge to destiny. He has been working for years toward this end, and has perfected a unique type of flying machine that is popularly known as the Batson hydro-aeroplane.

So certain are Captain Batson and his friends that the daring venture will be successful that a concern has been organized, known as the Batson Aero Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $300,000, "to operate between Savannah, Ga., and Liverpool England, a line of passenger-carrying air craft," according to the words of the charter.

Captain Batson is president of the company. The line will not be established for little more than a year, but there will be trial flights a-plenty before that time, as the plans state, at Thunderbolt, Brickyard Island, on the Wilmington River, where the plant is located.

Models Fly Faithfully.

The first flight of the hydro-aeroplane will be made early. The models of the machine have flown faithfully. The entire machine is now assembled, the flying section having been fixed to the boat hull several days ago.

It is the intention of Captain Batson to navigate the craft into the Wilmington River, and to make the first trial flights in the direction of Wilmington Island. The tests of the airship will be visible from the Casino, Thunderbolt, and it is expected that thousands of people will make the trip to the resort to see the big machine as it takes to the air.

Of a size to permit the carrying of sufficient fuel for a two days' run, the craft will not have to descend to replenish its supply on the long flight from Savannah to New York, which will be made directly after the first trial flight. Then, circumstances being favorable, the trip across the Atlantic will be attempted.

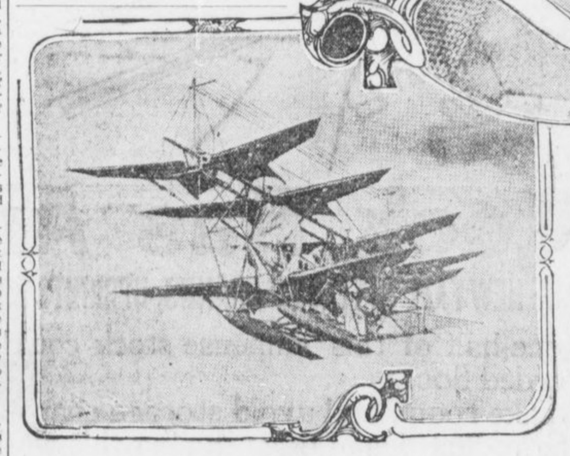
It is announced that the perfected Batson hydro-aeroplane will have a speed of 100 miles an hour, with a probability of making better time even than that under favorable conditions. Its eleven-foot propellers make 1,000 revolutions a minute. The original machine, including the expense of putting up the aerodrome, will cost about $50,000. Captain Batson declares, however, that other machines of the same type will cost only $20,000.

Seeks Commercial Navigation.

Altogether, the intent of the man in the Savannah shop is to render practical the commercial navigation of the air. He is a mechanical engineer, acquiring thus his scientific knack. He is a daring soldier, the organizer of the effective Filipino Scouts, and comes thus honestly by his fearlessness. For years he has been at work in perfecting the machine with which the bold experiments will be made, and in which he hopes to conquer the air.

Plants for the construction of the machines will be scattered over the United States, according to the arrangements made by the company. The completed machines, however, will not be offered for indiscriminate sale, but will be used for passenger traffic under the auspices of the company.

The Batson triple-motored aero yacht, as the machine is technically known, will carry about three tons dead weight load. Instead of being comprised of a single plane or a pair, the buoying area is distributed over a large number of wings of moderate size. These are attached to the machine chamber in a way so as to yield to the extra stresses caused when the machine encounters the great "boulders" in the air, just as the springs of an automobile yield when an uneven road is entered.



Single Pilot Governs.

The peculiar construction of the wing is such that the air currents are guided under the wings inwardly toward the body of the machine, where they are banked under the base portion, thus bringing the greatest stress on the part where the weight is carried. Such is the arrangement that the essential "angle of incidence" of all the wings can be governed by a single pilot, even to such an extent that should all the engines be stopped the wings will be automatically set at a safe gliding angle, the course of which is easily controlled.

Captain Batson takes the success of his invention as a matter of course. "It is far more wonderful," he said, "that men should literally take their lives in their hands and go from Paris to London through the air, over sea and land in their unavoidably unsteady craft than that the Batson aero yacht should, with so much greater carrying capacity and complete automatic stability, be able to go longer distances in perfect safety. A great loss of life appears to be inevitable with aeroplanes of the dangerous and unstable type now in general use, and though the recent Titanic disaster shows that it is impossible to foresee every contingency, yet it is a safe and comforting prediction that because of its automatic stability no such accidents as those which hitherto have happened can possibly occur to a Batson multiplane."

Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. retired, of Savannah, who is the inventor of a multiplane which he declares will make aerial commercial navigation possible.

Captain Batson's multiplane, in which he plans to fly across the Atlantic from Savannah to England.

GHOSTLY LIGHT PUTS TERROR IN MOUNTAINEERS

Government Asked to Send Science Expert to Investigate Flaming Uncanny Orb.

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 13.—Ghostly in appearance, a strange light, seen almost nightly, is gaining materially in brilliancy and has so greatly excited the people of Burke County, in the mountains of Western North Carolina, that an official request has been made at Washington for an investigation by an expert.

R. T. Claywell first saw the strange light about a month ago when he and a party of friends were spending the night at Cold Water.

"There is something uncanny about that light. The folks up in that neighborhood can not fathom it, and we want a Government scientist sent to solve the mysterious glow," said Mr. Claywell.

Arose From Mountain.

"The night I first saw the strange light I was out in the open on Rattlesnake Knob. It was exactly 10:05 o'clock. I remember that well. What first attracted our attention were two hazy lights across the valley on Brown Mountain.

"We watched it with wonder and awe. In a few minutes we saw a brighter light appear at the foot of Brown Mountain, where Upper Creek cuts it at Joy. The light appeared to be swinging, pendulum-like, and then went upward a distance of about 200 feet.

"When it first appeared the light seemed to be round and yellow. It gained steadily in brightness, becoming red as it went upward. When it reached its greatest height it appeared to be like a ball of fire.

Did Not Shed a Ray.

"But the strange thing about it was that the freak of nature did not cast off one ray of light. The space around it was as dark as ever. All this added to its ghostly appearance.

"It was across the valley from us at a distance of about twelve miles. It had rained that day and there were a few clouds still hanging about. When the strange light reached a height of what seemed from our distance to be about 1,200 feet it went behind one of these clouds ,and we did not see it any more that night.

"It was a strange experience and many of those in our party came near fainting."

Already the news of this novel contest has attracted wide attention, and it stands unique in the annals of exploitation endeavor, both because of the magnitude of the prize and the fact that it is offered on behalf of the people of an entire region—the biggest booster organization in the world.

A preliminary competition with a prize of $500 will be held to secure the best poem or words for the song, and then the composers of the world will be invited to set these words to music with a prize of $2,000 for the best music. Here is the text of the club's announcement:

"This total prize of twenty-five hundred dollars (2,500) will be divided as follows:

"Five hundred dollars ($500) will be paid for the best poem suitable for musical setting and having a ringing chorus for a multitude of voices. The winning poem, with chorus, will be the words for which music will be required.

"Two thousand dollars ($2,000) will be paid for the best melody or music score for the poem and chorus receiving the award.

"The contest for the poem will close November 1, 1913. Immediately upon the decision of the judges, the poem receiving the award will be given the widest possible publicity in this country and abroad, and the composers of the world will be invited to prepare music to fit the winning poem and chorus, and thus compete for the two thousand dollar music prize, in accordance with the rules to be announced upon the publication of the award for the poem."

HAWAIIAN LINERS PLAN FREQUENT TRIPS TO PANAMA

Company Will Send Big Vessels Through Canal Every 36 Hours, It Is Announced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company will send a steamship through the Panama Canal every 36 hours next year, and that instead of sailing every five days they will send their vessels out every three days, was part of the program announced here to-day by the company.

The statement was provoked because an issued report stated that the American-Hawaiian line was considerably "overbuilt."

The statement of the company follows:

"The fact of having excess tonnage far ahead of the opening of the canal does not disconcert us and the American-Hawaiian line is proud of the fact that their fleet with a capacity of 270,000 tons will be ready in time. When the canal route is used we shall maintain a schedule of one steamer sailing from New York every three days.

"It is true that we have chartered the American and the California to the American and Cuban Steamship Company and we believe these steamships will make several trips to Brazil. These are the ships we constructed when the company was feeling its way, and their arrival in the South American ports will place on view the American flag, the lack of which in foreign waters has been commented on many times."

Little details are the biggest things in Printing!

Small mechanical imperfections in the finishing of a fine piece of printing puts the whole job "out o' gear."

The edges of a Booklet, for instance, trimmed at a slight angle out of parallel, makes the customer "see dirks and cleavers."

Skilled workmen and the highest type of machinery in the BYRD bindery make this imperfection an impossibility. The BYRD PRINTERY checks details as they go from hand to hand, with the pleasing results of perfect printing.

40 CITIES WILL FORM GEORGIA CIVIC CHAMBER

Atlanta to Send 50 Delegates to Macon Meeting to Organize State Commercial Club.

Forty Georgia cities will send delegations Tuesday to the meeting at Macon which will organize the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Atlanta will send 50 representative men in a special car. Waycross and Albany also will send specials.

Indications are there will be 400 civic leaders at Macon to launch the State Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to do for Georgia what the Atlanta Chamber has done for the city.

The meeting will be called to order at the Hotel Dempsey, Macon, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by C. J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 o'clock at the hotel, with the Macon Chamber as host. An afternoon session will complete the deliberations.

There are 70 such State-wide development organizations in the United States. Texas has furnished the model for the proposed Georgia chamber.

Officers are to be elected at the Macon meeting, including a president and about 50 vice presidents, representing all sections of Georgia.

Speakers will include Richard Edmonds, of the Manufacturers' Record; M. V. Richards, of the Southern Railway, and McLaine Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers' Association.

Many Cities to Take Part.

The following cities will send representatives:

Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Baxley, Brunswick, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Clarkston, Crawfordville, College Park, Columbus, Dublin, Douglas, Dawsonville, Eatonton, Fitzgerald, Griffin, Kirkwood, LaGrange, Lithonia, McDonough, Macon, Madison, Moultrie, Newnan, Ocilla, Springfield, Swainsboro, Toccoa, Union City, Vienna, Waycross, Hawkinsville, Statesboro and Mount Pleasant.

One hundred members of the live Macon Chamber of Commerce have been named on a special committee to greet and entertain the delegates.

A number of the leaders in the industrial development of Georgia have been mentioned for the presidency of the State Chamber, but so far no one seems sure of the position.

The executive committee is authorized to appoint a vice president for every county in the State and after careful consideration about 50 vice presidents have been selected. Other selections will be made during the next few days.

The executive committee includes C. J. Haden, Atlanta, chairman; P. M. Atkinson, Madison; R. D. Cole, Newnan; J. S. Davis, Albany; G. W. Deen, Waycross; J. A. McCord, Atlanta; W. H. Shippen, Ellijay; C. A. Wickersham, College Park.

DeKalb County To Be Well Represented.

DeKalb County, headed by Kirkwood and Decatur, will send an enthusiastic delegation to the State Chamber of Commerce meeting at Macon Tuesday, with the intention of playing an important part in the proceedings. The Kirkwood Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting to arouse zeal in behalf of the proposal, and the result was a list of formal pledges of members who will attend.

They include R. F. Gilliem, John L. Armstrong, Dr. E. L. Daniel, William E. Saunders, Dr. C. H. House, J. T. Viley, E. M. Willingham, John Lowe Smith, O. O. Ray, H. C. Burr, J. A. Norman, R. C. Ozmer, J. P. Ellis, Joe Tillinghast and J. A. Earl.

Decatur will send a party in automobiles. Lithonia and Clarkston will send delegates, and, altogether, there probably will be 75 representatives from DeKalb at Macon.

The Drum and Bugle Corps of Decatur Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will be in the party.

Borden Heiress to Pick Own College

Will Solve Question That Parted Parents by Going to Vassar or Wellesley.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Miss Ramona Borden, 18-year-old daughter of Gail Borden, the multi-millionaire condensed milk manufacturer, whose disappearance from a sanitarium in Ponponton Lake, N. J., in April caused a nation-wide search to be made for her by her father, plans to enter either Wellesley or Vassar this fall.

The failure of her parents to agree on a school for her is said to have led to their agreement to live apart. Now the girl has solved the problem herself.

Because she has been the brunt of this family strife, Ramona has come to be known among her friends as the "poor little rich girl." She has written to her New York friends.

"I have ceased to work and be troubled," she says. "Through this summer I have learned to laugh and be happy."

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

(From The Family Physician.)

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had of any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Advt.

Polaire Adds to Her Ugliness With Nose Ring

Famous French Actress to Wear It in Atlanta

Mademoiselle Polaire, famous French actress, wearing her nose ring. She will appear with this ornament when she plays in Atlanta this winter.

Fascinating Artist Has No Hope That Ornament Will Be Generally Accepted Fad.

Mademoiselle Polaire, being by common consent the ugliest theatrical star alive and the most fascinating withal, has an absolute right to wear what she pleases. It is only when a woman has an open pride in her lack of pulchritude that she has achieved a sort of free-will condition as regards clothes and ornaments.

And because she is an independent in matters of raiment the fascinating Polaire is going to show Atlanta something that will open the eyes of every man and woman within its limits—she is coming to Atlanta, you know, with Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, the dancers.

Her particular innovation is a nose ring—a daring, unprecedented nose ring, suggestive of nothing so much as a Fiji Islander. But then the turkey trot is hardly suggestive of the art of terpsichore, so it is not an unbelievable thing that Mademoiselle Polaire's nose ring will become—but no, American girls mean no harm by any of their fads, and even their critics vow that they have common sense enough and to spare.

There will be no nose ring fad, however much the fascinating Polaire flaunts her badge of eccentricity before their faces.

Polaire, it is announced, never dreams that her own freak fashion will become the vogue. Perhaps that is why she adopted it. At least, she will have something to herself.

But Atlanta will have an opportunity of judging, and perhaps if it likes can place an order for early winter delivery.

St. Paul's Church to Have Home-Coming

Incident to Big Revival Services Under Rev. L. B. Bridges, Noted Evangelist.

St. Paul's Methodist Church of Atlanta will hold a home-coming September 21 as an incident to the big revival services under the Rev. L. B. Bridges, the noted evangelist. Besides the invitation to the general public, a call will be made on all former members of the church to return to the fold for the one day.

It is expected that eight or ten clergymen will be in attendance on the home-coming. Rev. B. F. Fraser is present pastor of the church, under whose pastorate remarkable development has been achieved in the last year.

GRAND JURY TO BEGIN CRAWFORD INVESTIGATION

Inquisitorial Body Will in All Probability Take Up Poison Case This Week.

Grand jurors of Fulton County will this week in all probability begin their investigation of the death of the late Josua B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose widow has been charged with poisoning him in order to get his riches barely a month after their marriage in 1909.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, is at her Peachtree street home, serenely confident that if the Grand Jury should indict her she would be promptly acquitted by a trial jury. She declares the bringing of the charge of poisoning against her was done merely as a new move of the heirs of the aged real estate operator, who are fighting for the $250,000 fortune that was left to her.

Poison Presence Admitted.

The report of Dr. H. F. Harris that traces of morphine poisoning were found in the stomach of the deceased is not denied by Mrs. Crawford or her counsel. They simply contend that this drug was prescribed for Crawford during his last illness, and declare that the attending physician will take the stand and testify that he administered the opiate to relieve the aged man's pain.

The Crawford heirs, however, take an entirely different view of the matter. They charge a deep-laid conspiracy on the part of Mrs. Crawford and Fred Lumb, a barber now in New York, and who is sought by the heirs as an accomplice.

Their contention is that when J. B. Crawford, then in his seventies, went to St. Augustine, Fla., in 1909 in search of health and took board with Mary Belle Bishop, the woman then and there planned to wed the old man and as soon as she could make him will her his property, poison him, and then wed Lumb.

The contesting heirs are nieces and nephews of the man for whose wealth they are fighting, and though the will contest has been on practically since the death of Crawford, it was not until a few months ago that the poison charge was made and the body was exhumed for examination of the stomach.

Sheriff Issues Warrant.

A Coroner's jury at Carrollton, the old home of the Crawfords, returned a verdict declaring that the deceased had come to his death from poison administered by his wife.

It was then that the Sheriff of Carroll County mailed a warrant to the Sheriff of Fulton for the arrest. When officers went to serve it, Mrs. Crawford was not at her Atlanta home, but she afterward surrendered to the Sheriff here and promptly furnished the $6,000 bond required.

In addition to the poison charge the nieces and nephews have alleged that undue influence was exercised by Mrs. Crawford to have herself made the chief beneficiary in the will, and witnesses have been introduced at the will hearing to prove that at the time he uttered the instrument, Crawford was not only mentally unbalanced through senility, but was constantly under the influence of alcohol.

MAYORS URGE U. S. CONTROL OF MISSISSIPPI

Every Section Joins South for Federal Protection Against River's Spring Floods.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—The Mayors of cities in more than half of the States of the Union have come out for Government aid in the protection of the Mississippi Valley States from floods. This sweeping indorsement of the Ransdell-Humphreys bill, which provides $60,000,000 for levees and comes up at the December session of Congress, is one of the interesting exhibits of the work the Mississippi River Levee Association is doing in the interest of Government levees for the lower Mississippi River.

Out of the replies already received not one chief executive has expressed the slightest disapproval of the proposition. The Mayors of cities in the far Western States, in New England, in the Middle West, in the great northern section and from every Southern State have come out unanimously for the project. Each letter shows an unusual familiarity with the subject. The people of California, Massachusetts and Montana seem to have been studying the flood proposition with as much interest as the residents of the States immediately affected by floods.

One of the most interesting letters is one from the chief executive of Gallipolis, Ohio, a city which almost was sacrificed to the Ohio floods of 1913. Mayor Cadot, of that city, says in part:

"While our own valley suffers greatly from floods, I believe the greater damage is done in the Mississippi Valley, and I earnestly hope you will succeed in securing the required appropriation from the Government, and be able to begin active operations at the earliest possible moment.

"In my opinion, the levee plan is the best remedy for overflow that has yet been proposed."

The Mayor of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of your work and believe that it is fair and just that the National Government should take up the burden and give you whatever aid is needed."

The Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I heartily concur in the views expressed in your communication regarding the spring floods of the lower Mississippi. I believe the Government should lend every aid possible to protect the people of this vast territory and that steps in this direction should be taken at the earliest possible moment."

These are only a few of the numerous letters that have been received. They illustrate, however, the sentiment toward the levee proposition and the widespread interest in the matter of floods.

Commerce Chosen For Press Meeting

Editors of Weeklies Hear Rival Towns' Claims for Honor of Entertaining Them.

Commerce was selected as the next meeting place of the Georgia Weekly Press Association at a meeting of the executive committee of the organization in the office of H. M. Stanley at the State Capitol Saturday. The claims of Covington were also presented to the committee by a delegation from that town. The committee waited until 2:30 o'clock for the delegation from Madison, which was also after the 1914 meeting, but it failed to appear.

The next gathering of the editors will be held July 14 and 15. The following officers were present at the meeting: P. T. McCutcheon, of Franklin, president; C. E. Benns, of Butler, secretary; B. H. Hardy, Barnesville; J. F. Shannon, Commerce; H. M. Stanley, and Rush V. Burton, Lavonia. The winning delegation from Commerce was headed by J. F. Shannon, of The Commerce News, and Paul T. Harber, of The Commerce Observer.

New Cotton Resists Black Root Disease

State Entomologists Will Have 4,000 Bushels of Its Seed Ready by Spring.

Reports received by the Department of Entomology at the State Capitol from Southwest Georgia are to the effect that the black root is causing a great deal of damage. This cotton disease is costing the Georgia cotton planters hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, and every effort is being made to check its ravages.

The Department of Entomology has developed a variety of cotton seed which is resistant to the black root and reports from the planters who use this variety are to the effect that it is not suffering from the blight. The department will have 4,000 bushels of this seed next spring for distribution.

Alkahest President Goes to Convention

S. Russell Bridges Is Off to Attend Annual National Lyceum Convention in Chicago.

The convention of the International Association is the one which promised to meet in Atlanta this year, and then changed to Chicago because a great many of the artists were unable to make the trip to the South.

OLIVER CLAIMS TWIN BROTHER IS MAN WANTED

Bank Wrecker and Bigamist Is Turned Over to Mississoppi Authorities by State of Georgia.

ALBANY, Sept. 13.—After five days spent in hearing the habeas corpus case of L. C. Harding, alias A. D. Oliver, the Climax bank wrecker, Judge Clayton Jones at 4:55 o'clock this afternoon turned the prisoner over to the officers from the State of Mississippi, who had a requisition properly signed by the Governor of that State.

Harding, undes the alias of Oliver, went to Climax, Ga., in December, 1908, claiming to be looking for a large tract of timber land to purchase. While there he was attracted by the opportunities that presented themselves. In a remarkably short time he had established himself from a financial standpoint. He carried on his dealings in true Wallingford style until a bank that he secured control of failed. When the bank was on the verge of bankruptcy, he claims to have started to New York to make more financial deals, but was arrested.

After much litigation, he was held on the chrage of bigamy, he having married in Climax while he had a living wife in another State. He was sentenced for a term of years, which ended only five days ago. When about to be released, the United States Government applied for the prisoner, as did the State of Mississippi. After consultation, the United States officers withdrew their request and the officers of Mississippi pressed their application.

Oliver claimed that he was not the man that had escaped from jail in Mississippi, but a twin brother that resembled him very much. Pictures were procured from the State penitentiary of Ohio, where Oliver also has been confined, and Bertillion measurements were sent. While there was some slight variation in the measurements, the general stature was the same and the marks on the body were sufficient to convince the judge that he was the man wanted.

Oliver had worked up one of the best stories that has ever been heard in a Georgia courtroom, and no doubt would have caused a jury of twelve men to have stayed locked up for a long time, as he had gained the sympathy of at least two-thirds of his hearers.

As soon as Judge Jones ruled that he was the man wanted in Mississippi, the papers were signed promptly, and within five minutes he was in an automobile, handcuffed to a deputy sheriff from Aberdeen, Miss., being taken from the State.

FILIPINOS FAR FROM READY FOR SELF-RULE; PROOF IS ON THE WAY

Bishop Fallows Declares That Dean Worcester, Student of Islands, Returning From Archipelago, Will Show Fallacy of Native Government.

In view of the departure of Burton Harrison, the new Wilson Governor General of the Philippines, who sailed Wednesday from San Francisco for Manila, and the declared intention of the Democratic Congress to give to the Filipinos absolute independence eight years hence, the following article, by Bishop Fallows, is illuminating.

Bishop Fallows traveled 10,000 miles among the islands to satisfy himself of conditions there and he concludes that independence for the Filipinos now or within a few years would be a calamity. His article follows:

By SAMUEL FALLOWS.

(Bishop of Chicago and Noted Educational Authority.)

There shortly comes from the Philippines a man who has a valuable and timely message for the American people. He is Dean C. Worcester, recently Secretary of the Interior the American who has had the longest and most intimate contact with Philippine affairs.

Many years before our war with Spain, when to the popular American mind Manila and the Philippines were indefinite and hazy points on the map, Mr. Worcester made two extended tours of the archipelago. As a member of scientific expeditions, gathering data and specimens, he twice traveled the length of the group given into our keeping, and when President McKinley needed the counsel and assistance of men of knowledge, Dean Worcester was one of the first to whom he turned.

President McKinley appointed him a member of the Schurmann Commission, and when William Howard Taft was chosen to found civil government in the Philippines he continued him as member of the commission, which remains to this day as the senior governing body in the islands.

Mr. Worcester was made Secretary of the Interior in the Government instituted by McKinley and approved by Congress and continuously retained the post until a week ago Monday, when he resigned to make way for a man chosen by the Wilson Administration.

In this capacity he organized and directed the Bureaus of Health, Land, Forestry and Science, besides becoming the guardian of the million non-Christian tribesmen numbered among our wards in the Orient. Taft, Wright, Ide, Smith, Moses and other veteran administrators of the Philippine Government finished their labors and passed to other fields, but Worcester remained fourteen years.

Notable Service to Nation.

Dean Worcester's service to the nation has been a notable one in many respects, but his guardianship of the wild men, an extraordinary tale of service and adventure, must make the largest appeal to us at home. The Spanish Government and the Christian peoples of the Philippines appear to have given themselves little concern as to their wild neighbors. A few hardy and devoted missionaries ventured among them, but contact seems to have been largely accidental and occasional.

The largest groups of non-civilized peoples inhabit the province of North Luzon, living in wildly picturesque and formerly inaccessible mountains. These superb but primitive peoples have engaged in inter-tribal warfare throughout their history and this terrible condition was accentuated by the repulsive practice of taking and preserving as house ornaments the heads of their enemies. From this custom they derived the name of headhunters. Their feuds were both tribal and personal, and all the people were touched by the malign hand of vengeance and fear.

Rapacity had marked the attitude of the Christian Filipino in his dealings with these unhappy children of the mountains, and when Worcester and his men went among them they, too, were received as enemies. Their first greetings were challenges to battles, and it was only through superb courage that they won a hearing in the first place, while endless patience and infinite tact were necessary to the establishment of the confidence and friendship which has resulted in the acceptance by the wild people of civilized law.

Worcester not only won and retained the friendship of the wild people, but brought peace to them and turned their thoughts and hands to the more useful things of life. Warring tribes were brought together in friendly relationship and the rivalry of athletics took the place of forays. Schools were started, industry and husbandry encouraged and the once inaccessible mountains were bisected and crosscut with roads and trails, largely constructed by the wild men themselves. Occasionally a head is taken, but the custom may be said to have almost disappeared.

Under the old order the men were so busy fighting that farming was neglected and frequently large numbers of people were in want. The termination of warfare, individual and collective, has sent thousands of men back to the fields and the food supply is now always ample to meet all the needs of the people and leave a considerable annual surplus.

Gained Their Friendship.

The wild tribe relationship in the Philippines offered at the beginning a veritable hornets' nest of trouble for the United States Government, the possibilities of which are strikingly illustrated by the experience of the Japanese in Formosa and the Dutch in Java, where costly and endless war has been waged against the hillmen. Had the die been cast for war rather than peace with the hillmen of the Philippines, it would have been a formidable and endless task to conquer and control them. The tribes are numerous and their men are big, upstanding fellows, born of forebears who never knew peace. Fear is not a quality of their warriors, and they would have been a troublesome enemy.

In gaining their friendship Worcester and his men rendered large service to their country and the cause of civilization and set in motion a work that is unique in the whole relationship between civilization and savagery. These peoples have great possibilities of development and there falls to the successors of Dean Worcester in the Philippines an important duty to carry forward the task upon which he made such a splendid beginning.

The most important relationship that Dean Worcester has had toward the rest of the Filipino people has been on the side of sanitation and science.

It was necessary to wage the battle from many sides. The first requisite was an up-to-date scientific institution that would furnish the best fighting material, and there was created, under Worcester's direction, a great laboratory that has won more acclaim in Europe than it has in the United States.

Another necessity was a modern school of medicine and surgery that would train Filipinos to minister to the needs of their own people, and such an institution was founded. Hospitals were another dire necessity, and these were created. Clinics were another need, and these were provided. Nurses were needed everywhere, and training schools for young Filipino women were started.

Thousands of lepers were scattered throughout the archipelago, and these were slowly gathered in a great colony founded at Culion Island. Slowly through the years there was a steady gain against disease and the opposition of the people; only a decade was necessary finally to turn the tide. Hospitals and clinics which once aroused the fear of the people and were deserted are now unable to meet their daily demands. Manila General Hospital is now the largest and busiest institution in the capital and the Manila Free Clinic has grown to be the third largest in the world.

Dean Will Tell of Filipinos.

Freed from long official service and the restraints which it consciously and unconsciously imposes, Dean Worcester is coming home to talk to the country about the Philippines. He says that he intends to travel from coast to coast telling what he knows about the islands and their peoples, and his message is going to be worth hearing. He knows more about his subject than any other living man.

Mr. Worcester has prepared a series of nine addresses, and their subjects are as follows: "Among the Wild Tribes of the Philippines," "The Headhunters of Northern Luzon," "What the United States Has Done for the Wild Tribes of the Philippine Islands," "Forest Resources of the Philippine Islands," "Commercial Possibilities of the Philippine Islands," "Health Work in the Philippine Islands," "Educating the Filipinos," "Modern Manila," and "Is Philippine Independence a Present Possibility?"

To supplement and illuminate his lectures Mr. Worcester has made an extraordinary collection of Philippine motion pictures. These cover in striking manner the wild tribes, as well as many other features of island life.

604 Greenville Ave., Staunton, Va. — "My head broke out in pimples which festered. It itched me so that I would scratch it till my head got almost in a raw sore. My hair came out gradually and it was dry and lifeless. Dandruff fell on my coat collar till I was ashamed of it. My head had been that way all summer, itching and burning till I couldn't sleep in any peace.

"I tried salves but it looked like they made it worse. I got ——— but it did me no good so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of the Cuticura Ointment and you don't know what a relief they gave me. In two weeks my head was well." (Signed) J. L. Smith, Oct. 28, 1912.

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. GEMS SEIZED BY SHERMAN ON MARCH CLAIMED

War Department Asked for Jewelry Taken by Noted General on Invasion of South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two persons giving the names of Lord and Lady Banff called at the Treasury Department yesterday and claimed a quantity of jewelry and silver plate said to have been stored there for safe-keeping during the Civil War. They were referred to the War Department, where records are being searched in hope of finding the valuables.

Lady Banff, who acted as spokesman, told a dramatic story of how the jewels were sent to the Treasury by General W. T. Sherman from a convent in Columbia, S. C. A record, she said, was sent to the War Department.

During the war, according to the story, the people of Columbia became alarmed lest the Federals would rob them of their jewelry and silver. They gathered their goods together, made up a list and hid the valuables under the floor of the Ursulian Convent there.

Nuns Revealed Hiding Place.

When General Sherman arrived in Columbia, he set fire to the convent, and the nuns, fearing that the valuables would be forever destroyed, revealed their hiding place.

General Sherman took charge of the property, it is said, and sent it to the Treasury, making afull report to the War Department.

Yesterday's visitors saw Byrom Newton, private secretary to Secretary McAdoo, and told him the story. Mr. Newton, on investigation, found that during the war a great deal of jewelry and silver plate had been turned over to the Treasury for safekeeping. This was kept there, he said, until about ten years ago, when it was sent to the War Department. The visitors were sent to that department.

On arrival there they met John C. Scofield, assistant and chief clerk, who referred them to Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, Acting Adjutant General. They told Colonel Heistand the same story, asking him to let them look at the report made by General Sherman.

Lady Banff explained that her mother had placed some of the family jewels in the lot, and that she now wanted to recover them.

Unable to Find Report.

Colonel Heistand made an examination, but failed to find any report made by General Sherman. He called in some of the oldest clerks of the department, but they, too, were unable to remember anything of the kind. Lady Banff insisted that it was there, declaring that when she was a girl she had visited the War Department and had seen it.

Colonel Heistand said that he would make further investigation, and that he would notify the visitors, who are living in Washington, in Sixth street northwest.

This couple has been living in Washington for some time and has on several occasions been prominent in the news. The man claims the title of the Rt. Hon. Robert Walter Finlater Ogilvie, Lord Banff and heir to the earldom of Finlater, Scotland. He is a graduate of three universities —Princeton, Columbia, and West Virginia. Lady Banff was a Southern beauty, it is understood.

FINE NUCLEUS REMAINS FOR 1914 CRACKERS

Three Men, Agler, Dent and Conzelman, Probably are Gone for Good.

THEN RIVINGTON BISLAND SHOULD BE DRAFTED, SURE

Outfield, However, Seems Likely to Remain Intact, With Good Pitchers Left.

By O. B. Keeler.

RESUMING the discussion of 1914 prospects for Bill Smith and the Crackers—just now disbanded after a lively tilt with the Knoxville club of the Appalachian League—there are certain points that lend a glamour of encouragement, even this far ahead.

Also a margin of gloom—but that, like the aforesaid glamour, is merely by way of surmise.

You can't always sometimes tell, as the poet says.

* * *

AT any rate, the fans may count on seeing not more than four of the champions missing from the line-up when the welcome reverberations of "Play ball" resound from the Red Mountain and the Green Dell at Ponce DeLeon next spring.

Many are called, but few are chosen—the old Scriptural adage certainly holds good in baseball.

Agler Dent, Conzelman, Long, Holland, Love and Thompson have been selected for trial starts in the Main Show.

Our guess is that the first trio will stick. Harry, Slim and Carl are more likely to return for "further seasoning." And Carl may decide not to play at all. We look for Tommy back, too.

* * *

BUT the Crackers appear due to lose one more man by the drafting process.

There are three candidates for that honor—Bisland, Welchonce and Chapman.

And right here we will just clear our conscience of a haunting fear that has oppressed it ever since Bobby Gilks and Billy Gilbert, scouting respectively for Cleveland and the New York Giants, stuck around the better part of a week in this town, looking 'em over.

There was no use saying anything about it then, and it may be equally useless now. But we weren't going to assist any such gimlet-eyed sleuths to lamp the Best Shortstop in the World.

Our guess is that Rivington Bisland is going from us.

We hope it's a bum hunch—for the Crackers' sake.

* * *

THIS much about Bizzy.

The writer watched Chapman, of Toledo, and Red Corriden, of Kansas City, play shortstop for a couple of seasons. Red went to the Cubs and made good. Chapman went to the Naps and made better.

If our judgment of short fielding is worth the quantity of white paper this humble opinion will cover, Rivington Bisland is as good a hitter as Corriden or Chapman, and can field rings around either.

That is one of the reasons why we fear Bizzy is going from us.

* * *

FIGURING even with that calamity in view, the Crackers still have remaining a first-class core for the 1914 billet.

The outfield should remain intact—Welchonce, Long and Al Nixon. It looked good enough this year; it won't look any worse next. Nixon is sure to improve with experience. He has a world of speed, is sure death on a fly ball, handles ground hits well, and probably sports the best whip in the league. At bat he pulls away from many a hit, but probably can be coached out of that fault. And he does get on the bases. He is aggressive and a fighter, takes chances and plays hard all the time.

The outfield looks good.

* * *

WHITEY ALPERMAN will be back next year, and minus his troublesome vermiform appendix should have a brilliant season. He told the writer while in Atlanta on his way home after the operation that he hadn't felt just right all season, and believed it was his appendix that had been troubling him.

Holland probably will be at third, and that leaves first and short to care for.

"Goat" Holliday, the rangy Tech star, will be tried at first base; Ham Reynolds, Walter Keating and Leonard Dobard, farmed this season—will be back trying out for regular jobs. Then the reliable Frank Manush will be on hand, and Bill Smith may expect some help from his big league connections.

So a corking good infield ought to result.

* * *

THE pitching staff will lead off with Thompson, Price and Voss, and probably Love—unless Slim makes a huge hit with Clark Griffith and Carl Thompson with F. Chance. Conzelman very likely will stick with the Pirates. To our mind, Elliott Dent was the best man the Crackers sported this year, and he stands a good show to stick in the Main Top. Gill Price is a valuable citizen, and it is to hope that Carl will be with us.

Anyway, we have a good start.

* * *

BACK of the wood, Chapman and Dunn made a good team this year and should be better next. Chapman is developing, and Joe Dunn had the only bad year in the nine he has been in fast company. And it wasn't so bad at that.

DARKNESS HALTS TITLE DOUBLES AT 2 SETS ALL

Great Cotton States Match Must Be Played Off—Smith Wins Singles.

THE sun went down at East Lake yesterday afternoon, or somewhat to the westward, and a large, round, yellow moon began to climb up through the well-known azure sky when the pink dust settled on a certain clay court, and the referee announced that the championship match in doubles, standing two sets all, would be finished later.

He meant earlier, of course, but it didn't matter.

The gallery was ready to call it a day's work, for they had seen the classiest tennis yet exhibited in the Cotton States tournament, fought out to a temporary dog-fall in the challenge match for the title, Smith and Mansfield against Brooks and Bartlett.

Smith Won Singles Title.

In the morning Carleton Y. Smith had made good a raft of predictions by winning the singles championship from Lee Allen Brooks in the challenge match. Carleton got by in easy fashion, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2, and it generally was expected that, with Mansfield working in anything like the form he displayed the previous day in the doubles against Ramspeck and Orr, the championship in doubles would move over from Birmingham to Atlanta without undue delay.

The transfer is being effected—if at all—with some delay.

Hallman Won Consolation Cup.

Before going into the specific causes of the delay, it may be mentioned that the youthful Mr. Harry Hallman—a deceptively fragile-appearing youth with a most provoking chop shot—stood on the back line for an hour or so during the afternoon and watched T. M. Wilson chase himself into a state of coma.

Mr. Hallman contributed occasional chop shots to the chase, placing them judiciously, first in one corner, then in the other, while Mr. Wilson alternated between the points of attack after the manner of a shuttle.

When it was entirely over the consolation goblet in singles was the property of Mr. Hallman, the scores being 6-1, 6-2.

Last Rites Lasted Well.

Reverting to the principal fireworks of the afternoon, a large and appreciative gallery assembled shortly after 3 o'clock to watch the last rites in the accumulation of the Cotton States doubles cup by the Atlanta representatives.

The cup, along with three other cups, a brace of vases (pronounced vawzes, if you prefer, and something that looked like a vanity box, adorned the table of the official referee and jingled in harmony with his occasional agitation. The referee was changed three times during the match, but it should be said in justice to the various officials that none of the changes was due either to defective officialing or the proximity of the silverware.

Some Clever Tennis.

Anyway, the gallery fully expected to watch the cup transfer business.

Instead, they saw some of the prettiest tennis that has graced the famous red clay courts this season.

It wasn't tennis of the rough-neck California type, to be sure. There wasn't so much of the smash-everything-and-cop-it-or-lose-it style in evidence.

It was good, careful tennis, shot through with brilliant flashes and dazzling strokes and every now and then a dashing rally or a sudden burst of speed.

It was smooth tennis.

The Longest Set.

The visiting team opened with some fast work and ran the count in games to 4-1 before Smith and Mansfield settled and began to reel off the points.

The set ran into deuce and hung there, palpitating, with Brooks and Bartlett on the defensive, either at deuce or a game down, until the Atlantans finally ran out, 11-9, in the

Umpires Beaten in Melee When Braves And Redlegs Fight

Tinker Starts Trouble When Maranville Bumps Him and Team Joins in Scrap.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13.—The Boston and Cincinnati National League ball players engaged in a fierce mix-up during the playing of the first game of the double-header to-day.

Rounding second in the first inning, Maranville accidentally bumped into Tinker. Tinker made a pass at Maranville and a terrific fight began.

Half a dozen players ran in and began exchanging blows.

Umpires O'Day and Emslie tried to stop it, but were overthrown. Cooler players separated the belligerents.

Tinker was badly bruised and Maranville struggled to get at him and renew the fight.

Both players were ejectel from the game.

Welsh Recovers His Lord Lonsdale Belt

SEATTLE, WASH., Sept. 13.—The Lord Lonsdale championship belt, emblematic of the lightweight boxing championship of the British Empire, which was stolen from Freddie Welsh at Vancouver August 28, was recovered here by a customs officer. The purser of the steamship Princess Victoria, from Vancouver to Seattle, noticed that Henry Beckett, one of his passengers, was wearing a gold belt underneath his coat. He notified a customs officer here, who halted Beckett.

CRACKERS HELD TO 11-INNING TIE BY KNOXVILLES

Atlanta's Only Error, Made by Welchonce, Lets in Pair of Tallies.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Sept. 20.—Knoxville played Atlanta to a standstill, 4 to 4, this afternoon in as pretty an eleven-inning game as was ever seen on the local diamond, the contest being witnessed by about 3,000 people.

Knoxville outbatted the visitors, but the latter team put up the better fielding game. An error by Burke in left was directly responsible for two of Atlanta's runs, the ball being hit by Long and rolling between Burke's legs up left field bank. Welchonce, however, duplicated, letting a hard hit ball pass him, the local team subsequently scoring two runs in the second inning.

After the fourth inning some very classy ball was served, and though several times each side had runners on third the necessary hit was not forthcoming.

Eight of Thompson's fifteen strike-outs were charged up to Wynne and Merritt.

Knoxville's four runs resulted from a pass, an error and four hits, three of them coming before anybody was down. Atlanta's three in the third resulted from three successive hits by Thompson, Agler and Long and an error, the tying score following a beat-out bunt by Holland, who stole second and went to third on Bisland's out at the plat and a passed ball. Travers First 4-Time Champion

\+•+ \+•+ \+•+ \+•+ \+•+ \+•+

Great Record by Young Golfer

By Tick Tichenor.

WHEN Jerome Travers defeated John G. Anderson in the finals of the amateur championship at Garden City, he was the first man to win this event four times.

Walter J. Travis previously had won it three times, and H. Chandler Egan had won it twice, but it was left for the Upper Montclair player to be the first to add four of these trophies to his collection.

Over in England John Ball has won the British amateur championship eight times, while Harold H. Hilton has won it five times, but both of these players have been in the game a great many years. In fact, John Ball won his first championship about the time Travers was born.

* * *

TRAVERS played in his first championship tourney at Englewood in 1906, when he was 19 years old. Here he won his first two matches handily, but was beaten in the third round by Walter J. Travis. He won at Cleveland in 1907, defeating Archibald Graham in the finals. In 1908 he won again, defeating Max Behr, 8 and 7, in the finals over the Garden City course.

In 1909 and 1910 Travers did not play in the national, but in 1911 he was beaten by Harold H. Hilton in the third round. Last year at Wheaton he defeated Chick Evans in the final round and again this year he was unbeatable.

Thus it will be seen that Travers has started in the championship six times and four times he has been the winner. Only once has he been beaten in this event by an American, and this defeat was administered by Travis in his very first appearance in the national.

I am, however, inclined to the belief that this defeat has had much to do with his success since that time.

Here is what he has to say about this match:

* * *

'THE match with Travis was progressing very satisfactorily when a photographer snapped his camera at me, quite unexpectedly, so fas as I was concerned, and I made a bad shot. Under ordinary circumstances I am by no means camera-shy, but when a golfer is under high pressure the slightest unusual distraction will cause him to take his eye off the ball. There is no reason why one bad shot should lose a match, but in this case I foolishly lost my temper, with the result that Travis took hole after hole and finally won, 3 and 2.

"The lesson was a severe one, and I have not forgotten it to this day.

"I do not mean to be understood as claiming that but for the camera man I would have beaten Travis, and I am not relating the incident as an excuse for my defeat. Always to the victor belongs full credit, and a poor loser in golf is a pitiable object. Travis played better golf and won the match, but I handicapped myself by losing my temper. Moral—Never lose your temper."

* * *

HOW well Travers learned the lesson to hold his temper as firmly as he grips his clubs is evidenced by his four triumphs as the first amateur of the United States, and the one achieved at Wheaton last year was under circumstances as trying as it has ever been the lot of any golfer to successfully overcome. And again this year, when he was so badly off with his wooden clubs that he was forced to use a driving-iron almost entirely from the tee, he did not allow this weakness in his game to worry and fret him.

If golfers generally would follow Travers' advice, there is no doubt that they would get more pleasure out of the game, and at the same time the lowering of their medal scores would show the marked improvement in their play.

It is said of old John Ball that nothing ever seems to disturb him in a match. Spectators may move or talk or stand almost within reach of the swing of his club, yet so great is his power of concentration on the shot that he does not notice them. If this is true, it goes a long way to explain why he has won the British championship eight times.

* * *

IT was with sincere regret that I read of the defeat of Chick Evans by John G. Anderson. I had hoped that Chick this year would accomplish his ambition of winning this tournament.

After doing a brilliant 71 on the morning of the second day, and establishing a record for the course—in which he came home in 32, having six threes to his credit—it was his luck to have the harder side of the draw. In his first two matches he had to dispose of W. C. Fownes and Eben Byers, both former champions. In his match with Byers he almost threw it away after being six up at one time, as he allowed Byers to draw even with him and to carry the match three extra holes. In his next match, which was with Travis, he won from the "Grand Old Man" quite handily. Thus he had in his first three matches to send to the discard three former champions.

Then came his match with Anderson.

From reports of this match it seems that Chick played brilliantly until he reached the green. His driving was fine and he was playing his mashie beautifully. In the morning round he was two up and but for poor work on the green should have been four or five up. Then came the afternoon round, and he literally putted himself out of the tournament. Time after time he missed two foot putts. He had lost all confidence in his putter. With the loss of confidence on the green went the match.

* * *

IT is a pity that a player as brilliant in all other departments of the game as Chick can't learn to put. Yet it has been this same failing, this inability of Harry Vardon to get short puts into the cup, which has cost him several championships. It is indeed strange that two such first exponents of the game of golf as Evans and Vardon should be so weak on puts which seem almost too easy to miss.

New Booking System Obviates Delay at Tee 1, East Lake

Freat business for Athletic club golfers!

New system for booking your shot at the first tee—no waste of time, no conflict of schedules—just get up there and shoot your drive into the lake, or on to the first green, according to your ability.

No delay—that's the thing.

As it used to be, you had to go out and stick a ball in the trough—you know. And if there were sixteen balls ahead of yours—well, you just stuck around and practiced mid-iron swings until your time came. Maybe half an hour.

Now, you just telephone out from town to the club, and tell the proper person to put your name down to tee off at 2:30 o'clock, or 3 o'clock, r whenever you will be ready to tee off ——just like in a dentist's date book.

If that exact hour is already taken, you take one five minutes earlier, or later, or near enough to suit you.

Then you had better be out there on time. For when your "date" comes 'round your name will be called, and if you aren't there to shoot your name will be dropped down to the next open date.

It's a big convenience, say those golfers who have tried it.

McGoorty Will Start Training on Monday

CHICAGO, Sept. 14 Eddie McGoorty, Oshkosh middleweight, spent a few hours in town to-day before his departure for his home city, where he will spend Sunday with his folks. On Monday he will return to this city and begin training for his ten-round contest at Milwaukee with Frank Klaus, the bout being billed for September 22.

McGoorty declares he will beat the Pittsburg "bear cat" and then take on Jimmy Clabby.

Packey McFarland To Quit Fight Game And Enter College

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Packey McFarland, one of the greatest boxers the ring has produced, is through with the game. In a few weeks the wizard who has delighted thousands during the past few years with his wonderful boxing ability will be enrolled as a student at Notre Dame University, where he expects to take a full course of study to fit him for a business career. Unless he receives more money than he has yet drawn down for a bout Packey declares that he will not engage in any more public bouts. As McFarland drew down a guarantee of $10,000 for his bout with Matt Wells here, it will not be very easy to coax him back into the ring.

McFarland has had nine years of ring work and he thinks it is enough. During that time he has saved money and invested wisely, with the result that he now has a bank account running well up into six figures. He will celebrate his twenty-fifth birthday in November next, and figures that there is yet time for a college course before settling down to some business. McFarland is now in this city as the guest of Billy Gibson, and will return home during the coming week.

HEISMAN SEES BETTER 11 BY 30 PER CENT

Tech Coach Reserved, but Hopeful Over the Outlook for 1913 Football Season.

NEW MATERIAL SHAPES UP HEAVIER AND FASTER

Six Veterans of Last Year Supply Core of Prospective Machine for Initial Scrimmage.

ONCE upon a time there was a football coach, and when the season rolled 'round, he got out his squad and looked it over and said it was a good squad, and that he had some more good material coming on, and that every prospect pleased him, and that he was going to clean up.

That was very long ago. So long ago that the name of that coach, and whether he really did clean up, do not stick in the memory of the affiant hereof.

But that coach was not named Heisman; neither did he overlook the young idea at a place called Grant Field.

* * *

AND, at that, things look pretty fair out at Grant Field, somewhat to the eastward of that celebrated institution of learning and football known as Georgia Tech.

There is a deal of new concrete going into the building of stands, and some of it is kicking pigskin ovals—so-called because they are made of horsehide—about the northern end of the huge inclosure.

And in the sunlit, dusty air, through which resounds the hollow "thut" of the practice punts, there is the taste and the scent of a killing—of a "big year" in football for Tech.

* * *

THAT is, with the gathering student body.

As mentioned, some chapters toward the front, Coach Heisman is reserved in his predications.

* * *

BUT Coach Heisman has hopes.

The 1913 eleven, for one thing, will be at least ten pounds heavier to the man than that game little team of 1912, which averaged only 154 pounds. And it should be fully 30 per cent stronger.

"That team of 1912 was a wonder," the coach said yesterday. "It lacked both weight and speed. It had nothing that is usually taken as a requisite of a winning football team—nothing except a lack of stars.

"That sounds like an odd thing to say. But I mean it. The team of 1912 had no man on it who considered himself a star. On the other hand, every man put implicit faith in his coach, and went the limit to carry out instructions literally. And I can say honestly that I never coached a team of which I was prouder than that slow, light, little eleven of 1912."

* * *

FOR this year, six of the regulars are gone; six remain. Hutton has gone, and "Scrappy" Moore, and Montague, and Luehrmann and Coffey. Also Stegall. There remains the backfield, intact—McDonald, Fielder, Captain Cook, and Thomasson, and Loeb, center, and Means, guard. But there is the fault of lack of weight, even among the surviving veterans, and they may have to hustle—some of them—to hold their jobs this year, with the heavier material coming on.

* * *

"A NUMBER of good men have been developed on the scrub of last year," Coach Heisman said yesterday. "Rainey and Lang are good, and W. Goree and Tyler and Edgar Montague; also 'Polly' Smith and Trawick. They should help out a lot in getting out a good, sound squad, with previous training.

"That experience is a great thing in a squad. The success of an eleven may be in a large measure predicted by the percentage of the working squad that starts the season with a knowledge of the game and some hard experience already ingrained in the system. Especially is this true if the experience has been in the same college they are working for. Sometimes a real star practically is wasted on the desert air for one or even two years, simply because he doesn't get shaken down into his place in the order of things."

* * *

AND Mr. Heisman declines positively to count any new material until it has matriculated and he has looked it over in uniform.

Wherefore, there isn't much doing in the prophetic line at Grant Field.

But it is stated by the coach that of the 35 men at practice Saturday, 25 were men of previous experience and training.

"And before this week is out," Mr. Heisman added, "I hope to have 75 men out, of whom 50 will know something of the game by reason of that best of all experience—playing it."

* * *

SO Grant Field is a pretty lively, dusty, spirited place these days. And the gathering student body hums with the old Tech spirit, and buzzes with rumors of the great Devore, all-American tackle in 1911 and famous as a West Point star, who may be obtained to coach the varsity linemen, he being now stationed at Fort McPherson, with not much to do in a football way but look over the work of the soldiers' eleven.

And the new men do look husky, in their soiled, yellow jerseys—husky in some measure with the old suet that will have to come off as wind and legs are developed.

And that is what Mr. Heisman is doing out at Grant Field, rather than tooting any fanfares on tin trumpets.

But he doesn't deny that he hopes for a team "fully 30 per cent stronger than that of last year."

PLAYERS SHOULD AID IN STAMPING OUT ROWDYISM

Marquard Deplores Incident in Philly When Fans Were Incited by Home Team.

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Giants experienced a very startling week in baseball last week. After it all I am inclined to "take nothing fro granted." When a team—no matter how far it may be leading—can tumble three full games in one afternoon, how on earth are you going to figure out the finish?

That is what the Giants did a week ago to-day—or rather helped to do. We lost one game. The other two were represented by the reversal of Umpire Brennan's forfeiture to us in Philadelphia. President Lynch practically reversed his official and made us lose it to the Phillies. Anyhow, we lost the game without having a run for the money in the ninth inning.

That's neither here nor there. I think we can spot the Phillies a game or two more and lick them to a frazzle. Whether or not our team was fairly treated, I am just as well pleased that Philadelphia got the game. It may stop a lot of foolish talk.

For some reason or other there is unusual hostility toward this city in all the outlying provinces. Not the least iota of sympathy was expressed in behalf of the Giants anywhere outside the Metropolis. We were looked upon as a gang of robbers who had deliberately planned to steal a game from the Quakers.

Rowdyism Hurts Baseball.

So I say let them have the game. But they should not be allowed to get away with attempted murder. The assaults committed on the Giant players after that forfeiture put a blot on the fair name of baseball that will require many years to bleach away.

I do not blame any of the Philadelphia players for the rowdyism of that town's fans. But I think Doolin and his men might have made some slight effort to pacify the populace instead of acting in such violent manner as to further excite it.

Mind, I do not insinuate that the violence was of the nature of "grandstand" play. I understand the state of mind that would naturally follow the announcement of a forfeiture when victory seemed assured.

Nothing can excuse the indifference of the Philadelphia police. Absolutely no protection was afforded the Giants on their way to the train or at the station. Several of the boys were wounded by missiles. The team had to sneak home in three different groups.

One infuriated fan pressed a gun against Jack Murray's stomach and probably would have murdered him but for the presence of a "cop" who did not disgrace the uniform. In view of all of which I say that the forfeiture and subsequent reversal may not have helped baseball, but certainly both were insignificant compared to the harm that will result from the rowdyism above described.

Coombs Out of Series.

I was sorry to learn, a few days ago, that Jack Coombs may be unable to take part in the world's series this fall. The "iron man" of the Athletics may not pitch again this season.

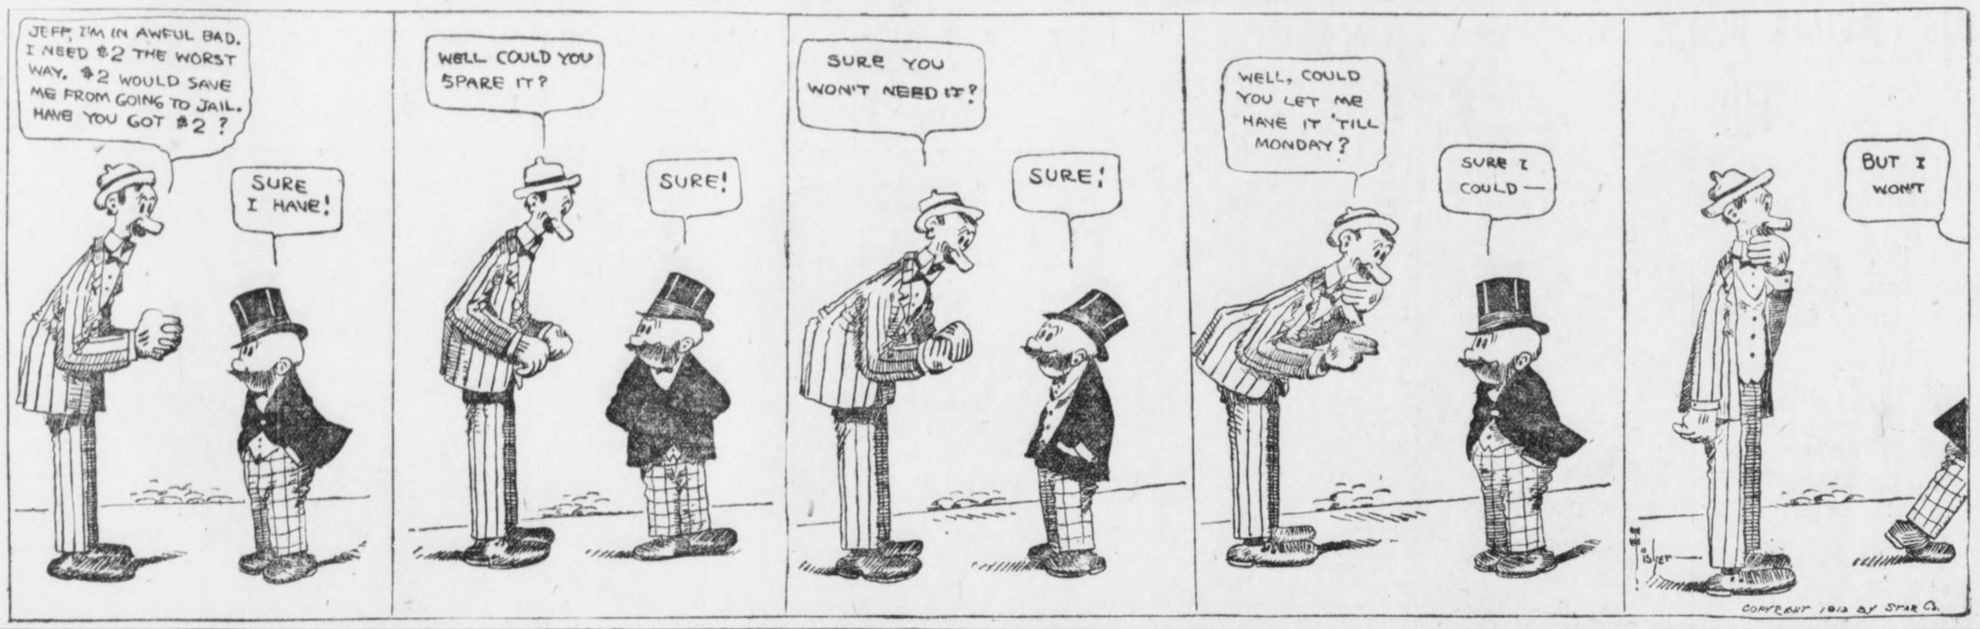
With the possible exception of Ed Walsh, modern baseball has not seen such a valuable pitcher for short series work. Coombs won three out of the five games played with the Cubs in 1910. He was a fellow who could have pitched four days in a row if necessary.

Connie Mack will miss Coombs this year in the world's series, if the Athletics qualify as they should. He will not miss him, however, as he would if Coombs had been suddenly incapacitated at this stage of the race. Coombs has been out of it all season. Mack has won his pennant without the "man of iron." Without doubt the crafty Connie has planned all along for a titanic tilt with Bender and Plank and a few of the youngsters who have held him in front.

I am sorry that Coombs is not at his best. I believe in a world's champion really winning the title. I have believed from the bottom of my heart since last April that our club was the coming champion of the world. I believe so yet; my faith is unshaken.

I think we will play the Athletics and though I expect a stiff fight from such a formidable team, still I am sure we shall triumph. That is why I would like to see Coombs back in all his strength. I truly believe our 1913 Giants could beat the Athletics of 1911, and Coombs was no small factor of that series.

142 Candidates Out For West Point Team



WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The army football men are jubilant over the prospects of this season's outlook. On the first day of practice there were 142 men reported for work, the largest number that ever turned out here for football They reported to Lieutenant Sultan and Cadet "Benny" Hoge, captain of this year's army eleven.

Among the old men who reported were Benedict, Hobbs, Hoge, Weyand Wynne, Markoe, Huston, O'Hara and Hodgson. The army will practice every day and play its first game of the season with Norwich University on September 27.

In Praising Matty, Don't Forget Brown

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—New York writers are extremely proud of the thirteen years' work done by Mathewson, and it makes up a wonderful record, all right—but they seem to forget that Mordecai Brown, in seven years, did just about as much pitching as Matty did in thirteen.

The old boy with the "pruned" hand crowded an awful amount of toil into his career, and still is toiling. It probably will startle most of the fans to learn that Brown has been in one more game than Mathewson up to date this season—36 to 35—although Brownie didn't get into shape to work till much later than the New York wonder.

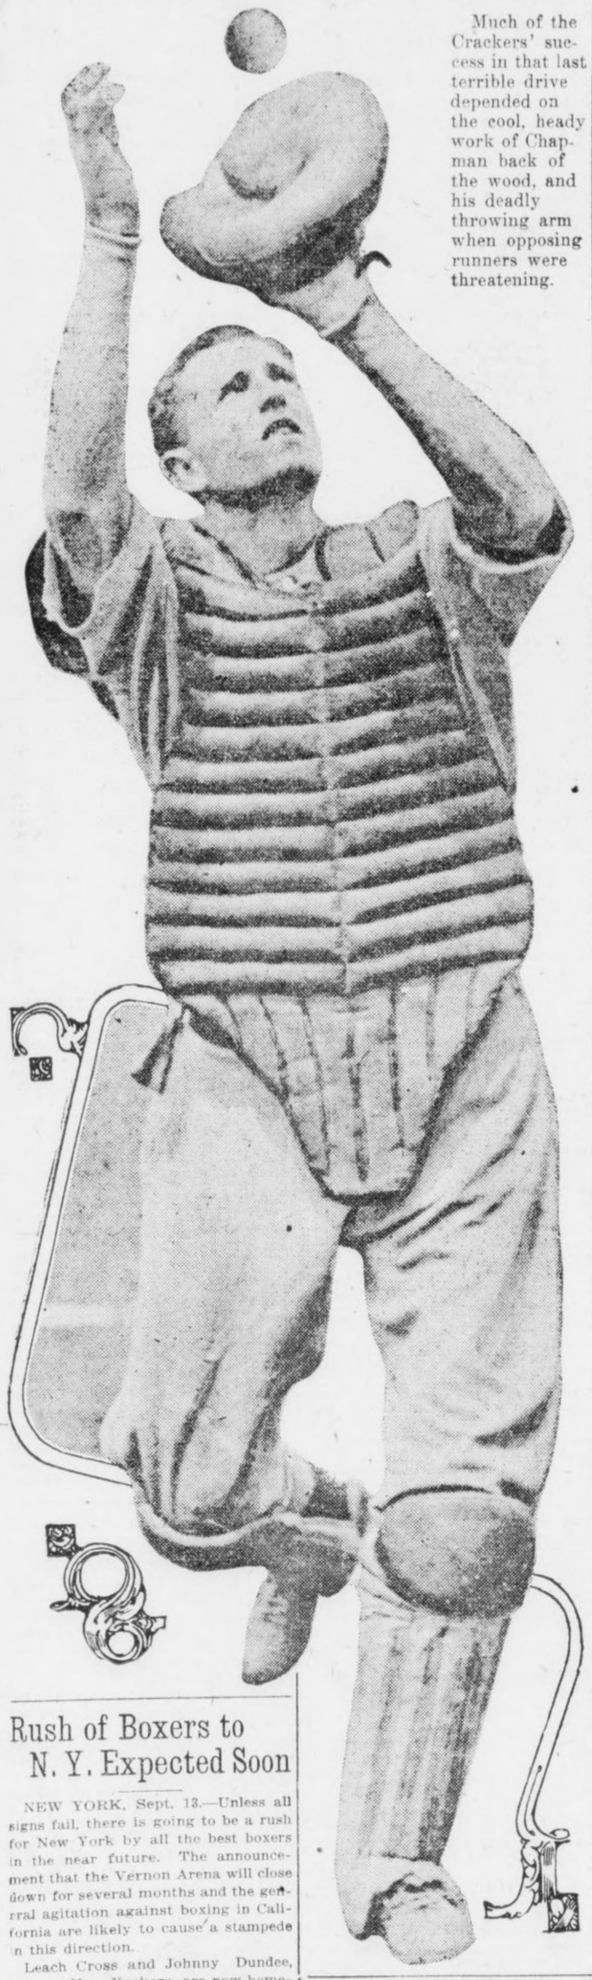
hardest and closest set of the tourney.

While the sides changed courts the gallery experts figured that Mansfield and Smith, having hit their stride, would proceed to romp. The particular marvel was the service of Bartlett—a short, chop delivery, with no speed and little twist, altogether the "softest" looking service seen in a championship match here in years.

It did look very soft—but somehow he got by with it about as well as Brooks, with his overhand cut, or even Smith, with his modified Lawford.

Surprise in Second Set.



At any rate, Bartlett combined that soft-looking service with Brooks' brilliant net play in the second set, and, to the surprise of the gallery, ran off a bictory, 6-4, not even permitting the Atlanta cracks to deuce it.

The third set found Mansfield's service gaining in effectiveness, while Smith began to Lawford the service of both his opponents. Another hard-fought set resulted, and Smith and Mansfield won, 9-7, after a wonderfully game struggle by the Birmingham pair, who repeatedly started going in a game 40-love against them and ran it to deuce, and sometimes to victory.

Mr. Cummings came to Boston from his home in Athol for the express purpose of meeting Joe Wood, in whom he is greatly interested. Although a follower of baseball for more than half a century, Mr. Cummings had never met the Red Sox star pitcher until last Wednesday.

Cummings was a great pitcher back in the '70s, when a ball club carried but one regular pitcher and a relief man during a season of 96 games. He has never forgotten those days and he proved a great entertainer to the Red Sox players, telling stories of his days on the diamond.

It was in 1867 that Cummings first discovered how to throw a curve ball, and it was not for several years after that any other pitcher was able to master the art.

Pitcher Was Nearer Plate.

Back in his time a pitcher delivering the ball stood but 45 feet from home plate and was forced by rules to throw the ball from the level of his waist-line. Consequently it was a difficult task to put any "stuff" on the sphere. At that short distance it was also hard to get any control. According to Mr. Cummings, weather conditions had to be with the twirler, or else it was impossible to throw a curve. If the wind was against the throw a curve was possible, but hurling with the wind a straight ball was the only thing a pitcher could use.

The year that Cummings discovered the curve he was playing with the Excelsior team of New York. He first used his bender against the Harvard University team and he proved the easy winner. The Harvard batters could do nothing with the new delivery.

In 1870 Cummings gave the secret of the curve out for the first time and then only to one pitcher, Matthews, who was pitching for Baltimore. It later resulted that these two curve ball pitchers were traded and in 1872 they opposed each other on the mound. Although two years before Cummings gave Matthews the secret, the latter had not mastered it. In this one game he practiced it from start to finish and did fairly well. Cummings won the game.

Played on Many Teams.

In 1872 Cummings played with the Mutuals of New York. The next season found him with the Baltimore team, and in 1874 he played with Philadelphia. The following year he went to Hartford.

It was with Hartford that Cummings had his best year and that season he won 69 games out of the 96 during the season. His curve ball was then working in wonderful fashion and he was the talk of the baseball world.

Mr. Cummings believes that the game has not changed much since his days, but states that the players have it much easier with their gloves. He also says there were more restrictions on the players in his days.

He picks the New York Giants to win the world's championship this season from the Athletics.

'The Best Shortstop' Does a Fancy Slide to Third Base

Rivington Bisland, in addition to being the class of the Southern League in the short field this year, is a reliable, nervy batsman, particularly good in the pinches, and displays speed and headwork on the bases. His sliding is well judged and tricky under all conditions.

RECORDS FELL IN BASEBALL SEASON 1913

Hitting, Running, Form Reversals, Bumped Managers, and Other New Marks.

THE 1913 season of the Southern League, or, more properly speaking, Southern Association, is no more. When Finis Wilson sent the Gulls down in sickening defeat before thousands of their home guard and bestowed upon the Crackers' sweaty brow the filet of victory, the race of 1913 had passed into history, and it went recorded as one of the most sensational and epoch-making which has ever been witnessed by Dixie fans.

In spite of the sensational character of the ball that was staged, the season just passed has not been extremely successful financially for the league as a whole. None of the clubs are in distress, however. The failure of New Orleans and Memphis to remain in the race is largely responsible for the failure of the various clubs as a whole to come out on the right side of the ledger, as these two towns pulled down the attendance of the road clubs. Atlanta and Birmingham made big money, the spurt of the Crackers and the attendance race between the two cities turning out the largest crowds in history.

Records were smashed with a wanton hand during the season just passed. Atlanta broke the attendance record for the season and for a single game. Tommy Long, of the Crackers, broke the runs scored mark, and Harry Welchonce broke the league record for the number of hits made. Clayton Perry and "Del" Young, unwilling to have the Crackers be the whole noise along the vandalism line, then came along and set up new records for consecutive hits, securing eleven bingles in succession.

The season just passed is resulting in wholesale managerial changes, most of which have already been made. But three clubs will stand pat on their 1913 pilots, these being Atlanta, Birmingham and Nashville. Chattanooga will not retain Elberfeld, Bernhard will depart from Memphis, Finn will leave Mobile, Dobbs will shake the dust of Montgomery from his feet, while Frank, in New Orleans, will retire to the presidency of the Pelicans and leave the Tabasco Kid in charge as playing manager. For sensations, upheavals and surprises the season of 1913 carries off the undisputed palm.

Fitz to Open a Training Farm
Says 'White Hopes' Are 'Bums'

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Bob Fitzsimmons is going to be the manager of a $300,000 training farm for corpulent business men. Boston money is to finance the enterprise, and J. B. Walcott, a Boston millionaire, is behind it. This is according to Bob.

It's a long time since the lanky freckled ex-champion has been heard from. Sunday afternoon a chic little automobile stopped in front of the Hotel Knickerbocker, and on the back seat sat a man who was evidently a prominent citizen. He wore a natty straw hat, a black and white checked suit, a white silk shirt and a blue knitted tie containing a scarf-pin in the form of a horseshoe, but containing Lincoln's head. A very prosperous and not unusual looking New Yorker. It was Bob Fitzsimmons. If you didn't believe it, you would notice a gold and diamond watch charm with "World's Champion" upon it in big head lines. Here is something Jack Johnson ought to have, but Fitz retains it.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Fitzsimmons, "I'm going to have a regular training farm where business men who are run down can get in condition. Lots of people have been dissatisfied with Muldoon's methods, but his was the only thorough place, so they would have to stand for it.

"I believe in treating gents like gents, and I'll get them to do just as much work as though I said, 'Do this, you son of a gun. You won't? Then take the first train out of here.'

"Mr. Walcott, of Boston, is going to put up the capital, and we are going to erect the building on my farm in New Jersey. It's going to be a swell place."

Fitz Not Broke.

"I heard you were broke," said the reporter.

"No, I ain't broke," said Bob. "I got my farm and some money. I get along all right. I don't ask nothing from nobody."

"What do you think of the present run of champions?"

"Rotten," replied Bob. "I'll take on any three of them myself. Johnson can knock out any half-dozen of them. He could take Langford and McVey in the same ring, even now when they say he's dissipating. Of course, he isn't so great as people think, it's that the others are so bum.

"You know that Jeffries was doped when he fought Johnson. Sure, I know who did it. And I was doped when I fought Jeffries, and I know who did that. Luther McCarty was poisoned, too. They gave him cyanide. He'd have been dead in five minutes if he hadn't gone into the ring at all.

Sure Thing Bettors.

"The trouble with the modern fighting game is these sure thing bettors. They ain't satisfied to lay a bet on the best man. They pick the long odds, take the worst man and make him win by handing dope to the other guy, if they can get him."

"Tell him the joke about William Morris, Fitz," suggested a bystander.

"Didn't yer ever hear about that?" growled Fitz.

"It's a long time since it happened. I was going by William Morris' theater, perfectly sober, when I stepped on an unfastened coal slide and landed in the cellar. It knocked me out for a while. When I got home and was telling some of the boys about it, they said: 'Just for fun, why don't you sue William Morris.' So we did. We sued him for $100,000. I was some fighter still then and I claimed I was a ruined man, that I could never fight again.

"They served the paper on William Morris. He opened it and immediately began to cry. 'One hundred thousand dollars, my best friend does this to me. One hundred thousand dollars.' He took on something awful and then gave it to his lawyers.

Sues for $100,000.

"A couple of days later I called on him. I was walking with a cane and all hunched up. He pretended to be awful glad to see me, and began to explain how he wasn't responsible for the accident.

"'Let me help you up to the office,' he said, and carefully helped me up the stairs. All the time I kept a saying, 'I'm a ruined man.'

"When we got in his office back of the stage he says, 'I know you got me, Bob. What will you settle for?'

"'Well, Will,' says I, 'if you'll open a bottle of wine I'll call it square.'

"You ought to have seen him. He was expecting me to say $100,000 and I said a bottle of wine.

"'Bob, you old son of a gun,' he shouted. 'I'll open a case,' and he put the show on the bum he shouted so loud."

Bob was in a reminiscent mood, and he related stories of his lion that Bostock gave him and then had him arrested for stealing. He told how he had to hit the lion on the head with a hammer because he was killing a horse.

"After that the lion never was the same," said Bob. "Every time I passed I'd see his eyes fololwing me saying to himself: 'That's the son of a gun that hit me on the head with a hammer. I'll get him yet.' And I knew he would, so I gave him to a circus."

Could Still Go Some.

"You are all through the fighting game yourself?"

Bob looked at his hands. They are remarkably small hands for a man who won the championship of the world with them.

"I am not going against Johnson, but I could polish off a few white hopes if it was made worth while," he said. "I ain't an old man yet."

And the conqueror of Jim Corbett, Jack Dempsey and many others of twenty years ago does not look like an old man. His skin is smooth and has plenty of color. His eyes are bright and he hasn't a gray hair.

"I'll box with any who comes to my farm. I guess there will be a lot of people who would like to take boxing lessons from Bob Fitzsimmons," he remarked, and then the traffic policeman suggested that the automobile move on.

"GETTING ONTO" COURSE.

BROOKLINE, MASS., Sept. 13.—A trio of Europe's greatest golfing stars, Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, of England, and Louis Tellier, of France, have started to familiarize themselves with the peculiarities of the Brookline oCuntry Club links, where, on Wednesday next, the American open championship golf tournament, in which all three are entered, will begin.

Rush of Boxers to N. Y. Expected Soon

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Unless all signs fail, there is going to be a rush for New York by all the best boxers in the near future. The announcement that the Vernon Arena will close down for several months and the general agitation against boxing in California are likely to cause a stampede in this direction.

Leach Cross and Johnny Dundee, the two New Yorkers, are now homeward bound, having concluded that there is nothing more to be gained in California for the present. From all accounts Cross was not sorry to call off his bout with Dundee. The dentist-boxer came in for a mild roasting when he insisted upon setting the weight for the match at 135 pounds. As Dundee is little more than a featherweight, it was felt that Cross was unreasonable in demanding such one-sided conditions. From all angles the match seemed a poor one for Cross, as he had little to gain and much to lose. Dundee's amazing speed and endurance might easily have been too much for the hard-hitting East Sider.

Champion Ritchie is also showing signs of dissatisfaction with his match with Freddie Welsh at Vancouver. It is not improbable that he will be seen in a local ring before long.

Possibly Ritchie has seen a light and has come to the conclusion that the clever Welsh, with his almost impenetrable defense and rapid jabbing, would be able to roll up enough points to offset his own superior hitting. At any rate, it would be much safer for Ritchie to try the matter out in a New York ring, where he would be in no danger of losing his title.

Felton Spurns Big Bid to Play Ball

Mack Vainly Tries to Give Harvard Hurler $15,000 for Three Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Manager Mack, of the Athletics, usually regarded as one of the most conservative bidders for ball players in the land, recently made a record offer of $15,000 for a college ball player, and after striving as he has never before done for any player, failed to gain the coveted star.

This much-sought collegian Mack says would have made the greatest ex-college pitcher in the history of the game.

He is Samuel Felton, football and baseball star at Harvard for three years.

Within the past month Mack offered Felton a flat contract of $15,000 for three years, offering to permit him to make his own terms and giving him the option of an unconditional release should he tire of professional ball.

Felton, who lives at Haverford, Pa., comes of a wealthy family and does not have to play ball for a living.

The Baseball Fan

By THOMAS NUNAN

IN old times there were orators;
Demosthenes, they say,
Would fill his mouth with pebbles, then
Talk clear across the bay.

IN old times there were orators;
Great Edmund Burke, hooray!
Could so control the Parliament
He almost had his way.

IN old times there were orators
Said Patrick Henry Clay:
"Oh, give me liberty or death!"
Well? Someone that did say!

IN old times there were orators;
As Daniel Webster said:
"We will be mangled with the free
Or mingled with the dead!"*

IN old times there were orators;
Now, Samuel Shortridge, he
In wise expostulation points
His finger unto me.

"THOUGH olden times had orators."
Says he; "since time began
Was no one else so eloquent
As is the baseball fan."

Princeton Coaches Must Develop Her Football Squad

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 13.—Football practice has started at Princeton, but the coaches are facing one of the most serious problems that ever confronted men who are trying to evolve a championship team.

It will be necessary to develop an almost entirely new squad, as nearly all of the best men have graduated from the university.

Here's the loss among the linemen alone: Arthur Bluethenthal, all-American center; H. G. Andrews, one of the 1912 ends; W. G. Penfield, tackle; W. J. Logan, all-American guard, and W. G. Wight, end. In addition to this heavy loss, Shenk will be unable to play. This leaves only one veteran in the line, G. F. Phillips, a tackle. The line will have to be built from the freshman squad mainly.

Among the other missing stars are Captain Pendleton, W. L. DeWitt and E. O. Waller, all backfield men. Both DeWitt and Waller will be ineligible. The freshmen class will turn out some good men, incuding Captain Semmons at tackle, Heyniger at tackle, Lamberton and Brown at tackle, Shea, Law and Glick as backs. The team will be built around the captain, H. A. ("Hobey") Baker.

The field coaches this season are Arthur Bluethenthal and H. G. Andrews, succeeding T. A. Wilson and Logan Cunningham. W. G. Penfield will also act as coach.

CLABBY BATTLES LOGAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—Jimmy Clabby, the Milwaukee middleweight, who has established himself as an important contender for the title by defeating Sailor Grande, has been matched to meet Frank Logan for ten rounds on Wednesday night before the West Oakland Club.

Here's Yost Layout For This Season

Coach Yost will soon be back in Ann Arbor whipping his player into shape for the fall campaign. The Athletic Association has sent out invitations to 33 men to report for practice at Ferry Field on September 15.

Here's the make-up of the 1913 squad Yost has to deal with: Captain George C. Paterson, center, played during the seasons of 1911 and 1912, weighs over 200 and lives in Detroit.

James B. Craig, 1914, has played on the varsity team for the last two years at a halfback position. He weighs 170 pounds and, as this will be his last year at Michigan, Yost thinks he will be an all-American back. Craig lives in Detroit.

Miller H. Pontius, 1914, from Circleville, Ohio, played on the 1911 and 1912 teams at both and tackle. Pontinus weighs 185 pounds. Pontius has been a baseball regular for two years and is the 1914 captain.

R. H. Torbet, 1914, played on the 1911 and 1912 varsity elevens at a halfback position. Torbet weighs 170 pounds and is one of the fastest men on the team. Torbet is a Detroit boy.

E. J. Allmendinger, 1914, won his "M" for the first time last year. He weighs 190 pounds and ranks as a classy lineman. Allmendinger is a product of the Ann Arbor high school.

James W. Raynsford, 1915, won his "M" last year at a tackle position. He was one of the stars of the Cornell game. He weighs 180 pounds and is a very consistent player. He lives in Detroit.

Thomas H. Bushnell, 1915, came to Michigan from Cleveland. Last year Bushnell played quarterback in the Pennsylvania game. He undoubtedly will be the varsity pivot man this season. He weighs about 156 pounds.

E. F. Hughitt, 1915, made his letter last year as a backfield man. He is rather small, but fearless. He lives in Detroit.

M. H. Boyle, 1914, from Duluth, Minn., won his "M" last year playing in the backfield. Boyle weighs 160 pounds, and is an excellent man in carrying the ball through a broken field.

Cobb Would Have Been One Gorgeous Football Player

Ty Cobb may be a pretty nifty little baseball player, admits Dan McGugin, famous Michigan football star of other days and now coach at Vanderbilt, but oh! he would have been a humdinger on the football field.

McGugin has held firmly to this opinion ever since that time Ty was at Nashville. It seems that he was given the privilege of practicing one week with the Vanderbilt team. He was a joke at first, says McGugin, but he didn't remain such very long.

He kept plugging away, observing what the others were doing and profiting by mistakes. In four days he developed into the best drop kicker on the squad. By the end of the week there was not a man on his team whom McGugin would not have traded for Cobb.

Hard work and brains have made the Georgian the greatest baseball player, says McGugin, and the same qualities would have made him one of the best little old football stars that ever booted the pigskin.

GIANTS ALONE ESCAPE HURTS THIS SEASON

All Other Big League Baseball Teams Suffered Badly by Broken Down Men.

WHEN the list of accidents and injuries to major league players for this season is tabulated, then probably a record will be registered. Never before, anyway not for recent years, have there been so many mishaps to the athletes of the diamond.

Only one team has escaped the wave of accidents, and this is the New York Giants. No doubt this probably accounts for the late streak of the National League champions which brought them up to the top of the ladder after they were counted out of the running.

All other clubs, though, have been victims of accidents which have taken away their stars for lengthy periods. And this, no doubt, has been quite an important factor in deciding the two major league pennant races.

Here is a list of the important injured athletes:

National League.

St. Louis—Huggins, hit on head by thrown ball, out two weeks; Hauser, injury to knee which practically has kept him out all year; Wingo, broken thumb, out two weeks.

Pittsburg—Gibson, fractured knee, out two months; Wagner, injured knee, out almost all year.

Chicago—Archer, twice suffered broken finger and out for four weeks; Zimmerman, injured foot and out three weeks.

Cincinnati—Tinker, attack of appendicitis and sprained ankle, out three weeks; Hobiltzel, broken ankle, out four weeks; Marsans, sprained ankle, out three weeks.

Philadelphia—Dooin, broken finger, cut three weeks; Paskert, typhoid fever, out two weeks; Magee, injured arm, out two weeks.

Brooklyn—Rucker, injured thumb, out two weeks; Catchers Irwin and Miller, broken fingers, out indefinitely.

Boston—Sweeney, injured leg, out two weeks.

New York—Nothing of importance.

American League.

St. Louis—Stovall, injured hands, out off and may not play any more this season; Wallace, broken left hand, will be out four weeks; Johnson, hit on head by pitched ball, out ten days.

Cleveland—Birmingham, broken leg, out two months; Lajoie, charley horse, out ten days; Chapman, injured ankle, out a week.

Detroit—Cobb, spiked twice, out two weeks; Gainer, twisted ankle, out a week.

Chicago—Walsh, sore arm, out three weeks, not with team now in East; Weaver, sore arm, out ten days; Lord, sprained ankle, out ten days.

Philadelphia—Coombs, typhoid fever, out since first of season, has not pitched single game.

Washington—Gandil, sore foot, out a month; Foster, typhoid fever, out two months. Many other minor injuries to players.

Boston—Wood, injury to arm in spring, out two weeks; injury to thumb now, will keep him out two more weeks; Stahl, injured foot, out all year; Bedient, sore arm, out two weeks.

New York—Sweeney, broken finger, out a month.

And while the list could be boosted by a dozen or more, this only shows the important athletes who have been kept out of the game since April.

The loss of Jake Stahl, Joe Wood and Hugh Bedient put the Red Sox out of the running. And finally Stahl, when he couldn't play and the champs started to slip, his injury cost him his job.

The case of the Senators almost is the same, and but for being without many of their stars they probably would be right up with the Athletics to-day. Only for a short run has Griffith been able to present his entire team on the field.

Fortunately for the Giants and McGraw they have escaped the hoodoo. However, the shrewd John J. has supplied himself with extra material, and an injury to any of his infielders or outfielders would not weaken the Giants much. He has Shafer, Grant, McCormack, Cooper and Thorpe ready to step in.

Even the pitching staff is protected, and it would take more than a mishap to Matty or Marquard to stop the Giants, as Fromme, Wiltse and Crandall probably could step in and hold up the Gotham crew.

The Athletics, by developing several young pitchers, have traveled along without Jack Coombs, who has been the only injury. Even the infielders have been in there every day since April 10, which has helped.

But down the list of the other teams all of them have been battered and punctured, the great Tyrus, Lajoie, Wagner, Dooin, Rucker, Archer, Zimmerman, Sweeney, Walsh and many others being the victims.

Lafayette Football Schedule Announced

EASTON, PA., Sept. 13.—The football schedule of the Lafayette College football team announced is regarded as a very good one, although disappointment is expressed from a local standpoint in that not a single big game is scheduled for home. Cornell will be the one big team that will be new to the schedule. The University of Pennsylvania game will come much earlier this year. Bucknell, Brown and Syracuse have been dropped, and Albright, University of Pittsburg and Cornell substituted.

The schedule follows: September 27, Muhlenberg College at Easton; October 4, University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; October 11, Yale at New Haven; October 18, Swarthmore at Easton; October 25, Albright at Easton; November 1, Ursinus at Easton; November 8, Pittsburg at Pittsburg; November 15, Cornell at Ithaca; November 22, Lehigh at South Bethlehem; November 27, Dickinson at Easton.

JAKE DAUBERT SEEMS LIKELY TO HOLD LEAD

NOTHING in the way of National League sluggers seems to be able to displace Jake Daubert from the top notch on the list. The ex-Southern Leaguer is tapping his way along merrily at a .360 clip, and even "Slugging Gavvy" Cravath can't seem to close in on him, though Gavvy is massaging the pellet at a .341 gait. Poor old Honus Wagner, after sixteen years in the select .300 ring, now is creaking along at a miserable .297 gait—but the season isn't over yet, and a million fans are pulling for the Flying Dutchman to continue his record-breaking career.

Pennant Winners In Struggle To-day

Two pennant winners in amateur city leagues will meet at Brisbane Park this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the First Baptist Sunday School team of the Sunday School League, meets the Agogas, of the Bargca League.

Both teams are composed of first-class ball players, a few of whom may be seen in professional line-ups next year. The rivalry is keen between the two leagues, as a consequence, a big crowd will be out to watch the proceedings.

CROSS-COUNTRY TOURIST ON WAY EAST FROM COAST

Immediately after the finish of the recent Indiana-Pacific tour, W. O. L. Westgard, field representative of the American Automobile Association, started east from Los Angeles over a route that will be by far the longest and in some ways one of the most important cross-country lines. It will run via Yuma, Phoenix, El Paso, Fort Worth, Dallas, Texarkana, Little Rock, Memphis, Nashville, Knoxville, Asheville, Greensboro, Richmond, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, to New York.

Welchonce Tops Batsmen at Last

Five Crackers Hit Above .300 Clip

THE Southern League season of 1913 now is spread on the final records, and Harry Welchonce for the second time leads the list of Southern League batsmen, topping the list with the grand batting average of .340.

Harry put on a great spurt in the final week of the season, and at last headed Dave Robertson, topping him by a single point, but failing to wrest from him the Rose medal for batting, on account of an absurd provision that the last week of play had nothing to do with the batting strength and value of the respective stickmen.

The Rose medal is a handsome affair, but it typifies a rather empty victory for Dave, great slugger that he is. Harry, moreover, set a new league record for hits in a season, collecting 193 in his 143 games, two more than the mark established by Huelsman in 1901.

Of the Crackers, Welchonce, Long, Nixon, Chapman and Bisland all hit above the coveted .300 mark, while Agler was only five points shy of the charmed circle—as grand a batting aggregation as ever carried any club to ultimate and well-deserved victory in any league. Bisland's spurt in the last six weeks was a bright particular feature of his work, and his average of .302, taken with his wonderful fielding, stamps him as one of the individual stars of the season in all leagues.

Following are the final figures for the season:

NEW WALKING PHENOMENON RISES IN ITALY

Fernando Altimani Covers Over Eight Miles in One Hour—Is Youngest at Game.

By James S. Mitchel.

(World's Champion Weight Thrower.)

A out-and-out walking "phenom" has come to the front in Italy, and he has begun to make athletic history in such an astounding manner as to make the European experts gasp with awe. The name of the young wonder is Fernando Altimani, and he has been at the heel and toe game only about two years. But, young though he is, the lad from the sunny land knocked flinders off the one-hour world's record at Milan, and to make sure that there was no fluke about the style of walking or the time, several outside expets on walking and experienced timers were invited to witness the performance.

In the hour Altimani covered 8 miles 577 1-3 yards. This blotted out the world's record of 8 miles 438 yards standing to the credit of G. E. Larner of England, since 1905. The Italian is also far ahead of the professional record made many years ago by Johnny Meagher, an American, who had no equal for fairness and speed in his day.

Earlier in the season Altimani made an assault on Larner's mark and beat it by something like twelve yards, and this close shave aroused more or less suspicion that the correct rules of record-breaking were not observed. Those who doubted the youngster's effort were not aware that he had undergone a long and careful preparation for the ordeal, and that since he was seen in the Italian championships he had improved wonderfully.

Big Hockey League Now Being Planned

CLEVELAND, Sept. 10.—An organization has practically been completed of a hockey league composed of several crack teams in the United States and Canada. The promoters back of the league say that hockey has become the most popular winter sport in this country and the professional games last winter were largely patronized.

The promoters believe that with such cities as New York, Boston, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Montreal, Toronto and several other large cities in the league the project will prove a big financial success.

Wolgast Will Surely Box Again

Loves Game Too Much to Quit

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—Ex-Champion of the World Ad Wolgast is a victim of conflicting emotions. On the evening of the day on which he lost to Joe Azevedo in ten rounds at Oakland, Wolgast said:

"I'm through. I have enough money to live upon and I'm not going to stay around and be a chopping block for fellows who would have been pie for me a couple of years ago."

Sitting in the writer's den a few nights later, Wolgast said:

"Well, I would not exactly say that I'm through. It would be awkward if I made a crack of that kind, and then an offer came along guaranteeing me three thousand or so to box somebody six, eight or ten rounds. For that matter I have had a couple of offers already. I'll say this much, though: I don't think I'll fight again this year. I'm not sure that I'd grab at a chance to box next January even. But I'll keep right along fighting, just as sure as you're born, and you'll hear from me, too."

It is the writer's belief that if a suitable proposal comes along a couple of months from now, Wolgast will forget all about his determination to hold aloof for the balance of the year. For if ever there was a case of vacillation personified, Wolgast comes pretty near to being it.

The trouble with Wolgast is that fighting is his hobby. Some dethroned ring idols can find relief from their troubles in hunting, fishing, automobiling or what not, but for little Ad the clang of the gong is the siren's song.

When he has no fight in prospect he mopes about like a lost sheep. When he attends a glove contest as spectator he is the most wretched being the lamps beam upon. Some fighters can enjoy a night off, but Ad, when he sees the other fellows getting ready and hears the bleachers bellowing, it looks as though he was railing at fate for keeping him outside the ropes.

Knowing these things, I take no stock in anything Wolgast may say in reference to temporary retirement.

* * *

THE writer witnessed the Azevedo-Wolgast ten rounds and made up his mind that it marked the passing of Wolgast as a provider of sterling Queensberry entertainments. But Ad, after thinking matters over, is there with an alibi.

"You'll admit," he said, "that I came out of the ring without a mark. You have to admit it, for that fellow did not place a glove on me hard enough to kill a fly. Now for my end of it. I was a sick man. I contracted a heavy cold a day or two before the bout, and had to stop training. I had sharp pains through my chest and under the shoulder blades. There was no fever to speak of, and I thought that when I got into the ring and warmed up a bit I would feel better. I soon saw that I was up against it, so far as getting started was concerned.

"It hurt me to breathe, and it hurt me when I bent over. I ducked just once, and I thought something snapped at the nape of my neck. It was the same when I tried to crouch. The only way was to stand up and cover. You noticed how he shoved me around. Well, he is a strong boy, all right, but if I had not been in such poor shape he couldn't have taken liberties like that with me.

"He used to get his head under my chin and shove. Why, I'm the original kid at that kind of stuff, only that day I couldn't bend my neck. At that I was a little surprised when they gave him the decision, for I hurt him more in one or two rounds than he hurt me in the whole contest.

"To make a long story short, I know I can do better, and I'm going to put myself to the test. The only thing I'm sorry for is that some of my friends lost money on me. You know when you are champion everybody bets on you, but when you have had a reverse or two, it's just your friends that stick to you and place their coin on you. And it's for these friends I am sorry.

"I have just come from the doctor, and he tells me I have a touch of pleurisy. That's what ailed me when I fought Azevedo. I was in much the same condition as when I boxed Jack Redmond once in Milwaukee. But these things pass away and I'm going to get right. If I felt the way you critics seem to feel about it, I'd never pull on a glove again. But I'm not satisfied, and that's why I'm going to keep right along fighting."

* * *

HAVING got himself thoroughly worked up, Ad broached the subject that is dearest to his heart. He hates to let go as long as there is even a remote prospect of getting another crack at Willie Ritchie.

It's a way the ex-champions have—or, at least, the ex-lightweight champions. Battling Nelson always called Wolgast a "cheese champion." Ad refers to Ritchie as a "fluke champion."

Said he: "I don't care if Ritchie is defeated before I get around to him. I just want to show that Wolgast is Ritchie's master. He admitted as much even after he won my title away from me on a foul. He said that afternoon in the hearing of some of my friends in the Turkish baths that it would be a cold day when he would give me a return match.

"Now, it's my aim to place him in such a position that he will have to fight me. But, of course, I've got to show the public something or I won't receive much encouragement."

Pennsy Warriors Report To-morrow

The faculty committe is opposed to preliminary practice and no preliminary training will be indulged in until the men report in this city.

The death of Mike Murphy has made it necessary for the football committee to secure a new trainer. George Orton, who succeeds Murphy as coach of the track team, will not assist with the football men, as he intends to devote his time to the cross-country candidates.

WANTED—ONE PIED PIPER; APPLY TO WALLA WALLA

WALLA WALLA, WASH., Sept. 13.—Dixie, Wash., is sadly in need of a "Pied Piper." The rats are so bothersome that many people have given up the raising of chickens.

The rodents have been killing the little chicks and also carrying away the eggs. The residents state that cats and guns have not been sufficient to make a showing against them.

Importation of a number of ferrets is being discussed, as it is believed by the inhabitants that they would be effective against the rats.

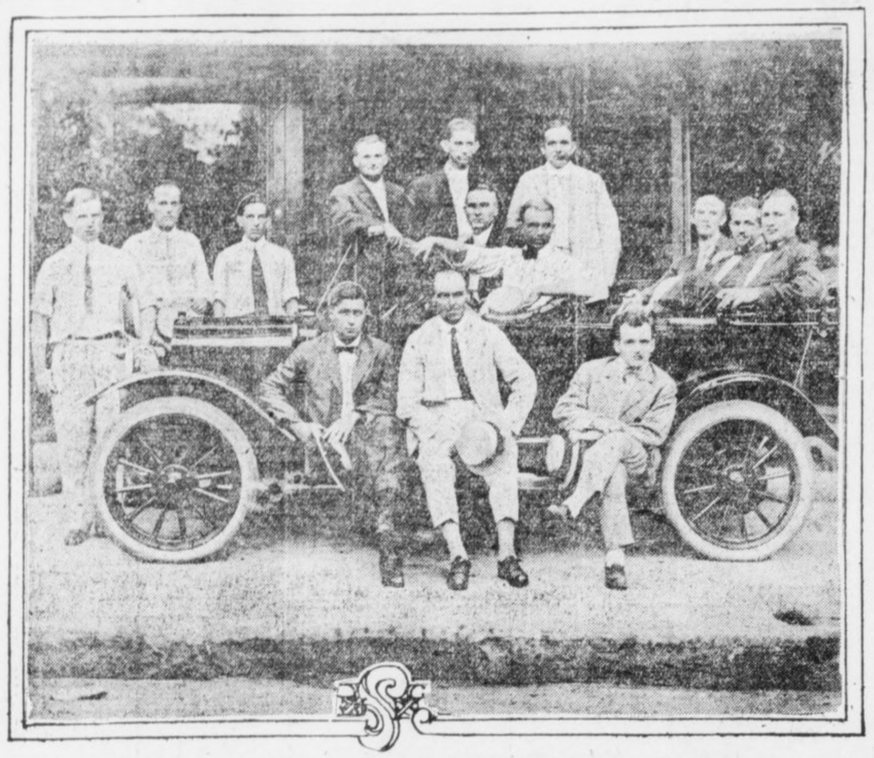
NATIONAL NEED IS GOOD ROADS, SAYS GEO. DIEHL

Official Stresses Importance of Highways in Life of People. Foreign Instances Cited.

"National roads are a natural result of the modern use of the highways brought about by the coming of the motor-driven vehicle, which has advanced road travel from its former comparatively local character," declared Chairman George C. Diehl, of the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board.

"In the consideration of the country-wide work carried on by the A. A. A. for the million and more motorists we have given conscientious attention to every phase of the subject, and repeatedly our deductions have taken us to the general proposition that the United States must be provided with a national roads system connecting all the States. This subject will be one of the most important discussed at the American Bar Congress in Detroit during the week of September 29.



"In the apportionment of days the ones devoted to national legislation and the needs of the road users fell to the A. A. A. as a matter of course, while the American Highway Association, of which Director Logan Waller Page, of the United States office of public roads, is president, assumed the burden of the program concerning construction and inter-related matters. The body correlates the efforts of the general roads organizations of the whole country.

Lesson to England.

"Marked confirmation of our contention that national roads are now demanded is found in the progress of events in Great Britain, which now realizes that it must do what France learned long ago had to be done to insure roads communication in all parts of the country.

"A measure was recently introduced in the British Parliament by Lord Helmsley which provides for the taking over as national roads by the British road board of such roads to connect the different countries with each other. It is expected that the bill will become a law at the next session of Parliament. At present the roads of Great Britain are divided into three classes—main road, by-roads and private roads. The new law will add to these a fourth road, hitherto unknown in British highway nomenclature—national roads. These will be constructed, repaired and maintained solely at the expense of the central government.

W.C.MahoneyMarvels At Modern Motor Car

Fifteen Years of Manufacture Has Only Started Industry, According to Branch Manager.

"The manufacture of automobiles is by far the most progressive industry the world has ever known," remarked W. C. Mahoney, Atlanta branch manager of the Cartercar Company, to a group of friends the other day.

"Just think of the strides that the business is and has been making right from the first car built. There has never been any hesitation on the part of the manufacturers of motor cars. They have been on the rush every minute, such a rush as has never been seen in any other line of business. When the demand has not been as great as the supply the manufacturers have created a demand—then when the demand was greater than the supply they built new plants and the efficiency that is found in nine-tenths of the motor car production plants is really marvelous. You will not find such progressiveness, such real push in any other line of business.

Firestone Is Ahead In Important Races

Victory came again to Firestone tires at Corona, Cal., September 9, when Earl Cooper, in a Stutz, won this contest at a speed of 74 1-2 miles per hour for 250 miles. This is the fifth victory for Firestones since May 30, and includes all the important racing events of the season, namely, Indianapolis Sweepstakes, May 30; Paanma-Pacific road race, July 4; Montamara Festo races, July 5 and 7; Santa Monica race, August 9, and Corona race, September 9.

Never before in the history of tiredom has one make of tire captured such a string of races. Firestone makes no racing tires, every event being won on the regular tires that any motorist gets.

Six jobbers of men's furnishings in various parts of the United States are to experience a pleasant variation from everyday business returns within the next few weeks. Each of the six who have yet to be chosen is to be presented with an Overland touring car by the C. A. Edgerton Manufacturing Company, of Shirley, Mass., makers of a well-known brand of suspenders. The Edgerton Company purchased the six Overlands last week from the C. T. Silver Motor Company, metropolitan distributor of that line. The cars are to be given as prizes to the jobber who dispose of the largest number of the Massachusetts concern's suspenders during a given period.

In order that all jobbers may have an equal chance to win, they have divided into six classes and an Overland touring car will be the first prize in each class.

LIMIT OF SPEED IS 18 MILES IN BIG MOTOR CAR

Automatic Governor on Willys Utility Truck Prevents Careless Drivers Going Too Fast.

If you want speed, invest in a racing car, but if you are in need of everyday delivery service, do not get a truck that a careless driver can rack to pieces in a few weeks. This is the advice given prospective purchasers of commercial vehicles by George W. Bennett, vice president of the Willys-Overland Company. Mr. Bennett's firm is manufacturing the Willys utility three-quarter-ton truck, which has been designed expressly for rapid delivery of medium-weight merchandise.

Careless Drivers a Liability.

The Toledo manufacturer maintains that overspeeding has been a big factor in promoting a prejudice against motor vehicles among business men. He points out the fact that a careless driver who will speed his truck on rough streets is a more costly liability to a merchant than a whole stableful of sick horses.

Such a driver, he claims, will inflict more wear and tear on a truck in a week than would ordinarily be experienced in a month of careful operation.

Limit of Eighteen Miles.

"We have successfully overcome the objection of speeding in the Willys utility truck," Mr Bennett said. "We have provided with this product an automatic governor, set and sealed in the intake pipe. This governor precludes the possibility of running the truck at more than eighteen miles an hour, which our engineers have shown is the highest speed such a vehicle can be operated at without injury over the ordinary city streets and country roads.

"We are thus assuring our patrons that, no matter how careless or ignorant their drivers may be, their trucks can not be worn out through overspeeding."

Tire Inflation

By L. GREENWALD,
Manager Service Department of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

Inflate slowly at first. There are a great many views as to the proper pressure, but it is rulable to inflate the front tires to a pressure equivalent to seventeen or eighteen times their cross-section and the rear tires to a pressure equivalent to twenty times their cross-section; for example, 34 by 4 tires on front wheels should have from 68 to 72 pounds pressure, while on the rear wheels the pressure should be about 80 pounds. The tire should round out pretty well and not flatten under the weight of car and passengers.

Reinflate the tire occasionally, as the inner tubes are permeable. When the rubber is heated to 80 degrees or more, 15 or 20 per cent of the pressure then is lost.

It is not advisable to inflate the tires with the exhaust from engine. Oil and certain gases are destructive to the rubber.

Remember that your pressure gauge on pump may not show an accurate pressure in the tire owing to the friction of the valve inside or plunger.

WELCOME GIVEN TO CYCLECAR BY ENGLISH RACES

Popularity of New Conveyance Attested by Demand for Large Number First Year Out.

It is generally conceded now that one of the most important of recent motor car developments is the introduction into America of the cyclecar. As originally developed in France, the cyclecar is virtually a four-wheled motorcycle. The French cyclecar has proved popular, owing to its lightness and speed. These cars are provided with a narrow body and two seats arranged tandemlike. The motor, transmission and drive is the same as in a motorcycle. There is a 36-inch tread, to enable the cars to run between the ruts of poorly kept roads, of which France has many.

In England there are cars of this type manufactured and used to a limited extent. However, England has adopted in a majority of instances a cyclecar which is in every sense of the word a miniature automobile—with the motor, transmission and drive of an automobile.

Adapted to Roads.

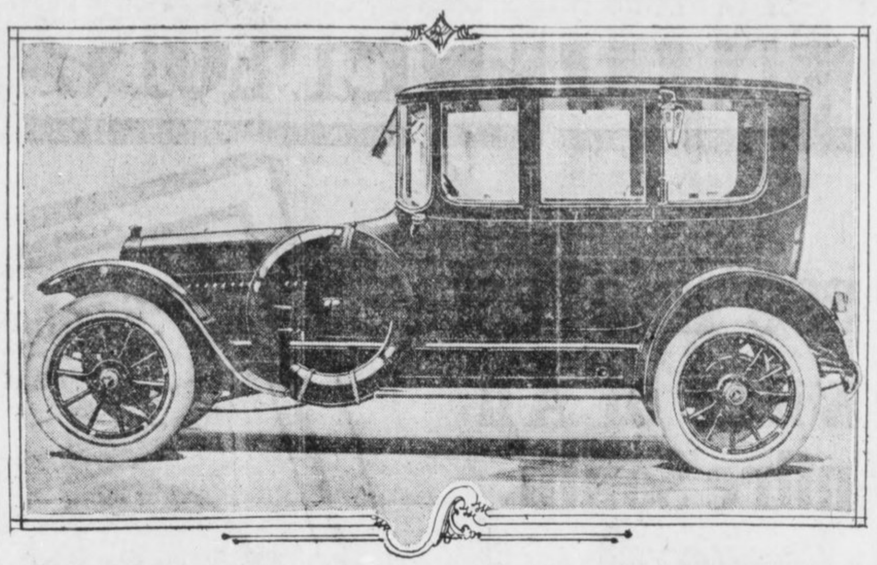
These cars are particularly adaptable to the well-kept English roads. American cyclecar makers started to follow the French type of narrow tread to run in the middle of the road and keep from the ruts on both sides, and are finding daily that this type of car will be popular in spite of the American roads.

The cyclecar of America is designed more particularly for city use, and will be purchased in great quantities in such States as New York, Ohio, California, New Jersey, Georgia, and, in fact, those States where splendid roads are maintained regularly and where a narrow tread will be possible. America has followed England in its cyclecar construction, inasmuch as it has combined with the cyclecar treads the idea of the miniature automobile, with motor, transmisison and drive the same as the motor car.

First Year Output 10,000.

The American Cyclecar Company, organized in Detriot and owned and controlled by the Connecticut Electric Manufacturing Company, of Bridgeport, Conn., has found its construction popular, and this company has scheduled not less than 10,000 cars for its first year's production.

The trade people and dealers who are anxious to close for a large proportion of the output have found that the plan of combining the narrow gauge car and the small automobile is extremely popular. The car to be manufactured by this company will be of the roadster type, with the two occupants seated side by side, and in appearance will vie with some of the handsomest automobiles on the market.



"SPLASH" TYPE OF OILING IS FAVORED BY MOTOR MAN

"In current discussion among motor car makers of the oiling system we line up with the advocates of the splash type as being by far the simplest, most efficient and most satisfactory," said E. J. Kulas, general manager of sales of the Peerless Motor Car Company.

"The term 'splash' is rather a misnomer for the system. Mist or vapor describes it better. The oil carried in the bottom of a Peerless crank case is so constantly and violently stirred up by scoops on the crankshaft provided for the purpose that a heavy mist of oil arises and settles in quantity on every part to be lubricated.

"In very cold weather oil never becomes too stiff to work well with this system as it often does with some types of forced feed."

NEW HUDSON "SIX-54" SEDAN

J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., the local Hudson automobile dealer, reports a great many inquiries for the new 1914 Hudson "Six-54" Sedan, which has arrived at the shop on North avenue. This car is one of the most complete yet put out by the Hudson company, and it promises to be one of the most popular types of the year.

Features of Latest Automobile Creation Are Left-Side Drive and Six-Cylinder Motor.

The new 1914 Hudson model, known as the 54 Sedan, is of regal proportions, appearance and equipment. This superb car is built on the newest Hudson chassis with the true streamline body, six-cylinder motor, left-side drive, gasoline tank in dash, and other new features. Every possible comfort and convenience has been provided.

From his seat the driver performs every operation of starting, driving, lighting and controlling the car. Gasoline filler is conveniently placed outside the car, where it is accessible without the necessity of either driver or passengers leaving their seats. The car is magnificently lighted. In addition to the standard electric headlights, dash and tail light, there are handsome outside pillar lights, and a most complete arrangement of inside dome and other lights.

All are controlled by the touch of a switch on the dash. The interior fittings and finish are of the highest type. Upholstering is in imported novelty Bedford cord and all leather work is pebble grain and hand finished. The sashless windows are raised and lowered by a new and convenient device, doing away with the old style strap lifters. Five occupants are comfortably accommodated and it is an easy matter to carry a large number in an emergency. Upholstering is firm yet soft, and seats are designed to suit present styles of dressing.

J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., the local Hudson dealer, has recently returned from a visit to the factory at Detroit and states that early delivery can be given on a limited number of these handsome cars.

Staggard Treads Holding Up Well

In a letter received by the local branch of the Republic Rubber Company, Joseph F. Duval, of the Duval Tire Re-Building Company, of New Orleans, reports that The American's pathfinder, E. L. Ferguson, is having very little trouble with Republic Staggard Tread Tires on his coast-to-coast trip. Mr. Duval says that when Mr. Ferguson reached New Orleans, nearly 1,000 miles from Atlanta, his tires were in good shape, and the indications were that he would not need the extra tires that he carried with him.

Asphalt Company Makes Experiments and Decides on Garford—Dumping Bodies a Feature.

That the motor truck is valuable not only for transporting merchandise over the street, but also for building the thoroughfares, is shown in a recent delivery of Garford trucks, made by the R. and L. Eastern distributors for the Garford Company, of Elyria, Ohio. The delivery consisted of two six-ton vehicles to the Eastern Asphalt Company, of New York, one of the largest street building firms in the metropolis.

The asphalt company conducted a series of experiments with various makes of trucks during the past year, and finally decided on the Garford as best fitted for the work required. The vehicles will be used for the transportation of asphalt from the mixing plant to various parts of the city where paving is being laid, being equipped with special dumping hoods for quick unloading.

ATLANTA AGENCY GOES TO BEESON

Former Manager of Studebaker in Rocky Mountain Section Gets Place—Extensive Section.

The Studebaker Corporation of America announces the appointment of W. W. Beeson as manager of its Atlanta branch. Mr. Beeson has arrived in Atlanta and has taken charge of the entire business of the branch. The handsome new headquarters on Peachtree street has been an especially live center for several days, full of dealers congratulating the new official.

Mr. Beeson comes to Atlanta from Denver, where he has been manager of the Studebaker branch supplying the Rock Mountain district. Prior to that time he was manager of the firm's branch in Louisville. Mr. Beeson succeeds George W. Hanson, now with the Oakland. Mr. Beeson will have charge of one of the biggest parts of the Studebaker territory. The Atlanta branch serves not only the entire States of Georgia, Alabama, Florida and South Carolina, but also the western part of North Carolina.

Besides the large wholesale business done from Atlanta as a distributing center, the Atlanta branch maintains its own retail store at its main headquarters, which is also fully equipped with parts and service departments.

Mr. Beeson says that he is glad to get back South. "The West is a magnificent country and I enjoyed my work out there, but there's no place like home and, believe me, I'm glad to be back," he said. "The welcome from the Studebaker dealers has been a mighty pleasant part of it, too.

"Another pleasant feature is the fact that my work here will bring me into touch again with a large number of Studebaker dealers with whom I worked while in charge at Louisville. This is because of the recent enlargement of territory of the Atlanta branch, which now serves a large share of country formerly supplied from my old stamping ground."

NEW MOTORCYCLE TIRE OF GOODYEAR CONCERN

A new motorcycle tire has been announced by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. It is the blue streak non-skid tire, designed for all-around service, but especially for the rear wheel of motorcycles which carry tandem weight and are subject to overloading.

The new tire is made of white stock with a blue streak girdling the tread. It has a non-skid tread, which affords a reliable grip that practically prevents skidding.

AUTOMOBILE AS AID TO RAILWAY TRAFFIC

IF the automobile has, in a manner, perplexed the railroads of the country in lessening their receipts from passenger traffic, it has benefited them greatly by opening up hitherto undeveloped territories and thus increasing freight traffic, according to George W. Bennett, vice president of the Willys-Overland Company, in a recent discussion. "I have lately had called to my attention statements made by Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad, and one of the keenest financial men in the country, in which the automobile was given due credit for the good it has accomplished," said Mr. Bennett.

"Mr. Erb declared that two billion dollars was a conservative estimate of the increased value of farm lands, due directly to the automobile.

"A few years ago farm lands which were located near the railroads were worth about $75 an acre, where the land twenty miles back could hardly be sold at $10 an acre. With the introduction of the automobile, however, the latter land was brought within a few minutes' run of the railroads and its value has increased tremendously because of this fact. The farmer who owns an automobile and lives twenty miles from a shipping point is to-day as close to the markets of the world as is the man whose land is within three or four miles of the railroad. The automobile will make the run to the shipping point in less time than horses take to cover three or four miles.

"Besides eliminating distance, the automobile has worked another tremendous influence for good in the agricultural districts of the country by creating a demand for good roads. It is universally acknowledged that good highways mean increased prosperity for the farmer, and wherever automobiles are owned there will good roads be found as soon as they can be built. Many shortsighted people have claimed that the purchase of an automobile by a farmer is an extravagance. I maintain that it is one of the most foresighted economies he ever introduced and I think the majority of the successful farmers of the United States will agree with me."

ATLANTA TO WIN GOOD ROADS MEET

Wylie West Will Represent City at Detroit Conference This Month—Others May Go.

Wylie West, manager of the local branch of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, will represent the city of Atlanta in seeking the 1914 convention of good roads advocates, which is meeting from September 29 to October 4 at Detroit. The local Chamber of Commerce and hundreds of automobile men, together with the Atlanta Convention Bureau and other organizations, have united in an urgent invitation to the good roads people to be the guests of Atlanta, and Mr. West believes that Atlanta will be the winner.

The Detroit meeting will be held under the auspices of the American Highways Association, the American Automobile Association and the Michigan State Good Roads Association. A number of local automobile men and others are expected to accompany Mr. West.

We Paid $50,000 To Prevent Tread Separation On No-Rim-Cut Tires

Another Exclusive Feature

Here is another vital feature found in Goodyear tires alone.

This fabric — called "rivet" fabric — is patented. We bought the rights for $50,000.

In every well-made tire, at the base of the tread, runs a breaker strip. It is usually a solid weave.

Our Patent Rivet Fabric

It is near this strip, where rubber joins with fabric, that loosened treads occur. It has cost tire users millions of dollars.

The "rivet" fabric is our breaker strip. Note the openings in it. We force the tread rubber down through these openings, so hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed to prevent tread separation. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse. This is one of the biggest of Goodyear economies, and no other maker can use it.

No Rim-Cutting

In addition we save you, in No Rim-Cut tires, all the ruin of rim-cutting.

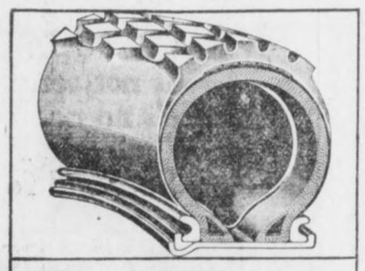
With clincher tires—the hooked-base tires—rim-cutting ruins almost one tire in three. This is proved by statistics gathered for us by certified public accountants. No-Rim-Cut tires are guaranteed against this costly damage.

We control the only known way to make a satisfactory tire of this type.

Saving Blow-Outs At a Cost of $1,500 Daily

Here is another exclusive feature.

No-Rim-Cut tires get the "On-Air Cure." That is they are final-cured on air bags shaped like inner tubes. They are cured, as you use them, on elastic air.



Other tires are cured on iron cores alone. The fearful compression often buckles the fabric. And there, where some of the fabric bears no part of the strain, thousands of blow-outs occur.

Our "On-Air Cure" corrects this buckling. The rubber and fabric adjust themselves to actual road conditions. Every part of the fabric bears its part of the strain.

This process—used by no one else—adds to our cost $1,500 daily, just to minimize blow-out cost.

Three Savings

So we save you on rim-cutting—

Save you on blow-outs—

Save you on tread separation.

Yet no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. That is due to our mammoth output. No-Rim-Cut tires, when we made less of them, cost one-fifth more than clinchers.

Note what you get which others can't give. You will then see why Goodyears far outsell any other tire that's made.

1914 Buick MOTOR CARS

FOR 1914, WE OFFER HIGH GRADE, FINISHED, ECONOMICAL, SERVICEABLE MOTOR CARS--WITH DELCO ELECTRIC STARTERS, ELECTRIC LIGHTS, LEFT-HAND DRIVE AND CENTER CONTROL.

TO THE PURCHASER

The Buick Motor Company has the largest automobile factory in the world and is one of the strongest industrial companies in America. We are in the motor car business to stay indefinitely—we build cars that properly represent the enormous resources at our command—cars that reflect the knowledge we have gained by nine years' practical experience while making in our own shops more high-grade cars than any other company (150,000 in all). We build into all Buick motor cars, more thoroughly than any other moderate price makers, the six qualities you wish for and should demand—Endurance, Power, Finish, Economy, Comfort and Service. We are not manufacturing size at the expense of quality and economy in order to make a pretense of value through magazine and newspaper advertisements.

DOMINANT BUICK QUALITIES

Endurance

Buick Endurance is proven by the fact that no other company can give you the names and addresses of as many owners who have run their cars 25,000, 50,000, 75,000 or 100,000 miles. We issue this statement as a challenge.

Power

Buick Power is recognized wherever motor cars are run. Buick cars have won more hill climbs than any other make. Right here in Atlanta we demonstrate over hills that no other cars climb.

Finish

For three years Buick Finish has been the envy of all other moderate price motor car builders. We use real leather upholstery. We finish our running boards, doors and floor boards. We enamel our cylinders. We properly paint and varnish Buick cars. We invite you to inspect them under the seat cushions and under the floor boards. Then look at other cars sold at or near their price.

Economy

Buick Economy is the result of perfected cars that have no weak features. The cars are light on tires. They run 1,000 or 100,000 miles over hills or any roads with more certainty and on less fuel than any other motor cars that receive the same care. They last for years, and have as much power after two or three years as other moderate price cars have when new.

Comfort

Buick Comfort is a remarkable quality. Th long springs, wide seats, wide doors and extra deep cushions are but factors. There is real comfort in owning a car that takes you wherever you wish to go at any speed you care to travel, a car that climbs nearly all the hills on high gear and is more flexible than any other moderate price car in city traffic.

Service

Buick Service, backed by Buick Branch House stock rooms, shops and unequalled facilities, is not equalled in the motoring world. All Buick cars are guaranteed for one year. Our free inspection system keeps all beginners out of trouble. The knowledge we have gained while building up the greatest automobile retail business in Atlanta is worth your serious consideration.

EQUIPMENT

The following equipment is furnished with every 1914 Buick Car: Latest Delco built-into-the-car system of starting, lighting and ignition; silk mohair top; new style rain vision ventilating windshield; five demountable rims; electric horn; tire irons on rear of car; combination oil and electric side and rear lamps; specially designed electric head lamps with focus adjustment; foot rest; jack; tire pump and complete set of tools.

FALL ORDERS

Our advance sales all over the country are positive proof that the purchasing public appreciate real motor car value. This will surely be the great Buick year in every Buick Branch from coast to coast. Send for a catalog and arrange for a thorough demonstration at once if you expect to purchase this fall. You get seven extra months' use of a 1914 car purchased now that you will lose if you wait until next April.

GOOD JOKE ON LOCAL SUPPLY COMPANY.

Through the carelessness of their printers, 10,000 wholesale Catalogs of the 35 Per Cent Auto Supply Company, No. 236 Peachtree street, which were intended for wholesale trade, were bound in the covers printed for their retail Catalogs, but as part of the issue was mailed before the error was discovered, the company decided to stick by the prices until a new Catalog could be issued.

It is stated that the printers who made the blunder are making good the losses rather than stand suit. Meanwhile numerous automobile owners who have secured copies of this Catalog (No. 36) are profiting by the mistake and getting their tires and supplies at wholesale prices.

An Ad of Intense Interest To Every Owner of An Auto in the Entire South. It Tells of an Error That Quickly Turned Into a Phenomenal Business Success

AUTO OWNERS---READ!

Four weeks ago---or to be more exact, August 17th---our printer turned over to us an edition of 50,000 copies of our Catalogue No.36, the facsimile of which we show above at the right.

By August 24th our records showed that a little less than half of the entire lot of catalogues had gone into the mails, having been sent out to our Southern list by our mailing department.

All of a sudden we discovered a terrific blunder---our printer had made a terrible error. Our local manager was absolutely terrified!

THE PRINTER HAD MADE THE MISTAKE OF BINDING OUR WHOLESALE CATALOGUES INTO RETAIL COVERS!

Our wholesale prices had gone, through a ridiculous error, to our Retail Trade!

You can imagine the state of mind of our Atlanta manager.

Mind you---20,000 catalogues had gone out!

And then---

A FLOOD OF ORDERS CAME---Retail orders at Wholesale prices. We truly were in a terrible predicament. Our first move was to wire, canceling the quotations and advising that we couldn't accept Retail orders for Auto Supplies at any such prices.

WHAT ELSE COULD WE DO?

But, try as we would, we couldn't stem the tide of orders. They completely overwhelmed us.

A hurried message brought the proprietor of the Printing Plant and the President of our Company direct to Atlanta!

What to do was the question.

It was a problem---a task!

And still the orders came---the mails were full of them---many came direct to our store. It was a crisis in our business.

But then---

OUT OF THE CHAOS CAME A NEW BUSINESS POLICY!

Since we had depended upon Great Volumes of business to make possible our low prices on auto supplies, we had found through this Printer's Error that this great Southland had a purchasing Power beyond our wildest expectations.

So the orders went forth---DISCONTINUE ALL WHOLESALE BUSINESS --- GIVE THE PUBLIC THE BENEFIT OF WHOLESALE PRICES! DEAL DIRECT!

So we take our first advertisement in the form of a Big Page Ad to tell Auto Owners of the entire South about an Error that is bringing about a wonderful change and increase in the volume of our already large business.

WHOLESALE CATALOGUE NO. 36 STILL STANDS TO THE RETAIL TRADE!

We intend to keep it so!

The flood of orders continue---but instead of sending them back we're filling them.

It all has created a great sensation among Southern Auto Owners.

The Cost of Automobiling is now at a positive minimum.

An error started it---immediate success established it.

So, Mr. or Mrs. Auto Owner, of you we ask---"HAVE YOU ONE OF THESE CATALOGUES NO. 36?"

If not, send for catalogue Now---this very day---there's no need of paying more. Buy Auto Supplies at Wholesale Prices.

So, Send for the book---it's free!

We Don't Think it Necessary to Advertise Our Special Prices in Detail, as Our Catalog Will Speak for Itself

SO, GET THE CATALOG

MAKE MONEY WITH POULTRY.

AMERICAN POULTRY is a magazine devoted entirely to helping earnest men and women make a financial success of poultry raising. Its staff of writers is composed entirely of those who have made a practical, instead of theoretical, success of poultry farming and who are glad to pass on the results of their hard-earned experience to AMERICAN POULTRY readers. There are many pitfalls in the path of the novice which may be entirely avoided by those who will follow the teachings set forth in this magazine. It fully explains how to make a start, how to construct houses, coops, and other devices how to get a large egg yield, how to cure and prevent disease, how to exhibit, how to get the top price for eggs, how to use incubators and hundreds of other points which every one wishes to know. It explains the famous secret system through which poultrymen have become rich and afterwards sold for hundreds of dollars. AMERICAN POULTRY is a large, handsomely illustrated monthly journal, well printed on fine paper, and should be found on file in the home of every poultry lover. No beginner in the poultry business should think of being without it. It will save him many times the small subscription price. The advanced poultryman will also find it of great value; the articles being varied in their scope.

SPECIAL OFFER. The regular price of AMERICAN POULTRY is 50c per year, but in order to introduce it to several thousand new readers, we will, for a short time, give a large 200-page poultry book, which is a complete guide in the poultry business, absolutely free to every one sending 15c for a yearly subscription or $1.00 for a three-year-subscription to AMERICAN POULTRY. A trial six months' subscription (without book) will be sent for 25c. Never has so much been offered for so small a sum. Advantage of this offer should be taken at once.

What Will Be Effect Of Canal on Realty?

Coast Viewpoint Is That Benefits Have Already Been Discounted. Traders' Filmy Dream.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 13.—Never before have salesmen, dealing in any commodity, had a proposition available for their business of such magnitude as the Panama Canal. Never has any class of salesmen proved more resourceful in making "trade talk" of such a big proposition than have the real estate men of the Pacific Coast.

These men began years ago to expatiate upon the benefits that will accrue to the Pacific Coast when the canal is open. Their story has grown with the years until now it is a glowing romance, which is coining fancies into golden dollars. It is firmly believed by a large part of the California population that as soon as the Panama Canal is completed the Pacific Coast will become the principal theater of the country's activities.

This belief has enormously enhanced the value of real estate of all classes, from desert acreage to irrigated orange groves and city lots. Inasmuch as the real estate interests are the largest advertisers, Western newspapers and magazines have freely lent their columns to the spread of what may turn out to have been a great popular illusion.

The more conservative real estate men here, however, declare they do not expect any great changes to take place, since they believe that Panama Canal advantages have already been largely discounted in prices of past and present.

Boston Lot Value Is $150 a Square Foot

Land Bought for $100,000 Now Worth Over $2,000,000—Some Interesting Properties.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The property at the intersection of Washington and School streets, a block and a half away from St. Pauls Church, known as Old Corner Book Store, is now valued at $730,200, or $150 a square foot. The present building on this site was constructed in 1712. The land was then valued at $12,800, or $2.62 a square foot.

St. Pauls Church property on Tremont street, located between two commercial structures, was purchased in 1820 for $100,000. About 1892 an offer for the property for business purposes of $1,500,000 was declined, and, according to a conservative estimate in 1909, it was worth $2,000,000.

Back from the corner of Washington street, on Winter street, Boston, is a small site, purchased forty years ago for about $80,000 by the grandfather of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University.

It now nets his estate, of which President Lowell is one of five members, an annual rental of $60,000 per year, free of all taxes.

Trust Official Would Form Concern of $10,000,000 Capital—Government's Hands Off.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Frank Bailey, vice president of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, in an address delivered before the conference of the committee on agricultural development of the State Bankers' Association at Kansas City, made a strong plea for the formation of a great mortgage company, along the lines of the mortgage companies operating in New York City and to have a capital of not less than $10,000,000; that it should have a Government representative on the board, and should have its debentures legal investments for trustees, executors and institutions.

"It should start," said Mr. Bailey, "by dealing directly with the borrowers and form able companies to aid it in each State, half of the stock of which should be owned by local interests. Government interference or guarantee of its debenture should be avoided."

Millions of Beef Cattle Can Be Grown On Waste Lands of Southern Farms

Meat Can Be Produced at 2 Cents Per Pound That Will Sell This Year for 9 Cents—Pasturing Will Enrich Worn Acres.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Beef cattle will bring 9 cents per pound this winter. By living up to its opportunities the South can produce beef at from 3 to 4 cents per pound, live weight. No other section of the country can do so well.

The South has great areas of waste land, such as cut-over pine lands, worn-out farm lands, rough hill lands, swampy lowlands, on which cattle can graze for nine months of the year. A little cottonseed meal cake put in the field accessible at will will complete the ration of beef cattle for the greater part of the year in the South.

Bermuda grass as a permanent pasture, with Japanese clover, both of which will grow on the poorest of land, constitute ideal grazing food. These grasses, together with cottonseed meal, will put on flesh at from 1 1-2 cents to 2 cents per pound, when pasturage is charged up at $1.50 per month per head.

When it is considered that waste land, such as has been mentioned, would not yield that much revenue when used in any other way, in fact, would usually be looked to for no revenue at all, then will the value of turning waste places into profit by grazing beef cattle be appreciated.

Making Fine Pasturage.

The writer saw only recently a piece of land that had been abandoned for years, which had been gullied until only a few scrub pines found footing, now furnishing excellent pasture of Bermuda grass. The pines and blackberry briers had been cleared off and thrown in the gullies, some Bermuda grass was sown on the land and harrowed in, and the Japanese clover seemed only to be waiting the opportunity thus afforded to begin to thrive. The land was still poor, very poor. For cropping purposes it would be considered worse than useless. But the land is furnishing pasture for some fine-bred, high-producing dairy cows. Of course, there is big profit in dairying when milk-producing food is obtained upon such lands and with so little investment.

Another Bermuda-Japanese clover pasture has been seen by the writer, created on another gullied, worn and useless tract of land. The gullies are not yet filled, except by brush taken from the land. On this tract was a large herd of white-face Herefords, the mothers and their calves. They were turned into the pasture as soon as any pasture had appeared in the spring. They had been fed nothing else since, except occasionally some salt. They were living under range conditions. The cows were not milked except as the calves, which ranged with them from time of birth, attended to it. These cattle are rounded up at the stock barns and fed silage during the winter months.

Every Advantage in South.

Each year this herd will produce a carload or more of feeders for the market. Where can calves be raised and brought to marketing age with so little cost? Where can grazing land be obtained more cheaply? In what so-called beef-growing section of the country will bermuda grass or any other grass of such fine nutrient properties grow as successfully as in the South? In what country can cotton seed meal be obtained so cheaply?

But the advantages are not alone in pasturage on land that can be obtained for a song, but the South has a distinct advantage in producing barn feed. In the first place, the South has a shorter barn-feeding period, and over a great part of the South there is some pasturage the year round. In the second place, the South can grow silage crops in great abundance at the lowest possible cost. Take cane and sorghum, for instance. No better silo fillers can be found. Both corn and sorghum have found their finest development and largest yields in the South.

Of course, the silo is the economical feed supply. Winter feeding with anything else would be unwise. In fact, to buy feed with which to fatten cattle, even with the South's long grazing season, would mean loss. The food must be grown on the farm, and it can not be grown in any form so cheaply and so good for the cattle as silage.

Thoroughbreds Not Necessary.

To obtain the foundation stock it is not necessary to go in for both pure bred males and females. The pure bred male crossed on the home scrub cow is sufficient, provided that the grade bulls are killed. Wonders have been wrought with crossing of Hereford pure bred bulls or Short Horn bulls on piny woods cows. Somebody, of course, should have pure bred females, so that pure bred sires can be produced and disseminated for developing beef animals from the scrubs.

For the next few years those who introduce the most pure bred sires into the South will be the South's greatest benefactors of animal husbandry.

Of course, it is poor business trying to grow beef cattle without having an animal that will produce flesh in the largest measure for what he eats. Ordinary, scrub, tick-infested cattle of the South will not fatten profitably.

Again, it is not worth while to attempt beef production with ticky cattle. In the first place, a pure-bred sire from an uninfested territory will die of the tick fever when he gets into tick territory, thus preventing at the outset the foundation for a beef industry. In the second place, cattle of whatever breed are stunted from their youth up when raised in tick-infested territory.

The bar to hope is up against successful beef raising in the South where the tick remains. Fortunately the farmers have awakened to the seriousness of their situation in this respect and more tick-infested territory is being cleared now than at any time since the work was inaugurated several years ago.

It is easy enough to get rid of the ticks permanently, so easy that the tick can hardly be said to be a serious obstacle in the way.

Bought Jersey Bulls.

Along with the campaign of tick eradication the farmers are taking an interest in introducing pure-bred sires. Where the dairy inclination is strong, of course the Jersey and Holstein bulls are being purchased.

A Georgia community began to get interested in dairying only a few years ago, after getting rid of the ticks, by investing in Jersey bulls of high breeds.

The farmers went in for butter fat. They separated their butter fat and sold it to the milk and butter companies of the larger Southern cities. They have prospered beyond their expectations. A gentleman driving through the territory said that he could invariably pick out the dairy farmer, solely by the appearance of the farm lands. There was evidence of prosperity, increased soil fertility largely brought about by barnyard manures from cattle.

These farmers were utilizing the skimmed milk for building up a hog industry. Thus one step of progress opens up opportunities for others. All of the prosperity of the dairying farmers in that region hangs upon tick eradication and the pure-bred sire.

Aside from the food value and the foundation for a live stock industry which permanent pastures of Bermuda and native legumes afford, there is the important consideration of the grazing cattle bringing up the fertility of the land by reason of their droppings. Can any one think of a better way to rebuild the abandoned and gullied lands of the South? The poor land is actually restoring itself by furnishing food for cattle that returned valuable fertility to it, while at the same time yielding a profit of milk and butter through the cattle.

Grass Checks Erosion.

Again an important consideration favoring getting Bermuda grass on the waste lands, especially on the gullied slopes, is that it will serve to check erosion, hold the fertility which has been created in the land free from the power of the rains to wash or leach. In doing so the Bermuda is not only saving the land on which it grows, but is saving the soil of the rich bottom lands from being covered with washed sand, and saving the streams from being choked with accumulation that creates overflow or swamp lands of fertile acres.

While Bermuda grass is unquestionably the solution of the permanent pasture problem outside of the bluegrass region, there is widespread prejudice against it on the part of farmers. The belief obtains among them that the Bermuda grass is a pest which, once in a field, can not be eradicated, or that, if it is sown in one field, it will spread to another and, after a while, take the farm.

Much of this prejudice is without foundation. Its spreading habit is mostly by root and not by seed. Correct cultivation of any land will kill out Bermuda—that is, if a crop is cultivated as it should be in order to make a good crop of it, the grass will be killed. Where a Bermuda pasture is desired for cultivation, plowing in the fall, a repetition in March, followed by a harrowing to pull out the roots, will serve the purpose. Hogs turned on the field after the sod has been turned will eat the roots with relish and thus make away with them.

It has been found profitable to sow Burr clover with Bermuda, the Burr clover furnishing an early pasture and the Bermuda grass following to carry the grazing through for the remainder of the season. While cattle do not readily take to Burr clover, they acquire a taste for it in the absence of other pasture, and learn to thrive on it. Burr clover has an advantage as a soil builder over Bermuda, but none over the Japanese clover or lespedeza. They are legumes, therefore nitrogen gatherers.

Putting in of Winter Crop Essential in South

Putting in a winter cover crop is the most important thing for the Southern farmer to be looking after during the fall. The great staple winter cover crop has come to be oats. Nothing is better.

Oats can be sown in the fall between the cotton rows, three or four rows of oats between two rows of cotton. Next spring or in late winter the oats will furnish light grazing without harm and in summer produce a good crop of oats.

Of course, the great purpose of a winter cover crop is to check the wash and the leaching away of the soil fertility during the winter. Enormous loss has been going on each year by reason of bare lands in winter. It is the bane of cotton growing that it leaves the land exposed to erosion and leaching during a great part of the year.

By using oats, rye, barley, wheat, crimson clover, vetch or some other good cover crop, the Southern farmer gets two crops off of his land a year instead of one. Two crops obtained while saving the loss of the fertility of the soil is certainly attractive economy.

The second crop following oats in the summer is cow peas as a rule and nothing better can be grown in the South. It is a soil building crop and will make a larger crop of that which follows it than would have otherwise been obtained.

A point about selecting oats. Rust proof oats alone should be sown. If the farmer has oats which did not show rust during the past year he should sow them rather than purchase seed oats the rust proof qualities of which he can not absolutely know as he does those which he has grown himself.

Another important point which does not have to be emphasized after the experiences of this year's oats corn is that the oats be sown not later than November, preferably in October. Wherever oats were sown early in Georgia there were good crops this year. Where they were sown late, that is, in winter or early spring, the crop was a failure. The spring drouth prevented the late grown crops from getting a good start, and it was the late sown or spring sown oats that suffered most from rust.

Immigrants Coming To Settle on Farms

Neighborhood Around Ashburn on Boom as Result of Recent Land Activity—Good Crop Section.

ASHBURN, GA., Sept. 13.—Residents waiting to welcome new farm immigrants to the number of probably 250 who will come soon to occupy tracts purchased in the Dakota farm subdivision. Turner and surrounding counties are on a boom, and it is expected that population will experience a substantial increase in the coming year.

The success of the Dakota farm auction has turned the attention of a number of developers in this section to farm subdivisions. One of the members of the Atlanta party which came down for the auction declared that he believed there was more of a future in acreage transactions than in city property, since twice as much could be raised on the fertile lands of this section as on the hills of North Georgia.

UNIQUE BUILDING PLAN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—An unusual scheme of real estate co-operation has been made public through the announcement of the sale of sixty-two lots on the Winslow estate at Rosedale, Long Island. Thirty-one men, all employed in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, have purchased as many plots, each 50 by 100 feet, and have formed themselves into an association known as the Rosedale Realty Club.

Forsyth Street Now Leads in Big Structures

Hurt Building's 'Who's Who' Still a Secret

Here is the first picture taken from the top of the new Healey building at Forsyth, Walton and Poplar streets. It shows in striking manner how North Forsyth street has grown in public buildings. The view is toward the northeast, and shows the Piedmont Hotel and the Hotel Ansley and the Forsyth, Atlanta Trust and other buildings.

Realty Values Advance 500 Per Cent in Seven Years—Effect of Regrading.

Forsyth street has at last passed its rival streets in the race to erect public buildings. From a sunken little street leading diagonally off Peachtree seven years ago it has become a thoroughfare that to-day is a power in the competition with its older and more favored neighbors. Property values have jumped 500 per cent, and the percentage of building has been even greater. The completion of the Hotel Ansley and the Healey Building puts Forsyth ahead of Broad, its closest competitor, in the matter of high buildings. As for Peachtree, it is not in the running with these two in office buildings already built.

There is the Healey Building on Forsyth, with sixteen stories; the Grant, which is likewise common to Broad street, with ten; the Piedmont Hotel, also fronting on Peachtree, with ten; the Forsyth Building, with eight; the Hotel Ansley, with eleven; the Atlanta Trust Building, fronting also on Peachtree, with nine, and the Patterson, Federal, McKenzie and Studio buildings, with a total of fourteen more. Farther to the south is the Austell building, a pioneer in office structures which grew up before the later building influence set in.

Thoroughfare.

There are only about three vacant lots on North Forsyth, and real estate agents are asking what is going to happen next. Eyes have turned more than once on the Hugh Richardson frontage, southwest corner of Luckie street, where there is 150 feet, only partly improved. Mr. Richardson bought this last year for about $340,000, or $2,666 a front foot, and he now holds the inside lot for $4,000 and the corner for $5,000 a foot, an advance of practically 100 per cent.

Another vacant lot which is due to be handsomely improved in the near future is the lot bought by Albert Steiner, of the Atlanta Brewing and Ice Company, at the northwest corner of [illegible] street, opposite the Healey Building.

People w[illegible]ve been in Atlanta ten years remember the low brick and frame residences and shacks which formerly lined Forsyth, particularly in the "dip" at James street. About seven years ago Edwin P. Ansley bought a total of 500 feet on both sides of the street and filled in this depression. The result was a new and respectable street which has fulfilled every hope of its maker.

Remarkable Enhancement.

The average price paid by Mr. Ansley was $750 a foot, or $375,000, and to-day this frontage, without improvements, is probably worth $2,000,000. Among the owners from whom Mr. Ansley bought were Messrs. Parrott, Flanders, Orme, Phillips, Smith, Richardson, Griffin and Emery, and parts of the property had been in estates for many years, the section having once been a choice residential neighborhood of Atlanta.

In 1910 H. M. Patterson bought a lot on the west side of Forsyth, north of James, for $1,250 a front foot, and to-day it is worth $4,000. Morris Brandon bought about 100 feet on the opposite side, at the corner of Luckie, for $1,750 a foot. This lot now extends through to the junction of Broad and Peachtree, and was acquired by James R. Gray through agreement of heirs of the Walker P. Inman estate.

ADVICE OF L. C. GREEN IS TO BUY PROPERTY

L. C. Green, the well-known real estate agent, is a firm believer in the superiority of land investments over all others. "Stocks are good," he declares, "but from one cause or another fortunes are lost. Merchandise is good, yet how many lose their all in it? With land, you can't lose. Buy land. Own land. Many thousands are coming each year, yet no more land is being produced."

:·: Real Estate Gossip :·:

What influence, if any, does a big criminal case have on real estate? Most local real estate dealers think it is considerable. They point out that the mind of the public is diverted to such an extent that real estate trading is a secondary consideration.

This was the opinion of a large majority of local agents in regard to the Frank case. At least one agent was found, however, who believed that quiet real estate was due to something else than psychology and crime.

Colonization in South Georgia and Florida continues to occupy a good part of the time of leading Atlanta real estate agencies. A leading agency, for instance, is seeking to establish a colony on a 60,000-acre tract at DeLand, Fla. This is one of the most extensive acreage tracts that has been listed in Atlanta in several weeks.

Gradually the local agencies are establishing departments to look exclusively after farm lands. One well-known agency has a dozen pamphlets telling the advantages of farm tracts in South Georgia, and urging the better class of immigrant farmers to come South for agricultural opportunities.

Indications point to a great influx this winter which will swell the population of the State. It will be recalled that last winter many trainloads of immigrants passed through Atlanta for South Georgia and Florida, and in the next few months it is expected that a record will be set, since the railroads are offering more and more inducements for settlers who have little money for mileage.

The local situation, while not as pronounced as to foreign elements, is still quite as interesting. Thrifty Germans who speak only broken English are in great demand as landscape gardeners and truckers. Greeks by the score have forsaken fruit stands in the city and gone to the outskirts to cultivate small farm tracts. A good example is near the Soldiers' Home, southeast of the city. Greeks bought some lowland there for a song. Nobody else could utilize it, but the new owners made it produce fine vegetables, and the money from their produce has made possible the erection of comfortable cottages. In a different section of the county a hard-working Greek has acquired a fine spring from which he supplies a good part of the city population with drinking water.

The real estate agencies are lending encouragement to this kind of thrift, confident that the utilization of waste spaces which have agricultural possibilities will help that much generally to enrich the State.

The victory of the woman property owner in her fight to prevent a change in the name of McDaniel street to Oxford place has directed attention to previous efforts to change names, and has opened up the whole question of rearranging street names and house numbers. People are discussing what might have been accomplished had a definite plan been followed when Atlanta was a village. Streets should have been run universally north and south and avenues east and west, or vice versa, and the numbering of residences should have been after the "hundred block" system. In the early days a few ounces of prevention would have sufficed, but failing to use them, pounds of cure are now necessary.

It is extremely doubtful if Atlanta will ever have a systematic method of naming streets and numbering houses. Opposition to change always develops, and it is difficult to make a start. Real estate men recall vividly the effort to change the name of Peters street—how it gained support, then lost it, and is once more under consideration. Names of Governors and other men of note, it is contended, will always adorn Atlanta streets.

While it has often been suggested that an entirely new plan be tried, a well-known abstract lawyer pointed out that this would be almost impossible. "This would involve endless confusion in the examination of titles," he said, "and also muddle the tax situation and cause no end of inconvenience to citizens. Take an example. I was examining a title to a piece of property on Hume street. I went to a map and found the thoroughfare designated as Walker street and in the tax records I found it designated as Mansfield street. This street runs from North Moreland avenue to Euclid avenue, and I understand that it is now known as Mansfield. The reason for changing from Walker street was that there was another Walker, and this suggests that what is needed is to weed out the duplicates, and there will be less confusion.

"Titles must necessarily read 'formerly Hume, then Walker, and now Mansfield street,' just as we say 'Fulton, originally Henry County, Georgia.'"

Frequently the officials in the record room of the County Court House are perplexed over omissions and errors that creep into the land deeds which are filed. The omission of a date is frequent, but something more unusual happened the other day. Parties in a real estate transaction dated their papers September 1, 1913. Since very small things sometimes tangle realty transactions, a dealer remarked that this error might some day cause trouble, if not corrected in due time.

Acreage tracts around Atlanta are not as high as around most cities of the country, according to James H. Ewing, of the firm of Smith & Ewing. In fact, says Mr. Ewing, country land is as high at Lawrenceville, near Athens. Mr. Ewing hails from Lawrenceville, but he denies responsibility for prices that exist there.

CITY-PLAN'S MEANING

WHAT do Atlantans mean by "city-planning?" Is it tearing down a space in the middle of the town and building it over to resemble a section of Paris or Dresden? The Literary Digest opens up this question from a new angle and presents the following from The New York Municipal Journal:

"The evolution of city-planning from the architect's dream of an elaborate civic center of imposing buildings to an attainable regulation of a city's growth to promote the convenience and health of its citizens is making encouraging progress. Probably nothing has done more to retard real progress in city-planning than the idea entertained both by the people in general and by its most conspicuous advocates, that it meant chiefly, if not exclusively, the expenditure of enormous sums in the total transformation of certain central sections of the city and approaches thereto. We now realize that real city-planning is intelligent direction of the growth of a [illegible], with only such changes in the older sections as are necessary for health and economy. A city-planning commission might well consist of merely a council of department heads, the frequent meetings of which would help to give each a more comprehensive view of the city's needs and possibilities, while each should direct and plan for the future growth of certain branches (the city engineer, for instance, preparing the street plan), subject to the approval of the others—practically the commission plan of government applied to this particular subject. But whatever the method, the aim should be intelligent and comprehensive direction of the growth of the city as a whole and in all its branches."

Solicitors Clamor for Names of Tenants—Announcement Due Before October 1.

About a thousand representatives of office supplies in Atlanta are waiting patiently for announcement of the new tenants of the Hurt Building, which is due to open formally October 1. For weeks canvassers have been storming the little citadel at No. 33 Exchange place, anticipating that when 400 brand-new offices are thrown open there will be a genuine feast for the office supply man.

The general public has also been deeply interested, not only because the opening marks a distinct epoch in Atlanta's building history but because hundreds of people, apart from those who come from other cities, will be changing their business addresses, and need to be found.

"Who's who" in the Hurt Building has up to date been quite a secret, however, and the reasons are many. Most of the prospective tenants have requested the management of the building to withhold publication of names until the last moment. They declare that announcement of this kind would cause much confusion at this time. It would mean misunderstandings with landlords in regard to expiring leases, and a flood of mail would be sent to the uncompleted Hurt Building before the tenants moved in.

Tenants Will Listen Later.

Then a host of solicitors would be on the heels of tenants to sell them everything in the commercial calendar. The office supply men were the first in the field as prospective sellers. They learned of the move to keep names secret and they have made every effort to find out whom the occupants will be. A new office building, they reason, calls for new and improved furniture and fixtures. The tenants likewise see it that way. Wicker waste baskets will in many instances give way to wire, and the top of the flat desk will be of glass rather than of wood. Mahogany furniture will frequently take the place of oak. The tenants are as anxious to learn about good furniture values as the supply men are to tell it, but they insist that the argument come after they are insta[illegible]d, and not while they are in the act of moving.

Hence the temporary obscurity to which the management of the building has contributed liberally. "It wouldn't do to tell far in advance who is to be with us," explained a Hurt Building official Saturday. "We have so many requests from patrons that we must respect their wishes. It is part of our business to protect tenants, and this we have tried to do from the start. When the proper time comes, we shall give a complete list, and that will be before October 1. In the meantime people who have a right to know can learn through private sources."

Building 90 Per Cent Finished.

As for the Hurt Building itself, it is at least 90 per cent completed, according to Joel Hurt. The plan has been to complete the interior from top to bottom rather than bottom to top, and this explains why the top floors are ready and the ground floor not easy of entrance just now. Heretofore the uncompleted condition of the downstairs has prevented would-be renters from inspecting the building, but an elevator was started running Saturday, and little parties of business men have begun to go up and down.

Hereafter it will be possible to show the building to much better advantage, and it goes without saying that there will be a great increase in check marks on the rental cards. It is expected that in a few weeks all of the space will have been taken, and once this happens, Mr. Hurt will order the workmen to go ahead with the other section of the building that is to face Ivy street, and, incidentally, cover the entire block bounded by Ivy, Edgewood avenue and Exchange place.

CHINAMAN GOOD AS LEASEHOLDER

Members of Local Colony Busy Signing Renewals—Interesting Question of Legal Status.

Atlanta Chinamen are busy signing up business leases on central and semi-central property. The past year has been an unusually good one with members of the local Chinese colony, and renting agents report much activity in the renewal of leases.

According to John J. Woodside, the well-known renting agent, the Chinese make very acceptable tenants. They pay their rent promptly and give very little trouble. One of Colonel Woodside's tenants on Edgewood avenue has rented from him for eight or ten years, and in addition to paying the usual monthly stipend, has generously sought the Woodside family each Christmas with a cornucopia of teas, incense, trick boxes, Chinese lilies and nuts.

"The Chinaman is true to his contract as long as business is good," declared Colonel Woodside. "Occasionally, in a dull season, the tenant moves away without notice, and he can't be found again. I have sought his neighbors, but have never been able to locate him."

That local Chinamen are doing well is evidenced by the fact that they have been able to pay medium rents without trouble and have started handsome establishments. Conspicuous in lately acquired things is the electric sign, a shining example of which is seen at the chop suey establishment at the southwest corner of North Broad and Luckie streets.

There seems to be some doubt among real estate men if Chinamen can be forced to meet contracts. Colonel Woodside is of the opinion that the obligation in a lease agreement is only a moral one.

LOOK FAR AHEAD, URGES THOMSON

Recently Seeing New York, Councilman and Realty Dealer Presents Views on Building.

Albert D. Thomson, of the real estate firm of Thomson & Lynes, recently a visitor in New York, is full of the Gotham idea about building a city and hopeful that Atlanta will soon attempt to build likewise. This was not Mr. Thomson's first trip to New York, but it was his best, for he studied more in detail the civic plan which has enabled New York to jump ahead of all cities in the erection of buildings which serve the public.

"What we need in Atlanta," declared Mr. Thomson, "is a proper conception of how to go about building a city, and then enough interest and action to build it. We don't seem to have either to the necessary degree. Most of us are too provincial. We can't see beyond Atlanta, and some of our citizens don't believe there are any bigger buildings anywhere than we have here. As soon as we realize that we are not grown—that we have only started to grow—then we are in a fair way to proceed.

"And I tell you, New York is a fair model. I never saw anything like it, and every time I see the place, it opens my eyes to the good things that we might learn. I am told that 500,000 people visit New York daily, and that they spend not less than $2 each, which totals $1,500,000. The amount is probably a good deal higher. We should start attracting more people to Atlanta.

"Our office buildings are being built to meet present, rather than future, needs, and in every way we are building in a way to cause great traffic congestion. We made a mistake when we failed to appropriate $10,000 for a preliminary survey of the city under the direction of the Civic Beauty Commission. Such money would be returned to us tenfold."

Real Estate Gossip

New clauses tending to strengthen the local building code are badly needed, according to Assistant Building Inspector Charles J. Bowen. Mr. Bowen says that while it is within the province of the department to condemn buildings in danger of falling or fire, there is no paragraph giving the right to judge them for unsightliness or other surface disabilities. That is why, he contends, so many structures exist in the heart of the business district which have no place there. Mr. Bowen would not tear down any buildings just because of their outward appearance, but he would welcome the power to make owners dress up their fronts and roofs when the same fall into disrepute. The public good strikes him with more force than the individual right.

There are buildings on North Broad street, near the Broad street bridge, said Mr. Bowen, some of which are "rattle traps." Yet, the building department has no authority to order them torn down unless the foundation walls or other walls are tottering, or there is other shortcoming.

"We need more latitude if we are to serve the people well," declared the assistant inspector. "For a long time we have been trying to keep small metal shacks away from sidewalk lines, but the City Attorney has ruled against us. There ought to be a paragraph in the code which gives us the power to order buildings brushed up as well as torn down."

TAX LIENS ARE $244,000 IN NEW YORK CITY SALE

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The city of New York held a sale in the Aldermanic chamber of liens it holds against property owners who have failed to pay their taxes, water rents or assessments for local improvements which netted the treasury about $244,000.

On October 9, there will be another sale of liens affecting properties above Fourteenth street.

PERSONALITY OUTLIVES LIFE, SAYS SCIENTIST

Sir Oliver Lodge Declares That Psychic Region Can Be Studied Effectively.

EXISTENCE RESEMBLES LOOM

Intercourse Across the Chasm of Death May Be Gradually Attained, He Asserts.

Special Cable to The American.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, Sept. 13.—"I am one of those who think that the methods of science are not so limited in scope as has been thought, that they can be applied much more widely and that the psychic region can be studied and brought under law, too."

So declared the learned Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, in his address at the opening of the association's meeting here today.

And again the erudite president said:

"Already the facts examined have convinced me that memory and affection are not limited to that association with matter by which alone they can manifest themselves here and now, and that personality persists beyond personal death."

So, despite his denial that he would invade the psychic region in his address Sir Oliver did enter it, but he watched his every step, guarded his every word.

"Keystone of Evolution."

Said he to his great audience:

"If we have learned from science that evolution is real, we have learned a great deal. Surely evolution is not an illusion; surely the universe progresses in time. Time and space and matter are abstractions, but are none the less real; they are data given by experience; and time is the keystone of evolution.

"I see the whole of material existence as a steady passage from past to future, only the single instant which we call the present being actual. The past is not non-existent, however; it is stored in our memories; there is a record of it in matter, and the present is based upon it; the future is the outcome of the present and is the product of evolution.

Life Is Like a Loom.

"Existence is like the output from a loom. The pattern, the design for the weaving, is in some sort 'there' already; but whereas our looms are mere machines, once the guiding cards have been fed into them, the Loom of Time is complicated by a multitude of free agents who can modify the web. * * *

"Either we are immortal beings or we are not. We may not know our destiny, but we must have a destiny of some sort. Those who make denials are just as likely to be wrong as those who make assertions; in fact, denials are assertions thrown into negative form.

"Scientific men are looked up to as authorities and should be careful not to mislead. Science may not be able to reveal human destiny, but it certainly should not obscure it. Things are as they are, whether we find them out or not.

Asks for a Fair Trial.

"Allow us, anyhow, to make the attempt. Give us a fair field. Let those who prefer the materialistic hypothesis by all means develop their thesis as far as they can; but let us try what we can do in the psychical region and see which wins.

"Our methods are really the same as theirs—the subject matter differs. Neither should we abuse the other for making the attempt.

"In justice to myself and my coworkers I must leave on record our conviction that occurrences now regarded as occult can be explained and reduced to order by the methods of science carefully and persistently applied," said Sir Oliver, on whom universities have showered honorary degrees.

"The evidence, to my mind, goes to prove that discarnate intelligence, under certain conditions, may interact with us on the material side, thus indirectly coming within our scientific ken; and that gradually we may hope to attain some understanding of the nature of a larger, perhaps the real, existence, and of the conditions regulating intercourse across the chasm."

A., held its annual meeting at Copeland Church in Limestone County, and adopted resolutions pledging the support of the efforts that will be directed toward the removal of the dispensary from Huntsville and saloons from Sheffield. Turner, of New Decatur, was elected clerk.

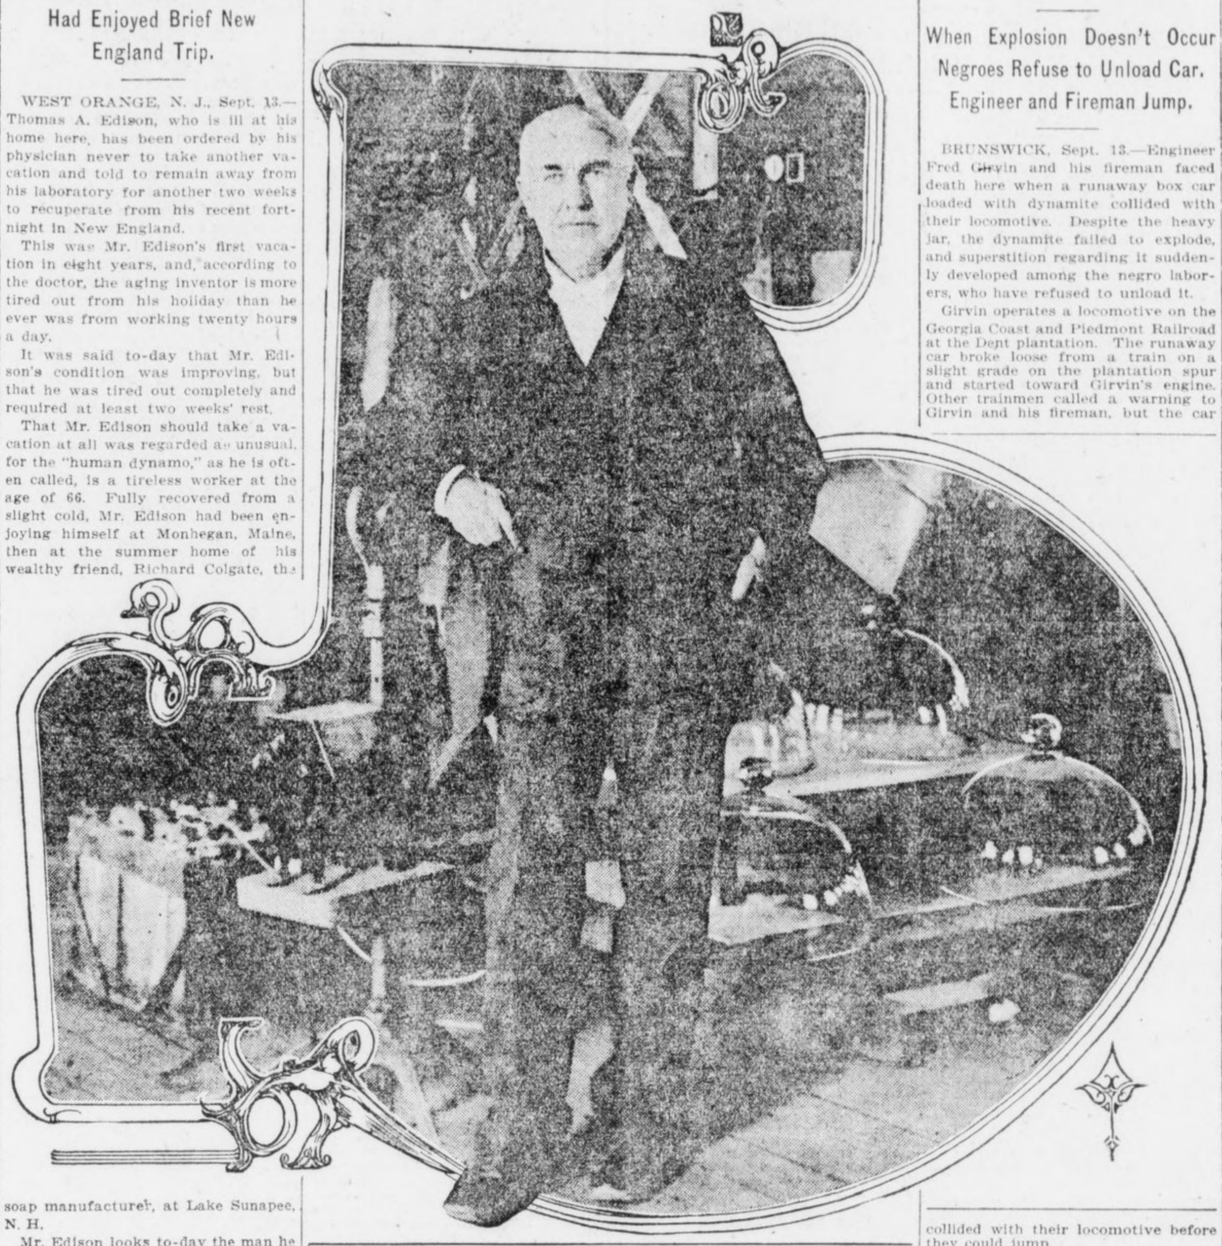
Rest Breaks Down 'Wizard' Edison

Doctor Forbids His Taking Vacation

Inventor Ill at Home, After He Had Enjoyed Brief New England Trip.



WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 13.—Thomas A. Edison, who is ill at his home here, has been ordered by his physician never to take another vacation and told to remain away from his laboratory for another two weeks to recuperate from his recent fortnight in New England.

This was Mr. Edison's first vacation in eight years, and, according to the doctor, the aging inventor is more tired out from his holiday than he ever was from working twenty hours a day.

It was said to-day that Mr. Edison's condition was improving, but that he was tired out completely and required at least two weeks' rest.

That Mr. Edison should take a vacation at all was regarded as unusual, for the "human dynamo," as he is often called, is a tireless worker at the age of 66. Fully recovered from a slight cold, Mr. Edison had been enjoying himself at Monhegan, Maine, then at the summer home of his wealthy friend, Richard Colgate, the soap manufacturer, at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Thomas Alva Edison, as he appears in his marvelous laboratory in West Orange, N. J., in which he labors 19 hours a day.

Mr. Edison looks to-day the man he is. His heavy thatch of white gives him a distinguished appearance at a distance. He is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and is thick-set enough to weigh about 175 pounds.

The traveling public noticed him at Monhegan, Maine, in Lowell, where he and Mrs. Edison stayed overnight, to break their long automobile trip, and at Lake Sunapee, where the Edisons wound up their New England stay.

Unusually Vigorous.

Those who failed to recognize the inventor saw in him an unusually vigorous man for his years.

If his hat was off, one noted instantly the wide, lofty brow, the brow of a thinker. As General Lew Wallace said of Simonides, the steward in "Ben Hur," it is apparent that a man with such a head must have a tremendous brain from cubic capacity, if nothing else.

Mr. Edison has bright eyes, gray-blue eyes, that gaze ever so keenly But they are not merely sharp eyes. They are kindly ones and humorous, too; for "Wizard" Edison exemplifies the old saying:

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

Witness his little joke about "running up to Colgate's to take a bath"—a sly illusion to the soap with which his host is ever associated.

Brain Works Like Flash.

Dressed usually in a sack suit of dark mixture, Mr. Edison is neat in appearance. Any idea that an inventor has to wear mussy clothes and necktie askew does not apply to Mr. Edison. Maybe he is naturally natty, maybe Mrs. Edison sees to it that her distinguished husband always is presentable. Anyhow, he is as well kept as a man need be.

Speak to Mr. Edison and right away you realize that you have started something.

He replies quickly.

His brain seems to work like a flash.

His answer comes on the instant, and is a full, complete one. Mr. Edison knows what he knows and when he makes a reply he covers the ground.

He uses few gestures, but he keeps his right hand cupped up against his right ear because he is hard of hearing in the left ear and he uses the right one. He has put his hand up to that ear so many thousand times that he has actually pushed the lobe of the ear out a little.

Cordial and Democratic

He is as cordial as he is alert and as simple and democratic as he is cordial. Such is the best known living inventor in appearance.

Mr. Edison has pronounced ideas on about every topic of current thought, from "X-ray" gowns to mental standards and from eugenics to "Casino Johnny," as he dubs Harry K. Thaw.

ACADEMY CREEK CHANNEL IS DEEPENED ELEVEN FEET

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—The work of deepening the channel of Academy Creek has been completed and will save many miles in reaching the Akin docks here. The channel for a distance of 2,000 feet was deepened from 11 to 22 feet in low tide.

HERE ARE MR. EDISON'S VIEWS ON SOME OF THE LIVE TOPICS

DANCES AND DRESS—The weird dances and freakish dressing are not an indication of moral deterioration, but merely the expression of peculiar mental flights. They are here to-day and gone to-morrow.

EUGENICS—A splendid proposition. Affection will not be subordinated. As physical and intellectual evolution takes place affection will be deeper and more wholesome.

THAW—It is about time we lost "Casino Johnny." The country is better without him and too much publicity has been given him.

AMERICA—America is the hope of the world. Here we are constantly advancing, because the mental standard is constantly improving as the result of public school education.

TRUSTS—Trusts are good and bad. Government control means the end of the trusts that conspire against the public good. It is for the Government to regulate the trust business, eliminating the bad and protecting the good.

ROOSEVELT—A solid man, an honest one, who has been under fire for twenty years, without one shaft by the enemy striking a vulnerable spot.

POLITICS—I am a Progressive. Advancement cannot be attained without these changes. The Republican and Democratic parties stand for the old order of things.

MEXICO—Latins and Anglo-Saxons do not mix and never will. Mexico is incapable of self-government. It would not be wise for us to interfere.

VACATIONS—It does seem great to have a day off. What a wealth of material there is for the human mind to enjoy if one only has one's eyes open to it.

WORK—Sometimes, after nineteen or twenty hours' work; I hate to give it up, even for a few hours' rest.

SLEEP—Sleep is largely a matter of habit.

ELECTRICITY—We are in the infancy of electricity. It is taking the place of steam the world over.

"CANNED" MUSIC—It has been the aim of all phonograph manufacturers to eliminate the scratching noise of the needle and the composition. Eventually we will produce music minus all scratching sound.

COTTON RECEIPTS ARE HEAVY AT VALDOSTA

VALDOSTA, Sept. 13.—Cotton receipts here have been very heavy this week, and despite the rather poor price for sea islands, there does not seem to be any disposition to hold the crop back. Every farmer seems anxious to get his cotton to market as soon as ginned, and to sell it at once. No. 1 sea islands is now bringing about 20c a pound.

TOBACCO GROWERS TO MEET.

JESUP, Sept. 13.—On the second Tuesday in October a Wayne County tobacco growers' association will be organized here.

DYNAMITE CAR RUNS WILD AND HITS ENGINE

When Explosion Doesn't Occur Negroes Refuse to Unload Car. Engineer and Fireman Jump.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—Engineer Fred Girvin and his fireman faced death here when a runaway box car loaded with dynamite collided with their locomotive. Despite the heavy jar, the dynamite failed to explode, and superstition regarding it suddenly developed among the negro laborers, who have refused to unload it.

Girvin operates a locomotive on the Georgia Coast and Piedmont Railroad at the Dent plantation. The runaway car broke loose from a train on a slight grade on the plantation spur and started toward Girvin's engine. Other trainmen called a warning to Girvin and his fireman, but the car collided with their locomotive before they could jump.

The freight car was nearly torn from its trucks, but an explosion failed to follow. The negro laborers who were preparing to unload the car took to the woods and absolutely refused to return to their task.

That the dynamite did not explode from the jar is regarded as miraculous by men on the plantation who are accustomed to handling the explosive.

Aged Justice Is Near Death From Fist Blow

J. S. Kimbrough, 70 Years Old, Sustains Broken Jaw in Altercation With Charles Spires.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—J. S. Kimbrough, for the past twenty years a Justice of the Peace in Phenix City, Ala., is in a critical condition, as a result of a broken jaw, caused by a blow from the fist of Charles Spires. Judge Kimbrough was knocked down and rendered unconscious for several hours.

Owing to the fact that he is 70 years of age, his recovery is considered doubtful.

METHODIST STEWARDS OF SAVANNAH ORGANIZE

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The boards of stewards of the Methodist churches in Savannah propose to organize themselves into a union for social and fraternal development. Committees have been appointed with power to perfect an organization. These committees will meet in joint session at Epworth Church next Thursday evening.

The idea was first suggested by the presiding elder of the district, the Rev. W. F. Smith, who briefly outlined the many benefits of such an organization.

TWO OLD SEA DOGS MEET AFTER QUARTER CENTURY

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—When the steamer Ruth arrived in port September 10 two old sea dogs met who had not seen each other for twenty-five years. They were Captain Duncan Wright, pilot commissioner of this city, and Captain Risk, of the steamer.

Captain Wright and Captain Risk were on the same vessel as far back as 1876, when Captain Risk's father was master of the schooner Laura Gertrude. Captain Wright and Captain Risk developed a warm friendship for each other and very affectionate was the greeting they extended each other.

THREE LINKS CONVENTION AT COOLIDGE ADJOURNS

THOMASVILE, Sept. 13.—The Second District Convention of Odd Fellows at Coolidge this week was most successful and well attended. Delegates were present from every lodge in the district.

Addresses were made by R. L. J. Smith, of Commerce, who represented the grand master of the State, and by C. A. Vonderleoth, of Athens, grand treasurer.

Hon. Roscoe Luke and B. M. Zangwill, of this city, were also among the speakers. The next meeting will be held in Thomasville.

BAILIFF CLAIMS KILLING OF BOY WAS ACCIDENT

Trial of Columbus Officer Who Shot Youth on Account of 50-Cent Debt Set for Friday.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Robert L. Willis, the Columbus bailiff who shot and killed Luther Hawkins, the Atlanta youth, August 29, will be given a preliminary hearing next Friday morning before Recorder Frank D. Foley, who will sit in the case as a special magistrate.

It will be remembered that Willis, in company with Charles Jordan, a boarding house proprietor, was attempting to arrest Hawkins under a warrant charging him with beating a 50-cent board bill, when the latter started to run off from the officer, laughing at the time. The officer drew his revolver and began flourishing it in the air, when the gun was suddenly discharged, and Hawkins fell to the ground mortally wounded, dying a few seconds afterward.

Says Killing Was Accident.

Since the firing of the fatal shot Willis has maintained that his revolver was accidentally discharged, while the State claims to have eyewitnesses who state that Willis, after taking deliberate aim, shot and killed him. The State has refused to divulge the names of the witnesses.

Willis will be represented by T. Hicks Fort, Solicitor of the City Court, and Attorney D. L. Parmer, who will maintain that the defendant accidentally shot Hawkins, while the contention of Solicitor General George C. Palmer, who will represent the State, will be that the killing is murder. The father of young Hawkins is now making Columbus his home in order to attend the preliminary hearing and assist in the prosecution. The people of Columbus continue to condemn the killing, because of the smallness of the offense that had been committed by the young man, whose life was forfeited because he did not pay a balance of 50 cents on a board bill, for the simple reason that he did not have the money at the time.

35 to Cross Hot Sands of Desert

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—A committee composed of J. Edgar Chancellor, Park Dexter, James W. Woodruff, W. L. Williams and Jack Stern, representing Columbus Shriners, is making extensive preparations for entertaining Shriners from South Georgia and East Alabama, who are coming to the city September 24.

A special train will reach the city from Savannah on the evening of September 23, bringing a team of 75 Shriners who will come equipped with a car full of paraphernalia for putting on the work on the day following. There is a class of 35 Shriners in Columbus to be inducted into the mysteries of the order and the work of initiating this class will be one of the features of the meeting.

Thought Delirious Man Was a Ghost

Fever Patient Escapes From Savannah Hospital Dressed Only in Night Shirt.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A ghostly presence startled the residents in the neighborhood of the Georgia Infirmary on two nights this week.

A white, blurred figure, flitting silently from shadow to shadow, gave superstitious spectators a thrill, and awakened startled curiosity in those not afflicted with a belief in the supernatural. The police were summoned.

The mystery was exploded when the officers arrived in an automobile and identified the ghost as a patient who had escaped from the infirmary.

In the absence of his nurse a fever patient slipped out of a window and went his way. He was clothed in his nightshirt.

RUN-OFF NECESSARY IN SPARTANBURG CITY RACE

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 13.—No candidate in the Democratic primary received a majority on last Tuesday, hence a second municipal primary has been called for next Tuesday. O. L. Johnson, incumbent, and John F. Floyd, the two leading candidates, will again make the race for the Democratic nomination for Mayor.

Eight candidates will make the race for Commissioner out of the nineteen who entered the first race. The election will be held under the new commission form of government, which goes into effect with the new officers.

DALTON CHURCH TO MEET FOR WORSHIP IN THEATER

DALTON, Sept. 13.—Beginning tomorrow Sunday school and church services of the First Presbyterian church will be held in a motion picture theater. This arrangement is the result of the beginning of the rehabilitation work on the new church building.

Various local churches offered the use of their buildings, but the congregation voted to accept the offer of a motion picture theater. The new church is well ventilated and filled with electric lights and fans, and will prove a cool place for worship.

NEW STEAMER ADDED TO FLEET ON CHATTAHOOCHEE

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Owing to the increase in traffic on the Chattahoochee River, the Merchants and Planters' Steamboat Company put on an additional boat Saturday, adding the Three States to the City of Eufaula and the W. C. Bradley. Later in the season still another steamer will be put into commission.

'Everybody Tango,' But Two Orchestras Couldn't Stand Pace

Musicians Fall From Exhaustion, but Tampa Dancers Cry for More. Just Couldn't Get Enough.

TAMPA, Sept. 13.—Had the tango pedometer been attached to the ankles of any of the buds who took part in the dance given by J. C. McKay at the Country Club Wednesday night they would have broken all records.

"For once we'll have just all the dancing we want," said Mr. McKay.

Consequently he engaged two orchestras instead of one, with orders to relay when the pace got too hot, so that there was continuous music for three straight hours.

Then the two orchestras played out, but still there were cries for more music.

"Never let it be said that I didn't do my best," said Collins Gillett, and he went to the pianola.

Collins is something of an athlete, but he played out in less than an hour, and there were still shouts for "Encore." They didn't get it.

Can Serve No Quail In Restaurants or Hotels in Florida

Game Laws Have Practically Retired Game Birds From Markets. May Change Name.

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 13.—Quail have been practically retired from the market in Florida because of the strict State laws now in force for the protection of the game birds.

Under the law, not only may hotel proprietors who serve quail be prosecuted, but any person who buys and eats a prohibited bird at a hotel or restaurant out of season may be prosecuted, according to D. J. Herrin, who was recently appointed Game Warden in this county by State Game Warden E. Z. Jones.

In order to avoid prosecution, it is said, the hotel men will serve the toothsome birds under another name, but as Herrin anticipates this trick, arrests are expected when they try it.

Tars Marooned as Trousers Are Stolen

Sailors in Savannah Unable to Return to Ship When Apparel Is Missed.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Three sollicitous comrades led a pair of extremely sleepy bluejackets to a room in the Belmont Hotel where the two erstwhile merrymakers went peacefully to sleep, and their comrades departed. After a time they returned to the hotel and awakened the sleepy pair for return to their ship.

But they didn't depart. The reason for the delay was that neither custom nor the ordinances of the city of Savannah approve of a man's appearing on the streets without his trousers. And these highly necessary parts of the apparel of the weary sailors had been abstracted as they slept.

The police were asked to aid in the search for the missing trousers. After a long and exhaustive quest the garments were found hidden in a bureau drawer in the room. The pockets had been depleted of coin.

'Boy Burglar' Admits To Seven Robberies

Teasdale Calmly Pleads Guilty to Charges When Arraigned Before Savannah Recorder.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—With the same frankness that has characterized his demeanor since his arrest, William Teasdale, alias W. F. Palmer, the Jacksonville "boy burglar," pleaded guilty to seven charges of burglary at his preliminary hearing in Police Court, and was held by Recorder Schwarz for trial in the Superior Court.

Teasdale was arrested after a report had been made to headquarters that a young man was trying to dispose of certain articles at a suspiciously low price. This report was made by M. J. Bettencourt, who kept the young man under surveillance and was of assistance to the police in locating him.

Divine Healer in Chattanooga Jail

Francis Schlatter, Thought Dead, Arrested on Charge of Drunkenness. Had Taken Name of Waters.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Francis Schlatter, the divine and psychic dealer, of Chicago, who, with his cult, enjoyed an international reputation a decode ago, was discovered here today in E street jail, where he had been confined under the name of Fred Waters, on a charge of inebriacy.

Numerous letters addressed to him disclosed his identity. Schlatter has been reported dead upon many occasions, once at Denver, Colo., and another time at Albuquerque. He precipitated a riot in Kansas City a few years ago.

Decided Decrease In Infant Death Rate

Rigid Dairy Inspection Shows Results in Tampa—Report of Expert.

TAMPA, Sept. 13.—The success of Tampa's pure food department is shown by the fact that 2,600 dairy cows were inspected last year and 412 showed tuberculosis, while of the same number inspected this year but 97 reacted.

The figures are given in Chief R. I. Gordon's report, made public to-day. The Hillsborough Medical Society is authority for the statement that the work has greatly depressed the infant death rate.

5,000 REGISTER TO BALLOT FOR MACON MAYOR

Race for High Office Grows in Interest as Day Approaches. Claims of Candidates.

MACON, Sept. 13.—To what extent Macon is interested in the mayoralty campaign is shown by the registration of over 5,000 citizens. This registration exceeds by nearly 1,800 the registration of the Miller-Moore election of 1909.

With only thirteen days intervening before the election on September 26, the three mayoralty candidates are keyed up for much hard work on the last lap of the race. The most work in the line of public speaking will probably be done by the Wallace-Miller ticket, which is running on an anti-administration platform. The Miller workers will have a rally Monday night in South Macon and another during the week in East Macon. There will also be meetings in North Macon, and in the Third and Fourth Wards.

Mr. Dasher has a number of ward rallies scheduled.

Starting on Monday night, September 22, there will be public rallies at the city auditorium for four consecutive nights. The Miller party will have two, the Smith workers one, and Dasher one.

Predictions Vary.

Upon the closing of the registration, the Miller campaign committee made the prediction that there would be 4,200 votes polled, and that Miller would receive 2,150; Smith, the administration candidate, 1,550, and Dasher, independent, 500. The Smith forces predicted Smith's election by a majority of fully 700. Dasher merely stated that he was confident of election. Neither Miller nor Smith concede over 500 votes to Dasher.

The charge made by Dasher, both from the platform and in the public print, that the Macon Railway and Light Company is contributing liberally to Smith's campaign fund, elicited an emphatic denial from Smith.

'Menagerie' Coach Will Tour the South

Central of Georgia Will Send Live Stock Exhibit to Various Fairs.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The Central Railroad "menagerie coach"—the exhibit car used in the transportation of horses, pigs and various and sundry live stock for exhibition purposes—in charge of Troy G. Chastain, the road's agricultural expert, will again this year make an extended tour covering the better portion of the fall months.

The plan of furnishing exhibits to fall fairs in Georgia, Alabama and other States traversed by the Central was inaugurated last year.

The special car used in transporting the animals and exhibits will leave Montgomery on September 29, and will visit Columbus, Augusta, Atlanta and numerous smaller cities before winding up its itinerary on December 1 at Atlanta, where a pretentious exhibit will be made in connection with the State Corn Club show.

Shake-up in Athens Postoffice Expected

Postmaster William Fleming May Be Asked to Make Room for Devout Democrat.

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—United States auditors have been checking up the local postoffice for the last ten days, and it is freely rumored that a shake-up is scheduled such as has just happened in Atlanta. Postmaster William Fleming was appointed at the expiration of Cleveland's term as President, and if he does not see fit to resign, he will very probably be asked to step down and out to make room for a more devout Democrat.

Captain J. H. Rucker has been mentioned prominently for the position, as has Harvey Stovall, who is a brother of the United States Minister to Switzerland.

Freight Rate Bureau To Meet in Raleigh

North Carolina Shippers and Legislators Prepare for Long War With Railroads.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 13.—Fred N. Tate, president of the Just Freight Rate Association, has called a mass meeting of shippers and business men to be held in the Raleigh Auditorium Wednesday, September 24, the same day the General Assembly meets in extraordinary session.

So important is the freight rate matter regarded that Governor Craig, in issuing his call, placed freight rates in front of constitutional amendments, thereby emphasizing his position. Many believe that the State will enter upon a long warfare with the railroads unless an agreement is reached.

Drew $6,000 Salary; Gave Wife Nothing

Charged in Divorce Petition That Florida Man Did Not Provide for Current Needs.

TAMPA, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Iola Annie Holmes, who is suing her husband, son of County Commissioner Holmes, of Jacksonville, for divorce, says that he did not supply her with money for her current needs, though he has an income of $6,00 a year.

She claims he kept drunk constantly and did not provide a home for her, requiring her to live in a Franklin street rooming house.

'BLUFFING OUT OF DATE; HIGH FINANCE NO LONGER SACROSANCT'---FORBES

Calm Reception of New Measure by Big Business Suggests Infinite Humbugging in the Previous Tariff Panics and Shows Present Trend Toward a Real "Square Deal."

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Wall Street is emerging from its depression. Many industrial stocks have risen $5 and $15 per share since mid-June and the best railroad issues also have advanced. Bond likewise are substantially higher.

The importance of this to the business world lies in the fact that improvement in Wall Street usually precedes betterment in general trade conditions.

Is it not remarkable, however, in view of past history, that the radical tariff revision just agreed to by the United States Senate should not have caused a quiver in the mercantile world? Does it not suggest that there was infinite humbugging on former occasions, that tariff panics were largely artificial, devised for ulterior purposes?

Bluffing no longer is serviceable. The people do not take capitalists quite so seriously as of old. "Vested interests" no longer are looked upon with awe, once the inequitable nature of "vested interests" is realized by the electorate.

All this is healthy. It spells progress. It points toward a great readjustment of economic relations. High finance and big business no longer are regarded as sacrosanct. The strongest capitalists and corporations are being brought from their pedestals down to mother earth. They can not maintain the illusion that to lay a hand upon them means ruin for the whole country.

"Square Deal" Arriving.

We are getting on a man-to-man basis. The vaunted "square deal" is to be made a thing of reality, not merely an empty phrase on the hustings.

Capital is learning this.

The downfall of the New Haven oligarchy is in its way as portentous a sign of the times as the new tariff law. So is the determination to remove control of the nation's currency from private hands to the Federal Government, the representatives of the people. Nor is the new arbitration act, now being applied to the Eastern trainmen's dispute, out of harmony with the general trend.

The people—the ordinary householder, the consumer, the man who pays the bills—are rising up and asserting their rights against both capital and labor. Did you notice that a "representative of the public" is sitting on the railway arbitration board in session here?

Other abuses will be tackled in due course.

And most capitalists, realizing their impotence, seeing they no longer can scare the voters by dire threatenings, are accepting the situation sensibly and shaping their course in accordance with the march of civilization.

Panic Would Be Futile.

These reflections, which will strike some as inopportune and out of place in this article, may serve to explain why business men and financiers are not precipitating the customary "tariff panic." Such action would be futile and therefore puerile and foolish.

What, let us inquire, has happened on the greatest market place in the New World during the months the tariff bill has been moving toward the statute books? The New York Stock Exchange is in reality the market of markets, the mirror of conditions in every line of business. Look at how typical stocks have acted since June 14 despite every grave damage to crops:

The best grades of bonds have done equally well.

All fear on monetary stringency has been removed—provided, of course, Wall street does not cut senseless capers such as the most powerful interests do not favor at present.

The boom in Union Pacific was started by an announcement in the New York American that a "melon" would be cut in the near future. In three days there was a rise of almost 10 points. That should be enough to discount, in the long run, a very substantial distribution, for it must not be forgotten that a company can not turn its investments into cash, give away the cash and still draw dividends on investments it no longer owns. Union Pacific can not distribute the cake and still keep it.

Copper Shares Dangerous.

Perhaps another cautionary word may be fitting concerning the violent flurry in copper shares based wholly on the figures issued by the Copper Producers' Association. That body should not be regarded as above manipulating its returns, to use no stronger term. There are several ways in which the monthly returns can be prepared cleverly so as to help or hurt the stock market. For the present, everything is being done to promote speculation in copper shares.

The advance already has gone far, even should the numerous bullish arguments energetically promulgated be fairly well founded.

These articles have advocated investments in sound stocks and bonds for several months and those who made purchases have done well. Many issues are still cheap, but quite a few look dear and dangerous. Seasoned investments will prove safer than volatile speculations of the Amalgamated kind. Certain railroads whose dividends are wabbly, such as Chesapeake and Ohio, also should be avoided rigidly.

There is no need to become excited lest the market run away. The stock exchange is open every business day. There is plenty of stuff to go round—and more will be dumped upon the market the moment underwriters see a chance of its being absorbed.

While, therefore, trustworthy securities should improve in price—irregularly, of course—it would be a mistake to imagine that the time has come to buy "A. O. T."—any old thing.

The state of the crops should keep the market within bounds.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

Standard Oil interests are reported to have experienced "a change of heart" regarding the stock market, and now expect improvement before 1914. This is the first time since the "dissolution" of the Oil Trust that Wall street has heard of No. 26 Broadway being bullish.

* * *

The late James R. Keene made very few confidants; in fact, he was known to be confidential to only one person, his office boy. At one time Keene had been advised by his doctor that a baked apple eaten daily would benefit him greatly. He told the dreadful secret to his office boy, who was also playing the market. The youngsters figured that the time wasted in getting the apple would mean his absence from the ticker. So he went to a restaurant and picked out the most unpalatable-looking apple in the place. After Keene had eaten it he conveniently forgot his physician's orders, and the boy never had to purchase a second apple.

Upward Movement In Stocks Keeps On, 3 Pacific Leading

Union, Southern and Canadian Active—All European Markets Show Sympathetic Firmness.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The session of the stock market to-day was unusually interesting for a Saturday. Yesterday's upward movement was continued, although the trading was more restricted. Reading, Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley and the Copper shares were the most active.

European markets were evidently affected by the increase of speculation here. At Berlin, Paris and London prices were firm, with sharp advances in the more active stocks.

The retirement of a large short account because of the reiteration of the extra dividend report was the only reason advanced for Union Pacific's gain of more than 10 points during the week. No official intimation of the truth of the dividend report has been forthcoming except by inference from a statement made by the chairman of the company.

The bank statement to-day was reassuring, although there were no very striking changes. The increased surplus showed the general bank position had been strengthened.

Foreign money centers are occupied with preparations for heavy fall payments and for protecting their gold supplies.

The report from Paris that French bankers have arranged loans aggregating $900,000,000 from several nations, including Austria, Russia and Turkey, has been received here with considerable doubt.

Rains May Improve Crops in Dry Belt

Crop Guessers Incline to Small Figures Despite Recent Helpful Showers.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—One of the questions most discussed by the cotton trade during the week was whether the rains in the belt, where the heat and lack of moisture were injuring prospects, would do very much good or justify enlargement of crop ideas. The preponderant opinion is that they will help somewhat and, given a late fall and continued favorable growing conditions, the yield will be bettered considerably. There will be improvement of quality by the checking of premature opening. Many bolls which would have been half-sized now probably will develop to normal size.

The rains, however, has not yet been general, though enough have fallen to check extremely bullish ideas and cause a more conservative view of the situation.

It still is a difficult matter to get a line on what the trade expects in the way of yield, though there is range of ideas from about 13,500,000 to 14,500,000, with more under the minimum than are over the maximum figure. At this center most guesses seem to be around 14,000,000. Prospects in this section are good, which may have some effect on the views as to total yield.

Price Ideas Variant.

How much a crop of 14,000,000 bales is worth brings no end of argument. All signs seem to justify expecting the world to consume as much the coming year as it did last, provided, of course, prices do not go too much higher. It is not thought prices now ruling are extreme, for the average price of middling upland last year was about 12.25c. Quotations in the belt for that grade now range from about 12 1-2 to 13c.

The market has been so erratic since the Government's condition report came last week, the legislative situation in Washington having been a big factor, that weather conditions have taken a secondary place. The weather still is to be considered, though the date of frost is some way off, and it will require something abnormal to be a potent influence.

The frost will not be very important, except perhaps in some sections of the central and over a large part of the eastern belt, where rains have kept the crop green and growing. Of course, a spell of wet weather now would change the aspect to some extent and increase the importance of frost, as a top crop might be a prospect.

The market has been given thrills by the news regarding the tax on futures, the announcement that it is not to go into effect until the beginning of the season of 1914 proving quite bullish. But it is felt that matters are not yet settled, and in the meantime there will be nervousness.

Spots Not Moving Freely.

The spot demand has not yet proven that spinners are going to buy freely at the higher levels, and with the movement increasing there has come difficulty in sustaining values. With the speculative support restricted on the legislative program, there has been trouble in taking care of hedge sales, the latter having increased when spot demand failed to expand enough to absorb offerings of the actual.

It is hoped demand soon will take on larger volume, but that is one of the uncertainties. Some talk of producers holding has been heard, but not given serious attention, as the money conditions are against the scheme, to say nothing of the dubious wisdom of such a policy so early in the year.

The fact that the Census Department's first ginning report set a new high record was regarded as indicating early maturity rather than big yield, though the gains over last season were made outside of the drouth sections of the belt.

Cotton Options Up On Weather Reports

Rains Likely to Stain Unpicked Crop in Texas—Ocean Freight Rates Lower.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Options had a rise to-day of some little importance, due to a reaction from the recent decline and short covering and because rains had been on rather more general and heavier than reported previously.

The crop to-day, being open with the lint exposed is likely to stain with excessive rainfall. The forecast is for a continuation of unsettled conditions and fears are entertained.

Whereas last year ships were crowding the harbors of the Gulf ports waiting for cotton already sold for delivery in Europe and elsewhere at very high rates of freight, this year Galveston alone has thirty-seven ships waiting for cargoes at reduced rates. This does not argue in favor of a heavy foreign demand.

Speculation in cotton during the last week has been on rather wide lines and several large speculative firms are credited with heavy accumulations.

With the passage of a tariff bill, contrary to most expectations, the cotton goods division of the dry goods market has shown decided strength and has worked into a stronger position during the week. A very satisfactory volume of business has been put through and the firm market for raw material has aided jobbers in making sales both for immediate delivery and forward shipments. All descriptions of finished goods have advanced in price since the recent rise in the cotton market and contrary to expectations sales have increased as prices rose.

Estimated cotton receipts:

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 13.—Influenced by news indicating a favorable modification of the Clarke bill, the cotton market has shown a strong upward tendency in the last two days.

The reaction started yesterday and continued to-day, January contracts advancing to 13.12, at which level longs were inclined to take profits over the week-end, causing some recession before the close which was steady at a net gain of 8 to 10 points on the active months.

The spot market was reported steady and ¼ cent higher on all grades. Sales amounted to 343 bales of spots and 536 bales to arrive on the basis of 12 15-16 cents for middling.

Wheat Firm Despite Weak Coarse Grains

Cash Houses Buy Leading Breadstuff—Farmers Show Clearly They Will Hold.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	92@94
Corn—No. 2	75
Oats—No. 2	43

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Wheat showed considerable strength to-day in spite of the weakness in other grains. The cash houses were the principal buyers and kept the offerings limited. The domestic market exhibited excellent firmness. The Northwest, where the first free run of new spring wheat is in. Premiums have been maintained everywhere. Farmers have demonstrated they want to hold.

The cables were higher, contrary to all expectation, due to covering of shorts in Liverpool, and firmer and fewer Canadian offers.

The trade had the report of a prominent local statistician which made the spring wheat crop 10,000,000 bushels more than the Government figures, but this did not seem to have much effect.

There was a lot of week-end liquidation in corn and in addition to such selling, further pressure was put upon the market by professional and elevator interests.

Oats dragged after corn to some extent.

Under liquidation by holders of October had its effect, and week-end pressure by large packers, supplemented by scattered selling elsewhere, a lower range of prices resulted.

WHEN WEEVIL COMES STATE MUST BATTLE

Three-fourths Crop Possible if Every One Fights, Experts Learn From Louisiana.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

With everybody in a community fighting weevils, according to Federal Government methods, Georgia can grow about three-fourths of a crop of cotton when the weevil comes.

That is about what the Georgia weevil scouting party thinks after visiting territory where the fight has been made.

If Georgia does not profit by the example of Louisiana and Mississippi and put up the right kind of a fight from the word "go," there will be a wail of calamity worse than was heard when Sherman went marching through Georgia.

Think of a parish in Louisiana that grew 60,000 bales of cotton finding only 800 bales to pick when the laborers went to the fields after the weevil. Think of the exodus of negroes that followed! Think of the sickening thud when the bottom dropped out of business in consequence! Then let Georgians think how they would like the same experience. If the weevil is given right of way, take it from Louisiana and Mississippi, it will get your cotton.

Get Valuable Lessons.

The farm demonstration agents of Georgia that the Bureau of Agriculture of the United States sent to weevil territory to learn how to fight the pest have learned enough to stay the disaster which the approach of the boll weevil ordains for Georgia. As commanders in their respective communities of the boll weevil fight, they can hold the weevil back and get at least three-fourths of a crop; provided every cotton grower follows instructions and does his part. There is the rub.

The big job ahead is to get every last one of the cotton growers to fight, and fight hard, from the start. In Louisiana they did not fight at first, but they know better than not to fight now. Georgia farmers can learn the same way, but the lesson is calamity, written large. Take the lesson from the farm demonstration agents and it will mean success, or at least as great a success as two-thirds to three-fourths of a crop.

Fields Are Stripped.

You can't see any cotton above the middle of the stalk in most boll weevil territory where the fight has been made. Where the fight has not been made cotton is a curiosity.

The Georgia agents are enthusiastic and hopeful. They propose to preach fight methods with all their might and in every way possible. In Franklin Parish, Louisiana, the agents found that, under the leadership of L. M. Calhoun, district agent, the farmers have regained lost ground and are fighting all along the line, with the result that they are averaging nearly a bale to the acre. The weevil taught them a lesson in corn growing and growing Japanese clover for hay, so that the parish now considers the weevil has proved a blessing.

The farm demonstrators were told by an entomologist at onep lace that there is a time in the life history of the weevil where, if the chance is used promptly, the pest can be wiped out, but the farmers around claimed they fought early and late and all the time and still had plenty of weevils to contend with, so that they are practicing the method of fighting as long as there is any hope of making cotton. The Federal demonstration agents, acting conservatively and under the belief that the average farmer probably could not be easily made to understand when to make the brief fight for all varieties and places, are advocating fighting all the time.

Mode of Warfare.

By fighting the weevil is meant picking the weevil from the tip of the cotton plant when he first appears and then picking the squares in which eggs have been laid. The square which has been infested by the weevil can be detected at a glance.

By thus picking weevils and squares the progeny of pests is held to a minimum and its damage, of course, restricted.

Meeting weevil conditions might be briefly summarized by saying that it is a two-sided process—of holding the weevil back and pushing the cotton forward. The method of holding the weevil back has just been mentioned. The pushing of cotton means intensive and rapid cultivation, the object being to get the cotton to grow and produce before the height of the weevil season.

It was clearly demonstrated to the Georgia party that cotton should be planted and treated under field conditions just as one would to get the most cotton where the weevil has not appeared.

Close Rows Advocated.

Formerly wide rows were advocated, but not now. The maximum cotton with weevils can not be produced without a maximum number of plants. What the weevil has failed to do in Texas is no criterion as to what he will do in Georgia. Louisiana is a better index of what South Georgia may expect than any section of the country, and this is why most of the time was spent by the Georgia party studying Louisiana conditions.

That the trip has been highly interesting, practical as to instruction and potential of great benefit to Georgia there can be no doubt.

Higher Grades Fill Spot Cotton Market; Premium Decreased

First Pickings Always Good, but Unfavorable Weather May Bring Quick Change.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 13.—The action of the Senate Finance Committee in postponing the time in which the Clarke amendment is to go into effect until September, 1914, has been reflected in the cotton market by a sensational recovery in values.

Sharp as was the break last Friday, when the news came that the Democratic caucus had approved the Clarke amendment in its original form, the rebound has been even more violent. January contracts in this market Tuesday selling as high as 13.32, or nearly 100 points above the low level touched on the decline that took place Friday of last week.

Spot markets, too, have shared in the advance, gains of 1-4 to 1-2c per pound having been recorded at interior points, while the local spot market, which had held steady while the declining tendency was shown at the close of last week, has advanced 1-4c, middling and the grades below not having been affected by the monthly revision of differences Wednesday, although the premium on better grades, which are becoming more plentiful, was reduced 1-8 of a cent, in fact, middling and the grades below were advanced 1-16c at the same time that the higher grades were reduced 1-8, thus narrowing the differences.

At the present time the supply of good grades is daily increasing. First pickings, as a rule, always grade high. If the rains which have been general over the belt for several days past continue much longer, the effect will be to lower the grade of the crop, and later on in the season the difference in price between the lower and the better grades again may widen.

The advance about 13 1-4 cents on Tuesday brought out considerable hedge selling, as well as profit-taking on the part of leading long interests, which had been forecast to come to the support of the market as a matter of self protection when the big break took place Friday of last week.

Almost a panic was on at the time, and thousands of bales of cotton which were being pitched overboard by weak longs had to be taken care of by stronger hands. These big interests did not falter, and succeeded in rallying the market sharply even before the cheering news from Washington came, which enabled them to resume bullish operations on a large scale. The whole South responded to the more favorable turn of affairs at Washington, and the market Monday and Tuesday reminded old-timers of the swings upward which were of almost daily occurrence during the Sully year, until the climax came in February of that year.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Speculation in the market for outside securities to-day, while decidedly less active, showed a firm tone. British-American Tobacco was up ¾. Fear--The Beginning of Wisdom

The Picture on This Page Is Taken from Hearst's Magazine for August. It Illustrates in That Magazine Dr. Frank Crane's Editorial, Entitled "The Creed of the Unafraid." We Use It Here to Illustrate What We Believe to Be Even More Important, "The Creed of the Man WISELY Afraid."

Have You Thought of the Value of Fear?

Fortunate Is the Man Wisely Afraid.

Afraid That He May Neglect His Duty.

Afraid That He May Add Nothing to the Good Work That Men Have Done.

THE first, earliest, lowest and, perhaps, most important kind of wisdom is FEAR. The lowest forms of animal life have fear as their only emotion, their only "intellectual force."

The jelly fish floating with the tide knows fear; you touch it and it contracts feebly, to show that it is afraid.

The newborn baby, the jelly fish of the human race, utterly helpless, has also fear as its only wisdom.

Touch a child roughly, its cries and struggles show fear; all the other emotions come later.

Fear was the basis of wisdom in the infancy of the human race, as it is in the human infant.

The primitive man lived a life of fear. His wars were based on fear. He killed, fearing that he would be killed.

His houses were constructed in fear of animals and of enemies of his own kind.

And the beginning of religion was fear. The gods were fearful creatures, wind, thunder, hail and the mystery of the dark.

The first altars that men erected to their gods were altars to fearful monstrosities.

The idols of the savages were fearful things, powerful and brutal.

The successful priest of the savage was he who could guarantee that he would control the vicious gods and thus appease the fear of the superstitious, brutal, primitive man.

Long after fear ruled as the only god, men invented a god that on certain conditions would do kind things.

And then, after the god of fear and the god that could be bribed to do good in return for sacrifices, came with man's development a conception of a higher god, neither to be feared nor bribed, but to be respected as just and a giver of equal laws.

Education, like religion and society and government, has its basis in fear.

Unfortunately, too many ignorant educators and brutal parents carry this education all through the lives of their children, using fear, punishment and cruelty as permanent forces, instead of substituting for fear, as soon as the child can think, kindness, justice and reason.

* * *

First in life—in all its forms—comes fear.

Fear, even to this day, is the dominating passion in men as a race.

The duty of man, as Charles Fourier long ago told a heedless people, is to understand his passions, to control them and direct them.

* * *

What is the value of fear, how should man control it and direct it, now that he is past the savage state, the infancy of his career on this planet, and is old enough to begin controlling himself?

Fear is THE FOUNDATION OF COURAGE ITSELF.

What we call courage is, nine times out of ten, an act based upon man's FEAR OF BEING CALLED A COWARD.

The early savage who went out to fight the lion or the bear went out because he was afraid to be laughed at if he stayed at home.

Every general will tell you that the man who stands under fire in his first battle stands not because he is courageous, but rather because he is afraid of being thought cowardly.

Use fear with your children, and with the pupils in the schools, not that they may dread brutal punishment, which brutalizes you more that it does them, but that they may fear to be unworthy of the kindness and justice with which you treat them, unworthy of the opportunity that you give them.

Dr. Frank Crane, in his excellent editorial, "The Creed of the Unafraid," in the August number of Hearst's Magazine, says:

"This is the creed of the Unafraid.

"Whoever He may be who sits in the Heavens and rules the universe, I shall not be afraid of Him.

"And if it be but a force, it shall not frighten me.

"Whoever created my soul intended me to live my life.

"Sickness may come to me; it can destroy all of me, but not my courage.

"I shall not be afraid to love, and to trust wholly.

"I shall not fear my passions, but learn to drive them like thoroughbreds.

"I shall not be timid on account of my weaknesses, but study to guard against them.

"I shall make friends with Destiny, and adjust myself to events.

"No man shall cow me. I have a right to standing room on the earth.

"I shall not falter to look any human being in the face.

"I believe that ghosts become harmless natural objects when one walks up to them; hence if anything causes me fear I shall examine it and try to understand it.

"I shall exercise due caution, but shall not be afraid of my food, of microbes, diseases, nor accidents.

Against all these I am best prepared by a clear, cool mind.

"I shall not be afraid that I cannot sleep.

"I shall stubbornly shut the door of my mind against all morbidity, such as suggestions of failure, insanity and suicide.

"I shall treat with contempt all superstitions, warnings, premonitions, prophecies, fortune-tellings, and like humbuggery.

"I shall not fear on account of my past; the consequences of my errors I shall take like a man.

"Knowing that death is due to mortals at any moment, I shall live ready for it now and at all times. It shall find me unafraid."

* * *

The man unafraid in the best sense of the word is the man to be envied, if there be such a man.

But there is NO man unafraid.

The ancients who proudly answered Alexander's question, saying, "We fear only that the sky may fall upon us," were brave enough to rush into a burning house with a sword to fight the fire, brave enough to rush upon the waves with the same sword. But they were not brave enough to fight their superstitions, not brave enough to meet, with self-control, unselfish, united action, the better trained mind of Caesar and his soldiers.

We have not reached the age of the man unafraid.

Man does not know himself, nor whence he came nor whither he is going.

His life is a life of fear. Youth fears what it cannot control. Fully developed manhood fears poverty and dependence in old age. And old age fears the mystery of the unknown that lies on the other side of the grave.

Fear is with us and will stay with us. Let us control it, guide it and make the best use of it.

Ask your children and ask yourself which is the best and most useful kind of fear.

The Bible tells us, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

With a young man, fear of failure is the beginning of success.

With all of us, fear that we may be unworthy of our fathers and mothers is the foundation of better life.

Man who is working, who is blest with the opportunity of doing something worth while, should have in his mind a realization of the fact that he enjoys the result of all the work that men have done before him, that men are doing now for his benefit, and his great FEAR should be that he should come to this earth and live here and enjoy it, and leave FAILING TO ADD HIS SHARE, HOWEVER LITTLE, fearing to die with his duty undone.

* * *

Man is studying now the forces in nature. He delights in the power of radium, the sending of solid matter with a speed almost as great as the speed of light, he delights in the toys which run with electric power, the engine and the wireless apparatus. He is profoundly interested in the power of the volcano and the earthquake, as a child is interested.

He has not yet studied as he will one day study the forces most important to him, the forces WITHIN HIMSELF, fear, affection, hope, ambition and the other forces which, properly understood, controlled and directed, will, in the end, make the human race what it is destined to be, and this earth the beautifully, perfectly cultivated and controlled abode of a race powerful in the control of the forces within it, from the lowest of all of those forces, FEAR, to the highest of all, UNSELFISHNESS AND COSMIC DEVOTION.

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me" in the Streets--"for Baby's Sake"

Hall Caine's Descriptive Masterpiece of Maternal Self-Sacrifice in the Current Number of HEARST'S MAGAZINE

IN all Hall Caine, the distinguished English novelist, has written of the adventures of his heroine in "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," he has not produced a chapter so poignantly interesting and truly illuminative as the chapter that deals with her despair in this month's issue of Hearst's Magazine. Here, as on a great canvas, he has drawn the picture of the wicked Piccadilly Circus of London and the hapless women who march about it. Properly to appreciate this masterpiece of maternal self-sacrifice, a brief synopsis of what has gone before is necessary.

Mary O'Neill, the delicate convent-bred daughter of a self-made millionaire, is sold in marriage by her ambitious father to the dissipated and profligate Lord Rea. Too late she realizes the horror and sin of a loveless marriage, and on her wedding night she and her husband enter into an agreement to live as man and wife in name only.

She meets Martin Conrad, an old friend of her childhood, who has become an antarctic explorer. Mary and Conrad fall into the trap set for them by her husband and the woman with whom he has become infatuated. Conrad sails on another polar exploration trip leaving Mary to face the consequences of their passion. Lord Rea discovers the situation, and Mary O'Neill flies to London, and there her baby is born.

Cut off by her family, Conrad far away, she faces want. The baby becomes ill through lack of nourishment. Mary, who has been earning a meagre pittance by needlework, meets another old friend who has joined the women of Piccadilly Circus. She spends a night with her. She returns to the people who are looking after her baby, only to find it perilously ill. She is turned away by the people for whom she has been working.

In her distress she is faced by the problem of earning enough money to give her baby life. How will she do it?

Following is the way Mr. Caine presents the situation.

From the current instalment of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," in Hearst's Magazine and reprinted by permission of Hearst's Magazine.

FEELING that I did not yet know the whole truth (though I was trembling in terror of it), I handed baby to Mrs. Oliver and followed the doctor to the door.

"Doctor," I said, "is my baby very ill?"

He hesitated for a moment and then answered, "Yes."

"Dangerously ill?"

Again he hesitated, and then, looking closely at me (I felt my lower lip trembling), he said, "I won't say that. She's suffering from marasmus, provoked by overdoses of the pernicious stuff that is given by ignorant and unscrupulous people to a restless child to keep her quiet. But her real trouble comes from maternal weakness, and the only cure for that is good nourishment, and, above all, fresh air and sunshine."

"Will she get better?"

"If you can take her away into the country she will, certainly."

"And if . . . if I can't," I asked, the words fluttering up to my lips, "will she . . . die?"

The doctor looked steadfastly at me again (I was biting my lip to keep it firm), and said, "She may."

When I returned to the kitchen I knew that I was face to face with another of the great mysteries of a woman's life—Death—the death of my child, which my very love and tenderness had exposed her to.

* * *

AND now God looked down on the sufferings of my baby, who was being killed for my conduct—killed by my poverty!

By this time a new kind of despair had taken hold of me. It was no longer the paralyzing despair, but the despair that has a driving force in it.

"My child shall not die," I thought. "At least Poverty shall not kill her!"

Many times during the day I had heard Mrs. Oliver trying to comfort me with various forms of sloppy sentiment. Children were a great trial; they were allus makin' and keepin' people pore, and it was sometimes better for the dears themselves to be in their 'eavenly Father's boosim.

I hardly listened. It was the same as if somebody were talking to me in my sleep. But toward nightfall my deaf ear caught something about myself—that "it" (I knew what that meant) might be better for me also, for then I should be free of encumbrances and could marry again.

"Of course you could—you so young and good lookin'. Only the other day the person at number five could tell me as you were the prettiest woman as comes up the Row, and the Vicar's wife couldn't hold a candle to you. 'Fine feathers makes fine birds,' says she. 'Give your young lady a nice frock and a bit o' color in her cheeks, and there ain't many as could best her in the West End either.'"

As the woman talked dark thoughts took possession of me. I began to think of Angela. I tried not to, but I could not help it.

And then came the moment of my fiercest trial. With a sense of Death hanging over my child, I told myself that the only way to drive it off was to make some great Sacrifice.

Hitherto I had thought of everything I possessed as belonging to baby, but now I felt that I myself belonged to her. I had brought her into the world, and it was my duty to see that she did not suffer.

All this time the inherited instinct of my religion was fighting hard with me, and I was saying many Hail Marys to prevent myself from doing what I meant to do.

"Hail, Mary, full of grace; the Lord is with thee. . . . ."

I felt as if I were losing my reason. But it was of no use struggling against the awful impulse of self-sacrifice (for such I thought it) which had taken hold of my mind, and at last it conquered me.

"I must have money," I thought. "Unless I get money my child will die. I—must—get—money."

Toward 7 o'clock I got up, gave baby to Mrs. Oliver, put on my coat and fixed with nervous fingers my hat and hatpins.

"Where are you going to, pore thing?" asked Mrs. Oliver.

"I am going out. I'll be back in the morning," I answered.

And then, after kneeling and kissing my baby again—my sweet child, my Isabel—I tore the street door open and pulled it shut noisily behind me.

* * *

I OPENED my trunk and took out my clothes—all that remained of the dresses I had brought from Ellan. They were few, and more than a little out of fashion, but one of them, though far from gay, was bright and stylish—a light blue frock with a high collar and some white lace over the bosom.

I remember wondering why I had not thought of pawning it during the week, when I had had so much need of money, and then being glad that I had not done so.

It was thin and light, being the dress I had worn on the day I came first to the East End, carrying my baby to Ilford, when the weather was warm, which now was cold, but I paid no heed to that, thinking only that it was my best and most attractive.

After I had put it on and glanced at myself in my little swinging looking-glass, I was pleased, but I saw at the same time that my face was deadly pale, and that made me think of some bottles and cardboard boxes which lay in the pockets of my trunk.

I knew what they contained—the remains of the cosmetics which I had bought in Egypt in the foolish days when I was trying to make my husband love me. Never since then had I looked at them, but now I took them out (with a rabbit's foot and some pads and brushes) and began to paint my pale face—reddening my cracked and colorless lips and powdering out the dark rings under my eyes.

"What a farce!" I thought. "What a heartless farce!"

Then I put on my hat, which was also not very gay, and, taking out of my trunk a pair of long, light gloves, which I had never worn since I left Ellan, I began to pull them on.

I was standing before the looking-glass in the act of doing this, and trying (God pity me!) to smile at myself, when I was suddenly smitten by a new thought.

I was about to commit suicide—the worst kind of suicide, not the suicide which is followed by oblivion, but by a life on earth after death!

After that night Mary O'Neill would no longer exist. I should never be able to think of her again! I should have killed her and buried her and stamped the earth down on her, and she would be gone from me for ever!

That made a grip at my heart—awakening memories of happy days in my childhood, bringing back the wild bliss of the short period of my great love, and even making me think of my life in Rome, with its confessions, its masses and the sweetness of its church bells.

I was saying farewell to Mary O'Neill! And parting with one's self seemed so terrible that when I thought of it my heart seemed to be ready to burst.

"But who can blame me when my child's life is in danger?" I asked myself again, still tugging at my long gloves.

By the time I had finished dressing the Salvationists were going off to their barracks with their followers behind them. Under the singing I could faintly hear the shuffling of bad shoes, which made a sound like the wash of an ebbing tide over the teeth of a rocky beach—up our side street, past the Women's Night Shelter (where the beds never had time to become cool) and beyond the public house, with the placard in the window saying the ale sold there could be guaranteed to make everybody drunk for fourpence.

"We'll stand the storm, it won't be long,
And we'll anchor in the sweet by-and-by."

I listened and tried to laugh again, but I could not do so now. There was one last spasm of my cruelly palpitating heart in which I covered my face with both hands, and cried:

"For baby's sake! For my baby's sake!"

And then I opened my bedroom door, walked boldly downstairs and went out into the street.

* * *

I remember taking the electric car going west and seeing the Whitechapel road shooting by me, with its surging crowds of pedestrians, its public houses, its Cinema shows and Jewish theatres.

I remember getting down at Aldgate Pump and walking through that dead belt of the city, which, lying between east and west, is alive like a beehive by day and silent and deserted by night.

* * *

Then I remember that, walking at random round St. Martin's Church into Leicester Square, I came upon three "public women" who were swinging along with a high step and laughing loudly, and that one of them was Angela, and that she stopped on seeing me and cried:

"Hello! Here I am again, you see! Out on the streets for money? Giovanni's dead, and I don't care a damn!"

I remember that she said something else—It was about Sister Mildred, but my mind did not take it in—and at the next moment she left me and I heard her laughter once more as she swept round the corner and out of sight.

I hardly know what happened next, for here comes one of the blank places in my memory, with nothing to light it except vague thoughts of Martin (and that soulless night in Bloomsbury, when the newspapers announced that he was lost), until, wandering aimlessly through streets and streets of people—such multitudes of people, no end of people—I found myself back at Charing Cross.

The waiting crowd was now eager and more excited than before, and the traffic at both sides of the station was stopped and dammed back in long waiting lines.

"He's coming! He's coming! Here he is!" the people cried, and then there were deafening shouts and cheers as for the return of a hero.

I recall the sight of a line of policemen pushing people back (I was myself pushed back); I recall the sight of a big motor car containing three men and a woman, ploughing its way through; I recall the sight of one of the men raising his cap; of the crowd rushing to shake hands with him; then of the car swinging away, and of the people running after it with a noise like that of the racing of a noisy river.

It is the literal truth that never once did I ask myself what this tumult was about, and that for some time after it was over—a full hour at least—I had a sense of walking in my sleep, as if my body were passing through the streets of the West End of London while my soul was somewhere else altogether.

Thus at one moment, as I was going by the National Gallery and thought I caught the sound of Martin's name, I felt as if I were back in Glen Raa, and it was myself who had been calling it in the frantic hunger of my desire.

At another moment, when I was standing at the edge of the pavement in Piccadilly Circus, which was ablaze with electric lights and thronged with people (for the theatres and music halls were emptying), men in uniform were running about with whistles, policemen were directing the traffic and streams of carriages were flowing by), I felt as if I were back in my native island, where I was alone on the dark shore, while the sea was smiting me.

Again, after a brusque voice had said, "Move on, please," I followed the current of pedestrians down Piccadilly—it must have been Piccadilly—and saw lines of public women, chiefly French and Belgian, sauntering along, and heard men throwing light words to them as they passed, I was thinking of the bleating sheep and the barking dog.

"I began to paint my pale face red, for I was going out into the streets—for baby's sake!"

Another Craig Drawing for "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

AND again, when I was passing a man's club and the place where I had met Angela, my dazed mind was harking back to Ilford (with a frightened sense of the length of time since I had been there—"Good heavens, it must be five hours, at least!"), and wondering if Mrs. Oliver was giving baby her drops of brandy and her spoonfuls of diluted milk.

But somewhere about midnight my soul seemed to take full possession of my body, and I saw things clearly and sharply as I turned out of Oxford street into Regent street.

The traffic was then rapidly dying down, the streets were darker, the cafes were closing, men and women were coming out of supper rooms, smoking cigarettes, getting into taxis and driving away; and another London day was passing into another night.

People spoke to me. I made no answer. At one moment an elderly woman said something to which I replied, "No, no," and hurried on. At another moment a foreign-looking man addressed me, and I pushed past without replying. Then a string of noisy young fellows, stretching across the broad pavement arm in arm, encircled me and cried, "Here we are, my dear. Let's have a kissing-bee."

But with angry words and gestures I compelled them to let me go, whereupon one of the foreign women who were sauntering by said derisively for me to hear:

"What does she think she's out for, I wonder?"

At length I found myself standing under a kind of loggia at the corner of Piccadilly Circus, which was now half-dark, the theatres and music halls being closed, and only one group of arc lamps burning on an island about a statue.

There were few people now where there had been so dense a crowd a while ago; policemen were tramping leisurely along; horse cabs were going at walking pace, and taxis were moving slowly; but a few gentlemen (walking home from their clubs apparently) were passing at intervals, often looking at me and sometimes speaking as they went by.

"You have been out all night," he said. "Can you tell me where you have been?".

One of Frank Craig's Charming Illustrations for "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" in HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

Then plainly and pitilessly the taunt of the foreign woman came back to me—what was I there for?

I knew quite well, and yet I saw that not only was I not doing what I came out to do, but every time an opportunity had offered I had resisted it.

It was just as if an inherited instinct of repulsion had restrained me, or some strong unseen arm had always reached out and snatched me away.

This led me—was it some angel leading me?—to think again of Martin and to remember our beautiful and sacred parting at Castle Raa.

"Whatever happens to either of us, we belong to each other forever," he had said, and I had answered from my heart, "Forever and ever."

It was a fearful shock to think of this now. I saw that if I did what I had come out to do not only would Mary O'Neill be dead to me after to-night, but Martin Conrad would be dead also.

When I thought of that, I realized that although I had accepted without question the newspaper reports of Martin's death, he had never hitherto been really dead to me at all.

He had lived with me every moment of my life since, supporting me, sustaining me, and inspiring me, so that nothing I had ever done—not one single thing—would have been different if I had believed him to be alive and been sure that he was coming back.

But now I was about to kill Martin Conrad as well as Mary O'Neill by breaking the pledge (sacred as any sacrament) which they had made for life and for all eternity.

Could I do that? In this hideous way, too? Never! Never! Never! I should die in the streets first.

I remember that I was making a movement to go back to Ilford (God knows how), when, on the top of all my brave thinking, came the pitiful thought of my child. My poor helpless little baby, who had made no promise and was party to no pledge. She needed nourishment and fresh air and sunshine, and if she could not get them—if I went back to her penniless—there was no help for it, she would die!

My sweet darling! My Isabel! My only treasure! Martin's child and mine!

That put a quick end to all my qualms. Again I bit my lip until it bled, and told myself that I should speak to the very next man who came along.

"Yes, the very next man who comes along," I thought.

I was standing at that moment in the shadow of one of the pilasters of the loggia, almost leaning against it, and in the silence of the street I heard distinctly the sharp firm step of somebody who was coming my way.

It was a man. As he came near to me he slowed down and stopped. He was then immediately behind me. I heard his quick breathing. I felt that his eyes were fixed on me. One sidelong glance told me that he was wearing a long ulster and a cap, that he was young, tall, powerfully built, had a strong, firm, clean-shaved face, and an indescribable sense of the open air about him.

"Now, now!" I thought, and (to prevent myself from running away) I turned quickly round to him and tried to speak, really tried to speak.

But I said nothing. I did not know what women say to men under such circumstances. I found myself trembling violently, and before I was aware of what was happening I had burst into tears.

Then came another blinding moment and over me there swept a tempest of conflicting feelings.

I felt that the man had laid hold of me, that his strong hands were grasping my arms, and that he was looking into my face.

Seaweeds to Supply Fertility to Farms---

By Prof. JOHN L. COWAN, the Noted Farming Expert.

THAT the value of all products of the farms of the United States now approximates nine thousand millions of dollars annually is justly regarded as good cause for national felicitation. That a very large number of the farmers who contribute to the production of this enormous total pursue the suicidal policy of taking from the soil all they can get, with no attempt to restore to it the elements taken from it by growing crops, is a fact as undeniable as it is lamentable.

Hence the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations have been of late assiduously preaching to the farmers of this country the fact that profitable farming, in the long run, is possible only when the elements taken from the soil are restored to it, at least in part.

Roughly speaking, fertilizers are composed of phosphoric acid, nitrate of soda and some form of potash salts. Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee contain great deposits of phosphate rock, so that, as yet, the provision of an adequate supply of phosphoric acid presents no difficulties.

In a recent report of Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, based upon investigations made by scientists of the Bureau of Soils, the following important and significant statements are made:

"The most promising source of potash at present is found in the large areas of kelp groves, or sea algae, lying along the Pacific Coast, growing wherever there is a rocky bottom and a rapid tideway, at depths of from six to ten fathoms. These groves are of various areas, from beds of a fraction of an acre up to stretches five miles in length and two or more miles in width. During the past Summer about 100 square miles of kelp groves have been mapped in different localities from Puget Sound to Point Loma, and have studied the character of the algae, as well as the conditions necessary to their utilization commercially, and their maintenance as a permanent resource of the country. Many more areas yet remain to be studied and mapped, but from what has been accomplished in this preliminary work I am assured that a conservative estimate shows that the kelp which could be gathered from the 100 square miles already surveyed, and without detriment to the permanence of the groves, should yield 1,000,000 tons of chloride of potash annually, worth at least $35,000,000, or about thrice the value of present importations of potash salts from Germany.

"Satisfactory methods of gathering the kelp are yet to be worked out, but present only minor mechanical difficulties. The value of the kelp is, moreover, probably much greater than is represented by the contents of the potash alone. Our laboratories have shown that iodine and other useful products can be obtained which will pay in large measure, if not fully, the cost of gathering and abstracting the potash salts. Enough has been accomplished to show that this country has within its borders resources to meet the fertilizer requirements of the present and a greatly increased use in the coming years."

The investigations undertaken by the Bureau of Soils, upon which Secretary Wilson's report is based, constitute the first serious attempt that has ever been made at a systematic study of the kelp beds that border the coasts of California, Washington and Oregon. It has never before been thought worth while to map the forests of the sea, or to ascertain their extent or the character and possible uses of the vegetation found in them.

However, the principal office of seaweeds in the economy of nature is to perform the same function in the water that ordinary forms of vegetation perform on land—that of making animal life possible. They assimilate inorganic matter, existing in the water as impurities, and transform it into materials essential to animal life. Beyond doubt by far the greater mass of seaweeds exists in microscopic forms, floating everywhere, near the surface of the water, in inconceivable numbers. These seaweeds form the basis of the food supply of all animal life in the ocean, and fishes and other animals that do not subsist directly upon seaweeds must prey upon smaller or weaker creatures that do.

Scientists, then, have long recognized the fact that the economic value of seaweeds is very great; but this form of vegetation has been regarded, in general, as of little value for industrial purposes. Until the official announcement was made by Secretary Wilson, the thought could have occurred to but few that the kelps of the Pacific Coast might be of inestimable value to agriculturists of the interior, and were capable of bringing to pass a material modification of our trade relations with Germany. However, months before Secretary Wilson's report was made public a company was organized at San Diego for the purpose of harvesting kelps and extracting from them the potash and other valuable constituents. The plans of this company, and the methods it proposes to follow, have been kept profoundly secret.

It is roughly estimated that there are about 15,000 species of seaweeds. The simplest of all plants are the minute algae (both salt and fresh water), known as the blue-green slimes, of which there are approximately 1,000 species, found on rocks, wharves, the sides of ditches and on mud almost everywhere. The most numerous of the algae are the grass-green seaweeds (also both fresh water and marine), of which there are from 8,000 to 10,000 species found floating on the surface of the ocean, lakes, rivers, brooks, ponds, ditches and puddles; on damp earth, walls, fences, on the surface of leaves and the bark of trees in damp forests, and existing in almost every place where there is moisture.

Atlanta Named for Her---She Really Sees Its Wonders for the First Time

"I Do Hope It Is a Good Place," Says the White-Haired Daughter of Governor Lumpkin, Who Refuses To Be Awed by the Skyscrapers and Traffic Jams of Her Namesake.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

MRS. MARTHA ATALANTA WILSON LUMPKIN-COMPTON is afraid—with an uncertain little shake of her head—that Atlanta is not as good as it might be.

Mrs. Lumpkin-Compton has every right in the world to express an opinion on this subject. You must know that she is the Martha of the old Marthasville and the very same Atalanta whose abbreviated name became that of the city, the really great city, of Atlanta. And so the little old white-haired lady in Decatur can talk as much as she pleases about Atlanta, and reverence will greet her opinion.

She talked a great deal about it last week. Because, strangely enough, she had never in all her eighty-six years really seen Atlanta until one fine morning a few days ago, when she was the guest of The Sunday American for a long ride that bore her through the crowded downtown streets, through crowded crossings where her carriage had to stop while jams were disentangled, and under the shadow of towering office buildings. Then she rode out into the more quiet, the greener streets of homes.

She had never seen any of it before. She knew the old Atlanta, whose Peachtree street merged into broad wooded fields, and into a vista of rolling hills about where Baker street is to-day.

But this big, busy city—

Those who rode with her waited breathlessly for the thrill they thought was coming. Here was her own city grown from a little town of cow paths to a modern marvel of skyscrapers and traffic policemen. Here was a time for her pride to become ecstatic and emotional. Here was the moment for a great denouement, like that which would come perhaps when a mother found that her long-lost child had grown to be a President. Rip Van Winkle's was a tame situation compared to hers. Here was a setting for a Scheherazade tale.

To have a great city named with your name, to know that even if you were a little old white-haired lady almost helpless, your name would be perpetuated in a tremendous living monument—

To know that your own city had grown to heroic stature just one week before, when by a heartbreaking effort it had captured a Southern League baseball pennant—

But the little white-haired lady wasn't even visibly impressed. She saw it all, office buildings, crowds, automobiles, and all. She was held up for the first time in a traffic jam. She felt for the first time the thrill of watching her coachman duck hurriedly ahead of a moving street car. She came out of placid Decatur and saw it for the first time. She felt the visible spirit of the town which will bear her name forever, and forever grow greater.

Then they asked her what she thought of it.

"I do hope it is a good place," she said, with her eighty-six-year-old voice a little plaintive. "From what they read me from the newspapers, though, I'm afraid it isn't."

It was then she shook her head uncertainly.

"All this turkey-trotting and this baseball. Don't they think of anything else here? It certainly doesn't look like it.

"And to think of the eighteen women killed last year, shot or stabbed or strangled to death. And to think of the long trial that is just over, and the crime that caused it."

Then she guessed that much of her trepidation regarding Atlanta's morals was the newspapers' fault.

"Folks want to read these things," she said, "and the papers print them. Maybe the town is getting along all right spiritually. Some people tell me it is. If it is, I'm glad."

She saw her city for the first time—and hoped that it was good. She was unabashed by the noise and the roar, calm and judicial, and, it must be confessed, critical.

The fleets of automobiles—long silent limousines; stocky, fussy runabouts; screeching ambulances—did not impress her favorably. As a matter of fact, she despises automobiles, and all the money in her own city of Atlanta could not tempt her to put her foot in one.

She thanks you very graciously for the invitation to go a-driving, but if the bid specifies an automobile, she must decline.

The baseball pennant victory does not impress her.

"Are you a ball man?" she asked her companion, suspiciously, when the conversation drifted toward the glorious league finish. "Baseball and these automobiles and these high buildings all go together in my mind."

So she doesn't like the skyscrapers. She remembers, too, that once there were ox carts on her Atlanta streets, safe ox carts, that didn't jam up at the corners with infinite danger to pedestrians, and with terrible fright for little old ladies.

As her carriage moved along the crowded streets, it seemed that she was trying to rehabilitate the unusual scenes with ghosts of old Atlanta, with quaint visions of Marthasville. She passed the New Kimball Hotel, and beckoned the driver to stop. There she mused a while.

"Once I owned two lots here," she said. "Mr. Mitchell gave them to me when the town was named Marthasville. After years, I traded them for a fine horse. It was a good horse, but just suppose I had kept the land until today!"

She sighed, a little wistfully, it seemed. The little old lady is not overburdened with this world's goods. In fact, she frankly confesses poverty, and has a story of misfortune to tell you. It is the story of a woman, left alone and helpless, forced to sell at an inconsiderable price the home of a lifetime because the State University, endowed with a sort of right of eminent domain, wanted it.

She had reminiscences of other spots about town besides the hotel site. But the reminiscences were scattered, and aimless, as they are apt to be when you are eighty-six years old, and have seen much. The upshot of them all was that she would rather have her Athens home back than all Atlanta.

She is a sort of anachronism, this little, old lady of the great city, whose dreams are laid in the still places, in the old places where there are no automobiles to frighten white-haired folks, and no office buildings to bewilder them. Her home, also, is a reversion to former times, and her household, too.

The household is just herself, who is a nearly helpless, white-haired old lady, and a single negro woman. The negro woman is named Emma Foster, and is of a type fast disappearing in the South. She is of the present generation, born since "slav'y times," but born of a mother who belonged to Mrs. Compton as a slave before the war. Emma came into a family whose slaves were friends. Not a minute during the day is she far from the little old lady. Miss Compton walks always with Emma's help. One hand is on her stout stick, the other clinging tight, like a baby's, around the long middle finger of the tall negro woman, who walks by inches beside her.

Mrs. Martha Atalanta Wilson Lumpkin Compton is shown at the left in the garden she has planted at her Decatur home. Above she appears at the age of four with her brothers, Samuel Hopkins and John Calhoun Lumpkin. At the bottom is Mrs. Compton about to start on a sightseeing tour of "her city."

Emma is a valuable part of the household. The little, old lady would stop every vegetable wagon that drives along her quiet street. The vegetable wagons, she will tell you, are the one comfort left her out of the past. She hopes they will not go as the other things went, and that she will not be forced to go to market. She is no great hand for shopping, having been in only one store in all her life.

But we were talking of Emma. Mrs. Compton hails the wagons, and Emma comes to her side, fearful that the little old lady, with her penchant for driving a bargain, will overstock the larder.

"Miss," says Emma, "we don't need any more now. You might get a watermelon for Sunday, or some corn, now, but that's all."

Emma knows that there are no watermelons or corn in the wagon. And so "Miss" lets the vegetable man proceed. Emma is a subtle, unobtrusive, but invaluable aide, keeping the little house in order, as eager to greet guests and dispense hospitality as "Miss" herself, and always with an eye on the little old lady.

The two live in a cottage at 6 Line street, in Decatur. It is a modern cottage, it must be confessed. Mrs. Compton is a little resentful of that fact, you can see, and once within her gate she will begin to tell you of the wonderful old home in Athens, with walls two feet thick. But that wonderful home went when the State University grew out around its dominion, and now the little old lady must live in a modern cottage.

A rather pretentious garden and chicken run surround the house. The garden is the great source of the little lady's present-day pride. She will show you the apple trees, and the quince trees, and the cherries and the figs, all planted by herself, and all growing rapidly to a maturity as if they would hasten to fruit before the white-haired lady of the house would have no more use for them.

And the garden. It is a wonderful thing to plan and direct such a garden at eighty-six. There is lettuce and salads and collards, not to speak of beans and corn, and garden "sass" is general.

It is homelike enough, this home of the little old lady who deserves so much from Atlanta.

Inside the home you step into an atmosphere of the old South. Every stick of the furniture rears itself with the dignity of age and aristocratic craftsmanship. Hardly a stick but is invested with a sanctity. The old piano, nearly a hundred years old, is closed and locked, it being the most sacred.

No; not the most sacred. That honor attaches itself without contest to the great couch in the hall. It bears a modern appearance, with its leather-covered cushions, but Mrs. Compton will tell you that once it was genuinely covered with the characteristic horsehair fabric. And it was the scene of many courtships, even that of Mrs. Compton—even those of Mrs. Compton, it should be said, because there were many beaux who came a-courting the daughter of Governor Lumpkin.

"If this old couch could talk," she mused. Then she broke off, and abruptly, irrelevantly, with a fierce vigor, as if the memory of some old heartache had come out of the past to taunt her, she cried:

"Marry for love, and nothing else, do you hear. There is nothing else."

But about the house. True to the old Southern tone, its guest room is its most pretentious, with two large four-post beds, and dressing tables, chiffoniers and chairs of dark brown oak and walnut. Nothing in the house savors of the last half century. The furniture came from the revered home in Athens, where the little old lady lived all her life, even when she was a little girl and when her father called her Atalanta because she danced like a sprite out of the fairy books.

He was a great man himself, being Governor Lumpkin, twice the head of the State, United States Senator, and a figure of power and prominence. But he little dreamed perhaps that the name his fancy conjured up for his daughter would live to a greater prominence than his. When the prominent Mr. Lumpkin heard that his third child was a girl, he was glad. He had dreamed of a child whom he would call Martha Wilson, after a beloved relative.

Mrs. Lumpkin, now, viewing the dainty little stranger, thought herself of a name as dainty, and insisted that the girl be named Euphrosyne. Merciful fate, however, with a realization that Euphrosyne would never do as the name for the South's first city, allowed the father's wishes to prevail.

But Mr. Lumpkin was nothing if not chivalrous.

"The tenderest man with women that I ever knew," says Mrs. Compton. Consequently, he did not count his victory in the matter of nomenclature with much boastfulness. He even puzzled over some means of pleasing Mrs. Lumpkin, who still begrudged her Euphrosyne.

It developed that the little girl learned early to dance like a daughter of the gods.

"Wife," said Mr. Lumpkin—Governor Lumpkin, then, four years having passed—"I have a name for the little girl to please you. We will call her Atalanta, after the light-footed lady of the myth."

And Mrs. Lumpkin straightaway forgot her Euphrosyne, and was comforted. And with the girl, a great city was named.

It came about like this. The old Western and Atlantic railroad was being built, and it came to an end at a spot in the foothills, several miles from the Chattahoochee. It was a spot of pine forests and of virgin underbrush, and it belonged to Sam Mitchell.

The road builders wanted to make Decatur the end of the line, and to give time to Decatur all the prosperity that would ensue. But after the manner of the old Southerners, Decatur scorned the railroad and prosperity.

But Mr. Samuel Mitchell, who owned the pine thicket, saw further, being of a more practical mind, and he offered land for the houses and shops at the terminus of the road. Soon the little clump of houses and shops was dignified by the title of town, and they called it Terminus.

Then thought of a real town was engendered. Governor Lumpkin, then a practicing lawyer, was called to draw the charter and arrange the thousand details that are incident to creating a municipality, whether that municipality grow to be a wonderful city or whether it grow inward and dry up.

"Very good," announced Mr. Sam Mitchell, when it was done. He offered to pay Governor Lumpkin for the work, but the Governor would have none of his fees.

"Then we'll name the town after you," said Mr. Mitchell.

But the Governor demurred. Already they had named a county after him, and a village in South Georgia, and he hankered for no such monument. The future of the town seemed doubtful, anyhow.

Then Mr. Mitchell was inspired to a stroke of genius. He reached for the blank charter, and wrote thereon the name "Marthasville." The Governor smiled, and was instantly rewarded for all his labor. It was a delicate compliment Mr. Mitchell had paid him, selecting the name of the Governor's little daughter.

Still refusing a fee, the Governor agreed to accept for his daughter the two town lots, on the site of the present-day Kimball. These were the lots which figured in the horse trading.

Several years passed. Between Milledgeville and Athens the Lumpkin family moved, between home and the Governor's mansion at the Capital. Meanwhile Marthasville prospered, and grew, and the townsmen became ambitious for their town. The Atlanta spirit, it seemed, was alive then.

Marthasville was a name with a provincial smack, they told one another. It must be changed. And yet, Governor Lumpkin, their hero, must not be aggrieved at the change. Well, the little girl had another name that was high-sounding and vaulting enough. Atalanta would suit the most ambitious. And Atalanta the city became, and later, through the verbal contraction of the unknowing, Atlanta.

"I think that unconsciously I shed my spirit over the city with my name," said Mrs. Compton the other day, when some of her friends gave her a birthday party. She is proud of the fact that she has been vigorous and energetic and tireless all her days, working for a living when she could have rested idle, enthusiastic always, and dynamic. She realizes that Atlanta is all of this, and she feels something of kinship with it.

Still, it is a very big and busy city, and she is a very tiny person, fond of the quiet places and the ox carts for all her energy. A city can become great, she thinks, without so much thought of high buildings and automobiles and baseball. A city can be great and good as well. She hopes Atlanta is.

After the city was named the second time for her, she visited it once or twice, coming here to the home of her relatives, the Wilsons, some of whom live here to-day. She is related, by the way, also to Justice Lumpkin, of the Supreme Court, to Mrs. W. L. Peel, and a number of other prominent Atlantans.

But she visited the city seldom, prefering the home in Athens which her famous father built especially for her. He built it with thick walls and stout rafters because she was always afraid, so afraid of storms and lightning. When he died and her husband died she kept boarders among the college boys, as did most of the older, better citizens of the town, impoverished as they were after the war.

Then the university outgrew itself and its bounds. Its authorities coveted the staunch house near by. Then, several years ago, after she had lost old "Puss," the negro woman whom she had reared, and who to her was the dearest person and most valuable companion on earth, and after a series of other misfortunes, the university corporation took her home.

She can not understand yet how they made her sell it for $10,000. But she found herself out of the home in which she had lived all her life, out of the world in which she had grown old. She came to Decatur at the instance of Colonel George Napier, her "guardian," as she calls him, and found herself settled in a new home.

It is very comfortable and pleasant, but still it is not "her home." It is near Atlanta, her city, but that doesn't matter. Her friends won't take her out to see Atlanta anyhow, she complains in explaining the reason she had never been to town before this last week. Even if they did, even if she lived in Atlanta, she wouldn't be happy.

"What's the use in having a big city named after you, what's the use of owning a city if there is another place you call home and which is the dearest spot in the world to you? If I had my only wish, I'd still be in Athens.

"I had a fine home there. Did you ever see it? I hope you see it some day. There's a picture.

"Of course I'm proud of Atlanta. I think it is great. But I do hope so that it is a good town spiritually. I think myself it could be better."

All this was the result of Mrs. Compton's first extended meditation concerning her own city, meditations inspired by the ride she took just the other day in company with Mrs. L. L. Sisson, of Kirkwood, one of her most intimate friends, with devoted Emma Foster and a newspaper reporter.

What Hobson the Hero of the Merrimac Has to Say on Temperance

His Remarkable Lecture on the Effects of Alcohol, Showing How Drink Kills More Americans Every Year Than War Has Slaughtered of All Mankind in the Last 2,300 Years, and Pointing Out How Intemperance Opens the Door to the "Yellow Peril."

CONGRESSMAN RICHMOND PEARSON HOBSON lectures when his official duties permit, and one of these lectures is on temperance. So remarkable and important are the facts brought out by Congressman Hobson, and so vitally significant are his conclusions, that this newspaper asked the man who sank the Merrimac for permission to print some of the most essential parts. The article following, by Captain Hobson, is printed by his permission, from his lecture.

By CONGRESSMAN RICHMOND P. HOBSON,
the Hero of the Merrimac.

THE Army War College at Washington has made an investigation of the destructiveness of war. Taking all the wars of the world, from the Russo-Japanese War back to 500 B. C., it found that the total number of killed and wounded in battle amounts to about 2,800,000 of which it is estimated that about 700,000 were killed and something over 2,000,000 wounded.

Comparative figures show the appalling fact that alcohol is killing off as many Americans every year as all the wars of the world have killed in battle in 2,300 years.

If a great military power were to declare war on unprepared America to-day, every patriotic heart would be filled with anxiety. I know the full significance of war, especially when a nation is unprepared. But if I had the choice of having alcohol continue in its deadly ravages with the nation at peace, or of having it wiped off the face of the land with a declaration of war by all the nations of the earth, I would not hesitate for a moment; I would take sober, undegenerate America and face the combined world in arms.

Last year, on an average, each saloon in the United States was the cause of the death of three men. This year each saloon, on the average, will kill three men. Each saloon in the United States, on an average, now has twenty men made heavy drinkers or drunkards. Each saloon, on an average, has one hundred men made regular drinkers.

I feel no bitterness against those engaged in the liquor traffic. They are in business by the consent of the Government, which shares the spoils. The Government belongs to all the people. The blame for the business is to be laid at the doors of all the people who have not done their utmost to destroy it.

In the full light of the facts I cannot look upon any saloon otherwise than as an assassin, the most barbarous, atrocious of assassins. It is vain to plead that the men who drink are responsible for the slaughter. They drink because the drug is kept in their presence. No amount of suffering will cause them to stop, or will warn others away. Meat with strychnine placed along the streets will kill the dogs. No terrible examples will have any effect. The fact of the poisoned meat being placed on the street is the cause of the destruction. When this seductive poison alcohol is placed along the streets in saloons, men will take it. The fact of its being on the street is the real cause of its being taken. Irrespective of the question of the responsibility for its existence, the saloon is fundamentally an assassin.

When the true nature of alcohol becomes better understood no community will longer tolerate these assassins, who take their stand on the corners and up and down the squares of our cities. In the premises the State has not only the right, but the bounden duty, to put an end to this wholesale assassination.

From conclusions drawn from scientific tests it is conservative to estimate that the heavy drinkers and confirmed drunkards in the United States have their productive efficiency lowered at least 75 per cent; that the temperate, regular drinkers, who drink alcoholic beverages every day of their lives, suffer a loss of productive efficiency of fully 50 per cent; that the occasional drinkers suffer a loss of fully 10 per cent. This is what Dr. Aschaffenberg proved by his famous test of four German typesetters —drinking men—who averaged a tenth more work when they drank nothing than when they drank even one ounce of alcohol at home in pure wine or beer.

The use of alcoholic beverages I estimate as causing a loss of fully 21 per cent in the efficiency of the nation's producers. The production of wealth is at a rate of about 32,000,000,000 yearly; the loss due to lowered efficiency, conservatively estimated in round figures, is therefore fully $8,500,000,000.

It is estimated that each one of the 700,000 men cut off ultimately every year by alcohol would have, sober, an economic value of $8,000, making a loss of $5,600,000,000. The nation last year, on account of the lowered efficiency of its producers and the death list, was over $14,000,000,000 short in its productiveness. Without alcohol, instead of producing only $32,000,000,000 of wealth, we would have produced over $46,000,000,000.

It is estimated that the cost of providing for the added crime, pauperism, idiocy and insanity produced by alcohol in the United States exceeds $2,000,000,000 per annum. The people of the United States last year consumed more than two and one-half billion gallons of alcoholic beverages, paying for the same nearly $2,000,000,000.

Summing up economic losses from the lowered efficiency of our producers, from the death list, from the costs of crime, pauperism and insanity, and from the liquor bill, the total economic burden laid upon the nation by King Alcohol is between sixteen and seventeen billions of dollars annually—more than half of all the wealth produced by the nation. And this gigantic burden is put upon us for purposes of destruction and degeneracy.

It is not difficult to see the duty of the State. If a foreign invader landed on our shores and disinherited the people of a single county, the nation would be up in arms. Here is a foe that has come upon us and is taxing us for more than the values of all the products of all our fisheries—equivalent to taking from our people all that Mother Earth produces on land and water combined. What shall be the attitude of the State in face of a foe that has disinherited the whole nation? Clearly the State has not only the clear right, but the bounden duty to take up arms and expect the foe.

But even this terrific economic loss is but a small part of the ravages of the destroyer. Alcohol attacks the line of evolution more than any other line. In the case of man the line of evolution is in normal advancement—what in any individual may be termed "character." Therefore the loss of character must be far greater than the economic loss. We found the farms, all our forests, all our mines, all our economic loss to be fully 21 per cent. If character could be measured by percentage, we would have to estimate the loss in average character of the nation as fully 50 per cent.

Looking upon a nation as climbing a ladder of evolution, alcohol, like a millstone, drags it half way to the bottom. The full significance of this drag appears when we realize that upon the average standard of character of its citizens must rest the institutions of a nation. It has become an axiom of history that if the average standard of character is below a certain minimum level a nation cannot enjoy self-government.

In our great cities, like New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, the ravages upon the average character have been so great, so many degenerates have already been produced, that the degenerate and corruptible vote not only holds the balance of power between the two great political parties and can dictate to both, but actually holds a majority of the votes, so that honest and efficient self-government as a permanent condition is now impossible.

At the present rate of the growth of cities over country life, if no check is put upon the spread of alcoholic degeneracy, the day cannot be far distant when liberty in great States must go under. It will then be but a question of time when the average standard of character of the nation's electorate will fall below that inexorable minimum, and liberty will take her flight from America, as she did from Greece and Rome.

In every living thing there is the evolutionary impulse to rise and progress. In the human family man is not changing much in h's physical nature, but is evolving chiefly in his nervous system, building up those delicate centers of the brain upon whose activities rests the moral sense. Nature is trying to produce men of high character, a race of true, noble men. Alcoholic beverages, even in moderation, reverse the processes of nature and set back the purposes of creation.

If a peaceable red man is subjected to the regular use of alcoholic beverages, he will speedily be put back to the plane of the savage. The government long since recognized [illegible] prohibits the introduction [illegible] beverages into an Indian reservation. If a negro takes up a regular use of alcohol [illegible] short time he will degenerate to the level of the cannibal.

[illegible] high the state of evolution, the result is the same. A white man with [illegible] considerate, tender-hearted, who would not willingly harm an insect, will be degenerated by regular use of alcoholic beverages [illegible] he will strike with a dagger or fire a shot to kill with little or no provocation.

Though at first a tender, loving husband and parent, he will degenerate to the point where he will be cruel to his own flesh and blood. It is conservatively estimated that 95 per cent of all the acts and crimes of violence committed in civilized communities are the direct result of men being put down by alcohol toward a plane of savagery. The degenerating process strikes at the integrity of the reason, and is the chief cause of idiocy and insanity. It wipes out self-control, self-respect, the sense of honor, the moral sense, and produces the bulk of tramps, [illegible] onds.

During the Boer war it was found that the average Englishman did not measure up to the standards of recruiting, and the average soldier [illegible] a low plane of vitality and endurance. Parliament, alarmed, instituted [illegible] The commission appointed brought in a finding that alcoholic poisoning was the great cause of the national de[illegible]

[illegible] nty-nine great railroads to forbid the use of alcoholic beverages among their employees. Science has supplemented experience by actual and accurate measurements. If a man drinks one glass of beer, the day on which he drinks it his general efficiency [illegible] an average of 8 per cent. If he takes three glasses of beer a day, or the equivalent in light wine, for twelve days, his efficiency at the end of the twelve days will be lowered 25 per cent to 40 per cent, depending upon the temperament of the man and the nature of the work. In doing mathematical work, like bookkeeping, the loss of efficiency goes above the 40 per cent limit; in memorizing the loss goes up as high as 7[illegible] per cent. Thus the most moderate and temperate drinking is harmful.

The results can be illustrated by taking the effect of alcohol on the white blood corpuscles, the wonderful standing army of the system, whose organized hosts, millions strong, attack and destroy the hordes of disease germs of all kinds that are constantly entering the system with the air we breathe, with our food and drink, and through abrasions of the skin. These disease germs seek a lodgment—germs of tuberculosis usually in the lungs, germs of typhoid in the intestines, each kind in its favorite organs or tissues—and meet in combat the armies of corpuscles. If the latter win from the outset, the germs are thrown off. If the germs win at first, they get a lodgment and multiply, and the person contracts disease. If the corpuscles finally win, the patient recovers. If the multiplying hordes of germs win, the patient dies. Nearly all of the diseases of mankind and nearly all the deaths hang upon the vitality and vigor of the white corpuscles.

Under the microscope it is found that even a moderate drink of alcoholic beverage, passing quickly into the blood, paralyzes the white blood corpuscles. They behave like drunken men. In pursuit they cannot catch the disease germs from devouring, and they cannot operate [illegible] conflict they cannot hold the disease in great phalanxes, as they do when sober, against such powerful germs as those of consumption.

Every time a man takes a drink of alcoholic beverage he lays himself open for a time to contracting disease. Every time a man takes a drink he puts his life in peril. No wonder the mortality statistics show, as they do, that the total abstainer has nearly twice the security and hold on life that the moderate drinker has, and about three times the hold of heavy drinkers.

If the drinks are repeated the microscope shows that the fighting powers of the white blood corpuscles are permanently impaired, even when they are not actually drunk. This accounts for the lowered vitality of regular drinkers, even though temperate.

After long-continued drinking, even though temperate, the microscope shows that the white corpuscles become carnivorous and begin to feed upon the tissues and organs like disease germs. The favorite tissue food of the degenerate corpuscles are the tender cells of latest development. In the human being the latest development is the brain. The microscope actually shows the degenerate corpuscles in the gray matter of the brain.

Statistics compiled by insurance companies show that the death rate for the population at large is 1,000 deaths per year out of every 61,215 of the population, and that the death rate of total abstainers is 560 per year in the same number. These figures, taken from many millions of cases, may be accepted as accurate. They show that 440 out of every 1,000 deaths (nearly one-half of the deaths that occur) are due to alcohol. Alcohol is killing our people at the rate of nearly 2,000 every day in the year.

The figures of the English life insurance [illegible]s to the effect of drink on longevity are as follows:

If a young man at the age of twenty is a total abstainer and remains a total abstainer, his prospect of life is forty-four years, and he will live to the average of sixty-four; but if he is a temperate regular drinker his prospect of life will be thirty-one years, and he will live to the average age of fifty-one, losing thirteen years out of his life. If he is a heavy drinker, his prospect of life is fifteen years, and he will die at the average age of thirty-five, losing twenty years out of his life. Conservative estimates place the number of confirmed drunkards in the United States at something over 1,000,000, of whom 300,000 die every year; the heavy drinkers at over 4,000,000, and temperate regular drinkers at over 20,000,000.

A scientist, after wide investigation, has found that in only 1 per cent of cases do accidents occur in maternity to mothers where the parents are total abstainers, while 5.25 per cent occur where the parents are regular temperate drinkers, and 7.32 per cent where the parents are heavy drinkers. Of the children of drinkers, 10 per cent will have consumption; of the children of total abstainers only 1.8 per cent.

Those who drink alcoholic beverages should realize the terrible price they pay. They nearly double the chances of their children dying in infancy, and they undermine the health and normality of those that survive. A man may take chances with himself, but if he has a spark of nobility in his soul he will take care [illegible] with a deadly poison that will cause the helpless little children he brings into the world to be deformed, idiotic, epileptic or insane.

Scientists selected from a litter of spaniels two little brothers exactly alike in infancy, and brought them up, one as an alcoholic and the other as a total abstainer, giving the former only a small quantity of alcohol with his food, about equivalent in proportion to what benighted parents often give their children in beer or light wine mixed with water. From another litter of spaniels they selected two little sisters exactly alike in infancy, and brought them up in the same way, one as an alcoholic, the other as a total abstainer. When the four dogs were grown they were mated, the two alcoholics together, and the two total abstainers together, and the process was repeated. The two mothers and the offspring were placed under close scientific observation. Extraordinary phenomena set in with the alcoholic mother. She experienced difficulties and accidents, suffered great travail in birth, and finally died in puppirth with the fifth litter. Many of her offspring were born dead. Many of them died in infancy, and of those that survived only 17.3 per cent were normal.

The abstaining mother had no such experience; she bore large litters of healthy, strong pups, of which 90.5 per cent were absolutely normal.

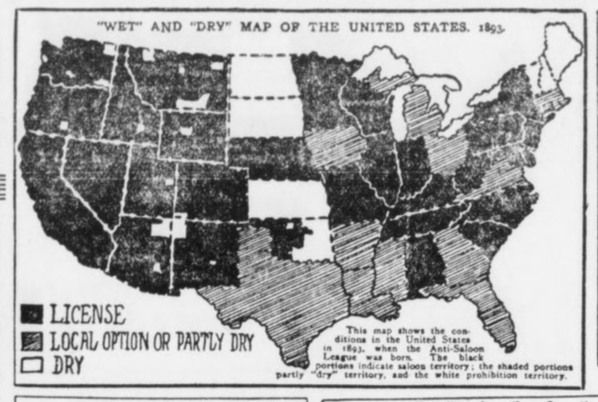
The same inexorable law holds for man as for animals. A scientist, having investigated more than 800 cases, announces that of children born to alcoholic parents, one in every five will be hopelessly insane, one in every three will be hysterical of epileptic, and more than two-thirds will be degenerate.

Another scientist located ten large families in which both parents were alcoholic, and in the same localities, with other conditions practically the same, ten large families in which both parents were total abstainers. Of the fifty-seven children of the alcoholic parents, ten were deformed, six were epileptic, six were idiotic; only 17 per cent were normal, and 83 per cent were abnormal. Of the sixty-one children of the total-abstaining parents, 10.5 per cent only were abnormal, and these chiefly backward, while 89.5 per cent were absolutely normal. Seventeen per cent were normal in the one case and 89.5 per cent in the other case—a difference of 72.5 per cent.

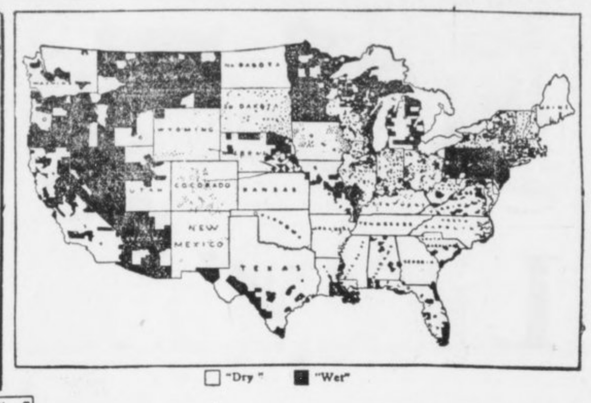
Parents by becoming alcoholic will sacrifice three-fourths of their children on the altar of drink.

Exact research has demonstrated that alcohol is destructive and degenerating to the human organism. Its effects upon the cells and tissues of the body are depressive, narcotic and anesthetic. Therefore, therapeutically, its use should be limited and restricted in the same way as the use of other poisonous drugs.

The question has passed beyond the experimental stage, beyond the stage of theory, and is a demonstration that is final, like the demonstration that the world is round and not flat.



The last word of science is that alcohol is a poison. It has been found to be a hydrocarbon, produced by the process of fermentation, and is the toxin or liquid excretion or waste product of the yeast or ferment germ. According to the universal law of biology that the toxin of one form of life is a poison to all forms of life of a higher order, alcohol, the toxin of the low yeast germ, is a poison to all human or other animal life, and to all the living tissues and organs.



It is not a day too soon to grapple with this foe. When degeneracy has gone much farther it will be too late. At the present rate it will not be long before abnormals and degenerates swamp our cities and overrun our States. Nature will not tolerate a race of degenerates. A backward, and usually a despised race, but undegenerate, is found ready to give the coup de grace. When Persia degenerated, Greece was on hand to strike. When Greece degenerated, Rome was ready. When Rome degenerated, Gaul was ready.

If America degenerates, the yellow man will be on hand. Some may make light of the yellow man; so did Romans make light of the "Barbarians." The yellow man is not degenerating. He can shoot as straight as a white man now, and, undegenerated, he can live on one-tenth of what is necessary for the white man while he is in the field doing the shooting. A race of degenerates cannot occupy the American continent. In this generation our people must take their choice; in the next generation it may be too late. There is no alternative. We are fairly in the death grapple. All the pages of history are crying out to America, "Conquer the great destroyer or perish."

Why Prisons Are Usually Only Universities of Crime

By PRINCE KROPOTKIN,
Author of "In Russian and French Prisons."

LEAVING aside the great question of "Crime and Punishment," which occupies now so many prominent lawyers and sociologists, I shall limit my remarks to the question: "Are prisons answering their purpose, which is that of diminishing the numbers of anti-social acts?"

To this question every unprejudiced person who has a knowledge of prisons from the inside will certainly answer by an emphatic No. On the contrary, a serious study of the subject will bring every one to the conclusion that the prisons—the best as much as the worst—are breeding places of criminality; that they contribute to render the anti-social acts worse and worse; that they are, in a word, the High Schools, the Universities of what is known as Crime.

Of course, I do not mean that every one who has been once in a prison will return to it. There are thousands of people sent every year to prison by mere accident. But I maintain that the effect of a couple of years of life in prison —from the very fact of its being a prison—is to increase in the individual those defects which brought him before a law court. These causes, being the love of risk, the dislike of regular work (due in an immense majority of cases to the want of a thorough knowledge of a trade), the despite of society with its injustice and hypocrisy, the want of physical energy and the lack of will—all these causes will be aggravated by detention in a jail.

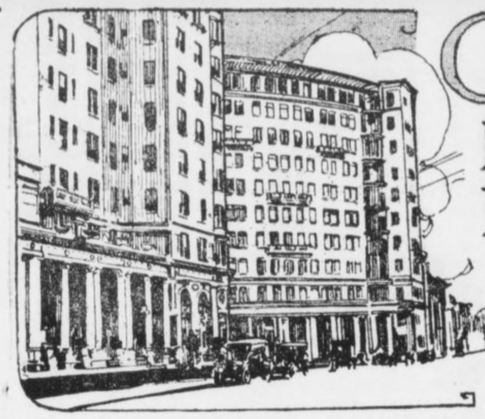
Five-and-twenty years ago, when I developed this idea in a book, now out of print ("In Russian and French Prisons"), I supported it by an examination of the facts revealed in France by an inquest made as to the numbers of recidivistes (second offense prisoners). The result of this inquest was that from two-fifths to one-half of all persons brought before the assizes and two-fifths of all brought before the police courts had already been kept once or twice in jail. The very same figure of 40 per cent was found in this country; while, according to Michael Davitt, as much as 95 per cent of all those who are kept in penal servitude have previously received prison education.

A little reflection will show that things cannot be otherwise. A prison has, and must have, a degrading effect on its inmates. Take a man freshly brought to a jail. The moment he enters the house he is no more a human being; he is "Number So and So." He must have no more a will of his own. They put on him a fool's dress to underline his degradation. They deprive him of every intercourse with those toward whom he may have an attachment, and thus exclude the action of the only element which could have a good effect upon him.

Then he is put to labor, but not to a labor that might help to his moral improvement. Prison work is made to be an instrument of base revenge. What must the prisoner think of the intelligence of these "pillars of society" who pretend by such punishment to "reform" the prisoners?

In the French prisons the inmates are given some sort of useful and paid work. But even this work is paid at a ridiculouly low scale, and, according to the prison authorities, it cannot be paid otherwise. Prison work, they say, is inferior slave work. The result is that the prisoner begins to hate his work, and finishes by saying: "The real thieves are not we, but those who keep us in."

The prisoner's brain is thus working over and over again upon the idea of the injustice of a society which pardons and often respects such swindlers as so many company promoters are, and wickedly punishes him, simply because he was not cunning enough. And the moment he is out he takes his revenge by some offense very often much graver than his first one. Revenge breeds revenge.



The revenge that was exercised upon him he exercises upon society. Every prison, because it is a prison, destroys the physical energy of its inmates. It acts upon them far worse than an Arctic wintering. The want of fresh air, the monotony of existence, especially the want of impressions, take all energy out of the prisoner, and produce that craving for stimulants (alcohol, coffee) of which Miss Allen spoke so truthfully the other day at the Congress of the British Medical Association. And finally, while most anti-social acts can be traced to a weakness of will, the prison education is directed precisely toward killing every manifestation of will.

Worse than that. I seriously recommend to prison reformers the "Prison Memoirs" of A. Berkman, who was kept for fourteen years in an American jail, and has told with great sincerity his experience. One will see from this book how every honest feeling must be suppressed by the prisoner, if he does not decide never to go out of this hell.

What can remain of a man's will and good intentions after five or six years of such an education? And where can he go after his release, unless he returns to the very same chums, whose company has brought him to the jail? They are the only ones who will receive him as an equal. But when he joins them he is sure to return to the prison in a very few months. And so he does. The jailers know it well.

I am often asked what reforms of prisons I should propose; but now, as twenty-five years ago, I really do not see how prisons could be reformed. They must be pulled down. I might say, of course: "Be less cruel, be more thoughtful of what you do." But that would come to this: "Nominate a Pestalozzi as governor in each prison, and sixty Pestalozzis as warders," which would be absurd. But nothing short of that would help.

So the only thing I could say to some quite well-intentioned Massachusetts prison officials who came once to ask my advice was this: If you cannot obtain the abolition of the prison system, then—never accept a child or a youth in your prison. If you do so, it is manslaughter. And then, after having learned by experience what prisons are, refuse to be jailers, and never be tired to say that prevention of crime is the only proper way to combat it. Healthy municipal dwellings at cost price, education in the family and at school—of the parents as well as the children; the learning by every boy and girl of a trade; communal and professional cooperation; societies for all sorts of pursuits; and, above all, idealism developed in the youths; the longing after what is lifting human nature to higher interests. This will achieve what punishment is absolutely incapable to do.

THE HOUSE HUNTERS-

By LEWIS ALLEN

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

"HELLO," said Jenkinson when his wife entered his office, "I was just going to send out for a ticket to the matinee; now I'll get two and take you along."

"Now, Jimmie Jenkinson, you know you promised to go house-hunting with me to-day," exclaimed his wife, "and you've just got to go!"

Jenkinson knew he had made no such promise, but he knew better than to argue with a woman. He also had a well-founded suspicion that she was right—he certainly had got to go.

"Any particular object in moving?" he asked.

"Why shouldn't we move?" Mrs. Jenkinson demanded. "We will find something ever so much better for less money. Look, here's an 'ad' that offers a six-room apartment with a beautiful view of Piedmont Park for fifty dollars."

"What's the rent?"

"Fifty dollars."

At the apartment they walked up four flights.

"I thought these were elevator apartments," complained Jenkinson.

"They are," said the agent. "We have a freight elevator in the rear."

"With the dumbwaiter that makes two elevators," commented Jenkinson. The agent agreed enthusiastically.

"And now about that grand view of the park. All I can see is a back alley with a big wash out," said Jenkinson.

"Oh, the view is from the roof. On a clear day you can see quite a bit of the park."

The Jenkinsons went away from there.

"Guess you'd better call it off and go to the matinee," suggested Jenkinson.

"There's a sign in there. Let's take a look," interrupted his wife.

"Oh look, there's a big butler's pantry——"

"That's the library, ma'am," explained the agent.

Jenkinson laughed, but Mrs. Jenkinson failed to see the joke.

"Anyway, this is a nice, cool bedroom, and see this nice big closet——"

"This is the dining room, and this," pointing to what Mrs. Jenkinson had thought to be a nice, big closet, "is the sleeping room," wearily explained the agent.

"Anyway, there's a lovely fireplace in this room"——

Again the agent interrupted her. With a dextrous movement he pulled out the fireplace and revealed a tiny gas stove. "This," he said, "is the kitchen."

"And the rent?" asked Jenkinson.

"Only eighty dollars," replied the agent.

"I think," said Mrs. Jenkinson, two minutes later, when they were on the sidewalk, "that we will find just what we want at the Eureka apartments." And so they took another long ride and arrived at the Eureka apartments. There were pretzels and corkscrews and fishworms chisled all over the entrance for ornaments, the halls were done in tiled floors, and the place looked inviting. The rooms were really good, and the rent was reasonable.

"Just what we want, Jimmie, isn't it?" gushed Mrs. Jenkinson.

"Whe-e-e-en I waltzzzz with you-u-u-u-u!" came in clear, vinegar-cruet soprano tones from across the hall. The lady was singing it through her nose.

"Our neighbors seem musical," commented Jenkinson.

"Oh, yes, the people here are very refined and nice," agreed the agent, appearing a bit disturbed.

"Well, Jimmie, I think this is what we want; now if you have a blank lease handy"——

"ON the MISSissIPpi, ON the MISSissIPpi," came the dulcet notes form a sort of mixed-ale quartette in the adjoining apartment.

"For goodess sake, is this"——

"Oh, just one of those big hundred dollar talking machines," said the agent, talking rapidly of the beauties of the flat

"Baw—aw—baw—aw—Hush my little pickaninny"——

The sound came from overhead.

"That's another of those talking machines. I didn't want you to think we would allow children in these exclusive apartments," the agent put in, hurriedly.

"I'd just as soon hear a real baby," said Mrs. Jenkinson.

"Ah but babies eat the wall paper and scratch the woodwork; no, if you have children we couldn't let this place"——

"We have no children," snapped Mrs. Jenkinson.

"That's all right, that's all right; I was merely warning you"——

Mrs. Jenkinson hastened away from there, nor could she understand why Jenkinson should laugh so heartily.

It was getting late. Mrs. Jenkinson bought an evening paper and looked through the advertisements.

"Here's a perfectly lovely place, six rooms, third floor, elevator, janitor service, parquet floors, vacuum sweeper and everything," she exclaimed, reading the advertisement.

"Well, where is it?" grumbled Jenkinson, now tired and hungry and thirsty and peeved.

"It doesn't say. We will have to call on the agent," she informed him, and so they went to the agent, showed him the advertisement, and asked him where that apartment was located.

"Very good apartment, rent only sixty dollars. Third floor, No. 87 Blanke street"——

"Great Mansions in the Skies!" yelled Jenkinson, "that's our OWN apartment, where we live now!"

"Then you have given notice?" said the agent.

Mrs. Jenkinson nodded. For once she was speechless for a moment.

"But how comes the rent to be sixty dollars? We are paying only fifty-five," said Jenkinson.

"Oh, it is such a good apartment we have decided to raise the rent," smiled the agent.

"Now we've GOT to move," said Mrs. Jenkinson.

Jimmie said something in reply.

"Why, Jimmie Jenkinson!" gasped his wife.

Man!

MAN that is born of woman is of few dollars and full of egoism.

2. He cometh forth like a flower but is wilted by the highcostofliving and shriveled by rent and taxis.

3. ¶ Headache followeth his thirst all the days of his life.

4. He hoppeth out of bed fifteen minutes late in the morning and findeth neither his milkman nor paper boy have arrived.

5. He hustleth for his train and misseth it by three-quarters or a minute.

6. ¶ He rusheth to his noonday lunch and choketh upon a fishbone in his chicken salad.

7. He crosseth the street in the pride of his manhood and is tossed three blocks by a yellow honk-wagon.

8 Behold the man who cameth unto his office to pay a great bill dieth of apoplexy whilst he is at lunch.

9. Yea, even his stenographer leaveth her chewing gum in his desk chair by accident, and he needs must wear his raincoat home.

10. ¶ What is man but the shuttlecock of fate walloped over the fence by the battledore of adversity?

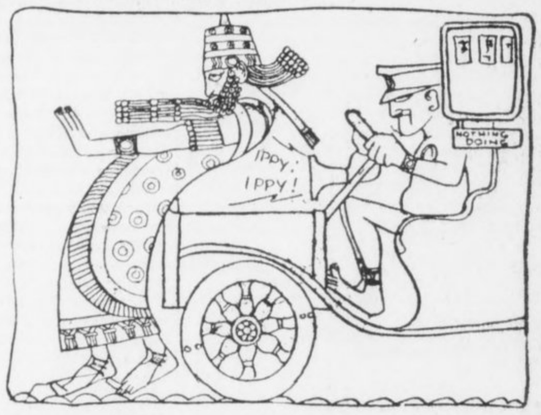
11. Behold he garnereth in unto himself seven simoleons in one day, the while his wife shoppeth and hath charged to him a bill for nine simoleons.

12. In his infancy he stubbeth his toe and waileth lustily, and in his maturity he acquireth the gout and curseth abominably.

13. ¶ Yea, his troubles do follow him in his young manhood and the first girl to whom he proposeth doth accept him.

14. And just as he saveth sufficient to purchase for his adornment an pair of white flannel trousers and an high straw lid with the bow abaft, lo and behold, his wife's relatives come and borroweth it from him!

15. Verily, what is man but a stone-bruise upon the heel of existence?



16. Even is he but a freckle upon the face of Miss Fortune, for when he polisheth his silk hat he absent-mindedly turneth about and sitteth upon it, being therefore the man who putteth loss in gloss.

17. Nor in his lexicon can there be found the word "luck," for should he lay a wager upon a horse that animal dieth in the home stretch, and should he hold four kings and add his watch unto his stack in the pot, verily another holdeth four aces.

18. ¶ He runneth for office, nor can any one guess what manner of man it was who cast the other vote for him.

19. Even will the letter carrier unwittingly drop the envelope addressed to him containing a check, but promptly deliver four duns.

20. He walketh in the street and a bulldog falleth upon him; he walketh in the fields and an aviator falleth upon him; he hideth in the cellar for protection and the gas meter explodeth and hoisteth him through the floorings unto the third floor; even if he diveth into forty fathoms of water he bumpeth his bean upon a water-logged plank.

21. The man for whom he went bond fleeth into Africa; the check he receiveth is returned unto him marked in glaring letters across it's face, "NO FUNDS;" his rent, insurance, lodge dues, coal bill and three notes falleth due upon the same day.

22. ¶ The banister of life adown which he slideth is full of splinters, and the Hand of Fate leadeth him not but weareth brass knuckles and jabbeth him constantly.

23. Yea, verily, man that is born of woman is destined to bills and boils, toil and thirst, malaria and matrimony.

24. And when the end cometh he cannot even enjoy the epitaph provided for him, and the flowers sent to garnish his obsequies are by mistake delivered to the home of his bitterest enemy.

Some New Jokes From Everywhere

The Deacon's Mistake.

"SISTER HENDERSON," said Deacon Hyphers severely, "you should avoid even the appearance of evil."

"Why, Deacon, what do you mean?" asked Sister Henderson.

"I observed that on your sideboard you have several cut-glass decanters, and that each of them is half filled with what appears to be ardent spirits."

"Well, now, Deacon, it isn't anything of the kind. The bottles look so pretty on the sideboard that I just filled them halfway with some floor and furniture polish, just for appearances."

"That's why I'm cautioning you, sister," replied the Deacon. "Feeling a trifle faint, I helped myself to a dose from the big bottle in the middle."

Cheer Up.

"I SOMETIMES wonder if life is worth living," mused the pessimist.

"It is," replied the optimist. "It is worth living much better than most of us live it."

A Personal Application.

"SAY, Parson," said Elder Berry at the church board meeting, "here are the resignations of all of the quartette choir."

"My, my," said Doctor Fourthly in distress, "what's the trouble?"

"Your announcement Sunday morning," replied Elder Berry sternly. "You know you said: 'Providence having seen fit to afflict all our choir with bad colds, let us join in singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."'"

He Meant Well.

OLD AUNT (despondently)—Well, I shall not be a nuisance to you much longer.

Nephew (reassuringly)—Don't talk like that, aunt. You know you will.

Discouraging.

MR. JORDAN was touring by motor car, and arrived at a crowded village inn quite late one evening. There was no spare bed to be had, which was a great disappointment, as he was tired, and very much disliked the thought of driving farther that night.

"Haven't you at least a bundle of hay you can give me?" he demanded of the landlady.

"There isn't a thing left," she answered, "except a bit of cold roast beef."

An Oversight.

THE steamboat came splashing along her course, at full speed, and the first thing the passengers knew had crashed head-on into the pier.

"Mercy!" cried a passenger. "I wonder what is the matter?"

"Nothin'," said Pat, one of the deckhands. "Nothin', ma'am—ut looks to me as if the captain just forgot that we stop here."

A Serious Error.

"YOU'VE made a mistake in your paper," said the indignant man, entering the editorial sanctum. "I was one of the competitors at the athletic match yesterday and you have called me the well-known lightweight champion."

"Well, aren't you?" said the editor.

"No, I'm nothing of the kind; and it's confoundedly awkward, because, you see, I'm a coal merchant."

Bright Side.

"HE always tries to see the bright side."

"What's happened?"

"He was run down by an automobile yesterday and almost killed, yet the first thing he said when he regained consciousness was, 'Gee whiz! after fifteen years I've got a chance to cash in on an accident policy!'"

Quite Obvious.

"MY dear," said Mrs. Snaggs to her husband, "what is a canard?"

"Don't you know what a canard is?" queried Snaggs rather sneeringly. "Why, the word itself conveys its own meaning!"

"Does it? Well, really, I can't see it. What does it mean, dear?"

"Why, a canard is something one canardly believe, of course!"

"Oh, to be sure! Why couldn't I think of that?"

Only To Be Expected.

THE OPTIMIST—I hear Brownsmith is going to be married.

The Pessimist—Serves him right. I never did like that fellow.

Too Honest.

"SIR," said the office boy to his employer, "as you know very well that my family is in perfect health, I ask you to let me off this afternoon to go to the ball game."

"Young man," replied the boss, "you are entirely too honest. I have my suspicions of you. You are fired."

Proceedings Stopped.

"YOUR husband is willing to allow you the custody of the automobile, the poodle and the rubber plant, while he takes the children and the graphophone."

"Stop the divorce," sobbed the wife. "I'll never get another husband like that."

Hated to Give In.

THE minister of a parish in Scotland was called to effect a reconciliation between a fisherman of a certain village and his wife. After using all the arguments in his power to convince the offending husband that it was unmanly in him, to say the least, to strike Polly with his fist, the minister concluded:

"David, you know that the wife is the weaker vessel, and you should have pity on her."

"Weel, then," said David, sulkily, "if she's the weaker vessel, she shoul carry the less sail."

As Per Label.

A WELL KNOWN artist tells of an amusing colloquy in an art gallery where two young women were viewing a copy of Millet's "Gleaners."

One of the young women was carried away by her enthusiasm. "How beautiful! How wonderful! What art!" she exclaimed. "Above all, how natural!"

Then, after a pause, she said: "But what are those people doing?" Drawing near to read the title, she added, "I see! Gleaning millet! How wonderful! How beautiful!"

Sarcasm.

WHEN one wants a mistake corrected, it is always well to express the demand impressively.

A Maine lumber dealer recently shipped a carload of lumber to a firm in Baltimore.

Upon receipt and examination the customer dictated to his stenographer the following terse and telling message, which was immediately wired:

"Knot-holes received; please send the knots."

Strictly Modern.

MR. HENNER (showing summer boarder through the chicken house)—It's up to date, you see. There is the feeding pen, here the dusting room; at this end is the watering trough, and on that side you see the nesting boxes.

Summer Boarder (earnestly)—Strictly modern, isn't it? And do the hens really lay their own eggs?"

The Only Way.

"I WAS only acting the part of peacemaker," explained the prisoner.

"But you knocked the man senseless, the magistrate pointed out.

"I did," was the answer. "There was no other way to get peace."

A Compliment.

JINGLE—De Courcy Smythe boasts that he can trace his ancestry back to the Normans.

Winkle—Well, the Normans are dead, and they won't mind.

Tough Life.

THE late James R. Keene, himself almost a Forty-niner, used to tell many a story about the characters of those days.

"It was difficult then," he once said, "to be a temperance man, for to refuse to drink with a Forty-niner was a worse offense than to kiss his wife.

"A Forty-niner, twirling his long drooping mustache, said to a tenderfoot in a barroom:

"'Have some red-eye with me?'

"'Thank you, no,' said the tenderfoot, a total abstainer, firmly.

"There was a tense silence in the crowded bar. A pin could have been heard to drop. Then the Forty-niner reached back to his hip pocket and said with a weary sigh:

"'Can't I even take a drink without killin' a man?'"

No Alternative.

AN anxious traveler in a streef car, with watch in hand, seeing he had only a few minutes in which to catch a train, said to the conductor: "Can't you make any faster time than this?"

"Yes," answered the conductor, "I can, but I have to stay with the car."

A Safe Bet.

A DURHAM farmer was traveling to London to consult a lawyer, when the fear struck him that he had left certain important papers behind. He made a hurried search of his bag.

"If I did leave those papers," he remarked, "I'm a fool!"

"I believe it'll turn out I'm a fool!"

Just as he was examining the last bundle of papers he exclaimed:

"Well, I'll bet I'm a fool!"

A man on the other side of the compartment lowered his newspaper for a moment and said, slowly and deliberately:

"Oblige me, sir, by laying a little money that same way for me."

The Present Time.

AN American mother was trying to instill in her 7-year-old daughter a spirit of patriotism while they were traveling in Mexico.

"Doris," she said, "this is George Washington's birthday!"

"Is it?" Doris queried indifferently. "What'd he get?"

Got to Eat.

A CLERGYMAN met one of his parishioners in a country lane late one night.

"It's pretty damp for a man with rheumatism to be prowling about at night, eh, William?"

"Well, sir, I'm following the doctor's advice."

"Why, did he tell you to be out at night?"

"Not exactly, sir, but he said that I needed chicken!"

The Last Word.

HOTFOOT—Yes, sir; when we were ambushed we got out without losing a man, or a horse, or a gun, or——

"A minute," chimed in a small, thin voice.

No Cabaret.

MISSIONARY—If you are about to kill me, let me sing a hymn.

Cannibal—No, sir! No music with meals in this place.

A Boast.

MISS D.—I can trace my ancestors back to the Reformation.

Miss E.—That's nothing; I can trace mine back years and years before they attempted to reform.

Business Pal.

MESSENGER—Who's the swell ye was talking to, Jimmie?

Newsboy—Aw! Him an' me's worked together for years. He's the editor o' one o' my papers.

Misconstrued.

AN American motoring through a small Scotch town was pulled up for excessive speed.

"Didn't you see that notice, 'Dead Slow'? inquired the policeman.

"'Course I did," returned the Yankee, "but I thought it referred to your durned little town!"

Caution.

A BOY who had been absent from school for several days returned with his throat carefully swathed, and presented this note to his teacher:

"Please don't let my son learn any German to-day. His throat is so sore he can hardly speak English."

PEACHTREE STREET

How Calm and Peaceful is the Din
With which Peachtree Resounds;
A thousand Noises mingle in
To Deafen out all Sounds.
The walks are strips of Listless Life
In Longing, Languid Clinch;
Such Crowds are gathered there in Strife,
No one can Budge an inch.
For those of Melancholy mind,
'Tis just the place to Go,
A High-geared auto from Behind
Soon Ends their tale of Woe.

'Tis thus that Peachtree street would be
Sweet joy in endless reams,
If Cubist art in poetry
Were really what it seems.

A Few Minutes with Harry Breen

"The Man of Few Words"

THAT'S ma's house! I can see the old gables on it! Same old mortgage on it! Father gave it to mother, dollar down—and a sheriff a week!

Oh, look at the bay windows. How often I've seen my dear old mother washing them with bay rum!

And look at the butler's pantry, where he puts on his pantry pants!

It will be good to see mother! Mabe she won't know me with this gold tooth! A lot of squirrels followed me here. I heard one of them say:

"Keep after him—he'll make a good meal; he's nutty."

But they'll never get me! I'll go to Brazil with the rest of the nuts. It's my parents' fault I'm this way. I was born on Hallowe'en. My father was a colonel.

My young son works in an office. We call him office nut.

"Ah, 'tis you, mother! Don't you know me, mother, with this collar on?

The war is over. They told me I had killed enough men to-day, and sent me home half a nhour earlier.

Look, mother, I've brought home an invention—an ear muff for next Summer, mother—to keep the juice of the watermelon out of people's ears.

"His mind will be all right when he can remember his maiden name! Let's go out and see the old garden, mother.

Oh, look at the condensed-milk weeds! Look at the little leave-me-nots! Mother planted them. Then she planted father. Those were the happy days!

"Mother, there's no use to ask me to have sense. You know in your heart that I've been eating with my knife ever since I was born. It's hereditary. Father done it, mother. You brought it all on yourself, mother. Why, every time you had green peas you put knives on the table! That done it!

"Look at the table all set. What elegance! A meal fit for a king! Look at the napkins! Sister must have been eating at the swell hotels lately!

Oh, see the silverware! Brother must have been along with sister! And look at the cubes of mulligatawney. Now, dear father won't have to SIP, SIP, HOORAY! How ather used to fight with the neighbors. One hundred and eighty-three battles and never won one!

Yes, I'll sit down, mother. But I wouldn't have if that City chap had a been a sittin' down at our festive board. I can't stand to have him around, mother. Why? Ah, mother, there be rumors in the village. They say he wears paper collars

"But, mother, we can't sit down without father. Where is he? He MUST be up for see—you are usina a sheet for a table cloth. Such a spread! Look at the bologna! See it glisten in the sun—sun-kissed liver wurst!

"Well, mother, I'm off to the war again. They may want me back in the front ranks. Good bye, mother, if the landlord comes for the rent, tell him you'll fight it out on these lines if it takes all Summer.

"I'll be home the first Sunday you have meat.

Book For Men, Free

8,000 Words, 30 Illustrations

TO MY READERS:

Of the little illustrated advice book described below, which I gladly send free to all men who fill in the coupon, I beg to say that it represents the information of a private nature which I am able to offer you as a result of over 30 years' observation and study of my subject, during which time I have personally interviewed many thousands of men, young and elderly, single and married, rich and poor alike, who came to me in confidence with their confessions of debility, lost nerve force and failing strength.

It is, reader, this vast and unusual opportunity which has enabled me to compile this very popular and valuable little free book (over a million of which have been sent everywhere to men who wrote me for them), and in a manner to reflect the exact living, breathing experiences and needs of real men who sought information as to the newer ways of self treatment without the use of drugs.

Remember, this book of over 8,000 words and 30 illustrations will come to you by return mail in reply to your request, and in a perfectly plain, sealed envelope, for it is no one's business but your own what the envelope contains. There is absolutely no obligation on your part to buy anything or pay anything, and merely the receipt of this book does not mean in any way that you are to use one of my VITALIZERS (see description below), and, in fact, only a portion of the book has any reference to the VITALIZER at all. Primarily it is a compendium of useful information for private reference, which you and all other men may easily profit by through life.

Therefore, please use the coupon, or, if nearby, I should be very glad to have you call.

SANDEN, AUTHOR.

It is a fact, reader, which you and I must recognize and admit, that the whole world admires and is fascinated by strong, vigorous, husky, manly manhood, and we must also admit that it is this same manhood and this alone which is back of the real leaders and producers in every walk of life. No matter where we go, we find it to be the manly, vigorous, vital fellow who forges to the front, who dares the stand and wrongs of his community, who does the really great things. An unmanly man merely means nature's laws gone wrong, for it is he who hails and findtates, who takes the back seat, who does not fit into the picture in a way that a manly, vital nature should. And yet, reader, it is my firm belief that any man, no matter what his past, no matter what disadvantages or follies may have left their mark upon his physical and mental being, I say to you that such a man, unless there be some unusual reason, may hope for a complete return of his strength, vigor and self confidence, if he but go about his self-restoration in a natural, commonsense way.

I make a little appliance which we will call a VITALIZER, because I think that is the best word to describe its strange power. I don't want you to think of getting one of these VITALIZERS just now, but I would like you to investigate my claims as to what I believe can be accomplished by almost any weakened man who uses this VITALIZER faithfully for a few weeks. I speak, of course, of him who is willing to step up dissipation and lead a decent, conservative life, not only while using the VITALIZER, but for the future. The other kind of man, the dissipated, can hope for nothing from any treatment, no matter what it may be, hence such a man is eliminated from my consideration.

This little VITALIZER is made to wear upon the body all night. It weighs only several ounces and is no more unhandy than an ordinary belt, yet it generates a great FORCE that I call VIGOR, which flows into your blood organs and nerves while you sleep. Men say it often takes any pain or weakness out of the back in one application, and that 60 to 90 days' use has been sufficient to restore manly strength. Just to put men in the "never felt better in my life" class. Special attachments carry the FORCE if the VITALIZER to any part of the body, for the use of women as well as men in cases of rheumatism, kidney, liver stomach, bladder disorders, etc.

Over two hundred thousand of these VITALIZERS have been used or are now being used by men all over the world.

You had better learn more of this VITALIZER. It is fully described in my free book. If you live near me, why not call and test the VITALIZER yourself.

WHAT THE FREE BOOK TELLS

The free illustrated advice booklet mentioned above is meant to be a simple declaration of certain important truths that every man in the world should know. The city has gone by when men are kept in ignorance of the real problems pertaining to these private subjects, and this illustrated advice booklet, which I send to men sealed, by mail, gives certain important facts relating to sex, just as those facts are. The booklet also fully describes my VITALIZER and you are told how you may get one for your own use if you decide that you want one. Please use coupon below, or call. Hours 9 to 6; Sundays, 10 to 1.

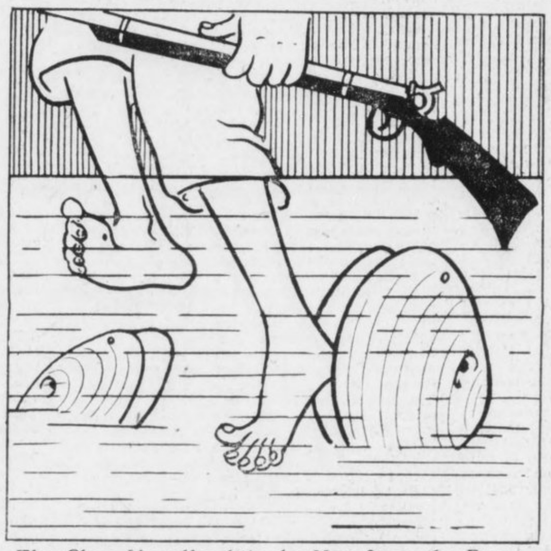
Life History of the American Clam

EDITOR'S NOTE: Col. Roosevelt, after rushing through Africa, is writing the "life history" of the African lion. Having once eaten an esteemed clam, we are emboldened to tell all about the animile.



IN my previous book, "American Game Trails," I did not refer to the clam, for the sufficient reason that it is impossible to trail a clam as the clam leaves no trail. Had this magnificent specimen of our native fauna been equipped with feet, it would doubtless leave footprints, and enough footprints form a trail. However, it is useless to discuss what might have been.

The clam is easily the most dangerous of our native big game. The grizzly is a cream puff beside the clam, whose ferocity is equalled only by his activity. Any hunter who has ever faced the whirlwind charge of a slightly wounded clam will never forget it.

The World's Greatest Mechanical Device— THE HAIRPIN!

By PROF. WHEELZON COGGS.

"I THANK you, I—I—that's better, one cannot talk amid such deafening applause. My subject to-night concerns the world's greatest mechanical device. Jubal invented the wheel by accident—he drank too much wine and his head went 'round and 'round.

"Since then we have had other inventions, such as steam engines and can openers, cotton gins and gin rickeys, steam derricks and slit skirts, and, I might go on enumerating them half the evening.

"There is the talking machine—mine is at home with the children, she didn't feel like going out to-night—but of all the mechanical inventions none can compare with the hairpin!

"I come here prepared to prove this statement. There are some who may believe the typesetting machine or the travelling crane or the automobile is a greater mechanical device than the hairpin. But not so!

"The travelling crane needs a steam engine and seven men to operate it. The typesetting machine needs a gas stove and a profane man in his shirt sleeves with a cob pipe and a bunch of copy to operate it.

"An automobile is made up of some three thousands parts, and they are frequently parting, while it needs eight cents' worth of gasoline, which may be secured for 25 cents, and either a chauffeur or a human being to operate it.

"And so it goes. Think of the common, ordinary mechanical device. Think of the sewing machine and the dollar watch. Who can stop one or run the other? Consider the great cloth-weaving looms, if something were to break in one of them it would take a man two days to pick up the various parts that fall out!

"But the hairpin!

"There are no parts to get out of order! Consider for a moment the marvelous mind that conceived this wonderful piece of mechanism! Only one part in the entire machine! The inventor started with a bit of wire, ran it along a couple inches, then turned it around and ran it back again. That's all there is to it.

"That's all there is to it, I say, and yet—what has it accomplished? What can it accomplish? What is there in this wide world that it cannot accomplish?

"Can you unlock a door or try a cake in the oven to see if it is done, with an automobile? You know you cannot—there's no use arguing that point. But you can do these things with a hairpin.

"Can you button a glove or a shoe, or clean a pipe, or fish a dime out of a crack in the floor, or rob baby's bank, or fasten on your suspenders with a typesetting machine or a cash register or a travelling crane or a locomotive. Of course not, but you can do those things with a hairpin.

"Think of it—a mechanical device consisting of only one part, no extra parts to replace, no spark plug, or inner tubes, or extra driving rods, or fire-box linings, or fly-wheels, or pulleys, or broken sprocket wheels to replace in the hairpin. It is all there always, and yet see what it will do.

"You can bend it up and catch fish with it; you can pry off the top of a milk bottle with it; you can pick the putty out of the gas jet that an economical landlady jabbed in with it; you can fasten a window catch or a door lock with it; you can mend baby's toy cart with it; you can clean a fountain pen with it; you can—in short, is there anything you cannot do with it?

"What's that? Speak louder, please! A gentleman in the audience says you cannot weave with it. He is a cloth manufacturer and peeved at what I just said about looms. Did anyone in this audience ever make a little arrangement out of a spool and hairpins and knit worsted playhorse reins? Thanks—thanks—thanks—that will do, I see nearly everyone in the audience has done that.

"I say there is nothing you cannot do with the aid of a hairpin. There is no other mechanical device that approaches it. First, it is not complicated; second, there are no parts to break and lose; third, it does not run down; fourth, it does not need oiling; fifth, it is cheap; sixth, it is not taxable; seventh, a child can operate it; eighth, it needs no fuel to operate it.

"Why, ladies and gentlemen, so perfect is the hairpin as a mechanical device that a woman may even keep her hair in place with it!

"I thank you."

THE PLOT FOR THE PENNANT.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

"Like a flash McCarthy leaped sideways, touched the other runner, who was starting back to second base, and, with a fierce dive, threw his body between the base and the runner, who had overslid it, and tagged him."

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

THE second week in September finds the Panthers and Bears nearing the end of a bitter struggle for the baseball championship. The four-game series they are to play will probably decide the question of supremacy. Through an accident the Bears lose the services of their heaviest hitter and speediest base-runner, and they lose the first game.

That evening a stranger calls at the hotel where the Bears are stopping and asks for Manager Clancy. He is insulted by Adonis Williams, the club's star pitcher, and threatens to whip him. Betty Tabor, the club's secretary's daughter, intervenes and directs the stranger to Manager Clancy. As a result of the interview, the stranger is signed to fill the gap in the Bear team and his skill as a pinch-hitter in the second game, wins it for the Bears. He is dubbed "Kohinoor" McCarthy.

The enmity between Williams and McCarthy increases as a result of the success of the Bears' new recruit.

On the train which is bearing the Bears away from the Panther's city, McCarthy surprises his team-mates by his fine singing voice. He is warmly congratulated by Betty, the secretary's daughter, and the next morning Betty invites him to join her at breakfast.

Later in the day Pitcher Williams warns "Kohinoor" to keep away from Betty declaring that the young lady is going to be his wife.

"Kohinoor," feeling very blue at this news, repeats the conversation to his particular chum Swanson, the team's great fighting shortstop and is told that while Williams has been crazy about Betty for three years, she has no use for him. McCarthy falls asleep to the music of the car wheels which seemed to him to say over and over again: "She isn't engaged; she isn't engaged; she isn't engaged."

"Easy Ed" Edwards, the gambler, makes a proposition for Williams to throw the championship to the Panthers in such a way that the blame will rest on McCarty.

CHAPTER VII.

A Note from Helen.

"COME to the hotel parlor at eight this evening. I wish to see you."

The note, hastily scribbled on hotel letter paper, was awaiting him when Kohinoor McCarthy entered the hotel after the disastrous game which had been lost chiefly because of his errors. He recognized the angular scrawled writing at a glance, yet the tone of the brief communication puzzled and irritated him. Since the moment his eyes had met those of Helen Baldwin during the game he had been thinking hard with conflicting emotions. Her behavior had hurt him and the thought that she deliberately had refused to recognize him stung his pride. Perhaps, he argued with himself, she had heard that he was playing incognito and had cut him to avoid revealing the fact that she knew him. The note proved beyond doubt that she had recognized him on the field. Either she was ashamed of his profession or did not want the men with her to know that she knew him.

McCarthy ate a hurried dinner and paced the lobby of the hotel restlessly. He was anxious to meet the girl, yet he felt a dread of it; an uncertainty as to the grounds on which their acquaintanceship should be resumed. He watched the clock impatiently until finally, determined to compose himself, he sat down and refused to look, and when he finally turned his head he was surprised to find that it was only a few minutes to the appointed time for meeting. He ran hastily up the stairs and hastened through parlor after parlor, expecting Helen Baldwin to rise and greet him. Twice he passed through the parlors. They were empty and he sat down upon a deep lounge to wait. For nearly half an hour he waited, growing more impatient with every minute and wondering whether there had been a mistake. His mind was busy framing a form of greeting. When last they met it had been as affianced lovers. Now——

A rustle of soft garments brought him to his feet and he stepped forward with outstretched hand to meet the tall, slender girl who came leisurely from the hallway. Her mass of light, fair hair framed a face of perfect smoothness and high color. Her eyes were brown, but of a hard, lustreless tint, which, with the thinness of her lips, gave the face a look of hard coldness in spite of its coloring.

"Helen," he exclaimed quickly, "This is a pleasant surprise."

"I wish to talk with you, Larry," she replied without warmth, as she extended a limp hand, sparkling with jewels.

"It is good to see you, Helen," he exclaimed, a bit crestfallen because of her manner. "What brings you East? I was nearly bowled over when I saw you to-day"——

The remembrance of the fact that she had cut him caused him to stop suddenly and flush as he added, "I thought you did not know me, but I see you did."

"Surely you did not expect me to bow to you there," she responded sharply. "Did you desire all those people to know that I had acquaintances in that—that class?"

"Then you chose to cut me deliberately?" he asked.

"Don't be foolish, Larry," she replied lightly. "A girl must think of herself and I did not choose to have my companions learn that I was acquainted with persons in that—profession, do you call it?"

"Well, if you are ashamed of my profession"—he said hotly.

"Nonsense," she interrupted him. "I simply did not desire to have people see me speak to a person who earns his living sliding around in the dirt on his face. That is what I wanted to see you about. What new prank is this? Are you seeking notoriety?"

Her tone was petulant and the boy, indignant at being placed on the defensive without the opportunity to explain, grew hard.

"I am earning my living—honorably," he said. "Baseball is the only thing I could do well enough to make money."

"Earn your living?" the girl's surprise was sincere. "You haven't broken with your Uncle Jim, have you?"

The girl's eyes grew wider with surprise, and her tone indicated consternation.

"I have—or, rather, he has—cut me off," the boy explained rather sullenly. "I tried to find a job. Thought it would be easy here in the East, but no one wanted my particular brand of ability, and I tried something I knew I could do."

"Then you—then your uncle"—the girl's consternation was real, and she hesitated as if unable to grasp the import of the words. "Then our engagement"——

"I thought that was broken before I left," he replied. "You said you wouldn't marry me at all if I told Uncle Jim."

"I thought you would be sensible," she argued. "Every one at home thinks you are sulking somewhere in Europe, because of a quarrel with me. Why didn't you write to me?"

"After our last interview it did not seem necessary," he said.

"Oh, Larry," the girl said, pouting, "you've spoiled it for both of us. If you had done as I wanted you to do everything would have been happy, and now you humiliate me and all your friends by earning your living playing with a lot of roughs."

"They're a pretty decent lot of fellows," he responded indignantly. "Better than the average of our set; squarer and straighter."

"Why did you do it?" she demanded, on the verge of tears from disappointment and annoyance.

"I quarrelled with Uncle Jim," he admitted. "I told him I wanted to marry you, and he told me that if I continued to see you he'd cut me off."

"And you lost your temper and left?" she concluded.

"Just about that," he confessed. "He told me I was dependent upon him, and said I'd starve if I had to make my own living. Of course I could not stand that"——

"Of course," she interjected stormily. "I told you that he hated all our family, but that if we were married he would forgive you."

"I couldn't cheat him that way," he replied with some heat. "Besides you had broken with me. I knew he hated your uncle—but I thought if he knew you"——

"He would have," she said, "if you had given him a chance."

"I told him I could make my living—a living for both if you would have me," he confessed.

"Playing ball?" Her tone was bitter. "And you had an idea you would come East and make your fortune and come back and claim me?"

"I did have some such idea when I left," he confessed. "It wasn't until I was broke and unable to find work that I realized how hopeless it was to think of you."

"I couldn't bear being poor, Larry," the girl spoke with some feeling.

"We were poor once, I know. Be sensible. Go back home and make up with Mr. Lawrence—and when I return"——

"I am making a good salary," he said steadily. "I can support two. If you care enough"——

"I couldn't marry a mere ball player," she said, shrugging with disdain.

"You used to like it when I played at college," he retorted angrily.

"That was different," she argued. "There you were a hero—but here you are a mere professional."

"But you attend games," he protested.

"I had to to-day. I am on my way to visit Uncle Barney for the Summer, and his friend insisted upon taking us to the game."

"That was Barney Baldwin with you?" he inquired, his tone expressing dislike.

"Yes," she said defiantly. "Your Uncle Jim hates him because Uncle Barney is cleverer in business and has beaten him, but you should not take up the quarrel."

"Oh, see here, Helen," he protested. "He's your uncle, but every one knows he is crooked in politics and in business. Why do you accept his money?"

"He is very good to me—and I cannot bear to be poor again."

"Then you will not"——

"Be reasonable, Larry," she interrupted. "You know I cannot marry a poor man."

"Then it was only the money you cared for?" he said bitterly. "Uncle Jim said it was, and I quarrelled with him for saying it—and it was true."

"You put it coarsely," she said coldly. "You cannot expect me to give up the luxuries Uncle Barney provides for me and marry a ball player. Unless you make it up with your uncle I shall consider myself free."

A stifled exclamation, like a gasp of surprise, startled both of them, and a rustle of retreating garments in the adjoining parlor caused McCarthy to step quickly to the doorway. He was just in time to recognize the gown disappearing around the corner into the hallway. He realized that Betty Tabor had overheard part of the conversation, and he wondered how much. He was flushed, and showed signs of consternation as he returned to the divan.

"Some eavesdropper, I suppose," Miss Baldwin remarked carelessly.

"She came by accident, probably to read, and departed as soon as she realized it was a private conversation," he said warmly.

"Then you know her?" she asked quickly.

"Yes," he replied, realizing he had betrayed undue interest in the defense.

"Who is she?" the girl demanded.

"One of the women with the team; daughter of the secretary," he explained, striving uncomfortably to appear unconcerned.

"Is she pretty?"

"Why—yes—I don't know. She is very pleasant and nice looking."

"Rather odd, isn't it, a woman traveling with a lot of tough ball players?"

"You are unjust," he exclaimed, indignantly. "She is with her father and Mrs. Clancy. Besides, the ball players are not tough—at least none of them is while she is with the club."

"You seem ready to rush to her defense," she remarked with jealous accents.

"Of course, I cannot let you think she is not a nice girl."

"Of course not"—— her tone was sarcastic. "Traveling around the country with a crowd of men and eavesdropping in hotel parlors."

"She would not do such a thing. You must not speak of her in that way," he stormed indignantly.

"I congratulate her upon having captured so gallant a champion," she mocked.

They were verging upon a sharper clash of words when a big man, heavy of jaw and red of face, smoking a cigar in spite of the surroundings, and attired in evening clothes, strolled into the parlor, not taking the trouble to remove his hat.

"Oh, here you are, Helen," he said. "I've been looking everywhere. Time to start or we'll be late to bridge."

"Uncle Barney," said the girl, rising, "this is Mr.—Oh, I forget. What is it you call yourself now—McCarthy? I knew him when he was at college. He plays on some baseball team—one of those we saw to-day now. Mr. McCarthy this is my uncle, Mr. Baldwin."

"I have heard of you often, Mr. Baldwin," said McCarthy, coolly. "I am glad of the opportunity to meet you."

The hidden meaning in his tones escaped the complaisant big man.

"You're McCarthy, the new third baseman, eh?" asked Baldwin without offering his hand. "Glad to know you. Saw you play to-day. Too bad you threw that game away."

"I"—— McCarthy started to offer defense but reconsidered and maintained silence.

"We must be going, Helen," said Baldwin.

The girl extended her hand carelessly.

"We hope to have the pleasure of seeing you again, she said.

Baldwin, with a curt nod to the player, turned to leave the parlor and McCarthy, seizing the opportunity, said:

"As a favor, Helen, do not reveal my identity."

"You need not fear," she responded, rapidly. "And Larry, please be sensible. Go home and make it up with Mr. Lawrence—and you may hope. And," she added in a low tone, "beware of that girl."

She hurried after her uncle, who had stopped and turned impatiently, leaving McCarthy staring after her and frowning. After all, he thought bitterly, his uncle was right. All she cared for was the money and not for him. He had quarrelled with his uncle, his best friend, who had taken care of him since his earliest childhood and who had made him his heir—on account of her. She never had cared. She was cold and heartless and mercenary. And, to his surprise, McCarthy felt no regret at the definite ending of the engagement. He could go home now confess his foolishness to James Lawrence, and strive to make amends. A pang of regret at the thought of his kind-hearted, but fiery uncle, lonely and worried about him, came over him. He was free from his engagement to Helen Baldwin. He need not play ball any more. He was free. Yes, he was free.

He found himself wondering that he was happy instead of bitter over the loss of Helen Baldwin. He knew now he never had loved her and he was free. With a thrill of gladness came the thought of Betty Tabor. His jaw set; the fighting look came into his blue eyes and he saw his way clearly. He was not free. His duty was to the Bears. He would remain with them; help them win the championship—and win her for himself.

CHAPTER VIII.

How He Saved the Day.

TWO defeats at the hands of the Maroons sent the Bears into the final game of the series desperately determined to win. Their pitching staff was exhausted from the effort to stop the team which they had expected to beat easily, and the fact that both Williams and Morgan, the star left-handed pitchers upon whom they had relied to win, had been beaten, made the situation the more desperate.

The game was a brilliant exhibition of defensive playing on the part of the Bears, who were driven back by the hard hitting of the Maroons. Wilson, of the Maroons, was pitching well, while the men behind him, noted for their ability to hit right-handed pitching, were hammering and pounding away at Klinker's offerings as if to pile up a great lead. In spite of the fierce batting of the Maroons the magnificent defensive work of the Bears held their rivals to two runs, while by their brilliant and resourceful system of attack and skilful inside work they had scored three runs on five scattered hits, and at the start of the eighth inning were holding grimly to their lead of one run.

McCarthy, spurred by determination to redeem himself for the errors of the preceding games, was giving a wonderful exhibition of third base play. The knowledge that Helen Baldwin, her uncle and a group of friends were sitting in one of the field boxes directly behind him urged him to greater efforts. He did not look toward them or endeavor to discover whether or not the girl was watching him. He felt that she was, and through pique and the determination to compel the applause of the crowd, he played with a dash and abandon that set the crowd cheering. It was his long hit in the sixth inning, followed by a clever steal of third, that had enabled the Bears to gain the lead which they were holding by their fast work on the infield.

The Bears failed to score in their half of the eighth, and the Maroons opened with a fierce assault upon Klinker that threatened to break down the Bears' inner wall of defense. Swanson's brilliant stop and throw of a vicious drive checked the bombardment and drew a round of applause, but a safe drive and a two-base hit went whizzing through beyond the finger tips of the diving infielders, and there were runners on second and third bases, one out and a hit needed to turn the tide in favor of the Maroons again. The crowd was howling over the expectation of another defeat for the Bears and the crumpling of their pennant aspirations.

The infield was drawn close in the hope of cutting off the runner from the home plate. Clancy knew that, with Wilson settled and pitching as he was, and with Klinker being hit hard and persistently, a tie meant almost certain defeat, as sooner or later the Maroons would drive home a runner, while it appeared improbable that the Bears could score again excepting through the intervention of luck. It was desperate baseball, and, as the infielders advanced to the edge of the grass, each man knew that a line smash, a hard-driven bounder between them, or even a fumble, probably meant the destruction of their pennant hopes. The situation was one to try the nerves of the most hardened veteran, and the crowd, in the tensity of its anxiety, was silent.

The ball was hit with terrific force straight at McCarthy, who threw up his hands and blocked desperately. The ball tore through his hands, struck his knee with numbing force and rolled a few feet away. He pounced upon it and like a flash hurled it to Kennedy at the plate, so far ahead of the runner who was trying to score that he turned back toward third, with Kennedy in slow pursuit. Swanson had come up to cover third, and the runner from second base came up and stood at the third bag watching the play, ready to dash back if the runner trapped between third and the plate managed to elude the pursuers and regain third base. Kennedy passed the ball to Swanson, and as the runner turned back, Swanson threw to McCarthy, who had fallen in behind Kennedy, leaving the pitcher to cover the plate if the runner broke through in that direction. The runner, playing to gain time in which to permit the batter to race to second base, started to dodge, but McCarthy, without an instant's hesitation, leaped after him and drove him hard back toward third base, so hard that the runner went on over the bag and ten feet beyond before he could stop. Like a flash McCarthy leaped sideways, touched the other runner who was starting back to second base, and, with a fierce dive, he threw his body between the base and the runner who had overslid it and tagged him.

Before he could scramble to his feet to claim the double play he heard Clancy, excited in spite of his long experience, shouting: "Good boy—nice work." As the umpire waved both runners out the crowd, bewildered for an instant by the rapidity with which McCarthy had executed the coup, commenced to understand and broke into a thundering round of applause as he limped toward the bench.

With that attack staved off the Bears held the Maroons safe in the ninth and closed the final Western trip of the team with a hard-earned victory. They started homeward that evening with confidence renewed and the men hopeful. The victory meant more than one game won; it meant that Clancy had gained an extra day of rest for his best pitchers and had won a game with a pitcher, who, in all probability, would not work again during the season. With Williams, Wilcox and Morgan rested and in condition to open against the stronger teams in the East, the Bears seemed to have brighter chances. At that stage of the season a day of rest for the good pitchers counts greatly in the balance.

The Bears were scheduled to stop enroute to the home grounds to play a series of three games against the Travelers, a team low in the standing of the clubs, but one of the most dangerous of all. It was a slow but heavy-hitting aggregation, and at times more dreaded than were the stronger clubs. Each club playing the Travelers was compelled to use its best pitchers, and it was for that series Clancy had been anxious to save his good men, because if they started hitting, their long drives covered much of their weakness on the bases. The series was a critical one for the Bears as, after that, they would return to the home grounds to play all the other games, with the exception of two against the Blues, almost at the finish.

McCarthy was happier and more interested than he had been since he joined the Bears. Restlessly he awaited an opportunity to talk with Betty Tabor. Since his interview with Helen Baldwin he had been strangely jubilant for a young man who had just been discarded by the girl to whom he was engaged. He wondered how much of the conversation Betty Tabor had overheard, and worried about it. He spent the entire evening on the train seeking an opportunity to have a quiet talk with the girl. Two or three times he saw her, but always she was in conversation with her father or with Mrs. Clancy. When they started bridge later he saw his chance for a tete-a-tete was gone for that evening and withdrew to his own car in a bad humor with himself. Miss Tabor had responded to his greeting with a nod and a smile, yet he thought she had seemed less cordial than usual and he attributed it to the fact she had seen him with Helen Baldwin. He wanted to explain to her who Miss Baldwin was and how he had happened to be talking with her, yet he knew it would seem presumptuous for him to broach the subject. Why should Betty Tabor think enough of him to be jealous? Yet in spite of this he decided that, at the first opportunity, he would mention meeting Helen Baldwin.

He went to bed annoyed and with an odd sense of being wronged; of being placed in a position of being unable to explain. He determined to see the girl at breakfast and almost decided to confide in her the secret of his past life. But he did not see her at breakfast. After a restless night he was among the first in the dining car and he loitered, but the girl, usually one of the earliest risers, slept late, and when the train reached the city of the Travelers she went with Manager Clancy and his wife in a taxicab, while McCarthy was bundled with the other players into the big auto bus. He failed to catch a glimpse of her during luncheon and was in a bad humor when the team made an early start for the ball park.

The game was a runaway for the Bears. They piled up such a large score during the early innings that Manager Clancy was able to take out Morgan in the sixth and send Shelby, a second string pitcher, to finish the game, saving up more strength and skill to use at the finish.

It was a jubilant crowd of players that returned to the hotel after the game. They sang and laughed and were happy again. They had won, and during the afternoon the Panthers, overconfident, had suffered two defeats by the Maroons, leaving the teams again practically tied for the lead, with the Panthers ahead on percentage due to difference in the number of games played. With their best pitchers rested and being saved for the teams against which they were especially effective, the Bears were confident that they would win; so confident that Manager Clancy was compelled to issue a warning against over confidence.

McCarthy spent the evening loitering around the hotel lobbies, still hoping for an opportunity to see Miss Tabor, and when she failed to appear at dinner and was not with Mr. and Mrs. Clancy when they started out for a car ride McCarthy conceived the idea that she was avoiding him and was miserable. He did not know she had accepted an invitation to dine with a schoolmate who was living in the city of the Travelers. He wandered aimlessly around until, abandoning his quest, he went to his room disconsolately. It was not yet 11 o'clock, but Swanson was preparing for sleep. As McCarthy came into the room he stopped to laugh. The giant shortstop was in his pajamas, on his back in the bed. With one bare foot he was holding a sheet of paper against the head board, and with a pencil grasped between the toes of the other foot he was laboriously striving to write.

"What was you trying to do, Silent?" asked McCarthy, laughing harder.

"Figuring my share of the World's Series receipts and making notes of what to do with the money," responded Swanson laboring harder.

"Why that way?" asked McCarthy.

"Well, you see," he explained, "Clancy said he'd fine any one of us he caught with a pencil in his hand doping out these statistics," said Swanson, "and I just had to know."

He was in uproarious spirits, and while McCarthy was preparing for bed Swanson amused himself by trying to massage a spot where a pitched ball had struck him between the shoulder blades, his antics causing McCarthy to laugh until he forgot his worries. They were ready to settle down for the night when the telephone rang in the connecting room. The door between the rooms was ajar, and, after waiting an instant to see if any of the players were there, Swanson sprang from bed and ran to respond to the call.

"Hello,!" he said. "Hello! Yes, this is Williams's room, but he isn't in just now. What? Oh, yes, I understand. I'll tell him. Hello—hold on a minute, here he is now."

"Hey, Adonis," Swanson called to the pitcher who was just entering the room from the hallway. "Some one wants you. Can't make out who he is. You answer."

He handed the receiver to Williams carelessly and walked back into the room, where McCarthy was stretched upon the bed reading. His face was working rapidly as if trying to tell McCarthy something by lip signals. McCarthy, glancing up, gazed at him in surprise and started to speak, stopping when Swanson held up a warning finger and nodded toward Williams's room.

"I'm tired," said Swanson in a loud tone; "let's sleep late in the morning." Then approaching McCarthy's bed he said in a whisper: "Listen. Try to catch what he says."

"Hello! Yes, this is Williams," said the pitcher, brusquely. Then his voice changed suddenly. "Yes, Ed, I know you. To-night? Aw say, Ed, I've got to have sleep! Can't it wait? If it's that important I'll come right down. Yes I will. I'll be there in a quarter of an hour."

"Skirt calling you again, Adonis?" inquired Swanson lightly. "Better not let Clancy catch you."

STELLAR ATTRACTIONS ARE MARCHING ON ATLANTA

September to See Signs of Greatest Theatrical Stars Blazing From Fronts of Local Playhouses

Anna Held, Robin Hood, Al Field and Vaudeville Headliners Promised as Show Diet for City.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

THE local theatrical season, to all intents and purposes, is jockeying about for a start in a manner rather tantalizing to wistful showgoers who are pining for the coming of winter "legit." Still, there is promise enough of good things ahead to reward the patient persons.

The Atlanta, for instance, will be dark all this week, but not discouragingly dark. You will begin to see out front the bills for Anna Held, Little Boy Blue, Robin Hood and the Field Minstrels, all of which Manager George announces will come to the city sometime in September. And so the Atlanta Theater, even with the lights out this week, is not so dreary a spectacle.

As for the week's offering, there will be at the Lyric a straight drama of sufficient strength to please almost any one. With Estha Williams in "A Man's Game," there should be enough worthy entertainment. This is not the first season of the play nor of the east, but there is enough of vigor in its lines and in Miss Williams' interpretation to insure its life for some time.

Mme. Besson, who will be one of the headliners at the Forsyth this week. She appears in a stirringly dramatic playlet.

At the Forsyth the usual bill of Keith vaudeville is offered, with the promise of attractiveness that always goes with it.

The Jewell Kelley Stock Company will enter the fourth week of its engagement at the Bijou theater, and promise of a melodrama as full of thrills and laughs as the most desirable melodrama should be, is held out by the Bijou management.

Kinemacolor will continue its course at the Grand, with a set of pictures that are said to be up to the usual standard.

Al Field, Anna Held, Little Boy Blue And Robin Hood Coming to The Atlanta

The next offering at the Atlanta is the Al G. Field minstrels, coming September 25, 26 and 27. With Al G. Field will come an old and consistent favorite.

Following the Field minstrels, the Atlanta will offer its first real big novelty in the Anna Held Jubilee organization, which John Cort has booked for a matinee and night, Monday, September 29.

Miss Held has just returned from Europe after a stay of three years, and has returned as piquant as ever, slimmer than ever, spirituelle and altogether the Anna Held of earlier days. Her company is said to be the biggest on the road this season.

After Miss Held two other notable attractions will come the same week. Henry W. Savage offers Little Boy Blue, Wednesday and Thursday, October 1 and 2, in which Otis Harlan is being featured, following which, October 3 and 4, will come the DeKoven Opera Company in their revival of Robin Hood.

Big City Four and Dramatic Playlet To Be Features of Vaudeville Bill at The Forsyth

The Forsyth management, after operating during a straitened summer season when a great army of the vaudeville stars are resting, promises much entertainment now the regular theatrical season has opened. The theater's announcement shows that the local house is one of the chain of vaudeville theaters known as the Keith circuit, around which travel features that appear in the metropolitan variety houses. All this is announced by the management by way of prefacing the promise of good shows during the season.

The Big City Four, young men who can sing, will be one of the features of this week's bill at the vaudeville house. This quartette has come before to Atlanta, achieving before this considerable of popularity. Featured equally with the singers is the actress, Mme. Besson, whose company will produce a one-act play, "The Woman Who Knew." The Besson sketch is dramatic.

There will be a comedy sketch as well, offered by Tom Kyle and company. There will also be a dancing act, presented by The Metropolitan Dancers, and a number in which there will be much varied entertainment offered by The Marvellous Grahams.

Two other acts have been billed, to be announced later.

Drama of Intense Realism Will Be Seen At Lyric in 'A Man's Game' This Week

Realism on the stage is an uncertain quantity. What passes for realism may be a mere brutal representation of something that could have been drawn more beautiful. Or it may not be realism at all so much as trite old melodrama. Or the best that is known as realism may be just something ripped from real life.

It is this that is embodied in the play "A Man's Game," that will be presented at the Lyric Theater this week. Estha Williams depicts the commonest type of the streets with a fidelity that is remarkable. It is at such times that the force of "realism" strikes you.

The story is that of a vigorous man deserted by a pleasure-loving wife at a time when his fortunes are lowest, when he is merely a laborer without promise. He has a little daughter, and for her sake he goes West and builds a fortune.

Years after he is wealthy. A real love has come to him for the fine woman who has reared his daughter, but while he is glorying in his love, back comes his wife of fifteen years before, an abandoned, dissolute, conscienceless woman. She hears that he is wealthy, and comes to saddle herself on him.

The "Man's Game" is the fight for the happiness of the woman a man loves. The man in the play must make this fight, trying to keep from his carefully reared daughter the knowledge that this old slattern is her mother, and from the woman he loves, as well.

In the end the dissolute wife shows a human, womanly heart. The sight of her own daughter purifies her, and she goes away.

The play was successful last season, and the same cast will appear this year.

"A Man's Game" will be at the Lyric all the week, with matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Anna Held, who will come to Atlanta in September with her Jubilee Company under the direction of John Cort. Her appearance promises to be one of the theatrical events of the season.

One of the gripping scenes from "A Man's Game," which will be seen at the Lyric

"The Man of Mystery" Offered at the Bijou

Melodrama will always have its appeal with the actual flash of pistols and knives, and the actual sound of love making and heroic defiance, that will hardly be supplanted by anything, not even the "movies," in spite of the threat that is heard everywhere. It is just these thrills that the Bijou hopes to furnish this next week, when the Jewell Kelley Company will produce "The Man of Mystery," a sensational melodrama, written by Mark Swan.

The playwright is author also of "The Silver Dagger," "At the Risk of His Life," "The Unwritten Law" and others as well of the same blood-curdling tone. Successful plays of their kind they are, all of them. It is announced that Manager Kelley has incurred considerable expense in obtaining permission to produce "The Man of Mystery."

The story of the play is that of a gang in the underworld of New York, whose meeting place is the Devil's Kitchen. The leader is a man of hypnotic power, of no scruples nor conscience.

And so the ground is laid for performances full of shudders, with lives in danger, murders done, robberies made, thieves brawling in their den and over their gambling table.

Jewell Kelley will play the part of Richard Glenwood, the leader of the gang. Claire Summers will appear as Kate Burke, daughter of Old Mother Meg, who is mistress of the Devil's Kitchen. Early Higley will be Ned Keene, a detective, and Eddie Black will be in his element in the part of Noah, a sleepy servant.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at the Bijou at 2:30 o'clock, with performances each night at 8:30.

Stage Notes

Novikoff, Pavlowa's dancing companion, who has captured the fancy of London, is only 24 years of age. He was trained in the Russian Imperial Ballet School and at the age of 20 was advanced to the grade of premier danseur classique of the Royal Opera in Moscow, the highest rank attainable by a male dancer. He is a handsome chap and his cleverness as a dancer gains in effect from his unusual ability as a pantomimist. Novikoff will be Pavlowa's dancing companion when she appears in Atlanta this season.

* * *

Grace George is to be a Frohman star this season. Her husband, William A. Brady, and Charles Frohman have reached an agreement by which Miss George will appear in J. M. Barrie's 50-minute play called "Half an Hour." Blanche Bates was originally cast for the part, but owing to illness she will not be able to play until November, when Mr. Frohman will have another role for her.

* * *

Miss Alice Brady, daughter of Mr. William A. Brady, whose rise from small dramatic roles to parts of importance has been sudden, will have her first chance at a leading role when Mr. Philip Bartholomae produces a play by Mr. Austin Adams called "The Bird Cage." Miss Brady at present is appearing in Mr. Owen Davis' "The Family Cupboard," and her performance is one of the bright spots in that drama. Last season she played in "Little Women" and before that in Gilbert & Sullivan revivals.

Mr. James Forbes has engaged Miss Olive May for the leading role in "Shadowed," a new play by Messrs. Dion Clayton Calthrop and Cosmo Gordon Lennox.

"The Fight" Reaches Limit Of Audacity on the Stage

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—"See that man!" cried the frenzied "madame" of Pearl Haskell's "house," pointing to a gray-haired Senator who stood dismayed in horror. "Well, he paid me $500 to find another man's daughter in that room," and—he—has—found—his own."

Even a sophisticated New York audience gasped at the raw brutality of the second act of Bayard Veiller's play, "The Fight," at the Hudson Theater and seemed to wonder what the New York stage was coming to. For, once again there was the red-tinted horror of the disorderly house, the garish women, the seared white-slaver and the malodorific patrons. But even this vivid outfit, that we may find at another theater, gave us halt, as the real significance of the second act's situation forced itself upon us. The gray-haired father was at that place for purposes that were not allowed to remain unmentioned, only, as he opened the door, to discover that the young girl he was buying was his own daughter!

So I remark feebly, that if New York can stand for that—well, let 'em all come! For frankness of treatment Mr. Veiller's "play" takes every palm. Each spade is called by its name in a magnifying glass. It is a long time since anything quite so ugly and so consanguineously daring has been attempted. Even the "comedy" was not allowed to escape the fate of the white-slavers. It was held in this play. "She's the nicest little girl in the house," quoth the procuress of one of its inmates. "A perfect little lady." Perhaps we were glad of a laugh.

"The Fight" concerns the effort of a very highfalutinly noble lady to run for "Mayor" and purify a small town in Colorado. What she doesn't do, what she isn't up against, whom she doesn't foil and how she doesn't quake are vivid queries in the four acts. The politicians fight her, as she stirs up the ugly pool of white slavery. They conspire to cause a run on her bank, and she fights them with their checks, which are forgeries, and with mortgages that she can foreclose.

Not Lydia Pinkham in all her greatness ever held a candle to Jane Thomas, heroine of "The Fight," as, alone in the center of the stage, she sees her dooty and does it. Alone she goes to the disorderly resort to find the satyric Senator discovering his own daughter, and to find that the tables are turned on her—that she is accused of luring the girl to the resort—that she is suspected of being there improperly.

Certainly "The Fight" is a scorcher, and there is no denying its excitement, its thrill and its appeal. It is horrible ugly—it is everything that any purist could call it—but it is a play. It does bite; it does hit; it does sear; it does get there, and, with all its faults—many and patent—it is ingenious, and Mr. Bayard Veiller has made his own "Within the Law" look like a ha'porth of coppers.

The scene in the second act, where the screaming girl is pushed by the "madame" into a room, lacks stage management. You hear her yelling quite easily, yet apparently she can not hear the excited conversation that should reach her ears as easily as her screams reach ours. This is a very serious defect—even an unpardonably stupid one—and a stage manager should be called in at once to rectify an error that really robs the excitement of its sting. This ugly scene at least should not awaken criticism. It should be flawless, if—anything!

The question as to whether these "resorts" need be staged—whether the youth of U. S. A. (which, according to Mr. Veiller, is U. S. A.'s finest investment) need be familiarized so frequently with the locale of the "social evil," can not be discussed in these hasty lines. That this second act, however, was not dragged in just for its own nasty sake must be urged in justice to Mr. Veiller. Throughout a horrific play this author does seem to be sincere. It was all done in apparent zeal, and the question as to the necessity of it all must be left for further notice.

Miss Margaret Wycherley played Jane Thomas adorably—with grace, charm, excellent femininity, and even beauty. It was a fine and artistic piece of work, and too much can not be said in praise of it. There was a very long cast of mostly nobodies. Miss Cora Adams and William McVay scored; Edward R. Mawson, as the Senator, was weak and mumbly. He seemed to have plums in his mouth. Charles Halton, as a reporter, was particularly happy.

But "The Fight" is one, with a vengeance, and the play got its audience spontaneously. It is as drastic a play as New York has ever seen, and the American stage has come to a pretty kettle of fish when it produces this "idyll" of the "social evil." Still, playgoers are "after" excitement, and anything that can evoke it nowadays is considered legitimate. When we remember the outcry of a few years ago, we smile a gentle smile. "The Fight" goes to the very limit, and it can best be described as hot stuff.

BOOK REVIEWS

By EDWIN MARKHAM

Up and Doing.

Thomas Tapper in his collection of sketches, "Youth and Opportunity" (The Platt & Peck Co.), underscores the possibility of personal success. For we all know that however abundant the means no one accomplishes anything in any line without a determined getting about it.

Mr. Tapper (after the fashion of Samuel Smiles, beloved of my youth) brings a host of witnesses, folk who from common life and keenest privation vaulted upon opportunity and rode in triumph through the winning gate. Boys and girls in school, and young folk at work, will be heartened by this gospel.

The Book of Evelyn.

Given a beautiful woman with a voice and no temperament, a widow with youth on her side, an old friend and a boarding house ensemble, and we have the set for "The Book of Evelyn," by Geraldine Bonner (The Bobbs Merrill Co., $1.25).

The possessor of the voice has been taken in hand by a rough diamond called Masters, and after a long session of years is thrown over by him as entirely lacking in that human dynamic emotion that must be back of every singer to supplement technique and mere notes—if she hopes to reach the first rank.

John Masters comes forward like a man and tells Lizzie Harris that he is through, and Lizzie tells the narrator—the widow—of her relations with Masters and the widow tells the reader.

Now the question when the old friend seems on the verge of falling in love with the singer is whether she (the widow) shall tell him.

She decides not to and thereby shows her good sense, for later she marries him herself and Lizzie secures temperament and is raved over as the "real thing."

It's all very personal—but somehow it does drag. Evelyn could have made a short story out of her long one and told as much just as well and the reader would have thought better of her effort. Besides, the idea is as old as Jonah, and its twentieth century clothes don't disguise it.

The Long Way.

In "The Long Way," by Mary imlay Taylor (Little, Brown & Co., $1.25), the author has laid a plot that is full of possibilities. The heroine, Eva Astry, is the wife of a rich man who has too many charms for her own good. She becomes entangled in an affair with a friend of her husband's and, in despair and terror, makes a clean breast of her conduct to her sister, Rachel Leven, and begs her to marry Bellhaven, the other man in the case.

To avoid exposure Rachel makes the sacrifice, although she is in love with an army captain in the Far East. Naturally he is astounded when he returns to find his bride-to-be apparently lost to him.

Mrs. Astry finally admits her wrongdoing to her husband and Bellhaven is removed from the scene.

The novel is characterized by many strong situations and by engaging dialogue. We leave it to the reader to say whether the author's description of Washington society life rings quite true.

The Caverns of Dawn.

Unlucky is the man who rests his hopes on political promise—and, apparently, he has always been as unlucky as he is to-day.

Not all of these unfortunate ones have the temerity or the knowledge to become brigands, as does Mr. Jason Jump in "The Caverns of Dawn," by James Paxton Voorhees (The Baldebaugh Voorhees Co., $1.25). If they did what an army of outlaws we would have!

The author served as private secretary to his father, Senator Voorhees, and of his insight into Washington life he makes excellent use in the present book.

"The Caverns of Dawn" attempts to lay bare political trickery, but it does more than this. It furnishes a readable description of conditions and people in the Indiana of forty years ago in a style somewhat Dickensesque.

The story opens in the Capital with the vain effort of Jason Jump to obtain justice. It details his despair and his adoption of a life of crime.

The plot is so woven with characters that we shall not attempt to give it here. But Mr. Voorhees has brought out with a good deal of originality the characteristics of country folks who seem to be known to all of us.

His style is not the style of to-day, and his story runs to more than five hundred pages. He gives his book its title from the caverns of the Hoosier State, and describes with a sincere touch the regions about Lost River.

There is a feeling that he is aiming to produce something called "great." "The Caverns of Dawn" is not a great book, but it presents in real colors the scenes it portrays, and it has a homely philosophy that is very real.

Certainly it ought to appeal to all gentlemen from Indiana. There is a lot of bona fide sunlight in "The Caverns of Dawn."

Of Use to Architects.

The Year Book of the New York Society of Architects has just been issued. It embodies a careful collection and collation of the various laws, ordinances, regulations and requirements of use to the architect.

The book is bound in black leather, flexible covers, with gilt edges, and contains 306 pages. Among the interesting new matter is a complete list of architects of New York State, the description of the city departments, a checking list for specification writing and the building code reparagraphed, subdivided and printed on pink paper so as to be readily found.

A price of $5 has been put upon the book by the society because of the demand from others than architects, to whom the book is given free.

"Labrador."

The recent departure of the Grenfell boat for Labrador adds to the interest in Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's splendid volume, "Labrador" (The MacMillan Company, $2.50).

With Dr. Grenfell's work no one in the reading world is unfamiliar. His high purpose and splendid results have won for him the admiration of all men.

To most of us that country—strangely hidden in fog and cold, though in the latitude of England—is forbidding in the extreme.

Modestly Dr. Grenfell says in his foreword to a book copiously illustrated and of more than 300 pages: "Having selected for myself a role in life that compels me to pass most of my days along the coast of Labrador, I have come to love the rugged fastnesses of my adopted country, and to lament the amount of almost Stygian darkness that lies still over it and its resources.

"With regard to the future of this vast area, nearly half a million square miles, I am myself an optimist. True it is, that the great tide of humanity flowing ever westward has for the most part passed it by, leaving it lone and frigid in its polar waters. But the hand of man has grappled with harder problems than this presents."

Says Mr. Grenfell, quoting the naturalist Packard: "The Labrador Peninsula is less known than the interior of Africa or the wastes of Siberia." And yet he goes on to say in his own account, "It is the land of charm—the Paradise of geologists."

The chapters on reindeer and dogs are most enlightening. The experiment of introducing reindeer as beasts of burden and as a remunerative industry was broached after the successful breeding of these animals in Alaska. So far it has been most encouraging.

Unlike the Labrador dog, the Labrador wolf has never been known to attack a man. "Our dogs," says the writer, "taking the scene of a caribu trail, even when in harness, will forget all discipline, and will almost tear a Komatik and dirver to pieces in their eagerness to give chase. I have known of a team that thus ran away and some of them never came back."

"There can be no question that the dogs love to be driven. They go perfectly wild with excitement when in harness.

"During my years in Labrador they have killed two children and a man and eaten another."

We can not go into the many chapters dealing with the fisheries, the ocean mammals, the birds, the flora and conservation and exploration. All Dr. Grenfell's efforts have been directed toward improving the condition of the people. He makes the point that no attention is paid to their wants by the Government, but he hopes that in time the country will come into its own.

If you are interested in a great and noble movement, read this book.

Little Thank You.

A little book entitled "Little Thank You," by Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, comes to us from the presses of G. P. Putnam's Sons, a welcome prose poem and a story at that. Likewise, it carries a rhythm of human loyalty environed with the traditional echo, "A little child shall lead them."

As the story runs, a man and maid wed down in Kentucky. A child is born to them. Soon the young father dies. The widowed young mother goes to New York with the little lad, attended by faithful "Old Mammy." It is necessary for the little mother to earn money, and she does this by reading manuscripts for a publisher and writing short stories to sell.

She meets a young man—love at first sight. "Old Mammy" identified the parentage of the young man through happenings of the past down in the old Kentucky home. This young man, "Billy," is closely connected, through these events, with "the family." "Billy" certainly loves "Mumsey," the mother of "Little Thank You." But stormy times sweep over the courtship.

Really, if "Little Thank You" hadn't been right on the job, it isn't likely "Mumsey" and "Billy" would have hit off the wedding.

"Little Thank You" gets right into the wooing business; in fact, he's in at the proposal of marriage. "Little Thank You," has his part in the "engagement," a real stand-patter in the game.

This is a sweet and wholesome piece of fiction, a little gem of a real good kind.

An Anonymous Author.

It isn't clear to any grown person, gifted with normally sane reasoning faculties, how any woman deprived of husband and little son can rate the keenest poignancy of her grief as the lack of "something to do"—provided she has financial resources for the alleviation of human suffering.

The anonymous author of a little book entitled, "The Woman With Empty Hands," portrays herself as having been bereft, through death, of a loving husband. The surcease of this bitter grief was the necessity of giving all thought and loving care to her little son, who succumbed to a lingering illness, leaving the mother desolate and terribly lonesome because she has nothing more to do for beloved ones.

The situation is grievous and tragic for any woman, and attended with anguishing vagueness when she need not work for self-support. Still, there are so many paths that she may tread in the accomplishment of benefit for "a common good," so many purposes and fields open for women, that she need not suffer on account of "empty hands" if she will listen to her normal reasoning faculties.

It's all right and creditable, if she prefers the work, that she should find her panacea by joining the "Votes for Women" cause. But we fail to see why she should trail resentment against men into her efforts for "the common good." Especially is this resentment a peculiar pulse of her work, since she had a loving husband.

The alleviation of suffering and forlornness is never fully accomplished when it is soiled with resentment or harmful force.

Published by Dodd, Mead & Co. Dedicated to Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughters.

"Udara."

The potent fascination of the Orient inspires scores of writers of fiction to build their romances out of the fabric provided by the traditions of these peoples, the mystic rites of the strange worship of stranger gods, giving a glamour to the entirety of the literary fabrications.

Arthur J. Westermayr has traveled extensively over the Orient. He has lived with the people and studied their natures and modes of life. He has gathered historic data, with a knowledge of customs and personalities of this generation of the inhabitants that date their past in antique epochs.

All these educational assets he uses in novels centered in the Far East.

His latest book of this class comes to market from the presses of the G. W. Dillingham Company, and is entitled "Udara." This is the story of a Hindu prince who sacrifices his heritage of a throne for the love of a Christian girl. So the throne goes to his cousin, Panka.

Panka launches a career of crime and dissipation. He incidentally lures the Christian girl beloved by Udara into captivity, and he means to subjugate her as his slave. But she escapes and disappears.

Warfare and rebellion ensue among the subjects of the hated Panka. There are fierce adventures, garnitured with revenges, despairs and heroic sacrifices.

At last the beautiful Christian girl appears on the scene. Presto! Udara comes into his glory as king of a kingdom.

"Two Shall Be Born."

Frequently a loftily unreasonable, bad-tempered and insanely jealous man or woman makes an awful muddle of a true love situation. Then ensue pathos, tragedy, resentment. This kind of confusion is the peg on which to hang an adventurous plot in Theodore Goodrich Roberts' latest book novel, "Two Shall Be Born." Cassell & Co., publishers.

David Wortley goes into spasms of jealousy and temper because he fancies his fiancee is failing in love with a rich Englishman, Captain Joice. Dorothy makes an effort to set David straight on their pledged mutual adoration. David scorns reconciliation on the spot. No more can Dorothy humiliate herself through offering explanations. David flees into the wilderness of Canada.

Being rich, he can play a wide game in adventures. He's a leader in thrilling situations. But he pays the price of his cruel treatment of Dorothy. He rises above the spasms of temper through doing good for others. He buys 20,000 acres of wilderness. Then he becomes so lonesome for Dorothy that he decides to go to New York to see what she's up to. But Dorothy arrives on the Canadian scene, and through wildest adventures.

Never mind in this brief space of presentation how it happens. But Dorothy comes into the conviction that she wants to live in the big wilderness where, with David, she can be helpful to "struggling men and women."

"Lives of the Players."

William Winter, the veteran and beloved dramatic critic, is writing a series of books under the caption, "Lives of the Players." For half a century Winter has been intimate with players, their personalities and work. He is identified with all things that pertain to the highest merits of "the dramatic stage." For years and years he has been a keen analyst of plays, classical and popular, in ethical qualities.

The first of the series, "Tyrone Power," is issued by Moffat, Yard & Co. With this presentation of Tyrone Power as a great player of the near past and a player ready for greater display of genius, Mr. Winter unites ultimate history of players who have been associated with Power.

Winter deprecates the degeneracy of the American stage, but predicts a reaction and a return of the classical plays. He predicts that Power is to be reckoned with as one of the forceful players who will be conspicuous in the splendid reaction, in the return to the legitimate splendors of "acting."

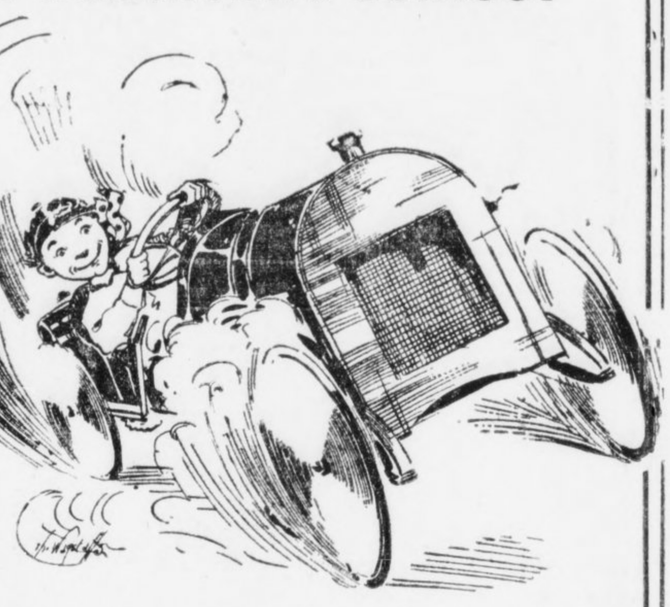
"A Fool and His Money."

"A Fool and His Money," by George Barr McCutcheon, author of "Graustark," "The Hollow of Her Hand," etc., is one of the new fall books (Dodd-Mead & Co., $1.30). The story again brings to the front a castle "gray, ancient and lofty," this time on the Danube. A young American, termed a fool by his uncle, because he is an author and has inherited money, takes a liking to the castle and purchases it. "And lo!" to quote the publishers' advance notice, "among the innumerable odds and ends of medieval lumber of which he has become the possessor, he discovers dungeons, hints of buried treasure, whispers of mystery, an odd family of stout retainers, and finally—locked up in an isolated tower, with padlocked door and a secret entrance—a beautiful countess, Austrian by marriage, but American by birth." The American in the last chapter meets the countess and the romance has a happy ending.

Publishers' Notes.

Dodd, Mead & Co., following the general trend, announce for fall publications fewer titles, but their list includes books from some of the most prominent authors, both in this country and abroad. There are 51 titles announced to date, headed by the usual yearly contribution from that most popular of American authors, George Barr McCutcheon, the story of "A Fool and His Money." In the firm's list are novelizations of two of last season's dramatic successes, "Peg o' My Heart" and "Years of Discretion."

Other novels announced are "The Taste of Apples," by Jennette Lee, the author of "Uncle William and Mr. Achilles;" "The Destroyer," a tale of international politics and intrigue, by Burton E. Stevenson; "The Honor of the House," a tale of medieval Italy, by Mrs. Hugh Frazer, and "The Honor of the Clintons," by Archibald Marshall, who is called the modern Anthony Trollope.



Harper & Bros. announce the publication of "The Argyle Case," a novelization by Arthur Hornblow of the play; "The Desired Woman," a new novel by Will N. Harben, and "Joe, the Book Farmer," by Garrard Harris, a book for younger readers. They are putting to press for reprinting "The Iron Trail," by Rex Beach; "When the Sleeper Awakes," by H. G. Wells; "Vesty of the Basins," by Sarah P. McL. Greene, and "The Standard of Pronunciation in English," by Thomas R. Lounsbury.

Messrs. Duffield & Co.'s list of fall fiction is headed by Marguerite Bryant's new novel, "The Master Passion." Other novels by English authors are "Circe's Daughter," by Priscilla Craven; "A Misalliance," Katherine Tynan; "A Runaway Ring," by Mrs. Henry Dudenay; "Margery Fyltop," by Lady Ridley; "The Sphinx in the Labyrinth," by Maude Annesley; "Molly Beamish," by H. DeVere Stacpoole.

G. P. Putnam's Sons publish this week "Joyous Gard," by Arthur Christopher Benson; "New England and New France," by James Douglas, and "Threads of Gold," by Myrtle Reed.

W. T. Call, Brooklyn, publishes a small book called "Midget Problems," embodying all the ideas in positions of 2 vs. 2 pieces in checkers.

Enthusiasm Is Running High In Pedalmobile Contest

"Gee, ain't it a peach! Couldn't I speed some if I had one of them! How many are you going to give away, Mister?" These are some of the remarks to be heard around The Georgian Office where the big red "Georgian Flyer" is on exhibition—the one just like The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will give to each boy and girl who secures forty new subscriptions to the paper before October 1.

There are many earnest workers and the subscriptions are coming fast. It would only be a wild guess now to say who will win the first fifteen cars and receive the Charter Membership Certificates to the Atlanta Pedalmobile Racing Club. These Certificates will entitle the holder to compete in any or all races and events to be held in the near future.

Pedalmobile Clubs are to be found in many of the large cities, having been promoted by some of the largest and best newspapers in the country. This sort of sport may be new in Atlanta, but in many particulars the Pedalmobile races are to the children what the Auto races are to the grown-ups. In fact, they are handled a good deal on the same order and are interesting to the parents as well as the children.

These little machines are not to be confined to pleasure alone, but can be put to good use in many different ways. In some cities carrier boys who have won Pedalmobiles may be seen distributing their papers in them. All these cars are well-made and serviceable and will surely gladden the heart of any boy or girl who is fortunate enough to win one.

These cars are now on exhibition in the window of O. C. Polk Dry Goods Store, 29 South Gordon Street; South Pryor Ice Cream Parlor, 353 South Pryor Street, and Imperial Tire and Tube Company, 349 Peachtree Street. While attending the Odd-and-Ends Sale at Polk's Dry Goods Company, be sure to notice the "Georgian Flyer" in the window.

OUTSIDE WORKERS.

A number of boys and girls outside of the city of Atlanta have sent in their application blanks and are now working earnestly to obtain one of the handsome little cars. The Pedalmobile man will be glad to send subscription blanks to more honest hustlers who would like to own a Pedalmobile.

Just fill out the application blank below and full particulars will be mailed you at once.

HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1913.

Belles of the Younger Set

SOCIETY CHATTER BY POLLY PEACHTREE

"VIEW HOLLOA! View Holloa!" I believe that this is the cry that the fox hunters use in their excited chase over country after the real or imaginary bushy-tailed animal. At any rate, this cry or something like it will be heard around Atlanta this fall.

Horse racing has been dubbed the sport of kings. Just so is fox hunting and cross-country riding the sport of the aristocrat.

Every English country gentleman and gentlewoman is an enthusiastic rider to hounds, and it is taken as a mark of gentility in Merrie England. Just so in ante-bellum days was this sport the favorite with the aristocrats of the South. Of course, the war which devastated the great estates put an end to it.

But the Capital City Country Club is going to revive it this fall and winter, and some great sport is certain to be had. This revival of the ancient sport is the natural outgrowth of the expansion and increasing popularity of the country clubs. Golf and tennis are all very well in their way, but they do not offer any outlet for the craving for excitement of the horse-loving class.

Of course, I do not expect for a moment that there will be any chases after live foxes, but the same pleasure and excitement can be gained from chasing the imaginary animal.

I understand that a drag will be given twice a week, the first to take place the latter part of September. Native hounds will be used, and the hunting grounds will be extended over the surrounding country, where permission from land-owners already has been obtained. The owners of these surrounding estates will be invited to ride in the hunt. The location of the club is ideal for hunting, as the country is open, with plenty of fences to jump, in several directions, toward Roswell or Norcross, thus affording different runs for each hunt. The drags will be laid near the roads, I am informed, so that spectators in automobiles may share in the fun. Particular care will be exercised to make the drags safe, so that the younger riders may participate. Samuel Slicer is to be master of hounds. In order to increase interest in riding, horses will be stabled at the club and masters of riding will be there to instruct all who wish to practice. I predict that this move by the Capital City Country Club will be an invaluable aid to the pleasure and health of the members of the club.

* * *

BUT, I understand, fox hunting is not to be the only sport which the "horsey class" has in mind for fall and winter pleasure. Polo is also to have a big place in the calendar.

A fine polo field is to be prepared and ponies secured, and soon we will have some real polo players. I know of a number of men who are already excellent riders and with a little practice could be good players. For instance, Willard McBurney, Marion Smith, Lamar Hill, West Terhune, F. M. McConigal, Roy Dorsey, James Ragan, Winship Nunnally, Jackson Dick, Ernest Ottley, Ralph Ragan, J. L. Dickey, Will Dickey, Jesse Draper, Clarence Knowles and R. S. Nash are all promising material for this game. Then there are a number of the coming generation—Robert Maddox, Jr., Jack Cohen, Wilmer Moore, Hugh Inman, Inman Richardson and many others who ride well.

VERY interesting indeed is the news that the beautiful Duchess of Roxburghe is the mother of an eugenic heir. The Duchess has many relatives scattered over the United States. She was Mary Goelet, of New York, and took a $15,000,000 fortune to her husband, who was by no means poor himself. Still, the more money an English Duke has the more he needs. For Dukes are prodigal indeed. It was this thought perhaps that passed through the brain of King Edward when he heard of the engagement.

"Good for Roxburghe!" the King was quoted as saying. "We need the money!"

The Duchess is very generous to her relatives and friends. She is compelled to keep an enormous wardrobe. Her gowns are all made in Paris. She can not wear them more than once or twice—particularly evening dresses—and then they are expressed away to those whom she loves and remembers, to be worn at swell functions in other cities.

I MUST tell you of the cleverest argument I've heard advanced on the suffrage question. It was submitted by a pretty Atlanta debutante-to-be, who, when asked if she advocated suffrage, replied with an emphatic negative. I think her reason for this attitude was wise and most femininely intuitive.

"You know," she said, "I have kinsmen who are in politics and when the women folk ask them where they have been, they always say: 'I was out with Jones—have to make friends with him, you know, because I need his influence at the next election;' or 'I had dinner with Smith—I need his vote, you know.'

"Now, if women were allowed to vote," sagely said this debutante-to-be, "what could a woman say if her husband told her he was out with Mrs. Jones—because he needed her influence in the next election, or he was dining with Mrs. Smith—because 'I need her vote, you know?' Just imagine the complications that would arise, and think how hard it would be to 'keep tab' on one's husband or wife!"

She sat across the aisle from me,
We traveled in a sleeping car;
Her face was beautiful to see,
And she and I were going far;
She traveled all alone, and I
Was also traveling alone;
Somehow, I can not tell you why,
Her glances often met my own.

I offered her a magazine,
She took it, with a winsome smile;
No princess, nay, nor any queen;
Has ever had a gentler style;
Her voice was low, and soft and sweet,
And, oh, the depths of her dark eyes!
To gaze upon her was a treat,
Her every pose a glad surprise.

I proudly paid for all she ate.
Ah, what an appetite she had!
We journeyed on from State to State;
To give her pleasure made me glad
I scorned reserve, my tongue was loosed,
I praised her beauty, which was rare,
And at the end she introduced
Me to her waiting husband there.

A YOUNG married woman told me of an incident of her trip to and from a seaside resort this summer, which was slight in itself, but for some reason opened up a train of reflection on her part. She said that on the trip to the place she went alone, as she was to meet her husband there, he having come down from New York as she went up.

The morning after a night in the Pullman she was rather "under the weather" from a touch of train sickness, and as she was half sitting, half lying, with closed eyes, a man on the train brought a refreshing drink and asked if she would have it. Needing it sorely, she accepted, and they engaged in conversation. She found him to be a very interesting and cultured man, a highly successful physician of a neighboring city.

When they arrived at their destination—the same resort—they separated with friendly good-byes. While at the resort it happened that they did not meet again, but as she boarded the train on her return journey the same man also came aboard.

Naturally, she nodded, and he promptly took a seat beside her and asked if she had enjoyed her stay—or something equally harmless. In the course of a few minutes' conversation she happened to remark that her husband was making the return trip with her. She did not announce this fact, you understand, as a fact—it simply came around in casual conversation. The man immediately left her—and did not look in her direction again.

The more she thought of it the more she was puzzled over his viewpoint of the meeting. She put the question to me as to whether there was any harm in the way she acted, and I didn't see any, but it appeared that the man did—or at least, supposed that there was a probability that the husband would.

The story only goes to prove, to my way of thinking—that it is the thought or purpose which underlies any act that makes it harmless or harmful. Certainly on this woman's part there was only a natural friendliness which made her actions harmless. I shared her uncertainty in regard to his motives.

Dear Polly:

Autos may come and autos may go,
But ours has come—not yet;
Should we motor down from a Nacoochee town
We'll use someone else's—you bet!

Thanks, Polly dear, with never a care,
For writing we toured in our car
From Nacoochee's heights to Peachtree's delights;
'Tis too good to be true, by far.

For when creditors bold, in their thirst for gold
Read on Sunday, "Jack has a new machine,"
They came in a crowd; their demands were loud,
On Monday they threatened and were mean.

We plead on our knees, Polly correct this please,
Thus make our life once more gay.
Tell 'em we have no car—too poor by far—
Or, really, there'll be the dickens to pay.

ISN'T it terrible the way I have of getting people into trouble. After reading the above weepful plea, I felt that I must make the amende honorable. So here goes.

I really did not have any intention of causing trouble when I wrote a paragraph about Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis motoring home to Atlanta from Nacoochee Valley. But Mr. Lewis, who in his letter assures me that he wrote the poem himself, evidently feels differently about it.

Incidentally, Jack, you are a dear boy for sending me those pretty pencils. I don't know whether to consider it a peace offering or not; but, anyway, I am writing this paragraph with the cute little silver one.

THIS is a romance from real life, told me by the hero himself.

Long and faithfully he had besieged the heart of his lady fair, but to no avail. She had come to look upon him with an "Oh, how I pity, but can't help you" air, and he had taken all of her rebuffs with a sad, patient smile.

One evening after a few preliminary remarks he commenced once again on the subject nearest to his heart.

"I have told you no," she said, "a thousand times, and I mean no."

"Not quite a thousand," he ventured.

"Well, nearly that many, and I'll tell you a little more to-night. There's just one way to win me, and no one knows that but myself. At least you certainly don't," she said, with a superior air.

"Humph!" said the cavalier. "I'll bet anything I do. I was awake this morning at 4 o'clock creating a story of my past. I had it all beautifully arranged, and I believe I would have won, but then I thought, if I can't win without giving a girl the chance of thinking she is some kind of a missionary worker, I won't win at all," and there was an independent gleam in his eye.

For the first time that night the girl looked interested in what he was saying.

I HEAR that a certain distinguished professional man, a bachelor, has been gathering together some very nifty articles for personal adornment. I shall not mention his name. Neither shall I tell whether it was Chicago, New York, London or Paris where the purchases were made. But you will know him by his $12 shirts and his handkerchiefs embroidered in Bulgarian colors that cost $5 each or $60 a dozen.

She used to walk with manly stride
As down the street she went.
A jaunty swagger was her gait,
Her air showed full content.
With graceful ease she swung along,
Each step unhampered, free,
And in her youthful health she was
A pleasant sight to see.
But now all that is changed, for she
Is bound in Fashion's thrall.
So tight her narrow skirt she now
Can scarcely walk at all.
The men observe her mincing steps
And chuckle in their glee,
And when she steps upon a car,
Oh, my! what things they see!

YOU know, it's really funny, when you reflect upon it—this furore created by every new fashion launched for women. The first thing we know, these staid old United States will be taking as much interest in women's styles as Paris itself.

I never before heard of men being as deeply concerned in fashions as they have been of late. And the wise ones should know that interest and criticism, either favorable or the opposite, will encourage women in their pursuit of fashion and will serve to increase the natural instinctive interest all women have for this fascinating subject.

It's all very curious—this widespread crusade for and against the styles. Why shouldn't women wear a diamond anklet as they wear bracelets? And why should a slit skirt attract more criticism than a decollete gown? There is no reason except that one is new and the other is made common by custom.

By the way, I note that the New York women of fashion are taking up the anklet with avidity. I read that at a fashionable Newport affair of last week a charming guest wore a black lace gown with a discreet slit, through which a magnificent diamond anklet showed to good effect.

EARLY in November the marriage of Miss Jessie Wilson and Francis B. Sayre will be celebrated in Washington. It will be the first function of the kind the White House has known in seven years. Great preparations are quietly being made for the wedding of the daughter of the President of the United States. The East Room, where the ceremony will be performed, has just been handsomely decorated in ivory and gold.

Miss Jessie, I see, is to follow the example set by the German princess bride by having her trousseau made entirely in her native land. I suppose our "royal wedding" will not be attended by the blare and flare of that which recently took place in Germany, but the same patriotic interest centers in the approaching event, which is the most notable of a vast number to take place in these United States this autumn.

Miss Jessie is the beauty of the Wilson family. The "good looks" fairy was rather generous to this young bride-to-be. She is slightly taller than her elder sister. Masses of beautiful blonde hair, simply dressed, accentuate the fine contour of a gracefully poised head. I noticed at a White House reception I attended soon after the inauguration that Jessie's eyes were of the real violet color—not blue, nor green, but violet, and she has a really fine complexion. Her taste in dress sets off her style, too.

The elder sister, Margaret, on this occasion at which I was present, attracted much interest because of her likeness to her father. She is really a tiny mite of a girl, and it is rather startling at first to be confronted with a pocket edition of the President in petticoats. Eleanor, the third of this trio of sisters, has a breezy, vivacious manner. Her eyes are brown and snappy, and she speaks enthusiastically on all subjects.

The three girls, as I looked at them standing near each other, appeared to me to represent three distinct types—all American, to the core, but different. Margaret is gracious and sweet and home-loving; Jessie is more aggressive, with well-formed ideas along the lines of sociology. She is really the "high-brow" of the trinity. While Eleanor is inclined toward athletic sports and having a good time generally, I predict that she will be very popular as a White House belle this winter—Eleanor, I mean. Everybody in Atlanta is interested in the Wilson girls, of course, and in the wedding-to-be.

I have heard that a number of people will go to Washington for the event from Atlanta and Savannah. Among the Atlantans who will probably go is Marjorie Brown, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Brown. Miss Marjorie, who is a cousin of the Wilson girls, was a guest for a week at the White House this summer. Marjorie is a pretty young girl and may be asked to be a bridesmaid.

I HAVE heard many expressions of anticipated pleasure on the part of the golfing contingent at the Capital City Country Club over the improvements soon to be made on the links. You know, of course, that the present nine holes are favorably situated near the lake and I understand that nine more sporty holes are to be added. These are to be much further apart and with the kind of hazards seen on the Scotch links. The new nine holes are to be through some very pretty woodland toward Peachtree road and the side of Brookhaven drive, and the start and finish for the eighteen holes will be right at the clubhouse.

I HAVE heard of setting clocks ten minutes fast and watches fifteen minutes slow, but never have I heard anything to equal the nerve of this.

When they returned from the theater the other evening, he begged leave to rest for a few minutes, though the day hadn't been unusually tiresome.

"Well," she asked, "what time is it?"

It just happened that he had misplaced his watch—but hadn't lost his head. Turning somewhat away he pulled from his pocket a bright half dollar and in a second told the time—that is, the time minus about half an hour.

She never dreamed of the boy's ingenuity and was much puzzled when her mother lectured her next morning on the topic of time.

The young lady learned the kind of watch the young man carried, and the first thing she did was to buy a watch bracelet, which she wears constantly.

FIRST ROUND.

Beat the tom-tom, pound the keys.
Crook the elbows, bend the knees.

SECOND ROUND.

Set the muscles, clench the fist,
Dip the glide and whirl and twist.
(Have no heart for friend or brother,
One hard blow deserves another.)

THIRD ROUND.

For each bruise that's placed on you,
Leave a mark that's black and blue.

FOURTH ROUND.

When a couple ventures near,
Bend you to the task with cheer;
Trip the man and kick his ankle—
Wounds like that are bound to rankle.

FIFTH ROUND.

Then to soothe the brutal hurt,
Tear off half the lady's skirt.

TRAINER'S HINT.

He who turkey trots this way,
Lives to dance another day.

* * *

THERE seems no limit to the variations of the dance. Now that the ban has been lifted at East Lake, there is much fancy dancing to be seen there. Some of it is extremely graceful and some isn't so pretty, but there is no extreme dancing allowed, even though turkey-trotting and tangoing is favored to the exclusion almost of the waltz and two-step.

I noticed, however, at a recent dance several young couples used the waltz step as a variation for twirls and pirouettes, with a few waltz measures in between, making a rather showy terpsichorean performance.

There are two young couples who attend many of the dances together and whose splendid dancing is always followed by admiring eyes. These are Lyda Nash and Eugene Haynes, and Allene Fielder and Eugene Kelley. I watched them for quite a while last Wednesday evening and enjoyed the dances as much as the young couples themselves did.

By the way, I noted a little incident recently at one of the country clubs, fuller details of which I found out by an inquiry or two, which shows that utmost pains are being taken to have these dancing parties strictly limited to club members. One young man, who is pretty well known, went to a club of which he is not a member and was vigorously turkey-trotting when the president of the club approached and asked if he was there as a guest.

"Oh, yes," the young fellow responded; "I came with So-and-So," naming a prominent member of the club.

The supposed host was asked about the matter and denied that he had a guest. Thereupon the president asked the young man to depart forthwith.

THE young men who live at a certain fraternity house in Atlanta have been much wrought up lately over the invasion of their domicile by a popular young girl of the city. It seems that this girl—a very pretty and attractive young woman with a daring disposition—knew that one of the boys at this fraternity house had a picture of herself taken in a bathing suit of extreme cut.

She asked for the photograph, but was refused by the boy. With mind pictures of the picture hung prominently on the walls of his room and subjected to the curious gaze of all the boys in the house, this daring young woman decided to get it herself. So she went down one morning, unchaperoned and alone, walked boldly up the stairs of the bachelors' domain and into this man's room.

She looked hurriedly around for her picture—which was nowhere to be seen. She searched on the dresser and the mantel—and while there were girls and girls and girls about, her picture was not visible.

Then it was she became really determined to have that photograph—seeing that he didn't appreciate it, anyway! So she tumbled out the contents of drawers and trunks, and finally found the picture stacked up with a lot of others behind a vase on the dresser.

She departed with her find, leaving the room in great disarray. Happily for her, no one was around, and had she not told of her escapade, no one would have known of it.

Miss Alice May Freeman

THERE are two pretty sisters in Atlanta and they have a wealthy aunt who greatly favors one of these in the beautiful presents she sends back home for the girls from her annual European trips. Invariably she tickets the prettiest and best of the things she sends with the name of her favorite niece.

Of course, the other sister is proud of the silk stockings, the Roman pearls, the Paris blouses, etc., that her aunt incloses for her, but, according to the law of human nature, she has become piqued because of the evident favoritism in these offerings.

It so happened that the last box of things arrived from Europe one day last week when no one was at home but the sister who gets the second choice. She opened up the box, and of course saw that all the choicest things were for her sister. The temptation was too strong for her, so she exchanged all the tickets, putting her name on her sister's gifts, and vice versa.

When the family inspected the box great surprise was expressed over the distribution of the gifts. But now the guilty sister is wondering what aunt is going to say when the Imperator brings her home next month!

THE past week has been gladdened by the arrival of a number of young folks in Atlanta whose names are not yet inscribed on the social register, but are destined so to be in the future. One of the very interesting new arrivals of the week was Miss Marion Peel Calhoun, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun. The little one has a notable ancestry, and unless all signs and portents fail, she will one day be a belle.

Her mother was Marion Peel, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, and her father, Dr. Calhoun, is the son of the famous Dr. A. W. Calhoun. The little girl has two handsome brothers, the three children all being magnificent specimens of childish beauty.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Presley D. Yates is another interesting arrival of the past week. This little fellow is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Richardson, his mother having been Miss Julia Richardson. He is to bear the name of his great-grandfather, Charles Richardson.

In the same block on Peachtree the arrival of two sons was greeted by fond parents last week. Charles Dannals, Jr., whose mother was Martha Whitman, was born in the apartment of his parents in the Palmer, while down the street a short distance Master James Dawkins Cromer, Jr., was welcomed by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Cromer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harrison Jones (Kate Waldo) have a handsome young son, who was born last week, and still another newcomer, whose birthday lies within the second week of September, is Miss Jane Margaret Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alston Davis Morrison, the latter having been Miss Allison Badger, one of last autumn's brides.

The June bug has the golden wings,
The firefly has the flame;
Some bugs have no wings at all,
An auto wins their game.

I SEE that Bill has fitted his car with a new siren," said the man. I went to the show with Monday night, to his friend, as we waited on the corner for our automobile.

"Yes," said the friend, with a cunning smile, "good looker, too."

THE delightful early autumn weather has brought out many golfers and tennis players at the country clubs. The cool breezes make the long-favored water sports possible only to the very hardy. I noticed at East Lake the other afternoon many golfers on the links, both men and women.

Mrs. Tom Paine, one of the best of the East Lake golfers, came home from White Sulphur Springs, where she shared the brilliant social life of the season, with trophies of her prowess at golf and tennis, for she found time for these sports in spite of the numerous affairs which have made up a gay social calendar there this summer.

I believe Mrs. Paine has added four cups to her collection of golf trophies with her playing at the White. She seems to have acquired the habit. Just before she went to Virginia, Mrs. Paine won several handsome trophies at the tournament of the Woman's Southern Golf Association, which was held in Tennessee this summer.

Mrs. Valdemar Gude is another woman who is playing a fine game of golf. Mrs. Gude is a most enthusiastic advocate of out-of-door sports—swimming, golfing and tennis playing. She dances beautifully, too, and is always a very busy and popular guest at the clubs—playing golf in the morning, and sometimes in the afternoon, and dancing in the evening. Mrs. Gude and her sister, Miss May O'Brien, are accounted among the very best of the East Lake contingent of golf and tennis players, and their popularity at the dances is attested by the fact that they are usually the center of attraction.

I HAVE been wondering if the college boys in this part of the country are going to take up the college auto robe fad.

While the Tech colors are almost too dainty, Georgia and Mercer colors would make up into beauties, and their insignias are pretty, too.

Of course, even if this does become a fad, the boys can't be so generous with these valuable robes as their pennants. But the possession of one becomes all the more desirable for that reason.

lieve that the parents of this charming Georgia girl will withhold their forgiveness for her marrying the man of her choice.

It may be that the haste with which the ceremony was performed was a source of regret to them, and probably was, but parents are apt to forgive thoughtlessness on the part of their children sooner or later. I understand that young Coy, when he heard a rumor that General Peter Meldrim was searching for his daughter, wired their whereabouts and is confidently awaiting a loving message.

The young couple have been spending their honeymoon in Litchfield, Conn., and are now on a motoring tour in Mr. Coy's big car through the Berkshires. The bridegroom is quoted as saying that if he doesn not hear from General Meldrim while he is on this tour he will seek a peaceful meeting in New York upon its termination. He is too happy to worry over anything while he is on his honeymoon tour.

The young couple say they would have invited the Meldrims to their hasty wedding ceremony had they not known it would be impossible for them to get from Montreal to Asheville in time for that event.

General Meldrim was at the international bar meeting, giving ex-President Taft a close run for the presidency of the association at the time his daughter married "Ted" Coy in Asheville.

I SAW a woman at one of the little tables on the porch of the East Lake Club the other day, whose toilet of mourning merits description because of its novelty, if nothing else. I don't know who she was, but I can assure you that she has completely outdistanced the novel white mourning costume, introduced into this country by the young widow of John Jacob Astor, and now spread to the proportions of a fad.

The corsage of coat effect, belonging to this noteworthy toilet, was of lavender linen, and the skirt of white linen. The shoes were white oxford, worn with lavender hose, and the hat was of black crepe, from the brim of which fell a lacy, net veil of lavender.

One wouldn't have been sure of the mourning, had not the hat been entirely of black crepe. At first glance the costume seemed an ordinary one of the day, but when the hat was glimpsed, it slowly broke upon the understanding that lavender—albeit a bit gay and vivid in this instance—was supposed to be "half mourning" when combined with white, and after a little reflection, one recognized that a new style in mourning was being seen for the first time.

The combination of half-mourning colors and full crepe regalia reminded me of one of Charles Dana Gibson's famous pictures—you know, that one called "Half Mourning," the central figure of which is a lovely young woman, one side of her costume being widow's weeds of the deepest dye, and the other side, gay summer girl attire, the eyes and expression of each side of the woman's face corresponding with the respective toilet.

I HEAR that one of the young men from Atlanta who spent last week at Tallulah, where, I am told, gayety is the only thing thought of, invented a new dance step in a very impromptu manner one morning. All of you who are familiar with Tallulah and surrounding scenery, know that a sure foot and a steady head is necessary for much wandering over the landscape. This young man was a member of a party tramping over the hills and was displaying his courage by dancing the turkey trot on dizzy-looking rocks, and over dangerous-looking crevasses.

The girls, of course, feared every instant to see him "come a cropper" and followed his antics with anxious eyes. And, of course, he kept them up—what boy wouldn't, under the circumstances?

But he danced once too often on a very slippery ledge which overhung a deep chasm through which the Tallulah River meandered. He took a step or two and then a long, long slide—a slide which was not intended, and which carried him to the very edge of the precipice before he could stop it. Everybody was looking and everybody was breathless—the dancer included.

As soon as it was seen that death had overlooked the young fellow once more, the remembrance of his expression of fear and horror prompted much laughter and teasing.

The others of the party introduced the impromptu slide in their dancing at the hotel that night, naming it the "Tallulah Glide." I hear that these girls and boys are bringing the "Tallulah Glide" back with them, and will exploit it here.

By the way, I have heard that the "boll weevil wiggle," which was first introduced at a house party in Mississippi, if you will recall, is known to a charming new student at Washington Seminary and a gallant young fellow at Tech, both of whom were members of the house party which originated this now famous dance. I wonder if these two will give us a glimpse of the "boll weevil wiggle" this winter?

I PREDICT that events in Washington will take on a much livelier and more interesting aspect from now on. Miss Genevieve Clark returned yesterday from a tour of several months abroad. I have heard that Miss Clark was a genuine sensation abroad—"a different kind of American girl," she was called by

Miss Elise Brown

Who is a belle of the younger set, and noted as one of Atlanta's most beautiful young girls. She always attends the East Lake dances, and is popular with a large contingent of friends. (Photograph by Hirshburg & Phillips.)

European society, which had heretofore only known American girls of social ambitions and nothing more.

Miss Clark, you know, has social charm plus—as my friend Elbert Hubbard would say. She likes pretty clothes and wears them well, but she also likes politic economy—and knows it well. She originates styles in hair dressing, you will recall, and her own charming head is full of thought and purpose as well as womanly vanity. And best of all, she has a keen sense of humor.

In her own country this clever young woman has already attracted particular attention. She is to be a debutante this coming season, I believe, although, of course, she is already well known in Washington and New York society.

By the way, the Georgia folks are settling in Washington now. Representative Howard and Mrs. Howard have taken a house on Ontario road for the coming season and will move in next week. Former Representative W. G. Brantley and his family like Washington so well they have decided to live there for the present and are established at the Highlands.

I HAVE heard that the young fellow who caused pretty Viola Johnston to break her engagement to young William Felton—an act that set a-flutter all the good people of Macon—is a member of Baltimore's exclusive and wealthy set of young bachelors. He was at Toxaway this summer, where Miss Johnston was a belle, and was so deeply smitten and urged his suit so well that the young woman decided not to marry just yet—at least until she had a little while longer to think it over.

While, of course, I regret the shattering of any romance, I think it is wise for a girl to have a few years in which to enjoy her young womanhood before she marries and settles down. (Query: Do the young married couples settle down nowadays?)

Viola and William Felton have lived near each other all their lives on beautiful College street in Macon. Their mothers and fathers are warm friends, and the romance between the two, which began many years ago, met with their approval.

Both are wealthy, good-looking and popular—and it is not to be expected in this contrary world that such an ideal match would really come off.

Now young Felton has gone abroad, alone instead of with his bride, as he had intended. I hear that a young couple to be married soon—an Atlanta girl and a wealthy young man from the East—were to have met the Macon couple in Nice, and the four were to have toured Southern France as a party.

Well, "of all sad words," etc. But maybe we will hear of another engagement, after a while—and maybe of two—for there are lots of pretty girls where young William Felton is going, and his youth and good looks and wealth will surely attract some of these.

A NOVEL experience enlivened Mrs. J. E. C. Pedder's Western tour this summer. Having a brother who owns an extensive ranch in New Mexico, near Silver City, Mrs. Pedder was given opportunity to attend a cowboy dance one evening. Her husband, who was traveling with her, gave permission for the "Mrs." to be dropped for that one evening, so this charming Atlanta woman was introduced to the "boys" as Miss Pedder.

Petite and girlish looking, and a dancer of rare grace, "Miss Pedder" was the belle of the ball that evening, and no cowboy failed to try to get at least one dance with the "girl from Georgia."

Mrs. Pedder has just returned from her stay in the West. The first part of the trip made by Mr. and Mrs. Pedder was broken by a camping party in Southern California, where they were guests of Mr. Pedder's brother and his wife. They traveled leisurely in their cars, pitching their tents wherever fancy dictated and staying as long as they liked. I have heard of no summer's experience that I envy more than this trip, which was full of pleasant and unusual experiences.

In New Mexico, Mrs. Pedder tells me, the motor car followed the old Santa Fe trail, where the caravans of the "Forty-niners" passed on their way to the gold fields. Every step of the way was full of interesting associations.

Last year, I recall, the Pedders had an unusually interesting foreign tour. They are not content to make their travels along the beaten paths, but each summer contrive some novel journey, and as they have kinspeople in many parts of the world, and friends as well, there is always someone to give the glad hand of welcome wherever they happen to go.

I HAVE come across another story of hotel signatures which caused trouble since I told you of the Tallulah incident last week. This other event occurred in Asheville. A young Atlantan and a belle of this city, going over to Mountain Meadows Inn for afternoon tea, were asked by the hotel clerk to give their signatures, and the man, in thoughtless mischief, inscribed his own name with the "and wife" in addition.

The next day the Asheville papers published the list of guests at Mountain Meadows Inn, including, of course, the name of the young fellow "and wife" among the guests. Consternation reigned among the young people of the particular hotel at which he had been "posing" as a single man for two weeks. And he had a hard time explaining the affair. The moral of these stories is plain: Never pretend you have a wife—at least, when you are in a small town.

In the World of Society

WHILE the social calendar showed few dates during the past week, the quietude which has marked the summer season has been enlivened by two or three visitors, in whose honor a series of informal affairs have been given.

Miss Bland Tomlinson, of Birmingham, who is spending some time with Miss Dorothy Harman at "Mildor," the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Harman at East Lake, is a popular visitor in whose honor a number of the affairs of the week were given.

Miss Tomlinson is a charming young woman, who spent the summer at Tate Springs, where she was very popular. On Monday, Miss Margaret Hawkins entertained the girls, who were recently together at Tate Springs, at a luncheon in honor of Miss Tomlinson. The luncheon was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hawkins on Peachtree street, and the luncheon table was beautifully decorated with a basket of Killarney roses and daisies, pink and white being the colors that prevailed throughout the luncheon.

Miss Hawkins wore a becoming toilet of pink crepe de chine, made with the pleated coat effect.

After luncheon, the guests enjoyed a box party at the Forsyth, the little party including Miss Hawkins, Miss Tomlinson, Miss Dorothy Harman, Miss Josephine Mobley, Miss Helen Hawkins and Miss Louise Hawkins.

On Tuesday Miss Tomlinson was the honor guest at two informal affairs. Mrs. Harry Harman, Jr., gave an informal luncheon for her, which was followed by a small tea at which Miss Annie Akers entertained at the Piedmont Club.

Autumn flowers adorned Mrs. Harman's residence in Ansley Park, and the table decorations included a variety of gay blossoms, from the extensive gardens of "Mildor."

Twelve girls were the guests of Miss Akers for the tea which followed the luncheon, the guests being seated at a round table, profusely decorated with goldenglow and decorative details in yellow and white.

Miss Akers was gowned in white crepe de chine, worn with a becoming hat of black tulle. Invited to meet Miss Tomlinson were Miss Dorothy Harman, Miss Jessie McKee, Miss Helen Hawkins, Miss Margaret Northen, Miss Mary V. Harrison, Miss Grace Angier, Miss Nellie Kiser Stewart, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. James D. Palmer.

Another informal affair tendered Miss Tomlinson was the tea given Wednesday afternoon by Misses Helen and Mary Hawkins at the Piedmont Club. The round table was placed on the terrace, which is gay and bright with blooming plants and flowers, and the tea table had as its decoration a basket of pink carnations with silver candlesticks bearing pink tapers under shades of silver filigree.

The two hostesses were charmingly gowned for the afternoon, Miss Helen Hawkins wearing lavender crepe with a big black hat laden with white plumes, and Miss Mary Hawkins wearing blue chiffon with a leghorn hat adorned with clusters of pink roses.

Wednesday evening Miss Tomlinson was the central figure in a dinner-party given by several young men at the midweek dance at the East Lake Country Club, and Thursday she and Miss Harman were guests of Strother Fleming and Joe Colquitt at the dinner-dance at the Capital City Country Club.

The informal tea at which Miss Nina Gentry entertained Friday at the Piedmont Club was also a compliment to Miss Tomlinson.

MRS. W. M. FAMBROUGH entertained at a large reception Tuesday afternoon at her home on Highland avenue for her sister, Mrs. J. M. Connell, of Thomasville, who is visiting her, and for Miss Jeannette Oelsner.

Mrs. Fambrough received her guests wearing cream lace over pastel pink brocade. Mrs. Connell wore blue charmeuse, draped with shell pink chiffon, and Miss Oelsner was becomingly gowned in pink crepe de chine, with which she wore a corsage of dresden flowers.

THE bachelors at "Paradise Hall" entertained at their first formal dinner party Tuesday evening in compliment to one of their number, Dr. Arch Elkin, whose wedding to Miss Amelia Sturgeon will be an event of October.

The flowers that decorated the house were goldenglow and Japanese ferns, grown by the hosts in their own garden.

Being afraid the men would forget the place cards and necessary favors to make a success of the dinner, one of the girls purchased these articles and sent them out as a surprise to the hosts.

There were little telephones, champagne bottles in imitation, which were really whistles. Someone has said that it always takes some noisy favor at a dinner to get things started off right and these "Blow Yourself" bottles accomplished their object.

Things went off so well the bachelors are planning other parties, and the girls see that the time has come when men can do without them and still be properly fed. The party on Tuesday evening included Misses Amelia Sturgeon, Annie Laura Robinson, Mignon McCarty, Mary Robinson, Arch Davison, Gilbert Stout, Archie Lee, Frank Montgomery, Gillespie Adams, D. F. Rogers, Dr. Arch Elkin and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collier.

The lovely home had quantities of garden asters as its decoration and in the dining room the purple color scheme was carried out. A large gilt basket of purple asters was the centerpiece and the small baskets of mints were also purple. The favors were miniature suit cases, checked to the school to which the guest was destined, and bearing her name, thus serving as a place card also.

Richardson, Jr., son of Dr. Charles H. Richardson and the late Mrs. Richardson, also of Macon. Miss Shaw is now the guest of her uncle-in-law and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Ridgely, of Hampton, near Baltimore, after spending the summer at Ogonquit, Maine, and will join her parents on Wednesday at their home in Macon.

AMONG the Atlantans whose summer trips were of unusual interest and pleasure are Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton and Colonel and Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon, who recently returned home after attending the Governors' Conference in Colorado Springs.

The conference was attended by a large number of Governors, with their wives and daughters, and a most delightful social side marked the occasion. At the brilliant dinner party which was given by Governor Ammons, of Colorado, and the Board of Trade, to the visiting Governors, Mrs. Slaton was given the post of honor at the right hand of Governor Ammons, and Mrs. Paxon was seated between Governor Eberhardt, of Minnesota, and Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, the party from Georgia receiving many special attentions throughout their entire trip.

The dinner was a very elaborate affair, the dining room being decorated with festoons of smilax, and the tables banked with gorgeous sweetpeas and baskets of Colorado fruits. The menu included many delicacies grown in the State, one course consisting of elk, served as a meat course.

The various governors made speeches during the course of the dinner, and Gov. Slaton was particularly happy in his remarks, making a profound impression on all his hearers.

Another very happy social affair was the theater party at which Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon entertained, her guests including Governor and Mrs. Slaton, Colonel Paxon, Governor Stewart of Montana; Mrs. Stewart, Governor Colquitt of Texas and Colonel Paxon. The party saw John Mason in "As a Man Thinks," the audience being of unusual brilliance.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. Dennis, of Colorado Springs, formerly of Atlanta, attended many of the social affairs incident upon the conference and entertained Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Colonel and Mrs. Paxon on several motor rides around Colorado Springs. Mrs. Dennis was formerly Miss Charlotte Corday Rice, of Atlanta. Dr. Dennis is a nephew of George Steele Lowndes, of Atlanta, and a prominent specialist of Colorado Springs.

The Atlanta party made the trip to Cripple Creek, the train passing through scenes of unrivaled grandeur. They also made the impressive journey to the top of Pike's Peak, and ascended the scenic railroad at Manitou, where, after the perilous ascent, luncheon was served. The sides of the great rocks had been festooned with pines, firs and cedars and an elaborate luncheon was served in the open air.

On the close of the conference the visiting Governors, with Colonel and Mrs. Paxon, went to Denver as guests of Governor Ammons and the Denver Board of Trade. The Georgia party were special guests of the manager of the Brown Hotel, and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. Paxon were laden with gorgeous fruits and flowers.

Following the conference, Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Colonel and Mrs. Paxon went to Cheyenne, Wyo., as guests of Governor and Mrs. Carey. The Careys have a magnificent home in Cheyenne and a happy incident of the stay in Cheyenne was a motor trip of 23 miles to one of the many Carey ranches, and to the magnificent stone residence that Governor Carey had built for his son.

On the return trip Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Colonel and Mrs. Paxon spent a day or two in Chicago.

MRS. MORGAN ENTERTAINS PIONEER WOMEN.

WEDNESDAY afternoon Mrs. Joseph H. Morgan, president and founder of the Atlanta Women's Pioneer Society, was hostess for one of the most interesting social gatherings for the early fall.

Her home in Spring street was decorated with goldenrod, diminutive sunflowers and goldenglow, the colors of the organization.

The Pioneer Women's Society occupies a distinctive position in the club world. It is not governed or influenced by any rule or regulation, and its entertainments are characterized by a charm that belongs to the period from which its members sprang.

There were a number of prominent clubwomen present who represented other clubs in the Federation, and each one was given a greeting by the president of the Pioneers, after which they made short speeches.

Mrs. E. L. Connolly represented the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, and responded for that association. Mrs. Williams McCarthy spoke for the Atlanta Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, as its president. Mrs. Fulton represented the Decatur Woman's Club; Mrs. Tuller responded for the Butterflies; Mrs. Shepard W. Foster for the Daughters of the American Revolution, which organization she represents as State regent, and by Mrs. John A. Perdue, regent of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R.

After the guests had all arrived, the musical program began, and included a trio by the granddaughters of one of Atlanta's distinguished pioneer physicians, Dr. J. J. Knott. The music consisted of a song by Miss Edith McCool, Miss McCool and Miss Voorhees with her violin. Mr. Linder and the Misses Voorhees gave a delightful violin number.

Refreshments were served, with Miss Georgia Rice and Miss Mary Eugenia Morgan at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Morgan was assisted in receiving her guests by the officers of the association and a number of her kinswomen who are visiting in the city.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Williams McCarthy, Mrs. Shepard W. Foster, Mrs. John A. Perdue, Mrs. Rachel Kith, Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Edward Barnes, Mrs. William E. Foster, Mrs. Robert Blackburn, Mrs. Abi Elder, Mrs. Lucy Pittman Ivey, Mrs. W. B. Cox, Mrs. Charlotte I. Peck, Mrs. Wilkerson, Mrs. Sidney Holland, Mrs. DeLos Hill, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Harry Smith, Miss Cora Brown, Mrs. Torbett, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. William Williams, Mrs. Massey, Mrs. Joseph Wusthoff, Miss Kate Smith, Mrs. O. FLORENCE CRITTENTON HOME.

THE Florence Crittenton Home management has begun its fall work with many interesting plans for the coming season.

The industrial room which has been added to the home has been equipped with the necessary equipment for good work, and much interest has been manifested by the inmates in the sewing department.

There are at present 27 young women in the home and twelve babies. During the past few months several of the inmates have made happy marriages and are now prosperous and comfortably established in life.

"We are doing a splendid work," said Mrs. F. M. Robinson, president of the board of management of the Florence Crittenton Home, "and have had the satisfaction of knowing that the influence of the women and the atmosphere of the home has given many of the young women hope, who came to it without hope.

"Every precaution for safety is thrown about the young girls who come to us, and they are given some incentive to live and rebuild on the ruin and devastation of their unfortunate lives.

"In the industrial room there are sewing machines, and on the days appointed the ladies under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. H. Frazier, chairman of the wardrobe committee, go to the home and spend the day, carrying their luncheo, and there they sew and direct the sewing of the girls. There are tables in the room also where folding is done and envelopes are directed for people sending out circulars. In this way money is made whereby clothes may be bought for the young women in the home."

THE AUGUSTA WOMAN'S CLUB.

THE women of Augusta have gone to work methodically to organize, what purports to be a club of influence and usefulness. The women of the city have been appealed to, to make a choice of the work in which they propose to bend their activities, and write it on their application for membership, in this way simplifying the question of organizing the committees. The scope of work has been carefully selected and covers a wide field.

Among the subjects to be studied are civics, including parks, playgrounds, billboards and cleanliness. Conservation, vital force, education, household economics, civil service reform, legislation and all the branches of work they entail will be taken up in order and promoted along the most up-to-date lines.

This bazaar will be contributed to by Daughters of the Confederacy from all parts of the United States, and will be conducted on a broad and generous scale.

A number of beautiful articles have already been contributed to the ladies in charge, and every member of the organization is pledged to make or contribute something to be sold at the bazaar.

Mrs. Arthur Hazzard is chairman of the doll committee and has in hand some beautiful dolls that will be offered at the bazaar to those seeking Christmas dolls.

Three new members were accepted in the chapter—Mrs. Rose Ivey Anthony, Miss Lucy Ivey and Mrs. Lollie Walker Clements.

Mrs. Lillard, Mrs. Hazzard and Mrs. Ivey, of Athens, newly elected, were introduced to and welcomed into the chapter.

STORY TELLERS' LEAGE TO STUDY GEORGIA HISTORY.

MISS KATHERINE WOOTEN announces that the Children's Story Telling League of Carnegie Library will depart from its usual system of work this year by taking up a sustained and comprehensive study of Atlanta history and history of Georgia.

The studies will be conducted under the tutorage of Miss Henrietta Masseling, assisted by Miss Amelia Whittaker, who has charge of the children's reading room at the library.

"The first thing will be organizing the class," said Miss Wooten. "The history of Georgia will be taken up, then Atlanta history will be made familiar to the children. There will be honor rolls, and every child who reads the book under discussion will be enrolled on the board.

"One of the teachers from the Boys' High School will come over from time to time and give instructions in Georgia and Atlanta history and in municipal government, so that when the child is through with the year classes he will be well informed about the things that pertain to his home State and town and how it is and should be governed."

The writings of Uncle Remus will be taken up first among the fiction writing, and Sidney Lanier and other Georgia and Atlanta writers will be taken up in turn.

The first meeting was held Friday afternoon at Carnegie Library, with an unusually good attendance. Usually there are from 100 to 200 children in attendance at the story-telling hour.

DRAMA LEAGUE.

GREAT interest centers around the announcement that Miss Caroline Cobb, of Athens, organizer of the Georgia branch of the Drama League of America, will open classes in Atlanta for the purpose of furthering the work of the league in this city.

Miss Cobb has accomplished a wonderful work already in promoting the drama and putting it upon a higher plane in this State, and her proposed work in Atlanta means that the Atlanta branch of the Drama League will grow and become a permanent institution in the city.

In the spring Miss Cobb presented at Athens two performances with the best local talent in that city. Her first play was Percy Mackeye's "Jeanne D'Arc," and the second was "The Piper," which made a great success as an artistic presentation.

Miss Cobb will spend several days in Atlanta every week and develop her classes.

Atlanta men and women organized a Drama League several months ago, and with the early fall activities the work will be taken up and brought prominently forward as one of the greatest factors for uplift in the club life of the city.

HABERSHAM CHAPTER TO HAVE BAZAAR.

THE Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., will hold a bazaar in connection with their restaurant during the month of October. At that time a number of useful and beautiful articles will be put on sale. Mrs. John A. Perdue, regent of the chapter, will be assisted by the members of the chapter, which includes many of the most prominent women in the city.

WOMAN'S INDUSTRIAL LABEL LEAGUE.

ONE of the most active organizations in the city is the Woman's International Label League, with Mrs. C. M. Jarvis as president, Mrs. William Straus vice president, Mrs. Carl Karston secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Harry Gooding recording secretary and Mrs. W. C. Puckett sergeant-at-arms.

The object of the organization is to promote the welfare of wage earners, to discountenance the sweat shop system of production by aiding and encouraging the sale of union-made goods, and to gain a universal eight-hour day. Other questions of vital importance that the league deals with are the abolishment of child labor, securing equal pay for equal work regardless of sex, to aid the Sunday and early closing movement, to sustain fair employers and to urge industrial and political equality for women.

The work has been commended by the American Federation of Labor, and the union has many friends in the international unions who have by their assistance and encouragement been of great help.

Mrs. Jarvis, the president, said at a recent meeting: "We need the active co-operation of every union man and woman. It is through the trade union that we hope to reach the women who spend the money."

Mrs. Jarvis concluded her statement with a strong plea for every woman to join the union and help lift the burden from the wage earner where it was pressing in.

Wednesday the union held an interesting meeting that was largely attended. Several speakers made good talks.

D. A. R.'S PLAN HIAWATHA IN MOTION PICTURES.

THE Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold an important meeting with the regent, Mrs. John A. Perdue, at her home in Edgewood avenue at 3:30 o'clock.

Matters of interest will be discussed, including the presentation of "Hiawatha," the Indian Passion Play, at the Auditorium, the last of the month.

"Hiawatha" was given in Atlanta last year by the lake in Inman Park, and is said to have been the most beautiful open-air performance ever given in Atlanta. The picture show proposed by the Joseph Habersham Chapter will be similar to the Hiawatha of last year, and will represent the beautiful story of Indian life as Longfellow has told it.

The Joseph Habersham Chapter is one of the largest in the State, and, with Mrs. John A. Perdue at the head, has sponsored some of the most interesting and attractive entertainments of the past few months.

"Hiawatha," as given by the chapter, will be a social event and will be promoted by the members for the benefit of the chapter house building fund.

The Joseph Habersham Chapter was organized in 1909, and has added many interesting features to the social calendar during the past summer, when social life was inactive.

Last year a lot was secured by the chapter on which to erect a building, and to this end the chapter is working.

ATLANTA WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE LEAGUE.

THE Atlanta Woman's Suffrage League held its regular meeting in the assembly room of Carnegie Library Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Margaret Gardner presiding, in the absence of the president, Mrs. Harry Smith.

Business plans were discussed and the question of presenting a series of well-known lecturers to the association during the fall and winter was under advisement.

Miss Elisabeth High, chairman of the current events committee, will lead the next meeting with the first program on municipal government, which is to be a leading topic of discussion of the educational committee, of which Mrs. Frances Whitesides is chairman. The first discussion will be the election of city officials. The politics of the city will follow in order and the State political work will be taken up systematically.

Officers for the year are: Mrs. Harry Smith, president; Mrs. Albert Howell, Sr., vice president; Mrs. J. B. Gardner, secretary; Mrs. Mary E. Bradley, treasurer; Mrs. Helmer, chairman of membership committee; Mrs. Francis Whitesides, chairman of educational committee; Mrs. W. S. Yates, chairman of ways and means committee; Mrs. McCarthy, chairman of programs, and Miss Elisabeth High chairman of current events.

There has been a marked increase in membership in the association recently and the plans for the coming season promise much that is calculated to add to the enrollment.

Economical Piano Buying

Economy in buying a piano consists of getting the best instrument that can be made to sell at the price you want to pay.

It does not necessarily consist in obtaining an instrument at a low price, because some pianos and player-pianos are expensive at any figure.

But there is a limit beyond which you can not go in the purchase of an instrument without paying too much.

You should expect to give what the piano is worth, but you should also expect to get the full equivalent of your money.

That principle is the basis of our selling policy, and we are prepared to show our patrons that every instrument is marked at a fair price.

You can pay as much as $1,250.00 for one of our pianos, or as low as $195.00. In any case you get the full value of your investment. In other words, you buy economically.

Reliability is the key-note to be considered. The W. W. Kimball Company, of Chicago, are the world's largest manufacturers of pianos, player-pianos, residence and church pipe organs, and its product is sold direct, eliminating the middleman's profits, through this Branch Store.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures the buyer of receiving full value for his money. We wish to emphasize the fact that the fixed price at which all of our goods are sold is based on an output of 30,000 instruments yearly.

Our Exchange Department offers many attractive bargains to those wishing either slightly used player-pianos, pianos or organs. Prices, in some cases, even less than actual cost of manufacture.

The Sunday school rooms were decorated with palms and ferns, and the guests of honor were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jackson, with whom they are spending two weeks preparatory to their occupancy of the manse on Grant street.

The class of Mr. Nash is a large and active one, and the entertainment was given in recognition of the valuable services they have done in the church work during the summer. Cecil Jones is president of the Baraca classes, and Mr. Nash leader of the Young Men's Class.

Rev. L. J. Jackson, pastor of the church, has returned from a vacation spent at Pelham Heights, where he attended the Baptist General Assembly for a week. Mr. Hall has embodied in his series of sermons the idea of rising above the centuries that have passed since Christ was on earth, and going back to Jerusalem on the wings of Holy Scripture, to drink of the water of life. His sermons have been deeply interesting and have attracted large crowds outside the church, who have attended regularly.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rose, of Hopkinsville, Ky., have arrived in the city and will assist Mr. Hall in his church work in the future.

* * *

* * *

SECOND BAPTIST.

THURSDAY afternoon the Second Baptist Sunday school entertained the babies on the Cradle Roll of the Sunday school with a play party. The children of the beginners' department were included in the entertainment.

To-day will be observed as Banner Day. The banners are given in each department, beginners, primary, junior, intermediate, senior and adult, respectively, to the class making the best average attendance during the month, to win the banner. Three consecutive months means the class so doing wins it permanently.

The only class that has yet won a banner for its own is the Teachers' Training Class, and at the program Sunday morning when the banners are presented by Superintendent John Spalding the several winners in the contest, Miss Josephine Rainwater, a member of the T. T. Class, will give a vocal solo.

The records of the Sunday school show that August, 1913, has surpassed any August in attendance. This, being a vacation month, is noteworthy, and shows that the "attendance habit" learned during the recent contest with the First Christian Sunday school is firmly rooted.

The regular monthly meeting of the Workers' Conference, which is a meeting of teachers and officers of the Lee Street Baptist Church Bible School, was held Wednesday evening in the junior department of the school. Supper was served by the primary department, consisting of the following teachers: Mrs. Georg Westmoreland, Mrs. Paul Gibso Mrs. Huffman, Mrs. Hunter, M Hall, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Misses Mar Pittman, Walker, Roach and Le e. An interesting business session followed the supper; plans for Rally Day, October 6, were perfected, which the deacons of the church will make also a "home-coming" day, the deacons having agreed to make a personal canvas among all the church members with a view to having a full attendance at Sunday school that day—and afterwards.

WESLEY MEMORIAL.

THE Woman's Auxiliary of the Wesley Memorial Hospital met Wednesday to discuss plans for a campaign to raise $25,000 for the establishment of a building fund for a new hospital. Some time ago Asa Candler offered to give $3 for every $1 the auxiliary should raise, provided they raised $25,000, to start with, and the Wednesday meeting of the ways and means committee was to begin the work and arouse enthusiasm.

The ways and means committee is made up of the following ladies from the First Methodist Church: Mrs. H. H. Tucker, Mrs. William R. Prescott, Mrs. John M. Miller and Mrs. R. H. Rambo, president of the auxiliary.

There were 35 ladies present, representing churches from all over the State, and in a short time more than $1,300 was subscribed to the building fund, one lady present giving a valuable old heirloom brooch, which will be sold for the benefit of the fund.

There will be a campaign through the State, and it is expected that many persons will contribute to the building fund, as the hospital is nonsectarian and does perhaps the largest charity work in the State.

Mrs. T. R. Kendall, of Gainesville, who is vice president of the auxiliary, was present and gave an inspiring talk to the ladies present.

It is hoped that the new hospital can be put under way at an early date.

Committees will be appointed at once to carry on the work begun Wednesday morning.

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ENGLISH OPERA IS ASSURED AT LAST FOR U. S.

Aborns Have Comprehensive Plan to Introduce Classics in Own Tongue This Season.

Special Cable to The American.
By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—To Paris there have come the pleasant tidings that after a fight extending over some three years America will this week see the beginning of an effort to found opera in English.

For full three years or more those who had clamored for this great and good reform were mocked and jeered at as mere dreamers of mad dreams, but, as old Galileo said long years ago, "The world does move."

The irony of things has forced the opponents of the use of our own tongue in opera to join its advocates. To meet the threat of an all-English "national" opera house lately promised by Mr. Hammerstein, not only various friends of our vernacular, but men of influence and wealth, like Mr. Kahn, have helped the foundation of the Century Opera Company, which, under the management of Milton and Sargent Aborn, will this week do what it can to change a "dream" into a living fact.

It would be hard to overestimate the importance of this new and earnest effort to make opera popular. The Aborns hope to convert what was a fad into a real form of popular art. For quite a century our opera has been sung in foreign tongues. It has, no doubt, been sung melodiously and well. But to the masses it has had no sense.

The whole value—the whole meaning—of the now imminent season at the Century Opera House lies in the attempt to put this sense into sweet sound.

Wagner Advocated Idea.

Since Paul, in an epistle, told the Corinthians that prayers and hymns of praise should be made understandable, many—among them Addison and Wagner—have denounced the absurdity of rendering songs in strange and foreign idioms.

In Germany to-day, except in instances, not only Wagner's noble works, but all the works of the composers of the world are sung in German.

In France and nearly every other land, in the subsidized opera houses the operas of the world are rendered in the national idioms.

The Aborns will endeavor to present opera in the language of America. And if their efforts are at last crowned with success they will have deserved our thanks.

They have a hard and very grinding task to face. For, after hearing music in outlandish tongues, some may be fretted by the sound of our English. But most Americans, I think, who love "grand opera," would like to understand as well as hear.

To these, at least, the Century Opera season will be full of interest and no one who supports the Century scheme should ask too much at first of such a novel venture.

It may be years before some of the artists at the Century become "easy" in our vernacular. English diction, English enunciation, must be both taught and mastered by the singers who have been engaged by the Aborns.

It is particularly worth while to remark in this connection that these managers have now seen the absolute need of teaching diction in their theater.

Morton Adkins, a baritone who has acted as instructor in singing and oratory at Syracuse University, has been engaged by the Aborns. He is said to be well suited to his work. If he can help the Century artists to convey their words and meaning to the audience, as the professors of the Paris conservatory do in the cases of French singers, he will delight New York.

Old Versions Reformed.

The Aborns tell me that they have realized the necessity of reforming the old "versions," or rather, perversions of opera books. They have taken up the question of better English texts with the publishers," who have promised to furnish them with what they call "scientific adaptations," as soon as possible.

To interpret the "grand operas" announced in their prospective, the Aborns have recruited a company largely American. For this, too, they deserve much praise.

Most of the singers in the Century company, I hear, are young. They should be welcomed in a kind and generous way and have their chance allowed them. Opera in English is still in its infancy. It should be fostered by the public sympathy.

Thus far, it seems, the response made by the public to the new enterprise has been encouraging. A great deal will depend on the result of the first week's performance. Many allowances for the difficulties of the management may be proper in the circumstances.

Whether it was wise to intrust the musical direction of the new opera scheme to the conductors selected by the Aborns, I can not say. It is not clear why a Hungarian maestro, however, accomplished he may be, should head the artistic management.

One other feature of the Century Opera Company enterprise should be remembered. The prices will be "popular."

For my part, I believe that opera in English would have a better chance of firmly establishing itself in America if it were less "humble" and more daring in its appeal, but the Aborns hope to win by charging little for the joys of opera. They may be wise.

SPURIOUS ANTIQUES BAIT FOR AMERICANS

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Pieces of "antique" furniture, whose origin only the Bond street dealers know, are increasing. Business is booming in alleged Jacobean sideboards, old dressers and Georgian corner cupboards.

A new scheme has increased the trade. The spurious furniture is placed in cottages on roads most frequented by Americans and other foreign motorists and tourists.

U. S. Peeress' Baby First to Have All Titles

Roxburghe Heir Gets Every Hereditary Name

Lady Alastair-Innis-Ker, who rejoices in birth of Roxburghe heir though he robs her husband of many titles.

Boy Is Everything From a Duke to a Baronet. Mother Is Queen's Favorite.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The baby boy that has just come to render the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe happy is the first child with American blood in his veins to be born here to all the hereditary claims, except those held by the royal family, of course.

The Roxburghe baby, whose title is now Marquis of Bowmont and Cessford, will, if he survives, eventually be Duke of Roxburghe, Earl of Roxburghe, Earl of Kelso, Viscount Broxmouth, Baron Roxburghe, Baron Ker of Cessford and Caverton in Scotland; Earl Innes in the United Kingdom and a Baronet of Nova Scotia.

Besides Roxburghe, only the Dukes of Sutherland and Westminster bear all the titles from Duke to Baronet. The Duke of Marlborough, who married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, is neither a Viscount nor a Baronet.

One of the first congratulatory telegrams the Roxburghes received at Chesterfield House here—where the baby first saw the light—was from the King and Queen, who were delighted that an heir to the Dukedom was born. The Duchess is Queen Mary's favorite among American peeresses. Her quiet, simple taste and dignified mode of life commended her to the Queen, whose thoughtfulness was well displayed by a magnificent basket of emations sent from the royal gardens of Windsor Castle in response to a telegram from Balmoral.

Mrs. Ogden Goelet, who came to England six weeks ago to be with her daughter, has been in constant attendance at the bedside. Mother and son are progressing admirably. It is expected that the Duke will return soon to Floors Castle, where he is entertaining a series of bachelor shooting parties.

As soon as convalescent the Duchess will return to Templeton.

The heir will be christened in October, probably in London for the convenience of the royal sponsors. The young heir's name has not yet been definitely chosen, but George, after the King; John, the Duke's name, and Ogden, after the boy's grandfather is the sequence suggested.

Lady Alastair Innes-Ker, formerly Miss Anne Breese, whose husband was heir to the title until the advent of the little stranger, is in no way disgruntled, being among the first to proffer congratulations, and declaring frankly she considers the Goelet millions really necessary to maintain such a palatial residence as Floors Castle.

Duches of Roxburghe, American mother of heir to every hereditary title of British nobility. She was Miss Goelet.

Automatic Soldier Worked by Wireless Invented by Dane

Experts Say It Is Deadliest Instrument of War Ever Devised. Shoots, Then Disappears.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The automatic soldier, the deadliest instrument of war ever devised, has been patented by a Danish engineer, it is reported.

This machine is governed by wireless telegraphy from a distance of 5 miles if need be. It consists of a steel cylinder sunk vertically in the earth and containing another cylinder which rises out of the ground when the delicate machinery is set in motion by wireless.

In the second cylinder is affixed an automatic rifle which immediately pumps bullets in the direction in which it is pointed, firing 400 times with speed and accuracy.

Then the rifle and its cylinder sinks back into the buried cylinder, where an enemy can find it only with great difficulty.

Some hundreds of such automatic soldiers could defend a position against a large force of infantry.

London as Noisy as N.Y., Says Foe of Fuss

Mrs. Isaac Rice Believes That British Motor Buses Are as Bad as Siren Horns.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—"I find London just about as noisy as New York," said Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, president of the New York Socity for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noise.

"Your auto sirens are not as noisy as ours—anyhow, there is none that imitates the warning sirens on fire apparatus—but your motor buses are dreadful.

"One thing can be said for London—it does not suffer from the American voice. People here seem to speak about ten times lower than do New Yorkers.

"Your noise suppression society is at a disadvantage compared to ours, for we have had official co-operation; our work could succeed only with the aid of legislation."

Empress Eugenie Sorry for Alfonso

Thinks Princess Henry of Battenberg Overdoes Part of Precise Mother-in-Law.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. —Empress Eugenie will leave her beautiful residence at Farnborough for the Continent this autumn for the first time in many years. The lovely Empress, who has suffered so much unhappiness, was 87 last May. Her health is failing, but she will not admit it.

A Spanish aristocrat by birth, the Empress did much to bring about the marriage of King Alfonso and Princess Ena of Battenberg, her favorite goddaughter.

Eugenie has plainly expressed her opinion that Princess Henry of Battenberg is overacting part of the precise British mother-in-law; that she should be blind to Alfonso's peccadillos, for he is very much in love with his wife.

Uses 'Movies' in Campaign for Office

Candidate Shows Himself Visiting Sick, Refusing Bribe and in Act of Giving Away Money.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—A French politician has adopted a time and labor saving scheme to urge his claims on his constituents.

Instead of haranguing the voters, he invites them to a cinematograph. There to the strains of popular music one or two picture comedies are shown.

Then the candidate appears on the screen. He is seen addressing a meeting, shaking hands with the prefect and entering his motor car. Another reel shows him helping an old woman load her donkey, indignantly refusing a bribe, and paying a visit to an old man stretched on a bed of illness.

In the last picture the candidate proves his heart is in the right place by discreetly slipping a bank note in the sick man's hand.

JEWEL THIEVES TRUST HARVEST IS $1,662,500

At Least Six Bands Are in the International Combine—Two of Them Are American.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—About $1,662,500 of jewels, gold and bonds has been stolen during the last eighteen months by the members of a gigantic international trust of jewel thieves.

Of all these immensely valuable gems few have been recovered, despite the earnest and sagacious efforts of the detectives of seven countries, America, England, Russia, Belgium, France, Holland and Germany.

No fewer than sixteen jewel dealers in Paris, all unmarried and all without large capital, have retired from business and left France in the last eighteen months. The detectives say, too, that the best friends of nine of the sixteen do not know where they are.

The police regard the exodus as highly suspicious as confirming the existence of the International Jewel Thieves' Trust.

Equally significant it is that traffic in jewels has increased considerably recently in several East Indian and South American cities.

These astounding statements are made on the authority of the highest officials of Scotland Yard. They say that the search for Max Mayer's $750,000 pearl necklace, stolen in transit by registered mail from London to Paris last July, revealed the existence of this international trust of jewel thieves.

The trust comprises at least six bands of scientific thieves. In the actual robberies, each band works by itself, they combine only to dispose of their spoils. Two of the bands are American, one is composed mainly of Russians, another of Parisians, a third of Englishmen.

The Scotland Yard detectives assert the bands combined two years ago so that thye might find new markets and so outwit the police of Europe and America, who had learned where they sold their loot.

Said a Scotland Yard inspector today:

"There is no business so profitable as that of jewel-thieving on a wholesale scale, and accordingly the appointment of 50 or so trustworthy agents in the hitherto unexploited cities of far-off continents, though perhaps expensive for one or two gangs to attempt alone, became a simple proposition for half a dozen to handle.

"A rope of 50 pearls can be broken up, and through this organization be disposed of in a dozen cities as far apart as Melbourne and Pekin."

MILITANTS TURN ENGLISH LORDS INTO FIREMEN

Aristocracy Has Frequent Drills With Ladders and Hose, Fearing Suffragette Outbreaks.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—King George has just given the Duke of Devonshire a rap on the knuckles, which causes the duke to regard with mixed feelings the anticipated visit in December of the King and Queen to his splendid seat, Chatsworth House, Derbyshire.

Still the suffragette arson squad may relieve the duke of his embarrassment. Thanks to them, he, like all other aristocrats, is not certain his ancestral halls will stand during the night.

The fire drill has become a popular pastime with house parties all over the country this summer. In one or two instances practical jokers have given false alarms about midnight, it having been voted first-rate fun to see the ladies of the party rushing for fire escapes in flimsy attire. But mostly the game is practiced in all earnestness.

Lord Brassey, long an expert fire fighter, took a leading part in extinguishing what might have been a bad fire at his beautiful place, Normanhurst, near Battle Sussex.

Lady Cicily Baillie-Hamilton is another enthusiast who has just joined the Tarporly fire brigade and wears her gold badge of office with conspicuous pride. The Earl of Londesborough, who has had practical experience, has instituted weekly fire drills at Blankney Hall. Viscount Hamden, the Marquis of Broadalbane, the Dukes of Marlborough and Devonshire, Earl De La Warr, the Earl of Ilchester, the Countess of Derby and the Duchess of Winchelsea are but a few of the society people who have taken advantage of their vacation to throw themselves with zest into the task of thwarting suffragist incendiaries.

Marie Corelli May Be 'Adored One' of Dramatist Barrie

Novelist Scorns Men and Playwright Shuns Women, but Each Attracts the Other.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Sir James Barrie and George Bernard Shaw had a somewhat doleful meeting at the Adelphi Hotel, where they both live, the other morning. They united in abusing the public dramatic critics who treated their new plays, "Androcles and the Lion" and "The Adored One," with marked coldness. Both playwrights have left town, Barrie returning to his Scottish home, Killecrankie Cottage, which nestles amid somber hills in Perthshire.

The cottage, only recently rented by Berrie, is the basis of much amusement in London literary circles, a most surprising romance may spring out of the new tenancy. It formerly belonged to Marie Corelli, of whose work Barrie can not be said to be an admirer. They had reason to exchange correspondence over certain matters connected with the cottage, which resulted in a personal meeting in the town.

Miss Corelli was present at the first night of "The Adored One" as the author's guest, and his friends say the shy dramatist has shown himself most affable toward the fair, plump Marie, who has expressed sentiments of admiration for Barrie which are not in accordance with her usual scorn for all things masculine.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

GRANTED that the butterfly is the most prominent trimming feature of the hour, whether on small or large hats, the tendency is toward feathery decorations of various types. The ostrich plume is being used more extensively than for many years, and particularly by the Paris milliners who cater to the American trade. It is ostrich in all its curly beauty that is used to-day; the uncurled, draggy looking feather of the last few seasons having disappeared from the new hats. These mounts of ostrich may be arranged at the back or at the side where the brim breaks or curves upward.

* * *

The newest corsage sachets—to be pinned somewhere beneath the transparent veiling of the waist—are small colored satin bags incased in real cluny lace cases. The pink, blue or lavender satin cases are slipped into the outer lace cases and fastened with removable ribbons, so that different colored satin cases may be used. It is not a difficult undertaking to make these dainty corsage sachets at home.

* * *

The demand for fur of every description has brought into existence the imitation for cloths, which are so cleverly made that it requires a careful scrutiny to discover the difference between the broadtail cloth and the genuine pelt. The mole pelt has been equally well imitated, and, like the broadtail, comes in the natural coloring, black and green. These fur cloths are all-silk materials, and, combined with velvet, make very handsome street costumes.

* * *

Small clusters of bright-colored, unnatural looking fruits give the desired dash of color to many of the little hats which tilt over the face and flare high in the back. This is a development of the niniche hat, or rather, one should say, an adaptation. In order to make it more becoming the brim in the front is broken, as is shown in the drawing, for unless one is blessed with the piquant type of countenance these hats accentuate one's age. The piquant face, with small features, such as nine out of ten French women possess, is the only type that looks well in the very small hats, though many of them are imported and worn by Americans who in other matters of dress have unquestioned taste. The majority of these little hats are fashioned from taffeta or velvet.

* * *

Supple white satin is the favorite material of milliners to-day. It is combined with linen and with velvet or moire.

One of the newest face veils is made of fine silk tulle in a pale shade of heliotrope with tiny pin dots all over its surface.

Shoe buckles are mounted on strips of velvet the color of the gown with which they are worn. Some are arranged on tongues of plaited velvet. Buckles made of pale blue, pink and yellow satin and chiffon roses are worn on pale colored satin evening slippers.

* * *

It is the fashion to cover the coat collar with something white, and an attractive choice is the negligee of white crepe de chine or marquisette, made in the Robespierre manner and falling well over the shoulders and fronts of the coat.

* * *

The skirt in tiers is a success of the season. These skirts have taken the fancy of women—so long used to straight or draped effects. Three tiers is the favorite style. Plaid materials are the craze and one sees tiered skirts with alternate plain and plaid flounces to the waistline, the bright plaid appearing again as a trimming on the jacket.

* * *

Real tortoise shell is the ideal thing for hairpins. The present style of hair dressing demands that several of these pins should be of the broad fork shape and that the prongs should be rather short. I have seen these real tortoise shell pins inset with silver with good effect. I have also seen them rimmed in finely cut jet.

For blonde hair the pale shade of tortoise shell gives a dainty appearance, while red-gold hair looks best when arranged with cut jet pins or those made of dark tortoise shell incrusted with little jet facets.

* * *

Velvet ribbons edged with picot are now very much used by the best Parisian milliners. Some of these ribbons are very wide, while others are comparatively narrow. Individual taste is permitted great freedom this season. A Panama would look well if trimmed with wine red velvet ribbons or with a long length of velvet ribbon in a strong shade of Parma velvet.

* * *

The latest style of hairdressing for the daytime calls for a few very good pins in tortoise shell or dull silver. Every effort is made to do away with anything like an artificial appearance and the woman or girl who can arrange her hair with a single comb is the admired of all.

* * *

Newest shoes may have high Louis XV heels, but they have broad soles, and they are mostly laced up over the ankles.

* * *

Collarettes of marabou are short and wide and finished with a bow and ends. They come in exquisite chinchilla mixture, a softly shaded gray and a variety of new Parisian shades.

* * *

Close-fitting hats, with outstanding trimming, are as much in vogue as ever. The trimming may be either feather, fancy or loops of ribbon and velvet in fantastic shape.

TIGHTEST OF TIGHT GOWNS NEWPORT IS STARTLED AGAIN

MRS. "REGGIE" BROOKS, snapped on a Newport street as she startled the ultra fashionable residents of that resort. She is shown wearing the new minaret gown, which is the tightest of the many variations of the clinging skirts seen heretofore.

Slant of the New Hat

The majority of the new autumn hats are squashed down over one eye, generally the right one, and are raised high on the other side, showing a wide expanse of the hair. This gives a very jaunty air to the hat, which is accentuated by the curve of the brim and the trimming. The effect is rakish, that fact must be admitted, but these hats are universally becoming, for the large features of the average American require this slanting line across the front, with the height at the side, tending toward the back. Whether the hats flare on one side or not, they set low on the head.

The popular sailor shape is well to the fore among the new hats, though shown in many modifications. The patent leather sailor brought out by one of the leading Paris milliners is shown as a morning and rough wear hat at the best shops.

* * *

Rough-surfaced cottons closely resemble their woolen prototypes, and they are likely to be worn well into autumn. Cotton sponge cloths, cotton plushes, cotton velvets, it is predicted, will be worn throughout the winter.

Foreword

It is not the purpose of the management of the HOTEL ANSLEY to overrate or exaggerate its attractiveness, but rather to keep within the bounds of conservatism. One visit to the lobby, cafes and rathskeller will give one an idea of the beauty of these rooms—that suggest only refinement and elegance.

COAT AND SKIRT TO REIGN AGAIN SAY MODISTES

Simplicity Will Be Sought, but Masculine Severity Will Be Carefully Avoided.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—At a time when the newspapers are so ardently and earnestly discussing the new Paris fashions of the X-ray gown it is pleasing to discover that there will be worn this autumn and winter some smart and chic gowns of another kind.

The Times has just published an article which, to one who has not been fully initiated into the mysteries of feminine apparel, seems to be a worth while discussion of the ever present problem of what may be called chicness. The Times says:

"Quite the most interesting of the 'Fantasies sur le Costume Moderne' recently exhibited in London by Leon Bakst take the form of a coat and skirt. Indeed, that is partly why these 'fantasies' are of such interest to the practical student of dress.

"For no matter how variable the modes, the coat and skirt always persists; it is only in its precise form that there is continual change. Again, though these drawings are frankly fantasies, the artist has expressed in them the salient points of to-day's fashions. The picturesque aspect of the coat, the importance of the waistcoat, the narrowness and the straightness of the skirt are well noted. In each the idea is so simple and yet so wonderfully effective. Simplicity also characterizes the decoration. So that many a couturier with a too generous bias to ornament might learn from them some useful lessons in the art of restraint.

"The best designers, however, have for the last few years set a standard in this matter. And, judging from the new models displayed for the early autumn, they still maintain this ideal. Not for the first time do we see that because the coat is perfectly cut and the skirt cleverly arranged a smart effect is obtained. In many instances, however, the waistcoat is extremely decorative, a beautiful brocade being considered none too luxurious a material for this detail.

Skirts Not to Be Wider.

"Meanwhile let no optimist hope for a widening of the skirt. For, though it is possible that Paris may exert her influence in this direction when October is here, she seems at present to be taking an impish delight in flouting those who criticise the scantiness of the season's models by giving the new models an even narrower effect than any which have preceded them. This is made possible in some instances by the manner in which the fronts are crossed, and without seam, for plenty of freedom is thus insured with the narrowest possible appearance.

"The picturesque note which has recently characterized the coat-and-skirt intended for full dress occasions is still maintained. Everything that is stiff and formal is avoided. Even when a coat is girt with the wide belt which might easily endow it with a rigid appearance, care is taken that the belt shall be draped with an effect of studied carelessness. The tunics, too, with which many of these dresses are designed, serve to emphasize their picturesque character.

Masculine Effect Avoided.

"Again, the waistcoat is often arranged in the most unexpected manner. Sometimes it is a mere continuation of the revers very cleverly contrived. But, whatever be the idea, it never savors of the severe, such as distinguished the woman's waistcoat of twenty or thirty years ago. Sometimes, too, the contrast between the materials of the coat and the skirt achieve picturesque results. And never is the effect more striking than when the skirt is of cloth and the coat of white or cream tulle. The taste for such a combination of materials is essentially French.

Wonderful Parisian Trosseau Is Being Prepared for Miss Marion Glen Coats.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Prominent among September brides will be Miss Marion Glen Coats, who is marrying Major Parsons on the tenth. A truly wonderful Parisian trousseau is being prepared for her, the chief gem train composed entirely of old French lace.

Another charming creation is a gown of fine suede cloth in delicate champagne color. The skirt falls in rich sculptured folds around the tall figure of the wearer and opens slightly in a few fan pleats in the front, while the folds are caught together at the sides with a silk cord.

Buttoning about the height of the knees, the coat is of old blue charmeuse lined with champagne cloth; there is a light fall of lace, of the color of clotted cream, on either side. The sleeves are innocent of a shoulder seam, but are broken at the elbow with a line of piping, the long cuff being split open to show a doublure of champagne cloth.

Over the square sailor collar is a second collar of old blue charmeuse bordered with a strip of skunk fur. The corsage is a parchment lace with a shaped band of blue charmeuse.

The bust is partially hidden by a dentelle; under this is faintly seen an embroidery of pale pink rosebuds and ciel blue threaded ribbon.

A little round hat of black velvet, which fits well down over the head, framing the face, is encircled with blue feathers, ending in an upstanding plume tied near the base in the new fashion.

$500 a Pound Price Of White Human Hair

Warm Titian Glow Is Shade Next in Demand, Say Toupee Makers.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Pure white human hair is quoted at $500 a pound. "Give us hair," cry the bald. "Give us gold," retort those who possess "woman's crowning glory."

Some offer their locks by the foot to the dealers; others demand $25, $50—almost any extravagant price. Many women sell their "combings" to be made into toupees and fringes.

Next to snow-white hair that with the warm "Titian glow" is rarest.

Moonstones and Opals To Deck Fair Ladies

London Society Will Wear Oriental Charms, Too, of Amethyst, Torquoise and Onyx.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Moonstones in early Celtic mountings of gold, silver and platinum will be fashionable this season. Black opals are second favorites. Pendants are taking the place of necklets. Earrings have long hanging lobes.

Women with a taste for the Oriental are adorning themselves with charms suspended from a long nek chain. They are carved out of amethyst, turquoise, onyx, lads lazuli and other stones, and represent peacocks and elephants and strange Eastern beasts.

IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC

Miss Mamie Hays, who has been studying voice in New York for some time, will give a song recital at Cable Hall on Tuesday evening, September 16, at 8:30 o'clock.

This announcement will be happily received by those who have heard Miss Hays sing. A beautiful and especially pleasing program has been arranged. Miss Hays has a coloratura soprano voice of range and sweetness. She will return to New York to resume her studies at an early date, and this will be the only opportunity the music-loving public will have of hearing her for some time.

This recital is given for the benefit of the Druid Hills Methodist Sunday school, primary department. Tickets may be had at Cable Hall and Phillips & Crew's.

The following musical program will be rendered at the First Baptist Church to-day under the direction of J. P. O'Donnelly, organist:

KAISER'S SONS ON INCOGNITO ENGLISH VISIT

Crown Prince of Germany, Wife and Three Brothers Wandering Through Island.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Four of Emperor William's sons have invaded England recently. They are in the strictest incognito, which is just as well, else some ultra-jingoes would be crying, "German spies."

Crown Prince William and his vivacious wife have been traveling for a fortnight as the Count and Countess of Hohenstein of Potsdam. They stayed for some days at Clifton. The Crown Princess also tried the famous waters at Bath.

Prince August William and Prince Eitel Frederick have been seen promenading the streets of Edinburgh, while the youngest son, Joachim, is also somewhere in Scotland.

The Kaiser readily gave his sons permission to visit England on the strict understanding, however, that they were to go about as quietly as possible, just like ordinary private citizens.

This was precisely what his sons wanted, more especially the Crown Prince, who, although appearing anti-British when his countrymen expect him to be so, is really devoted to everything English.

Young Prince Joachim, who is the livellest of the four, positively refused to have any attendants, and his erratic movements have caused some anxiety to the German Embassy.

Bagpipe Craze to Come to America

Englishmen Have Taken Up Scottish Instruments and Visitors From U. S. Follow Example.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—There is a craze to learn to play the inspiring if not always tuneful bagpipes, and Americans are among the most eager to master Scotland's national musical instrument.

The Prince of Wales set the fashion. He learned the bagpipes at Oxford and now delights his Scottish friends by skirling "The Flowers of the Forest" and "The Land of the Seal."

"Usually I have about thirty pupils a year, but at the moment I have as many as sixteen at once," said O. H. Starck, the pipe-major of the London Irish Rifles, who makes and teaches the bagpipes.

"An American told me the other day I ought to go out there. 'There's a fortune for you there just now,' he said. 'People are crazy to learn the bagpipes and to hear them played.'"

MODISTES MAKE DRESS ON TRAIN TO WIN WAGER

Six Midinettes of Famous Paris Establishment Finish Fashionable Gown in Tube.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—On a bet six midinettes, belonging to a famous Paris dressmaking establishment, cut out and made a fashionable dress during a journey of twenty minutes in a tube train. The dress is of pink chiffon, designed in the latest style, with a draped tunic and lavish ornamentation.

The design was submitted to the midinettes as they boarded a train on the Metropolitan Railway at the Porte d'Orleans station. As soon as the train started the six girls fell to work. Each had a particular task. One of them made a sleeve, another the other sleeve, another the bodice, a fourth the skirt, while the fifth and sixth affixed hooks and eyes and attached trimmings.

Half way through the last tunnel the final stitch was put in, and as the train drew up at the terminal station at the Porte de Clignacourt the girls stepped from their seats and held out the finished dress with a shout of triumph.

HIP SASHES APPEAR.

Hip sashes appear on most of the new dresses; they offer an opportunity for introducing color or contrast of shades and materials in the dresses.

CITIZENS OF U.S. IN PERIL AS MEXICAN WAR GROWS

Rebel Forces Swarm Seven States and Problem of Deporting Americans Faces Government. Powers Call for Protection.

Madero's Brother Takes Field, While Huerta Is Unable to Send Aid to Disease Stricken Torreon—Communication Cut.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Official information has reached the State Department that rebel activities throughout Mexico are increasing, and that the Constitutionalists are gaining ground every 24 hours.

Rebel campaigns are strong in seven States—Sonora, Coahuilla, Chihuahua, Tabasco, Aguas Callentes, Zacatecas and Yucatan.

This has brought increased peril to the United States citizens. There are in Mexico at the present time 8,000 Americans. Officials of the Latin-American Bureau stated to-day that it would require at least $100 each to remove all the Americans from the zone of warfare in Mexico, or a total of $800,000.

3,200 Americans to Stay.

According to information received at the bureau, it is believed that about 3,200 Americans have decided to stay in Mexico, leaving 4,800 to be removed.

According to these officials, this country will have to expend nearly $500,000 to rescue its citizens.

Official reports have been received showing that the rebels are slowly closing in on Mexico City, and it is probable that at the time set for the national "election" on October 26 Huerta will be in control of only the territory surrounding his capital.

Other striking developments of the Mexican situation to-day were:

News that an epidemic of disease had broken out in Torreon, where there are many Americans.

About 100 Americans and 18 other foreigners are marching overland from Torreon to Tampico and Monterey. All these Americans would be practically helpless if any attack were made upon them by the rebel forces.

Spain and a few other foreign Governments, as well as the Chinese Government, have requested the State Department to protect their citizens in Mexico.

Madero Leading Revolt.

Raoul Madero, brother of Francisco I. Madero, late President of Mexico, has organized a new revolt and has taken the field as the head of 1,500 men and is marching on Aguas Calientes, the chief city of the State of the same name.

The sanitary and other vital conditions at plague stricken Torreon, as reported to the State Department by Consul Silliman, at Caltillo, reveal a shocking state of affairs. The city is isolated from Mexico. General Bravo, the Federal officer in command, is unable to have serum, antitoxin or even food brought into the city.

Mexican Smugglers Taken in U. S. in Battle.

CARRIZO SPRINGS, TEXAS, Sept. 13.—After a short but terrific fight, the band of Mexican ammunition smugglers which killed Deputy Sheriff M. Ortiz were captured near here to-day by a detachment of United States troops. One Mexican was killed and two badly wounded during the engagement.

Members of the band which numbered fourteen and which was led by an American were brought to Wind Mill Ranch, where they are being held to-night pending orders from Colonel Sibley, in command of the post here.

For 48 hours the American troops rode through the thorny brush after the smugglers. They were finally located near the Wind Mill Ranch and the soldiers closed in on them. Lieutenant McLane ordered his troopers to fire. At the first volley one of the fugitives fell dead. Two more threw up their hands and toppled from their horses.

Realizing escape was cut off, the American leader hoisted a white handkerchief upon the end of a rifle while his companions threw their firearms to the ground and held their arms in the air.

BREWSTER HELD FOR FIGHT OVER PAIR OF SHOES

Son of Prominent Atlanta Attorney Is Charged With Striking Marietta Street Merchant.

IS RELEASED ON BOND

Law Student Takes Part of Cook, Who Had Made Purchase of Footwear.

W. E. Brewster, son of Colonel P. H. Brewster, of the law firm of Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heyman, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of disorderly conduct growing out of an altercation with Abraham Fleshner, a merchant at No. 220 Marietta street. Young Brewster was taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon and later released on a $15.75 bond.

The difficulty arose over the purchase of a pair of shoes by Brewster's negro cook.

Brewster, according to the merchant's story to the police, came into his store about 8 o'clock Saturday night and began to argue about the shoes which the negro cook had purchased, and which she later returned on the grounds that they were not satisfactory. In the trouble which followed Brewster is said to have struck the merchant in the face. He was placed under arrest by policemen, who were called to the scene.

Young Brewster at the present time is taking a course in law at the university preparatory to entering the firm with which his father is connected.

Dog Is Principal Beneficiary in Will

Wealthy Wisconsin Man Leaves Pet to Friend, but Forgets Him Otherwise.

LACROSSE, WIS., Sept. 13.—A dog—just a mangy animal with no pedigree at all, but known as the best friend of his owner, the late John Hanson, of Hamilton—is mentioned as the principal bequest in the will of Hanson, which was filed for probate to-day

Hanson left much other property—fine farms and a strongbox filled with mortgages—but before disposing of anything else he bequeathed the dog, with much detail as to the way he should be treated, to his friend, Lars Fjedstad, of Lacrosse.

The dog is all Fjedstad receives from the estate, which is distributed among the relatives in Wisconsin and Norway.

Golf Holds Wilson In Vermont Hills

President's Summer Home Has Greatest Number of Guests of This Season.

WINDSOR, VT., Sept. 13.—Golf and automobiling were on President Wilson's program to-day. The bracing air of Cornish has had such an exhilarating effect on him that he may stay here several days longer than he planned when he left Washington.

Harlakenden House now has the greatest number of house guests it has had this summer. The Misses Lucy and Marion Smith, of New Orleans, and Miss Katherine Minahan, of Orange, N. J., are among them. The latter, who is a member of the cast of "The Good Little Devil," participated in the performance of "The Sanctuary" Friday evening by whistling the music of "The Hermit Trush," which Miss Margaret Wilson sang.

'Professor' Beavers To Teach Etiquette

Chief to Preside at School Where Patrolmen Will Learn Rules of Propriety.

Atlanta police are going to school following an official call Saturday night by Chief Beavers, who declared that, although his men were fine fellows, he was not fully satisfied with their "etiquette." The first session will be held next Tuesday night.

Tentative rules adopted by the Chief indicate such instruction as the "proper care of the nails," the "how and when to say 'pardon'"—in fact, everything which comes in the category of proper "etiquette."

School will be divided into three divisions of three platoons each, according to the Chief.

Princess Calls 'Trot' Dances Beauty Foes

'American Girls Are Losing Their Freshness and Sweetness as Result of Revels.'

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Princess Lowenstein, the widow of a Russian nobleman and soldier who fell in the Philippines at the time Aguinaldo was captured, warns American girls against turkey trotting as a foe to beauty.

"These wild new dances," the Princess said, "which your girls are doing day in and day out, are showing their effects. The dancers get to look like old, haggard women. The American girl is noted for her looks, and justly, too.

"But she will certainly lose all her freshness and sweetness if she persists in keeping up this everlasting bacchanalian dancing."

Marshall at Last Finds $2,000 House

Vice President Keeps Location Secret Fearing a Raise in Rent by Landlord.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—After long months of weary house hunting, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have found a house which comes well within the $2,000 the Vice President feels he can afford for house rent out of his $12,000 salary.

Lest some envious person see their house and try to raise the bid on it, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall are refusing to tell its exact location.

It is admitted, however, that it is on the fashionable Avenue of the Presidents.

Vincent Astor Buys Hydro-Aeroplane

Turns Deaf Ear to Friends Who Would Dissuade Him From Flights.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Vincent Astor arrived at Rhinebeck to-day on his yacht, the Noma, and brought along a hydro-aeroplane, in which he plans to make some trial flights in the next few days.

His friends are trying to dissuade him from the project, but he is determined to make a trial of the air and water craft by flying up and down the Hudson. The machine is a Curtiss model.

Washington Society Hears of Wylie Suit

Reported She Will at Last Seek Freedom From Her Eloping Husband.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Society is discussing with great interest a rumor that Mrs. Horace Wylie is about to begin proceedings to obtain a divorce from her eloping husband which will enable him to marry the companion of his flight, Mrs. Philip Hichborn.

Should Mrs. Wylie take the step which friends have been urging her to take it will probably end one of the most distressing chapters in the social history of the capital.

The 400 here had hardly recovered from the shock of the elopment of Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn when it was again startled by the suicide of Philip Hichborn, the deserted husband. Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn were living in France at the time of the suicide and it is said that the shock nearly prostrated Mrs. Hoyt, mother of Mrs. Hichborn.

Hill Gets New Atlanta Judgeship

Roan Goes to Appellate Bench

Changes Likely Effective Oct. 6

In center is Judge Benjamin H. Hill, named to the judgeship of the newly created Atlanta circuit. This picture was taken Saturday at the Georgian Terrace Hotel. Below are Judge L. S. Roan, on right, and Charles S. Reid, snapped at the barbecue given court officials and attaches Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner.

Reid Is Given Stone Mountain Place—Napier Succeeds Him as Solicitor.

Benjamin H. Hill, ranking judge of the appellate court bench, widely known as a jurist of notable accomplishments, and member of a family distinguished in Georgia's history, was appointed Saturday by Governor J. M. Slaton to the judgeship of the new Atlanta circuit created by the last session of the State Legislature.

Four appointments making important changes on the Georgia bench were announced simultaneously by the Governor. They were:

Benjamin H. Hill, from the State Court of Appeals to the new division of the Atlanta circuit.

L. S. Roan, from the judgeship of the Stone Mountain circuit to Judge Hill's place on the appellate court bench.

Charles S. Reid, Solicitor General of the Stone Mountain circuit, to the judgeship of the same circuit.

George M. Napier, of Decatur, as Solicitor General of the Stone Mountain circuit to succeed Reid.

All of the appointments probably will go into effect October 6, the date upon which the new docket of the Court of Appeals will be called.

14-CENT COTTON AND BUMPER CROP FORETELL REIGN OF PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT GEORGIA

Fine Yield of Corn, Oats and Hay, With Top Prices for Staple's By-Products, Is Expected to Give the State Its Banner Year.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM IS EVIDENT IN ALL BUSINESS

Strict Economy Practiced by Farmers Makes Margin of Profit Tremendous---Bankers Are Jubilant, While Merchants Predict Great Season.

By M. A. ROSE.

Georgia, the whole Southeast, and Atlanta—because it is the commercial and financial center of the Southeast—will enter upon one of the most prosperous eras any section of the nation ever has enjoyed when the cotton crop is moving in earnest this fall—by October 1 at the latest.

In 1911, all seasons put their heads together in kindly conspiracy, and Georgia grew 2,768,627 bales of cottton, the greatest crop the historic State ever knew. It is the fashion to quote 1911 as the most wonderful year the State could expect. Unmistakable signs show 1913 will overtop 1911.

Here is the proof:

In 1911 Georgia grew, or let us say gathered—for it grew thousands of bales which never were ginned or even picked—2,768,627 bales of cotton. But the whole South grew 15,622,701 bales, excluding linters. Prices were correspondingly low. Georgia got about $124,500,000 for its 1911 crop.

Almost ready for the gins to-day are 2,250,000 bales. Indications are that this crop will bring Georgia $155,500,000, for 14-cent middling cotton is a probability, not a possibility.

Of this $155,000,000 a much greater proportion will be profit than accrued from the banner crop. Four reasons are apparent: This is a yield produced at less cost than any previous crop; drouth in the West will make the total yield short of the world's actual needs, particularly as the left-over supply is abnormally small; Georgia will spend less for corn, hay and oats than ever before, having record-breaking crops of all three food-stuffs; the shortage of corn, hay and oats will mean good prices for that most important by-product of cottton, cotton seed.

SHORT CORN CROP INEVITABLE.

Consider the last first, because it has been overlooked generally.

Drouth in Kansas and the other great agricultural States of the West and Southwest makes a short crop of corn inevitable. Corn is selling at an abnormally high price—around 77 cents at Chicago and St. Louis for the actual stuff.

Seventy-seven cent corn means high beef and pork. It's pretty expensive to fatten hogs or cattle for market on that sort of diet. High pork spells high lard. High lard means greater demand for cotton seed oil products, so much so that the cotton seed oil speculator watches the lard market as closely as he does the oil quotations. Expensive feed, too, means a shortage of cattle for slaughter and a shortage of blood and bone fertilizer, the packers' by-product, which is just where cotton seed meal fertilizers may reap a harvest. Expensive corn, again, insures greater demand for cotton seed hulls as cattle feed.

No one wants to go on record as saying that cotton seed will sell at a record price. But it is evident it will not be a drug on the market. Already cotton seed is selling for $20 a ton and better in South Georgia.

Crushers say Georgia will send 900,000 tons of seed to oil mills this fall. At $20 a ton that is $180,000,000. Add that to $155,000,000 for the lint—it makes one dizzy!

Back to the first reason for Georgia's enormous prospective profits. Everyone recognizes that economy has been the watchword for the year. The farmer has bought as little as possible at the store. He has borrowed as little money as possible. He has cut down his supply of fertilizer. The old harness, the old wagon, the same old mule, the same overalls, have served another season. Small expense and good selling price make excellent profits.

LITTLE COTTON IN WEST.

Texas and Oklahoma, experts say, will produce not more than 4,000,000 bales this year, as against 5,278,500 in 1911. Alabama and Mississippi show severe deterioration through the combined malevolence of bad weather and insects. Louisiana never has been a factor in the cotton world since the boll weevil invaded the Creole State. The Southeast will make, in proportion, the best crop of all the belt.

All this would be of little avail if the Georgia farmer had to spend all the money he got for corn, hay and oats to feed his mules. In past years he has done this, but this year he will not. Georgia this year produced the largest corn crop in its history. The hay and oat crops also were good. It would be ruinous to spend the proceeds even from 14-cent cotton for 77-cent corn. Fortunately, in 1913 Georgia will not.

PROSPERITY ERA SEEN BY GEORGIA BANKERS

Biggest Money Crop in Years Believed To Be Already Assured Farmers, While City Merchants Are Jubilant.

There is some difference of opinion just now as to the probable size of the crop in this State. Gentlemen otherwise calm and serene are wont to grow purplish of face and thump desks when the subject is argued.

J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture for the State, says Georgia will gin 2,000,000 bales of cotton. He believes dry weather has lopped 400,000 to 500,000 bales from the early prospect.

A. P. Coles, who has made the estimate for the Central Bank and Trust Corporation for seven years and missed it not more than 50,000 bales in the seven, puts the crop at 2,600,000 bales. A favorite estimate is 2,500,000 bales. Other figures stand in order between these two extremes.

GREAT PROFIT ASSURED.

Just to stay out of the argument, 2,250,000 bales has been selected as the basis for computations given here. It does not affect the argument. If the crop is 2,000,000 bales, Georgia still will make an enormous profit. If Georgia's crop is 2,600,00 bales—all the better.

As to 14-cent cotton—it is not an impossibility, but a probability. Thirteen cents now is being paid at Savannah for middling. That part of the crop which has been ginned is being sold freely. Although little has been said about it, there undoubtedly is a good deal of "distress cotton" on the market—cotton sold to pay debts which are pressing. With continued reports of bad weather in the West, or anything like an early frost, and consequent shortened yield, the market may jump again.

And there is little cotton left for the mills of the world to use. The visible supply at the end of the cotton year, August 30, was in round figures only 2,000,000 bales. The crop has been estimated at 12,900,000 bales. That leaves 14,900,000 bales for the world to use, and the mills of Europe, Japan, India, China and the United States want 16,000,000 bales yearly now, the best authorities agree.

It looks like a "bull" year.

Georgia has been through the test of fire. The year has been an ordeal. But harvest time finds sagacious business men in jubilant mood. Cheerfulness amounting almost to exultation is the keynote of sentiment to-day among the shrewdest. Expressions of the city's recognized leaders are unanimous in their forecast of prosperity.

Georgia Is To Be Envied, Declares Governor Slaton

GEORGIA is to be envied. The season now opening will bring to this most favored State the blessings of plenty and prosperity dispensed with lavish hand. Every circumstance is in collusion to make this a record year.

Georgia this year will make a reasonable cotton crop. The other States will have short yields. Georgia's, then, will be big in relation to the total, and every Georgian should get good prices for his cotton.

But that is not all. The best part of it is that not all the millions which come into the State for cotton will go out this year for hay, corn and oats. Georgia this year raised what seems conceded to be the largest corn crop in its history. It has hay and oats in large quantities as well, while the nation's yields of all these feed stuffs is short, because of drouth.

Georgia has every climate from the cold winters of North Georgia, which serve to perfect the apples of Habersham County, to the almost tropical mildness of the coast, where you can see rice fields. Between are corn and cotton, oats and hay, peaches and melons, sugar cane, yams and potatoes. We depend, not on ditches which may go dry, but upon the kindly rains from the Almighty, and are not disappointed. And in this wonderful State live the nation's finest people.

What more could Georgia ask?

---GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

Looks for Huge Crop, Easily 2,600,000 Bales

A. P. Coles, of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, is convinced there will be a huge crop in Georgia, and he never before has missed it far. He writes to the country banks:

"We have made careful inquiry and considerable personal inspection of the crops of Georgia. Information compiled from reliable sources leads us to believe that we are on the eve of harvesting a bumper crop in Georgia, not only of cotton, but of corn. We believe that with an open fall and a reasonably late frost the cotton crop in Georgia will easily reach 2,600,000 bales and that the corn crop is probably by far the best that has ever been produced in this State, all of which means prosperity in Georgia, at least temporarily.

"There is no reason why a sufficient amount of funds can not be obtained to move the cotton crop, provided the bankers, farmers and merchants work in harmony. Country bankers, especially those located in the cotton districts, should endeavor to educate the farmers to the habit of depositing checks received for the sale of cotton and paying their debts by check. This would go a long way toward relieving the currency stringency during the cotton-moving period.

"We confidently expect a prosperous fall and good business."

City Banker's Views Give Cheerful Analysis

"I see no reason," says Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, "why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity.

"Now, just take stock of the year just closing. Notwithstanding the fact that the cotton crop for 1912 was 1,000,000 bales short of the 1911 crop, there have been no failures of importance among banks or business houses. The failures were few and, in Georgia, of comparatively little importance. That shows the banks and mercantile houses were in good shape financially and could take care of their customers who have gone through a period of depression which was more or less world-wide.

"The fall season opens with every assurance of a cotton crop 500,000 bales larger than last year and raised at less expense than any previous crop ever grown; better and more scientifically cultivated. From every point of view this augurs a splendid trade for fall.

"If the crop experiences no backset, we can reasonably expect excellent fall collections. The farmers will be able to pay their obligations to the country merchant. He will be able to pay the wholesalers in the cities, and the wholesalers in turn will reduce their indebtedness to the city banks.

"This is sure to make money easier after the crop moves, and all lines of business are bound to feel the good effect of the splendid period of prosperity now so promising.

"I believe the further consideration by the Senate of the currency bill and the expressed desire of the Senate committee to get all the facts connected with the proposed legislation is certain to lead to the passage of a wise and conservatively planned measure.

"If this is true, and such a bill is passed, it will eliminate for all time the danger to the country which arises every fall from the fear of having insufficient currency to move the crops. This will, therefore, be of special benefit to the South and the West, and I see no reason why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity."

'Flush' Year Is Time To Learn Economy

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, is not given to hyperbole. Yet he waxes enthusiastic when drawn into conversation about the crop outlook and the business prospects for Georgia this season.

"There is a general cheerful feeling," he explains. "Some of the country merchants and the city wholesalers report the best business they have had for several seasons, and, of course, they expect to do even better when the cotton crop moves.

"Outstanding obligations—some of them, to tell the exact truth, older than they should be—will be wiped out by the present crop, and settlements passing from hand to hand up the line should make money easier all around.

"But this is the time when I would preach thrift. It is something of an absurdity to preach thrift to a man who is 'broke.' But now that the Georgia farmer and the Georgia merchant have money in their pockets, or at least have money in sight, they should practice thrift. They should fortify themselves for the possible lean years. I hope there will be no lean years, but history teaches us to believe there will be.

"Remember recent history. That is all I would ask. Remember the banner crop of 1911, the extravagances which followed, and then the short crop of 1912, and what befell. If only the farmer will keep his money from burning a hole in his pocket, this season will result in permanent good for Georgia."

Chamber of Commerce Prophesies Rapid Growth

As head of a life insurance company and president of the Chamber of Commerce, Wilmer L. Moore has exceptional opportunities to study the trend of events and the condition of business. From rather an apprehensive mood in the spring, Mr. Moore has been converted into an optimist of the extreme type.

"Everything looks good to me," says Mr. Moore. "The Chamber of Commerce foresees unrivaled prosperity for Atlanta, and remarkable expansion. Plans and projects in sight, new factories and business houses inquiring for locations, and a dozen other hopeful signs give rise to our optimism.

"Business done by life insurance companies is as good a barometer of general conditions as any, I imagine. And without making any unusual effort we are doing a greater volume of business than ever before.

"Reports to us from our agents all over the South show the crop conditions in this section to be exceptionally good. Coarse grains and cotton promise great yields, and this, too, in a year when the yield of other sections will be curtailed, and prices consequently go higher. There will be business this coming year for every man of energy and enterprise, and the South will go straight ahead with its development."

Country Banker Expects Moderate Crop, Big Prices

It is interesting to know what the country banker thinks of all this. P. D. Rich, of Colquitt, was in Atlanta the past week.

The country banker, as typified by Mr. Rich, does not believe Georgia is going to make such a wonderful crop. He doesn't think it will go to 2,500,000 bales. He does think prices for cotton will be high and that Georgia, with two million, or, say, two million and a quarter bales, will get more money than it has in some years for huge crops.

The country banker finds himself able to get all the money he needs in New York and Atlanta at a rate which is not excessive.

He believes that the remarkable ginners' report of September 1 does not spell a great crop so much as it does an early movement.

Crushers Foresee Busy Season in Southeast

Cotton seed crushers are preparing for one of the greatest years in their history in Georgia. They expect a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and expect to crush, in round figures, 900,000 tons of seed, or just about the same amount as was crushed in 1911 when the banner crop was grown.

L. G. Neal, vice president of the Empire Cotton Oil Company, one of the largest corporations in the Georgia cotton seed trade, says the Empire's mills in South Georgia, numbering seven, have been operating about ten days.

"Seed now is bringing about $20 a ton," said Mr. Neal, "and is yielding about 39 gallons of good quality oil to the ton. With the exception of the fact that there is considerable moisture in the seed, there are no untoward factors to be considered this year. We look for an excellent season.

Wholesalers Are Busy Replenishing Retail Stocks

Willis E. Ragan, one of the city's prominent wholesalers and holder of extensive real estate, believes the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras it has known for years.

"We have a splendid 'house trade,'" said Mr. Ragan. "Buyers both from the city and country are thronging into the wholesale houses to replenish stocks with the advent of fall retail buying.

"It seems to me the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The cotton crop looks fine, and the price does, too. All indications are that the farmers are selling as quickly as possible and paying their debts. Everyone is feeling good and looking forward to the best business in many years. The outlook is excellent."

"Business is good. It has increased greatly this season, and shows every promise of growing even more," says Ernest L. Rhodes, wholesale milliner.

"The Atlanta houses in our line have had a remarkable volume of sales. How much of this is due to general business conditions and how much to the energy and enterprise of Atlanta jobbers, continually invading new territory, territory which always has been conceded heretofore to other cities, I can not tell without close analysis of sales records. But in all probability, the greater business is due to both factors.

"At any rate, sales are larger. That's the main thing, after all.

"If the farmers, the retailers and the merchants who sell to them will now only take advantage of their prosperity to liquidate their obligations, then we shall have ideal conditions. And I believe this will be done."

Whitehall Street Filled With Autumn Shoppers

Along Whitehall street, the center of city retail trade, the sentiment has been brighter throughout the year than in some other localities. City retail trade has held up unexpectedly well. Atlanta has not felt the depression reported from smaller centers. But the advent of fall weather, or perhaps just a foretaste of it, has put life into business in a way which has surprised even these merchants.

"We are reordering certain lines already. That, to any one acquainted with the retail business, is the most emphatic presentation I can make of business conditions in Whitehall street," said W. H. Brittain, president and manager of High's. "Our September business to date is much larger than it was at this time last year. People are eager for new things. Mail orders have started coming in rapidly. It is a regular revival of trade.

"Shoppers are numerous. It is not a question of going out after them. They are coming to the stores. People are anxious for the new things, for the better class of merchandise. Stocks have been low. Every one has bought sparingly since the first of the year, and the result now is an active movement all along the line."

"Just a little more cool weather, such as we have had a few days this past week," said J. P. Allen, "and fall business will surprise every one. People are anxious to buy. The stores are crowded. The salespeople are busy. The retailers have every cause to congratulate themselves."

Early Trade Opening Amazes Col. F. J. Paxon

F. J. Paxon is amazed at the early opening of the fall trade.

"I was surprised," says Mr. Paxon, "to return here in August and find fall ready-to-wear goods moving well. Millinery is moving particularly early. There has been a good increase in sales volume. Both the number of sales and the average amount of sales has increased.

"We expect a remarkable year, a steady growth and a rapid one through the next year.

"I am speaking not only for the business with which I am most intimately connected, but also for other enterprises in Atlanta of which I have accurate knowledge, when I say that the resumption of activity already seen, with the cotton crop not generally moving yet, is something at which to marvel.

"Georgia is to be envied, and nothing at the conference of Governors in the West attracted more attention than Governor Slaton's speech in which he extolled the virtues of his State."

Suffragette Jokes Under Ban

Keith Bars Them in Theaters

Vaudeville Magnate Won to Cause Forbids Performers From Making Light of It.

Once upon a time, and not so long ago as six months, you went to a vaudeville show and found yourself laughing—or frowning, according to your convictions—at the merry jests that were cracked in the name of woman suffrage. That was truly once upon a time. It occurs no more at the Forsyth Theater in Atlanta, nor in any of those showhouses on the Keith vaudeville circuit.

The secret of the new order is that Mr. B. F. Keith, magnate of the two-a-day world, has been converted to woman suffrage. Ar so it seems. Possessing at least some authority, he posted the notice that in his theaters all jokes tending to make light of the "votes for women" movement would be barred.

Suffragettes everywhere were gleeful. No person likes to see the cause that is near and dear to his heart placed in the class of the mother-in-law and the hobble skirt for actor people to make fun of.

The order of Mr. Keith does not apply to the Forsyth in Atlanta directly. He owns personally a string of houses in the East, and it is only these that he can command. But because he is Mr. Keith and the head of what is probably the most extensive booking agency for vaudeville people, his wishes are somewhat like commands. No actor who travels out of the Keith offices, whether he play in the Keith theaters or not, is going to risk offending the great man. And so the suffrage joke has fallen into lean days.

The Keith mandate is one of a series that marks the regeneration of the variety stage. Some years ago Mr. Keith ordered that words bordering on the profane should not be spoken in his houses. Last winter he barred the ancient mother-in-law joke. Now the suffrage prohibition.

WOMEN DROWN IN CLOUDBURST AT GOLDFIELD

Storm Sweeps Through Nevada Town and Thousands Are Lost in Property Damage.

GOLDFIELD, NEV., Sept. 13.—Two women were drowned and many thousands of dollars' damage done by a cloudburst and electric storm sweeping through the center of this town, beginning at 11 o'clock to-day and lasting three hours. Scores of houses were swept down through the two principal gulches in the camp by torrents several feet deep. Telegraph poles and bridges were destroyed and electric power cut off.

Crowds of volunteers are helping in the recovery of damaged property belonging to the sufferers. No serious interruption was caused to the mines.

The dead are Mrs. Degarmo, wife of a liveryman, and an unknown Frenchwoman.

All the buildings on First street were practically demolished. Many lives were saved by bravery of the rescuers.

COLLEGE HEAD STRIKES FATHER IN FAMILY ROW

President of Franklin Declares Epithet Hurled at Mother Provoked Assault on Aged Sire.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Sept. 13.—With the Grand Jury ordered to investigate the attack made by Dr. F. A. Hanley, president of Franklin College, upon his father, Calvin Hanley, at the latter's home in Middleton Thursday, excitement has become intense. Dr. Hanley was threatened with violence by friends of his aged father to-day when he came from Indianapolis.

Earlier Dr. Hanley issued a statement declaring the attack was justified because his father had treated his mother inhumanly, and that he was forced to the attack when he learned his father "called my mother an unspeakable name and wished she were in hell."

Dr. Hanley, a leading educator of Indianapolis, formerly pastor of the Rockefeller church in Cleveland, came, it is understood, to the home of his father and demanded an apology.

When the apology for the alleged insult was not forthcoming, the son proposed whipping the father, and in resisting, the older man fell and suffered serious injury.

In his statement Dr. Hanley admitted striking the blow.

"I tried not to hurt my father seriously," he said, "and I don't think that I did. I was brought to the deed by my father's continued cruelty to mother.

"For 25 years my mother has suffered inhuman treatment, and I have stood by, but when I heard he called my mother an unspeakable name and wished she were 'in hell,' I could be still no longer.

"I owe everything to my mother. When I was a boy, my father would want me to leave school to help on the farm. But mother picked the apples or gathered the corn that I might not miss a day from school.

"But despite everything, I still love my father, and I will do anything to help him. Only he shall not abuse mother.

"I know not what effect this bitter experience will have on my future usefulness. Whatever that may be, I do not see how I could have done otherwise. I now know I ought to have taken matters in hand years ago."

Washington to Lose Most Noted Beauty

Mrs. Spencer Cosby Accompanies Husband to New Post as Military Attache.

Special Cable to The American.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Washington will soon lose "its most beautiful woman," for Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the newly appointed military attache of the American Embassy in Paris will accompany her husband to the French capital in a few days.

Prince Christian of Prussia, during his recent American visit, saw Mrs. Cosby in Washington and exclaimed: "There is the most beautiful American woman I have ever seen." Mrs. Cosby has a fragile, delicate beauty, and her arms and hands have been pronounced by sculptors to be faultless in proportion.

West Point Schools Break Roll Record

Great Growth Is Noted and Building Is Remodeled to Meet Demands.

WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The forty-fifth annual session of the West Point public schools has opened, with the largest enrollment of pupils since their organization.

The Board of Education, anticipating an overflow of pupils, had made every preparation in the way of room and teachers.

The building is equipped with sanitary drinking fountains, electric lights, electric bells, electric clocks, telephones and all other modern conveniences.

The chair of English and history recently made vacant by the death of Miss Naomi Wells is being filled temporarily by Mrs. C. F. Pattillo, of West Point.

Mr. Walter P. Thomas, who is now serving his seventh year as superintendent, is devoting his time and efforts for the continuous growth and betterment of the schools.

Immortals to Hear Lecture on 'Tango'

Jean Richepin Will Address Academy on Subject, but It's a Play, Not a Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Paris has been excited for some days past by the report that Jean Richepin, the distinguished dramatist, who in his younger days forsook his family hearth for the love of a great actress, is about to defy conventions and stir up more scandal by addressing the immortals of the French Academy on the subject of "The Tango."

It now turns out that the "tango" of M. Richepin is a new comedy which he has completed for the Theatre Marigny in collaboration with Madame Richepin.

Next month, at a public meeting of the venerable academy, he will read extracts from the play.

MRS. GODBEE ALONE CALM IN FACE OF LIFE TERM

Woman Sentenced to Spend Rest of Days in Prison Is Confident of Final Victory—Reassures Friends Who Crowd Her Cell.

Hearing of Argument for New Trial Set for October 21 in Augusta—Daughter Is Pathetic Figure in Sensational Case.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—As calmly as she heard herself sentenced to life imprisonment, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee sits in her cell in the Jenkins County jail to-night, and hopefully discusses with her friends the prospects of obtaining a new trial. For the public she has not a word, coolly dismissing all would-be interviewers. But to her friends she readily gives audience.

Not for a moment has the woman revealed a lack of composure. Women who know her well have come weeping to her in jail; there are many men, also, to express sympathy. Some of them she greets with a slight smile, and none is as composed as she.

"I'll be freed in the long run," is her invariable response to all her sympathizers. To some she even has expressed the firm belief that her petition for a new trial will be granted.

Judge Frank Saffold, her attorney, will file immediately the formal motion for a new trial, supplementing it with extensive grounds of appeal later, probably the last of next week. The hearing has been set for October 21 in Augusta.

Many there are who believe Mrs. Godbee's calmness is due not so much to self-control and coolness of nerve as to actual indifference. Her remark is recalled, made to one of her sisters soon after judgment was pronounced on her:

"My life and liberty mean nothing to me personally. For twenty years I have been unhappy. As long as I live it will be that way. It is only for my children that I lived in the past, and for them only did I desire an acquittal."

Daughter Is Overcome.

The children, particularly her beautiful daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, are overcome by the result of the trial. They, surrounded by friends, hearing nothing but encouraging assurances that their mother would be acquitted, were hopeful of a favorable verdict. Miss Sarah Godbee gave way to her grief as she heard the judgment of the jury, and for several tense, dramatic minutes her sobs, sounding through the otherwise still courtroom, thrilled the crowds who heard her.

The girl had bravely held her place at her mother's side since the day when Mrs. Godbee shot her divorced husband, Judge Walter Godbee, and his young bride, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee. Judge Godbee was the girl's own father, but unhesitatingly she went to her mother's side and remained with her, cheerful through all the ordeal, holding her mother's hand, and patting her mother's arm and shoulder throughout the time of the trial.

But when the jury came out, and the girl, her fists clenched, her body rigid, leaned forward and heard the verdict, all her courage went. She gave a little cry, and her head fell on her mother's breast. Then it was that the mother became the comforter, and the daughter the comforted.

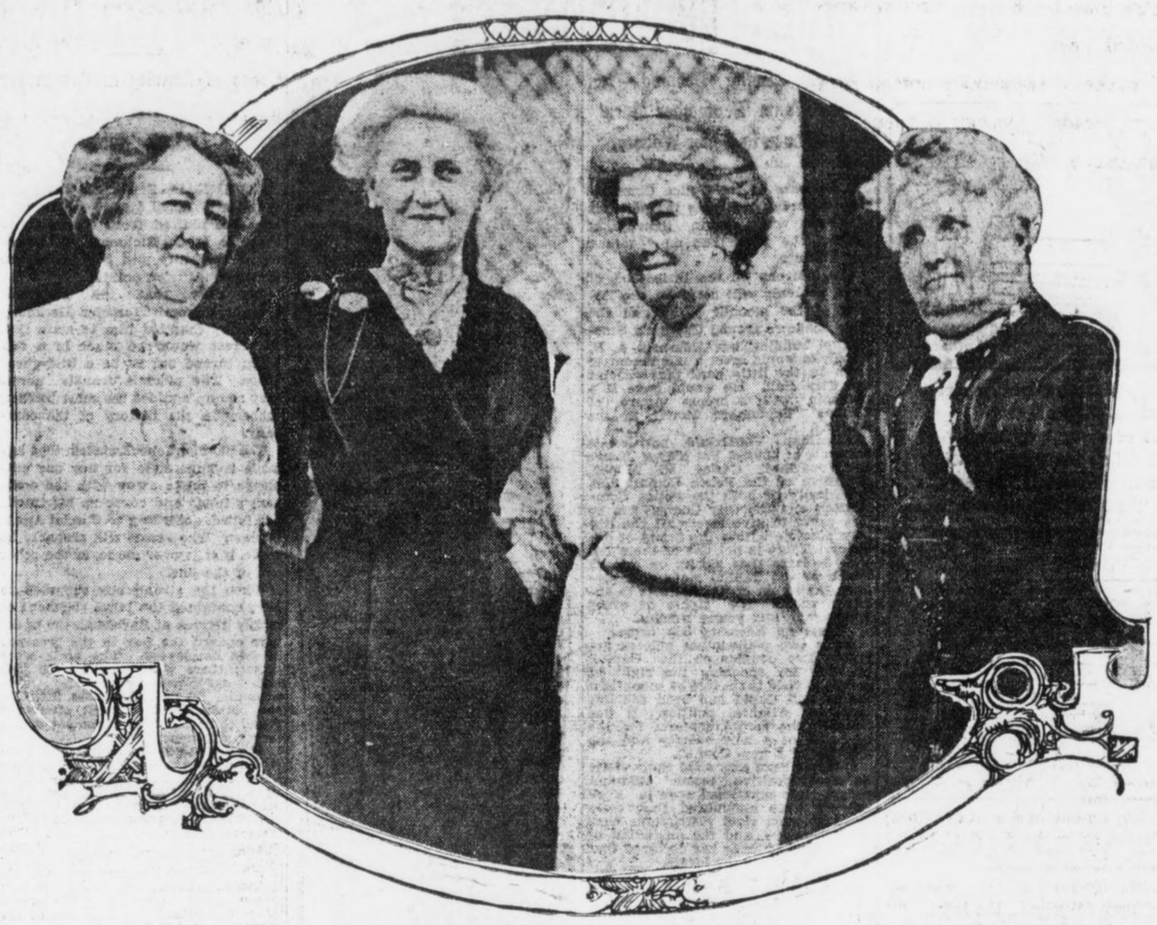
Finally Led to Home.

After a while the mother arose at the Sheriff's touch on her shoulder, and followed him to the jail, which is near the courthouse. The girl arose also, but, nearing the jail gates, her grief broke out afresh, and she seemed hysterical. At the jail she stopped, and could go no farther, making no resistance to girl friends who led her to her home.

Several persons there were, however, who went with Mrs. Godbee into the jail, and hardly for a minute has her cell been empty to-day. Later, several hours after the jury verdict came, the daughter came back, her face haggard and set, and for the moment the appearance of youth gone. She was calm until she entered the cell, and then she succumbed again to her emotion.

The verdict of life imprisonment, pronounced by Judge Hammond this morning, came as a result of Mrs. Godbee's trial for killing the young wife of Judge Godbee. Both the man and the woman were shot at the same time, and two charges of murder were entered. It is likely that Mrs. Godbee will not be tried on the charge of killing her former husband, as her commitment to jail on the life sentence will preclude the possibility of further punishment, except that of death. And it was never conceived probable that Mrs. Godbee, being a woman, would be sent to the gallows.

The sentence to life imprisonment was the most that was expected. Except Mrs. Godbee's personal friends, no one expected absolute acquittal for her, but few, on the other hand, expected the life sentence. Her conviction of the charge of manslaughter was considered the most likely outcome of either of the two trials. Consequently the town of Millen, and the county of Jenkins, where Mrs. Godbee has lived since infancy, and where she is known to every man, woman and child, is a bit awed by the judgment.



Trial Most Sensational.

The trial has been the most sensational event in the history of the county, except only the crime which made the trial necessary. From every part of the county and from neighboring counties, men and women have come, on trains, by buggies, wagons, even riding in automobiles, to watch the course of the woman's hearing. Through all the volleys of curious gazes Mrs. Godbee has sat unmoved, cool, apparently indifferent. And she remains so to-night, with the prospect of a life in prison ahead, and with little probability, according to the public opinion, of obtaining a new hearing.

Fair Belles of the '70's Hold Gay Reunion in Atlanta

Days of Black Joe Dobbs' String Band Are Revived

Most Beautiful and Courted Girls of Period After War Recall Old Memories.

Mrs. Brader Barker called the reporter "honey" and told him to sit by her side.

"Julia!" said Mrs. William Scott, disapprovingly.

"Well, why shouldn't I call him 'honey?'" asked Mrs. Barker. "I'm a grandmother. So are we all."

The reporter, who had been piloted to the group of five by their screams of laughter, was surprised that it should be so. He remarked that he would never have guessed it.

"Oh, shucks," said Mrs. Barker, "you didn't have to say that. We've heard a lot of men talk like that. They're all alike."

They had truly heard many compliments before the reporter's sincere tribute. During the '70's they were the belles of Atlanta, the five most popular, most beautiful, most courted of all the very gay set in Atlanta after the war. They were girls together, and were debutantes together, and loved the same boys—they confessed it—and were brides along about the same time.

Hold a Reunion.

And Saturday afternoon they gathered at the home of Mrs. W. E. Austin, at Fifteenth and Peachtree streets, to talk over for the first time in years and years the days when they were belles in Georgia's capital.

The five were Mrs. W. E. Austin, Mrs. William Scott, Mrs. Brader Barker, Mrs. Arthur Caldwell and Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, all living in Atlanta except Mrs. Scott. It was Mrs. Scott's trip from her home in Tampa, Fla., to visit her sister, Mrs. Austin, that was the occasion for the reunion and the reincarnation of the days of panniers, and tarlatan dresses and many petticoats.

The talk dealt most lovingly with Professor Nichols' dancing school where the patricians of Atlanta in the '70's gathered and danced to the music of black Joe Dobbs' old string band.

"And, Mattie, do you remember how we used to say 'put your little foot right there,' when we danced and pointed?" This to Mrs. Austin, who was Mattie Jones in the other days.

"Yes, we had little feet, too." Something like a smile of pride.

"And how Fannie Rich waltzed?"

"Yes, and how the girl put her hair up with sugar water, and got it so stiff she couldn't put comb or rake through it. Wasn't she a fright?"

"Who was that?"

"Little 'Sissie' Moore."

Danced Every Number.

The other four looked accusingly at Mrs. Wylie.

"Was it really you, Lollie Belle?" they asked.

"Well," she said, "at least I danced all the dances, and didn't sit them out like Mattie there did. But, then, more of the boys loved her."

Mrs. Austin demurred modestly.

"But they did," protested the others. "But we were all in love with Guy Townsend, I think, and Edward McCandless. Weren't they the handsomest men in the world then?"

Silence for a sigh's space. Then—

"Except my husband."

The five of them had spoken together. Another silence.

Kisses Were Epochal.

"But we didn't love in those days of old Atlanta as they do now, so tempestuously," said one. "About kissing. The year after we were engaged my husband kissed me only once. We felt bound to ask our parents if it was proper.

"I remember the night he kissed me. He had on a chinchilla overcoat and a beaver hat, and he was the handsomest man in the world. And when he kissed me his hat fell off and rolled down the steps."

The reporter looked around to see who it was making this astounding confession. The five of the belles of the seventies sat there, the same rapt expression on every face. And he never knew.

Then Mrs. Valdwell, Miss Blanche Glenn she was in the seventies, turned the subject.

"Ella," she asked Mrs. Scott, "how many wiggle-tails did you drink out of Professor Smith's well, do you suppose?"

Mrs. Scott laughed, and then explained to the reporter.

"You see, we all went to Professor Smith's school—Hoke Smith's father, he was. And we drank gallons and gallons of water out of the well, before we found it was full to the brim with wiggle-tails. It was a terrible period that followed the discovery."

A shock of memory came to Mrs. Austin.

Schoolgirl Ordeals.

"And do you remember how he made me sit with Winston Grubb?" she cried. It seems that Professor Smith's particular mode of punishment was to make his girls sit with the boys they liked. The ordeal, these five ladies announced, was terrible.

"But when he made me sit with Jim Shuttles I was ready to die," announced Mrs. Wylie.

"All those boys, oh, dear——"

"But we had a good time——"

"Better than the girls have now, even if they don't wear so many clothes——"

"Oh, those clothes! The more petticoats we had on, the better. And we were always buttoned up to our chins, and our skirts were wide, and nobody wore dresses you could see through."

"It was a better day for girls, then, wasn't it, Blanche? Even if there was no turkey trot or tango?"

Mystery of the Petticoat.

"We were happy, sure enough. And that night he took me to the Rex ball——"

"He? Who?"

"Why, my husband."

"You always were in love with him, weren't you, even when all those others thought they were first?"

"Yes; but wasn't Harry Hightower a handsome man?"

"I thought so until the night he danced with the girl with the red flannel petticoat. Do you remember?"

"That was the night that——"

"That what?"

"Oh, nothing." But a tender smile came.

Daughter of the Convicted Woman Is Heartbroken

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—The least concerned person in the whole Godbee drama is the woman who was convicted. She held a regular levee at the jail this afternoon, where she was surrounded by her relatives and friends. She is wholly indifferent as to whether she gets a new trial and seems absolutely unmoved by the prospects of life servitude in the State penitentiary.

The one pathetic figure is the daughter, Sarah Godbee, a strikingly handsome blonde. Her grief is pitiful. From the time the sentence was pronounced until the time for her to retire to-night her arm was constantly around her mother's waist or her golden head was snuggling against her mother's breast. She had cried until her pretty blue eyes were red. The Sheriff consented for her to remain in the jail with her mother during the night.

"Poor mother," she sobbed, "I am so afraid for you; I know you did perfectly right, and I know you didn't intend to shoot that woman, but they all seemed so unkind and so anxious to see you punished. I feel like my heart will break."

"Don't cry, my little pet," her mother replied, "it will be all right, my sweetheart. I will get a new trial and will come clear. We didn't expect to have to go to trial, and we will come out better the next time when we are prepared."

But to the other women she was not so hopeful. "It means nothing in the world to me personally. I don't care whether I stay here the rest of my natural life or go. Life for the last twenty-five years has been so much a burden and so unhappy that nothing matters now. I often wonder why I didn't end it all long ago, long before I let that man blight my life and every hope.

"It was only for my children that I hoped to go free. I wanted to live on with them—all I have in the world."

Millen, whose tragedies in the last month have put it prominently on the map, to-night was quiet for the first time since August 18, when Mrs. Godbee met her divorced husband and his new bride in the postoffice and shot them down. Since that time excitement has been at fever pitch.

Following closely on the Godbee tragedy, Rufus Bryant, a former court bailiff, shot Mrs. Belle Newton, a pretty divorcee, and then turned the revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his brain.

The following night a negress was murdered by strangulation. The next day two white women were shot by a negro boy.

Mother of Slain Bride Rejoices Over Verdict.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—Mrs. W. G. Boyer, mother of the bride slain by Mrs. Edna Godbee, retired early to-night and rested well for the first time since her daughter was shot down in the Millen postoffice.

"I can rest now," she said. "I feel for the first time since my little girl was shot like the guilty always will be punished. I had grave misgivings when everyone seemed so confident she would be acquitted. I did not want her hanged, because I do not believe in capital punishment, but I do think life imprisonment is what she so justly deserved.

"A woman like she is is a menace to society and a bad example to women. She is only safe when removed beyond our social system. If she had been acquitted, other crimes would have followed. Our American laws are too light on transgressors. Too often red-handed murderers escape punishment. It leads others to do wrong. This woman's life should be an example.

"I am sorry for her children, and I feel some sympathy for her as a mother, but she robbed me of my little girl—the child I thought more of than my own life—and I can't help but feel relieved that she has been punished."

Mrs. Boyer was too ill to be in court when the verdict was returned and sentence pronounced. Her son, Archibald, ran the two blocks to the hotel where she is stopping and told her. She rallied almost immediately.

"Thank God," she said. "I can go home now."

NEGRO DOG CATCHER IS NABBED BY OWN RACE

While pursuing his duties as city dog catcher Saturday night Johnson Lewis, a negro, was set upon near North avenue and Williams street by members of his own race. Lewis, who ran, was forced to fire into the crowd near Owens street and finally called in to his assistance Special Officers Gorman and Evans, who rescued him from the angry mob.

EXPLORER NEARLY DIES IN FAR NORTH

Simmons, Back From Labrador, Tells Thrilling Stories of Adventure in Uncharted Regions.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—After penetrating to the center of the vast uncharted region of Labrador and suffering hardships comparable with those of Peary and Scott, Price A. Simmons, a Northern explorer, former famous halfback of Yale, returned to this city to-day and narrated his thrilling experiences.

In the early stages of the journey he lost one of his guides, whose brains were dashed out on the rocks when a canoe upset.

His instruments, which also were in the canoe, were lost.

Simmons' route was through the unexplored section of Labrador with Rigolet, on the Atlantic seaboard, as his goal.

When the guide was killed in Rocky River Simmons packed the body 60 miles to Shiel, an Indian settlement, where it was buried.

Along the upper Fraser, Simmons found the cairn of Heskith Pritchard, English novelist and explorer, erected in 1906. On it was blazed: "Only a wilderness and dreary waste ahead." Simmons scratched beneath it with a stone: "You are damned right."

On the upper Fraser, Simmons' camp was attacked by two bears while the party was hunting caribou and most of their provisions eaten. Faced with starvation, they were obliged to make a dash back to civilization. On the way one of the guides broke one of his legs and the rest of the party had to pack him in.

Dismembered Body Not Annette Day's

Cliffside Slaying Remains as Deep Mystery as Ever When Latest Identification Fails.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Identification of the dismembered body of the girl victim of the Cliffside murder mystery as that of Annette Day, of Brooklyn, was rejected to-day by the mother and second brother of Miss Day. The police now confess themselves baffled.

Clew after clew has been run down, only to prove worthless. Little hope is held out either for the identification of the victim or the detection of the murderer unless the waters of the bay or river should give up the missing head and other portions of the body for which diligent search is being made.

Passenger Stabbed On a Decatur Car

Detectives Hold W. M. Jackson on Complaint of Trolley Crew. Victim in Hospital.

W. M. Jackson, of No. 271 Whiteford street, was arrested by Detectives Davis and Sturdivant late Saturday night, on the complaint of the crew of a Decatur street car, who declared that Jackson had stabbed a fellow passenger and had jumped to the street.

During the chase for the fugitive the wounded man escaped in the darkness. He was located later at the Grady Hospital, and gave his name as Samuel Goss, No. 47 Harold street. His wound was not serious.

JUDGE WRIGHT PUTS 7 IN JAIL FOR CONTEMPT

Preacher, Rich Farmer, Four Other Men and Woman Are Held Without Bail.

ROME, GA., Sept. 13.—Chattooga County has been shaken by the arrest of seven of its most prominent citizens for alleged contempt of court by order of Judge Wright. They now are lodged in jail at Summerville. They are: The Rev. W. M. Hill, a Methodist minister; William Bagley, a wealthy farmer, Baptist deacon and Masonic officer; W. H. Dempsey, Washington Reynolds, his son, Ben, and William Hayes, all farmers, and the latter's wife, Ethel Bagley Hayes.

The other prisoner is a young girl who makes serious charges against young Hayes. The alleged contempt consists of an attempt to settle out of court the ugly charges against Hayes and Bagley.

The story began several months ago when Hayes, a young farmer, was accused by the daughter of Washington Reynolds. When warrants were issued for him he promised to marry the girl, but it is said that warrants never were served and that instead of marrying Miss Reynolds he married Miss Ethel Bagley. Soon after the ceremony, the old warrant was served and Hayes was jailed. Hayes' father-in-law, Bagley, refused to go on his bond.

Accuses Father-in-law.

Angered at the refusal of her father to go on her husband's bond Mrs. Bagley, the young wife, retaliated by telling a sordid story which involved the elder Bagley and a woman of his own family. Bagley was indicted and placed under a $10,000 bond. Thus the matter stood when court convened last week.

The case was docketed to be tried during the term, but the court soon heard strange rumors of attempts to compromise the case and of the sending away of the witnesses. Solicitor Innis probed the matter and asked for contempt proceedings. The result was the jailing of the seven without bond. The evidence showed that Reynolds was to receive $150 for dropping the prosecution of Young Hayes and that Mrs. Hayes was to leave the country and not appear as a witness in the charges against her father. The Rev. Mr. Hill was said to be the moving spirit of the compromise and all the witnesses and parties were to go before the Justice of the Peace and make an oath of agreement. According to the testimony they went to the home of Justice W. L. Hawkins, who doubted the legality of the proceedings, but was reassured by the preacher. The next Saturday the seven were put in jail by order of Judge Wright.

Minister Weeps at Hearing.

At the hearing the Rev. Mr. Hill wept and declared his innocence of any wrong motive, and said that he believed he was carrying on God's work in getting the compromise; that he was carrying out the divine mandate, "Blessed are the peacemakers." The judge refused to discriminate between the prisoners and remanded him to jail.

The affair has created a tremendous sensation, owing to the wealth and prominence of the prisoners. In his charge Judge Wright declared the case of contempt to be one of the most flagrant he has ever had under his jurisdiction.

When arrested Hayes and his wife already had started for the Alabama line. They previously had gone across, but came back when the Sheriff arrested them.

Madame Riano Best Dancer in Capital

Beautiful American Wife of Spanish Ambassador Adept Both at Old and New Rythms.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The premier danseuse of Washington society is Madame Riano, the beautiful American wife of the Ambassador from Spain, who is adept not only at the new dances, but also has learned the intricate Spanish folk dances from the Spaniards themselves and has caught their peculiarly graceful and soulful dance rhythm.

Madame Riano practices faithfully each day. She wears dancing length gowns in place of trains, and strangers in Washington often are surprised to learn that the girlish dancer is the wife of the distinguished diplomat, to whom she has been married ten years. Madame Riano was Miss Alice Ward, of Washington, and her marriage to the then Secretary of the Spanish Legation here was an international romance.

SAY CHECK WAS WORTHLESS.

C. W. Marcus, of Lawrence, S. C., was arrested Saturday night at the instance of the Burns Detective Agency on the charge of passing a worthless check for $165 on the American National Bank of Macon.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Feudist Brought in On Slaying Charge

Hughes-Wright Trouble Recalled When Mountaineer Is Captured by Deputy Marshal.

A feud among mountaineers of North Georgia, which resulted more than a year ago in the death of Moultrie Hughes and his infant son in Fannin County, was recalled Saturday when John Wright, charged with being one of Hughes' slayers, was brought to Atlanta a prisoner.

Wright has been a fugitive from justice since the time of the shooting, and was captured only Friday by deputies of the United States Marshal's office.

Besides being indicted in the Fannin County courts for murder, Wright and his alleged accomplice, Frank Rudicil, were indicted in the Federal Court for conspiracy. Hence the arrest at the hands of the Federal authorities.

W. T. Candler Faces Gun Play Charge

Street Car Conductor Makes Accusations Which Will Be Heard September 16.

Charges that Walter T. Candler, son of Asa G. Candler, flourished a revolver and threatened to shoot him, entered with the police Saturday by a street car conductor, will be heard by Recorder Broyles September 16.

According to the story of the street carman, Candler, driving an automobile along Marietta street at Broad, narrowly missed running over him. The conductor remonstrated, he told the police, and Mr. Candler told him to keep off the streets. Words became more heated, until a revolver appeared in the hand of the man in the automobile, according to the conductor. Candler was arrested.

Attorneys Fight in Recorder's Court

Thomas Bishop and Charles Hillier Fined in Clash at Judge Broyles' Bar.

A bloodless battle between Attorneys Thomas Bishop and Charles Hillier occurred under the very nose of Judge Broyles in the Recorder's Court Saturday afternoon, when, without regard to their whereabouts, the two men exchanged several poorly directed blows.

The only casualties were financial, the men, arrested and arraigned immediately, being fined $15.75 each.

The trouble arose when Bishop told Miller that he had violated professional ethics, alleging that he had solicited a client through an agent.

SULZER OFFER TO RESIGN AND ESCAPE FAILS

Chairman of Impeachment Board Declares Another Suggestion Was Made for a Compromise.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—"Governor Sulzer, through an emissary, offered to resign if we would drop the impeachment proceedings against him. We declined to do so."

This statement was made to-night by Aaron Levy, chairman of the Assembly board of impeachment, after he had been informed that D. Cady Herrick, of counsel for the impeached Governor, had denounced as false a similar statement made earlier in the day.

"A direct offer came to the impeachment board," added Mr. Levy, "through a lawyer who spoke of himself as a lifelong friend of Governor Sulzer. He is well known as a former judge in this city. He told us he had been authorized by Governor Sulzer to see us about abandoning the impeachment. He said: 'Governor Sulzer is willing to resign if you will let the impeachment proceedings drop. He is tired of it all.'

Suggest Compromise.

"When I told him that it was beyond our power to drop the proceedings now, he suggested that a man like Alton B. Parker be selected by both sides to compromise the matter.

"I informed him we have evidence against Governor Sulzer which would warrant his removal, and the matter would have to take its course."

When Herrick, at Albany, heard of this statement, he telegraphed Levy:

"I ask you what the name of the prominent lawyer is. Either you are stating a falsehood or you have been imposed upon. Governor Sulzer has no intention of resigning."

Brewer's Testimony Startling.

According to Mr. Levy, the board of impeachment now has evidence that since the beginning of the impeachment proceedings Governor Sulzer has written to prospective witnesses urging them not to appear and testify against him.

Charles Dersch, of the American Malting Company, was a witness before the board of impeachment today. He testified privately that he had collected nearly $50,000 for Sulzer's campaign, which was not accounted for by the Governor in his statement of campaign contributions.

The $50,000, it was said, had been collected from the brewing and malting interests.

FRIENDS OF CHARTER, IN NEW APPEAL, ASK STUDY OF ITS PROVISIONS

George Hillyer, Chairman of Committee, Presents Epitome of Document, Outlining Proposed Changes. Asks Careful Reading by Voters.

Leaders in the fight for the new charter issued another appeal for support Saturday night along with an epitome of the document.

The appeal is signed by George Hillyer, chairman, and A. H. Davis, secretary of the campaign committee. They urge every voter to study carefully the changes provided.

Here follows the statement in full:

To the Voters of Atlanta:

On September 24 you will be given an opportunity by your ballot to select for this city a complete, concise, revised and rearranged charter.

The Legislature has already passed this charter, subject to the ratification of a majority of the voters in this election. If adopted, its provisions become effective January 1, 1914.

This charter is not essentially different from the present charter. The difference involves matters of detail, and does not change the basic principles of Atlanta's present form of government.

It was drafted by the members of the City Council, aided by a committee of citizens, and was adopted by the former body before it was passed by the Legislature.

The main idea in drafting this charter was to give to Atlanta a charter harmonious and consistent all the way through, to eliminate many obsolete matters, and to group together and in logical order the sections bearing upon particular subjects.

When it is remembered that Atlanta's present charter was granted by the General Assembly in 1874—nearly 40 years ago—that it has been amended time and time again, that it has no logical or systematic arrangement of contents, that many of its provisions are now unnecessary and obsolete, the necessity of a complete, revised and up-to-date charter is made apparent.

No changes from the present charter have been made, except such as have been suggested by the wisdom and experience of 39 years.

While this 1913 charter is much shorter than the present one, we shall not burden you with its length, but ask that you read the explanation below, giving briefly all the essential changes from our present charter.

Sanitary Tax Abolished.

The annual sanitary tax of $3 per house is abolished. This seems to be a relic of village days, to be removed as soon as the growth of the city permits, and that time has now arrived. This will give a very substantial reduction in taxes for all property owners, especially for the small home owners, who, in many cases, now pay almost as much sanitary tax as all other taxes combined. However, the tax rate of $1.25 remains as at present, and there is no other change in the present tax system.

Number of Boards Reduced.

This charter reduces the number of city boards. Those provided for are:

Board of Education.
Board of Public Safety.
Board of Health, Hospitals and Charities.
Board of Public Works.
Board of Water Commissioners.
Board of Public Recreation.
Board of Trustees of Carnegie Library.

Some of these boards are new and are the result of consolidating the work of two or more of the present boards. They will consist of one member from each ward, to be elected by the General Council, whose terms will be fixed by ordinance.

The same general provisions are established for all, to wit: There is a head of each of the several departments, and the boards will exercise supervision over such heads of departments and the other officers of such departments and the management thereof, but one board is not given greater power than the other, all having the same general authority with reference to their particular departments.

All heads of departments are to be elected by the boards, instead, as at present, of having some elected by the boards, some elected by Council and some elected by the people.

Health, Hospitals, Charities.

The Grady Hospital Board is abolished. The Grady Hospital, the Battle Hill Anti-Tuberculosis Sanitarium, the City Warden, the sanitary department and the health department are all put under one board, to be known as the Board of Health, Hospitals and Charities. The head of each of these departments will be elected by the board.

Board of Public Recreation.

The Cemetery Commission and the Park Board are abolished, and the city cemeteries and the city parks are put under the Board of Public Recreation. All municipal cemeteries, in the lapse of time, become public parks, and the reason for grouping cemeteries with parks is, therefore, apparent.

Board of Public Safety.

This board takes the place of the Police Board and the Board of Firemasters, thus combining, for more efficient and continuous supervision, these two co-ordinate departments. Of course, there will be a chief of each department, as at present, to be elected by the board.

Board of Public Works.

The repair and construction of streets, sewers and bridges is put under a new board, called the Board of Public Works. The citizens from each ward are given representation on this as on all other boards, and a hearing is assured on any and all complaints that they may desire to make, as well as on all protests against proposed improvements which they think the city should hear. The Board of Public Works is intended to systematize the street and sewer work under a continuous line of endeavor, such as the board should work out from year to year, instead of following changes in views of the Committee on Streets and Committee on Sewers annually appointed.

Pay for Board Members.

A new feature is here adopted, to wit: Each board member will receive $5 for attending the monthly meeting of his board. This is an effort to apply the wisdom of banks and other large business corporations in securing full attendance of board members. If every board member is present at the regular monthly meeting of his board, good work is certain to be done.

Sinking Fund Commission.

The Sinking Fund Commission is continued as at present.

Waterworks Not Salable.

This charter provides that our waterworks shall never be sold, transferred, leased or in any way alienated or incumbered, and further provides that any action that would look to any sale, transfer, ease or incumbrance shall be absolutely void, and, further, that any official voting for such sale, transfer, lease or incumbrance shall be subject to impeachment.

City Purchasing Agent.

This charter authorizes the Mayor and General Council, in their discretion, to create the position of city purchasing agent.

Civil Service Retained.

Civil service, as adopted a few years ago, and which now seems to be working well, is retained in its present form.

Officers Elected by People.

It is provided that the following officials shall be elected, as at present, by the people: Mayor, Aldermen, Councilmen, City Clerk, Marshal, Recorder, City Attorney, Treasurer, Tax Collector, Comptroller, City Electrician and Building Inspector.

Representative Government.

This charter retains the principle of representative government. The General Council will still be made up of members from the various wards, and each of the boards will have a member from each of the wards of the city. Thus is retained to YOU, Mr. Voter, the right to confer with, to suggest, to commend or to complain to your direct representatives whenever occasion demands.

Two Separate Propositions.

Two features of the charter are to be voted upon separately. One is the section reducing the Recorder's authority of a fine of $500 and 60 days' sentence of labor or imprisonment (the present law) to a fine of not exceeding $200, with a 30-day sentence.

The other section is the one providing for initiative, referendum and recall.

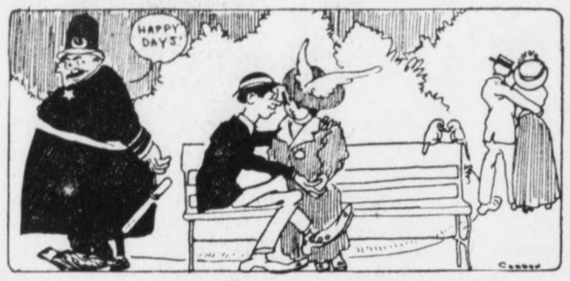
This charter proposes an initiative on the basis of 10 per cent of the registered voters, a referendum on the basis of 15 per cent of the registered voters, and a recall on the basis of 25 per cent of the registered voters, the recall applying not only to the Mayor, Aldermen, Councilmen and other officers elected by the people, but also to all board members and all heads of departments. The figures given show the proportion of voters required on petitions calling elections for the purposes named.

Chance for Fair Trial.

These percentages seem neither too small nor too large, and will give the citizens an opportunity to give these provisions a fair trial whenever desired. Both these provisions, however, are subject to separate vote, and may be ratified or rejected without reference to the balance of the charter.

The above should give you a clear and concise idea of the proposed revised charter which you are asked to accept or reject on September 24.

A number of good citizens have given much of their time, in conjunction with Council members, in the preparation of this charter. They have no more interest in its passage than you should have. They know the need of a better revised and up-to-date charter for this city. They submit to you this brief outline, giving the general changes from the old charter, so that you can the more intelligently vote upon it.



If you are interested in doing what seems best for the city, in giving to Atlanta a modern and up-to-date charter, yet preserving to the people the right to govern themselves, come out on September 24 and VOTE FOR THIS CHARTER

GEORGE HILLYER, Chairman.
A. H. DAVIS, Secretary.

By F. S. JACOBS

THERE was a time when kissing in the good old-fashioned way
Was altogether ruled by what the lady had to say;
If she said "Yes," the couple didn't ask for better right.
But fell into a close embrace and smacked with all their might.
But times, it seems, are changing; loving couples when enclinched
Are apt to be disturbed thus wise: "Hey, stop it; you are pinched."

IN olden days, the moonlight always played a goodly part
In scenery befitting demonstrations of the heart;
Dan Cupid made a throneroom out of every cozy nook,
And lovers came there wooing and defied the world to look;
But now, when couples wander out to sit beneath the moon,
They're apt to be admonished thus: "This ain't no place to spoon."

THE moonlight hasn't changed a bit; its beams are still of gold;
And ways of kissing are the same as in the days of old;
The eager swain still has to bow before his lady's will,
And even parents' wishes are respected by them still;
But, to kiss or not to kiss, it seems, now hinges on the law
Regardless of the say-so of the lady or her ma.

HOUSE PAYS HONOR TO 'TIM' SULLIVAN

Adjournment Mark of Respect to Memory of New York Leader Killed by Train.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Announcement of the tragic fate of Representative Timothy (Big Tim) Sullivan was made in the House tonight by Representative Gittins, of New York, and the House adjourned as a mark of respect. A committee was appointed by Speaker Clark to attend the funeral.

Representative Sullivan had not taken the oath of office or served in the present Congress. His salary was paid to the committee of his estate. No mileage or secretary hire was allowed. A special election to fill the vacancy will be held under the supervision of the State of New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—News of "Big Tim's" death became public thirteen days after it occurred, when the former East Side politician was struck and almost instantly killed by a train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Pelham Parkway on August 31.

When he disappeared from the home of his brother, Patrick H. Sullivan, in New York, it was said that he was visiting a friend out of the city. Larry Mulligan, stepbrother of Sullivan, identified his body to-day. A policeman who knew the boss had seen the body in the Twenty-sixth street morgue and notified the family.

"Big Tim" was 50 years old and left a fortune estimated at about $2,000,000. About a year ago he became mentally unbalanced and claimed that he was being persecuted by members of his family. He had been under the guard of a private detective for some time, but managed to escape him on the day of the tragedy.

ATLANTA MAN WEDS.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 13.—G. H. Akers, of Atlanta, and Miss Amy S. Underwood were married here this afternoon by Judge H. B. Abernethy. The couple returned to Atlanta to live.

LUSITANIA BRINGS BODY OF GAYNOR

All Liverpool Honors New York Mayor's Memory—Remains in State on Ship.

Special Cable to The American.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 13.—With flags at half-mast the Lusitania sailed for New York at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Mayor Gaynor's body lies in a stateroom amidships, covered with the Stars and Stripes and a union jack.

Half an hour before sailing Rufus Gaynor, the Moyor's son, stepped aboard.

"I thank all classes of Liverpool people for their kindness and courtesy," he said. "They have done magnificent honor to my father's body. Our family will never forget it."

The principal stores in Liverpool put up their shutters this moring as a mark of respect to the dead Mayor. Every flag in the city was flown at half-mast.

Before Rufus Gaynor sailed the American Consul made an official call at the Adelphi Hotel and conveyed to him the assurance of sympathy from Liverpool's American colony.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The vacancy at the head of the Gaynor ticket will not be filled. Representatives of 63 of the 64 Gaynor organizations are to meet on Monday to declare in favor of John Purroy Mitchell, the fusion candidate for Mayor.

WOULD ERECT MONUMENT TO THE SPOONERS

Ban on Kissing Doomed—Van Dyke Wants 'September Morn' in Bronze to Honor Wooers.

A canvass of the Police Commission Saturday indicates that friends of Cupid will win in their fight against the police ban on spooning and kissing.

The patrons of the little God of Love not only will be given the liberty of the moonlit parks and the deep shadows around Georgia's State Capitol building, but Alderman A. H. VanDyke would erect a monument to them in the little park that adjoins the City Hall. He would have it a fountain with a bronze figure of Chabas' "September Morn" in the center.

Alderman VanDyke's position is extreme, of course, but Mayor James G. Woodward, Carlos H. Mason, chairman of the Police Commission, a majority of both the Police Commission and the City Council are no less eager to give lovers all the liberty possible within the limits of decency. There is not one of them but who declares that sitting on a park bench or the Capitol steps and perhaps taking an occasional kiss is entirely within the rights of every young man and young woman.

Spooning Becomes Big Issue.

Since two plainclothes officers arrested two couples on the Capitol grounds for spooning the right of people to yield to the lure of moonlight nights and Cupid has been the one issue in Atlanta politics. It has eclipsed the sordid contests for the adoption of a new charter and the election of a new Council.

Officials have expressed their views in most positive terms. Eminent Judges have expatiated upon it. Park officials have announced that there were no such rigid restrictions over their domains, and the custodian of the Capitol grounds has declared that he would protect the lovers.

In response to the outcry the Police Commission has called a special meeting to consider the whole matter for Wednesday night. It promises to be the most largely attended meeting of that body ever held.

Three Fear Entering Wedge.

Only three members of the commission have allowed their positions to remain doubtful. They are B. Lee Smith, W. A. Vernoy and J. N. McEachern. So intense are they in their support of Police Chief Beavers' strict law enforcement policy that they fear the granting of what have been termed the natural liberties of the Indian summer might be an entering wedge to crush Chief Beavers. So they have remained silent, except in the executive session of the Police Commission.

Eloquent pleas from Carlos Mason and Robert Clark, the bachelor members of the commission, are expected to restrain their opposition. Anyway, nine of the twelve members are openly in favor of restraining the overzealous police officers.

Chairman Mason tersely expressed what is regarded as the attitude of these nine.

Won't Allow Persecution.

"The uniformed policemen are not the ones who have caused this trouble," he said. "It is the work of the 'vice squad' and the plainclothes officers. If the stories of the young couples arrested prove to be true, the officers have gone too far, and the commission will act accordingly.

"The situation has brought up the issue of individual rights. Whatever action is taken on these specific cases the Police Commission will not tolerate persecution of anyone. I am confident that action will be taken to insure the people of Atlanta that the police will not be permitted to molest innocent recreation."

ATTACKS POLICEMAN WITH RAZOR IN PATROL WAGON

Brandishing a razor, Ernest Thomas, a negro prisoner, attacked Police Officer J. H. Hooten while the two were riding in a patrol wagon to the police station Saturday night. Only the quick interference of Horace Tanner, another negro prisoner in the wagon, prevented serious injury to the officer.

Tanner was released as a reward for his work. Both negroes had been arrested for disorderly conduct.

J. I. McCammon as he appeared on Peachtree street in pair of slit trousers.

Slit Trousers Give Peachtree St. Shock

Being possessed of as neat an ankle as you would care to look at, J. I. McCammons, a Peachtree street merchant, objects not a bit to display the charms of the latest design in trousers that fashion has decreed. And so he donned the slit trousers, blood brother of the slit skirt of feminine styles.

The effect as revealed on Peachtree Saturday was startling, to say the least. The outer seam of the trousers, which were of a vivid check pattern, was slit six inches or more from the bottom. The slit was flanked by rows of buttons. And through the gaping opening gleamed Mr. McCammons' red silk socks.

All Peachtree looked and wondered, in some degree, but the excitement created was rather short-lived, as the daring wearer of the slit trousers escaped within doors before the verdict of the street assumed a material form.

SLEUTHS ADMIT EXPRESS HAUL BAFFLES THEM

Scene of Activity in Search for $71,000 Shifts to Principal Transfer Points.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The scene of the sensational $71,000 express robbery has shifted from Savannah to Florence, S. C., Richmond, Washington, Jersey City and New York, the principal transfer points.

The clew that the detectives brought General Manager Heckaday yesterday that led him to state that an arrest would be made in a few hours turned out to be a wild-goose chase. The officials frankly admit they are up against the most baffling robbery in the history of the company.

The payment check system that has made it impossible for any one employee to make away with the company's funds and cover up his tracks has failed, according to Special Agent Weaver. The arrest will probably be made, if it is ever made, at the other end of the line.

When the strong box supposed to have contained the large shipment of money arrived at Savannah the agent here opened the box in the presence of two employees. The seals were intact; there were waybills for $250 and envelopes containing that amount. There was some litter in the bottom of the trunk afterward found to be the torn envelopes of the larger shipment.

The fact that the money had been stolen or was missing did not become known until the banks here called upon the agent for the money and the search was started. The waybills covering the large shipment of money were made out in New York. The messenger who brought the trunk from Jersey City to Florence never saw the waybills. This makes it almost an impossibility for him or any messenger who handled the trunk after he did to know anything of the robbery.

CRUELTIES TO PRISONERS ON CANAL CHARGED

Shake-up in Police Department of Zone Predicted as Result of Accusations.

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 13.—News has been received here in letters from Colon, Panama, that revelations recently made of the treatment of prisoners in the Canal Zone penitentiary at Gamboa have created a sensation among Americans there.

Considerable criticism of the police department is heard, not only in regard to the penitentiary but in connection with other matters.

The present indications are that a big shake-up soon will take place.

It was claimed that there were 72 men, whites and blacks, crowded into each of two cells 30 feet square. There was one drinking cup in a cell for the 72 men, it was charged.

The prisoners work upon the roads, under the fierce rays of the tropical sun, and return at night covered with dust and perspiration. It was charged that notwithstanding these conditions they were allowed a bath but twice a week, on Sundays and Wednesdays.

It was claimed that there was no sewage facilities in the building. It was charged, furthermore, that some of the prisoners were subjected to tortures worthy of the medieval ages. A door was placed across one corner of a room, leaving barely sufficient space in which to place a man. In the tropics any closed room soon becomes stifling, and this manner of punishment is said to have been almost unbearable.

Rings were used to hold the arms of prisoners above their heads for hours at a time when the warden thought that the punishment was not sufficient, it is said.

CONFESSES MAIL THEFTS.

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 13.—Edward Beverly, driver of a transfer mail wagon, confessed here to-day to robbing a parcel post pouch of valuable packages.

FEEL HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS? CLEAN YOUR LIVER! A DIME A BOX

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue, it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken to-night straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

CURRENCY BILL FAULTS SHOWN BY TOMBSTONE

Minnesota Member Says Money Reform Plan Means Death of People's Rights.

CRITICIZES POLITICAL BOARD

Other Republicans Follow Him in Asserting Nation's Finances Will Become Party Prize.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Although the Owen-Glass currency bill is to receive the support of the Democrats and of many Republicans in both the House and Senate, members of the minority in the House to-day opened their attack on it with criticisms of the Democratic secret caucuses by which the bill was framed.

General debate on the bill ended in the House to-night. Beginning Monday, the bill will be taken up for amendment in five-minute debate. The Democratic leaders have decided only amendments affecting the phraseology will be accepted and these must be approved by the Democratic committee. No chance is to be taken on material changes. It is expected to pass the House next Saturday night.

Prophesying the death of the people's privileges through the control by politicians of the finances of the country under Owen-Glass currency reform, Representative George R. Smith, of Minnesota, Republican member of the Banking and Currency Committee, led the assault to-day. He used a miniature tombstone to illustrate his argument.

Assail Board's Make-up.

Taking their cue from him, other Republicans assailed the make-up of the Government board of control. They insisted thta under the plan proposed the finances of the country would be made a prize for which every political party would struggle and that the prize would assume proportions greater than those of the tariff, taxes and patronage distribution.

Seven disks were painted on the smith tombstone to represent the seven members of the board. Brown disks represented the Secretaries of Treasury and Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency, who would change with each administration, and four blue disks, representing other appointees of the President for a term of years.

These members of the reserve board supported a column on which was compared the financial values of industry, agriculture, commerce and capital, which form the basis of the proposed new plan of finance.

Calls Plan Dangerous.

"A more dangerous and unwarranted method of legislation has never been perpetrated in the face of the fact that the country as a whole has demanded that this legislation should be non-partisan," declared Mr. Smith. "By reason of the manner in which the Federal board is appointed, this bill involves the substitution of political control for control by banks.

"The power of national banks feared by President Jackson was a pygmy compared with the power conferred by this bill on the Federal board and which is made the prize of each national election."

Bryan, as Trouper, Stirs U. S. and Europe

Premier Is Ridiculed as a 'Tent Show Star'

Secretary of State Appears Every Night With Tyrolean Yodlers and a Gypsy Violinist.

The Bryan Lecture as a Money Maker.

Since entering President Wilson's Cabinet Mr. Bryan has spent much time on the Chautauqua circuit. He received his traveling expenses, a guarantee of $250 for each lecture and 50 per cent of all receipts in excess of $500. These lectures have been delivered since March 4:

July 13—Hendersonville, N. C., $250.
July 17—Mountain Lake Park, Ind., $250.
July 20—Winona Lake, Ind., two free.
July 21—Gary, Ind., $375.
July 22—Oelwein, Iowa, $250.
July 24—Adel, Iowa, $500.
July 23—Panora, Iowa, $250.
Aug. 28—Lambertville, N. J., $400.
Sept. 1—Chestertown, Md., $250.
Sept. 8—Salisbury, Md., $750.
Sept. 9—Crisfield, Md., $250.
Sept. 10—Media, Pa., $250.
Sept. 10—Glenolden, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12—Phoenixville, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12.—Woodbury, N. J., $250.
Sept. 13—Charleston, W. Va., $250.
Sept. 13—Woodstock, Va., $250.
Total, $5,025.

WOODSTOCK, VA., Sept. 13.—William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, addressed a large gathering here tonight and pocketed $250 and his specified share of the gate receipts. He came from Charleston, W. Va., and will go on to Staunton, President Wilson's birthplace, on Tuesday.

The performance, or rather the lecture, compared favorably with that in Media, Pa., a few days ago and at Glenolden.

Glenolden had the advantage of Media, because at the former place no popcorn or pink lemonade booths were allowed outside. At Glenolden these accessories of the circus were not lacking. The peanut privilege, while not a lucrative one, was a noisy one. "Peanuts, chocolates and chewing gum."

"Ice cream cones and brick ice cream!" These cries greeted Mr. Bryan as he came up in an automobile that was parked with half a hundred more on the old circus lot where the chautauqua tent was pitched.

"There Isn't Any Elephant."

A little boy who insisted upon having peanuts as he was dragged along by his mother declared he wanted them to feed the elephant.

"There isn't any elephant, Willie," said his mother.

"Yes, there is; they got a tent," he wailed as she moved on with him to where the crowd was in line.

There must have been several persons under the same impression as to the use to which the tent was being put, because the almost incessant cracking of well-roasted goobers in the rear seats punctuated the lecture of the Secretary and at times made it difficult for those in the extreme rear seats to hear clearly.

The really disappointed boys, however, were those who carried water for the band and the other talent to get free tickets and those who crawled in under the canvas who found the show not up to expectations to the juvenile portion of the crowd.

Lament of a Canvasman.

One of the canvasmen who had a seat along the side of the tent wall surrounding the lot aired his woes while Mr. Bryan was speaking.

"I'm sorry I joined," he wailed. "This ain't a regular show, and the boss canvasman is a Swarthmore student. What he don't know about putting up a big tent would fill a book. What they ought to do with this business is take there here Tyroleans. That boy champion is good and is as fine a yodler as there is in the business, and I have been seeing concerts with circuses for a long time way back with the Sells show. They ought to take and consolidate them and that band and then go into Philly and get a good lot and play two a day right along.

Bryan Could Commute.

"Mr. Bryan could commute from Washington. We could let him close the afternoon show and put him on number one for the night show, and we would get some money. These people are amateurs. I'm sorry I joined out. You see the way it was, I used to be with the old Forepaugh show, and when I saw the tent I just naturally asked for work."

Contrary to the general opinion, the artists dividing time with Bryan and holding the crowd until he arrives do not feel particularly puffed up over the fact that they are on the same bill with him.

Gus Oechner, the champion yodler, at Media, this afternoon, was congratulated on getting a bigger hand than Mr. Bryan at the close of his act.

"That ain't much," said another. "Anna Umley got a better hand than he did on her zither act."

"No, we were not sore at his taking the spotlight," said one of the troupe, after changing to street clothes and taking his make-up off. "Mr. Graus, our manager, will tell you we have played with some of the best. We don't care where they put us on a bill. We can follow an animal act or juggler or any of the rest of them.

"Why, we would not be afraid to let Mr. Bryan take the middle of the bill or go on No. 4. Say, that cuckoo song that Oechner sings won the championship in Switzerland for him. It was a great contest. See, the program says so," and he pointed to where, in small type on the inside, it was announced "the boy yodler of the troupe won the championship in a great contest in Switzerland."

Mr. Bryan has announced diplomatically that he was going to remain on the Chautauqua circuit. He said there were now 1,000 of them. He spoke of the pleasure he felt in addressing the members and audiences they drew, and what a proud privilege it was of his to do so, and said:

MISS ISABEL GRAUS, Gypsy violinist of the Bryan show, and (below) Secretary Bryan, the chief attraction, leaving the tent.

:: Not for Money ::

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Secretary Bryan has cabled to a French newspaper that he is lecturing not for money, but simply to educate the people.

YOUNG man, if you lack the acquisitive knack,
If your money fades into thin air,
Don't think there's no chance in the realm of finance
And give away to utter despair.
You can easily be in the class with John D.,
George Gould and Charles W. Morse,
If you'll merely come through with a dollar or two
On the Doc's educational course.

GO and hear how the Doc whose bland soul it would shock
To think of the evil called greed,
Counts his house every night lest the treasurer might
Get away with an overlooked seed.
Though he looks upon cash as the veriest trash,
He'll teach you to keep it by force;
Not a cent will you burn if your lesson you learn
In the Doc's educational course.

YOU'LL observe how it pays to spend years, months and days
In hunting a job you can't land,
If the spotlight you keep while less foxy men sleep
And always go round with a band.
You will learn that to grace a good Cabinet place
As an ad. beats a two-headed horse,
You will never know need if you'll only pay heed
To the Doc's educational course.

HOW kind of the Doc, who has tucked in his sock
All he'd need for the next thousand years,
Thus to bustle around and tell youths how to found
Good, solid, financial careers!
And if all the while he sees with a smile
More dollars heap up in the vault
And his holdings accrue while he educates you,
Remember, it isn't his fault!

French Paper Sees in His Performance Reason for Success of Tammany.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The Times' leading editorial on foreign affairs, edited and usually written by Andre Tardieu, one of the under secretaries of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and accepted generally by the European press as directly inspired utterances reflecting the opinions of foreign office heads, is devoted to-night to ridiculing Secretary of State Bryan for his appearance with a traveling tent show.

The caption over the editorial is "The Bryan Sketch," and his part in the show is treated as vaudeville.

The editorial says Mr. Bryan's enterprise is especially dangerous in this age, when the tendency of the public is to despise diplomacy as futile, or at least to refuse to take diplomats seriously.

"A few more samples of this kind and the public will lose all faith," it goes on. It is pointed out that Mr. Bryan's "antics" really call for an essay on American manners and morals, illustrating once again that in the United States a political career is esteemed as a most mediocre profession, hence inferior men have been predominant in American politics throughout the last century, all citizens of marked ability and of pronounced intelligence religiously keeping out of politics, and the really able men going into business, from which position they use politicians, but never hold office.

Thus Tammany has prospered, to poison America's magnificent soil." It also says the best American tradition of dignity is now entirely confined to "out-of-the-way" Boston and similar corners, from which types of men like Olney and Lodge must witness the "vaudevillian" Secretary of State, whereas the "widest chasm separates these responsible citizens from the public's approval."

J. WYLIE SMITH HELD IN TOWER ON NEW CHARGE

Former Soldier of Fortune in Mexico Arrested on Warrants Accusing Him of Forgery.

J. Wylie Smith, a romantic figure because of his stirring adventures as a soldier of fortune in Mexico while a fugitive from Georgia, slept last night in the Tower, a prisoner. Arrested late Saturday on warrants sworn out by T. M. Hamilton, of Hapeville, charging forgeries involving $2,200, he was unable to furnish the required bail of $1,000 in each of two cases.

Smith was allowed the freedom of the prison until bedtime, and himself answered a telephone inquiry as to the case, stating that he would secure to-day the amount necessary for bail, and expressing his belief that he would be cleared of the charges.

Smith last night told a story of persecution at Hamilton's hands, and said he could prove it. He said Hamilton, who had begged him to return from Mexico, was trying to find a scapegoat. He refused to do Hamilton's bidding, he said, and in consequence was again thrown into jail. The charges brought Saturday, Smith declared, are baseless.

"Some facts that will be interesting are going to be brought out of this affair," he promised. "I will be vindicated when the matter comes to trial."

Hamilton declared the arrest of Smith was asked because of transactions in 1911, in which, he claimed, Smith used forged notes. He said the arrest comes as the result of a long period of effort to land Smith.

Smith is in very bad physical condition. Because of this and since he is on bond given in other cases, Judge Girardeau was willing to release him on his own recognizance. Hamilton insisted that bond be made, however.

Dream Gives Woman Method of Speech

Keyboard of Typewriter Comes to Blind Mute While She Is Sleeping.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—A revelation which came to her in a dream in answer to prayers has given Mrs. Ella Clark Bennett a novel though perfect means of communication. She is deaf, blind and dumb.

"One night I dreamed that if I placed letters, like those one finds on a typewriter, on my hand and learned the location of those letters," said Mrs. Bennett, through an interpreter, "people touching the letters could spell out words for me and thus talk to me."

Afterward, she says, she had the letters of the alphabet painted on a glove.

Mrs. Bennett lives with Mrs. Jennie Bloom, No. 1208 Lincoln street, who has also become proficient in Mrs. Bennett's new method of communication.

Pretty Nina Lloyd, 18, Pleased With Everything Orangeman Buys Except Marriage License.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Jilted by 18-year-old Nina Lloyd, after he had given her a $400 diamond engagement ring and $1,000 to buy her trousseau, Charles W. Lee, a wealthy orange planter of Miami, Fla., to-day swore out a warrant for the arrest of the young woman, charging pretense. She was held on $300 bail by Justice Comly.

After several months of the tenderest sort of correspondence, Lee told the court, he came prepared to marry pretty Nina. She appeared more than willing, he testified, and waxed enthusiastic when he took her to a department store and allowed her to select a trousseau that would have pleased a society queen. But when he bought a marriage license she refused to marry him.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today suspended until next March the operation of proposed advanced rates on the transportation of lumber in carload lots from North Carolina, Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee points to Eastern seaboard cities.

The new rates would have been double the present tariff on certain classes of lumber. North Carolina dealers representing $15,000,000 in capital went East to fight the proposed increase in freight rates.

GRAFT CHARGE MADE AGAINST U. S. DIPLOMAT

Husband of Hallie Erminie Rives Reported Recalled From Italy by State Department.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Post Wheeler, Secretary of the American Embassy at Rome, is said to have been recalled to Washington to explain certain charges of abuses of diplomatic exemption from customs duties.

It is said that the question of his return to Rome will depend upon the outcome of his conference with Secretary of State Bryan.

Secretary Bryan to-day declined to discuss the reported charges against Wheeler.

Mrs. Wheeler was formerly Hallie Erminie Rives, the novelist. Mr. Wheeler is also well known as a novelist, poet and journalist.

An American, whose name is withheld by the State Department, made the charge against Wheeler. So far as known the Italian Government has not taken any action, and the department is moving slowly, believing that Wheeler may be the victim of personal animus.

Italy permits diplomats and their attaches to receive goods from other countries without paying duties, and unconfirmed rumors in connection with Wheeler's case intimate that he is charged with taking advantage of diplomatic courtesy by turning it to his commercial advantage.

As soon as the first intimation of accusations were received here the department communicated with Ambassador O'Brien. He immediately cabled back that there was no truth in the reports that Wheeler had taken advantage of the Italian courtesy to traffic in gasoline.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMostofUsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

ITALIAN TOWN GIVES THANKS TO MR. HEARST

Resolutions of Gratitude Passed for His Aid After Eruption of Vesuvius in 1906.

Special Cable to The American.

NAPLES, Sept. 13.—A memorial to the 105 mothers and children crushed to death during the eruption of 1906 under the roof of the small chapel in San Giuseppe Vesuviano, where they sought refuge against the overpowering fall of ashes and rocks, was unveiled to-day in the presence of the civil and military authorities of Naples, the Mayor of each town in the Vesuvian district and a large crowd of representative citizens.

A feature of the ceremony was a resolution of the Town Council of San Giuseppe Vesuviano thanking Mr. Hearst and his newspapers for the substantial help sent to the afflicted district at the time of the eruption.

The monument, consisting of a base nine feet high and a twelve-foot marble column surmounted by a Pompeian capital, the work of the sculptor Arizo, of Naples, marks the site where on the night of April 8, 1906, the stricken mothers repaired with their infants to pray for deliverance from the impending catastrophe.

Resolution of Thanks.

While they prayed the roof of the flimsy structure collapsed under the accumulated deposit of ashes and all were crushed to death.

The Hearst newspapers collected for the sufferers more than $35,000, which was handed to the Italian Red Cross Society. A small balance of $206 afterward was devoted to the erection of the memorial which the local population had decided to build.

During the ceremony Lawyer Silvio Cola, chairman of the memorial committee, before unveiling the monument, read resolutions thanking Mr. Hearst for his generous help. The resolutions, engrossed upon parchment, were then handed to Judge Palmieri, who was present as Mr. Hearst's representative.

Banquet to Judge Palmieri.

Later a banquet was given in honor of Judge Palmieri. In an address the Baron Quarante di San Severine cited many actions of Mr. Hearst which, he pointed out, entitled him to the gratitude of Italians, both in Italy and in America. He mentioned also the stand taken by all the Hearst newspapers during the Italo-Turkish war, and the many fights made by those publications against laws restricting immigration.

Every reference to Mr. Hearst was loudly cheered.

Speaking as the representative of Mr. Hearst, Judge Palmieri thanked the committee and the municipality for the noble way in which they expressed their gratitude to one of Italy's most sincere friends in America. Mr. Hearst's name, which is engraved in large letters at the base of the column, was joined to those of the Queen and King of Italy in a toast which all drank standing.

Plennie Miner Is Host at Joyous Barbecue

Judge Roan, Dorsey and Frank Jurors Guests

Chief Deputy Announces He Will Aid Sheriff Mangum—Feast Pronounced Best Ever.

Friends of genial Plennie Miner, chief deputy sheriff, are to-day declaring him to be the greatest of hosts following a barbecue and fish fry given by him at Germania Park Saturday afternoon. In the cool depths of a grass-covered ravine the appetizing spread was served. "The best I ever ate," was the unanimous verdict.

The gathering was noticeable for its political representation, but though there were politicians in plenty, the absence of political discussion was marked. The nearest to a political reference was a remark which Mr. Miner made in a short talk. This was that he would not desert his old friend J. Wheeler Mangum and run against him for Sheriff.

Talks were made by Judge L. S. Roan, Solicitor Dorsey and others, each making a happy reference to Miner's ability as a host. At Judge Roan's suggestion three cheers were given the chief deputy.

The guests met at the Thrower Building at 12:30 o'clock, where 40 automobiles were in waiting to transport them to the barbecue grounds. Noticeable among the guests were the men who composed the Frank jury, who developed a great friendship for Mr. Miner during the famous trial.

The spread was all that the epicure could ask for. Daintily cooked channel cat disappeared with wonderful rapidity, as did Brunswick stew and barbecue, for which the Germania Park cooks are famous.

Both Judge Roan and Solicitor Dorsey congratulated Mr. Miner and his assistants on the splendid manner in which recent troublous trials had been handled, declaring only his ability as an officer of the law exceeded his capacity as host.

QUINTODDY SIMS OFFERS OATS TOO CHEAPLY; ARRESTED

A bargain-day sale of oats, costing $3 per sack at $1 per," led to the arrest Saturday night of Quintoddy Sims, a negro, charged with stealing 103 sacks of grain from a Central of Georgia freight car. Sims implicated another negro, his "pal," whom the police are seeking.

During the past few weeks, large quantities of oats and other grain have disappeared from cars unloading under the Forsyth street bridge.

Refrigeration Experts to Eat Eggs That Were Young When Columbus Was a Boy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Eggs that were young when Columbus was a boy, fowls that have passed the Osler limit—in cold storage, fruits of a bygone summer and roses of yesterday, together with grapejuice married to preservatives, will be the principal items at the cold storage banquet to be given to the delegates to International Congress of Refrigeration during its Washington sessions beginning September 15.

Not only will there be a strong suspicion that everything served is a cold storage product, but this will be certified to by the management of the feast. If this unique poison squad survives the feast there will be speeches by Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Dr. Carl Alsberg, Chief Chemist of the United States, and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of pure food fame.

HILL NAMED TO PLACE ON NEW ATLANTA BENCH

Judge Roan Succeeds Noted Jurist in Appeals Court—Reid to Stone Mountain.

Something may arise to postpone the change in official positions, but probably not. The delay of nearly a month was made by Governor Slaton to permit the appointees to get the work now on hand out of the way.

Has Work Pending.

Judge Hill has a number of decisions yet to write and there are several pending in which it is desirable that all three of the present judges should participate.

The motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, is set to be heard before Judge Roan October 4.

Judge Hill in his new position will receive a salary of $5,000 annually. Judge Roan will receive $4,000 as a member of the appellate court. Mr. Reid will get a salary of $3,000 as judge of the Stone Mountain circuit, and Mr. Napier, the new Solicitor General, will be paid in fees.

Governor Slaton's action set at rest a great amount of conjecture. Speculation has been rife since the creation of the new judgeship as to who would get the plum. Judge Hill and Judge Roan were the leading candidates, although several others had been mentioned. Judge Roan loses $1,000 of his present salary by the new arrangement. As judge of the Stone Mountain circuit he received a salary of $3,000, and for presiding over the criminal division of the Fulton County Superior Court he received an additional $2,000.

Was Federal Prosecutor.

Judge Hill was Solicitor General of Fulton County from 1877 to 1885, a position in which his brother, Charles D. Hill, succeeded him. Grover Cleveland, in his first administration as President, made him United States District Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia.

On the death of his father in 1882, Governor Colquitt tendered him the unexpired term of the elder Hill in the United States Senate. The position was declined in a letter that was widely published with most favorable comments. He later was defeated for the unexpired term by two votes by Pope Barrow.

After the expiration of his term as United States Attorney, he was appointed by Judge Newman, Justice White and Judge Pardee as Standing Master in Chancery in the Circuit of the United States for the Fifth Judicial Circuit. He was elected to the Court of Appeals along with Judge Powell and Judge Russell, and upon the organization of the court in January, 1907, he was selected as chief judge.

Has Heavy Grind.

The work of the Court of Appeals has been exceptionally heavy, the court deciding over 5,000 cases, reported in twelve volumes. Judge Hill participated in the decision of every case and wrote many of the most important opinions. Inasmuch as the Court of Appeals has exclusive jurisdiction of all criminal appeals, except where there is a conviction for a capital offense, Judge Hill has had remarkable experience in the interpretation and enforcement of the criminal law.

His duties in the new judgeship primarily will be to try all the felonies in Fulton County, although his jurisdiction as to other matters will be the same as the other judges of the Superior Court. He gives up a place on a court of last resort with a term of six years, to which he was elected last October, for a lower position, with the necessity of going before the people for election next summer. The work, however, is less arduous and the salary is $1,000 more.

Judge R. B. Russell will succeed Judge Hill as the chief judge of the Court of Appeals.

Judge Roan Able.

Judge Roan has presided over some of Georgia's most famous criminal trials. He has been judge of the Stone Mountain circuit for a long term of years and has gained the reputation of being one of the most able criminal jurists in the State.

Solicitor Reid lives at Palmetto, Campbell County, and has been the prosecutor in the Stone Mountain circuit for several years. He has made an enviable record in his position and his appointment was regarded practically as certain.

George M. Napier is of the firm of Napier, Wright & Cox, with offices in the Atlanta National Bank Building. His home is in Decatur.

ONE BATTLESHIP POLICY PERILS THOUSAND JOBS

Assistant Secretary of Navy Declares It Will Soon Reduce Nation's Fighting Strength.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The one-battleship policy of Congress will not only strike a severe blow at the defensive power of the United States, but will throw out of employment thousands of men who depend upon navy yards work for their daily bread, it was learned here to-day.

The dangers of a continuation of the policy were set forth as follows by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy:

1. A decrease of the fighting strength of the American navy by six first class ships by 1916.

2. The discharge of thousands of employees of navy yards throughout the United States within the next four months.

3. The resultant loss of the Government corps of expert mechanics skilled in battleship and big gun construction.

"There are ten battleships scheduled for retirement from the ranks of the navy during the next four years," said Mr. Roosevelt.

"This is in compliance with the well-established estimates of navy experts that the life of a battleship is fifteen years. Four will go out of commission this year and two will pass the age limit each succeeding year until 1916. A continuance of the one-battleship policy, therefore, will mean the loss of six fighting vessels to the navy.

"Repair of the battleship fleet has been practically accomplished by the navy yards, and from now on this work will not rise above the normal. Also all of the large contracts for new battleships have been let, and unless Congress enacts a larger navy program, the navy yard forces must inevitably be reduced."

Mr. Roosevelt admitted that work now being done by private contractors should go to Government shops.

"Money could be saved by this program," he said, "and the work would be as well if not better done. Bills providing for the building of big gun and armor plate foundries are now pending in Congress."

Navy yard employees have set afoot a petition to Secretary Daniels and President Wilson calling attention to the present state of affairs. They will present the petition to the Secretary and urge upon him a four-battleship program. Commandant Jones, of the Washington Navy Yard, which was recently hit by the discharge of 40 expert machinists, predicted to-day that these petitions would come to naught.

"It is up to Congress to give the men more work," said Jones. "We have all the men we can handle under the present battleship program, unless the Government wants to give them armchairs and newspapers and pay first-class machinists salaries for the rest of the winter."

Gives Barber Ring; Finds He's Married

Handsome Jacksonville Divorcee Has Tonsorial Apollo Arrested When He Reports Gem Lost.

The shock experienced by a handsome and wealthy divorcee of Jacksonville, Fla., when she discovered that a good looking barber on whose finger she had placed a $200 diamond ring was a married man was described tearfully to-day before Magistrate Gorman.

The divorcee was Mrs. E. A. Herbert, the former wife of a rich Jacksonville real estate man, and the barber in the case was Howard Carroll, who has the figure and face of a matinee idol.

Mrs. Herbert had caused Carroll's arrest on the charge of larceny of the ring.

Mrs. Herbert testified that when, on the next day, she saw that the diamond was missing from the finger of her barber, she asked him what had become of it, he replied that he had lost it.

WAR MESSAGE AGAIN FLASHED ON KENNESAW

Sherman's "Hold the Fort, for I am Coming" Is Sent by Veteran.

OLD STATION REVIVED

Ceremonies Are Witnessed as Prelude to Encampment of G. A. R. at Chattanooga.

With the flag that flashed General Sherman's famous message of "Hold the fort, for I am coming" to General Corse at Allatoona Pass 50 years ago, Lieutenant George C. Round, of Manassas, Va., formerly of Sherman's signal corps, together with Pierre P. Hurlburt, of No. 42 Grady place, Atlanta, and Major J. A. Commerford, of Marietta, both Union veterans, stood on the site of the old Civil War signal station on the summit of Kennesaw Mountain Saturday afternoon and flashed the same message to an imaginary battlefield at the pass.

Lieutenant Round is president of the United States Veteran Signal Corps Association, and performed the rites of re-establishing the old signal station used by Sherman and considered one of the most important of the war, as a part of the Grand Army reunion at Chattanooga.

Mr. Hurlburt assisted him as flagman, and Major Commerford served as bugler. The station was re-established on the exact spot from which General Sherman sent his famous message, over the head of Hood's army in the valley, to General Corse at Rome, ordering him to proceed to Allatoona Pass and defend the stores of the Union army stationed at that place.

The ceremonies of opening the station and sending the message were witnessed by a delegation of Marietta citizens, headed by Secretary J. L. Stringer, of the Board of Trade.

After the sending of the famous message, Lieutenant Round flashed a message to the North, South, East and West. Three of these messages were taken from the wise sayings of Moses, from the Book of Leviticus, and were as follows:

To the North—"Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound throughout your land."

To the South—"Ye shall proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

To the East—"Ye shall hallow the fiftieth year; it shall be a jubilee unto you; ye shall return every man unto his possession."

The message flashed to the West was the chorus of a song written by Mrs. Mary Speed Mercer, of Elm City, N. C., during the Manassas jubilee in 1911, as follows:

"America! All hail to thee!
Thanks be to Good, who made us free!
North, South, East and West, hand clasped in hand,
United we thy children stand!"

In flashing the signals, Lieutenant Round used the same field glasses he used as a signal officer during the war, and read from the Bible he carried in his knapsack during the four years of strife.

Lieutenant Round spent Saturday night with Mr. Hurlburt at the latter's home at No. 42 Grady place, and leaves to-day for Chattanooga to attend the G. A. R. reunion.

Mrs. Ottley Visiting Shiloh Field

Monument Site To Be Selected

Georgia U.D.C.'s to Honor Heroes

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, director for Georgia of the Shiloh Monument Association, who on battlefield to select site for shaft.

Atlanta Director With President General of Association to Decide on Spot for Shaft.

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, director of Georgia for the Shiloh Monument Fund, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is in Tennessee with the president general of the Shiloh Monument Association to select a suitable site for the monument the association is about to erect to commemorate the heroism of the Confederate soldiers who fought in the memorable encounter which lasted two days at Pittsburg Landing.

For several years the Confederate Daughters have been directing some of their time and money toward the proposed monument, and each State has had its Shiloh director, who has spoken before the various chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and worked for the fund.

The Atlanta Chapter pledged $50 last year to the fund, which pledge was met in the spring. Thirty-nine other U. D. C. chapters have contributed to the monument fund from Georgia.

Shiloh Day was observed with Mrs J. K. Ottley as chairman on April 6, at which time a beautiful literary and musical program was rendered in the Woman's Club. At that time papers were read from the president of the Mississippi Division, from Mrs. Battle, a prominent Daughter of the Confederacy of Texas, and a group of poems read by Mrs. Elizabeth Fry Page, the poet laureate of the Tennessee Division.

The monument will be erected in the Shiloh National Military Park, near Pittsburg Landing, on the Tennessee River, and will be one of the handsomest monuments among the many the Daughters of the Confederacy have erected to the Confederate soldiers.

Mrs. Ottley is the guest of the president general of the Shiloh Monument Association in Tennessee and will spend several days in that State before returning to Atlanta.

GEORGIA BABIES ARE NEGLECTED, BOARD ASSERTS

Four Rules Laid Down to Guide Mothers in Selecting Attendant for Children.

Georgia mothers, as a rule, do not exercise sufficient care in selecting nurses for their babies, declares the State Board of Health, in a warning issued Saturday, describing some of the dangers to which helpless infants are exposed because of this negligence.

Too often, says the board, the thoughtless mother employs the first negro girl who happens to be available, without inquiring at all as to her health, moral character and intelligence. Such mothers forget that the baby is left for hours at a time in the sole care of this nurse, and that it may suffer permanent harm if improperly handled, neglected or exposed to disease.

Four rules are laid down by the Georgia Board of Health, by which a girl or woman must be judged before she should be employed to take care of a baby. They are as follows:

The nurse must be healthy.

The nurse must be neat and clean about her own person.

The nurse must be of good moral character.

The nurse must have intelligence.

Don't employ anybody to take care of your baby unless that person comes up to these four requirements, says the State Board.

WOODWARD TO DEMAND TEST OF CREMATORY

Mayor Announces He Will Refuse to Sign Voucher Until Contract Is Met.

Declaring that the methods of the Destructor Company of New York, which is building the new crematory, was a "stall" and that he would refuse absolutely to sign a voucher for the payment of the $136,000 still due until the plant had been turned over to the city and an average test of the capacity made, Mayor James G. Woodward Saturday night renewed the old crematory fight.

The Mayor's statement followed fast on the heels of the statement of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, chairman of the Council Sanitary Committee, who declared Saturday he was convinced that the city was being robbed by the contract with the Destructer Company. The Councilman's criticism of the plant was inspired by the belief that it will not come up to the contract specifications.

Mayor Woodward's criticism of the plant was as sharp as that of Ashley.

"I am convinced that the company is stalling now in order to put off the test as long as possible," said the Mayor. "But that stall won't go, for I am going to insist on an average test after the plant has been turned over to the city. In fact, I am not going to sign the voucher for that $135,000 which we still owe them until the contract has been carried out to the letter.

"I still contend that we have made a bad bargain, for we are paying $276,000 for a 250-ton plant, whereas Milwaukee has a 300-ton plant which cost only $210,000. If I could have received some support in my original fight we could have a fully-equipped crematory plant at a cost of only $108,000."

According to the Mayor, the Destructor Company is paying $25 per day forfeiture dating from August 15, when it is claimed the plant should have been completed.

Slaton to Pass on McNaughton Soon

Governor Has Spent Three Evenings Going Over the Evidence in the Case.

Final judgment in the case of Dr. W. J. McNaughton, who was sentenced to death in 1910 for the murder of Fred Flanders near Swainsboro, and for whom a full pardon was recommended by a majority of the State Prison Commission two days ago, will be passed by Governor Slaton some day next week, when he will consider the prisoner's application and the recommendations of the commissioners.

Governor Slaton has devoted the whole of three evenings to the study of evidence in the case, as transcribed in the court records. It is known that he considers the case of much significance.

Soil Commissioner Gives 'Movie' Talks

Weekly Reports on Cotton Crop Another Feature Launched by Price and Aide, Hughes.

James E. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture, and his assistant, Dan Hughes, are working on two propositions which are expected to result in much good to the farmers throughout the State. One is the issuance of cotton reports weekly, which will contain full information as to the condition of the crops and movement. The other is the giving of moving picture lectures in the different counties of the State.

The moving picture lectures are an innovation. Agriculture in all its phases during the history of the world is depicted, modern farming, of course, playing the most important part.

WILSON URGED TO SEE GEORGIA FAIR AT MACON

Senator Hoke Smith Believes President Will Accept Bid If He Comes South.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Mayor John T. Moore has received a letter from Hoke Smith, junior Senator from Georgia, in which he stated that he was doing everything in his power to induce President Woodrow Wilson to visit Macon during the Georgia State Fair.

Senator Smith stated that he had every reason to believe that if the President is in this section of the South that he will pay a visit to the State Fair, and that President Wilson had promised to give the invitation of the Macon people every consideration.

Nine counties will have agricultural exhibits at the Georgia State Fair—nearly twice as many as exhibited last year.

The counties already enrolled are Cobb, Houston, Bibb, Worth, Bulloch, Bartow, Milton, Hall and Irwin.

It is expected that Cobb and Houston will be the principal contenders for the first prize of $1,000.

WAR TREASURE UNEARTHED ON TALBOTS ISLAND

Strangers Dig Up Three Boxes and Negro Finds Pistol of Revolutionary Days.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—A mystery comes to this city bordering on one of the treasure stories of Captain Kidd, and as a result Dr. W. B. Burroughs is in possession of an old flint and steel pistol of the type used in the Revolutionary War.

A few days ago John Edwards, a negro, was at St. Marys, and while there a party of strangers engaged him to take them to Talbots Island, which is near Fernandina. When the party reached the island, they landed and instructed Edwards to wait on the shore until they returned. The strangers came back in two hours and had in their possession three boxes.

After he had taken his passengers back to St. Marys, Edwards returned to the island. He searched about the place and found three square holes, out of which the boxes had been lifted. In one of the sinks he found the pistol.

Yesterday the negro came to Brunswick and showed the relic to Dr. Burroughs, who, being a collector of war-time guns, purchased it. It is believed the boxes the strangers carried from the island contained treasure or were valuables buried there during the Civil War by residents of St. Marys or Fernandina. The island is not inhabited, and it is thought the men had learned of the burial of the boxes by some of their ancestors. No other solution was offered, as none of the party has ever been heard from or seen since that time by the negro.

Wife's War Helps 'Spooning' Crusade

Pays $15 Fine for Disturbance at Husband's Bakery, but Ends Flirtations There.

Despite the fact that she was forced to pay a $15.75 fine in Recorder's Court Saturday for raising a disturbance at her husband's bakery at No. 251 Peachtree street, Mrs. Jamie Zakas probably has put a stop to any and all things which might be construed to be spooning in the bakery.

Mrs. Zakas charged that she saw women enter the bakery and talk with her husband in a way that did not suit her. Zakas denied the charge, saying the women were ordinary customers.

Americans' Absence Stuns Hotel Keepers

August Is Disastrous to Both Bonifaces and Tradesmen in Southern Germany.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—The hotel keepers and tradesmen in certain quarters of South Germany are dismayed by the marked decrease in American tourist traffic; August was almost disastrous to them.

The Munich hotel proprietors were hit hardest and are complaining loudly. This loss of American patronage is due largely, it is said, to the agitation by certain Americans in Munich against the systematic exploitation to which travelers are subjected in that city. Experienced tourists, tired of paying double prices for everything, are shunning Munich and going to Berlin and other North German cities.

Mrs. Hogan asks also an injunction restraining her husband from visiting her at her father's home.

After living with her parents for some time and refusing to pay board, she declares, Hogan left the house in August, complaining that it was inconvenient and that he was going home to live.

Hogan is a stenographer, according to the bill.

'We're Tired of Mud,' Cry Fifth Warders

Protest Against Delay in Paving of Chestnut Street to Council Committee.

Special conference of the Public Works Committee probably will be held early next week to consider the vigorous protest registered Saturday by citizens on Chestnut street, north of Kennedy, against further delay in paving that section of the street.

"We are tired of the mud," said one woman member of the committee, while another declared they were "weary of living in hope, because it had become monotonous in the space of twenty years."

Wife's Pitiful Note Makes Convict Flee

Despondent After Reading Letter, Federal 'Trusty' Runs Away, but Is Caught.

Made despondent by the pitiful tone of a letter she received from his wife, Charles F. Vick, a "trusty" prisoner in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, ran away Saturday afternoon when he was sent outside the walls in charge of a cartload of farm produce.

Within a few hours, however, he was caught near Henrico, a small station on the Southern Railway several miles south of the prison, by a Mr. Clarke, who volunteered his services to Warden W. H. Moyer in pursuing the fugitive.

Vick had not doffed his prison clothes and was easily detected. He made no resistance. Vick was sent here from Richmond, Va., on the charge of robbing a postoffice.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

LABOR UNIONS HIT PROCESS OF INJUNCTION

Macon Central Body Protests Against Judge Fixing Price of Commodity by This Method.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Macon Central Labor Union, representing 2,200 laboring men, has strongly denounced the injunction process as it has been used in Macon within recent weeks and also protested against a judge fixing the price of any commodity also through the injunction method.

Many are wondering whether Judge H. A. Mathews, of the Superior Court, will take cognizance of the Central Labor Union's resolution. Some hold that the union men may be adjudged in contempt of court for their action.

The resolutions particularly pertain to the Law Enforcement League's petition for permanent injunction against fifteen saloons and to Judge Mathews' action in designating the prices at which ice may be sold in Macon.

Already one of the petitions against the saloons has been granted, and the saloon has been put out of business by a permanent injunction. The other petitions are pending in court and set for hearing in November.

As to the ice proposition, Judge Mathews acted on the petition of the Southern Ice Company against the Atlantic Ice and Coal Company, the Macon branch of a big Southern combine, and fixed a scale of prices. The Southern Ice Company alleged that the other and older and stronger company was cutting rates so low that it would be forced out of business, and asked for an injunction. The Judge granted only a temporary order, but arranged prices that must obtain during the entire ice season.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most effectious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Coal Deposit Found In Anniston Suburb

Farmer Digging a Well Strikes Apparently Rich Ore Vein at Depth of 14 Feet.

ANNISTON, Sept. 13.—Calhoun County, which is already rich in mineral deposits, is believed to have another valuable asset in coal deposits which were discovered recently on the northern outskirts of this city, near Aderhold's Mill. W. J. Edmondson, a prominent planter, was in the city Friday demonstrating samples of the deposit.

The deposit was uncovered by men digging a well, after a depth of fourteen feet had been reached. The coal is being used at blacksmith shops near by.

In this neighborhood there has been frequent evidence of oil deposits and black marble has been found in abundance. Should the discovery of Mr. Edmondson pan out as it it believed it will the property will be developed.

Shake-up in Athens Postoffice Expected

Postmaster William Fleming May Be Asked to Make Room for Devout Democrat.

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—United States auditors have been checking up the local postoffice for the last ten days, and it is freely rumored that a shake-up is scheduled such as has just happened in Atlanta. Postmaster William Fleming was appointed at the expiration of Cleveland's term as President, and if he does not see fit to resign, he will very probably be asked to step down and out to make room for a more devout Democrat.

Captain J. H. Rucker has been mentioned prominently for the position, as has Harvey Stovall, who is a brother of the United States Minister to Switzerland.

BOGUS SUFFRAGE WORKER LEAVES BATCH OF DEBTS

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—A man named J. L. Howell and claiming to be a suffragette worker recently came to Spartanburg to boost the cause.

He also claimed to be a literary man and a refugee from Mexico, but had renounced his profession and taken up the cause of the suffragettes in this country. His idea was to have a State convention of the suffragettes in Spartanburg, and he seemed to get the confidence of the ladies, who agreed to assist in the movement.

After getting everything in shape, Howell suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, incidentally leaving behind him an unpaid board bill and other little debts, for which he gave checks on a Los Angeles, Cal., bank. The checks have all returned, but Howell has not.

5,000 REGISTER TO BALLOT FOR MACON MAYOR

Race for High Office Grows in Interest as Day Approaches. Claims of Candidates.

MACON, Sept. 13.—To what extent Macon is interested in the mayoralty campaign is shown by the registration of over 5,000 citizens. This registration exceeds by nearly 1,800 the registration of the Miller-Moore election of 1909.

With only thirteen days intervening before the election on September 26, the three mayoralty candidates are keyed up for much hard work on the last lap of the race. The most work in the line of public speaking will probably be done by the Wallace-Miller ticket, which is running on an anti-administration platform. The Miller workers will have a rally Monday night in South Macon and another during the week in East Macon. There will also be meetings in North Macon, and in the Third and Fourth Wards.

Mr. Dasher has a number of ward rallies scheduled.

Starting on Monday night, September 22, there will be public rallies at the city auditorium for four consecutive nights. The Miller party will have two, the Smith workers one, and Dasher one.

Predictions Vary.

Upon the closing of the registration, the Miller campaign committee made the prediction that there would be 4,200 votes polled, and that Miller would receive 2,150; Smith, the administration candidate, 1,550, and Dasher, independent, 500. The Smith forces predicted Smith's election by a majority of fully 700. Dasher merely stated that he was confident of election. Neither Miller nor Smith concede over 500 votes to Dasher.

The charge made by Dasher, both from the platform and in the public print, that the Macon Railway and Light Company is contributing liberally to Smith's campaign fund, elicited an emphatic denial from Smith.

BAILIFF CLAIMS KILLING OF BOY WAS ACCIDENT

Trial of Columbus Officer Who Shot Youth on Account of 50-Cent Debt Set for Friday.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Robert L. Willis, the Columbus bailiff who shot and killed Luther Hawkins, the Atlanta youth, August 29, will be given a preliminary hearing next Friday morning before Recorder Frank D. Foley, who will sit in the case as a special magistrate.

It will be remembered that Willis, in company with Charles Jordan, a boarding house proprietor, was attempting to arrest Hawkins under a warrant charging him with beating a 50-cent board bill, when the latter started to run off from the officer, laughing at the time. The officer drew his revolver and began flourishing it in the air, when the gun was suddenly discharged, and Hawkins fell to the ground mortally wounded, dying a few seconds afterward.

Says Killing Was Accident.

Since the firing of the fatal shot Willis has maintained that his revolver was accidentally discharged, while the State claims to have eyewitnesses who state that Willis, after taking deliberate aim, shot and killed him. The State has refused to divulge the names of the witnesses.

Willis will be represented by T. Hicks Fort, Solicitor of the City Court, and Attorney D. L. Parmer, who will maintain that the defendant accidentally shot Hawkins, while the contention of Solicitor General George C. Palmer, who will represent the State, will be that the killing is murder. The father of young Hawkins is now making Columbus his home in order to attend the preliminary hearing and assist in the prosecution. The people of Columbus continue to condemn the killing, because of the smallness of the offense that had been committed by the young man, whose life was forfeited because he did not pay a balance of 50 cents on a board bill, for the simple reason that he did not have the money at the time.

RUN-OFF NECESSARY IN SPARTANBURG CITY RACE

Concentrated Form Of Fertilizer Made By Macon Scientist

Believed It Will Revolutionize the Present Methods of Soil Cultivation.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Dr. M. M. Stapler, of this city, widely known among the medical profession for the invention for the cure of incipient deafness, has devised a form of fertilizer which he and his friends believe will revolutionize the present methods of soil cultivation. Dr. Stapler is a wealthy specialist with a penchant for farming during his leisure hours, and it was during his spare time that he evolved the idea of concentrating fertilizer.

After working on the idea for several years, he perfected a fertilizer, compounded in cube form, each cube, no larger than a brick, having the potency of 200 pounds of the ordinary fertilizer. His fertilizer is a composition of about 95 per cent soluble plant food, the remainder being a light plastic composition to hold the fertilizing ingredients in shape. His method is to drop one of the cubes—he proposes to make them of any size and strength desired—into each of the holes where seeds are planted.

Decree Expected in Dalton Paving Cases

$15,000 Involved in Abutting Property Assessments Before Supreme Court Second Time.

DALTON, Sept. 13.—When the Supreme Court meets September 22 an opinion in the Dalton street paving cases is expected, for the court must either hand down an opinion by October 6 or the case go by default.

The case grew out of assessments under the abutting property law. Several refused to pay and the city advertised their property for sale. They then filed an injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the sale, but the injunction was dissolved by Superior Court. The case was taken to the Supreme Court, and the decision was affirmed. On certain new features alleged by the property owners the matter was again taken to Superior Court, where the city again won the victory. It was carried to the higher court a second time.

There is something like $15,000 involved in the litigation.

Last year 2,500 white pupils out of 3,000 in the community were enrolled. Forty-three teachers will be required. Thirteen teachers will be employed in the colored schools, making a total of 56 teachers in the county.

This does not include the Tifton Public Schools, which are operated under the city system and supported by the city with an entirely different board of education.

This year the high school course will be taught in four different county schools—Brookfield, Ty Ty, Omega and Chula.

THAW'S WAY TO SUPREME COURT PAVED BY WRIT

Fugitive's Counsel Head Off Extradition, and Open Avenue for Appeal to Highest Bench.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 13.—Asking a writ of habeas corpus in the United States District Court this afternoon, counsel for Harry K. Thaw have headed off extradition and paved the way for a possible appeal to the United State Supreme Court.

Judge Aldrich, who granted the application for the writ, to-day made it returnable at Littleton Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Thaw's attorneys were Nathaniel E. Martin, of Concord, and Merrill Shurtleff, of Lancaster.

New York State was not represented by counsel at the hearing. Proceedings were in chambers, none except the judge, his clerk and counsel being admitted.

Besides granting the application for the writ, Judge Aldrich also issued an injunction restraining all parties from interfering in any way with Thaw or with the service from the writ pending the hearing next Tuesday. Copies of the writ were served later in the day at Colebrook on Sheriff Drew, Attorney General Tuttle and William Travers Jerome.

Sheriff Hornbeck, of Dutchess County, New York, who arrived here last night with extradition papers and a warrant for the arrest of Thaw, could not see Governor Felker to-day.

Jerome Furious as He Hears of Writ.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—William Travers Jerome and his coterie were furious this afternoon when informed of the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus by Judge Aldrich, of the United States District Court at Concord, restraining Sheriff Drew from turning Harry K. Thaw over to the New York authorities.

"The obtaining of this writ is an absolute violation of a gentleman's agreement between Moses I. Grossman and myself," said Jerome angrily. "Furthermore, it is absolutely irregular. Grossman and I agreed that no legal action should be taken until Governor Felker had an opportunity to consider the matter."

Grossman, who has been retained as an extradition expert to fight against the return of Thaw to Matteawan, smiled when Jerome's statement was repeated to him. He said:

Explains Two Writs.

"I secured the writ in order to have two strings to our bow. The way is now open to a test of Thaw's rights either in State or Federal courts. We secured the writ to prevent New York officers from seizing Thaw and rushing him away the moment Governor Felker signed the Executive warrant."

All bets are off now, sai dJerome.

"I won't say what fireworks may be discharged to-night or to-morrow," he continued. "The Thaw people may expect anything from us now, because of the breaking of the agreement. It is not improbable that Grossman will be called up for contempt in seeking to use the Federal courts a sa means to secure what is practically an injunction against the New York officers."

At 6 o'clock to-night Fred A. Hornbeck, Sheriff of Duchess County, arrived here from Albany with the requisition papers signed by Acting Governor Glynn, of New York, and calling on Governor Felker to send Thaw back to New York.

The requisition papers will be taken to Concord Monday and will be presented to Governor Felker on Tuesday.

If Governor Felker sets the date for the hearing later in the week Thaw's presence in Colebrook will be assured for several days.

Petition Cheers Thaw.

Thaw was greatly cheered this evening when he was shown a copy of the petition, which is signed by 2,000 citizens of Colebrook asking Governor Felker not to extradite him.

Thaw gave to a representative of the Hearst newspapers a copy of a letter which was written by his mother to Governor Felker. The letter reads as follows:

To His Excellency Governor Felker:

I address your excellency in the interest of my son, H. K. Thaw, who after being deprived of the liberty the average acquitted man would have immediately received after a verdict of not guilty upon the ground of the defendant's insanity at the time of the commission of the act charged under the indictment, has for five and a half years endured untold hardships and indignities in one of New York's worst penal institutions. Finally despairing of securing fair treatment by habeas corpus proceedings, he took the only recourse left, a flight for the freedom denied through malice.

May I beg that your excellency may secure to him in whatever way proper a fair and impartial hearing during the impending proceedings?

Yours sincerely,
MARY C. THAW.

HARRY THAW is shown being escorted by the Sheriff at Colebrook, N. H., after his forced entrance in the country from which he fled.

PLUNGES 100 FEET, BUT WILL RECOVER

Hindu Falls Headforemost From Smokestack in Savannah. Both Wrists Broken.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—While at work on a smokestack, 100 feet in the air at the Atlantic Coast Line docks, Vangaather Cooley, a Hindu, lost his footing and plunged to the ground below.

Both wrists were broken, one knee and his right arm broken, one hip dislocated, and he was hurt about the head. It is said he has a chance to recover.

Other workmen saw Cooley slipping from the high smokestack, on which a new cover was being put. They shouted a warning. The Hindu made frantic efforts to save himself, but in vain. He shot headforemost into space.

He was taken to the United States Marine Hospital for treatment.

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 13.—Because those in charge of the car would not assist her into an upper berth or give her a lower one and would not look after her baggage, which was lost, Mrs. G. C. Mattox, of Kissimmee, has entered suit in Federal Court against the Pullman Company for $10,000.

FIST OF WOMAN ROUTS MASHERS

Pair of Men Routed When Young Matron Resents Their Approach With Blows.

LOGANSPORT, IND., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Jessie James stood on a corner in the business district to-day conversing with her father, John Gingaman, and near by, gazing at her, were grouped five mashers. Mrs. James bade her father good-bye and started away.

"Oh, you chicken! Busy?" cried one of the group.

Wheeling around, Mrs. James stepped back to the group, and smilingly inquired, "Who spoke?"

One of the crowd stepped out and asked: "Where you going?"

Mrs. James slammed her fist against his face and he staggered. Before he could recover she struck again, a fair, straight blow, which put him to the sidewalk.

Then she rushed upon the other four, who crowded against a building. Her attack was so unexpected and forceful that the quartet had felt the effects of her fists before one of them fought back and knocked Mrs. James across the sidewalk and against a mail box.

She stooped, grabbed a loose paving brick and let it fly. It landed on the head of the man she had knocked down, and who had risen and was running away. The others followed and boarded an outgoing interurban car.

From the corner to the place where they took the car a trail of blood marked the passing of the one against whose head Mrs. James' brick collided.

"Sometimes I carry a gun," said Mrs. James to the crowd that gathered about her. "I am glad I did not have it to-day. Hereafter I will carry it, and if I am addressed as I was to-day I'll kill the man who does it."

WALRAVEN TO QUIT RACE FOR COUNCIL SEAT

Seventh Ward Place Now Will Go to Jesse Armistead Without a Contest.

Additional proof of the collapse of the "open town" ticket for Council was given Saturday afternoon in an absolutely reliable report that Dan S. Walraven would withdraw as a candidate for Alderman from the Seventh Ward.

Mr. Walraven wanted to withdraw several days ago in exchange for pledges of support for Police Commissioner from the Seventh Ward, according to authentic gossip. His plans failed for this coup, and when he put up the necessary $95 entrance fee it was thought he was in the fight to the finish.

Mr. Walraven never had announced a platform, but the active efforts in his behalf of T. M. Webb, proprietor of two downtown locker clubs, and the efforts of his friends to get the support of Mayor Woodward, and other advocates of a more liberal police policy stamped him as an "open town" man.

Armistead to Get Place.

The Seventh Ward Aldermanic seat now will go to Jesse Armistead without a contest. Strange to say, he had the support of Mayor Woodward and the anti-Woodward faction in Council. He was chairman of the Seventh Ward campaign committee of Aldine Chambers in the last mayoralty election; but also he is president of the Typographical Union, Mayor Woodward's own union. This latter affiliation of Mr. Armistead is said to be the cause of Mayor Woodward's support of him.

Friends of Mr. Walraven had declared that both Mr. Walraven and Mr. Armistead would withdraw from the race in favor of Marcellus Anderson. Mr. Anderson was said to have pledged his support to Mr. Walraven for Police Commissioner. Mr. Armistead kicked out of the game and was conceded to be to a supporter of Fred Lester for Police Commissioner before the Walraven-Anderson supporters realized what was up.

Only a remnant of the "open town" advocates remain in the field. Amos Braselton is making the issue between him and Albert D. Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward a more liberal police policy.

Braselton More Liberal.

"I have no idea of trying to bring back the 'houses in our midst,'" said Mr. Braselton, "but I'll guarantee to support a far more liberal policy than my opponent has."

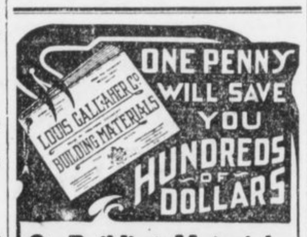
Mr. Thomson has not taken up the challenge as yet, but he declares he will put plenty of ginger into the race before it is over.

Alderman J. B. Everett, for whose seat they are fighting, declared that he was for Councilman Thomson for the Aldermanic place Saturday afternoon.

"I want to thank my friends for efforts to have me re-elected," he said. "City Attorney James L. Mayson advises me that the charter time limit prevents me running again.

"I will take pleasure in casting my vote for Councilman Albert Thomson."

Fight Bitter on Charter.



Interesting as the Councilmanic contests are, they will be set aside until after September 24 for the new charter fight. With an assurance of remaining firmly in the saddle for another year, the old crowd of city officials have started a determined fight to get the new charter adopted.

Mayor Woodward has started out with even more spirit to kill the charter. He declares that it is a "fraud in the name of reform, and that it will intrench the 'ring' more strongly."

On account of his aggressive attitude, the issue has become more or less a Woodward issue. The anti-Woodward element hopes to repudiate the administration of the Mayor by passing this charter over his opposition.

Organist Hall Will Play His Own Works

Free Concert at Auditorium To-day Promises To Be Most Remarkable Ever Heard Here.

An original military march, entitled "Gettysburg Reunion," and dedicated to the heroes of the blue and gray, will be one of the features at the free Sunday concert by Organist Frederick Hall, of Philadelphia, this afternoon at the Auditorium. The program will be in many respects the most remarkable ever offered in Atlanta. Mr. Hall will play two or three of his other compositions.

The other original composition he will play is entitled "Rouen Reminiscence," and is his interpretation of a melody which he heard a barefooted French street urchin singing in one of the narrow winding streets leading up the hill to the great cathedral.

The concert will begin promptly at 4 o'clock, and everybody is invited. Mr. Hall is a candidate for the position of city organist in Atlanta, left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

'YANKEE' ARMY ONCE MORE ON SOUTHERN SOIL

G. A. R. Given Warmest of Dixie's Greetings When Veterans of Blue Arrive for Encampment.

CHATTANOOGA IS CROWDED

Homes Are Thrown Open to Accommodate Soldiers Who Invaded City 50 Years Ago.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Chattanooga has put on her gayest dress, and with flags and bunting, flowers and decorations of all kinds, is today anxiously awaiting the opening of the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic on Monday.

This year's encampment marks an auspicious occasion in the history of the G. A. R., for it is not only the first reunion of Northern veterans ever held in the real South, but it is also the centennial of some of the most famous battles fought during the Civil War in the vicinity of this city.

Fifty years ago the armies of the North and South entered into deadly combat on the fields of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga falls on the last two days of the encampment, September 19 and 20.

Already the city is crowded with thousands of veterans and visitors, and each incoming train adds to the number. Although no official figures have been given out, it is estimated that more than 200,000 strangers will be here by Monday morning, when the city of Chattanooga tenders an official reception to the visiting veterans at the Hotel Patten.

Commander-in-Chief Arrives.

The G. A. R. commander-in-chief, Alfred B. Beers, of Bridgeport, Conn., has arrived and will take a prominent part in the reception and the events of the following days. This reception will introduce the visitors to the citizens of Chattanooga and will be an elaborate social function, one of the largest that Chattanooga has ever undertaken. A committee composed of leading citizens, under the chairmanship of the Hon. A. W. Chambliss, a prominent member of the local bar, has been at work for some time arranging the details of the reception.

The Chattanooga Encampment Association, in conjunction with the local chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and similar organizations, have seen to all arrangements for the housing of the veterans and visitors during the encampment.

Because of the limited hotel accommodations the home of private citizens have been thrown open. Most of the arriving visitors had secured their accommodations several weeks ago and they are being conducted to their places of residence for the week with the utmost dispatch. The same plan of caring for the vast crowds as was used during the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans last May is being pursued in administering to the wants of their one-time enemies.

Confederates on Committees.

Many prominent Confederate veterans have served on the various committees, and the success of the encampment, which is already assured, is due in no small measure to the work of these veterans, who have thrown themselves into the task of entertaining the men who once faced them on the battlefield. The encampment will in a way be a reunion for the veterans of both the North and South. General Bennet H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, who was largely instrumental in securing the peace memorial which will be dedicated in this city in 1915, will in all likelihood be a visitor at the present encampment.

Everything possible has been done to make the week a gala one. Many special features for the entertainment of the veterans and visitors have been arranged, among them being the Battle Above the Clouds," reproduced in fireworks on Lookout Mountain. This spectacle, taking place on the bench or shelf halfway up the side of the mountain, where during the conflict both sides were enveloped in a cloud which obscured the view and prevented the contestants from seeing each other, will be visible for miles from the surrounding country.

Another feature in the fireworks line has been decided upon for Signal Point on Walden's Ridge, north of the city. This point was used as a signal station by the Union army in 1863, and a large signal fire will blaze forth from this point every night during the encampment. The fire will be visible from four States.

Sham Battle a Feature.

Another event will be the sham battle on the field of Chickamauga between regiments of the regular army, concluding at historic Snodgrass Hill, where 50 years ago Generals Thomas, Brannan, Steedman and others checked the advances of the Confederates and saved the Union army.

On Saturday, the last day of the encampment, the survivors of the battle of Chickamauga will meet on the battlefield at 10 o'clock in the morning at a point where the regimental monuments of the Twentieth Brigade of the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps are located.

Georgia Inventor Plans Flight Across Atlantic

Passenger Airship Service to Europe Proposed

Multiplane Intended to Make Regular Schedule Over Ocean Is Being Built in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A Georgia man, with ambitious vision, is planning an aeroplane trip across the Atlantic Ocean. The time for the venture is not far distant, and the busy hammering and filing that can be heard in the workshop near Savannah tells that every preparation is being made.

It is Captain Matthew A. Batson, a retired army officer, who will make this challenge to destiny. He has been working for years toward this end, and has perfected a unique type of flying machine that is popularly known as the Batson hydro-aeroplane.

So certain are Captain Batson and his friends that the daring venture will be successful that a concern has been organized, known as the Batson Aero Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $300,000, "to operate between Savannah, Ga., and Liverpool England, a line of passenger-carrying air craft," according to the words of the charter.

Captain Batson is president of the company. The line will not be established for little more than a year, but there will be trial flights a-plenty before that time, as the plans state, at Thunderbolt, Brickyard Island, on the Wilmington River, where the plant is located.

Models Fly Faithfully.

The first flight of the hydro-aeroplane will be made early. The models of the machine have flown faithfully. The entire machine is now assembled, the flying section having been fixed to the boat hull several days ago.

It is the intention of Captain Batson to navigate the craft into the Wilmington River, and to make the first trial flights in the direction of Wilmington Island. The tests of the airship will be visible from the Casino, Thunderbolt, and it is expected that thousands of people will make the trip to the resort to see the big machine as it takes to the air.

Of a size to permit the carrying of sufficient fuel for a two days' run, the craft will not have to descend to replenish its supply on the long flight from Savannah to New York, which will be made directly after the first trial flight. Then, circumstances being favorable, the trip across the Atlantic will be attempted.

It is announced that the perfected Batson hydro-aeroplane will have a speed of 100 miles an hour, with a probability of making better time even than that under favorable conditions. Its eleven-foot propellers make 1,000 revolutions a minute. The original machine, including the expense of putting up the aerodrome, will cost about $50,000. Captain Batson declares, however, that other machines of the same type will cost only $20,000.

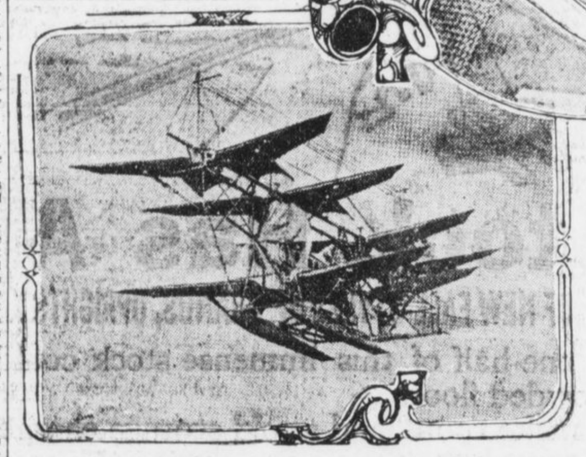
Seeks Commercial Navigation.

Altogether, the intent of the man in the Savannah shop is to render practical the commercial navigation of the air. He is a mechanical engineer, acquiring this his scientific knack. He is a daring soldier, the organizer of the effective Filipino Scouts, and comes thus honestly by his fearlessness. For years he has been at work in perfecting the machine with which the bold experiments will be made, and in which he hopes to conquer the air.

Plants for the construction of the machines will be scattered over the United States, according to the arrangements made by the company. The completed machines, however, will not be offered for indiscriminate sale, but will be used for passenger traffic under the auspices of the company.

The Batson triple-motored aero yacht, as the machine is technically known, will carry about three tons dead weight load. Instead of being comprised of a single plane or a pair, the buoying area is distributed over a large number of wings of moderate size. These are attached to the machine chamber in a way so as to yield to the extra stresses caused when the machine encounters the great "boulders" in the air, just as the springs of an automobile yield when an uneven road is entered.

Single Pilot Governs.



The peculiar construction of the wing is such that the air currents are guided under the wings inwardly toward the body of the machine, where they are banked under the base portion, thus bringing the greatest stress on the part where the weight is carried. Such is the arrangement that the essential "angle of incidence" of all the wings can be governed by a single pilot, even to such an extent that should all the engines be stopped the wings will be automatically set at a safe gliding angle, the course of which is easily controlled.

Captain Batson takes the success of his invention as a matter of course.

"It is far more wonderful," he said, "that men should literally take their lives in their hands and go from Paris to London through the air, over sea and land in their unavoidably unsteady craft than that the Batson aero yacht should, with so much greater carrying capacity and complete automatic stability, be able to go longer distances in perfect safety. A great loss of life appears to be inevitable with aeroplanes of the dangerous and unstable type now in general use, and though the recent Titanic disaster shows that it is impossible to foresee every contingency, yet it is a safe and comforting prediction that because of its automatic stability no such accidents as those which hitherto have happened can possibly occur to a Batson multiplane."

Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. retired, of Savannah, who is the inventor of a multiplane which he declares will make aerial commercial navigation possible.

Captain Batson's multiplane, in which he plans to fly across the Atlantic from Savannah to England.

GHOSTLY LIGHT PUTS TERROR IN MOUNTAINEERS

Government Asked to Send Science Expert to Investigate Flaming Uncanny Orb.

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 13.—Ghostly in appearance, a strange light, seen almost nightly, is gaining materially in brilliancy and has so greatly excited the people of Burke County, in the mountains of Western North Carolina, that an official request has been made at Washington for an investigation by an expert.

R. T. Claywell first saw the strange light about a month ago when he and a party of friends were spending the night at Cold Water.

"There is something uncanny about that light. The folks up in that neighborhood can not fathom it, and we want a Government scientist sent to solve the mysterious glow," said Mr. Claywell.

Arose From Mountain.

"The night I first saw the strange light I was out in the open on Rattlesnake Knob. It was exactly 10:05 o'clock. I remember that well. What first attracted our attention were two hazy lights across the valley on Brown Mountain.

"We watched it with wonder and awe. In a few minutes we saw a brighter light appear at the foot of Brown Mountain, where Upper Creek cuts it at Joy. The light appeared to be swinging, pendulum-like, and then went upward a distance of about 200 feet.

"When it first appeared the light seemed to be round and yellow. It gained steadily in brightness, becoming red as it went upward. When it reached its greatest height it appeared to be like a ball of fire.

Did Not Shed a Ray.

"But the strange thing about it was that the freak of nature did not cast off one ray of light. The space around it was as dark as ever. All this added to its ghostly appearance.

"It was across the valley from us at a distance of about twelve miles. It had rained that day and there were a few clouds still hanging about. When the strange light reached a height of what seemed from our distance to be about 1,200 feet it went behind one of these clouds, and we did not see it any more that night.

"It was a strange experience and many of those in our party came near fainting."

Already the news of this novel contest has attracted wide attention, and it stands unique in the annals of exploitation endeavor, both because of the magnitude of the prize and the fact that it is offered on behalf of the people of an entire region—the biggest booster organization in the world.

A preliminary competition with a prize of $500 will be held to secure the best poem or words for the song, and then the composers of the world will be invited to set these words to music with a prize of $2,000 for the best music. Here is the text of the club's announcement:

"This total prize of twenty-five hundred dollars (2,500) will be divided as follows:

"Five hundred dollars ($500) will be paid for the best poem suitable for musical setting and having a ringing chorus for a multitude of voices. The winning poem, with chorus, will be the words for which music will be required.

"Two thousand dollars ($2,000) will be paid for the best melody or music score for the poem and chorus receiving the award.

"The contest for the poem will close November 1, 1913. Immediately upon the decision of the judges, the poem receiving the award will be given the widest possible publicity in this country and abroad, and the composers of the world will be invited to prepare music to fit the winning poem and chorus, and thus compete for the two thousand dollar music prize, in accordance with the rules to be announced upon the publication of the award for the poem."

HAWAIIAN LINERS PLAN FREQUENT TRIPS TO PANAMA

Company Will Send Big Vessels Through Canal Every 36 Hours, It Is Announced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company will send a steamship through the Panama Canal every 36 hours next year, and that instead of sailing every five days they will send their vessels out every three days, was part of the program announced here to-day by the company.

The statement was provoked because an issued report stated that the American-Hawaiian line was considerably "overbuilt."

The statement of the company follows:

"The fact of having excess tonnage far ahead of the opening of the canal does not disconcert us and the American-Hawaiian line is proud of the fact that their fleet with a capacity of 270,000 tons will be ready in time. When the canal route is used we shall maintain a schedule of one steamer sailing from New York every three days.

"It is true that we have chartered the American and the California to the American and Cuban Steamship Company and we believe these steamships will make several trips to Brazil. These are the ships we constructed when the company was feeling its way, and their arrival in the South American ports will place on view the American flag, the lack of which in foreign waters has been commented on many times."

Little details are the biggest things in Printing!

Small mechanical imperfections in the finishing of a fine piece of printing puts the whole job "out o' gear."

The edges of a Booklet, for instance, trimmed at a slight angle out of parallel, makes the customer "see dirks and cleavers."

Skilled workmen and the highest type of machinery in the BYRD bindery make this imperfection an impossibility. The BYRD PRINTERY checks details as they go from hand to hand, with the pleasing results of perfect printing.

40 CITIES WILL FORM GEORGIA CIVIC CHAMBER

Atlanta to Send 50 Delegates to Macon Meeting to Organize State Commercial Club.

Forty Georgia cities will send delegations Tuesday to the meeting at Macon which will organize the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Atlanta will send 50 representative men in a special car. Waycross and Albany also will send specials.

Indications are there will be 400 civic leaders at Macon to launch the State Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to do for Georgia what the Atlanta Chamber has done for the city.

The meeting will be called to order at the Hotel Dempsey, Macon, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by C. J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 o'clock at the hotel, with the Macon Chamber as host. An afternoon session will complete the deliberations.

There are 70 such State-wide development organizations in the United States. Texas has furnished the model for the proposed Georgia chamber.

Officers are to be elected at the Macon meeting, including a president and about 50 vice presidents, representing all sections of Georgia.

Speakers will include Richard Edmonds, of the Manufacturers' Record; M. V. Richards, of the Southern Railway, and McLaine Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers' Association.

Many Cities to Take Part.

The following cities will send representatives:

Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Baxley, Brunswick, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Clarkston, Crawfordville, College Park, Columbus, Dublin, Douglas, Dawsonville, Eatonton, Fitzgerald, Griffin, Kirkwood, LaGrange, Lithonia, McDonough, Macon, Madison, Moultrie, Newnan, Ocilla, Springfield, Swainsboro, Toccoa, Union City, Vienna, Waycross, Hawkinsville, Statesboro and Mount Pleasant.

One hundred members of the live Macon Chamber of Commerce have been named on a special committee to greet and entertain the delegates.

A number of the leaders in the industrial development of Georgia have been mentioned for the presidency of the State Chamber, but so far no one seems sure of the position.

The executive committee is authorized to appoint a vice president for every county in the State and after careful consideration about 50 vice presidents have been selected. Other selections will be made during the next few days.

The executive committee includes C. J. Haden, Atlanta, chairman; P. M. Atkinson, Madison; R. D. Cole, Newnan; J. S. Davis, Albany; G. W. Deen, Waycross; J. A. McCord, Atlanta; W. H. Shippen, Ellijay; C. A. Wickersham, College Park.

DeKalb County To Be Well Represented.

DeKalb County, headed by Kirkwood and Decatur, will send an enthusiastic delegation to the State Chamber of Commerce meeting at Macon Tuesday, with the intention of playing an important part in the proceedings. The Kirkwood Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting to arouse zeal in behalf of the proposal, and the result was a list of formal pledges of members who will attend.

They include R. F. Gilliem, John I. Armstrong, Dr. E. L. Daniel, William E. Saunders, Dr. C. H. House, J. T. Viley, E. M. Willingham, John Lowe Smith, O. O. Ray, H. C. Burr, J. A. Norman, R. C. Ozmer, J. P. Ellis, Joe Tillinghast and J. A. Earl.

Decatur will send a party in automobiles. Lithonia and Clarkston will send delegates, and, altogether, there probably will be 75 representatives from DeKalb at Macon.

The Drum and Bugle Corps of Decatur Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will be in the party.

Borden Heiress to Pick Own College

Will Solve Question That Parted Parents by Going to Vassar or Wellesley.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Miss Ramona Borden, 18-year-old daughter of Gail Borden, the multi-millionaire condensed milk manufacturer, whose disappearance from a sanitarium in Ponponton Lake, N. J., in April caused a nation-wide search to be made for her by her father, plans to enter either Wellesley or Vassar this fall.

The failure of her parents to agree on a school for her is said to have led to their agreement to live apart. Now the girl has solved the problem herself.

Because she has been the brunt of this family strife, Ramona has come to be known among her friends as the "poor little rich girl." She has written to her New York friends.

"I have ceased to work and be troubled," she says. "Through this summer I have learned to laugh and be happy."

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

(From The Family Physician.)

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had of any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Advt.

Polaire Adds to Her Ugliness With Nose Ring

Famous French Actress to Wear It in Atlanta

Mademoiselle Polaire, famous French actress, wearing her nose ring. She will appear with this ornament when she plays in Atlanta this winter.

Fascinating Artist Has No Hope That Ornament Will Be Generally Accepted Fad.

Mademoiselle Polaire, being by common consent the ugliest theatrical star alive and the most fascinating withal, has an absolute right to wear what she pleases. It is only when a woman has an open pride in her lack of pulchritude that she has achieved a sort of free-will condition as regards clothes and ornaments.

And because she is an independent in matters of raiment the fascinating Polaire is going to show Atlanta something that will open the eyes of every man and woman within its limits—she is coming to Atlanta, you know, with Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, the dancers.

Her particular innovation is a nose ring—a daring, unprecedented nose ring, suggestive of nothing so much as a Fiji Islander. But then the turkey trot is hardly suggestive of the art of terpsichore, so it is not an unbelievable thing that Mademoiselle Polaire's nose ring will become—but no, American girls mean no harm by any of their fads, and even their critics vow that they have common sense enough and to spare.

There will be no nose ring fad, however much the fascinating Polaire flaunts her badge of eccentricity before their faces.

Polaire, it is announced, never dreams that her own freak fashion will become the vogue. Perhaps that is why she adopted it. At least, she will have something to herself.

But Atlanta will have an opportunity of judging, and perhaps if it likes can place an order for early winter delivery.

It is expected that eight or ten clergymen will be in attendance on the home-coming. Rev. B. F. Fraser is present pastor of the church, under whose pastorate remarkable development has been achieved in the last year.

GRAND JURY TO BEGIN CRAWFORD INVESTIGATION

Inquisitorial Body Will in All Probability Take Up Poison Case This Week.

Grand jurors of Fulton County will this week in all probability begin their investigation of the death of the late Josua B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose widow has been charged with poisoning him in order to get his riches barely a month after their marriage in 1909.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, is at her Peachtree street home, serenely confident that if the Grand Jury should indict her she would be promptly acquitted by a trial jury. She declares the bringing of the charge of poisoning against her was done merely as a new move of the heirs of the aged real estate operator, who are fighting for the $350,000 fortune that was left to her.

Poison Presence Admitted.

The report of Dr. H. F. Harris that traces of morphine poisoning were found in the stomach of the deceased is not denied by Mrs. Crawford or her counsel. They simply contend that this drug was prescribed for Crawford during his last illness, and declare that the attending physician will take the stand and testify that he administered the opiate to relieve the aged man's pain.

The Crawford heirs, however, take an entirely different view of the matter. They charge a deep-laid conspiracy on the part of Mrs. Crawford and Fred Lumb, a barber now in New York, and who is sought by the heirs as an accomplice.

Their contention is that when J. B. Crawford, then in his seventies, went to St. Augustine, Fla., in 1909 in search of health and took board with Mary Belle Bishop, the woman then and there planned to wed the old man and as soon as she could make him will her his property, poison him, and then wed Lumb.

The contesting heirs are nieces and nephews of the man for whose wealth they are fighting, and though the will contest has been on practically since the death of Crawford, it was not until a few months ago that the poison charge was made and the body was exhumed for examination of the stomach.

Sheriff Issues Warrant.

A Coroner's jury at Carrollton, the old home of the Crawfords, returned a verdict declaring that the deceased had come to his death from poison administered by his wife.

It was then that the Sheriff of Carroll County mailed a warrant to the Sheriff of Fulton for the arrest. When officers went to serve it, Mrs. Crawford was not at her Atlanta home, but she afterward surrendered to the Sheriff here and promptly furnished the $6,000 bond required.

In addition to the poison charge the nieces and nephews have alleged that undue influence was exercised by Mrs. Crawford to have herself made the chief beneficiary in the will, and witnesses have been introduced at the will hearing to prove that at the time he uttered the instrument, Crawford was not only mentally unbalanced through senility, but was constantly under the influence of alcohol.

MAYORS URGE U. S. CONTROL OF MISSISSIPPI

Every Section Joins South for Federal Protection Against River's Spring Floods.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—The Mayors of cities in more than half of the States of the Union have come out for Government aid in the protection of the Mississippi Valley States from floods. This sweeping indorsement of the Ransdell-Humphreys bill, which provides $60,000,000 for levees and comes up at the December session of Congress, is one of the interesting exhibits of the work the Mississippi River Levee Association is doing in the interest of Government levees for the lower Mississippi River.

Out of the replies already received not one chief executive has expressed the slightest disapproval of the proposition. The Mayors of cities in the far Western States, in New England, in the Middle West, in the great northern section and from every Southern State have come out unanimously for the project. Each letter shows an unusual familiarity with the subject. The people of California, Massachusetts and Montana seem to have been studying the flood proposition with as much interest as the residents of the States immediately affected by floods.

One of the most interesting letters is one from the chief executive of Gallipolis, Ohio, a city which almost was sacrificed to the Ohio floods of 1913. Mayor Cadot, of that city, says in part:

"While our own valley suffers greatly from floods, I believe the greater damage is done in the Mississippi Valley, and I earnestly hope you will succeed in securing the required appropriation from the Government, and be able to begin active operations at the earliest possible moment.

"In my opinion, the levee plan is the best remedy for overflow that has yet been proposed."

The Mayor of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of your work and believe that it is fair and just that the National Government should take up the burden and give you whatever aid is needed."

The Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I heartily concur in the views expressed in your communication regarding the spring floods of the lower Mississippi. I believe the Government should lend every aid possible to protect the people of this vast territory and that steps in this direction should be taken at the earliest possible moment."

These are only a few of the numerous letters that have been received. They illustrate, however, the sentiment toward the levee proposition and the widesperad interest in the matter of floods.

Commerce Chosen For Press Meeting

Editors of Weeklies Hear Rival Towns' Claims for Honor of Entertaining Them.

Commerce was selected as the next meeting place of the Georgia Weekly Press Association at a meeting of the executive committee of the organization in the office of H. M. Stanley at the State Capitol Saturday. The claims of Covington were also presented to the committee by a delegation from that town. The committee waited until 2:30 o'clock for the delegation from Madison, which was also after the 1914 meeting, but it failed to appear.

The next gathering of the editors will be held July 14 and 15. The following officers were present at the meeting: P. T. McCutcheon, of Franklin, president; C. E. Benns, of Butler, secretary; B. H. Hardy, Barnesville; J. F. Shannon, Commerce; H. M. Stanley, and Rush V. Burton, Lavonia. The winning delegation from Commerce was headed by J. F. Shannon, of The Commerce News, and Paul T. Harber, of The Commerce Observer.

New Cotton Resists Black Root Disease

State Entomologists Will Have 4,000 Bushels of Its Seed Ready by Spring.

Reports received by the Department of Entomology at the State Capitol from Southwest Georgia are to the effect that the black root is causing a great deal of damage. This cotton disease is costing the Georgia cotton planters hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, and every effort is being made to check its ravages.

The Department of Entomology has developed a variety of cotton seed which is resistant to the black root and reports from the planters who use this variety are to the effect that it is not suffering from the blight. The department will have 4,000 bushels of this seed next spring for distribution.

Alkahest President Goes to Convention

S. Russell Bridges Is Off to Attend Annual National Lyceum Convention in Chicago.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Bridges and a number of prominent Southern Lyceum people.

The convention of the International Association is the one which promised to meet in Atlanta this year, and then changed to Chicago because a great many of the artists were unable to make the trip to the South.

OLIVER CLAIMS TWIN BROTHER IS MAN WANTED

Bank Wrecker and Bigamist Is Turned Over to Mississoppi Authorities by State of Georgia.

ALBANY, Sept. 13.—After five days spent in hearing the habeas corpus case of L. C. Harding, alias A. D. Oliver, the Climax bank wrecker, Judge Clayton Jones at 4:55 o'clock this afternoon turned the prisoner over to the officers from the State of Mississippi, who had a requisition properly signed by the Governor of that State.

Harding, undes the alias of Oliver, went to Climax, Ga., in December, 1908, claiming to be looking for a large tract of timber land to purchase. While there he was attracted by the opportunities that presented themselves. In a remarkably short time he had established himself from a financial standpoint. He carried on his dealings in true Wallingford style until a bank that he secured control of failed. When the bank was on the verge of bankruptcy, he claims to have started to New York to make more financial deals, but was arrested.

After much litigation, he was held on the chrage of bigamy, he having married in Climax while he had a living wife in another State. He was sentenced for a term of years, which ended only five days ago. When about to be released, the United States Government applied for the prisoner, as did the State of Mississippi. After consultation, the United States officers withdrew their request and the officers of Mississippi pressed their application.

Oliver claimed that he was not the man that had escaped from jail in Mississippi, but a twin brother that resembled him very much. Pictures were procured from the State penitentiary of Ohio, where Oliver also has been confined, and Bertillion measurements were sent. While there was some slight variation in the measurements, the general stature was the same and the marks on the body were sufficient to convince the judge that he was the man wanted.

Oliver had worked up one of the best stories that has ever been heard in a Georgia courtroom, and no doubt would have caused a jury of twelve men to have stayed locked up for a long time, as he had gained the sympathy of at least two-thirds of his hearers.

As soon as Judge Jones ruled that he was the man wanted in Mississippi, the papers were signed promptly, and within five minutes he was in an automobile, handcuffed to a deputy sheriff from Aberdeen, Miss., being taken from the State.

NEW ORLEANS, LA

FILIPINOS FAR FROM READY FOR SELF-RULE; PROOF IS ON THE WAY

Bishop Fallows Declares That Dean Worcester, Student of Islands, Returning From Archipelago, Will Show Fallacy of Native Government.

In view of the departure of Burton Harrison, the new Wilson Governor General of the Philippines, who sailed Wednesday from San Francisco for Manila, and the declared intention of the Democratic Congress to give to the Filipinos absolute independence eight years hence, the following article, by Bishop Fallows, is illuminating.

Bishop Fallows traveled 10,000 miles among the islands to satisfy himself of conditions there and he concludes that independence for the Filipinos now or within a few years would be a calamity. His article follows:

By SAMUEL FALLOWS.

(Bishop of Chicago and Noted Educational Authority.)

There shortly comes from the Philippines a man who has a valuable and timely message for the American people. He is Dean C. Worcester, recently Secretary of the Interior, the American who has had the longest and most intimate contact with Philippine affairs.

Many years before our war with Spain, when to the popular American mind Manila and the Philippines were indefinite and hazy points on the map, Mr. Worcester made two extended tours of the archipelago. As a member of scientific expeditions, gathering data and specimens, he twice traveled the length of the group given into our keeping, and when President McKinley needed the counsel and assistance of men of knowledge, Dean Worcester was one of the first to whom he turned.

President McKinley appointed him a member of the Schurmann Commission, and when William Howard Taft was chosen to found civil government in the Philippines he continued him as member of the commission, which remains to this day as the senior governing body in the islands.

Mr. Worcester was made Secretary of the Interior in the Government instituted by McKinley and approved by Congress, and continuously retained the post until a week ago Monday, when he resigned to make way for a man chosen by the Wilson Administration.

In this capacity he organized and directed the Bureaus of Health, Land, Forestry and Science, besides becoming the guardian of the million non-Christian tribesmen numbered among our wards in the Orient. Taft, Wright, Ide, Smith, Moses and other veteran administrators of the Philippine Government finished their labors and passed to other fields, but Worcester remained fourteen years.

Notable Service to Nation.

Dean Worcester's service to the nation has been a notable one in many respects, but his guardianship of the wild men, an extraordinary tale of service and adventure, must make the largest appeal to us at home. The Spanish Government and the Christian peoples of the Philippines appear to have given themselves little concern as to their wild neighbors. A few hardy and devoted missionaries ventured among them, but contact seems to have been largely accidental and occasional.

The largest groups of non-civilized peoples inhabit the province of North Luzon, living in wildly picturesque and formerly inaccessible mountains. These superb but primitive peoples have engaged in inter-tribal warfare throughout their history and this terrible condition was accentuated by the repulsive practice of taking and preserving as house ornaments the heads of their enemies. From this custom they derived the name of headhunters. Their feuds were both tribal and personal, and all the people were touched by the malign hand of vengeance and fear.

Rapacity had marked the attitude of the Christian Filipino in his dealings with these unhappy children of the mountains, and when Worcester and his men went among them they, too, were received as enemies. Their first greetings were challenges to battles, and it was only through superb courage that they won a hearing in the first place, while endless patience and infinite tact were necessary to the establishment of the confidence and friendship which has resulted in the acceptance by the wild people of civilized law.

Worcester not only won and retained the friendship of the wild people, but brought peace to them and turned their thoughts and hands to the more useful things of life. Warring tribes were brought together in friendly relationship and the rivalry of athletics took the place of forays. Schools were started, industry and husbandry encouraged and the once inaccessible mountains were bisected and crosscut with roads and trails, largely constructed by the wild men themselves. Occasionally a head is taken, but the custom may be said to have almost disappeared.

Under the old order the men were so busy fighting that farming was neglected and frequently large numbers of people were in want. The termination of warfare, individual and collective, has sent thousands of men back to the fields and the food supply is now always ample to meet all the needs of the people and leave a considerable annual surplus.

Gained Their Friendship.

The wild tribe relationship in the Philippines offered at the beginning a veritable hornets' nest of trouble for the United States Government, the possibilities of which are strikingly illustrated by the experience of the Japanese in Formosa and the Dutch in Java, where costly and endless war has been waged against the hillmen. Had the die been cast for war rather than peace with the hillmen of the Philippines, it would have been a formidable and endless task to conquer and control them. The tribes are numerous and their men are big, upstanding fellows, born of forebears who never knew peace. Fear is not a quality of their warriors, and they would have been a troublesome enemy.

In gaining their friendship Worcester and his men rendered large service to their country and the cause of civilization and set in motion a work that is unique in the whole relationship between civilization and savagery. These peoples have great possibilities of development and there falls to the successors of Dean Worcester in the Philippines an important duty to carry forward the task upon which he made such a splendid beginning.

The most important relationship that Dean Worcester has had toward the rest of the Filipino people has been on the side of sanitation and science.

It was necessary to wage the battle from many sides. The first requisite was an up-to-date scientific institution that would furnish the best fighting material, and there was created, under Worcester's direction, a great laboratory that has won more acclaim in Europe than it has in the United States.

Another necessity was a modern school of medicine and surgery that would train Filipinos to minister to the needs of their own people, and such an institution was founded. Hospitals were another dire necessity, and these were created. Clinics were another need, and these were provided. Nurses were needed everywhere, and training schools for young Filipino women were started.

Thousands of lepers were scattered throughout the archipelago, and these were slowly gathered in a great colony founded at Culion Island. Slowly through the years there was a steady gain against disease and the opposition of the people; only a decade was necessary finally to turn the tide. Hospitals and clinics which once aroused the fear of the people and were deserted are now unable to meet their daily demands. Manila General Hospital is now the largest and busiest institution in the capital and the Manila Free Clinic has grown to be the third largest in the world.

Dean Will Tell of Filipinos.

Freed from long official service and the restraints which it consciously and unconsciously imposes, Dean Worcester is coming home to talk to the country about the Philippines. He says that he intends to travel from coast to coast telling what he knows about the islands and their peoples, and his message is going to be worth hearing. He knows more about his subject than any other living man.

Mr. Worcester has prepared a series of nine addresses, and their subjects are as follows: "Among the Wild Tribes of the Philippines," "The Headhunters of Northern Luzon," "What the United States Has Done for the Wild Tribes of the Philippine Islands," "Forest Resources of the Philippine Islands," "Commercial Possibilities of the Philippine Islands," "Health Work in the Philippine Islands," "Educating the Filipinos," "Modern Manila," and "Is Philippine Independence a Present Possibility?"

To supplement and illuminate his lectures Mr. Worcester has made an extraordinary collection of Philippine motion pictures. These cover in striking manner the wild tribes, as well as many other features of island life.

My hair came out gradually and it was dry and lifeless. Dandruff fell on my coat collar till I was ashamed of it. My head had been that way all summer, itching and burning till I couldn't sleep in any peace.

"I tried salves but it looked like they made it worse. I got ——— but it did me no good so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of the Cuticura Ointment and you don't know what a relief they gave me. In two weeks my head was well." (Signed) J. L. Smith, Oct. 28, 1912.

GEMS SEIZED BY SHERMAN ON MARCH CLAIMED

War Department Asked for Jewelry Taken by Noted General on Invasion of South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two persons giving the names of Lord and Lady Banff called at the Treasury Department yesterday and claimed a quantity of jewelry and silver plate said to have been stored there for safe-keeping during the Civil War. They were referred to the Wtr Department, where records are being searched in hope of finding the valuables.

Lady Banff, who acted as sopkesman, told a dramatic story of how the jewels were sent to the Treasury by General W. T. Sherman from a convent in Columbia, S. C. A record, she said, was sent to the War Department.

During the war, according to the story, the people of Columbia became alarmed lest the Federals would rob them of their jewelry and silver. They gathered their goods together, made up a list and hid the valuables under the floor of the Ursulian Convent there.

Nuns Revealed Hiding Place.

When General Sherman arrived in Columbia, he set fire to the convent, and the nuns, fearing that the valuables would be forever destroyed, revealed their hiding place.

General Sherman took charge of the property, it is said, and sent it to the Treasury, making afull report to the War Department.

Yesterday's visitors saw Byrom Newton, private secretary to Secretary McAdoo, and told him the story. Mr. Newton, on investigation, found that during the war a great deal of jewelry and silver plate had been turned over to the Treasury for safekeeping. This was kept there, he said, until about ten years ago, when it was sent to the War Department. The visitors were sent to that department.

On arrival there they met John C. Scofield, assistant and chief clerk, who referred them to Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, Acting Adjutant General. They told Colonel Heistand the same story, asking him to let them look at the report made by General Sherman.

Lady Banff explained that her mother had placed some of the family jewels in the lot, and that she now wanted to recover them.

Unable to Find Report.

Colonel Heistand made an examination, but failed to find any report made by General Sherman. He called in some of the oldest clerks of the department, but they, too, were unable to remember anything of the kind. Lady Banff insisted that it was there, declaring that when she was a girl she had visited the War Department and had seen it.

Colonel Heistand said that he would make a further investigation, and that he would notify the visitors, who are living in Washington, in Sixth street northwest.

This couple has been living in Washington for some time and has on several occasions been prominent in the news. The man claims the title of the Rt. Hon. Robert Walter Finlater Ogilvie, Lord Banff and heir to the earldom of Finlater, Scotland. He is a graduate of three universities—Princeton, Columbia, and West Virginia. Lady Banff was a Southern beauty, it is understood.

MRS. GODBEE IS UNSHAKEN BY HER LIFE SENTENCE

Convicted Woman Immediately Begins Fight for New Trial. Declares She Will Surely Be Freed in Long Run.

Mother of Slain Bride Expresses Joy When She Hears of Conviction Without Death Penalty. Dramatic Scene in Court.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—Stoical and calm as she has ever been since she fired the shots that ended the lives of her former husband and his young bride, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee immediately began preparations for her fight for a new trial as soon as she heard the jury pronounce her guilty and the court fix her punishment at life imprisonment.

Colonel F. A. Saffold, senior counsel for Mrs. Godbee, announced this afternoon that a skeleton motion for a new trial would be filed at once, according to statutory regulations.

Slain Bride's Mother Glad.

"I am glad Mrs. Godbee was given a life sentence," was the comment of Mrs. M. G. Boyer, mother of the slain girl, after Judge Hammond had set the penalty. "She deserved punishment, although I did not want her hanged. A woman of her type is dangerous at large."

Mrs. Godbee would not see reporters, but it was reported by friends who visited her cell that she was cheerful and optimistic, and was confident of an acquittal on a new trial.

Miss Sarah Godbee, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Godbee, collapsed as the foreman of the jury announced the verdict. She has been a constant companion of her mother during the trial, and her own cheerfulness has had much to do with the cheerfulness of her mother.

She held her mother's hand in hers as the jury filed slowly into the courtroom. Eagerly she scanned the faces of each man, hoping for a sign that they would declare Mrs. Godbee not guilty. Each man's face was grave. Her hand tightened over that of her mother, and tears rolled down her cheeks. As the foreman rose to announce the verdict she leaned forward, the most intensely eager person in the room.

Mrs. Godbee Not Moved.

As the dreaded word "guilty" fell from the lips of the jurymen Miss Godbee shrieked and collapsed. In a hush broken only by the sobs of the daughter, Judge Hammond ordered Mrs. Godbee to stand and receive the sentence of the court. Gently disengaging the clinging hands of her daughter, Mrs. Godbee rose and stood without a tremor while the court ordered that she be confined in the penitentiary the remainder of her natural life.

Mrs. Godbee's daughter, young and beautiful, presented a pitiful spectacle that brought tears to the eyes of every person in the courtroom. She clung to Mrs. Godbee's neck, while the mother gently patted her head and whispered words of encouragement. As the Sheriff stepped forward and placed his hand on Mrs. Godbee's shoulder to lead her away to prison the young daughter broke down completely. She pillowed her head on her mother's breast, tears streaming down her face, her sobs audible in every part of the courtroom.

As the hand of the Sheriff fell upon her shoulder, opening wide the gates of the prison, Mrs. Godbee disengaged her daughter's hand, imprinted a last kiss upon her lips and rose to her feet, gazing calmly at the jury.

"I am ready," she said.

Still Expects Liberty.

Silence fell over the crowded courtroom as the convicted woman was led to the doors. The crowd outside, sensing the dramatic touch given to the trial was as silent as the grave while Mrs. Godbee entered an automobile that was waiting. She was followed to the jail by a number of her friends, many of them prominent in Millen society. As the gates clanged behind her, her only words were:

"I'll be freed in the long run."

Americans' Absence Stuns Hotel Keepers

August Is Disastrous to Both Bonifaces and Tradesmen in Southern Germany.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—The hotel keepers and tradesmen in certain quarters of South Germany are dismayed by the marked decrease in American tourist traffic; August was almost disastrous to them.

The Munich hotel proprietors were hit hardest and are complaining loudly. This loss of American patronage is due largely, it is said, to the agitation by certain Americans in Munich against the systematic exploitation to which travelers are subjected in that city. Experienced tourists, tired of paying double prices for everything, are shunning Munich and going to Berlin and other North German cities.

Ambassador Wilson To Take Platform

Former Diplomat Will Write Book and Lecture on Experience in Mexico.

Mr. Wilson has arrived at the Waldorf from his home in Indiana to receive his household furniture, which was forwarded from Mexico City.

The book will deal with Mr. Wilson's seventeen years in the diplomatic service, including his work in Mexico and events of a recent date. Parts of the book dealing with the situation across the Southern border will be printed in a magazine. The lecture will deal with the Mexican situation. Mr. Wilson declined yesterday to comment on Mexican affairs.

Washington to Lose Most Noted Beauty

Mrs. Spencer Cosby Accompanies Husband to New Post as Military Attache.

Special Cable to The American.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Washington will soon lose "its most beautiful woman," for Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the newly appointed military attache of the American Embassy in Paris will accompany her husband to the French capital in a few days.

Prince Christian of Prussia, during his recent American visit, saw Mrs. Cosby in Washington and exclaimed: "There is the most beautiful American woman I have ever seen." Mrs. Cosby has a fragile, delicate beauty, and her arms and hands have been pronounced by sculptors to be faultless in proportion.

Georgia Man Seeks Job as 'Diatoceff'

Rockmart Applicant Writes Postoffice Department, but Letter Goes to Secret Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—What is a "diatoceff?" This is a question that is puzzling the Postoffice Department. To-day the following letter from a Georgia man applying for a job was received:

"Postmaster General:

"Dear Sir—I wont a job with you all. Say, I wont a job of diatoceff. You writ soon to me. I sure wont a job with you all. My age is 25 1-2 years old.

"Your kind friend,

"Rockmart, Ga."

The Postoffice Department thinks that "diatoceff" may be Georgian for detective. If it is discovered the Rockmart youth is afflicted with "Sherlock Holmesitis," the application will be turned over to the Secret Service Bureau.

Marshall at Last Finds $2,000 House

Vice President Keeps Location Secret Fearing a Raise in Rent by Landlord.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—After long months of weary house hunting, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have found a house which comes well within the $2,000 the Vice President feels he can afford for house rent out of his $12,000 salary.

Lest some envious person see their house and try to raise the bid on it, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall are refusing to tell its exact location.

It is admitted, however, that it is on the fashionable Avenue of the Presidents.

Poetess Enjoys After-Dinner Cigar

Sister of President Lowell, of Harvard, Makes No Attempt to Hide Smoking.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—That Miss Amy Lowell, poetess, sister of President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, made a regular habit of smoking an after-dinner cigar on the deck of the Cunarder Laconia, was the assertion made by her fellow passengers on the vessel, which arrived Wednesday from Liverpool.

No attempt to conceal her penchant for cigars was made by Miss Lowell, these passengers say.

To newspaper men at the dock Miss Lowell admitted that she was interested in suffrage, though she denied any sympathy with the militants and insisted that she supported them very "mildly." Miss Lowell's age, a matter of some discussion among her fellow passengers, is understood to be about 45.

Georgia Man Plans Ocean Flight

Proposes European Air Line

Inventor Sees Sure Success

Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. retired, of Savannah, who is the inventor of a multiplane which he declares will make aerial commercial navigation possible.

Captain Batson's multiplane, in which he plans to fly across the Atlantic from Savannah to England.

Multiplane Intended to Carry Passengers Across Ocean Is Being Built in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A Georgia man, with ambitious vision, is planning an aeroplane trip across the Atlantic Ocean. The time for the venture is not far distant, and the busy hammering and filing that can be heard in the workshop near Savannah tells that every preparation is being made.

It is Captain Matthew A. Batson, a retired army officer, who will make this challenge to destiny. He has been working for years toward this end, and has perfected a unique type of flying machine that is popularly known as the Batson hydro-aeroplane.

So certain are Captain Batson and his friends that the daring venture will be successful that a concern has been organized, known as the Batson Aero Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $300,000, "to operate between Savannah, Ga., and Liverpool England, a line of passenger-carrying air craft," according to the words of the charter.

Captain Batson is president of the company. The line will not be established for little more than a year, but there will be trial flights a-plenty before that time, as the plans state, at Thunderbolt, Brickyard Island, on the Wilmington River, where the plant is located.

Models Fly Faithfully.

The first flight of the hydro-aeroplane will be made early. The models of the machine have flown faithfully. The entire machine is now assembled, the flying section having been fixed to the boat hull several days ago.

It is the intention of Captain Batson to navigate the craft into the Wilmington River, and to make the first trial flights in the direction of Wilmington Island. The tests of the airship will be visible from the Casino, Thunderbolt, and it is expected that thousands of people will make the trip to the resort to see the big machine as it takes to the air.

14-CENT COTTON AND BUMPER CROP FORETELL REIGN OF PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT GEORGIA

Fine Yield of Corn, Oats and Hay, With Top Prices for Staple's By-Products, Is Expected to Give the State Its Banner Year.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM IS EVIDENT IN ALL BUSINESS

Strict Economy Practiced by Farmers Makes Margin of Profit Tremendous---Bankers Are Jubilant, While Merchants Predict Great Season.

By M. A. ROSE.

Georgia, the whole Southeast, and Atlanta—because it is the commercial and financial center of the Southeast—will enter upon one of the most prosperous eras any section of the nation ever has enjoyed when the cotton crop is moving in earnest this fall—by October 1 at the latest.

In 1911, all seasons put their heads together in kindly conspiracy, and Georgia grew 2,768,627 bales of cottton, the greatest crop the historic State ever knew. It is the fashion to quote 1911 as the most wonderful year the State could expect. Unmistakable signs show 1913 will overtop 1911.

Here is the proof:

In 1911 Georgia grew, or let us say gathered—for it grew thousands of bales which never were ginned or even picked—2,768,627 bales of cotton. But the whole South grew 15,622,701 bales, excluding linters. Prices were correspondingly low. Georgia got about $124,500,000 for its 1911 crop.

Almost ready for the gins to-day are 2,250,000 bales. Indications are that this crop will bring Georgia $155,500,000, for 14-cent middling cotton is a probability, not a possibility.

Of this $155,000,000 a much greater proportion will be profit than accrued from the banner crop. Four reasons are apparent: This is a yield produced at less cost than any previous crop; drouth in the West will make the total yield short of the world's actual needs, particularly as the left-over supply is abnormally small; Georgia will spend less for corn, hay and oats than ever before, having record-breaking crops of all three food-stuffs; the shortage of corn, hay and oats will mean good prices for that most important by-product of cottton, cotton seed.

SHORT CORN CROP INEVITABLE.

Consider the last first, because it has been overlooked generally.

Drouth in Kansas and the other great agricultural States of the West and Southwest makes a short crop of corn inevitable. Corn is selling at an abnormally high price—around 77 cents at Chicago and St. Louis for the actual stuff.

Seventy-seven cent corn means high beef and pork. It's pretty expensive to fatten hogs or cattle for market on that sort of diet. High pork spells high lard. High lard means greater demand for cotton seed oil products, so much so that the cotton seed oil speculator watches the lard market as closely as he does the oil quotations. Expensive feed, too, means a shortage of cattle for slaughter and a shortage of blood and bone fertilizer, the packers' by-product, which is just where cotton seed meal fertilizers may reap a harvest. Expensive corn, again, insures greater demand for cotton seed hulls as cattle feed.

No one wants to go on record as saying that cotton seed will sell at a record price. But it is evident it will not be a drug on the market. Already cotton seed is selling for $20 a ton and better in South Georgia.

Crushers say Georgia will send 900,000 tons of seed to oil mills this fall. At $20 a ton that is $180,000,000. Add that to $155,000,000 for the lint—it makes one dizzy!

Back to the first reason for Georgia's enormous prospective profits. Everyone recognizes that economy has been the watchword for the year. The farmer has bought as little as possible at the store. He has borrowed as little money as possible. He has cut down his supply of fertilizer. The old harness, the old wagon, the same old mule, the same overalls, have served another season. Small expense and good selling price make excellent profits.

LITTLE COTTON IN WEST.

Texas and Oklahoma, experts say, will produce not more than 4,000,000 bales this year, as against 5,278,500 in 1911. Alabama and Mississippi show severe deterioration through the combined malevolence of bad weather and insects. Louisiana never has been a factor in the cotton world since the boll weevil invaded the Creole State. The Southeast will make, in proportion, the best crop of all the belt.

All this would be of little avail if the Georgia farmer had to spend all the money he got for corn, hay and oats to feed his mules. In past years he has done this, but this year he will not. Georgia this year produced the largest corn crop in its history. The hay and oat crops also were good. It would be ruinous to spend the proceeds even from 14-cent cotton for 77-cent corn. Fortunately, in 1913 Georgia will not.

There is some difference of opinion just now as to the probable size of the crop in this State. Gentlemen otherwise calm and serene are wont to grow purplish of face and thump desks when the subject is argued.

J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture for the State, says Georgia will gin 2,000,000 bales of cotton. He believes dry weather has lopped 400,000 to 500,000 bales from the early prospect.

A. P. Coles, who has made the estimate for the Central Bank and Trust Corporation for seven years and missed it not more than 50,000 bales in the seven, puts the crop at 2,600,000 bales. A favorite estimate is 2,500,000 bales. Other figures stand in order between these two extremes.

GREAT PROFIT ASSURED.

Just to stay out of the argument, 2,250,000 bales has been selected as the basis for computations given here. It does not affect the argument. If the crop is 2,000,000 bales, Georgia still will make an enormous profit. If Georgia's crop is 2,600,00 bales—all the better.

As to 14-cent cotton—it is not an impossibility, but a probability. Thirteen cents now is being paid at Savannah for middling. That part of the crop which has been ginned is being sold freely. Although little has been said about it, there undoubtedly is a good deal of "distress cotton" on the market—cotton sold to pay debts which are pressing. With continued reports of bad weather in the West, or anything like an early frost, and consequent shortened yield, the market may jump again.

And there is little cotton left for the mills of the world to use. The visible supply at the end of the cotton year, August 30, was in round figures only 2,000,000 bales. The crop has been estimated at 12,900,000 bales. That leaves 14,900,000 bales for the world to use, and the mills of Europe, Japan, India, China and the United States want 16,000,000 bales yearly now, the best authorities agree.

It looks like a "bull" year.

Georgia has been through the test of fire. The year has been an ordeal. But harvest time finds sagacious business men in jubilant mood. Cheerfulness amounting almost to exultation is the keynote of sentiment to-day among the shrewdest. Expressions of the city's recognized leaders are unanimous in their forecast of prosperity.

Georgia Is To Be Envied, Declares Governor Slaton

GEORGIA is to be envied. The season now opening will bring to this most favored State the blessings of plenty and prosperity dispensed with lavish hand. Every circumstance is in collusion to make this a record year.

Georgia this year will make a reasonable cotton crop. The other States will have short yields. Georgia's, then, will be big in relation to the total, and every Georgian should get good prices for his cotton.

But that is not all. The best part of it is that not all the millions which come into the State for cotton will go out this year for hay, corn and oats. Georgia this year raised what seems conceded to be the largest corn crop in its history. It has hay and oats in large quantities as well, while the nation's yields of all these feed stuffs is short, because of drouth.

Georgia has every climate from the cold winters of North Georgia, which serve to perfect the apples of Habersham County, to the almost tropical mildness of the coast, where you can see rice fields. Between are corn and cotton, oats and hay, peaches and melons, sugar cane, yams and potatoes. We depend, not on ditches which may go dry, but upon the kindly rains from the Almighty, and are not disappointed. And in this wonderful State live the nation's finest people.

What more could Georgia ask?

---GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

Looks for Huge Crop, Easily 2,600,000 Bales

A. P. Coles, of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, is convinced there will be a huge crop in Georgia, and he never before has missed it far. He writes to the country banks:

"We have made careful inquiry and considerable personal inspection of the crops of Georgia. Information compiled from reliable sources leads us to believe that we are on the eve of harvesting a bumper crop in Georgia, not only of cotton, but of corn. We believe that with an open fall and a reasonably late frost the cotton crop in Georgia will easily reach 2,600,000 bales and that the corn crop is probably by far the best that has ever been produced in this State, all of which means prosperity in Georgia, at least temporarily.

"There is no reason why a sufficient amount of funds can not be obtained to move the cotton crop, provided the bankers, farmers and merchants work in harmony. Country bankers, especially those located in the cotton districts, should endeavor to educate the farmers to the habit of depositing checks received for the sale of cotton and paying their debts by check. This would go a long way toward relieving the currency stringency during the cotton-moving period.

"We confidently expect a prosperous fall and good business."

City Banker's Views Give Cheerful Analysis

"I see no reason," says Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, "why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity.

"Now, just take stock of the year just closing. Notwithstanding the fact that the cotton crop for 1912 was 1,000,000 bales short of the 1911 crop, there have been no failures of importance among banks or business houses. The failures were few and, in Georgia, of comparatively little importance. That shows the banks and mercantile houses were in good shape financially and could take care of their customers who have gone through a period of depression which was more or less world-wide.

"The fall season opens with every assurance of a cotton crop 500,000 bales larger than last year and raised at less expense than any previous crop ever grown; better and more scientifically cultivated. From every point of view this augurs a splendid trade for fall.

"If the crop experiences no backset, we can reasonably expect excellent fall collections. The farmers will be able to pay their obligations to the country merchant. He will be able to pay the wholesalers in the cities, and the wholesalers in turn will reduce their indebtedness to the city banks.

"This is sure to make money easier after the crop moves, and all lines of business are bound to feel the good effect of the splendid period of prosperity now so promising.

"I believe the further consideration by the Senate of the currency bill and the expressed desire of the Senate committee to get all the facts connected with the proposed legislation is certain to lead to the passage of a wise and conservatively planned measure.

"If this is true, and such a bill is passed, it will eliminate for all time the danger to the country which arises every fall from the fear of having insufficient currency to move the crops. This will, therefore, be of special benefit to the South and the West, and I see no reason why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity."

'Flush' Year Is Time To Learn Economy

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, is not given to hyperbole. Yet he waxes enthusiastic when drawn into conversation about the crop outlook and the business prospects for Georgia this season.

"There is a general cheerful feeling," he explains. "Some of the country merchants and the city wholesalers report the best business they have had for several seasons, and, of course, they expect to do even better when the cotton crop moves.

"Outstanding obligations—some of them, to tell the exact truth, older than they should be—will be wiped out by the present crop, and settlements passing from hand to hand up the line should make money easier all around.

"But this is the time when I would preach thrift. It is something of an absurdity to preach thrift to a man who is 'broke.' But now that the Georgia farmer and the Georgia merchant have money in their pockets, or at least have money in sight, they should practice thrift. They should fortify themselves for the possible lean years. I hope there will be no lean years, but history teaches us to believe there will be.

"Remember recent history. That is all I would ask. Remember the banner crop of 1911, the extravagances which followed, and then the short crop of 1912, and what befell. If only the farmer will keep his money from burning a hole in his pocket, this season will result in permanent good for Georgia."

Chamber of Commerce Prophesies Rapid Growth

As head of a life insurance company and president of the Chamber of Commerce, Wilmer L. Moore has exceptional opportunities to study the trend of events and the condition of business. From rather an apprehensive mood in the spring, Mr. Moore has been converted into an optimist of the extreme type.

"Everything looks good to me," says Mr. Moore. "The Chamber of Commerce foresees unrivaled prosperity for Atlanta, and remarkable expansion. Plans and projects in sight, new factories and business houses inquiring for locations, and a dozen other hopeful signs give rise to our optimism.

"Business done by life insurance companies is as good a barometer of general conditions as any, I imagine. And without making any unusual effort we are doing a greater volume of business than ever before.

"Reports to us from our agents all over the South show the crop conditions in this section to be exceptionally good. Coarse grains and cotton promise great yields, and this, too, in a year when the yield of other sections will be curtailed, and prices consequently go higher. There will be business this coming year for every man of energy and enterprise, and the South will go straight ahead with its development."

Country Banker Expects Moderate Crop, Big Prices

It is interesting to know what the country banker thinks of all this. P. D. Rich, of Colquitt, was in Atlanta the past week.

The country banker, as typified by Mr. Rich, does not believe Georgia is going to make such a wonderful crop. He doesn't think it will go to 2,500,000 bales. He does think prices for cotton will be high and that Georgia, with two million, or, say, two million and a quarter bales, will get more money than it has in some years for huge crops.

The country banker finds himself able to get all the money he needs in New York and Atlanta at a rate which is not excessive.

He believes that the remarkable ginners' report of September 1 does not spell a great crop so much as it does an early movement.

Crushers Foresee Busy Season in Southeast

Cotton seed crushers are preparing for one of the greatest years in their history in Georgia. They expect a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and expect to crush, in round figures, 900,000 tons of seed, or just about the same amount as was crushed in 1911, when the banner crop was grown.

L. G. Neal, vice president of the Empire Cotton Oil Company, one of the largest corporations in the Georgia cotton seed trade, says the Empire's mills in South Georgia, numbering seven, have been operating about ten days.

"Seed now is bringing about $20 a ton," said Mr. Neal, "and is yielding about 39 gallons of good quality oil to the ton. With the exception of the fact that there is considerable moisture in the seed, there are no untoward factors to be considered this year. We look for an excellent season.

Wholesalers Are Busy Replenishing Retail Stocks

Willis E. Ragan, one of the city's prominent wholesalers and holder of extensive real estate, believes the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras it has known for years.

"We have a splendid 'house trade,'" said Mr. Ragan. "Buyers both from the city and country are thronging into the wholesale houses to replenish stocks with the advent of fall retail buying.

"It seems to me the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The cotton crop looks fine, and the price does, too. All indications are that the farmers are selling as quickly as possible and paying their debts. Everyone is feeling good and looking forward to the best business in many years. The outlook is excellent."

"Business is good. It has increased greatly this season, and shows every promise of growing even more," says Ernest L. Rhodes, wholesale milliner.

"The Atlanta houses in our line have had a remarkable volume of sales. How much of this is due to general business conditions and how much to the energy and enterprise of Atlanta jobbers, continually invading new territory, territory which always has been conceded heretofore to other cities, I can not tell without close analysis of sales records. But in all probability, the greater business is due to both factors.

"At any rate, sales are larger. That's the main thing, after all.

"If the farmers, the retailers and the merchants who sell to them will now only take advantage of their prosperity to liquidate their obligations, then we shall have ideal conditions. And I believe this will be done."

Whitehall Street Filled With Autumn Shoppers

Along Whitehall street, the center of city retail trade, the sentiment has been brighter throughout the year than in some other localities. City retail trade has held up unexpectedly well. Atlanta has not felt the depression reported from smaller centers. But the advent of fall weather, or perhaps just a foretaste of it, has put life into business in a way which has surprised even these merchants.

"We are reordering certain lines already. That, to any one acquainted with the retail business, is the most emphatic presentation I can make of business conditions in Whitehall street," said W. H. Brittain, president and manager of High's. "Our September business to date is much larger than it was at this time last year. People are eager for new things. Mail orders have started coming in rapidly. It is a regular revival of trade.

"Shoppers are numerous. It is not a question of going out after them. They are coming to the stores. People are anxious for the new things, for the better class of merchandise. Stocks have been low. Every one has bought sparingly since the first of the year, and the result now is an active movement all along the line."

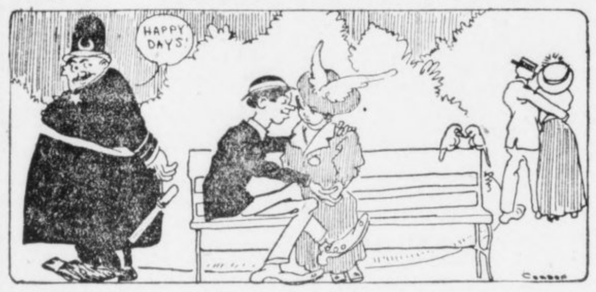
"Just a little more cool weather, such as we have had a few days this past week," said J. P. Allen, "and fall business will surprise every one. People are anxious to buy. The stores are crowded. The salespeople are busy. The retailers have every cause to congratulate themselves."

Early Trade Opening Amazes Col. F. J. Paxon

F. J. Paxon is amazed at the early opening of the fall trade.

"I was surprised," says Mr. Paxon, "to return here in August and find fall ready-to-wear goods moving well. Millinery is moving particularly early. There has been a good increase in sales volume. Both the number of sales and the average amount of sales has increased.

"We expect a remarkable year, a steady growth and a rapid one through the next year.



"I am speaking not only for the business with which I am most intimately connected, but also for other enterprises in Atlanta of which I have accurate knowledge, when I say that the resumption of activity already seen, with the cotton crop not generally moving yet, is something at which to marvel.

"Georgia is to be envied, and nothing at the conference of Governors in the West attracted more attention than Governor Slaton's speech in which he extolled the virtues of his State."

THERE was a time when kissing in the good old-fashioned way
Was altogether ruled by what the lady had to say;
If she said "Yes," the couple didn't ask for better right.
But fell into a close embrace and smacked with all their might.
But times, it seems, are changing; loving couples when enclinched
Are apt to be disturbed thus wise: "Hey, stop it; you are pinched."

IN olden days, the moonlight always played a goodly part
In scenery befitting demonstrations of the heart;
Dan Cupid made a throneroom out of every cozy nook,
And lovers came there wooing and defied the world to look;
But now, when couples wander out to sit beneath the moon,
They're apt to be admonished thus: "This ain't no place to spoon."

THE moonlight hasn't changed a bit; its beams are still of gold;
And ways of kissing are the same as in the days of old;
The eager swain still has to bow before his lady's will,
And even parents' wishes are respected by them still;
But, to kiss or not to kiss, it seems, now hinges on the law
Regardless of the say-so of the lady or her ma.

West Point Schools Break Roll Record

Great Growth Is Noted and Building Is Remodeled to Meet Demands.

WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The forty-fifth annual session of the West Point public schools has opened, with the largest enrollment of pupils since their organization.

The Board of Education, anticipating an overflow of pupils, had made every preparation in the way of room and teachers.

The building is equipped with sanitary drinking fountains, electric lights, electric bells, electric clocks, telephones and all other modern conveniences.

The chair of English and history recently made vacant by the death of Miss Naomi Wells is being filled temporarily by Mrs. C. F. Pattillo, of West Point.

Mr. Walter P. Thomas, who is now serving his seventh year as superintendent, is devoting his time and efforts for the continuous growth and betterment of the schools.

FARMER FINDS LOST COIN IN HEART OF WATERMELON

GREELEY, COLO., Sept. 13.—When Daniel Kinney, of this city, cut open the first watermelon of the season from his garden to-day he found in the center a half-dime of 1862, which he last last spring while planting the melon patch.

The juices of the melon had brightened the coin until it looked as if it was newly minted.

Immortals to Hear Lecture on 'Tango'

Jean Richepin Will Address Academy on Subject, but It's a Play, Not a Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Paris has been excited for some days past by the report that Jean Richepin, the distinguished dramatist, who in his younger days forsook his family hearth for the love of a great actress, is about to defy conventions and stir up more scandal by addressing the immortals of the French Academy on the subject of "The Tango."

It now turns out that the "tango" of M. Richepin is a new comedy which he has completed for the Theatre Marigny in collaboration with Madame Richepin.

Next month, at a public meeting of the venerable academy, he will read extracts from the play.

Hair Electric Shocks Make Old Barber Quit

Current From Customers' Heads Makes Him Nervous, He Says, in Retiring.

DARBY, PA., Sept. 13.—After 41 years as a barber, Phil Sipler, of Darby, announced to-day he had quit business.

"As I grow older," he declared, "I become more and more sensitive to slight electric shocks with which human hair insulates my shears. It makes me nervous. I should hate to figure the total voltage of the shocks I received during a year."

40 CITIES WILL FORM GEORGIA CIVIC CHAMBER

Atlanta to Send 50 Delegates to Macon Meeting to Organize State Commercial Club.

Forty Georgia cities will send delegations Tuesday to the meeting at Macon which will organize the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Atlanta will send 50 representative men in a special car. Waycross and Albany also will send specials.

Indications are there will be 400 civic leaders at Macon to launch the State Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to do for Georgia what the Atlanta Chamber has done for the city.

The meeting will be called to order at the Hotel Dempsey, Macon, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by C. J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 o'clock at the hotel, with the Macon Chamber as host. An afternoon session will complete the deliberations.

There are 70 such State-wide development organizations in the United States. Texas has furnished the model for the proposed Georgia chamber.

Texas Association's Work.

The Texas Commercial and Business Men's Association, with offices at Fort Worth, has expended $150,000 in six years to spread the fame and advantages of Texas, using news articles, plates, cuts and pamphlets. Writers, lecturers and photographers are in its employ.

Officers are to be elected at the Macon meeting, including a president and about 50 vice presidents, representing all sections of Georgia.

Speakers will include Richard Edmonds, of the Manufacturers' Record; M. V. Richards, of the Southern Railway, and McLaine Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers' Association.

A dozen Georgians have been asked for five-minute talks. They are John D. Walker, of Sparta; W. B. Powell, of Columbus; William M. Moore, of Fitzgerald; E. Y. Clarke, of LaGrange; W. B. Royster, of Griffin; L. P. Hillyer, W. T. Anderson and E. H. Hyman, of Macon; H. G. Hastings, of Decatur; J. G. Weatherly, of Brunswick; Wilmer Moore, of Atlanta; E. B. Adams, of Albany, and R. W. Parker and C. G. Bradley, of Madison.

Many Cities to Take Part.

The following cities will send representatives:

Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Baxley, Brunswick, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Clarkston, Crawfordville, College Park, Columbus, Dublin, Douglas, Dawsonville, Eatonton, Fitzgerald, Griffin, Kirkwood, LaGrange, Lithonia, McDonough, Macon, Madison, Moultrie, Newnan, Ocilla, Springfield, Swainsboro, Toccoa, Union City, Vienna, Waycross, Hawkinsville, Statesboro and Mount Pleasant.

One hundred members of the live Macon Chamber of Commerce have been named on a special committee to greet and entertain the delegates.

Several Seek Presidency.

A number of the leaders in the industrial development of Georgia have been mentioned for the presidency of the State Chamber, but so far no one seems sure of the position.

The executive committee is authorized to appoint a vice president for every county in the State and after careful consideration about 50 vice presidents have been selected. Other selections will be made during the next few days.

The executive committee includes C. J. Haden, Atlanta, chairman; P. M. Atkinson, Madison; R. D. Cole, Newnan; J. S. Davis, Albany; G. W. Deen, Waycross; J. A. McCord, Atlanta; W. H. Shippen, Ellijay; C. A. Wickersham, College Park.

DeKalb Count To Be Well Represented.

DeKalb County, headed by Kirkwood and Decatur, will send an enthusiastic delegation to the State Chamber of Commerce meeting at Macon Tuesday, with the intention of playing an important part in the proceedings. The Kirkwood Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting to arouse zeal in behalf of the proposal, and the result was a list of formal pledges of members who will attend.

They include R. F. Gilliem, John I. Armstrong, Dr. E. L. Daniel, William E. Saunders, Dr. C. H. House, J. T. Viley, E. M. Willingham, John Lowe Smith, O. O. Ray, H. C. Burr, J. A. Norman, R. C. Ozmer, J. P. Ellis, Joe Tillinghast and J. A. Earl.

Decatur will send a party in automobiles. Lithonia and Clarkston will send delegates, and, altogether, there probably will be 75 representatives from DeKalb at Macon.

GHOSTLY LIGHT PUTS TERROR IN MOUNTAINEERS

Government Asked to Send Science Expert to Investigate Flaming Uncanny Orb.

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 13.—Ghostly in appearance, a strange light, seen almost nightly, is gaining materially in brilliancy and has so greatly excited the people of Burke County, in the mountains of Western North Carolina, that an official request has been made at Washington for an investigation by an expert.

R. T. Claywell first saw the strange light about a month ago when he and a party of friends were spending the night at Cold Water.

"There is something uncanny about that light. The folks up in that neighborhood can not fathom it, and we want a Government scientist sent to solve the mysterious glow," said Mr. Claywell.

Arose From Mountain.

"The night I first saw the strange light I was out in the open on Rattlesnake Knob. It was exactly 10:05 o'clock. I remember that well. What first attracted our attention were two hazy lights across the valley on Brown Mountain.

"We watched it with wonder and awe. In a few minutes we saw a brighter light appear at the foot of Brown Mountain, where Upper Creek cuts it at Joy. The light appeared to be swinging, pendulum-like, and then went upward a distance of about 200 feet.

"When it first appeared the light seemed to be round and yellow. It gained steadily in brightness, becoming red as it went upward. When it reached its greatest height it appeared to be like a ball of fire.

Did Not Shed a Ray.

"But the strange thing about it was that the freak of nature did not cast off one ray of light. The space around it was as dark as ever. All this added to its ghostly appearance.

"It was across the valley from us at a distance of about twelve miles. It had rained that day and there were a few clouds still hanging about. When the strange light reached a height of what seemed from our distance to be about 1,200 feet it went behind one of these clouds and we did not see it any more that night.

"It was a strange experience and many of those in our party came near fainting."

Aeroplane Defeats Dirigible in Battle

British Military Authorities Inquire Into Remarkable Air Maneuvers in France.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Inquiries are being made by British military aeroplane agents concerning certain remarkable aerial experiments said to have been made this week at Bordeaux. A corporal in an aeroplane, it is stated, won an altitude race against a dirigible engaged in the French military maneuvers. From its superior height the aeroplane dropped sham projectiles on the airship which in actual warfare would certainly have destroyed the craft at which they were aimed.

STAGE IS SET FOR TRIAL OF GOVERNOR

Accused N. Y. Executive Appears Confident of Exoneration on Eve of Facing High Tribunal.

ALBANY, Sept. 13.—For the first time in the history of New York State a chief executive will go to trial for "high crimes and misdemeanors" when Governor William Sulzer faces, on Thursday next, a majority of the Senate and a majority of the Court of Appeals sitting as a high court of impeachment.

Special counsel for the State of New York to prosecute the impeachment will summon Sulzer to the bar. Aaron J. Levy, majority leader of the Assembly and chairman of the Assembly Board of Managers, will have direct charge of the prosecution, for it was the Assembly that impeached Sulzer, as prescribed by the Constitution. Sulzer, who still maintains his right to the Governorship, will be defended by a brilliant array of counsel.

With Sulzer on trial the battle between New York's "People's Governor," and Tammany Hall, the political organization that made him and is now setting out to break him, will near its end. It is a political quarrel that will go down in history.

It will be a dramatic moment when Sulzer steps before the court of impeachment, with Chief Justice Cullen, of the Court of Appeals, presiding. There have been many rumors of what Sulzer's defense will be, but no definite statement of what course it will take could be obtained from any of his counsel to-day.

Sulzer Appears Confident.

On the eve of his trial Sulzer appears confident. So, for that matter, do his enemies. They say that the court of impeachment will not be affected in any way by the feeling of popular sympathy for Sulzer. It will be a cold, calm proposition of whether Sulzer was or was not guilty of malfeasance in office—a question of whether, as charged by the Assembly, he did or did not speculate in Wall street with campaign funds and of whether he did or did not fail to give a true and correct list of his campaign contributions in his sworn statement of campaign receipts and expenditures.

It is possible that a dramatic, perhaps pathetic, touch will be given the proceedings by the introduction of the name of Mrs. Sulzer. It is said to be likely that Mrs. Sulzer will stand by the statement credited to her in which she is alleged to have said that it was she who speculated in Wall street with campaign funds, without the Governor's knowledge. If this is to be the Sulzer line of defense, Mrs. Sulzer will be forced to make very humiliating admissions upon the witness stand, an ordeal that would be very trying to her and a proceeding which even Sulzer's worst enemies would prefer to avoid.

Before the Court of Impeachment can commence to hear the charges drawn by the Assembly, there must be at least four of the judges of the Court of Appeals present and at least 26 members of the Senate.

Justices Who Try Case.

Edgar M. Cullen is Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals. Associated with him are Justices John Clint Gray, William E. Werner, Willis Bartlett, Frederick Collins, William H. Cuddeback and John W. Hogan. There are three other associate justices, not elected, as were all of the foregoing, but designated by Governors at different times because of the press of litigation before the court. Emory A. Chase was designated an associate justice in 1906. Frank H. Hiscock is also an associate justice, designated by Governor Sulzer. Justice Nathan Miller was designated by Sulzer himself in January last.

There is much difference of opinion as to whether these designated justices will be legally entitled to sit as a part of the court. Some attorneys assert that they could not take part, whereas others assert that while they have every legal right to do so, it is probable that the justice appointed by Sulzer will decline to take part in the proceeding.

It is, of course, ridiculous to suppose that the political beliefs of the members of the Court of Appeals would have anything to do with the outcome of the trial, but it is interesting, nevertheless, to note that, not counting the designated justices, only one judge of the august tribunal is a Republican. If the designated justices are considered, it brings the Republican members of the Court of Appeals up to four, as against six Democrats.

Frederick Harris, of Binghamton, court crier, will really get the court under way whe nhis cry of "Hear ye," "Hear ye," is heard. The Clerk of the Court of Appeals will not act as clerk of the court of impeachment. Patrick E. McCabe, clerk of the Senate, will act in the capacity of clerk to the court.

Sulzer to File Answer.

Probably the first formal move before the court will be the filing of an answer by attorneys for Sulzer. Besides being a general denial of all of the charges, this answer will probably conclude with the prayer that the Court of Impeachment dismiss the charges on the ground that the impeachment was found when the Assembly was in extraordinary session. Governor Sulzer maintains that being in such extraordinary session, called by him for the purpose of considering certain legislation, the Assembly could not legally take up matters other than those for which the Chief Executive summoned it into session.

Many technicalitiese will have to be disposed of before the court can get down to actual business. There will be much argument and oratorical fireworks on the plea of the Sulzer defense for the dismissal of the impeachment. Scores of other technicalities are certain to arise and it may be some time before special counsel can open the case for the Assembly and the State of New York.

It has not yet been decided whether the Justices of the Court of Appeals will wear their black silk robes. Also, nothing definite has ben announced regarding the methods and rules of procedure. There are no precedents in New York State for the trial of a Governor, and the only guide the court will have will be the Constitution of the State and precedents established in other States and the records of Federal impeachments. Therefore, one of the first duties of the Court will be the promulgation of a set of rules to guide the conduct of the attorneys.

Court Will Adjourn.

It has been feared that the session of the Court of Appeals scheduled for September 29 would interfere with the trial, which probably will last for a considerable time. It is said now, whoever, that if the Sulzer trial is still in progress on September 29, that the Court of Appeals will go into session for a few minutes, or just long enough to adjourn to a later date. Richard Barber, Clerk of the Court of Appeals, is going ahead with his work of making up an order calendar of cases for the Court on September 29.

Each Senator is entitled to compensation of $10 a day during his service on the Court of Impeachment. Senators get $15 a day as Legislators, which would bring their incomes up to $25 a day during the trial had not they already drawn their salaries.

This scale of compensation is provided by the Constitution of the State. The Code of Criminal Procedure, however, says that Senators are entitled to receive the same compensation as Asociate Justices of the Court of Appeals while sitting in a court of impeachment, which is $10,000 a year with expenses of $3,700. It is contended by some that the Legislature had no authority to enact a law which clashed with the Constitution, and probably the Senators will look at it in the same way and be satisfied with their $10 a day.

The Assembly board of managers, which will have charge of the Assembly's end of the case, is composed of Aaron J. Levy, of New York, chairman; Patrick J. McMahon, Thirty-fourth District; Abraham Greenberg, Twenty-sixth District; William J. Cillen, Second District; Theodore H. Ward, Fifteenth District; J. V. Fitzgerald, Seventh District; Tracy D. Madden, First District; Thomas K. Smith, Third District, and Herman F. Schnirel, of Ontario County. Smith and Schnirel are Republicans.

5,000 PHEASANTS ON STATE FARM

Hatched by Hens, They Will Be Distributed to Oregon's Game Preserves.

PHILOMATH, OREG., Sept. 13.—Five thousand pheasants have been raised this season on the Oregon Pheasant Farm of Benton County. Manager Gene Simpson, of the farm, states that a great number of these will soon be distributed over the State.

Large numbers were ready for sending out some time ago, but have been awaiting orders from the State Game Warden. The birds will go to all sections of the State, but the greater number to those parts where the pheasant is little known. None will be given their liberty except on designated preserves, so their protection will be guaranteed.

In addition to the Chinese pheasants, a number of rarer birds, such as the Silver and Reeves pheasants and the Bob White quail, have been raised this year on the farm.

About 800 pheasant hens have been laying on the farm all the spring and summer. One hen lays from 60 to 80 eggs in a single season when confined in a pen. But in captivity the hens will not nest and will not hatch, so the eggs are gathered and hatched under common hens.

The birds are also raised with the hens, in ordinary coops, just as chickens are raised, with the exception of feeding, for a little pheasant must have "live food"—bugs, worms and insects. This is only for the first few weeks. After that the young pheasants can eat grain, cracked corn, wheat and ground oats. Houses are not needed for the birds, old or young.

Meets Carnegie and Morgan; Loses $100

Akron, Ohio, Man Tells of Experience With 'Milllonaires' in Pittsburg Hotel.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—Peter Alcox, of Akron, Ohio, told the city detectives to-day how he met Andrew Carnegie and J. Pierpont Morgan in a Liberty avenue hotel. He lost $100 and his gold watch.

A stranger in Akron told of having rich relatives in Pittsburg who had bought him a gold mine in California. But this man didn't have enough money to get to Pittsburg and he persuaded Alcox to pay his way.

"We went to a hotel in Liberty avenue," said Alcox, "and there we met a big fellow whom my friends introduced as Andrew Carnegie.

"Then Mr. Morgan came in and I was introduced. He was a very nice man and bought several drinks."

Then, according to Alcox, the friend took him to his hotel room. Later in the night Alcox awakened and his roll and gold watch were gone and he hasn't seen his friend since.

CASKET AND RING ARE STOLEN FROM A GRAVE

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 13.—An investigation of the grave of Mrs. Pauline Blum revealed her body reposing in the rough box. The casket had been stolen. Her wedding ring finger had been severed and the ring was missing.

POSED AS SINGLE; SUED FOR DIVORCE

Husband Says School Principal Tried to Educate Too Many Relatives at His Expense.

KANSAS CITY, KANS., Sept. 13.—James E. Ellis has filed a petition for divorce in the Wyandotte County District Court, in which he charges that his wife, Emma A. Ellis, principal of public schools of Parsons, Kans., has, since their marriage in Chicago in 1901, posed as a single woman under the name of Emma A. Sackett.

They lived in Parsons until June 16 of this year, and during the time they were together, he says, they moved in the best society. Everywhere, he alleges, his wife was known as Miss Sackett and she introduced him as her cousin.

He charges that she threatened him with "dire calamity" if he told their secret. After he married her, he says, he learned she had been married before, her first husband's name being Sackett. He is dead, Ellis says.

Educates Relatives.

His wife, he charges, never gave him the comforts of home, but insisted upon turning the house into a home for poor children of Parsons. He alleges that she spent her salary of $100 a month and part of his salary in keeping children and sending them to school.

Ellis says his wife is at present in Michigan on her vacation.

Mrs. Ellis sent a niece to the University of Michigan four years and to a conservatory in Boston two years. He says she sent a son by a former husband to Harvard at his expense and another to Yale.

Gave Stranger Tuition.

That item to educate is followed by the admission of a youth to free board at their home while he was being schooled. When the son of a farmer was boarded and tutored free three months to get him interested in getting an education, although the youth's parents were able to pay.

Then there was another youth who was boarded free three years to help him get an education. And there were two grandnieces sent to the University of Kansas as a part of Mrs. Ellis' educational campaign.

And in the fall of 1911 Mrs. Ellis demanded and received $100 from Ellis, the petition says, to send a strange young man to the University of Michigan to study law.

SAYS MOUSE WAS IN STEW.

Wife Beater Cured by Whipping Post Scare

Judge Sabath Frightens Prisoner Into Promise To Be Good in the Future.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The threat of a whipping post for wife beaters by Municipal Judge Sabath in the Hyde Park Court yesterday was enough to make John Firber, No. 1161 South Park avenue, plead for mercy.

"I think I will let the policeman who arrested you take you downstairs to the whipping post," said Judge Sabath to him. "You know we have one for wife beaters now."

"Fine me, Judge," pleaded Firber with his arms extended, "but don't do that."

After he had made a promise never to hit his wife against the court discharged him.

MAYORS URGE U. S. CONTROL OF MISSISSIPPI

Every Section Joins South for Federal Protection Against River's Spring Floods.

LEVEE PLAN RECEIVES FAVOR

Bill Is Now Pending in Congress to Relieve Yearly Suffering in Southern Valley.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—The Mayors of cities in more than half of the States of the Union have come out for Government aid in the protection of the Mississippi Valley States from floods. This sweeping indorsement of the Ransdell-Humphreys bill, which provides $60,000,000 for levees and comes up at the December session of Congress, is one of the interesting exhibits of the work the Mississippi River Levee Association is doing in the interest of Government levees for the lower Mississippi River.

Out of the replies already received not one chief executive has expressed the slightest disapproval of the proposition. The Mayors of cities in the far Western States, in New England, in the Middle West, in the great northern section and from every Southern State have come out unanimously for the project. Each letter shows an unusual familiarity with the subject. The people of California, Massachusetts and Montana seem to have been studying the flood proposition with as much interest as the residents of the States immediately affected by floods.

Levee Plan Favored.

One of the most interesting letters is one from the chief executive of Gallipolis, Ohio, a city which almost was sacrificed to the Ohio floods of 1913. Mayor Cadot, of that city, says in part:

"While our own valley suffers greatly from floods, I believe the greater damage is done in the Mississippi Valley, and I earnestly hope you will succeed in securing the required appropriation from the Government, and be able to begin active operations at the earliest possible moment.

"In my opinion, the levee plan is the best remedy for overflow that has yet been proposed."

Mayor Joseph M. Halloran, of New Britain, Conn., writes in part as follows:

"It seems to me that the building and maintaining of levees is a matter for the Federal Government to act upon immediately."

Mayor C. O. Meigs, of Twin Falls, Idaho, writes:

"I believe, and always have believed, that this should be a national task rather than an expense to be borne by the citizens living immediately adjacent to the river, and as the Mississippi drains a huge portion of the United States, I take pleasure in stating that I heartily concur with the views of the Levee Association in this matter."

The Mayor of South Milwaukee, Wis., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of the project and shall help you whenever I can."

The Mayor of Ogden City, Utah, says among other things:

"In my judgment, it is clearly the duty of the Federal Government to make ample provision to carry the work of controlling the floods to completion as rapidly as possible."

Mayor R. L. Metcalf, of Pasadena, Cal., writes as follows:

"In reply to your request of the 18th instant, will say, in my opinion, nothing will solve the flood problem of the Mississippi Valley until Congress makes some move to that end, and I feel sure that it is the only method to follow."

The Mayor of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of your work and believe that it is fair and just that the National Government should take up the burden and give you whatever aid is needed."

The Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I heartily concur in the views expressed in your communication regarding the spring floods of the lower Mississippi. I believe the Government should lend every aid possible to protect the people of this vast territory and that steps in this direction should be taken at the earliest possible moment."

The Mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., writes:

"I am in receipt of your favor of the 18th, and will state that I am heartily in favor of the Congress of the United States appropriating a sufficient amount to prevent the flooding of the lower Mississippi Valley."

Nation Realizes Necessity.

The Mayor of Walla Walla, Wash., A. J. Gillis, writes:

"The control of the flood waters of the Mississippi is a problem of such magnitude that it can be properly handled only by the national authorities, and it is of such vital importance to all of our people that the indifference of Congress is hard to understand. Remote as we are from these constantly recurring floods, we feel that our people are deeply interested in their prevention and that any assistance that can be given your work should be freely given. Please advise me of what way I can be of assistance and I will be glad to do what I can."

The Mayor of Lynn, Mass., George Newhall, writes:

"I believe the flood conditions in the lower Mississippi River should receive the consideration of the National Government and that they should assist the different States in giving safe and thorough protection to the lower Mississippi Valley from floods."

These are only a few of the numerous letters that have been received. They illustrate, however, the sentiment toward the levee proposition and the widespread interest in the matter of floods.

Polaire Adds to Her Ugliness With Nose Ring

Famous French Actress to Wear It in Atlanta

Mademoiselle Polaire, famous French actress, wearing her nose ring. She will appear with this ornament when she plays in Atlanta this winter.

Fascinating Artist Has No Hope That Ornament Will Be Generally Accepted Fad.

Mademoiselle Polaire, being by common consent the ugliest theatrical star alive and the most fascinating withal, has an absolute right to wear what she pleases. It is only when a woman has an open pride in her lack of pulchritude that she has achieved a sort of free-will condition as regards clothes and ornaments.

And because she is an independent in matters of raiment the fascinating Polaire is going to show Atlanta something that will open the eyes of every man and woman within its limits—she is coming to Atlanta, you know, with Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, the dancers.

Her particular innovation is a nose ring—a daring,—unprecedented nose ring, suggestive of nothing so much as a Fiji Islander. But then the turkey trot is hardly suggestive of the art of terpsichore, so it is not an unbelievable thing that Mademoiselle Polaire's nose ring will become—but no, American girls mean no harm by any of their fads, and even their critics vow that they have common sense enough and to spare.

There will be no nose ring fad, however much the fascinating Polaire flaunts her badge of eccentricity before their faces.

Polaire, it is announced, never dreams that her own freak fashion will become the vogue. Perhaps that is why she adopted it. At least, she will have something to herself.

But Atlanta will have an opportunity of judging, and perhaps if it likes can place an order for early winter delivery.

This is the aim of the publicity bureau of the Salt Lake Commercial Club.

The plan for financing the bureau was completed by the finance committee yesterday. The first move was to order by wire 100,000 "I Am for Utah" buttons. These will be sold for 25 cents each. The finance committee hopes to raise an initial fund of $25,000 by this means.

Cobbler in Poverty Gets $20,000 Legacy

Fortune Comes When Aged Struggler Is Vainly Trying to Enter Charitable Institution.

ALLENTOWN, PA., Sept. 13.—Working daily for many years at the bench in his cobbler shop and able to earn only a scant living, Carl W. Gossner, a shoemaker, was overjoyed when he received a letter informing him that he had fallen heir to half the $20,000 estate of his brother, Wilhelm, who died recently in Germany.

Gossner immediately left for Philadelphia to consult the German Consul and expects the money in a few weeks. His sister, who lives in Switzerland, shares in the estate.

DIXIE INVENTOR PLANS AIRSHIP LINE TO EUROPE

Captain Batson of Savannah Will Organize Company to Promote Passenger Multiplane.

sufficient fuel for a two days' run, the craft will not have to descend to replenish its supply on the long flight from Savannah to New York, which will be made directly after the first trial flight. Then, circumstances being favorable, the trip across the Atlantic will be attempted.

It is announced that the perfected Batson hydro-aeroplane will have a speed of 100 miles an hour, with a probability of making better time even than that under favorable conditions. Its eleven-foot propellers make 1,000 revolutions a minute. The original machine, including the expense of putting up the aerodrome, will cost about $50,000. Captain Batson declares, however, that other machines of the same type will cost only $20,000.

Seeks Commercial Navigation.

Altogether, the intent of the man in the Savannah shop is to render practical the commercial navigation of the air. He is a mechanical engineer, acquiring thus his scientific knack. He is a daring soldier, the organizer of the effective Filipino Scouts, and comes thus honestly by his fearlessness. For years he has been at work in perfecting the machine with which the bold experiments will be made, and in which he hopes to conquer the air.

Plants for the construction of the machines will be scattered over the United States, according to the arrangements made by the company. The completed machines, however, will not be offered for indiscriminate sale, but will be used for passenger traffic under the auspices of the company.

The Batson triple-motored aero yacht, as the machine is technically known, will carry about three tons dead weight load. Instead of being comprised of a single plane or a pair, the buoying area is distributed over a large number of wings of moderate size. These are attached to the machine chamber in a way so as to yield to the extra stresses caused when the machine encounters the great "boulders" in the air, just as the springs of an automobile yield when an uneven road is entered.

Single Pilot Governs.

The peculiar construction of the wing is such that the air currents are guided under the wings inwardly toward the body of the machine, where they are banked under the base portion, thus bringing the greatest stress on the part where the weight is carried. Such is the arrangement that the essential "angle of incidence" of all the wings can be governed by a single pilot, even to such an extent that should all the engines be stopped the wings will be automatically set at a safe gliding angle, the course of which is easily controlled.

Captain Batson takes the success of his invention as a matter of course.

"It is far more wonderful," he said, "that men should literally take their lives in their hands and go from Paris to London through the air, over sea and land in their unavoidably unsteady craft than that the Batson aero yacht should, with so much greater carrying capacity and complete automatic stability, be able to go longer distances in perfect safety. A great loss of life appears to be inevitable with aeroplanes of the dangerous and unstable type now in general use, and though the recent Titanic disaster shows that it is impossible to foresee every contingency, yet it is a safe and comforting prediction that because of its automatic stability no such accidents as those which hitherto have happened can possibly occur to a Batson multiplane."

MINISTER LEADS CHURCH AT "EXCAVATION PARTY"

BLOOMINGTON, IND., Sept. 13.—An "excavation" party was a new social stunt given by the Fairview Methodist Church last night to further the building of a new church. While the women of the church gave a vaudeville show and served sandwiches, the men, led by the minister, the Rev. C. M. Croft, with wheelbarrows, spades and other implements, excavated under the church and made room for a Sunday school basement. Three hours' work completed the basement.

ITALIAN TOWN GIVES THANKS TO MR. HEARST

Resolutions of Gratitude Passed for His Aid After Eruption of Vesuvius in 1906.

Special Cable to The American.

NAPLES, Sept. 13.—A memorial to the 105 mothers and children crushed to death during the eruption of 1906 under the roof of the small chapel in San Giuseppe Vesuviano, where they sought refuge against the overpowering fall of ashes and rocks, was unveiled to-day in the presence of the civil and military authorities of Naples, the Mayor of each town in the Vesuvian district and a large crowd of representative citizens.

A feature of the ceremony was a resolution of the Town Council of San Giuseppe Vesuviano thanking Mr. Hearst and his newspapers for the substantial help sent to the afflicted district at the time of the eruption.

The monument, consisting of a base nine feet high and a twelve-foot marble column surmounted by a Pompeian capital, the work of the sculptor Arizo, of Naples, marks the site where on the night of April 8, 1906, the stricken mothers repaired with their infants to pray for deliverance from the impending catastrophe.

Resolution of Thanks.

While they prayed the roof of the flimsy structure collapsed under the accumulated deposit of ashes and all were crushed to death.

The Hearst newspapers collected for the sufferers more than $35,000, which was handed to the Italian Red Cross Society. A small balance of $206 afterward was devoted to the erection of the memorial which the local population had decided to build.

During the ceremony Lawyer Silvio Cola, chairman of the memorial committee, before unveiling the monument, read resolutions thanking Mr. Hearst for his generous help. The resolutions, engrossed upon parchment, were then handed to Judge Palmieri, who was present as Mr. Hearst's representative.

Banquet to Judge Palmieri.

Later a banquet was given in honor of Judge Palmieri. In an address the Baron Quarante di San Severine cited many actions of Mr. Hearst which, he pointed out, entitled him to the gratitude of Italians, both in Italy and in America. He mentioned also the stand taken by all the Hearst newspapers during the Italo-Turkish war, and the many fights made by those publications against laws restricting immigration.

Every reference to Mr. Hearst was loudly cheered.

Speaking as the representative of Mr. Hearst, Judge Palmieri thanked the committee and the municipality for the noble way in which they expressed their gratitude to one of Italy's most sincere friends in America. Mr. Hearst's name, which is engraved in large letters at the base of the column, was joined to those of the Queen and King of Italy in a toast which all drank standing.

One Drink Costs Him $1,000 and His Wife

"Water Wagon Contract" Burden Too Much for Man Who Never Got Drunk.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The existence of a "water wagon contract" for $1,000 a year between George Herrmann, president of the insurance firm of George Herrmann Company, and his son, George Herrmann, Jr., also an official of the company, was revealed recently by the junior Mrs. Herrmann, who filed suit for divorce on the grounds of cruelty.

"George broke his contract this year in March," said Mrs. Herrmann, who is twenty. "He started drinking and, of course, it cost him the $1,000. I don't believe he has ever been drunk in his life, at least I never have seen him drunk. He was honorable about it, and told his father about the drink that cost him $1,000.

"I think my husband is a fine man. I admire him, but not as a husband."

Boy Six Years Old Arrested 20 Times

Career of Criminal Prodigy Ended by His Commitment to Industrial School.

RACINE, WIS., Sept. 13.—Richard Tuclovsky, six years old, was to-day committed to the industrial school for boys, there to remain until the age of 21.

Richard, despite his tender years, has caused the police more trouble than any ten grown-ups, his crimes ranging from plain burglary to highway robbery, in which he used an unloaded revolver. Twenty times has Richard's name been entered on the police blotter for crimes that would have placed older boys behind prison bars.

Threatening other children with a knife induced summary action against the youngest subject in the State's annals of criminology.

OHIO TO PAY CONVICTS WITH DEPENDENT FAMILIES

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Convicts serving terms in the Ohio penitentiary, or their dependents, will be given compensation for their labor on and after September 1. The amount of compensation to prisoners will range at 1 to 5 cents per hour, and the gradings will be based upon character, industrial efficiency and good conduct.

PARENTS HELD TO ANSWER FOR IMMORAL GIRLS

Wisconsin Vice Commission Declares Lack of Home Care Responsible for Waywardness.

MADISON, WIS., Sept. 13.—Blame for immorality among young girls of Wisconsin was placed principally on their parents by Dr. C. A. Harper, secretary of the State Board of Health, in testifying before the special Legislative Vice Committee.

"Lack of surveillance by chaperons, social ambitions of parents, late hours, suggestive dances, immodest dresses, automobile rides, telephones, stimulating food and drink, and organizations of boys to ostracize girls from society who refuse to submit to their will are some of the principal causes of the social evil among the better classes of citizens of Wisconsin, said Dr. Harper.

Remedies suggested by him were stricter watch by parents, less suggestive clothes, wholesome food, early retiring hours, and elimination of the automobile and telephone from the use of the young women.

"It is generally recognized," said Dr. Harper, "that there is a general wave of immorality passing over the country. It is due partly to our standards of living and a deadening of the moral sensibilities. We are living too high, going too fast, and disregarding the balances which make for moderation and moral uplift."

"What remedy can you suggest for the suppression of immorality?" asked Chairman Howard Teasdale.

"I have found that communities having segregated vice districts under strict regulation have the highest degree of morality," replied Dr. Harper.

"Doesn't a recognized vice district require the abasement of a certain per cent of women every year?" asked Senator Victor Linley, of Superior.

"That is true," Dr. Harper replied, "but at least 1 per cent of the girls will go wrong anyhow, it seems."

FEEL HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS? CLEAN YOUR LIVER! A DIME A BOX

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue, it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken to-night straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

FILIPINOS FAR FROM READY FOR SELF-RULE; PROOF IS ON THE WAY

Bishop Fallows Declares That Dean Worcester, Student of Islands, Returning From Archipelago, Will Show Fallacy of Native Government.

In view of the departure of Burton Harrison, the new Wilson Governor General of the Philippines, who sailed Wednesday from San Francisco for Manila, and the declared intention of the Democratic Congress to give to the Filipinos absolute independence eight years hence, the following article, by Bishop Fallows, is illuminating.

Bishop Fallows traveled 10,000 miles among the islands to satisfy himself of conditions there and he concludes that independence for the Filipinos now or within a few years would be a calamity. His article follows:

By SAMUEL FALLOWS.

(Bishop of Chicago and Noted Educational Authority.)

There shortly comes from the Philippines a man who has a valuable and timely message for the American people. He is Dean C. Worcester, recently Secretary of the Interior, the American who has had the longest and most intimate contact with Philippine affairs.

Many years before our war with Spain, when to the popular American mind Manila and the Philippines were indefinite and hazy points on the map, Mr. Worcester made two extended tours of the archipelago. As a member of scientific expeditions, gathering data and specimens, he twice traveled the length of the group given into our keeping, and when President McKinley needed the counsel and assistance of men of knowledge, Dean Worcester was one of the first to whom he turned.

President McKinley appointed him a member of the Schurmann Commission, and when William Howard Taft was chosen to found civil government in the Philippines he continued him as member of the commission, which remains to this day as the senior governing body in the islands.

Mr. Worcester was made Secretary of the Interior in the Government instituted by McKinley and approved by Congress, and continuously retained the post until a week ago Monday, when he resigned to make way for a man chosen by the Wilson Administration.

In this capacity he organized and directed the Bureaus of Health, Land, Forestry and Science, besides becoming the guardian of the million non-Christian tribesmen numbered among our wards in the Orient. Taft, Wright, Ide, Smith, Moses and other veteran administrators of the Philippine Government finished their labors and passed to other fields, but Worcester remained fourteen years.

Notable Service to Nation.

Dean Worcester's service to the nation has been a notable one in many respects, but his guardianship of the wild men, an extraordinary tale of service and adventure, must make the largest appeal to us at home. The Spanish Government and the Christian peoples of the Philippines appear to have given themselves little concern as to their wild neighbors. A few hardy and devoted missionaries ventured among them, but contact seems to have been largely accidental and occasional.

The largest groups of non-civilized peoples inhabit the province of North Luzon, living in wildly picturesque and formerly inaccessible mountains. These superb but primitive peoples have engaged in inter-tribal warfare throughout their history and this terrible condition was accentuated by the repulsive practice of taking and preserving as house ornaments the heads of their enemies. From this custom they derived the name of headhunters. Their feuds were both tribal and personal, and all the people were touched by the malign hand of vengeance and fear.

Rapacity had marked the attitude of the Christian Filipino in his dealings with these unhappy children of the mountains, and when Worcester and his men went among them they, too, were received as enemies. Their first greetings were challenges to battles, and it was only through superb courage that they won a hearing in the first place, while endless patience and infinite tact were necessary to the establishment of the confidence and friendship which has resulted in the acceptance by the wild people of civilized law.

Worcester not only won and retained the friendship of the wild people, but brought peace to them and turned their thoughts and hands to the more useful things of life. Warring tribes were brought together in friendly relationship and the rivalry of athletics took the place of forays. Schools were started, industry and husbandry encouraged and the once inaccessible mountains were bisected and crosscut with roads and trails, largely constructed by the wild men themselves. Occasionally a head is taken, but the custom may be said to have almost disappeared.

Under the old order the men were so busy fighting that farming was neglected and frequently large numbers of people were in want. The termination of warfare, individual and collective, has sent thousands of men back to the fields and the food supply is now always ample to meet all the needs of the people and leave a considerable annual surplus.

Gained Their Friendship.

The wild tribe relationship in the Philippines offered at the beginning a veritable hornets' nest of trouble for the United States Government, the possibilities of which are strikingly illustrated by the experience of the Japanese in Formosa and the Dutch in Java, where costly and endless war has been waged against the hillmen. Had the die been cast for war rather than peace with the hillmen of the Philippines, it would have been a formidable and endless task to conquer and control them. The tribes are numerous and their men are big, upstanding fellows, born of forebears who never knew peace. Fear is not a quality of their warriors, and they would have been a troublesome enemy.

In gaining their friendship Worcester and his men rendered large service to their country and the cause of civilization and set in motion a work that is unique in the whole relationship between civilization and savagery. These peoples have great possibilities of development and there falls to the successors of Dean Worcester in the Philippines an important duty to carry forward the task upon which he made such a splendid beginning.

The most important relationship that Dean Worcester has had toward the rest of the Filipino people has been on the side of sanitation and science.

It was necessary to wage the battle from many sides. The first requisite was an up-to-date scientific institution that would furnish the best fighting material, and there was created, under Worcester's direction, a great laboratory that has won more acclaim in Europe than it has in the United States.

Another necessity was a modern school of medicine and surgery that would train Filipinos to minister to the needs of their own people, and such an institution was founded. Hospitals were another dire necessity, and these were created. Clinics were another need, and these were provided. Nurses were needed everywhere, and training schools for young Filipino women were started.

Thousands of lepers were scattered throughout the archipelago, and these were slowly gathered in a great colony founded at Culion Island. Slowly through the years there was a steady gain against disease and the opposition of the people; only a decade was necessary finally to turn the tide. Hospitals and clinics which once aroused the fear of the people and were deserted are now unable to meet their daily demands. Manila General Hospital is now the largest and busiest institution in the capital and the Manila Free Clinic has grown to be the third largest in the world.

Dean Will Tell of Filipinos.

Freed from long official service and the restraints which it consciously and unconsciously imposes, Dean Worcester is coming home to talk to the country about the Philippines. He says that he intends to travel from coast to coast telling what he knows about the islands and their peoples, and his message is going to be worth hearing. He knows more about his subject than any other living man.

Mr. Worcester has prepared a series of nine addresses, and their subjects are as follows: "Among the Wild Tribes of the Philippines," "The Headhunters of Northern Luzon," "What the United States Has Done for the Wild Tribes of the Philippine Islands," "Forest Resources of the Philippine Islands," "Commercial Possibilities of the Philippine Islands," "Health Work in the Philippine Islands," "Educating the Filipinos," "Modern Manila," and "Is Philippine Independence a Present Possibility?"

To supplement and illuminate his lectures Mr. Worcester has made an extraordinary collection of Philippine motion pictures. These cover in striking manner the wild tribes, as well as many other features of island life.

"OW!" Corns? Use "GETS-IT"

"GETS-IT," the New-Plan Corn Cure, Makes Any Corn Shrivel, Vanish.

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds

"Madam, If You'd Use 'GETS-IT' for Corns, You Could Wear Any Tight Shoe Easily!"

to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence Company, Chicago.

Bryan, as Trouper, Stirs U. S. and Europe

Premier Is Ridiculed as a 'Tent Show Star'

Secretary of State Appears Every Night With Tyrolean Yodlers and a Gypsy Violinist.

The Bryan Lecture as a Money Maker.

Since entering President Wilson's Cabinet Mr. Bryan has spent much time on the Chautauqua circuit. He received his traveling expenses, a guarantee of $250 for each lecture and 50 per cent of all receipts in excess of $500. These lectures have been delivered since March 4:

July 13—Hendersonville, N. C., $250.
July 17—Mountain Lake Park, Ind., $250.
July 20—Winona Lake, Ind., two free.
July 21—Gary, Ind., $375.
July 22—Oelwein, Iowa, $250.
July 24—Adel, Iowa, $500.
July 23—Panora, Iowa, $250.
Aug. 28—Lambertville, N. J., $400.
Sept. 1—Chestertown, Md., $250.
Sept. 8—Salisbury, Md., $750.
Sept. 9—Crisfield, Md., $250.
Sept. 10—Media, Pa., $250.
Sept. 10—Glenolden, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12—Phoenixville, Pa., $250.
Sept. 12—Woodbury, N. J., $250.
Sept. 13—Charleston, W. Va., $250.
Sept. 13—Woodstock, Va., $250.
Total, $5,025.

WOODSTOCK, VA., Sept. 13.—William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, addressed a large gathering here tonight and pocketed $250 and his specified share of the gate receipts. He came from Charleston, W. Va., and will go on to Staunton, President Wilson's birthplace, on Tuesday.

The performance, or rather the lecture, compared favorably with that in Media, Pa., a few days ago and at Glenolden.

Glenolden had the advantage of Media, because at the former place no popcorn or pink lemonade booths were allowed outside. At Glenolden these accessories of the circus were not lacking. The peanut privilege, while not a lucrative one, was a noisy one. "Peanuts, chocolates and chewing gum."

"Ice cream cones and brick ice cream!" These cries greeted Mr. Bryan as he came up in an automobile that was parked with half a hundred more on the old circus lot where the chautauqua tent was pitched.

"There Isn't Any Elephant."

A little boy who insisted upon having peanuts as he was dragged along by his mother declared he wanted them to feed the elephant.

"There isn't any elephant, Willie," said his mother.

"Yes, there is; they got a tent," he wailed as she moved on with him to where the crowd was in line.

There must have been several persons under the same impression as to the use to which the tent was being put, because the almost incessant cracking of well-roasted goobers in the rear seats punctuated the lecture of the Secretary and at times made it difficult for those in the extreme rear seats to hear clearly.

The really disappointed boys, however, were those who carried water for the band and the other talent to get free tickets and those who crawled in under the canvas who found the show not up to expectations to the juvenile portion of the crowd.

Lament of a Canvasman.

One of the canvasmen who had a seat along the side of the tent wall surrounding the lot aired his woes while Mr. Bryan was speaking.

"I'm sorry I joined," he wailed. "This ain't a regular show, and the boss canvasman is a Swarthmore student. What he don't know about putting up a big tent would fill a book. What they ought to do with this business is take there here Tyroleans. That boy champion is good and is as fine a yodler as there is in the business, and I have been seeing concerts with circuses for a long time way back with the Sells show. They ought to take and consolidate them and that band and then go into Philly and get a good lot and play two a day right along."

Bryan Could Commute.

"Mr. Bryan could commute from Washington. We could let him close the afternoon show and put him on number one for the night show, and we would get some money. These people are amateurs. I'm sorry I joined out. You see the way it was. I used to be with the old Forepaugh show, and when I saw the tent I just naturally asked for work."

Contrary to the general opinion, the artists dividing time with Bryan and holding the crowd until he arrives do not feel particularly puffed up over the fact that they are on the same bill with him.

Gus Oechner, the champion yodler, at Media, this afternoon, was congratulated on getting a bigger hand than Mr. Bryan at the close of his act.

"That ain't much," said another. "Anna Umley got a better hand than he did on her zither act."

"No, we are not sore at his taking the spotlight," said one of the troupe, after changing to street clothes and taking his make-up off. "Mr. Graus, our manager, will tell you we have played with some of the best. We don't care where they put us on a bill. We can follow an animal act or juggler or any of the rest of them.

"Why, we would not be afraid to let Mr. Bryan take the middle of the bill or go on No. 4. Say, that cuckoo song that Oechner sings won the championship in Switzerland for him. It was a great contest. See, the program says it," and he pointed to where, in small type on the inside, it was announced "the boy yodler of the troupe won the championship in a great contest in Switzerland."

Mr. Bryan has announced diplomatically that he was going to remain on the Chautauqua circuit. He said there were now 1,000 of them. He spoke of the pleasure he felt in addressing the members and audiences they drew, and what a proud privilege it was of his to do so, and said; for his appearance with a traveling tent show.

The caption over the editorial is "The Bryan Sketch," and his part in the show is treated as vaudeville.

The editorial says Mr. Bryan's enterprise is especially dangerous in this age, when the tendency of the public is to despise diplomacy as futile, or at least to refuse to take diplomats seriously.

"A few more samples of this kind and the public will lose all faith," it goes on. It is pointed out that Mr. Bryan's "antics" really call for an essay on American manners and morals, illustrating once again that in the United States a political career is esteemed as a most mediocre profession, hence inferior men have been predominant in American politics throughout the last century, all citizens of marked ability and of pronounced intelligence religiously keeping out of politics, and the really able men going into business, from which position they use politicians, but never hold office.

Thus Tammany has prospered, to poison America's magnificent soil." It also says the best American tradition of dignity is now entirely confined to "out-of-the-way" Boston and similar corners, from which types of men like Olney and Lodge must witness the "vaudevillian" Secretary of State, whereas the "widest chasm separates these responsible citizens from the public's approval."

French Paper Sees in His Performance Reason for Success of Tammany.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The Times' leading editorial on foreign affairs, edited and usually written by Andre Tardieu, one of the under secretaries of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and accepted generally by the European press as directly inspired utterances reflecting the opinions of foreign office heads, is devoted to-night to ridiculing Secretary of State Bryan

:: Not for Money ::

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Secretary Bryan has cabled to a French newspaper that he is lecturing not for money, but simply to educate the people.

YOUNG man, if you lack the acquisitive knack,
If your money fades into thin air,
Don't think there's no chance in the realm of finance
And give away to utter despair.
You can easily be in the class with John D.,
George Gould and Charles W. Morse,
If you'll merely come through with a dollar or two
On the Doc's educational course.

GO and hear how the Doc whose bland soul it would shock
To think of the evil called greed,
Counts his house every night lest the treasurer might
Get away with an overlooked seed.
Though he looks upon cash as the veriest trash,
He'll teach you to keep it by force;
Not a cent will you burn if your lesson you learn
In the Doc's educational course.

YOU'LL observe how it pays to spend years, months and days
In hunting a job you can't land,
If the spotlight you keep while less foxy men sleep
And always go round with a band.
You will learn that to grace a good Cabinet place
As an ad. beats a two-headed horse,
You will never know need if you'll only pay heed
To the Doc's educational course.

HOW kind of the Doc, who has tucked in his sock
All he'd need for the next thousand years,
Thus to bustle around and tell youths how to found
Good, solid, financial careers!
And if all the while he sees with a smile
More dollars heap up in the vault
And his holdings accrue while he educates you,
Remember, it isn't his fault!

German Papers Score Bryan As Vaudevillian.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—Secretary Bryan's plan to work the vaudeville circuit has evoked much derisive comment in the German press.

The dignified Vossiche Zeitung says Bryan has a fine business talent. If it were not known that Bryan will not serve a drop of wine, even to diplomats, it adds, "one would be tempted to believe this idea of organizing a circus was due to a moment of jovial stimulation."

The Reveste Nachrichten suggests Mr. Bryan is trying to show that America's poorly paid public officials are obliged "either to steal or adopt Bryan methods."

LAND UPHEAVAL IN WASHINGTON BEING STUDIED

Strange Series of Movements of Earth on Coast Thought Due to Subterranean Lake.

SEATTLE, WASH., Sept. 13.—A strange series of upheavals of the land in a little district in Skamania County, Washington, had caused wonder and some consternation among the settlers. State Forester Ferris, who has just returned from the rather isolated region near Stevenson, where he viewed the results of nature's outbreaks, is at a loss to explain the phenomena.

Within five miles of Stevenson a man planted a garden a year ago in a fertile little area just below the house. Last spring he planted in the same spot which nature had elevated to a position considerably above the house. This same rancher pumps water from a lake into a tank and carries it from the tank to the house in buried pipes. Several times he has had to remove joints from the pipe to counteract the contortions of the earth on his farm.

A lake that used to be in a corner of the field is now removed to another quarter, while the lake bottom is transformed into a little hillock. In the center of a little lake in another part of the area an island has appeared within a few months.

War Veteran Regains Sight Lost in Battle

Dazed by Things He Sees Since Successful Operation, He Declines $100 Pension.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—Isaac Gates, of West Virginia, a veteran of the Civil War and blind since he was affected by a wound at Chancellorsville, left the Eye and Ear Hospital after an operation the other day possessing full sight and so happy that he has talked ever since about the wonderful things he sees.

He is dazed by the hundreds of modern things.

Just before the operation he was offered by the Government a pension of $100 a month. He sent word to Washington that the Government may keep the pension; he is happy without it.

"I am 77," he said, "but talk about enjoyment! I did not know what life's charms were until I got back my eyesight. The years that I was blind made a great difference to me. Now I am enjoying myself."

SEX HYGIENE IN SUNDAY SCHOOL PASTOR'S PLEA

Chicago Clergyman Also Urges That Subject Be Taught in the Churches.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The teaching of sex hygiene in the church and Sunday school was advoted in a sermon by the Rev. W. H. Head, of Chicago, preaching at the Rochelle, Ill., Methodist Church.

"Let the preacher and Sunday school teacher teach sex hygiene," he said, "and not turn it over to hirelings.

"Much has been said about eugenics, but to prohibit marriage absolutely (among the sick) will be only increasing the evil. To make marriage too difficult is to create a condition where marriage laws are ignored."

Says Extract of Beef Causes Intoxication

Liverpool Doctor Finds That Teetotaler's Drink Produces Effects of Alcoholic Poisoning.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A Liverpool doctor declares all the symptoms of alcoholic poisoning are caused by the consumption of large quantities of meat extract. This is a favorite teetotal beverage, and to say that it produces a special kind of intoxication is somewhat of a paradox.

A patient of whose habits there could be no question went to the Liverpool doctor with every sign of alcoholic poisoning, and an inquiry proved definitely that his state resulted solely from a habit he had formed of taking meat juices in several forms.

Some rather similar cases, say the expert, have occurred from eating excessive, though not apparently bulky, portions of cereal foods.

OXFORD, OHIO, Sept. 13.—The Western College for Women is building a swimming pool for its students in the basement of the new $20,000 gymnasium building, now nearing completion. The pool will be 22x40 feet, with a depth of 3 to 7 1-2 feet. Miss Mary Lucile Cook, physical director of the college, is spending the summer at the seashore, learning to swim, and when she returns this fall she will face the task of teaching 235 girls the art.

THAW PANIC STRICKEN AS HE FIGHTS ON U. S. SOIL

Cool, Masterful Pose He Assumed in Canada Disappears When He Faces Jerome Under Stars and Stripes—Angry With Dominion.

Preparations Under Way to Speed Extradition From New Hampshire to Matteawan—Array of Counsel Retained for Struggle.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—Harry Thaw, far from maintaining the cool, masterful pose that he affected when he began his fight against returning to Matteawan, is living in a state of terror. The unexpected freedom given him when the Canadian authorities without notice hustled him over the border has unsettled him.

Free for a few hours, Thaw was thrown into a panic of indecision. His plans were disarranged. He had no means of making good the escape for which his freedom gave him opportunity. And the panic seems to have remained with him.

Here in the hotel where he remains under guard, Thaw insists that the officers sleep just outside the door. The presence of Jerome fills him with terror.

Added reason was given to his fear when requisition papers calling for his extradition from New Hampshire to New York State were approved by Acting Governor Glynn, of New York, at the request of the authorities of Dutchess County. The papers were directed to Governor Felker, of New Hampshire, who has announced that he recognizes Mr. Glynn's right to issue them.

However, there come moments of calm, in which he plans to continue his fight against return to New York soil. He announced to-day that he has employed a retinue of lawyers to conduct his fight here, and that he keeps in touch with his advocates in Canada, who are endeavoring to obtain his legal return to Canadian soil.

Scores Immigration Officers.

Also, in these moments of logical behavior, Thaw is loudly indignant in his attack on Canadian authorities for arbitrarily hustling him over the border. He and his lawyers charge that the action was without legal basis. His hopes were that the courts of the Dominion would heed his plea and prevent extradition. In Canada he was glowing in his praise of Canada and its people, declaring his belief that he would obtain justice. Now he is disgruntled.

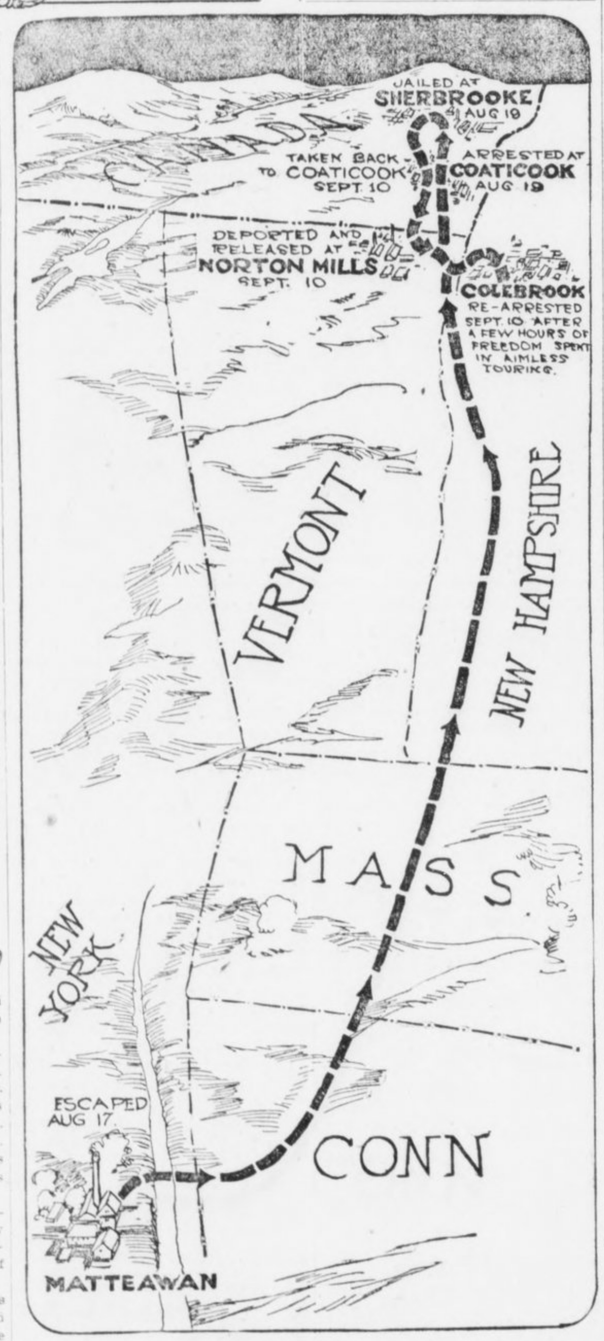
"I hope to get a better variety of justice under the Stars and Stripes," he said to-day, in talking of his plans to fight against returning to New York.

Oddly enough, Thaw and his enemies are of a single mind in denouncing the action of the Canadian immigration authorities. Jerome and his allies who have been pursuing Thaw are not yet over the fright they received when they found the fugitive had been released. For three hours they scoured the countryside, obsessed by the fear that they would lose their quarry. And now they are indignantly talking of the high-handed action of the immigration officials.

Jerome and Deputy Attorney General Kennedy, of New York, both were bitter in their attack on those who sent Thaw across the border free.

The fight, transferred from Canada to New Hampshire, will take on a slightly different aspect. Jerome and his allies will attempt to obtain Thaw's return to New York on a warrant charging him with conspiring to escape from the asylum, a criminal charge. Thaw's lawyers will attempt to offset this with the argument that Thaw, being insane in the eyes of New York authorities, could not conspire, in the sense of the law.

Jerome Grows Impatient.



The fight probably will consume several days or a week, so that even if the fugitive loses he will not be taken to Matteawan before late this week. Jerome is growing impatient over the stubbornness of Thaw's fight, and immediately upon his arrival he sought audiences with Governor Felker and Attorney General Tuttle, of New Hampshire, to obtain from them the promise of no delay in the hearing.

With the time for the hearing at hand, Thaw finds himself among a people who are not nearly so universal in their admiration of him as were the Canadians. There are elements among the populace who are emphatically favorable toward his suit, it is true, but there are many New Hampshire men who stoutly maintain that he has no right to remain in New Hampshire.

Not that the opinion of the public is significant in this matter, but that opinion has been a spectacular factor in the case so far, and probably will continue so. The Monadnock House, the hotel where he is held, has become a public debating field, its lobby being crowded with men for Thaw and against Thaw.

HARRY THAW is shown being escored by the Sheriff at Colebrook, N. H., while below is a map showing route he took in his flight from Matteawan up to his capture in New Hampshire.

Thaw Evolves Another Handmade Interview

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—For the first time in nearly a week, the special correspondent of The Georgian was able to-day to obtain an interview with Thaw. The questions and answers were all written by Thaw himself.

Q. Why do you suppose such unusual methods, special trains, etc., are used in pursuit of you?—A. We supposed it was part of the tender care with which a few New York officials have been shielding the names of Messrs. Blank and Blank——

Q. But in Canada you published a statement that you and your friends were forced to declare that you had no intention of uncovering those names?—A. Yes, and now we are bound not to.

Q. Then why this persistent chase at the cost of the taxpayers of New York?—A. It has been suggested that one reason may be a desire to keep hidden a curious relation between a lawyer who acted as counsel for the late Mr. White and the Gerry Society.

Q. Do you mean the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children?—A. Yes, there was nothing unprofessional in this, but we are told that this secret has done us much harm.

Q. Mr. Gerry is not concerned in this?—A. Not the least; the control of that society was taken from the excellent Commodore long ago.

Q. Did Judge Olcott testify something about this last summer?—A. Yes; Judge Olcott testified that Mr. Nicholl was counsel for Mr. White's associates, as well as for Mr. White.

Q. That he was counsel for Messrs. Blank and Blank?—A. Yes; and his firm also is counsel for the children's society.

Q. How many people know this?—A. That is the trouble. A great many people know it, so it can't be completely concealed like the names of Messrs. Blank and Blank.

Q. Didn't your lawyer speak of this last summer?—A. Yes; he explained that influential gentlemen from the beginning wanted to pretend I was insane to keep these facts from coming out.

Q. Didn't Jerome himself say the same thing to the jury that acquitted you?—A. Jerome said, "Is there anything strange that these people should wish that these things should not come out?"

Q. It has been said that you assaulted a man named Robinson when, in defiance of the writ of the court of Kings bench, you were carried out of that court's jurisdiction?—A. That was an error.

Q. They said you fought in the motor car?—A. That is nonsense. I sat between two Dominion policemen, McFadden and Charron, who are good friends of mine, and joked about my only baggage being a box of cigars.

EVELYN SAYS SHE IS ANXIOUS TO AID HUSBAND

All Harry Thaw Will Have to Do Is Ask Her, She Declares.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—"There are many ways in which I could help Harry, just as I have done before. Some day he will realize that and come to me asking for help."

The above statement was made to-day by Evelyn Nsbit Thaw aftr she was asked what she would do if the attorneys for Harry Thaw should call her to appear as a witness for him in his efforts to obtain his freedom.

"There is nothing in all this world that I would not do to help Harry if he would come to me and make a request," continued Mrs. Thaw. "He realizes that I have sacrificed everything in the past for his happiness and that any one who has gone as far as I have gone would not 'quit' until they had won a complete victory."

"Do you believe you could help Harry in any material way in his fight for freedom?"

"Yes, Harry realizes that. But I will never give any assistance to Harry until he sends for me as his wife."

Depends on His Lawyers.

"There are a hundred ways in which Harry could communicate with me. I realize that he can not come to me. But he doesn't communicate with me; he depends upon his high-priced lawyers."

"Could a friend transmit a message to you from him that would act the same as a personal message, so that you would hasten to his side and aid in his fight?" Mrs. Thaw was asked.

"Yes."

"In what way could you help your husband?"

"I will not discuss that with anyone," was Mrs. Thaw's answer. "I will say that I stand ready to help him in a way he knows. But he refuses to ask me. But let Harry send me the proper message and I will show the world that I stand ready to again make every sacrifice and do everything in my power to make Harry a free man."

"Why don't you communicate with Harry Thaw's mother?" was asked.

"Because she cut off my income more than a year ago. You all tell stories of how Harry Thaw's mother has worked and sacrificed for him, but let me tell you that her sacrifice has not been one-half what Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's has been."

Wishes to Win Success.

Asked why she refused to appear in a vaudeville act billed as Evelyn Thaw, she answered:

"It was not because the name Thaw is distasteful to me, but because I did not want people to come to gaze upon Evelyn Thaw, the heroine of a murder trial, but I wanted to win success and thereby obtain an income for my child and myself by real ability and not by notoriety."

PRAIRIE CHICKEN TAMED.

GEMS SEIZED BY SHERMAN ON MARCH CLAIMED

War Department Asked for Jewelry Taken by Noted General on Invasion of South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two persons giving the names of Lord and Lady Banff called at the Treasury Department yesterday and claimed a quantity of jewelry and silver plate said to have been stored there for safe-keeping during the Civil War. They were referred to the War Department, where records are being searched in hope of finding the valuables.

Lady Banff, who acted as sopkesman, told a dramatic story of how the jewels were sent to the Treasury by General W. T. Sherman from a convent in Columbia, S. C. A record, she said, was sent to the War Department.

During the war, according to the story, the people of Columbia became alarmed lest the Federals would rob them of their jewelry and silver. They gathered their goods together, made up a list and hid the valuables under the floor of the Ursulian Convent there.

Nuns Revealed Hiding Place.

When General Sherman arrived in Columbia, he set fire to the convent, and the nuns, fearing that the valuables would be forever destroyed, revealed their hiding place.

General Sherman took charge of the property, it is said, and sent it to the Treasury, making afull report to the War Department.

Yesterday's visitors saw Byrom Newton, private secretary to Secretary McAdoo, and told him the story. Mr. Newton, on investigation, found that during the war a great deal of jewelry and silver plate had been turned over to the Treasury for safekeeping. This was kept there, he said, until about ten years ago, when it was sent to the War Department. The visitors were sent to that department.

On arrival there they met John C. Scofield, assistant and chief clerk, who referred them to Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, Acting Adjutant General. They told Colonel Heistand the same story, asking him to let them look at the report made by General Sherman.

Lady Banff explained that her mother had placed some of the family jewels in the lot, and that she now wanted to recover them.

Unable to Find Report.

Colonel Heistand made an examination, but failed to find any report made by General Sherman. He called a some of the oldest clerks of the department, but they, too, were unable to remember anything of the kind. Lady Banff insisted that it was there, declaring that when she was a girl she had visited the War Department and had seen it.

Colonel Heistand said that he would make a further investigation, and that he would notify the visitors, who are living in Washington, in Sixth street northwest.

This couple has been living in Washington for some time and has on several occasions been prominent in the news. The man claims the title of the Rt. Hon. Robert Walter Finlater Ogilvie, Lord Banff and heir to the earldom of Finlater, Scotland. He is a graduate of three universities—Princeton, Columbia, and West Virginia. Lady Banff was a Southern beauty, it is understood.

Youths Confess They Invented Meteor

Celestial Visitor Is Found to Have Been Composed of Dynamite and Slag.

TIVERTON, R. I. Sept. 13.—The Tiverton meteor of August 27 was to-day removed from the realm of natural phenomena by two young men who confessed to the police that the supposed celestial visitor was composed of 60 pounds of dynamite and a quantity of copper slag. The "meteor," which was reported to have fallen in the Seaconnet River, was accompanied by a blinding light and a deafening crash. Two fishermen later found in their nets a heavy piece of metal which was declared to be the fallen "meteor." The fishermen put their find on exhibition, and did a profitable business.

The police began an investigation, which resulted in the confession of two young men that they had taken the dynamite and exploded it behind Gould's Island in order to cause a sensation.

Snake Collector Has Rattler Pets

'Lonesome Jack' Allman Has Captured 18,000 Reptiles—Declares Ther Are Affectionate.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Ever since "Lonesome Jack" Allman was 7 years old he has been "foolin' 'round" snakes. He captured his 18,000th snake the other day.

"The rattlesnake is the most intelligent of all reptiles and the most affectionate," Jack declared. "After they have been fanged they are the most desirable of snake pets. They can be made to come to you just like a pet dog or cat." Jack and his brother Shirley made a journey through the mountains the past week in quest of snakes and brought back several large rattlers.

JUDGE BINDS MAN OVER ON IDLENESS CHARGE

WILMINGTON, DEL., Sept. 13.—For the first time in this State a man was held in bail on a charge of idleness in the Municipal Court here. When Alphonsus M. Acton was arraigned on a specific charge of breach of the peace, preferred by his wife, Judge Churchman remarked that, according to the defendant's wife, he would not work. The judg. then said that having understood that idleness is a crime, according to Blackstone, he would also place that charge against the accused.

Acton was held under a $300 peace bond and ordered to give $300 additional for a hearing on the idleness charge.

Cougar Holds Right Of Way Over Train

Beast Measuring Ten Feet in Length Takes His Time About Clearing the Track.

POTLATCH, WASH., Sept. 13.—A large cougar, mistaken for a calf, was nearly run down by the logging train on its way up into the woods near Lake Cushman after a load of logs. The cougar, whose length is estimated at ten feet, paid little attention to the engine and loped along for about 500 feet before getting out of the way.

The animal was on the property which adjoins the water power site which has been offered to the city of Seattle. Only a few hundred yards away is the camp of Government cruisers Dennie Ahl and G. Hutton, who took up the chase. Other oldtime hunters took up the search, but have not as yet located the lion.

The road to Lake Cushman, which is much traveled, lies but a few hundred feet away, and the locality is daily frequented by campers and fishermen.

Iowa Professor Scores 'Apostasy'

Professor Lamson Says Colleges Threaten to Destroy Foundations of the Government.

HASTINGS, MICH., Sept. 13.—Professor J. C. Lamson, of Nevada, Iowa, one of the most prominent leaders of the Seventh Day Adventists, condemned the tendencies in modern life which, he said, threaten to destroy our constitutional government.

Though the professor had for his topic "Apostates From Republicanism," he failed to attack any particular political party and did not say how he classed the Progressives.

The class of professors in American universities and colleges and others who are joining them in attempting to overthrow the Constitution in its present form were denounced at length by Professor Lamson. Such tendencies, he said, would commit the Government to religious legislation.

Governor Feeds His Guests Sparrow Pie

New Dish Tasting Like Squab and Reed Bird Meets With Instant Success.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 13.—Governor Cox is introducing sparrow pie to his guests, and the gastronomic offering is popular. Besides being savory and satisfying, it tends to the solution of the problem of the high cost of living.

The dish was introduced in Columbus by Paul Meeker, formerly in politics, now a broker. He lives in Bexley, a Columbus suburb. Recently he made a self-operating trap, in which he can obtain a supply for a company dinner in a few hours.

The pie was good and Governor Cox decided to introduce it in the Gubernatorial Mansion. His guests thought it a pie of squabs and reed birds until informed. Sparrow trap making has become a serious business since the feast.

Police Chief Shocked; Nabs Vision in X-Ray

Wearer of Gauzy Dress Spends Night in Jail; Pays Fine, and Hears Lecture.

BUTTE, MONT., Sept. 13.—Miss Della Clark, tripping down Wyoming street in the bright glare of the noon sun yesterday, shocked Chief of Police Murphy and he arrested her. She was kept overnight in jail.

Police Judge Booher fined her $5 in court to-day for wearing the diaphanous costume.

"You women have got to dress decently in Butte," said the court.

CHILDREN CURED BY FRIEDMANN, PARENTS ASSERT

Crippled Boy Treated With Serum Now Running About Streets of Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two of the worst cases treated by Dr. Frederick Friedmann, the noted German physician, on his visit here have been absolutely cured, the sufferers themselves declare, and a number of others have shown such improvement, they assert, as to warrant the patients' hope of ultimate recovery. The two patients who it is claimed have been cured are Philip Chase, aged 5, of No. 2114 Fourteenth street southeast, and Edith Strauser, aged 7, of No. 3221 Reservoir street northwest.

Each of these children was treated once by Dr. Friedmann. The Chase boy was taken to the George Washington Hospital, barely able to limp on his crutches. Yesterday he was running around like any normal boy. His father claims that the lad is cured, and gives all the credit to Dr. Friedmann.

The mother of little Edith Strauser yesterday was one of the happiest women in Washington. "Oh, to think that my little one has been cured!" she cried. "And that after ten doctors had given her up. When I took her to the hospital for Dr. Friedmann to operate on her, I did not believe that she had a chance for recovery. The doctors had told me that there was no hope. He gave my daughter only one treatment, and within five weeks she showed great improvement. Before I took her to him she had not been able to move in bed for eight months. During those whole eight months she was in agony. Not a muscle could she stir, she was so weak. To-day she is able to play with the other children in the neighborhood, although I believe she would still be better if she could get just one more treatment from Dr. Friedman."

Mrs. Strauser said that since her daughter had been treated she had not suffered any pain, where formerly she was in agony. A cough, which annoyed the little girl before she went to the German physician, has not totally disappeared, according to the mother.

Fisher and Albicore In Death Struggle

Man Refuses to Give Up When Big Fish Hauls Him Into Water.

VENICE, CAL., Sept. 13.—S. N. Reppert, formerly a motorcycle officer in the Venice police department, battled for his life in the waves to-day while he was dragged about by an albicore which he had succeeded in hooking. As he was pulling in the fish, which weighed close to 60 pounds, Reppert's leg became entangled in the line and he went overboard headfirst.

Reppert would not drop the line, for it was his intention to land the big fish. The albicore made a sweep to the surface and jumped clear of the waves. The next moment the fish was on a course for the bottom with Reppert in tow.

A companion finally cut the line and permitted the albicore to continue its journey alone while he helped Reppert into the boat.

Bloomer Girls Beat Ministers in Skirts

Drexel Biddle Bible Class Sees Exciting Game, but No One Knows the Score.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Nine ministers dressed in skirts, sans slits, and nine pretty girls clad in bloomers furnished the amusement and excitement in a game of baseball for 2,500 members of the A. J. Drexel Biddle Bible class at the outing of that organization at Lansdowne.

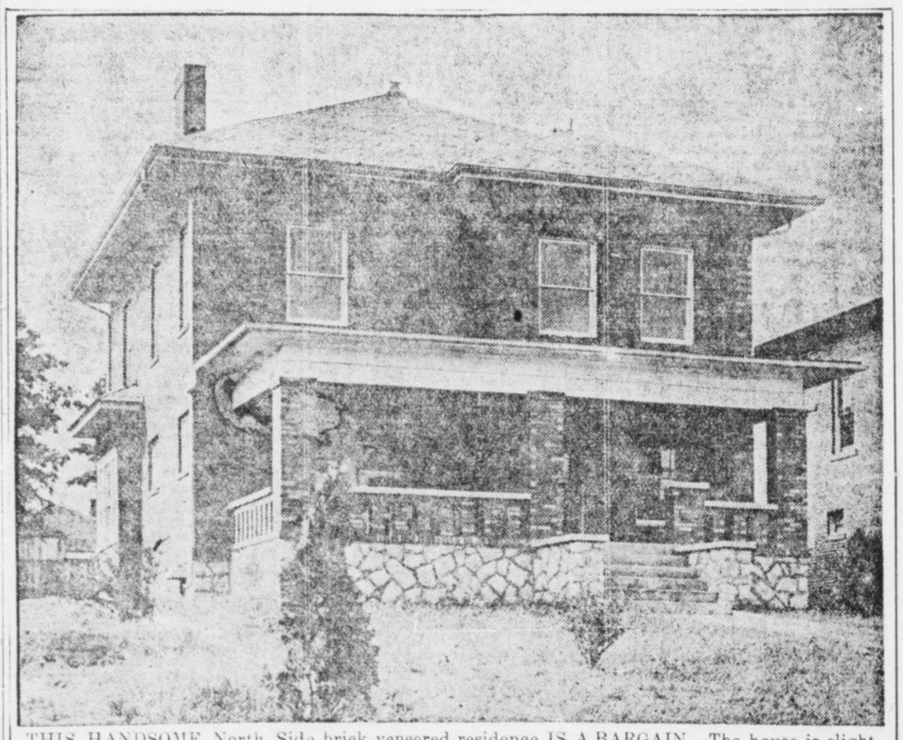
It wasn't much of a game of ball, but the contest, which was for a box of candy, proved of much interest and never-ending merriment. None of the players knew the score when the game was called at the end of the seventh inning, but Mr. Biddle announced that he girls had won.

Miss Anna Zang twirled the bloomerites to victory. Nearly all of the girls shut their eyes when at bat, but at that several hit for two bases.

Private Raps Army; Ordered to Prison

Soldier's Letter to Tumulty Criticizing Signal Corps Gets Him Year's Sentence.

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Sept. 13. Because he was dissatisfied with conditions in the signal corps and voiced his complaint in a letter addressed to Joseph Tumulty, private Secretary to the President, Private Clarence L. George, Company H, was sentenced to a year in the military prison here. He also will receive a dishonorable discharge.



GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

GRAND JURY TO BEGIN CRAWFORD INVESTIGATION

Inquisitorial Body Will In All Probability Take Up Poison Case This Week.

WIDOW SEEMS CONFIDENT

Sees Only Move in Will Contest in Charge Brought by Relatives of Dead Husband.

Grand jurors of Fulton County will this week in all probability begin their investigation of the death of the late Josua B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose widow has been charged with poisoning him in order to get his riches barely a month after their marriage in 1909.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, is at her Peachtree street home, serenely confident that if the Grand Jury should indict her she would be promptly acquitted by a trial jury. She declares the bringing of the charge of poisoning against her was done merely as a new move of the heirs of the aged real estate operator, who are fighting for the $250,000 fortune that was left to her.

Poison Presence Admitted.

The report of Dr. H. F. Harris that traces of morphine poisoning were found in the stomach of the deceased is not denied by Mrs. Crawford or her counsel. They simply contend that this drug was prescribed for Crawford during his last illness, and declare that the attending physician will take the stand and testify that he administered the opiate to relieve the aged man's pain.

The Crawford heirs, however, take an entirely different view of the matter. They charge a deep-laid conspiracy on the part of Mrs. Crawford and Fred Lumb, a barber now in New York, and who is sought by the heirs as an accomplice.

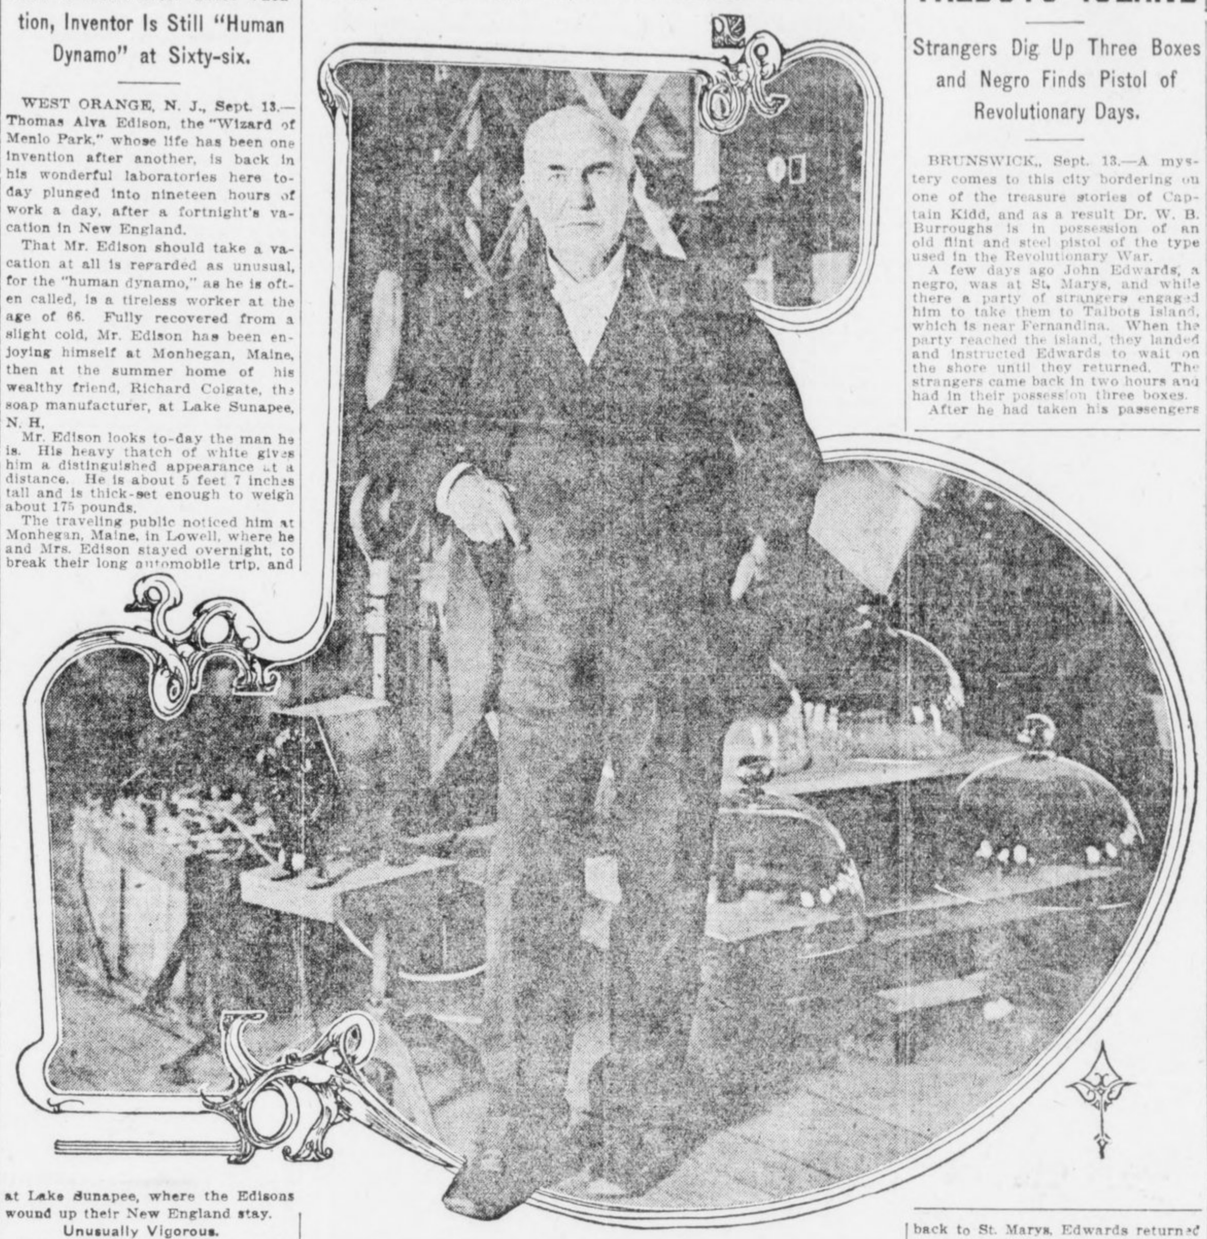
Their contention is that when J. B. Crawford, then in his seventies, went to St. Augustine, Fla., in 1909 in search of health and took board with Mary Belle Bishop, the woman then and there planned to wed the old man and as soon as she could make him will her his property, poison him, and then wed Lumb.

The contesting heirs are nieces and nephews of the man for whose wealth they are fighting, and though the will contest has been on practically since the death of Crawford, it was not until a few months ago that the poison charge was made and the body was exhumed for examination of the stomach.

Sheriff Issues Warrant.

A Coroner's jury at Carrollton, the old home of the Crawfords, returned a verdict declaring that the deceased had come to his death from poison administered by his wife.

It was then that the Sheriff of Carroll County mailed a warrant to the Sheriff of Fulton for the arrest. When officers went to serve it, Mrs. Crawford was not at her Atlanta home, but she afterward surrendered to the Sheriff here and promptly furnished the $6,000 bond required.



In addition to the poison charge the nieces and nephews have alleged that undue influence was exercised by Mrs. Crawford to have herself made the chief beneficiary in the will, and witnesses have been introduced at the will hearing to prove that at the time he uttered the instrument, Crawford was not only mentally unbalanced through senility, but was constantly under the influence of alcohol.

Rays From Brain of 'Wizard' Edison

Opinions Flash From Thaw to Eugenics

Back at Work After Brief Vacation, Inventor Is Still "Human Dynamo" at Sixty-six.

Thomas Alva Edison, as he appears in his marvelous laboratory in West Orange, N. J., in which he labors 19 hours a day.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 13.—Thomas Alva Edison, the "Wizard of Menlo Park," whose life has been one invention after another, is back in his wonderful laboratories here today plunged into nineteen hours of work a day, after a fortnight's vacation in New England.

That Mr. Edison should take a vacation at all is regarded as unusual, for the "human dynamo," as he is often called, is a tireless worker at the age of 66. Fully recovered from a slight cold, Mr. Edison has been enjoying himself at Monhegan, Maine, then at the summer home of his wealthy friend, Richard Colgate, the soap manufacturer, at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Mr. Edison looks to-day the man he is. His heavy thatch of white gives him a distinguished appearance at a distance. He is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and is thick-set enough to weigh about 175 pounds.

The traveling public noticed him at Monhegan, Maine, in Lowell, where he and Mrs. Edison stayed overnight, to break their long automobile trip, and at Lake Sunapee, where the Edisons wound up their New England stay.

Unusually Vigorous.

Those who failed to recognize the inventor saw in him an unusually vigorous man for his years.

If his hat was off, one noted instantly the wide, lofty brow, the brow of a thinker. As General Lew Wallace said of Simonides, the steward in "Ben Hur," it is apparent that a man with such a head must have a tremendous brain from cubic capacity, if nothing else.

Mr. Edison has bright eyes, gray-blue eyes, that gaze ever so keenly But they are not merely sharp eyes. They are kindly ones and humorous, too; for "Wizard" Edison exemplifies the old saying:

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

Witness his little joke about "running up to Colgate's to take a bath"—a sly illusion to the soap with which his host is ever associated.

Brain Works Like Flash.

Dressed usually in a sack suit of dark mixture, Mr. Edison is neat in appearance. Any idea that an inventor has to wear mussy clothes and necktie askew does not apply to Mr. Edison. Maybe he is naturally natty, maybe Mrs. Edison sees to it that her distinguished husband always is presentable. Anyhow, he is as well kept as a man need be.

Speak to Mr. Edison and right away you realize that you have started something.

He replies quickly.

His brain seems to work like a flash.

His answer comes on the instant, and is a full, complete one. Mr. Edison knows what he knows and when he makes a reply he covers the ground.

He uses few gestures, but he keeps his right hand cupped up against his right ear because he is hard of hearing in the left ear and he uses the right one. He has put his hand up to that ear so many thousand times that he has actually pushed the lobe of the ear out a little.

Cordial and Democratic

He is as cordial as he is alert and as simple and democratic as he is cordial. Such is the best known living inventor in appearance.

Mr. Edison has pronounced ideas on about every topic of current thought, from "X-ray" gowns to mental standards and from eugenics to "Casino Johnny," as he dubs Harry K. Thaw.

HERE ARE MR. EDISON'S VIEWS ON SOME OF THE LIVE TOPICS

DANCES AND DRESS—The weird dances and freakish dressing are not an indication of moral deterioration, but merely the expression of peculiar mental flights. They are here today and gone to-morrow.

EUGENICS—A splendid proposition. Affection will not be subordinated. As physical and intellectual evolution takes place affection will be deeper and more wholesome.

THAW—It is about time we lost "Casino Johnny." The country is better without him and too much publicity has been given him.

AMERICA—America is the hope of the world. Here we are constantly advancing, because the mental standard is constantly improving as the result of public school education.

TRUSTS—Trusts are good and bad. Government control means the end of the trusts that conspire against the public good. It is for the Government to regulate the trust business, eliminating the bad and protecting the good.

ROOSEVELT—A solid man, an honest one, who has been under fire for twenty years, without one shaft by the enemy striking a vulnerable spot.

POLITICS—I am a Progressive. Advancement cannot be attained without these changes. The Republican and Democratic parties stand for the old order of things.

MEXICO—Latins and Anglo-Saxons do not mix and never will. Mexico is incapable of self-government. It would not be wise for us to interfere.

VACATIONS—It does seem great to have a day off. What a wealth of material there is for the human mind to enjoy if one only has one's eyes open to it.

WORK—Sometimes, after nineteen or twenty hours' work; I hate to give it up, even for a few hours' rest.

SLEEP—Sleep is largely a matter of habit.

ELECTRICITY—We are in the infancy of electricity. It is taking the place of steam the world over.

"CANNED" MUSIC—It has been the aim of all phonograph manufacturers to eliminate the scratching noise of the needle and the composition. Eventually we will produce music minus all scratching sound.

WAS TREASURE UNEARTHED ON TALBOTS ISLAND

Strangers Dig Up Three Boxes and Negro Finds Pistol of Revolutionary Days.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—A mystery comes to this city bordering on one of the treasure stories of Captain Kidd, and as a result Dr. W. B. Burroughs is in possession of an old flint and steel pistol of the type used in the Revolutionary War.

A few days ago John Edwards, a negro, was at St. Marys, and while there a party of strangers engaged him to take them to Talbots Island, which is near Fernandina. When the party reached the island, they landed and instructed Edwards to wait on the shore until they returned. The strangers came back in two hours and had in their possession three boxes.

After he had taken his passengers back to St. Marys, Edwards returned to the island. He searched about the place and found three square holes out of which the boxes had been lifted. In one of the sinks he found the pistol.

Yesterday the negro came to Brunswick and showed the relic to Dr. Burroughs, who, being a collector of war-time guns, purchased it. It is believed the boxes the strangers carried from the island contained treasure or were valuables buried there during the Civil War by residents of St. Marys or Fernandina. The island is not inhabited, and it is thought the men had learned of the burial of the boxes by some of their ancestors. No other solution was offered, as none of the party has ever been heard from or seen since that time by the negro.

'BRAINSTORM' TO BE DEFENSE OF CHARLTON

American Will Present New Plea to Italy When He Faces Trial as Slayer of Wife.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Sept. 13.—From the beautiful Italian lakes to the sunburned hills of Sicily the chief topic of conversation is the trial of the Americano, and a feeling of pity has been aroused at the thought of the added bitterness of the man fighting for his life before a court in which he can not understand the language spoken.

Porter Charlton himself, however, has so far seemed undisturbed by this consideration and has already made arrangements to take lessons in Italian—a desperate effort which, of course, will have no appreciable result in the few weeks at his disposal.

Lawyers are all agog over his counsel's intention to introduce into Italy the hitherto unknown defense of "brainstorm," which is expected to have a great vogue with certain classes of criminal lawyers. They have decided that in Italy it will have more effect if designated as "morbid fury" and "irresistible force."

Prisoner Is Tranquil.

Of this "irresistible force" there is at present very little indication in the prisoner. His conduct and words are tranquil and deferential almost to humbleness, while he neither expresses remorse nor seeks to justify himself. Indeed, his attitude seems to be that of a person taking a rest cure.

Charlton has already exercised his small amount of Italian upon his jailers, and is much puzzled at the difference between the Como dialect and that of the Genoese stewards on board the Re d'Italia.

The slovenliness which was a marked characteristic of Charlton during his sojourn with his wife at Moltrasio has entirely disappeared. Indeed, although alone in his cell and unvisited by anyone, his dress is kept in an immaculate state. On one point he is classed with the "crazy" English, as he insists upon having an extra supply of water for his ablutions, over which his jailer grumbles, saying, "What is the use of washing and then doing it all over again next day?" But a few lire soon soothes his ruffled feelings.

Wilson's Influence Talked.

Absurd rumors are flying about as to what is being done for Charlton in the United States; as, for instance, that ex-President Taft is using his influence with the Italian Government, and that, if things go badly for the prisoner, President Wilson will ask to have him pardoned—all of which is absolute nonsense, since once he is in the hands of Italian justice and tried by a jury, even the King himself can do nothing for Charlton.

In fact, any extraneous interference would probably prejudice his case. Of this the American Government is well aware, as it has not even communicated with the Embassy at Rome or the Consulate at Milan.

Tries to Aid Bandit Who Killed Father

Son of Victim of Coffeyville Raid Would Pay Fine of the Slayer.

JOPLIN, MO., Sept. 13.—For more than a decade James C. Brown, a Joplin miner, lived with the intention of killing Emmett Dalton, the only surviving member of the notorious gang that terrorized Kansas twenty years ago, but last night he was here at the city jail attempting to have the former bandit released.

Dalton was fined $25 and costs in Joplin Police Court a few days ago when he pleaded guilty to being drunk for the fourth time within a week. Brown attempted to have his fine reduced, and said if this was done he would pay it.

"I want to return good for evil," the miner explained to Chief of Police J. H. Myers. "In the Coffeyville raid Emmett Dalton killed my father.

"I nursed an oath to kill Dalton for thirteen years. Then I saw the folly of my way of thinking. A few years ago I gave up the idea and now I want to do Dalton a good turn by getting him out of jail."

Gum Chewing Brings Health, Says Doctor

The Habit Exercises the Jaw and Cleanses the Teeth, Speaker Tells Ohio Physicians.

CEDAR POINT, OHIO, Sept. 13.—A discussion of diseases and abuses of sanitary conditions, described as causing most of Ohio's sickness and suffering, marked the sessions of the sixty-eighth annual convention of the Ohio Medical Society.

Gum chewing was approved by Dr. H. C. Brown, of Columbus, president of the National Dental Association. Gum chewing exercises the muscles and the tissues of the mouth, at the same time cleansing the surface of the teeth, said Dr. Brown, who added that the American people do not use their molars enough.

"It is a fact to be deplored that the uncivilized have better teeth than the civilized," said Dr. Brown.

STOCK OWNER ENRICHED.

SPOKANE, Sept. 13.—Nearly twenty years ago Patrick Hurley paid $170 for 4,250 shares of stock in a Coeur d'Alene mine. The stock is now worth $1 a share, and Hurley has been located by officers of the company after six months' search.

BROKER BLAMES 'FATAL' CHARMS FOR HIS ARREST

Weird Fascination of Woman in Case Is Brought to Notice by Friends.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—The young and handsome wife and the friends of Francis W. Keeler, a Denver broker, have brought up another defense for his arrest with Mrs. Jacquanna Russum.

They point to the past record of the woman whose weird fascination has, according to the writings of Professor Oscar L. Trieg, of Chicago University, caused several other men to give all for her smiles.

Keeler and Mrs. Russum were arrested here in a hotel room and he is now a defendant in an alienation suit for $75,000 damages brought by the woman's husband, Thomas Russum, of Chicago. Keeler's firmest friends assert that Mrs. Russum had an irresistible influence over him.

"I did not know the woman was married," Keeler told close friends. "She had a fatal fascination for me that seemed irresistible. When I found she was married I suspected a blackmail scheme, thinking she and others had conspired against me, believing I was wealthy."

Blackmailers Reap Harvest of $200,000

Los Angeles Chief Says Swindlers Work Under Guise of Being Private Detectives.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Declaring that Los Angeles is infested with blackmailers, operating as private detectives, Chief of Police Sebastian recommended to the County Grand Jury and to the Police Commission the passage of an ordinance licensing all private detective institutions.

Sebastian said he based his recommendations on a record showing the payment of upwards of $200,000 in blackmail tribute.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Safer 'Harbors' for Germany's Airships

Even Subterranean Dock Is Planned for Kaiser's New Aerial Dreadnought Fleet.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—Germany is providing airship "harbors" along the French and Russian frontiers. Already she has 30 hangars that shelter 40 dirigibles and are supplied with stores of hydrogen and petrol.

New and improved hangars, each capable of holding two Zeppelins, will be built at Darmstadt, Mannheim, Hanover and three other cities. Some will revolve as the wind varies to admit monster airships entering or leaving.

A subterranean dock is planned to protect the airships from overhead attack.

Spellers Stumped by 'Rhythm' First Word

Chicago Club Members All Miss and Judges Order Spelling Bee Started Over.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The word "rhythm" almost broke up a spelling match at the outing of the Empire State Club at Rautina.

It was the first word given to the twenty-five contestants—all former New Yorkers now living in Chicago—and not a person could spell it.

The judges conferred and started over again, after promising that "rhythm" would not be given again. Mrs. Alexander Dennison finally won, after her closest competitors had stumbled over the word "judgment."

About three hundred attended the outing, which was in charge of J. C. Merrill, president of the club.

ACCUSED SWINDLER IS TRAILED FOR 5,000 MILES

CENTRALIA, ILL., Sept. 13.—After having traveled more than 5,000 miles in an effort to run down a crook, Special Agent J. E. Stoy, representing a Chicago furniture company, arrived here this afternoon.

Stoy has been on the trail of this man nine months, covering Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Missouri and Southern Illinois. Traces of the fugitive's work were discovered in Carbondale, Duquoin and Staunton. He takes orders for a furniture house, collecting on the orders, and the goods are not delivered.

WOMAN ELECTED ON PROGRESSIVE COMMITTEE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Mrs. John D. Hooker, of San Francisco and Los Angeles, has been unanimously elected by the Progressive National Committee at Washington to the office of California national committeeman, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Isabella Blaney, according to an announcement made here to-day by members of the Progressive party. Mrs. Hooker, who is one of the best known women of California, is now traveling in Europe.

'Count the Flies,' Now Slogan of Kansas

Novel Method of Making Merchants Drive Out Pest Decided on by Board.

TOPEKA, Sept. 13.—"Count the flies!" instead of "Swat the fly!" will be the slogan of the State Board of Health for next year.

Without getting nearly the amount of advertising from such a war cry, the Health Board of Ohio has been getting results that are entirely satisfactory by the application of a clever idea which the Kansas board has determined to appropriate.

Next year the proprietor of the restaurant or store who permits flies to buzz around where flies ought not to be may expect to find in his daily mail small cards bearing some such message as this:

"Dear Sir: While in your place of business yesterday I counted fourteen flies. Yours respectfully,

"JOHN DOE."

That is the Ohio idea. The Kansas Board of Health will have a lot of cards printed and will get the women's clubs over the State to distribute them.

Arctic Has No Terror For College Girls

University of California Graduates Sail to Spend Year Teaching in Alaska.

BERKELEY, CAL., Sept. 13.—A winter in the frozen north has no terrors for Miss Florence Getchell and Miss Lorraine Andrews, two intrepid young Berkeley girls, who will leave soon to teach in the high school of Juneau, Alaska.

Miss Getchell and Miss Andrews are both recent graduates of the University of California, where they were very prominent in college doings. They sailed to-day for Alaska and will be gone a year.

Miss Getchell will teach mathematics and Miss Andrews will teach English. A number of sorority girls will go up to Alaska on a jaunt next spring, and will join the two girls and return with them in the summer.

GIRL DREAMS COMBINATION AND OPENS COUNTY VAULT

NEVADA, MO., Sept. 13.—A dream aided Miss Blanch Richardson, Deputy Treasurer of Vernon County, and as a results the door of the vault in the Treasurer's office is open again.

A little girl visiting Miss Richardson saw the shiny knob on the vault door and turned the lock. The office force was new and no one knew the combination. Arrangements were made to drill into the door.

Miss Richardson dreamed of a combination that would open the lock. She tried it and the lock opened.

BELLS ON FRUIT TREES.

LANCASTER, PA., Sept. 13.—Hiram Wagner does not propose to have his choice peaches carried off by thieves, so he has placed bells on the trees, which will ring with the slightest movement of the limbs.

MAMMA, DADDY AND CHILDREN ALL LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "Fruit Laxative" Cleanses Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful to-night means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping.

Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 50c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—Adv.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT BRINGS 'YANKEE' HOSTS AGAIN ON DIXIE'S SOIL

Chattanooga and the Southland Give Warmest Welcome of Friendship as Invaders Return to Historic Battlefields of Mountains of Tennessee.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Chattanooga has put on her gayest dress, and with flags and bunting, flowers and decorations of all kinds, is today anxiously awaiting the opening of the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic on Monday.

This year's encampment marks an auspicious occasion in the history of the G. A. R., for it is not only the first reunion of Northern veterans ever held in the real South, but it is also the centennial of some of the most famous battles fought during the Civil War in the vicinity of this city.

Fifty years ago the armies of the North and South entered into deadly combat on the fields of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga falls on the last two days of the encampment, September 19 and 20.

Already the city is crowded with thousands of veterans and visitors, and each incoming train adds to the number. Although no official figures have been given out, it is estimated that more than 200,000 strangers will be here by Monday morning, when the city of Chattanooga tenders an official reception to the visiting veterans at the Hotel Patten.

Commander-in-Chief Arrives.

The G. A. R. commander-in-chief, Alfred B. Beers, of Bridgeport, Conn., has arrived and will take a prominent part in the reception and the events of the following days. This reception will introduce the visitors to the citizens of Chattanooga and will be an elaborate social function, one of the largest that Chattanooga has ever undertaken. A committee composed of leading citizens, under the chairmanship of the Hon. A. W. Chambliss, a prominent member of the local bar, has been at work for some time arranging the details of the reception.

The Chattanooga Encampment Association, in conjunction with the local chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and similar organizations, have seen to all arrangements for the housing of the veterans and visitors during the encampment.

Because of the limited hotel accommodations the home of private citizens have been thrown open. Most of the arriving visitors had secured their accommodations several weeks ago and they are being conducted to their places of residence for the week with the utmost dispatch. The same plan of caring for the vast crowds as was used during the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans last May is being pursued in administering to the wants of their one-time enemies.

Confederates on Committees.

Many prominent Confederate veterans have served on the various committees, and the success of the encampment, which is already assured, is due in no small measure to the work of these veterans, who have thrown themselves into the task of entertaining the men who once faced them on the battlefield. The encampment will in a way be a reunion for the veterans of both the North and South. General Bennet H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, who was largely instrumental in securing the peace memorial which will be dedicated in this city in 1916, will in all likelihood be a visitor at the present encampment.

Everything possible has been done to make the week a gala one. Many special features for the entertainment of the veterans and visitors have been arranged, among them being the Battle Above the Clouds," reproduced in fireworks on Lookout Mountain. This spectacle, taking place on the bench or shelf halfway up the side of the mountain, where during the conflict both sides were enveloped in a cloud which obscured the view and prevented the contestants from seeing each other, will be visible for miles from the surrounding country.

Another feature in the fireworks line has been decided upon for Signal Point on Walden's Ridge, north of the city. This point was used as a signal station by the Union army in 1863, and a large signal fire will blaze forth from this point every night during the encampment. The fire will be visible from four States.

Sham Battle a Feature.

Another event will be the sham battle on the field of Chickamauga between regiments of the regular army, concluding at historic Snodgrass Hill, where 50 years ago Generals Thomas, Brannan, Steedman and others checked the advances of the Confederates and saved the Union army.

On Saturday, the last day of the encampment, the survivors of the battle of Chickamauga will meet on the battlefield at 10 o'clock in the morning at a point where the regimental monuments of the Twentieth Brigade of the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps are located.

The call for this meeting was sent out by Adam Foust, president of the Chickamauga Survivors' Association, and the exercises at this spot will be under the direction of this body. The local committee has also arranged to hold exercises on this battlefield, but they will probably be held separately from those held by the association.

Many Confederate survivors of the battle have signified their intention of attending this meeting, and the reunion of the Blue and Gray on the field where 50 years ago they fought each other so bitterly will be a touching bit of sentiment and a memorial to the peace which now unites the once hostile sections into a composite whole.

Greatest Battle of West.

The battlefield of Chickamauga has many points of historic interest. Snodgrass Hill is to Chicamauga what Little Round Top is to Gettysburg. Here the battle reached its height, as a climax to the fierce two days' fighting between the army of the Tennessee and the army of the Cumberland. Although Chickamauga is regarded as one of the decisive battles of the war, it was, like Gettysburg, almost a drawn battle; neither side could rightly claim a victory. And it was not until the following November when the battle of Missionary Ridge took place, that the Confederates were finally driven out of Tennessee and Sherman began his famous march to the sea.

On the third day of the encampment, Governor Benjamin W. Hooper of Tennessee will deliver an address of welcome on behalf of the State. Governor Hooper also delivered a similar address before the Confederate veterans on the occasion of their reunion here last May.

Under orders from the War Department, two full regiments of United States troops are at Fort Oglethorpe, at the entrance to Chickamauga Park. The Eleventh Cavalry is regularly stationed at the fort, and the Seventeenth Infantry has been brought from Fort McPherson, Atlanta.

20,000 to Parade.

Although many of the veterans have been enfeebled by age, there are still enough of them who are able to march, to make a strong showing in the monster G. A. R. parade. Every State in the Union will be represented by marching veterans, and it is estimated that at least 20,000 will be in line. The parade will be headed by the officers of the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans, followed by the veterans of each State in a separate division.

Most of the time of the visiting veterans will be taken up by sight-seeing, but one important piece of business will demand their attention. That is the election of a commander-in-chief. The highest official position in the largest organization of veterans in the world is no small honor, and the rivalry for the distinction is quite keen. Five States are preparing to push their candidates and in the short time the veterans have been here there has been much electioneering. When the election comes up there may be other candidates in the field as well, but it is expected that the choice will be made from one of the five.

The department of Indiana has indorsed Comrade O. A. Sommers, a private in the ranks.

Nebraska has entered the lists with Colonel C. E. Adams, a banker and farmer of Superior, Nebr.

Michigan has come to the encampment carrying the flag of the Hon. Washington Gardner, of Albion, the well-known editor-statesman, and enters him as a candidate for the honor.

New Jersey's candidate for the honor is Colonel Ralph D. Cole, a popular Grand Army man, who has a creditable war record.

South Dakota has indorsed Captain N. H. Kingman, of Selby, and has come to Chattanooga determined to land him.

With five strong candidates, said to be the greatest number ever presented before a national encampment, the fight for the honor promises to be spirited and full of interest.

Whitman, of Fitzgerald, Ga., department commander for Georgia and South Carolina. The center picture is of an old Confederate battery on Lookout Mountain.

Blind Postman's Girl to Ride With Him

Miss Jessie Wilson Sees That Postoffice Department Rule Is Lifted for Her.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The little blind daughter of Mail Carrier Sherry at Mandale, Ohio, may ride with her father over his rural free delivery route, although a postoffice regulation expressly forbids it, because Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, interceded for the child, and got Postmaster General Burleson to issue a special permit.

Jessie Columbia, 13 years old, of Cleveland, spent her vacation this year with her grandfather, the postmaster at Mandale, and saw the blind girl's plight. She wrote Miss Wilson of how little Miss Sherry longed to ride on her father's mail cart, and an appeal to the Postmaster General was followed to-day by an order waiving in this case the regulation which forbids that anyone but a carrier shall ride on a mail wagon.

Society Revelers Climb Into Windows

Only Way Ardent 'Trotters' Could Get Into Club to Finish Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

BAR HARBOR, MAINE, Sept. 13.—The liveliest whirl that the smart contingent has indulged in for years took place following a subscription ball at the Malvern—when the turkey trotters still wanted to trot.

When the time came for turning out the lights in the Malvern ballroom—and Proprietor Brob insisted the rule must be obeyed—Edgar Scott invited the whole bunch over to his "trottery," the Swimming Club.

The revelers had to climb in the windows, but they got in, the ladies being judiciously aided by the men in negotiating the high places.

After dancing, with gay music, until dawn, the crowd wound up at one of the cottages for a badly needed rest.

Bachelor Club Fails; Women Get Members

Oklahoma Band of "Stags" Falls Off One by One Until All Are Gone.

OKEENE, OKLA., Sept. 13.—In a house leased by them five years ago, a number of bachelors established their residence. It is said that they would not allow a woman inside the place. They employed men to cook for them and do the housework. Not one of them married during the first year. The young married men were clerks and teachers, there being one young physician among them.

During the second year they began to drop away, two of them being married during that time. In the third year they scattered even more, but new recruits were brought in and the "den" was maintained.

Recently there have been only three of the bachelors left, all the others having married. Three of them have moved away, but they were married before they left Okeene. A week or two ago Louis Hey was married and the two remaining bachelors gave up the house that has been known as the "den." They could not get any others to join them and take the oath.

LONG LOST HEIR OF WEALTHY HERMIT FOUND

AURORA, ILL., Sept. 13.—Frank Robbins, an heir of the estate of the late John Robbins, wealthy Plainfield bachelor farmer and recluse, long believed hidden from the world in a Roman Catholic monastery, has been located at West Melbourne, Australia.

Cupid Frees Autoist Held for Speeding

Prospective Son-in-Law Gets Man Acquitted to Win Daughter's Hand.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—"Yes, I'll defend you, but I'll want a pretty large fee," said Attorney Joseph W. Schulman when Hyman Edelman was arrested for speeding.

"Well, it's worth something. How much do you want?" asked Mr. Edelman.

"The hand of your daughter Bessie."

"I think I can clear you; and you might go to jail, you know," insinuated Schulman.

So finally it was agreed.

Yesterday came the trial. The evidence was so strong that the court prefaced a sentence with the remark that a heavy fine as an example might have a good effect.

Miss Bessie, who sat in court chuckling at her father's plight, grew suddenly grave at this, and whispered to the judge the state of affairs.

"I will not fine this defendant. I parole him to his prospective son-in-law."

LEAN MEN LIVE LONGER.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Sept. 13.—Fat men are more likely to die in middle life, while thin ones are more likely to either die young or live to a ripe old age, according to figures given the medical section of the American Life Insurance Association by Dr. H. A. Baker, of Pittsburg, chairman of that section.

BOY SLAYER OF THREE TO END DAYS IN "PEN"

Psychologists Declare That Lad of Fourteen Is Most Dangerous Inmate of Illinois Prison.

JOLIET, ILL., Sept. 13.—Tousle-haired and undersized, in appearance like scores of other boys who may be found on baseball lots or at the "old swimmin' hole," Hermann Coppes, slayer of the wife and two babes of his benefactor, presents to the State prison officials and criminologists one of the most baffling cases that has ever come to their notice.

Only 14 years of age and sentenced to life imprisonment, the boy is kept in almost solitary confinement, and psychological experts declare the future holds no hope of the boy being transferred to any asylum or winning any liberty or privileges beyond the rules which govern the most desperate and hardened of criminals.

Suffering from an incurable homicidal mania, the child has been declared the most dangerous prisoner in the State prison.

Four months ago the boy killed Mrs. Manny Sleep and her two babes on the Sleep farm near Elgin. For three days he went calmly about his chores and then coolly confessed to the crime and led searchers to a cistern where he had hidden the bodies. He showed no remorse and no fear, not even when he arrived at the State prison, the youngest convict ever admitted to that institution.

Alienists, criminologists and penitentiary officials are agreed that it would be a menace to any community for the boy to be free in it, and that were he sent to an asylum the cunning of his brain would devise some way to satisfy his lust for blood.

"He is a second Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," said one of the guards. "One day he'll be as happy as a kid with a baseball bat. The next day he hangs his head and mopes in his cell."

FIGHTS OCTOPUS FOR 45 MINUTES FAR UNDER SEA

Diver, Over Telephone, Tells Crew Above How Struggle For Life Goes.

SEATTLE, Sept. 13.—Eighty feet under the sea, at Alden Banks, near Anacortes, Puget Sound, Walter McKay, a diver, fought a furious forty-five minutes battle with a devilfish, nine feet in circumference. It was a battel to the death for the man-devouring fish, and while McKay finally won, several times he was on the verge of collapse during the desperate struggle, and more than once announced that he believed he would lose. James E. Hill, who was in charge of the assistants to McKay, tells the story.

During the battle with the octopus, Hill stood with the telephone receiver to his ear, listening to the graphic bulletins given him by the man below engaged in a fight for his life.

All through the battle, Hill, desperate through his inability to help his chief, dripped with cold sweat. The telephones used by divers allow the man underneath to talk to the man on the surface, but the latter can not reply, and the only encouragement Hill could offer to the diver was an occasional tug on the signal line.

The octopus had thrown two tentacles about McKay's body, binding his left arm tightly to his side.

McKay with his right arm drew his knife from his belt. He had to use great caution not to cut his suit.

Finally McKay disentangled himself having to cut away yards of the wire mesh. The devilfish still held a death grip on his left arm.

McKay, seeing he could not break the hold, signalled to Hill to haul up Man and monster were pulled to the surface. The fish held on until it was half raised above the surface when it let go, but only to be dragged out, dead by Hill and the assistant diver.

McKay collapsed.

No. 1 Drew Savings From Bank for Railroad Fare, Supposing She Was To Be the Bride.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Miss Rose Lesser, of Yonkers, being persuaded by Alexander Manscher to agree to elope with him, drew $60 of her savings from a bank and intrusted the money to his care.

He left her ostensibly to buy railroad tickets, and when he did not return she became suspicious and asked police aid. He was found and arrested in Providence, R. I., having eloped there with 17-year-old Pauline Deyban, also of Yonkers.

Fighter-Evangelist Converts Old Rival

Minister Obeys Dream Command to Erect Altar on Prize Ring Site.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Sept. 13.—An unusual scene, in which there was considerable sentiment manifested, took place at the courthouse entrance here, resulting in the conversion of Jack Swezy, a noted character, and a woman by the name of Mrs. Hays.

About fourteen years ago Roy Hudson was a prize fighter at Montgomery. Finally he got hold of an antagonist who gave him such a beating that he went to Terre Haute.

There he was converted and joined the Methodist Church and became a licensed minister. He says God appeared to him in a dream and told him to come back to Montgomery and hold a revival meeting and show to the people what a transformation had taken place.

He came here a few days ago and began a meeting at the courthouse. Jack Swezy, whom he had the honor of subduing in a fistic encounter, fell on his knees at the courthouse steps and cried for mercy, while the evangelist from Indiana announced to the large audience that he was now seeing his vision and dream fulfilled; that the very man whom he had met in the ring here had been brought to repentance through his efforts.

Woman Licensed as Full Fledged Skipper

Mrs. Mary A. Billings Ambitious to Become Second Officer on Great Liner.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The distinction of being the first woman in New England to whom the United States Government has granted a license to operate a boat run by power fell to the lot of Mrs. Mary A. Billings, of No. 23 Chestnut street, Cambridge, yesterday. After receiving her license, Captain Billings let it be known that "her one ambition now" is to be a second officer aboard one of the trans-Atlantic liners. She is now preparing for the examination required to obtain that class of license.

Captain Billings' boat is the Yarma, and it now rides at its anchorage on river basin. Although now empowered to operate her boat for business purposes, the new skipper hadn't quite made up her mind yesterday whether she will launch the Yarma, a 24-foot boat, carrying a six-horsepower engine, in the merchant marine service or simply use the boat for pleasure.

There are only seven other women in this country licensed by the Government to operate boats run by power.

20 GIRLS RACE IN STAGE COACH; SAVE MAN'S LIFE

Miner Bitten by Rattlesnake Rescued and Taken to the City by Fair Campers.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Twenty girls in a stage coach, thrilling with excitement over a mad dash across hills and canyons in a race with death, arrived in Los Angeles from the Los Angeles Playground Association camp in San Gabriel, bringing in their coach Frederick Robert Hessert, mining engineer, who had been bitten by a 6-foot rattlesnake.

The girls, part of a party of 65 playground campers, had just concluded a most peaceful two weeks' vacation, and were starting hom in their coach and six. A few miles out from Mountain View, their camp, the stage was stopped by Hezekiah Bohanon, a miner, who hastily explained that Hessert had sought help at his camp after being badly bitten by a snake.

Wild Ride, Says Girl.

Greatly excited over the danger to Hessert, the girls assisted Bohanon in getting him into the coach on the seat by the driver. Then the mad ride began.

Miss Evelyn Thon, of No. 1642 Glendale avenue, one of the girls in the coach, declared that the ride was one of the most exciting experiences of her life.

"We girls were all awfully interested in the man, Mr. Hessert, when he got in the coach," she said, "and he told us about the snakebite.

Reptile Six Feet Long.

The snake was about 6 feet long, he said, but it was coiled, and some way or other Mr. Hessert had thought the thing he heard in the bushes nearby was a gopher. He was mining, it seems, at the time. So he was careless an didn't investigate the rustling noise, and as a result the snake bit him in the thumb.

Among other occupants of the stage were Miss Hazel Washburn, Ruth and Julia Martin, Flossie Ramsey, Gladys Talbot and Alma Fanjoy.

USES CORSETS AS WEAPONS IN FIGHT WITH CONDUCTOR

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Mary Newaski, who was arrested Friday evening for hitting a street car conductor with a package of corsets, was fined $50 and costs by Judge Mahoney yesterday. She asked for a jury trial on a charge of larceny, which is also preferred against her. She is charged with having stolen the corsets which were her weapon.

PERSONALITY OUTLIVES LIFE, SAYS SCIENTIST

Sir Oliver Lodge Declares That Psychic Region Can Be Studied Effectively.

EXISTENCE RESEMBLES LOOM

Intercourse Across the Chasm of Death May Be Gradually Attained, He Asserts.

Special Cable to The American.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, Sept. 13.—"I am one of those who think that the methods of science are not so limited in scope as has been thought, that they can be applied much more widely and that the psychic region can be studied and brought under law, too."

So declared the learned Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, in his address at the opening of the association's meeting here today.

And again the erudite president said:.

"Already the facts examined have convinced me that memory and affection are not limited to that association with matter by which alone they can manifest themselves here and now, and that personality persists beyond personal death."

So, despite his denial that he would invade the psychic region in his address Sir Oliver did enter it, but he watched his every step, guarded his every word.

"Keystone of Evolution."

Said he to his great audience:

"If we have learned from science that evolution is real, we have learned a great deal. Surely evolution is not an illusion; surely the universe progresses in time. Time and space and matter are abstractions, but are none the less real; they are data given by experience; and time is the keystone of evolution.

"I see the whole of material existence as a steady passage from past to future, only the single instant which we call the present being actual. The past is not non-existent, however; it is stored in our memories; there is a record of it in matter, and the present is based upon it; the future is the outcome of the present and is the product of evolution.

Life Is Like a Loom.

"Existence is like the output from a loom. The pattern, the design for the weaving, is in some sort 'there' already; but whereas our looms are mere machines, once the guiding cards have been fed into them, the Loom of Time is complicated by a multitude of free agents who can modify the web. * * *

"Either we are immortal beings or we are not. We may not know our destiny, but we must have a destiny of some sort. Those who make denials are just as likely to be wrong as those who make assertions; in fact, denials are assertions thrown into negative form.

"Scientific men are looked up to as authorities and should be careful not to mislead. Science may not be able to reveal human destiny, but it certainly should not obscure it. Things are as they are, whether we find them out or not.

Asks for a Fair Trial.

"Allow us, anyhow, to make the attempt. Give us a fair field. Let those who prefer the materialistic hypothesis by all means develop their thesis as far as they can; but let us try what we can do in the psychical region and see which wins.

"Our methods are really the same as theirs—the subject matter differs. Neither should we abuse the other for making the attempt.

"In justice to myself and my coworkers I must leave on record our conviction that occurrences now regarded as occult can be explained and reduced to order by the methods of science carefully and persistently applied," said Sir Oliver, on whom universities have showered honorary degrees.

"The evidence, to my mind, goes to prove that discarnate intelligence, under certain conditions, may interact with us on the material side, thus indirectly coming within our scientific ken; and that gradually we may hope to attain some understanding of the nature of a larger, perhaps the real, existence, and of the conditions regulating intercourse across the chasm."

Newport Belle Again Dodges Cupid

Father Denies Troth Fourth Time Young Belmont Latest Victim

Miss Margaret Andrews, beautiful daughter of Paul A. Andrews and most-reported-to-be-engaged girl in America.

Most-Reported-To-Be-Engaged Girl in United States Still Reigns Supreme.

NEWPORT, Sept. 13.—For the fourth time Paul A. Andrews, possessor of millions and a surpassingly attractive daughter, has wearily penned a note to the public. It is the same note every time with but the only difference that each bears the name of a different young man coupled with that of beautiful Margaret Andrews, the surpassingly attractive daughter hitherto mentioned.

This last note was a denial that Miss Andrews was engaged to Morgan Belmont, son of August Belmont. One before that had its mission in telling the world that Miss Andrews was not engaged to Harold Vanderbilt. Before that it was Herman Oelrichs. And the first one was Vincent Astor.

And Miss Margaret is but 19, and her second year out. She is the most-reported-to-be-engaged girl in the Newport set. Rumor has coupled her name so often and so sincerely with one youth after another of the gilded set that it would seem Rumor would lose its reputation for veracity. For each time the gossip has fallen flat, under the emphatic little card from Father Andrews.

Young Belmont Attentive.

This last time all Newport thought the pursuit of beautiful Margaret Andrews over. Morgan Belmont was most assiduous in his attentions. The things he told Miss Andrews and the manner in which he told them didn't seem to make her a bit angry. They were together much of the time. And so, in Society's mind, it was all settled. Until came the note from Mr. Andrews.

The affair has served merely to increase the score of Miss Andrews as the most-reported-to-be-engaged girl for her years. She is just 19, and they say her head is not turned a bit. And she is well worth while in other ways, being beautiful, slender, lively and a daring motorist, rider, swimmer, tennis player and all that.

From the moment she first entered the gayety of the younger set she has been courted. Several years ago, when she was very young, indeed, and before she had made her debut, Vincent Astor noticed her. He was then a freshman at Harvard, and morning, noon and night found him at the side of the dainty girl. But she was very young then, and Society's gossip of their engagement did not bear much conviction.

Herman Oelrichs Ardent.

Vincent Astor, the suitor, was somewhat distant, somewhat superior, somewhat open in his attitude of being the richest youth. Miss Andrews' next suitor, however, was as ardent as could be desired. He was Herman Oelrichs, not quite as rich as Vincent Astor, but wealthy enough at that. Then it was Harold Vanderbilt, who courted in a warm, orthodox fashion himself.

But of them all, Morgan Belmont was the most attentive, the most tireless, the most devoted. And Society believes that is the reason Father Andrews' note of denial bore so emphatic and conclusive a tone. He probably was perturbed a bit himself.

Miss Andrews, the object of all this gossip, is with it all the most popular girl in Newport. She is never bored, never listless, never indifferent. In so far as that goes, she is different. Therefore, she has more than her share of attention, and no girl who gets attention can hope to escape the gossip. Hence the reports, and hence the weary job of Father Andrews in penning his notes to the public.

ELOPERS ARE MARRIED AFTER NIGHT IN JAIL

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Sept. 13.—After being in jail overnight, Chester R. Schlatter, of Chicago, an employee of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Bernie E. Martin, aged 17, of Bloomingdale, were married by the Rev. Paul C. Cornick. Schlatter was visiting in Bloomingdale, but the elopement was planned. They left for Chicago after the wedding.

MASHERS PUT TO FLIGHT BY WOMAN'S FIST

Pair of Men Routed When Young Matron Resents Their Approach With Blows.

LOGANSPORT, IND., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Jessie James stood on a corner in the business district to-day conversing with her father, John Gingaman, and near by, gazing at her, were grouped five mashers. Mrs. James bade her father good-bye and started away.

"Oh, you chicken! Busy?" cried one of the group.

Wheeling around, Mrs. James stepped back to the group, and smilingly inquired, "Who spoke?"

One of the crowd stepped out and asked: "Where you going?"

Mrs. James slammed her fist against his face and he staggered. Before he could recover she struck again, a fair, straight blow, which put him to the sidewalk.

Then she rushed upon the other four, who crowded against a building. Her attack was so unexpected and forceful that the quartet had felt the effects of her fists before one of them fought back and knocked Mrs. James across the sidewalk and against a mail box.

She stooped, grabbed a loose paving brick and let it fly. It landed on the head of the man she had knocked down, and who had risen and was running away. The others followed and boarded an outgoing interurban car.

From the corner to the place where they took the car a trail of blood marked the passing of the one against whose head Mrs. James' brick collided.

"Sometimes I carry a gun," said Mrs. James to the crowd that gathered about her. "I am glad I did not have it to-day. Hereafter I will carry it, and if I am addressed as I was to-day I'll kill the man who does it."

Wife Asks $50,000 For Husband's Loss

Colorado Women Files Sensational Damage Suit Against Her Parents-in-Law.

GEORGETOWN, COLO., Sept. 13. Robert and Isadore Nimme, wealthy residents of Idaho Springs, have been made defendants in an alienation suit filed in the district court of Clear Creek County by Jennie May Nimme, their daughter-in-law. Judgment is asked in the sum of $25,000 and $25,000 punitive damages.

Mrs. Nimme the younger alleges in her complaint, which is rather sensational in its wording, that the defendants poisoned the mind of their son Henry against her, causing him to finally drive her from home. She further charges that they have on various occasions beaten and bruised her, all of which she contends has "caused her much mental anguish and bodily injury."

History Study Scored By School President

Indiana Solon Says World Events Are Too "High-Brow" for Youthful Minds.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 13.—History is one of the most useless subjects taught in the common schools, in the opinion of W. W. Parsons, president of the Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute.

President Parsons says he bases his thoughts about history on the necessary reaction on the part of a person acquiring historical knowledge. To make his words clear, he said the mind of a child, and even that of an older person, can not grasp the magnitude of the battle of Gettysburg or similar events, which are the more important history lessons.

Despite his opinion, President Parsons did not advocate less history in the grade schools or any change in the system of teaching that branch.

Suffragists Scoff "Adamless Eden"

Denver Women Voters Admit That They Do Not Possess Spinster Spirits.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Kate T. Wolsey, of New York, who has offered to subscribe $500,000 to found a college of women that would be a real Adamless Eden, need expect no help in her project from Denver women.

"I am going to the colony when it is organized," announced State Senator Helen Ring Robinson, "to write an article about it, not to stay. I might stand it a little while. I could bear having men around less, but I like to see them at dinner sometimes. An Adamless Eden might be an interesting experiment, but I'm sure it would not be an interesting place to live in, at least, not to me. There are women who have 'spinster souls;' they can live without the society of men and not be unhappy. I frankly admit I have not a 'spinster soul.'"

Police Get Burglar Pausing to "Primp"

Robber Is Donning Stolen Raiment When Neighbors Notice Him and Give Alarm

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Stopping for half an hour to "primp" before a mirror and adorn himself in raiment he was preparing to steal caused the undoing of Thomas Kennedy, arrested on a charge of burglary in a home in the fashionable South Side residence district after a revolver battle with three policemen.

Kennedy forgot to pull down the blinds. Neighbors called the police. Several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry had been collected in a bundle by the intruder.

HAWAIIAN LINERS PLAN FREQUENT TRIPS TO PANAMA

Company Will Send Big Vessels Through Canal Every 36 Hours, It Is Announced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company will send a steamship through the Panama Canal every 36 hours next year, and that instead of sailing every five days they will send their vessels out every three days, was part of the program announced here to-day by the company.

The statement was provoked because an issued report stated that the American-Hawaiian line was considerably "overbuilt."

In answer the company stated that it requires a year to complete a steamship, and they have thus far launched four of their new fleet of eight big cargo carriers. The others will go into service in March, 1914, by which time it is expected the canal will be ready for use.

The statement of the company follows:

"The fact of having excess tonnage far ahead of the opening of the canal does not disconcert us and the American-Hawaiian line is proud of the fact that their fleet with a capacity of 270,000 tons will be ready in time. When the canal route is used we shall maintain a schedule of one steamer sailing from New York every three days.

"It is true that we have chartered the American and the California to the American and Cuban Steamship Company and we believe these steamships will make several trips to Brazil. These are the ships we constructed when the company was feeling its way, and their arrival in the South American ports will place on view the American flag, the lack of which in foreign waters has been commented on many times."

Greeley Coach Will Make One More Trip

Ancient Vehicle That Hauled Editor, Brete Harte and Mark Twain Will Reappear.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—When California makes merry at the Portola Festival next October, in this city, a post of honor in the parade will be given to "Charlie McLean No. 1"—a stage coach with a place in the history of the State.

This coach is a link with the period of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. According to Honn, from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in bullion has been transported in it. Black Bart, Joaquin Murietta and Vasquez halted it in their heyday or were defied by its messengers. It still carries bullet holes.

It was in the "Charlie McLean" that Horace Greeley made his noted ride to keep a lecturing engagement at Placerville, when the name wasn't Placerville, but Hangtown. Sam Clemens was its passenger many times when, in his newspaper days, he covered the Nevada Legislature at Carson City.

Buys Whole Town and the Landscape

Hotel Keeper Will Take Over Entire California Hamlet for a Summer Resort.

CHICO, CAL., Sept. 13.—Not satisfied with owning property in Chico worth a fortune, Jack Murphy, owner of the Western Hotel, has bought a whole town, Burney Valley, and the adjoining landscape.

The purchase includes the picturesque pioneer village, located in Northwestern Shasta County, near the celebrated Burney Falls, and 800 acres around the place. The town consists of five residences, two hotels, a store, blacksmith shop, post-office, granaries, barns and a building or two where there used to be saloons before the interior of the county went dry. He got the whole outfit for something over $50,000.

Murphy will raise stock on the land and convert the town into a summer resort.

Hoosier Merchants Must Get Yardsticks

Commissioner Prepares Pamphlet Declaring Scale on Counter Marked With Tacks Illegal.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Sept. 13.—No more will the small Hoosier storekeeper measure off his ginghams, calico or silks on an improvised scale, marked off with tacks on the inside of his counter.

This practice has been declared illegal by H. E. Barnard, State Commissioner of Weights and Measures, and he is preparing a pamphlet on the subject to be distributed among the small town shopkeepers.

Love Preceptor Seeks Divorce

Lillian Bell's Advice Fails

Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, former Atlanta and first aid to Cupid, who seeks divorce.

Famous Author of Matrimonial Essays Sues for Freedom from Young Chicago Husband.

Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, famous author, in the days when she still was Miss Lillian Bell, of Atlanta, indorsed a cynical bit of advice. It was:

"Marry early, and if the circumstances permit—often."

Now Mrs. Bogue is an inconsistent person, as you will come to know. She forgot what she had written, at least the last part of it, married Arthur Hoyt Bogue, a young Chicago man seven years her junior, and vowed undying love.

Later she recollected, and wrote:

"What is marriage for, anyway? Is it built on anything but selfishness? And if so, is it surprising that it fails? The wonder to me is that so many hold."

And now she is seeking a divorce from her husband.

Considered Love Expert.

Her divorce suit has created something of a stir in literary circles, because Mrs. Bogue professed to be an authority on matters pertaining to love and marriage. But the courses of erotic experts sometimes go awry, it seems.

Under the name of Lillian Bell she wrote miles upon miles of pseudo advice and instruction upon the relation of sex to sex. One of her pet theories was a "college for lovers," in which she would establish courses in "How to manage a clever woman," "How to keep your wife in love with you," "How to develop your wife's personality," and all that. It is notable that most of her advice went out to men.

Through it all her writings were a strange mixture of sentiment and a cynicism, with more of the latter than the former, perhaps, just as her career has been a strange mixture of happiness and sadness. Altogether, she is inconsistent. For instance:

"No man under 35 is fit for marriage. Younger than that, men are stupid, egotistical and boorish."

When she wrote that she was 33. Within a few months she met, loved and married Arthur Hoyt Bogue, just 25 years old, a Chicago real estate man.

"Of course," she explained it, "I do not really believe all the things I wrote. That article was merely the result of a conversation with a magazine editor."

Another proof of her inconsistency:

Miss Lillian Bell laughed at the suitor who did too much suing. She said the man must take what he wants, after the manner of the old cave dweller.

Compelling Power Wins.

"It needs a compelling, not a persuasive power, to win a woman," said she. "No man who takes me like this can have me," and she gently touched together her forefinger and thumb. "He must take me like this," and she clenched her fist.

Then she married. To all appearances; that is, to judge from appearances as she presents them, Mr. Bogue was anything but the character of forcefulness.

"My husband has never earned a living for me since we were married," she said in an interview the other day. "I have supported him and our daughter for the last ten years."

Mrs. Bogue, it seems, has not the ability to abide by her own precept, nor to persuade her own husband to accept her advice.

Too bad, too. She had much advice to give, especially along the lines that had to do with man and maid. All she wrote was on that sentimental subject of love, courtship and marriage. "The Love Affairs of an Old Maid," for instance, and "From a Girl's Point of View" and dozens of articles of the same tone.

Mrs. Bogue says her husband is a drunkard and worthless. If so, she can hardly be blamed. Mr. Bogue says his wife is fanatical and intolerant. If so—but this is not brief of their affair. It is merely a revelation of the fact that Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, estimable author, preceptor of lovers and wedded folk, is an inconsistent philosopher, and a teacher without the ability of self-instruction. Also, it might illustrate the fallacy of setting one's self up as an authority on matters of love, courtship and marriage.

Boy Twice Struck By Lightning Bolt

Knocked From Wagon, He Recovers and Goes Home, To Be Hit Again on Doorstep.

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 13.—Royal Danner, aged 15, after being knocked unconscious from a delivery wagon by a bolt of lightning yesterday, recovered sufficiently to reach his home, but as he started up the front porch steps he was felled by a second bolt. He quickly recovered, however, and is little the worse to-day for the double shock.

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

(From The Family Physician.)

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The more they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had of any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Advt.

U. S. RESTORING GAME ANIMALS IN VAST PRESERVE

In the Wichita Park of 70,000 Acres Great Care Is Taken to Perpetuate Them.

FORT SILL, OKLA., Sept. 13.—In the Wichita National Game Preserve, ten to fifteen miles west of Fort Sill, the United States Government has undertaken to restore and perpetuate the useful wild game animals and the wild game birds that abounded in the Southwest in frontier days.

This was the natural range of the buffalo, the elk, the deer and the antelope. All have been brought back to the preserve, which contains nearly 70,000 acres. Frank Rush, an experienced plainsman, is warden of the preserve.

In March, 1905, the New York Zoological Society sent a herd of six male and nine female buffalo to the preserve. The herd has increased to forty fine full-blooded specimens.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, the noted naturalist, predicts that by 1918 the herd will number a hundred.

Eleven prong-horned antelope arrived from Yellowstone Park in 1911. The antelope is wild and timid, and four died from the long railroad journey. Later five more died. A fine buck and a fine doe survived, and Warden Rush is confident that they will grow into a herd.

A herd of twelve elk is thriving. The native white-tailed deer is rapidly increasing and now numbers possibly 200.

Candidates for Position Must Know What Is a Minor and the Sunday Laws.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 13.—Bartenders have organized a union and have decided that all future members must answer the following questions before they qualify:

"What is a minor?"

"Give ten ways of selling liquor on Sunday with the front door locked and all shades down."

"What is the best medicine in the world besides whisky?"

"Can you tell whether a man is married or single by the drink he orders?"

"Which is considered best to remove a whisky breath—cloves or another drink?"

Western Farm Lassies Compete With Each Other in Getting Up Cheapest Meals.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13.—The Tomato Club, founded by Mrs. J. K. Turner among a group of farm girls in Geauga County, and the recent attack on the high cost of living on the farm, also led by Mrs. Turner, have attracted the attention of the United States Government.

Miss Ilena May Bailey, of the farm management office of the Department of Agriculture, is at the Turner farm, near Chardon, to investigate the work being done. Miss Bailey is interested particularly in the contest among farm women to prepare the best and most economical meals in the farmhouse for the month of August.

NOT ONE STALL IN CITY MARKET IN GOOD SHAPE

Chairman of Health Committee of Savannah Council Finds All Places Insanitary.

LAWS ARE OPENLY VIOLATED

Says Conditions Are Revolting and Can Not Be Eliminated With Broom and Water.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—In company with a State inspector, Dr. John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of City Council, has made another inspection of the city market, and, to use his own language, "found that not a single stall was sanitary or could be made so."

"It is a disgrace to Savannah, not to mention the menace it is to the public health," declared Dr. Daniel. "The dealers are openly violating the health laws. They seem not to pay the slightest attention to even the simplest rules of sanitation, or even common decency. The situation is one which should be remedied at once.

"The revolting conditions I found can not be eliminated with a broom and a little water. The whole market must be given a thorough cleaning. New equipment must be installed. The dealers must be required to disinfect their refrigerators. Not in any way are the stalls in the market sanitary.

Jeopardize Health.

"People are jeopardizing their health when they eat meat that comes from the city market. It is better not to eat meat at all than to buy it there. That a great deal of unsound meat is sold there is a fact of which we have undisputed proof. The State inspector who went with me confiscated a quantity of sausage, some veal and some beef tongues, all of which were unfit for human consumption.

"Some of the dealers admit that they were using preservatives on their meats. This is distinctly prohibited by State law. I intend to see that the City Health Department co-operates with the State authorities and enforces the laws. I am going to see that the market is cleaned up, if such a thing is possible.

"To my mind, the most important duty before the present administration is to see that the city market is improved. Before we build an auditorium or do anything else we should see that conditions at the market are remedied. It will cost some money, but it will be money well spent. I think anyone who will make an inspection of the market will agree with me with what I have said about conditions there."

Dr. Daniel says that the present force of health inspectors is not sufficient to see that the laws are properly enforced. Under the present arrangements it is impossible to inspect the meat stalls in the city market and elsewhere in the city, he says.

Failure on the part of the slaughter houses and butchers to comply with suggestions recently made to them through the sanitary board by the State Department will result in P. A. Methvin, State Pure Food Inspector, making another trip from Atlanta to Savannah next week.

Inspector Methvin in Savannah.

Some weeks ago Inspector Methvin visited Savannah and found the sanitary conditions of many of the markets and slaughter houses far from satisfactory. In a number of markets he found that tainted meats were being offered for sale. Several of the slaughter houses were practically condemned because of their filthy and insanitary surroundings.

The Department of Agriculture filed its report with the Savannah health officer, hoping that this organization would take up the matter and see that the conditions were remedied. This has not been done, however, according to a report which has been sent forward by Louis Garfunkel, the State inspector here. Inspector Methvin will therefore make another investigation.

It is probable that City Council will be asked for an appropriation sufficient to remodel the city market and eliminate all of the present insanitary conditions. The chief engineer will be asked to prepare an estimate of the cost and give some idea of the improvements that should be made. That the market is in an unsatisfactory condition is agreed upon by the committee.

Woman Smoker Shocks Savannah

Calmly Puffed Cigarette as She Rode Down Street in Carriage. Stopped by Police.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Motorcycle Officer Berner took a look at a hack moving down the street, gasped, took another look and then started chugging after the vehicle. When he overtook it, he hailed a well-dressed woman who sat in the hack calmly puffing a cigarette. The motorcycle cop remonstrated.

"Why," said the woman, "I smoke all the time when I'm home, and nobody objects."

NEW HIGH PRICE LEVEL FOR COTTON

Savannah Spot Market Expected to Reach 14 Cents Pound in Near Future.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The local spot cotton market has established a new high price level for the new season. There are many of the trade who firmly believe that the quotations will go to 14 cents at least within the next few weeks.

The farmers who are able to get their supplies to market early will probably fare well. There is an unmistakable eagerness for supplies manifested among the rank and file of the buyers.

The free on board quotation has also moved up, and the farmer or dealer who elects to sell his stands at interior points on this basis is also securing a gilt-edge price.

It will be only a few weeks now before the wharves and docks and storage sheds will assume their wonted activity. The charter list of vessels at Savannah for various foreign ports is showing a steady increase.

Columbus Agog Over Water Bond Contest

Municipal Ownership Club Opposes Water Company in Hottest Fight in Ten Years.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—The war between advocates and opponents of waterworks bonds goes merrily on. The election will be held October 18, and the registration books will close September 27.

The Municipal Ownership Club is conducting the fight for bonds, while the waterworks company is opposing. The opposition is not willing for the present city government to select the site and have complete control of the bond funds. It is the hottest campaign waged in Columbus in ten years.

SIX MILES PER HOUR IS SPEED LIMIT OF TRAINS

AMERICUS, Sept. 13.—The City Council of Americus has adopted an ordinance that limits the speed of trains in the city to six miles an hour when passing crossings. A series of accidents at the crossings is responsible for the law. For any violation the engineer and conductor will be held responsible and will be summoned to appear before the Recorder on a charge of misdemeanor.

PLUNGES 100 FEET, BUT WILL RECOVER

Hindu Falls Headforemost From Smokestack in Savannah. Both Wrists Broken.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—While at work on a smokestack 100 feet in the air at the Atlantic Coast Line docks, Vangaather Cooley, a Hindu, lost his footing and plunged to the ground below.

Both wrists were broken, one knee and his right arm broken, one hip dislocated, and he was hurt about the head. It is said he has a chance to recover.

Other workmen saw Cooley slipping from the high smokestack, on which a new cover was being put. They shouted a warning. The Hindu made frantic efforts to save himself, but in vain. He shot headforemost into space.

He was taken to the United States Marine Hospital for treatment.

Thought Delirious Man Was a Ghost

Fever Patient Escapes From Savannah Hospital Dressed Only in Night Shirt.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A ghostly presence startled the residents in the neighborhood of the Georgia Infirmary on two nights this week.

A white, blurred figure, flitting silently from shadow to shadow, gave superstitious spectators a thrill and awakened startled curiosity in those not afflicted with a belief in the supernatural. The police were summoned.

The mystery was exploded when the officers arrived in an automobile and identified the ghost as a patient who had escaped from the infirmary.

In the absence of his nurse a fever patient slipped out of a window and went his way. He was clothed in his nightshirt.

THREE LINKS CONVENTION AT COOLIDGE ADJOURNS

Addresses were made by R. L. J. Smith, of Commerce, who represented the grand master of the State, and by C. A. Vonderleoth, of Athens, grand treasurer.

Hon. Roscoe Luke and B. M. Zangwill, of this city, were also among the speakers. The next meeting will be held in Thomasville.

DYNAMITE CAR RUNS WILD AND HITS ENGINE

When Explosion Doesn't Occur Negroes Refuse to Unload Car. Engineer and Fireman Jump.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—Engineer Fred Girvin and his fireman faced death here when a runaway box car loaded with dynamite collided with their locomotive. Despite the heavy jar, the dynamite failed to explode, and superstition regarding it suddenly developed among the negro laborers, who have refused to unload it.

Girvin operates a locomotive on the Georgia Coast and Piedmont Railroad at the Dent plantation. The runaway car broke loose from a train on a slight grade on the plantation spur and started toward Girvin's engine. Other trainmen called a warning to Girvin and his fireman, but the car collided with their locomotive before they could jump.

The freight car was nearly torn from its trucks, but an explosion failed to follow. The negro laborers who were preparing to unload the car took to the woods and absolutely refused to return to their task.

That the dynamite did not explode from the jar is regarded as miraculous by men on the plantation who are accustomed to handling the explosive.

Automobile Truck For Sumter Roads

Combination Dumping Car and Traction Engine—Takes Place of Dozen Mules.

AMERICUS, Sept. 13.—The Sumter County Commissioners have closed a trade for a five-ton automobile truck. It will be added to the road machinery and put to work immediately.

The truck is a combination dumping car and traction engine. It is equipped with a set of beams that make it possible to pull three or four road scrapes at the same time. It is figured that the auto will take the place of at least a dozen of the county mules.

Candler to Dedicate Church at Columbus

St. Luke's Congregation Has Many Wealthy Members and Long Missionary History.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, will be in Columbus to-morrow and will preach the dedicatory sermon of St. Luke's Methodist Church, which is one of the leaders in this entire section, both from a standpoint of numbers and finances.

This church has a highly interesting history. Dr. Young J. Allen, the great Methodist missionary, was admitted to the South Georgia conference there in 1852, and was later sent as a missionary to China, at a conference held in the same church.

Boys Form Ladder To Enter Toy Store

Children Tell Police That Love of Playthings Prompted Their Taking Them.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A love for toys led four boys to break into a toy shop in Whitaker street. Their names were docketed at police headquarters.

According to the story told the officers, the children were overcome by their longing to possess some of the things exhibited in the shop window. They therefore formed a human ladder to secure the coveted prizes. The oldest boy took one of the younger lads upon his shoulders, from which vantage point the youthful marauder broke the window and dragged forth such things as his hands could reach.

COTTON RECEIPTS ARE HEAVY AT VALDOSTA

VALDOSTA, Sept. 13.—Cotton receipts here have been very heavy this week, and despite the rather poor price for sea islands, there does not seem to be any disposition to hold the crop back. Every farmer seems anxious to get his cotton to market as soon as ginned, and to sell it at once. No. 1 sea islands is now bringing about 20c a pound.

CREDITORS TO BE PAID IN FULL, SAYS BANKER

American Naval Stores Company to Pay Every Penny, Is Optimistic View Expressed.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—"Belief which was always entertained by those having an intimate knowledge of affairs and conditions, that the unsecured creditors of the American Naval Stores Company would receive every penny due them in due course of time, has crystallized into a definite certainty.

"The time when the final details of the big corporation are wound up and the enterprise dissolved depends wholly on the condition of the money market, the time when new capital can be secured to finance the Union Naval Stores Company in the payment of its notes due to the American Naval Stores Company. The final dissolution is expected to take place shortly after the first of the year."

This is the statement of a prominent Savannah banker, head of one of the institutions involved in the suspension of business on the part of the American. He was very optimistic in his view of the situation, and expressed it as his belief that the final business of the big concern would be wound up before spring of the coming year at the very latest.

Unsecured Creditors.

"There is nothing new in the belief," he continued, "on the part of the creditors of the American Naval Stores Company that the unsecured creditors will receive every penny due them. This has been the view held by them since just a few days after the suspension took place, following an investigation into the affairs of the concern.

"The present situation is that the Union Naval Stores Company was the producing end of the American Naval Stores enterprise. Notes for a million and a half dollars were held by the American Naval Stores Company, given by the Union Naval Stores Company. While the Union Naval Stores Company was a part or subsidiary concern of the American, the Union Naval Stores Company is and has always been absolutely solvent.

"But it takes a long time for even the biggest of concerns to raise a million and a half dollars, and with the money market in its present condition such a thing is even harder than it would be ordinarily."

Doctors Afraid to Sew Up His Stomach

Prominent Crawfordville Lawyer Suffers From Unusual Cause at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

GREENSBORO, Sept. 13.—Unusual symptoms have developed in the operation upon J. A. Beazley, a prominent lawyer of Crawfordville, at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. For several years Mr. Beazley has been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and when the operation took place it was found that inflammation of the stomach has caused the intestines to adhere.

Since the physicians operated they are afraid to sew up the incision across the stomach for fear adhesion will continue if the cause is not removed. The wound will be kept open so the inflammation can be cured.

Owing to the fact that he is 70 years of age, his recovery is considered doubtful.

TWO OLD SEA DOGS MEET AFTER QUARTER CENTURY

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—When the steamer Ruth arrived in port September 10 two old sea dogs met who had not seen each other for twenty-five years. They were Captain Duncan Wright, pilot commissioner of this city, and Captain Risk, of the steamer.

Captain Wright and Captain Risk were on the same vessel as far back as 1876, when Captain Risk's father was master of the schooner Laura Gertrude. Captain Wright and Captain Risk developed a warm friendship for each other and very affectionate was the greeting they extended each other.

Escaped Lunatic Runs 14 Miles From 'Devils and Dogs'

Savannah Officers Capture Man Who Was Almost Exhausted, but Insisted on Continuing Race.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—D. S. Rutland, a white man, who is thought to be an escaped inmate of the asylum for the insane at Milledgeville, had run fourteen miles from devils and dogs when officers of the county met him on the Ogeechee road.

Rutland wore no shoes and showed every evidence of having traveled a great distance. He told the officers he had run to Savannah from the place where he encountered the dogs and devils. He assured the officers that his pursuers were still hot on his trail, and insisted on continuing his flight.

Rutland told the officers he had escaped from the Milledgeville Asylum. He said he would rather go to the penitentiary for life than to return there.

He Held Three Aces; Refused to Lay Down Hand When Raided

Savannah Poker Player Held On to Cards When Officers Entered and Broke Up Game.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Even the appearance of the police was not sufficient to cause C. G. Murray to cast aside a hand containing "three aces" when a room over the Stag Hotel, where the police believed gambling was going on, was raided.

Men were seated around the table when the police entered the room. All quickly threw down their hands with the exception of Murray. An officer instructed him to toss aside his hand, too.

"No," the player remonstrated; "I've got three aces—it's a good hand."

The players were arrested.

Tars Marooned as Trousers Are Stolen

Sailors in Savannah Unable to Return to Ship When Apparel Is Missed.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Three solicitous comrades led a pair of extremely sleepy bluejackets to a room in the Belmont Hotel where the two erstwhile merrymakers went peacefully to sleep, and their comrades departed. After a time they returned to the hotel and awakened the sleepy pair for return to their ship.

But they didn't depart. The reason for the delay was that neither custom nor the ordinances of the city of Savannah approve of a man's appearing on the streets without his trousers. And these highly necessary parts of the apparel of the weary sailors had been abstracted as they slept.

The police were asked to aid in the search for the missing trousers. After a long and exhaustive quest the garments were found hidden in a bureau drawer in the room. The pockets had been depleted of coin.

'Boy Burglar' Admits To Seven Robberies

Teasdale Calmly Pleads Guilty to Charges When Arraigned Before Savannah Recorder.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—With the same frankness that has characterized his demeanor since his arrest, William Teasdale, alias W. F. Palmer, the Jacksonville "boy burglar," pleaded guilty to seven charges of burglary at his preliminary hearing in Police Court, and was held by Recorder Schwarz for trial in the Superior Court.

Teasdale was arrested after a report had been made to headquarters that a young man was trying to dispose of certain articles at a suspiciously low price. This report was made by M. J. Bettencourt, who kept the young man under surveillance and was of assistance to the police in locating him.

No Aid for Harrison From Rich 'Brother'

Charges Accumulate Against St. Petersburg 'Doctor' Arrested in Atlanta on Check Charge.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—The preliminary hearing of Dr. M. L. Harrison, of St. Petersburg, for passing worthless checks, and who was arrested in Atlanta at the request of Columbus officers, will take place Monday morning.

When an officer returned from Atlanta with the "doctor," the latter wired a "wealthy brother" in Clearwater, but the rich brother is apparently a myth, for nothing has been heard from him.

If the charges here are settled, there are requests filed with Sheriff Beard from Sparta, Ga.; Marianna, Fla., and other points, asking the Muscogee Sheriff to hold Harrison, as he is wanted in those places on charges of cheating and swindling.

METHODIST STEWARDS OF SAVANNAH ORGANIZE

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The boards of stewards of the Methodist churches in Savannah propose to organize themselves into a union for social and fraternal development. Committees have been appointed with power to perfect an organization. These committees will meet in joint session at Epworth Church next Thursday evening.

The idea was first suggested by the presiding elder of the district, the Rev. W. F. Smith, who briefly outlined the many benefits of such an organization.

SAVANNAHANS TO VOTE ON BONDS FOR AUDITORIUM

Election To Be Held Monday on $200,000 Issue—1,000 Votes Necessary to Carry.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Savannah will vote Monday on the question of issuing $200,000 of bonds with which to finance the erection of a proposed city auditorium.

The issue of bonds is an administration measure. It has the indorsement of the Chamber of Commerce and trades bodies. Considerable interest is being manifested in the proposition, with very little open opposition.

Plans have been completed for polling the 1,000 votes necessary to authorize Council to provide for the issue. Half a dozen telephones have been installed in the Chamber of Commerce and a squad of girls employed for the purpoes will call every voter who has a telephone on Monday and remind him to vote.

It is necessary for two-thirds of the total number registered to vote in favor of the project before the bonds can be issued. There are 1,681 registered voters. Of these, 191 are disqualified for failure to pay their taxes. It is estimated that there will be 1,500 registered and qualified to vote. At least 1,000, therefore, must vote in favor of the auditorium before the bonds can be issued.

Sponsors of Movement.

The movement to build the auditorium is sponsored by some of the most influential persons and largest property owners in Savannah. For years the city has been handicapped in its efforts to induce national organizations to hold conventions here because of the lack of a suitable place in which large numbers of persons can assemble.

It is now practically certain that the auditorium will not be erected in connection with the armory of the Chatham Artillery, the First Regiment, or any other organization, but that, instead of these propositions, which were considered originally, the municipal government will purchase a suitable location, convenient and accessible to the greatest number, on which to construct the building. Neither of the armories is to be erected in the heart of the business district, which is believed to be the proper place for a public building such as that under consideration.

Youths Are Held as Robbers of Church

Communion Services, Alms Basins and Other Plate Taken From St. Paul's in August.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—George and William Cannon, two Savannah lads, aged 18 and 19 years, respectively, are under arrest in Columbia, S. C., charged with the theft of the silver memorial plate from St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Augusta.

It is said that the lads have confessed to the theft and admitted hiding the silver at some point near Hamburg, S. C., across the river from Augusta. It is understood they have agreed to return to Augusta without the formality of requisition.

A silver memorial communion service, includinb chalice, paten and wafer receptacle, a silver plate communion service and four alms basins were stolen. The loss was discovered by the sexton, who reported the matter to the church authorities. The sacristy in which the valuables were kept was looted.

BOND ELECTION FOR VALDOSTA STREET PAVING

If $50,000 Issue Carries Will Be Best Paved City in the Southern States.

VALDOSTA, Sept. 13.—An election for $50,000 additional municipal improvement bonds will be held here on Monday, the 15th instant.

Of the proposed issue, $35,000 is for paving and $15,000 for improvement of the waterworks, the latter to be used mainly in extending the system to parts of the city not yet furnished with city water.

No bond issue of the several heretofore made has caused as much comment or aroused as much opposition as the proposed issue. It is the first time in the history of Valdosta that any tangible opposition has been shown toward municipal improvements, and just how effective the present opposition is can not be determined until the election is held.

No fault is found with the work done so far, and there is no charge of graft or misappropriation of funds from previous issues. The outstanding bonded indebtedness of the city is now $306,000, or $150,000 less than the legal limit. Against this there is now in bank a sinking fund of nearly $53,000, which is drawing interest and increasing every year.

Saving in Repairs.

For a number of years the city has spent annually on street work between $8,000 and $10,000, the greater part of which is patchwork. It is claimed that the saving in repair work will much more than pay the interest on the proposed $35,000 paving bonds.

The waterworks during the past year made money for the city, turning into the treasury a profit of $4,893.

The asphalt paving which has just been laid on three of the principal streets is highly satisfactory, and will be continued on other streets if the bond issue is authorized. The work proposed will make Valdosta the best paved small city in the State.

LABOR UNIONS HIT PROCESS OF INJUNCTION

Macon Central Body Protests Against Judge Fixing Price of Commodity by This Method.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Macon Central Labor Union, representing 2,200 laboring men, has strongly denounced the injunction process as it has been used in Macon within recent weeks and also protested against a judge fixing the price of any commodity also through the injunction method.

Many are wondering whether Judge H. A. Mathews, of the Superior Court, will take cognizance of the Central Labor Union's resolution. Some hold that the union men may be adjudged in contempt of court for their action.

The resolutions particularly pertain to the Law Enforcement League's petition for permanent injunction against fifteen saloons and to Judge Mathews' action in designating the prices at which ice may be sold in Macon.

Already one of the petitions against the saloons has been granted, and the saloon has been put out of business by a permanent injunction. The other petitions are pending in court and set for hearing in November.

As to the ice proposition, Judge Mathews acted on the petition of the Southern Ice Company against the Atlantic Ice and Coal Company, the Macon branch of a big Southern combine, and fixed a scale of prices. The Southern Ice Company alleged that the other and older and stronger company was cutting rates so low that it would be forced out of business, and asked for an injunction. The judge granted only a temporary order, but arranged prices that must obtain during the entire ice season.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—A committee composed of J. Edgar Chancellor, Park Dexter, James W. Woodruff, W. L. Williams and Jack Stern, representing Columbus Shriners, is making extensive preparations for entertaining Shriners from South Georgia and East Alabama, who are coming to the city September 24.

A special train will reach the city from Savannah on the evening of September 23, bringing a team of 75 Shriners who will come equipped with a car full of paraphernalia for putting on the work on the day following. There is a class of 35 Shriners in Columbus to be inducted into the mysteries of the order and the work of initiating this class will be one of the features of the meeting.

3,000 Enrolled In Tift County Public Schools

Building in Every District—High School Courses for the Country—Fifty-six Teachers.

TIFTON, Sept. 13.—The public schools of Tift County will open for the fall term October 20.

There are 37 schools in the county this year, 28 for white and 9 for colored. Since the closing of the last term two new schools have been added and now there is a school in every district in the county.

Last year 2,500 white pupils out of 3,000 in the community were enrolled. Forty-three teachers will be required. Thirteen teachers will be employed in the colored schools, making a total of 56 teachers in the county.

This does not include the Tifton Public Schools, which are operated under the city system and supported by the city with an entirely different board of education.

This year the high school course will be taught in four different county schools—Brookfield, Ty Ty, Omega and Chula.

Raines Confesses Mail Train Hold-up

Black Sheep of Pennsylvania Family Will Be Returned to Atlanta Federal Prison.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 13.—In a report made to-day by the Federal Grand Jury to Judge Grubb, Harry Raines was indicted for the hold-up of the northbound Louisville and Nashville train between Calera and Birmingham August 5, when the mail car was entered and robbed of registered packages. Raines confessed, and Judge Grubb will sentence him Monday to the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

Raines comes from a respectable family in Pennsylvania.

READS ABOUT ROBBERY AND BANKS HIS CASH

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—After reading of the robbery of $70,000 from the Southern Express Company, Ned Gaily, living at Lula, a little junction on the Southern Railway, looked up the cashier of the village bank and had him go to his home with him. He dug out of the chimney and floor $1,200, which he turned over to the cashier for deposit, fearing it would be stolen if it remained in its hiding place.

It will now serve to help move the cotton crop in that vicinity.

Coal Deposit Found In Anniston Suburb

Farmer Digging a Well Strikes Apparently Rich Ore Vein at Depth of 14 Feet.

ANNISTON, Sept. 13.—Calhoun County, which is already rich in mineral deposits, is believed to have another valuable asset in coal deposits which were discovered recently on the northern outskirts of this city, near Aderhold's Mill. W. J. Edmondson, a prominent planter, was in the city Friday demonstrating samples of the deposit.

The deposit was uncovered by men digging a well, after a depth of fourteen feet had been reached. The coal is being used at blacksmith shops near by.

In this neighborhood there has been frequent evidence of oil deposits and black marble has been found in abundance. Should the discovery of Mr. Edmondson pan out as it it believed it will the property will be developed.

Shake-up in Athens Postoffice Expected

Postmaster William Fleming May Be Asked to Make Room for Devout Democrat.

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—United States auditors have been checking up the local postoffice for the last ten days, and it is freely rumored that a shake-up is scheduled such as has just happened in Atlanta. Postmaster William Fleming was appointed at the expiration of Cleveland's term as President, and if he does not see fit to resign, he will very probably be asked to step down and out to make room for a more devout Democrat.

Captain J. H. Rucker has been mentioned prominently for the position, as has Harvey Stovall, who is a brother of the United States Minister to Switzerland.

BOGUS SUFFRAGE WORKER LEAVES BATCH OF DEBTS

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—A man named J. L. Howell and claiming to be a suffragette worker recently came to Spartanburg to boost the cause.

He also claimed to be a literary man and a refugee from Mexico, but had renounced his profession and taken up the cause of the suffragettes in this country. His idea was to have a State convention of the suffragettes in Spartanburg, and he seemed to get the confidence of the ladies, who agreed to assist in the movement.

After getting everything in shape, Howell suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, incidentally leaving behind him an unpaid board bill and other little debts, for which he gave checks on a Los Angeles, Cal., bank. The checks have all returned, but Howell has not.

5,000 REGISTER TO BALLOT FOR MACON MAYOR

Race for High Office Grows in Interest as Day Approaches. Claims of Candidates.

MACON, Sept. 13.—To what extent Macon is interested in the mayoralty campaign is shown by the registration of over 5,000 citizens. This registration exceeds by nearly 1,800 the registration of the Miller-Moore election of 1909.

With only thirteen days intervening before the election on September 26, the three mayoralty candidates are keyed up for much hard work on the last lap of the race. The most work in the line of public speaking will probably be done by the Wallace-Miller ticket, which is running on an anti-administration platform. The Miller workers will have a rally Monday night in South Macon and another during the week in East Macon. There will also be meetings in North Macon, and in the Third and Fourth Wards.

Mr. Dasher has a number of ward rallies scheduled.

Starting on Monday night, September 22, there will be public rallies at the city auditorium for four consecutive nights. The Miller party will have two, the Smith workers one, and Dasher one.

Predictions Vary.

Upon the closing of the registration, the Miller campaign committee made the prediction that there would be 4,200 votes polled, and that Miller would receive 2,150; Smith, the administration candidate, 1,550, and Dasher, independent, 500. The Smith forces predicted Smith's election by a majority of fully 700. Dasher merely stated that he was confident of election. Neither Miller nor Smith concede over 500 votes to Dasher.

The charge made by Dasher, both from the platform and in the public print, that the Macon Railway and Light Company is contributing liberally to Smith's campaign fund, elicited an emphatic denial from Smith.

Freight Rate Bureau To Meet in Raleigh

North Carolina Shippers and Legislators Prepare for Long War With Railroads.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 13.—Fred N. Tate, president of the Just Freight Rate Association, has called a mass meeting of shippers and business men to be held in the Raleigh Auditorium Wednesday, September 24, the same day the General Assembly meets in extraordinary session.

So important is the freight rate matter regarded that Governor Craig, in issuing his call, placed freight rates in front of constitutional amendments, thereby emphasizing his position. Many believe that the State will enter upon a long warfare with the railroads unless an agreement is reached.

A., held its annual meeting at Copeland Church in Limestone County, and adopted resolutions pledging the support of the efforts that will be directed toward the removal of the dispensary from Huntsville and saloons from Sheffield. Turner, of New Decatur, was elected clerk.

WARM SPEAKER'S RACE IN NORTH CAROLINA HOUSE

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 13.—Five new Senators and Representatives will take their seats in the General Assembly when it convenes in extraordinary session ten days hence. The Lower House will elect a Speaker to succeed George W. Connor, of Wilson, appointed a Superior Court judge by Governor Craig, and several lively campaigners are in the race. Walter Murphy, of Rowan, and T. C. Bowie, of Asheville, are the most likely candidates. The so-called Progressives will fight Bowie and the prohibitionists will not stand for Murphy.

MOB VIOLENCE FEARED IF NEGRO IS ACUITTED

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—The trial of the negro, Will Fair, for criminal assault will come up Monday. Jurors have been drawn. The trial will be short.

It is said the defense will spring a surprise, and there is considerable conjecture as to what action will be taken by citizens who recently stormed the jail, when the negro is brought from the penitentiary to be placed on trial here. If he is acquitted, it is probable there will be trouble. No violent action is anticipated, however, before the trial.

BOLL WORM DESTROYING COTTON AND CORN CROPS

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—A boll worm having the appearance of a caterpillar has made its appearance in the cotton fields of Spartanburg County, and as a consequence the crops affected are suffering almost complete destruction.

The worm is green in color and is known scientifically as hte "Heliothis armigera." It comes from a moth and multiplies rapidly. It not only works upon the cotton boll, but is equally destructive to the corn crop.

Trial of Columbus Officer Who Shot Youth on Account of 50-Cent Debt Set for Friday.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Robert L. Willis, the Columbus bailiff who shot and killed Luther Hawkins, the Atlanta youth, August 29, will be given a preliminary hearing next Friday morning before Recorder Frank D. Foley, who will sit in the case as a special magistrate.

It will be remembered that Willis, in company with Charles Jordan, a boarding house proprietor, was attempting to arrest Hawkins under a warrant charging him with beating a 50-cent board bill, when the latter started to run off from the officer, laughing at the time. The officer drew his revolver and began flourishing it in the air, when the gun was suddenly discharged, and Hawkins fell to the ground mortally wounded, dying a few seconds afterward.

Says Killing Was Accident.

Since the firing of the fatal shot Willis has maintained that his revolver was accidentally discharged, while the State claims to have eyewitnesses who state that Willis, after taking deliberate aim, shot and killed him. The State has refused to divulge the names of the witnesses.

Willis will be represented by T. Hicks Fort, Solicitor of the City Court, and Attorney D. L. Parmer, who will maintain that the defendant accidentally shot Hawkins, while the contention of Solicitor General George C. Palmer, who will represent the State, will be that the killing is murder. The father of young Hawkins is now making Columbus his home in order to attend the preliminary hearing and assist in the prosecution. The people of Columbus continue to condemn the killing, because of the smallness of the offense that had been committed by the young man, whose life was forfeited because he did not pay a balance of 50 cents on a board bill, for the simple reason that he did not have the money at the time.

Concentrated Form Of Fertilizer Made By Macon Scientist

Believed It Will Revolutionize the Present Methods of Soil Cultivation.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Dr. M. M. Stapler, of this city, widely known among the medical profession for the invention for the cure of incipient deafness, has devised a form of fertilizer which he and his friends believe will revolutionize the present methods of soil cultivation. Dr. Stapler is a wealthy specialist with a penchant for farming during his leisure hours, and it was during his spare time that he evolved the idea of concentrating fertilizer.

After working on the idea for several years, he perfected a fertilizer, compounded in cube form, each cube, no larger than a brick, having the potency of 200 pounds of the ordinary fertilizer. His fertilizer is a composition of about 95 per cent soluble plant food, the remainder being a light plastic composition to hold the fertilizing ingredients in shape. His method is to drop one of the cubes—he proposes to make them of any size and strength desired—into each of the holes where seeds are planted.

Decree Expected in Dalton Paving Cases

$15,000 Involved In Abutting Property Assessments Before Supreme Court Second Time.

DALTON, Sept. 13.—When the Supreme Court meets September 22 an opinion in the Dalton street paving cases is expected, for the court must either hand down an opinion by October 6 or the case go by default.

The case grew out of assessments under the abutting property law. Several refused to pay and the city advertised their property for sale. They then filed an injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the sale, but the injunction was dissolved by Superior Court. The case was taken to the Supreme Court, and the decision was affirmed. On certain new features alleged by the property owners the matter was again taken to Superior Court, where the city again won the victory. It was carried to the higher court a second time.

There is something like $15,000 involved in the litigation.

604 Greenville Ave., Staunton, Va.—"My head broke out in pimples which festered. It itched me so that I would scratch it till my head got almost in a raw sore. My hair came out gradually and it was dry and lifeless. Dandruff fell on my coat collar till I was ashamed of it. My head had been that way all summer, itching and burning till I couldn't sleep in any peace.

"I tried salves but it looked like they made it worse. I got ——— but it did me no good so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of the Cuticura Ointment and you don't know what a relief they gave me. In two weeks my head was well." (Signed) J. L. Smith, Oct. 28, 1912.

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. MRS. GODBEE IS UNSHAKEN BY HER LIFE SENTENCE

Convicted Woman Immediately Begins Fight for New Trial. Declares She Will Surely Be Freed in Long Run.

Mother of Slain Bride Expresses Joy When She Hears of Conviction Without Death Penalty. Dramatic Scene in Court.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—Stoical and calm as she has ever been since she fired the shots that ended the lives of her former husband and his young bride, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee immediately began preparations for her fight for a new trial as soon as she heard the jury pronounce her guilty and the court fix her punishment at life imprisonment.

Colonel F. A. Saffold, senior counsel for Mrs. Godbee, announced this afternoon that a skeleton motion for a new trial would be filed at once, according to statutory regulations.

Slain Bride's Mother Glad.

"I am glad Mrs. Godbee was given a life sentence," was the comment of Mrs. M. G. Boyer, mother of the slain girl, after Judge Hammond had set the penalty. "She deserved punishment, although I did not want her hanged. A woman of her type is dangerous at large."

Mrs. Godbee would not see reporters, but it was reported by friends who visited her cell that she was cheerful and optimistic, and was confident of an acquittal on a new trial.

Miss Sarah Godbee, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Godbee, collapsed as the foreman of the jury announced the verdict. She has been a constant companion of her mother during the trial, and her own cheerfulness has had much to do with the cheerfulness of her mother.

She held her mother's hand in hers as the jury filed slowly into the courtroom. Eagerly she scanned the faces of each man, hoping for a sign that they would declare Mrs. Godbee not guilty. Each man's face was grave. Her hand tightened over that of her mother, and tears rolled down her cheeks. As the foreman rose to announce the verdict she leaned forward, the most intensely eager person in the room.

Mrs. Godbee Not Moved.

As the dreaded word "guilty" fell from the lips of the jurymen Miss Godbee shrieked and collapsed. In a hush broken only by the sobs of the daughter, Judge Hammond ordered Mrs. Godbee to stand and receive the sentence of the court. Gently disengaging the clinging hands of her daughter, Mrs. Godbee rose and stood without a tremor while the court ordered that she be confined in the penitentiary the remainder of her natural life.

Mrs. Godbee's daughter, young and beautiful, presented a pitiful spectacle that brought tears to the eyes of every person in the courtroom. She clung to Mrs. Godbee's neck, while the mother gently patted her head and whispered words of encouragement. As the Sheriff stepped forward and placed his hand on Mrs. Godbee's shoulder to lead her away to prison the young daughter broke down completely. She pillowed her head on her mother's breast, tears streaming down her face, her sobs audible in every part of the courtroom.

As the hand of the Sheriff fell upon her shoulder, opening wide the gates of the prison, Mrs. Godbee disengaged her daughter's hand, imprinted a last kiss upon her lips and rose to her feet, gazing calmly at the jury.

"I am ready," she said.

Still Expects Liberty.

Silence fell over the crowded courtroom as the convicted woman was led to the doors. The crowd outside, sensing the dramatic touch given to the trial was as silent as the grave while Mrs. Godbee entered an automobile that was waiting. She was followed to the jail by a number of her friends, many of them prominent in Millen society. As the gates clanged behind her, her only words were:

"I'll be freed in the long run."

Raoul Madero, a brother of the late President, is reported to be leading an army of 1,500 rebels against the city of Aguas Calientes, capital of the State of the same name. The city is defended by a Federal army of 2,000.

Dr. Urrutia has refused to give up the portfolio of Minister of the Interior and will be allowed to retain that office.

Americans' Absence Stuns Hotel Keepers

August Is Disastrous to Both Bonifaces and Tradesmen in Southern Germany.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—The hotel keepers and tradesmen in certain quarters of South Germany are dismayed by the marked decrease in American tourist traffic; August was almost disastrous to them.

The Munich hotel proprietors were hit hardest and are complaining loudly. This loss of American patronage is due largely, it is said, to the agitation by certain Americans in Munich against the systematic exploitation to which travelers are subjected in that city. Experienced tourists, tired of paying double prices for everything, are shunning Munich and going to Berlin and other North German cities.

Ambassador Wilson To Take Platform

Mr. Wilson has arrived at the Waldorf from his home in Indiana to receive his household furniture, which was forwarded from Mexico City.

The book will deal with Mr. Wilson's seventeen years in the diplomatic service, including his work in Mexico and events of a recent date. Parts of the book dealing with the situation across the Southern border will be printed in a magazine. The lecture will deal with the Mexican situation. Mr. Wilson declined yesterday to comment on Mexican affairs.

Washington to Lose Most Noted Beauty

Special Cable to The American.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Washington will soon lose "its most beautiful woman," for Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the newly appointed military attache of the American Embassy in Paris will accompany her husband to the French capital in a few days.

Prince Christian of Prussia, during his recent American visit, saw Mrs. Cosby in Washington and exclaimed: "There is the most beautiful American woman I have ever seen." Mrs. Cosby has a fragile, delicate beauty, and her arms and hands have been pronounced by sculptors to be faultless in proportion.

Georgia Man Seeks Job as 'Diatoceff'

Rockmart Applicant Writes Postoffice Department, but Letter Goes to Secret Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—What is a "diatoceff?" This is a question that is puzzling the Postoffice Department. To-day the following letter from a Georgia man applying for a job was received:

"Postmaster General:

The Postoffice Department thinks that "diatoceff" may be Georgian for detective. If it is discovered the Rockmart youth is afflicted with "Sherlock Holmesitis," the application will be turned over to the Secret Service Bureau.

Marshall at Last Finds $2,000 House

Vice President Keeps Location Secret Fearing a Raise in Rent by Landlord.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—After long months of weary house hunting, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall have found a house which comes well within the $2,000 the Vice President feels he can afford for house rent out of his $12,000 salary.

Lest some envious person see their house and try to raise the bid on it, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall are refusing to tell its exact location.

It is admitted, however, that it is on the fashionable Avenue of the Presidents.

Poetess Enjoys After-Dinner Cigar

Sister of President Lowell, of Harvard, Makes No Attempt to Hide Smoking.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—That Miss Amy Lowell, poetess, sister of President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, made a regular habit of smoking an after-dinner cigar on the deck of the Cunarder Laconia, was the assertion made by her fellow passengers on the vessel, which arrived Wednesday from Liverpool.

No attempt to conceal her penchant for cigars was made by Miss Lowell, these passengers say.

To newspaper men at the dock Miss Lowell admitted that she was interested in suffrage, though she denied any sympathy with the militants and insisted that she supported them very "mildly." Miss Lowell's age, a matter of some discussion among her fellow passengers, is understood to be about 45.

Georgia Man Plans Ocean Flight

Proposes European Air Line

Inventor Sees Sure Success

Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. retired, of Savannah, who is the inventor of a multiplane which he declares will make aerial commercial navigation possible.

Captain Batson's multiplane, in which he plans to fly across the Atlantic from Savannah to England.

Multiplane Intended to Carry Passengers Across Ocean Is Being Built in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A Georgia man, with ambitious vision, is planning an aeroplane trip across the Atlantic Ocean. The time for the venture is not far distant, and the busy hammering and filing that can be heard in the workshop near Savannah tells that every preparation is being made.

It is Captain Matthew A. Batson, a retired army officer, who will make this challenge to destiny. He has been working for years toward this end, and has perfected a unique type of flying machine that is popularly known as the Batson hydro-aeroplane.

So certain are Captain Batson and his friends that the daring venture will be successful that a concern has been organized, known as the Batson Aero Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $200,000, "to operate between Savannah, Ga., and Liverpool England, a line of passenger-carrying air craft," according to the words of the charter.

Captain Batson is president of the company. The line will not be established for little more than a year, but there will be trial flights a-plenty before that time, as the plans state, at Thunderbolt, Brickyard Island, on the Wilmington River, where the plant is located.

Models Fly Faithfully.

The first flight of the hydro-aeroplane will be made early. The models of the machine have flown faithfully. The entire machine is now assembled, the flying section having been fixed to the boat hull several days ago.

It is the intention of Captain Batson to navigate the craft into the Wilmington River, and to make the first trial flights in the direction of Wilmington Island. The tests of the airship will be visible from the Casino, Thunderbolt, and it is expected that thousands of people will make the trip to the resort to see the big machine as it takes to the air.

14-CENT COTTON AND BUMPER CROP FORETELL REIGN OF PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT GEORGIA

Fine Yield of Corn, Oats and Hay, With Top Prices for Staple's By-Products, Is Expected to Give the State Its Banner Year.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM IS EVIDENT IN ALL BUSINESS

Strict Economy Practiced by Farmers Makes Margin of Profit Tremendous---Bankers Are Jubilant, While Merchants Predict Great Season.

By M. A. ROSE.

Georgia, the whole Southeast, and Atlanta—because it is the commercial and financial center of the Southeast—will enter upon one of the most prosperous eras any section of the nation ever has enjoyed when the cotton crop is moving in earnest this fall—by October 1 at the latest.

In 1911, all seasons put their heads together in kindly conspiracy, and Georgia grew 2,768,627 bales of cottton, the greatest crop the historic State ever knew. It is the fashion to quote 1911 as the most wonderful year the State could expect. Unmistakable signs show 1913 will overtop 1911.

Here is the proof:

In 1911 Georgia grew, or let us say gathered—for it grew thousands of bales which never were ginned or even picked—2,768,627 bales of cotton. But the whole South grew 15,622,701 bales, excluding linters. Prices were correspondingly low. Georgia got about $124,500,000 for its 1911 crop.

Almost ready for the gins to-day are 2,250,000 bales. Indications are that this crop will bring Georgia $155,500,000, for 14-cent middling cotton is a probability, not a possibility.

Of this $155,000,000 a much greater proportion will be profit than accrued from the banner crop. Four reasons are apparent: This is a yield produced at less cost than any previous crop; drouth in the West will make the total yield short of the world's actual needs, particularly as the left-over supply is abnormally small; Georgia will spend less for corn, hay and oats than ever before, having record-breaking crops of all three food-stuffs; the shortage of corn, hay and oats will mean good prices for that most important by-product of cottton, cotton seed.

SHORT CORN CROP INEVITABLE.

Consider the last first, because it has been overlooked generally.

Drouth in Kansas and the other great agricultural States of the West and Southwest makes a short crop of corn inevitable. Corn is selling at an abnormally high price—around 77 cents at Chicago and St. Louis for the actual stuff.

Seventy-seven cent corn means high beef and pork. It's pretty expensive to fatten hogs or cattle for market on that sort of diet. High pork spells high lard. High lard means greater demand for cotton seed oil products, so much so that the cotton seed oil speculator watches the lard market as closely as he does the oil quotations. Expensive feed, too, means a shortage of cattle for slaughter and a shortage of blood and bone fertilizer, the packers' by-product, which is just where cotton seed meal fertilizers may reap a harvest. Expensive corn, again, insures greater demand for cotton seed hulls as cattle feed.

No one wants to go on record as saying that cotton seed will sell at a record price. But it is evident it will not be a drug on the market. Already cotton seed is selling for $20 a ton and better in South Georgia.

Crushers say Georgia will send 900,000 tons of seed to oil mills this fall. At $20 a ton that is $180,000,000. Add that to $155,000,000 for the lint—it makes one dizzy!

Back to the first reason for Georgia's enormous prospective profits. Everyone recognizes that economy has been the watchword for the year. The farmer has bought as little as possible at the store. He has borrowed as little money as possible. He has cut down his supply of fertilizer. The old harness, the old wagon, the same old mule, the same overalls, have served another season. Small expense and good selling price make excellent profits.

LITTLE COTTON IN WEST.

Texas and Oklahoma, experts say, will produce not more than 1,000,000 bales this year, as against 5,278,500 in 1911. Alabama and Mississippi show severe deterioration through the combined malevolence of bad weather and insects. Louisiana never has been a factor in the cotton world since the boll weevil invaded the Creole State. The Southeast will make, in proportion, the best crop of all the belt.

All this would be of little avail if the Georgia farmer had to spend all the money he got for corn, hay and oats to feed his mules. In past years he has done this, but this year he will not. Georgia this year produced the largest corn crop in its history. The hay and oat crops also were good. It would be ruinous to spend the proceeds even from 14-cent cotton for 77-cent corn. Fortunately, in 1913 Georgia will not.

PROSPERITY ERA SEEN BY GEORGIA BANKERS

Biggest Money Crop in Years Believed To Be Already Assured Farmers, While City Merchants Are Jubilant.

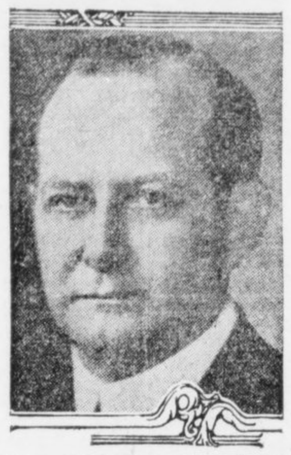
There is some difference of opinion just now as to the probable size of the crop in this State. Gentlemen otherwise calm and serene are wont to grow purplish of face and thump desks when the subject is argued.

J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture for the State, says Georgia will gin 2,000,000 bales of cotton. He believes dry weather has lopped 400,000 to 500,000 bales from the early prospect.

A. P. Coles, who has made the estimate for the Central Bank and Trust Corporation for seven years and missed it not more than 50,000 bales in the seven, puts the crop at 2,600,000 bales. A favorite estimate is 2,500,000 bales. Other figures stand in order between these two extremes.

GREAT PROFIT ASSURED.

Just to stay out of the argument, 2,250,000 bales has been selected as the basis for computations given here. It does not affect the argument. If the crop is 2,000,000 bales, Georgia still will make an enormous profit. If Georgia's crop is 2,600,00 bales—all the better.



As to 14-cent cotton—it is not an impossibility, but a probability. Thirteen cents now is being paid at Savannah for middling. That part of the crop which has been ginned is being sold freely. Although little has been said about it, there undoubtedly is a good deal of "distress cotton" on the market—cotton sold to pay debts which are pressing. With continued reports of bad weather in the West, or anything like an early frost, and consequent shortened yield, the market may jump again.

And there is little cotton left for the mills of the world to use. The visible supply at the end of the cotton year, August 30, was in round figures only 2,000,000 bales. The crop has been estimated at 12,900,000 bales. That leaves 14,900,000 bales for the world to use, and the mills of Europe, Japan, India, China and the United States want 16,000,000 bales yearly now, the best authorities agree.

It looks like a "bull" year.

Georgia has been through the test of fire. The year has been an ordeal. But harvest time finds sagacious business men in jubilant mood. Cheerfulness amounting almost to exultation is the keynote of sentiment to-day among the shrewdest. Expressions of the city's recognized leaders are unanimous in their forecast of prosperity.

Georgia Is To Be Envied, Declares Governor Slaton

GEORGIA is to be envied. The season now opening will bring to this most favored State the blessings of plenty and prosperity dispensed with lavish hand. Every circumstance is in collusion to make this a record year.

Georgia this year will make a reasonable cotton crop. The other States will have short yields. Georgia's, then, will be big in relation to the total, and every Georgian should get good prices for his cotton.

But that is not all. The best part of it is that not all the millions which come into the State for cotton will go out this year for hay, corn and oats. Georgia this year raised what seems conceded to be the largest corn crop in its history. It has hay and oats in large quantities as well, while the nation's yields of all these feed stuffs is short, because of drouth.

Georgia has every climate from the cold winters of North Georgia, which serve to perfect the apples of Habersham County, to the almost tropical mildness of the coast, where you can see rice fields. Between are corn and cotton, oats and hay, peaches and melons, sugar cane, yams and potatoes. We depend, not on ditches which may go dry, but upon the kindly rains from the Almighty, and are not disappointed. And in this wonderful State live the nation's finest people.

What more could Georgia ask?

---GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

Looks for Huge Crop, Easily 2,600,000 Bales

A. P. Coles, of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, is convinced there will be a huge crop in Georgia, and he never before has missed it far. He writes to the country banks:

"We have made careful inquiry and considerable personal inspection of the crops of Georgia. Information compiled from reliable sources leads us to believe that we are on the eve of harvesting a bumper crop in Georgia, not only of cotton, but of corn. We believe that with an open fall and a reasonably late frost the cotton crop in Georgia will easily reach 2,600,000 bales and that the corn crop is probably by far the best that has ever been produced in this State, all of which means prosperity in Georgia, at least temporarily.

"There is no reason why a sufficient amount of funds can not be obtained to move the cotton crop, provided the bankers, farmers and merchants work in harmony. Country bankers, especially those located in the cotton districts, should endeavor to educate the farmers to the habit of depositing checks received for the sale of cotton and paying their debts by check. This would go a long way toward relieving the currency stringency during the cotton-moving period.

"We confidently expect a prosperous fall and good business."

City Banker's Views Give Cheerful Analysis

"I see no reason," says Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, "why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity.

"Now, just take stock of the year just closing. Notwithstanding the fact that the cotton crop for 1912 was 1,000,000 bales short of the 1911 crop, there have been no failures of importance among banks or business houses. The failures were few and, in Georgia, of comparatively little importance. That shows the banks and mercantile houses were in good shape financially and could take care of their customers who have gone through a period of depression which was more or less world-wide.

"The fall season opens with every assurance of a cotton crop 500,000 bales larger than last year and raised at less expense than any previous crop ever grown; better and more scientifically cultivated. From every point of view this augurs a splendid trade for fall.

"If the crop experiences no backset, we can reasonably expect excellent fall collections. The farmers will be able to pay their obligations to the country merchant. He will be able to pay the wholesalers in the cities, and the wholesalers in turn will reduce their indebtedness to the city banks.

"This is sure to make money easier after the crop moves, and all lines of business are bound to feel the good effect of the splendid period of prosperity now so promising.

"I believe the further consideration by the Senate of the currency bill and the expressed desire of the Senate committee to get all the facts connected with the proposed legislation is certain to lead to the passage of a wise and conservatively planned measure.

"If this is true, and such a bill is passed, it will eliminate for all time the danger to the country which arises every fall from the fear of having insufficient currency to move the crops. This will, therefore, be of special benefit to the South and the West, and I see no reason why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity."

'Flush' Year Is Time To Learn Economy

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, is not given to hyperbole. Yet he waxes enthusiastic when drawn into conversation about the crop outlook and the business prospects for Georgia this season.

"There is a general cheerful feeling," he explains. "Some of the country merchants and the city wholesalers report the best business they have had for several seasons, and, of course, they expect to do even better when the cotton crop moves.

"Outstanding obligations—some of them, to tell the exact truth, older than they should be—will be wiped out by the present crop and settlements passing from hand to hand up the line should make money easier all around.

"But this is the time when I would preach thrift. It is something of an absurdity to preach thrift to a man who is 'broke.' But now that the Georgia farmer and the Georgia merchant have money in their pockets, or at least have money in sight, they should practice thrift. They should fortify themselves for the possible lean years. I hope there will be no lean years, but history teaches us to believe there will be.

"Remember recent history. That is all I would ask. Remember the banner crop of 1911, the extravagances which followed, and then the short crop of 1912, and what befell. If only the farmer will keep his money from burning a hole in his pocket, this season will result in permanent good for Georgia."

Chamber of Commerce Prophesies Rapid Growth

As head of a life insurance company and president of the Chamber of Commerce, Wilmer L. Moore has exceptional opportunities to study the trend of events and the condition of business. From rather an apprehensive mood in the spring, Mr. Moore has been converted into an optimist of the extreme type.

"Everything looks good to me," says Mr. Moore. "The Chamber of Commerce foresees unrivaled prosperity for Atlanta, and remarkable expansion. Plans and projects in sight, new factories and business houses inquiring for locations, and a dozen other hopeful signs give rise to our optimism.

"Business done by life insurance companies is as good a barometer of general conditions as any, I imagine. And without making any unusual effort we are doing a greater volume of business than ever before.

"Reports to us from our agents all over the South show the crop conditions in this section to be exceptionally good. Coarse grains and cotton promise great yields, and this, too, in a year when the yield of other sections will be curtailed, and prices consequently go higher. There will be business this coming year for every man of energy and enterprise, and the South will go straight ahead with its development."

Country Banker Expects Moderate Crop, Big Prices

It is interesting to know what the country banker thinks of all this. P. D. Rich, of Colquitt, was in Atlanta the past week.

The country banker, as typified by Mr. Rich, does not believe Georgia is going to make such a wonderful crop. He doesn't think it will go to 2,500,000 bales. He does think prices for cotton will be high and that Georgia, with two million, or, say, two million and a quarter bales, will get more money than it has in some years for huge crops.

The country banker finds himself able to get all the money he needs in New York and Atlanta at a rate which is not excessive.

He believes that the remarkable ginners' report of September 1 does not spell a great crop so much as it does an early movement.

Crushers Foresee Busy Season in Southeast

Cotton seed crushers are preparing for one of the greatest years in their history in Georgia. They expect a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and expect to crush, in round figures, 900,000 tons of seed, or just about the same amount as was crushed in 1911, when the banner crop was grown.

L. G. Neal, vice president of the Empire Cotton Oil Company, one of the largest corporations in the Georgia cotton seed trade, says the Empire's mills in South Georgia, numbering seven, have been operating about ten days.

"Seed now is bringing about $20 a ton," said Mr. Neal, "and is yielding about 39 gallons of good quality oil to the ton. With the exception of the fact that there is considerable moisture in the seed, there are no untoward factors to be considered this year. We look for an excellent season.

Wholesalers Are Busy Replenishing Retail Stocks

Willis E. Ragan, one of the city's prominent wholesalers and holder of extensive real estate, believes the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras it has known for years.

"We have a splendid 'house trade,'" said Mr. Ragan. "Buyers both from the city and country are thronging into the wholesale houses to replenish stocks with the advent of fall retail buying.

"It seems to me the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The cotton crop looks fine, and the price does, too. All indications are that the farmers are selling as quickly as possible and paying their debts. Everyone is feeling good and looking forward to the best business in many years. The outlook is excellent."

"Business is good. It has increased greatly this season, and shows every promise of growing even more," says Ernest L. Rhodes, wholesale milliner.

"The Atlanta houses in our line have had a remarkable volume of sales. How much of this is due to general business conditions and how much to the energy and enterprise of Atlanta jobbers, continually invading new territory, territory which always has been conceded heretofore to other cities, I can not tell without close analysis of sales records. But in all probability, the greater business is due to both factors.

"At any rate, sales are larger. That's the main thing, after all.

"If the farmers, the retailers and the merchants who sell to them will now only take advantage of their prosperity to liquidate their obligations, then we shall have ideal conditions. And I believe this will be done."

Whitehall Street Filled With Autumn Shoppers

Along Whitehall street, the center of city retail trade, the sentiment has been brighter throughout the year than in some other localities. City retail trade has held up unexpectedly well. Atlanta has not felt the depression reported from smaller centers. But the advent of fall weather, or perhaps just a foretaste of it, has put life into business in a way which has surprised even these merchants.

"We are reordering certain lines already. That, to any one acquainted with the retail business, is the most emphatic presentation I can make of business conditions in Whitehall street," said W. H. Brittain, president and manager of High's. "Our September business to date is much larger than it was at this time last year. People are eager for new things. Mail orders have started coming in rapidly. It is a regular revival of trade.

"Shoppers are numerous. It is not a question of going out after them. They are coming to the stores. People are anxious for the new things, for the better class of merchandise. Stocks have been low. Every one has bought sparingly since the first of the year, and the result now is an active movement all along the line."

"Just a little more cool weather, such as we have had a few days this past week," said J. P. Allen, "and fall business will surprise every one. People are anxious to buy. The stores are crowded. The salespeople are busy. The retailers have every cause to congratulate themselves."

Early Trade Opening Amazes Col. F. J. Paxon

F. J. Paxon is amazed at the early opening of the fall trade.

"I was surprised," says Mr. Paxon, "to return here in August and find fall ready-to-wear goods moving well. Millinery is moving particularly early. There has been a good increase in sales volume. Both the number of sales and the average amount of sales has increased.

"We expect a remarkable year, a steady growth and a rapid one through the next year.

"I am speaking not only for the business with which I am most intimately connected, but also for other enterprises in Atlanta of which I have accurate knowledge, when I say that the resumption of activity already seen, with the cotton crop not generally moving yet, is something at which to marvel.

"Georgia is to be envied, and nothing at the conference of Governors in the West attracted more attention than Governor Slaton's speech in which he extolled the virtues of his State."

THERE was a time when kissing in the good old-fashioned way
Was altogether ruled by what the lady had to say;
If she said "Yes," the couple didn't ask for better right.
But fell into a close embrace and smacked with all their might.
But times, it seems, are changing; loving couples when enclinched
Are apt to be disturbed thus wise: "Hey, stop it; you are pinched."

IN olden days, the moonlight always played a goodly part
In scenery befitting demonstrations of the heart;
Dan Cupid made a throneroom out of every cozy nook,
And lovers came there wooing and defied the world to look;
But now, when couples wander out to sit beneath the moon,
They're apt to be admonished thus: "This ain't no place to spoon."

THE moonlight hasn't changed a bit; its beams are still of gold;
And ways of kissing are the same as in the days of old;
The eager swain still has to bow before his lady's will,
And even parents' wishes are respected by them still;
But, to kiss or not to kiss, it seems, now hinges on the law
Regardless of the say-so of the lady or her ma.

West Point Schools Break Roll Record

Great Growth Is Noted and Building Is Remodeled to Meet Demands.

WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The forty-fifth annual session of the West Point public schools has opened, with the largest enrollment of pupils since their organization.

The Board of Education, anticipating an overflow of pupils, had made every preparation in the way of room and teachers.

The building is equipped with sanitary drinking fountains, electric lights, electric bells, electric clocks, telephones and all other modern conveniences.

The chair of English and history recently made vacant by the death of Miss Naomi Wells is being filled temporarily by Mrs. C. F. Pattillo, of West Point.

Mr. Walter P. Thomas, who is now serving his seventh year as superintendent, is devoting his time and efforts for the continuous growth and betterment of the schools.

FARMER FINDS LOST COIN IN HEART OF WATERMELON

GREELEY, COLO., Sept. 13.—When Daniel Kinney, of this city, cut open the first watermelon of the season from his garden to-day he found in the center a half-dime of 1862, which he last last spring while planting the melon patch.

The juices of the melon had brightened the coin until it looked as if it was newly minted.

Immortals to Hear Lecture on 'Tango'

Jean Richepin Will Address Academy on Subject, but It's a Play, Not a Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Paris has been excited for some days past by the report that Jean Richepin, the distinguished dramatist, who in his younger days forsook his family hearth for the love of a great actress, is about to defy conventions and stir up more scandal by addressing the immortals of the French Academy on the subject of "The Tango."

It now turns out that the "tango" of M. Richepin is a new comedy which he has completed for the Theatre Marigny in collaboration with Madame Richepin.

Next month, at a public meeting of the venerable academy, he will read extracts from the play.

Hair Electric Shocks Make Old Barber Quit

Current From Customers' Heads Makes Him Nervous, He Says, in Retiring.

DARBY, PA., Sept. 13.—After 41 years as a barber, Phil Sipler, of Darby, announced to-day he had quit business.

"As I grow older," he declared, "I become more and more sensitive to slight electric shocks with which human hair insulates my shears. It makes me nervous. I should hate to figure the total voltage of the shocks I received during a year."

40 CITIES WILL FORM GEORGIA CIVIC CHAMBER

Atlanta to Send 50 Delegates to Macon Meeting to Organize State Commercial Club.

Forty Georgia cities will send delegations Tuesday to the meeting at Macon which will organize the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Atlanta will send 50 representative men in a special car. Waycross and Albany also will send specials.

Indications are there will be 400 civic leaders at Macon to launch the State Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to do for Georgia what the Atlanta Chamber has done for the city.

The meeting will be called to order at the Hotel Dempsey, Macon, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by C. J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 o'clock at the hotel, with the Macon Chamber as host. An afternoon session will complete the deliberations.

There are 70 such State-wide development organizations in the United States. Texas has furnished the model for the proposed Georgia chamber.

Texas Association's Work.

The Texas Commercial and Business Men's Association, with offices at Fort Worth, has expended $150,000 in six years to spread the fame and advantages of Texas, using news articles, plates, cuts and pamphlets. Writers, lecturers and photographers are in its employ.

Officers are to be elected at the Macon meeting, including a president and about 50 vice presidents, representing all sections of Georgia.

Speakers will include Richard Edmonds, of the Manufacturers' Record; M. V. Richards, of the Southern Railway, and McLaine Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers' Association.

A dozen Georgians have been asked for five-minute talks. They are John D. Walker, of Sparta; W. B. Powell, of Columbus; William M. Moore, of Fitzgerald; E. Y. Clarke, of LaGrange; W. B. Royster, of Griffin; L. P. Hillyer, W. T. Anderson and E. H. Hyman, of Macon; H. G. Hastings, of Decatur; J. G. Weatherly, of Brunswick; Wilmer Moore, of Atlanta; E. B. Adams, of Albany, and R. W. Parker and C. G. Bradley, of Madison.

Many Cities to Take Part.

The following cities will send representatives:

Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Baxley, Brunswick, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Clarkston, Crawfordville, College Park, Columbus, Dublin, Douglas, Dawsonville, Eatonton, Fitzgerald, Griffin, Kirkwood, LaGrange, Lithonia, McDonough, Macon, Madison, Moultrie, Newnan, Ocilla, Springfield, Swainsboro, Toccoa, Union City, Vienna, Waycross, Hawkinsville, Statesboro and Mount Pleasant.

One hundred members of the live Macon Chamber of Commerce have been named on a special committee to greet and entertain the delegates.

Several Seek Presidency.

A number of the leaders in the industrial development of Georgia have been mentioned for the presidency of the State Chamber, but so far no one seems sure of the position.

The executive committee is authorized to appoint a vice president for every county in the State and after careful consideration about 50 vice presidents have been selected. Other selections will be made during the next few days.

The executive committee includes C. J. Haden, Atlanta, chairman; P. M. Atkinson, Madison; R. D. Cole, Newnan; J. S. Davis, Albany; G. W. Deen, Waycross; J. A. McCord, Atlanta; W. H. Shippen, Ellijay; C. A. Wickersham, College Park.

DeKalb Count To Be Well Represented.

DeKalb County, headed by Kirkwood and Decatur, will send an enthusiastic delegation to the State Chamber of Commerce meeting at Macon Tuesday, with the intention of playing an important part in the proceedings. The Kirkwood Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting to arouse zeal in behalf of the proposal, and the result was a list of formal pledges of members who will attend.

They include R. F. Gilliem, John I. Armstrong, Dr. E. L. Daniel, William E. Saunders, Dr. C. H. House, J. T. Viley, E. M. Willingham, John Lowe Smith, O. O. Ray, H. C. Burr, J. A. Norman, R. C. Ozmer, J. P. Ellis, Joe Tillinghast and J. A. Earl.

Decatur will send a party in automobiles. Lithonia and Clarkston will send delegates, and, altogether, there probably will be 75 representatives from DeKalb at Macon.

GHOSTLY LIGHT PUTS TERROR IN MOUNTAINEERS

Government Asked to Send Science Expert to Investigate Flaming Uncanny Orb.

ASHEVILLE, Sept. 13.—Ghostly in appearance, a strange light, seen almost nightly, is gaining materially in brilliancy and has so greatly excited the people of Burke County, in the mountains of Western North Carolina, that an official request has been made at Washington for an investigation by an expert.

R. T. Claywell first saw the strange light about a month ago when he and a party of friends were spending the night at Cold Water.

"There is something uncanny about that light. The folks up in that neighborhood can not fathom it, and we want a Government scientist sent to solve the mysterious glow," said Mr. Claywell.

Arose From Mountain.

"The night I first saw the strange light I was out in the open on Rattlesnake Knob. It was exactly 10:05 o'clock. I remember that well. What first attracted our attention were two hazy lights across the valley on Brown Mountain.

"We watched it with wonder and awe. In a few minutes we saw a brighter light appear at the foot of Brown Mountain, where Upper Creek cuts it at Joy. The light appeared to be swinging, pendulum-like, and then went upward a distance of about 200 feet.

"When it first appeared the light seemed to be round and yellow. It gained steadily in brightness, becoming red as it went upward. When it reached its greatest height it appeared to be like a ball of fire.

Did Not Shed a Ray.

"But the strange thing about it was that the freak of nature did not cast off one ray of light. The space around it was as dark as ever. All this added to its ghostly appearance.

"It was across the valley from us at a distance of about twelve miles. It had rained that day and there were a few clouds still hanging about. When the strange light reached a height of what seemed from our distance to be about 1,200 feet it went behind one of these clouds ,and we did not see it any more that night.

"It was a strange experience and many of those in our party came near fainting."

Aeroplane Defeats Dirigible in Battle

British Military Authorities Inquire Into Remarkable Air Maneuvers in France.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Inquiries are being made by British military aeroplane agents concerning certain remarkable aerial experiments said to have been made this week at Bordeaux. A corporal in an aeroplane, it is stated, won an altitude race against a dirigible engaged in the French military maneuvers. From its superior height the aeroplane dropped sham projectiles on the airship which in actual warfare would certainly have destroyed the craft at which they were aimed.

NEXT WEEK : THE CONFESSION

SULZER AND TAMMANY ARRAYED FOR BATTLE

GOVERNORS WHO HAVE BEEN IMPEACHED AND ACCUSED EXECUTIVE OF EMPIRE STATE WHO NOW FACES CHARGES BROUGHT BY TAMMANY OF HIGH CRIME AND MISDEMEANORS

STAGE IS SET FOR TRIAL OF GOVERNOR

Accused N. Y. Executive Appears Confident of Exoneration on Eve of Facing High Tribunal.

ALBANY, Sept. 13.—For the first time in the history of New York State a chief executive will go to trial for "high crimes and misdemeanors" when Governor William Sulzer faces, on Thursday next, a majority of the Senate and a majority of the Court of Appeals sitting as a high court of impeachme. .

Special counsel for the State of New York to prosecute the impeachment will summon Sulzer to the bar. Aaron J. Levy, majority leader of the Assembly and chairman of the Assembly Board of Managers, will have direct charge of the prosecution, for it was the Assembly that impeached Sulzer, as prescribed by the Constitution. Sulzer, who still maintains his right to the Governorship, will be defended by a brilliant array of counsel.

With Sulzer on trial the battle between New York's "People's Governor," and Tammany Hall, the political organization that made him and is now setting out to break him, will near its end. It is a political quarrel that will go down in history.

It will be a dramatic moment when Sulzer steps before the court of impeachment, with Chief Justice Cullen, of the Court of Appeals, presiding. There have been many rumors of what Sulzer's defense will be, but no definite statement of what course it will take could be obtained from any of his counsel to-day.

Sulzer Appears Confident.

On the eve of his trial Sulzer appears confident. So, for that matter, do his enemies. They say that the court of impeachment will not be affected in any way by the feeling of popular sympathy for Sulzer. It will be a cold, calm proposition of whether Sulzer was or was not guilty of malfeasance in office—a question of whether, as charged by the Assembly, he did or did not speculate in Wall street with campaign funds and of whether he did or did not fail to give a true and correct list of his campaign contributions in his sworn statement of campaign receipts and expenditures.

It is possible that a dramatic, perhaps pathetic, touch will be given the proceedings by the introduction of the name of Mrs. Sulzer. It is said to be likely that Mrs. Sulzer will stand by the statement credited to her in which she is alleged to have said that it was she who speculated in Wall street with campaign funds, without the Governor's knowledge. If this is to be the Sulzer line of defense, Mrs. Sulzer will be forced to make very humiliating admissions upon the witness stand, an ordeal that would be very trying to her and a proceeding which even Sulzer's worst enemies would prefer to avoid.

Before the Court of Impeachment can commence to hear the charges drawn by the Assembly, there must be at least four of the judges of the Court of Appeals present and at least 16 members of the Senate.

Justices Who Try Case.

Edgar M. Cullen is Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals. Associated with him are Justices John Clinton Gray, William E. Werner, Willis Bartlett, Frederick Collins, William H. Cuddeback and John W. Hogan. There are three other associate justices, not elected, as were all of the foregoing, but designated by Governors at different times because of the press of litigation before the court. Emory A. Chase was designated an associate justice in 1906. Frank H. Hiscock is also an associate justice, designated by Governor Sulzer. Justice Nathan Miller was designated by Sulzer himself in January last.

There is much difference of opinion as to whether these designated justices will be legally entitled to sit as a part of the court. Some attorneys assert that they could not take part, whereas others assert that while they have every legal right to do so, it is probable that the justice appointed by Sulzer will decline to take part in the proceeding.

It is, of course, ridiculous to suppose that the political beliefs of the members of the Court of Appeals would have anything to do with the outcome of the trial, but it is interesting, nevertheless, to note that, not counting the designated justices, only one judge of the august tribunal is a Republican. If the designated justices are considered, it brings the Republican members of the Court of Appeals up to four, as against six Democrats.

Frederick Harris, of Binghamton, court crier, will really get the court under way whe nhis cry of "Hear ye," "Hear ye," is heard. The Clerk of the Court of Appeals will not act as clerk of the court of impeachment. Patrick E. McCabe, clerk of the Senate, will act in the capacity of clerk to the court.

Sulzer to File Answer.

Probably the first formal move before the court will be the filing of an answer by attorneys for Sulzer. Besides being a general denial of all of the charges, this answer will probably conclude with the prayer that the Court of Impeachment dismiss the charges on the ground that the impeachment was found when the Assembly was in extraordinary session. Governor Sulzer maintains that being in such extraordinary session, called by him for the purpose of considering certain legislation, the Assembly could not legally take up matters other than those for which the Chief Executive summoned it into session.

Many technicalitiese will have to be disposed of before the court can get down to actual business. There will be much argument and oratorical fireworks on the plea of the Sulzer defense for the dismissal of the impeachment. Scores of other technicalities are certain to arise and it may be some time before special counsel can open the case for the Assembly and the State of New York.

It has not yet been decided whether the Justices of the Court of Appeals will wear their black silk robes. Also, nothing definite has ben announced regarding the methods and rules of procedure. There are no precedents in New York State for the trial of a Governor, and the only guide the court will have will be the Constitution of the State and precedents established in other States and the records of Federal impeachments. Therefore, one of the first duties of the Court will be the promulgation of a set of rules to guide the conduct of the attorneys.

Court Will Adjourn.

It has been feared that the session of the Court of Appeals scheduled for September 29 would interfere with the trial, which probably will last for a considerable time. It is said now, whoever, that if the Sulzer trial is still in progress on September 29, that the Court of Appeals will go into session for a few minutes, or just long enough to adjourn to a later date. Richard Barber, Clerk of the Court of Appeals, is going ahead with his work of making up an order catendar of cases for the Court on September 29.

Each Senator is entitled to compensation of $10 a day during his service on the Court of Impeachment. Senators get $15 a day as Legislators, which would bring their incomes up to $25 a day during the trial had not they already drawn their salaries.

This scale of compensation is provided by the Constitution of the State. The Code of Criminal Procedure, however, says that Senators are entitled to receive the same compensation as Asociate Justices of the Court of Appeals while sitting in a court of impeachment, which is $10,000 a year with expenses of $3,700. It is contended by some that the Legislature had no authority to enact a law which clashed with the Constitution, and probably the Senators will look at it in the same way and be satisfied with their $10 a day.

The Assembly board of managers, which will have charge of the Assembly's end of the case, is composed of Aaron J. Levy, of New York, chairman; Patrick J. McMahon, Thirty-fourth District; Abraham Greenberg, Twenty-sixth District; William J. Cillen, Second District; Theodore H. Ward, Fifteenth District; J. V. Fitzgerald, Seventh District; Tracy D. Madden, First District; Thomas K. Smith, Third District, and Herman F. Schnirel, of Ontario County. Smith and Schnirel are Republicans.

CASKET AND RING ARE STOLEN FROM A GRAVE

5,000 PHEASANTS ON STATE FARM

Hatched by Hens, They Will Be Distributed to Oregon's Game Preserves.

PHILOMATH, OREG., Sept. 13.—Five thousand pheasants have been raised this season on the Oregon Pheasant Farm of Benton County. Manager Gene Simpson, of the farm, states that a great number of these will soon be distributed over the State.

Large numbers were ready for sending out some time ago, but have been awaiting orders from the State Game Warden. The birds will go to all sections of the State, but the greater number to those parts where the pheasant is little known. None will be given their liberty except on designated preserves so their protection will be guaranteed.

In addition to the Chinese pheasants, a number of rarer birds, such as the Silver and Reeves pheasants and the Bob White quail, have been raised this year on the farm.

About 800 pheasant hens have been laying on the farm all the spring and summer. One hen lays from 60 to 80 eggs in a single season when confined in a pen. But in captivity the hens will not nest and will not hatch, so the eggs are gathered and hatched under common hens.

The birds are also raised with the hens, in ordinary coops, just as chickens are raised, with the exception of feeding, for a little pheasant must have "live food"—bugs, worms and insects. This is only for the first few weeks. After that the young pheasants can eat grain, cracked corn, wheat and ground oats. Houses are not needed for the birds, old or young.

Meets Carnegie and Morgan; Loses $100

Akron, Ohio, Man Tells of Experience With 'Millionaires' In Pittsburg Hotel.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—Peter Alcox, of Akron, Ohio, told the city detectives to-day how he met Andrew Carnegie and J. Pierpont Morgan in a Liberty avenue hotel. He lost $100 and his gold watch.

A stranger in Akron told of having rich relatives in Pittsburg who had bought him a gold mine in California. But this man didn't have enough money to get to Pittsburg and he persuaded Alcox to pay his way.

"We went to a hotel in Liberty avenue," said Alcox, "and there we met a big fellow whom my friends introduced as Andrew Carnegie.

"Then Mr. Morgan came in and I was introduced. He was a very nice man and bought several drinks."

Then, according to Alcox, the friend took him to his hotel room. Later in the night Alcox awakened and his roll and gold watch were gone and he hasn't seen his friend since.

POSED AS SINGLE; SUED FOR DIVORCE

Husband Says School Principal Tried to Educate Too Many Relatives at His Expense.

KANSAS CITY, KANS., Sept. 13.—James E. Ellis has filed a petition for divorce in the Wyandotte County District Court, in which he charges that his wife, Emma A. Ellis, principal of public schools of Parsons, Kans., has, since their marriage in Chicago in 1901, posed as a single woman under the name of Emma A. Sackett.

They lived in Parsons until June 16 of this year, and during the time they were together, he says, they moved in the best society. Everywhere, he alleges, his wife was known as Miss Sackett and she introduced him as her cousin.

He charges that she threatened him with "dire calamity" if he told their secret. After he married her, he says, he learned she had been married before, her first husband's name being Sackett. He is dead, Ellis says.

Educates Relatives.

His wife, he charges, never gave him the comforts of home, but insisted upon turning the house into a home for poor children of Parsons. He alleges that she spent her salary of $100 a month and part of his salary in keeping children and sending them to school.

Ellis says his wife is at present in Michigan on her vacation.

Mrs. Ellis sent a niece to the University of Michigan four years and to a conservatory in Boston two years. He says she sent a son by a former husband to Harvard at his expense and another to Yale.

Gave Stranger Tuition.

That item to educate is followed by the admission of a youth to free board at their home while he was being schooled. When the son of a farmer was boarded and tutored free three months to get him interested in getting an education, although the youth's parents were able to pay.

Then there was another youth who was boarded free three years to help him get an education. And there were two grandnieces sent to the University of Kansas as a part of Mrs. Ellis' educational campaign.

And in the fall of 1911 Mrs. Ellis demanded and received $100 from Ellis, the petition says, to send a strange young man to the University of Michigan to study law.

NEW YORK, ept. 13.—In a suit for $10,000 damages filed in the Supreme Court, reciting that he suffered great mental and physical anguish, Jerome Smith alleges he found a mouse in a plate of beef stew served him at a Childs' restaurant, July 9.

Wife Beater Cured by Whipping Post Scare

Judge Sabath Frightens Prisoner Into Promise To Be Good in the Future.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The threat of a whipping post for wife beaters by Municipal Judge Sabath in the Hyde Park Court yesterday was enough to make John Firber, No. 1161 South Park avenue, plead for mercy.

"I think I will let the policeman who arrested you take you downstairs to the whipping post," said Judge Sabath to him. "You know we have one for wife beaters now."

"Fine me, Judge," pleaded Firber with his arms extended, "but don't do that."

After he had made a promise never to hit his wife against the court discharged him.

MAYORS URGE U. S. CONTROL OF MISSISSIPPI

Every Section Joins South for Federal Protection Against River's Spring Floods.

LEVEE PLAN RECEIVES FAVOR

Bill Is Now Pending in Congress to Relieve Yearly Suffering in Southern Valley.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—The Mayors of cities in more than half of the States of the Union have come out for Government aid in the protection of the Mississippi Valley States from floods. This sweeping indorsement of the Ransdell-Humphreys bill, which provides $60,000,000 for levees and comes up at the December session of Congress, is one of the interesting exhibits of the work the Mississippi River Levee Association is doing in the interest of Government levees for the lower Mississippi River.

Out of the replies already received not one chief executive has expressed the slightest disapproval of the proposition. The Mayors of cities in the far Western States, in New England, in the Middle West, in the great northern section and from every Southern State have come out unanimously for the project. Each letter shows an unusual familiarity with the subject. The people of California, Massachusetts and Montana seem to have been studying the flood proposition with as much interest as the residents of the States immediately affected by floods.

Levee Plan Favored.

One of the most interesting letters is one from the chief executive of Gallipolis, Ohio, a city which almost was sacrificed to the Ohio floods of 1913. Mayor Cadot, of that city, says in part:

"While our own valley suffers greatly from floods, I believe the greater damage is done in the Mississippi Valley, and I earnestly hope you will succeed in securing the required appropriation from the Government, and be able to begin active operations at the earliest possible moment.

"In my opinion, the levee plan is the best remedy for overflow that has yet been proposed."

Mayor Joseph M. Halloran, of New Britain, Conn., writes in part as follows:

"It seems to me that the building and maintaining of levees is a matter for the Federal Government to act upon immediately."

Mayor C. O. Meigs, of Twin Falls, Idaho, writes:

"I believe, and always have believed, that this should be a national task rather than an expense to be borne by the citizens living immediately adjacent to the river, and as the Mississippi drains a huge portion of the United States, I take pleasure in stating that I heartily concur with the views of the Levee Association in this matter."

The Mayor of South Milwaukee, Wis., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of the project and shall help you whenever I can."

The Mayor of Ogden City, Utah, says among other things:

"In my judgment, it is clearly the duty of the Federal Government to make ample provision to carry the work of controlling the floods to completion as rapidly as possible."

Mayor R. L. Metcalf, of Pasadena, Cal., writes as follows:

"In reply to your request of the 18th instant, will say, in my opinion, nothing will solve the flood problem of the Mississippi Valley until Congress makes some move to that end, and I feel sure that it is the only method to follow."

The Mayor of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes in part:

"I am heartily in favor of your work and believe that it is fair and just that the National Government should take up the burden and give you whatever aid is needed."

The Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I heartily concur in the views expressed in your communication regarding the spring floods of the lower Mississippi. I believe the Government should lend every aid possible to protect the people of this vast territory and that steps in this direction should be taken at the earliest possible moment."

The Mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., writes:

"I am in receipt of your favor of the 18th, and will state that I am heartily in favor of the Congress of the United States appropriating a sufficient amount to prevent the flooding of the lower Mississippi Valley."

Nation Realizes Necessity.

The Mayor of Walla Walla, Wash., A. J. Gillis, writes:

"The control of the flood waters of the Mississippi is a problem of such magnitude that it can be properly handled only by the national authorities, and it is of such vital importance to all of our people that the indifference of Congress is hard to understand. Remote as we are from these constantly recurring floods, we feel that our people are deeply interested in their prevention and that any assistance that can be given your work should be freely given. Please advise me of what way I can be of assistance and I will be glad to do what I can."

The Mayor of Lynn, Mass., George Newhall, writes:

"I believe the flood conditions in the lower Mississippi River should receive the consideration of the National Government and that they should assist the different States in giving safe and thorough protection to the lower Mississippi Valley from floods."

These are only a few of the numerous letters that have been received. They illustrate, however, the sentiment toward the levee proposition and the widespread interest in the matter of floods.

Polaire Adds to Her Ugliness With Nose Ring

Famous French Actress to Wear It in Atlanta

Mademoiselle Polaire, famous French actress, wearing her nose ring. She will appear with this ornament when she plays in Atlanta this winter.

Fascinating Artist Has No Hope That Ornament Will Be Generally Accepted Fad.

Mademoiselle Polaire, being by common consent the ugliest theatrical star alive and the most fascinating withal, has an absolute right to wear what she pleases. It is only when a woman has an open pride in her lack of pulchritude that she has achieved a sort of free-will condition as regards clothes and ornaments.

And because she is an independent in matters of raiment the fascinating Polaire is going to show Atlanta something that will open the eyes of every man and woman within its limits—she is coming to Atlanta, you know, with Gertrude Hoffman and Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, the dancers.

Her particular innovation is a nose ring—a daring, unprecedented nose ring, suggestive of nothing so much as a Fiji Islander. But then the turkey trot is hardly suggestive of the art of terpsichore, so it is not an unbelievable thing that Mademoiselle Polaire's nose ring will become—but no, American girls mean no harm by any of their fads, and even their critics vow that they have common sense enough and to spare.

There will be no nose ring fad, however much the fascinating Polaire flaunts her badge of eccentricity before their faces.

Polaire, it is announced, never dreams that her own freak fashion will become the vogue. Perhaps that is why she adopted it. At least, she will have something to herself.

But Atlanta will have an opportunity of judging, and perhaps if it likes can place an order for early winter delivery.

Fortune Comes When Aged Struggler Is Vainly Trying to Enter Charitable Institution.

ALLENTOWN, PA., Sept. 13.—Working daily for many years at the bench in his cobbler shop and able to earn only a scant living, Carl W. Gossner, a shoemaker, was overjoyed when he received a letter informing him that he had fallen heir to half the $20,000 estate of his brother, Wilhelm, who died recently in Germany.

Gossner immediately left for Philadelphia to consult the German Consul and expects the money in a few weeks. His sister, who lives in Switzerland, shares in the estate.

MINISTER LEADS CHURCH AT "EXCAVATION PARTY"

BLOOMINGTON, IND., Sept. 13.—An "excavation" party was a new social stunt given by the Fairview Methodist Church last night to further the building of a new church. While the women of the church gave a vaudeville show and served sandwiches, the men, led by the minister, the Rev. C. M. Croft, with wheelbarrows, spades and other implements, excavated under the church and made room for a Sunday school basement. Three hours' work completed the basement.

DIXIE INVENTOR PLANS AIRSHIP LINE TO EUROPE

Captain Batson of Savannah Will Organize Company to Promote Passenger Multiplane.

sufficient fuel for a two days' run, the craft will not have to descend to replenish its supply on the long flight from Savannah to New York, which will be made directly after the first trial flight. Then, circumstances being favorable, the trip across the Atlantic will be attempted.

"It is announced that the perfected Batson hydro-aeroplane will have a speed of 100 miles an hour, with a probability of making better time even than that under favorable conditions. Its eleven-foot propellers make 1,000 revolutions a minute. The original machine, including the expense of putting up the aerodrome, will cost about $50,000. Captain Batson declares, however, that other machines of the same type will cost only $20,000.

Seeks Commercial Navigation.

Altogether, the intent of the man in the Savannah shop is to render practical the commercial navigation of the air. He is a mechanical engineer, acquiring thus his scientific knack. He is a daring soldier, the organizer of the effective Filipino Scouts, and comes thus honestly by his fearlessness. For years he has been at work in perfecting the machine with which the bold experiments will be made, and in which he hopes to conquer the air.

Plants for the construction of the machines will be scattered over the United States, according to the arrangements made by the company. The completed machines, however, will not be offered for indiscriminate sale, but will be used for passenger traffic under the auspices of the company.

The Batson triple-motored aero yacht, as the machine is technically known, will carry about three tons dead weight load. Instead of being comprised of a single plane or a pair, the buoying area is distributed over a large number of wings of moderate size. These are attached to the machine chamber in a way so as to yield to the extra stresses caused when the machine encounters the great "boulders" in the air, just as the springs of an automobile yield when an uneven road is entered.

Single Pilot Governs.

The peculiar construction of the wing is such that the air currents are guided under the wings inwardly toward the body of the machine, where they are banked under the base portion, thus bringing the greatest stress on the part where the weight is carried. Such is the arrangement that the essential "angle of incidence" of all the wings can be governed by a single pilot, even to such an extent that should all the engines be stopped the wings will be automatically set at a safe gliding angle, the course of which is easily controlled.

Captain Batson takes the success of his invention as a matter of course.

"It is far more wonderful," he said, "that men should literally take their lives in their hands and go from Paris to London through the air, over sea and land in their unavoidably unsteady craft than that the Batson aero yacht should, with so much greater carrying capacity and complete automatic stability, be able to go longer distances in perfect safety. A great loss of life appears to be inevitable with aeroplanes of the dangerous and unstable type now in general use, and though the recent Titanic disaster shows that it is impossible to foresee every contingency, yet it is a safe and comforting prediction that because of its automatic stability no such accidents as those which hitherto have happened can possibly occur to a Batson multiplane."

ITALIAN TOWN GIVES THANKS TO MR. HEARST

Resolutions of Gratitude Passed for His Aid After Eruption of Vesuvius in 1906.

Special Cable to The American.

NAPLES, Sept. 13.—A memorial to the 105 mothers and children crushed to death during the eruption of 1906 under the roof of the small chapel in San Giuseppe Vesuviano, where they sought refuge against the overpowering fall of ashes and rocks, was unveiled to-day in the presence of the civil and military authorities of Naples, the Mayor of each town in the Vesuvian district and a large crowd of representative citizens.

A feature of the ceremony was a resolution of the Town Council of San Giuseppe Vesuviano thanking Mr. Hearst and his newspapers for the substantial help sent to the afflicted district at the time of the eruption.

The monument, consisting of a base nine feet high and a twelve-foot marble column surmounted by a Pompeiah capital, the work of the sculptor Arizo, of Naples, marks the site where on the night of April 8, 1906, the stricken mothers repaired with their infants to pray for deliverance from the impending catastrophe.

Resolution of Thanks.

While they prayed the roof of the flimsy structure collapsed under the accumulated deposit of ashes and all were crushed to death.

The Hearst newspapers collected for the sufferers more than $35,000, which was handed to the Italian Red Cross Society. A small balance of $206 afterward was devoted to the erection of the memorial which the local population had decided to build.

During the ceremony Lawyer Silvio Cola, chairman of the memorial committee, before unveiling the monument, read resolutions thanking Mr. Hearst for his generous help. The resolutions, engrossed upon parchment, were then handed to Judge Palmieri, who was present as Mr. Hearst's representative.

Banquet to Judge Palmieri.

Later a banquet was given in honor of Judge Palmieri. In an address the Baron Quarante di San Severine cited many actions of Mr. Hearst which, he pointed out, entitled him to the gratitude of Italians, both in Italy and in America. He mentioned also the stand taken by all the Hearst newspapers during the Italo-Turkish war, and the many fights made by those publications against laws restricting immigration.

Every reference to Mr. Hearst was loudly cheered.

Speaking as the representative of Mr. Hearst, Judge Palmieri thanked the committee and the municipality for the noble way in which they expressed their gratitude to one of Italy's most sincere friends in America. Mr. Hearst's name, which is engraved in large letters at the base of the column, was joined to those of the Queen and King of Italy in a toast which all drank standing.

One Drink Costs Him $1,000 and His Wife

"Water Wagon Contract" Burden Too Much for Man Who Never Got Drunk.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The existence of a "water wagon contract" for $1,000 a year between George Herrmann, president of the insurance firm of George Herrmann Company, and his son, George Herrmann, Jr., also an official of the company, was revealed recently by the junior Mrs. Herrmann, who filed suit for divorce on the grounds of cruelty.

"George broke his contract this year in March," said Mrs. Herrmann, who is twenty. "He started drinking and, of course, it cost him the $1,000. I don't believe he has ever been drunk in his life, at least I never have seen him drunk. He was honorable about it, and told his father about the drink that cost him $1,000.

"I think my husband is a fine man. I admire him, but not as a husband."

Boy Six Years Old Arrested 20 Times

Career of Criminal Prodigy Ended by His Commitment to Industrial School.

RACINE, WIS., Sept. 13.—Richard Tuclovsky, six years old, was to-day committed to the industrial school for boys, there to remain until the age of 21.

Richard, despite his tender years, has caused the police more trouble than any ten grown-ups, his crimes ranging from plain burglary to highway robbery, in which he used an unloaded revolver. Twenty times has Richard's name been entered on the police blotter for crimes that would have placed older boys behind prison bars.

Threatening other children with a knife induced summary action against the youngest subject in the State's annals of criminology.

OHIO TO PAY CONVICTS WITH DEPENDENT FAMILIES

The amount of compensation to prisoners will range at 1 to 5 cents per hour, and the gradings will be based upon character, industrial efficiency and good conduct.

PARENTS HELD TO ANSWER FOR IMMORAL GIRLS

Wisconsin Vice Commission Declares Lack of Home Care Responsible for Waywardness.

MADISON, WIS., Sept. 13.—Blame for immorality among young girls of Wisconsin was placed principally on their parents by Dr. C. A. Harper, secretary of the State Board of Health, in testifying before the special Legislative Vice Committee.

"Lack of surveillance by chaperons, social ambitions of parents, late hours, suggestive dances, immodest dresses, automobile rides, telephones, stimulating food and drink, and organizations of boys to ostracize girls from society who refuse to submit to their will are some of the principal causes of the social evil among the better classes of citizens of Wisconsin, said Dr. Harper.

Remedies suggested by him were stricter watch by parents, less suggestive clothes, wholesome food, early retiring hours, and elimination of the automobile and telephone from the use of the young women.

"It is generally recognized," said Dr. Harper, "that there is a general wave of immorality passing over the country. It is due partly to our standards of living and a deadening of the moral sensibilities. We are living too high, going too fast, and disregarding the balances which make for moderation and moral uplift."

"What remedy can you suggest for the suppression of immorality?" asked Chairman Howard Teasdale.

"I have found that communities having segregated vice districts under strict regulation have the highest degree of morality," replied Dr. Harper.

"Doesn't a recognized vice district require the abasement of a certain per cent of women every year?" asked Senator Victor Linley, of Superior.

"That is true," Dr. Harper replied, "but at least 1 per cent of the girls will go wrong anyhow, it seems."

FEEL HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS? CLEAN YOUR LIVER! A DIME A BOX

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue, it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken to-night straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

FILIPINOS FAR FROM READY FOR SELF-RULE; PROOF IS ON THE WAY

Bishop Fallows Declares That Dean Worcester, Student of Islands, Returning From Archipelago, Will Show Fallacy of Native Government.

In view of the departure of Burton Harrison, the new Wilson Governor General of the Philippines, who sailed Wednesday from San Francisco for Manila, and the declared intention of the Democratic Congress to give to the Filipinos absolute independence eight years hence, the following article, by Bishop Fallows, is illuminating.

Bishop Fallows traveled 10,000 miles among the islands to satisfy himself of conditions there and he concludes that independence for the Filipinos now or within a few years would be a calamity. His article follows:

By SAMUEL FALLOWS.

(Bishop of Chicago and Noted Educational Authority.)

There shortly comes from the Philippines a man who has a valuable and timely message for the American people. He is Dean C. Worcester, recently Secretary of the Interior, the American who has had the longest and most intimate contact with Philippine affairs.

Many years before our war with Spain, when to the popular American mind Manila and the Philippines were indefinite and hazy points on the map, Mr. Worcester made two extended tours of the archipelago. As a member of scientific expeditions, gathering data and specimens, he twice traveled the length of the group given into our keeping, and when President McKinley needed the counsel and assistance of men of knowledge, Dean Worcester was one of the first to whom he turned.

President McKinley appointed him a member of the Schurmann Commission, and when William Howard Taft was chosen to found civil government in the Philippines he continued him as member of the commission, which remains to this day as the senior governing body in the islands.

Mr. Worcester was made Secretary of the Interior in the Government instituted by McKinley and approved by Congress, and continuously retained the post until a week ago Monday, when he resigned to make way for a man chosen by the Wilson Administration.

In this capacity he organized and directed the Bureaus of Health, Land, Forestry and Science, besides becoming the guardian of the million non-Christian tribesmen numbered among our wards in the Orient. Taft, Wright, Ide, Smith, Moses and other veteran administrators of the Philippine Government finished their labors and passed to other fields, but Worcester remained fourteen years.

Notable Service to Nation.

Dean Worcester's service to the nation has been a notable one in many respects, but his guardianship of the wild men, an extraordinary tale of service and adventure, must make the largest appeal to us at home. The Spanish Government and the Christian peoples of the Philippines appear to have given themselves little concern as to their wild neighbors. A few hardy and devoted missionaries ventured among them, but contact seems to have been largely accidental and occasional.

The largest groups of non-civilized peoples inhabit the province of North Luzon, living in wildly picturesque and formerly inaccessible mountains. These superb but primitive peoples have engaged in inter-tribal warfare throughout their history and this terrible condition was accentuated by the repulsive practice of taking and preserving as house ornaments the heads of their enemies. From this custom they derived the name of headhunters. Their feuds were both tribal and personal, and all the people were touched by the malign hand of vengeance and fear.

Rapacity had marked the attitude of the Christian Filipino in his dealings with these unhappy children of the mountains, and when Worcester and his men went among them they, too, were received as enemies. Their first greetings were challenges to battles, and it was only through superb courage that they won a hearing in the first place, while endless patience and infinite tact were necessary to the establishment of the confidence and friendship which has resulted in the acceptance by the wild people of civilized law.

Worcester not only won and retained the friendship of the wild people, but brought peace to them and turned their thoughts and hands to the more useful things of life. Warring tribes were brought together in friendly relationship and the rivalry of athletics took the place of forays. Schools were started, industry and husbandry encouraged and the once inaccessible mountains were bisected and crosscut with roads and trails, largely constructed by the wild men themselves. Occasionally a head is taken, but the custom may be said to have almost disappeared.

Under the old order the men were so busy fighting that farming was neglected and frequently large numbers of people were in want. The termination of warfare, individual and collective, has sent thousands of men back to the fields and the food supply is now always ample to meet all the needs of the people and leave a considerable annual surplus.

Gained Their Friendship.

The wild tribe relationship in the Philippines offered at the beginning a veritable hornets' nest of trouble for the United States Government, the possibilities of which are strikingly illustrated by the experience of the Japanese in Formosa and the Dutch in Java, where costly and endless war has been waged against the hillmen. Had the die been cast for war rather than peace with the hillmen of the Philippines, it would have been a formidable and endless task to conquer and control them. The tribes are numerous and their men are big, upstanding fellows, born of forebears who never knew peace. Fear is not a quality of their warriors, and they would have been a troublesome enemy.

In gaining their friendship Worcester and his men rendered large service to their country and the cause of civilization and set in motion a work that is unique in the whole relationship between civilization and savagery. These peoples have great possibilities of development and there falls to the successors of Dean Worcester in the Philippines an important duty to carry forward the task upon which he made such a splendid beginning.

The most important relationship that Dean Worcester has had toward the rest of the Filipino people has been on the side of sanitation and science.

It was necessary to wage the battle from many sides. The first requisite was an up-to-date scientific institution that would furnish the best fighting material, and there was created, under Worcester's direction, a great laboratory that has won more acclaim in Europe than it has in the United States.

Another necessity was a modern school of medicine and surgery that would train Filipinos to minister to the needs of their own people, and such an institution was founded. Hospitals were another dire necessity, and these were created. Clinics were another need, and these were provided. Nurses were needed everywhere, and training schools for young Filipino women were started.

Thousands of lepers were scattered throughout the archipelago, and these were slowly gathered in a great colony founded at Culion Island. Slowly through the years there was a steady gain against disease and the opposition of the people; only a decade was necessary finally to turn the tide. Hospitals and clinics which once aroused the fear of the people and were deserted are now unable to meet their daily demands. Manila General Hospital is now the largest and busiest institution in the capital and the Manila Free Clinic has grown to be the third largest in the world.

Dean Will Tell of Filipinos.

Freed from long official service and the restraints which it consciously and unconsciously imposes, Dean Worcester is coming home to talk to the country about the Philippines. He says that he intends to travel from coast to coast telling what he knows about the islands and their peoples, and his message is going to be worth hearing. He knows more about his subject than any other living man.

Mr. Worcester has prepared a series of nine addresses, and their subjects are as follows: "Among the Wild Tribes of the Philippines," "The Headhunters of Northern Luzon," "What the United States Has Done for the Wild Tribes of the Philippine Islands," "Forest Resources of the Philippine Islands," "Commercial Possibilities of the Philippine Islands," "Health Work in the Philippine Islands," "Educating the Filipinos," "Modern Manila," and "Is Philippine Independence a Present Possibility?"

To supplement and illuminate his lectures Mr. Worcester has made an extraordinary collection of Philippine motion pictures. These cover in striking manner the wild tribes, as well as many other features of island life.

Sept. 13—Woodstock, Va., $250.
Total, $5,025.

WOODSTOCK, VA., Sept. 13.—William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, addressed a large gathering here tonight and pocketed $250 and his specified share of the gate receipts. He came from Charleston, W. Va., and will go on to Staunton, President Wilson's birthplace, on Tuesday.

The performance, or rather the lecture, compared favorably with that in Media, Pa., a few days ago and at Glenolden.

Glenolden had the advantage of Media, because at the former place no popcorn or pink lemonade booths were allowed outside. At Glenolden these accessories of the circus were not lacking. The peanut privilege, while not a lucrative one, was a noisy one. "Peanuts, chocolates and chewing gum."

"Ice cream cones and brick ice cream!" These cries greeted Mr. Bryan as he came up in an automobile that was parked with half a hundred more on the old circus lot where the chautauqua tent was pitched.

"There Isn't Any Elephant."

A little boy who insisted upon having peanuts as he was dragged along by his mother declared he wanted them to feed the elephant.

"There isn't any elephant, Willie," said his mother.

"Yes, there is; they got a tent," he wailed as she moved on with him to where the crowd was in line.

There must have been several persons under the same impression as to the use to which the tent was being put, because the almost incessant cracking of well-roasted goobers in the rear seats punctuated the lecture of the Secretary and at times made it difficult for those in the extreme rear seats to hear clearly.

The really disappointed boys, however, were those who carried water for the band and the other talent to get free tickets and those who crawled in under the canvas who found the show not up to expectations to the juvenile portion of the crowd.

Lament of a Canvasman.

One of the canvasmen who had a seat along the side of the tent wail surrounding the lot aired his woes while Mr. Bryan was speaking.

"I'm sorry I joined," he wailed. "This ain't a regular show, and the boss canvasman is a Swarthmore student. What he don't know about putting up a big tent would fill a book. What they ought to do with this business is take there here Tyroleans. That boy champion is good and is as fine a yodler as there is in the business, and I have been seeing concerts with circuses for a long time way back with the Sells show. They ought to take and consolidate them and that band and then go into Philly and get a good lot and play two a day right along.

Bryan Could Commute.

"Mr. Bryan could commute from Washington. We could let him close the afternoon show and put him on number one for the night show, and we would get some money. These people are amateurs. I'm sorry I joined out. You see the way it was, I used to be with the old Forepaugh show, and when I saw the tent I just naturally asked for work."

Contrary to the general opinion, the artists dividing time with Bryan and holding the crowd until he arrives do not feel particularly puffed up over the fact that they are on the same bill with him.

Gus Oechner, the champion yodler, at Media, this afternoon, was congratulated on getting a bigger hand than Mr. Bryan at the close of his act.

"That ain't much," said another. "Anna Umley got a better hand than he did on her zither act."

"No, we are not sore at his taking the spotlight," said one of the troupe, after changing to street clothes and taking his make-up off. "Mr. Graus, our manager, will tell you we have played with some of the best. We don't care where they put us on a bill. We can follow an animal act or juggler or any of the rest of them.

"Why, we would not be afraid to let Mr. Bryan take the middle of the bill or go on No. 4. Say, that cuckoo song that Oechner sings won the championship in Switzerland for him. It was a great contest. See, the program says it," and he pointed to where, in small type on the inside, it was announced "the boy yodler of the troupe won the championship in a great contest in Switzerland."

Mr. Bryan has announced diplomatically that he was going to remain on the Chautauqua circuit. He said there were now 1,000 of them. He spoke of the pleasure he felt in addressing the members and audiences they drew, and what a proud privilege it was of his to do so, and said:

French Paper Sees in His Performance Reason for Success of Tammany.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The Times' leading editorial on foreign affairs, edited and usually written by Andre Tardieu, one of the under secretaries of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and accepted generally by the European press as directly inspired utterances reflecting the opinions of foreign office heads, is devoted to-night to ridiculing Secretary of State Bryan for his appearance with a traveling tent show.

The caption over the editorial is "The Bryan Sketch," and his part in the show is treated as vaudeville.

The editorial says Mr. Bryan's enterprise is especially dangerous in this age, when the tendency of the public is to despise diplomacy as futile, or at least to refuse to take diplomats seriously.

"A few more samples of this kind and the public will lose all faith," it goes on. It is pointed out that Mr. Bryan's "antics" really call for an essay on American manners and morals, illustrating once again that in the United States a political career is esteemed as a most mediocre profession, hence inferior men have been predominant in American politics throughout the last century, all citizens of marked ability and of pronounced intelligence religiously keeping out of politics, and the really able men going into business, from which position they use politicians, but never hold office.

Thus Tammany has prospered, to poison America's magnificent soil." It also says the best American tradition of dignity is now entirely confined to "out-of-the-way" Boston and similar corners, from which types of men like Olney and Lodge must witness the "vaudevillian" Secretary of State, whereas the "widest chasm separates these responsible citizens from the public's approval."

German Papers Score Bryan As Vaudevillian.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—Secretary Bryan's plan to work the vaudeville circuit has evoked much derisive comment in the German press.

The dignified Vossiche Zeitung says Bryan has a fine busines talent. If it were not known that Bryan will not serve a drop of wine, even to diplomats, it adds, "one would be tempted to believe this idea of organizing a circus was due to a moment of jovial stimulation."

The Reveste Nachrichten suggests Mr. Bryan is trying to show that America's poorly paid public officials are obliged "either to steal or adopt Bryan methods."

:: Not for Money ::

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Secretary Bryan has cabled to a French newspaper that he is lecturing not for money, but simply to educate the people.

YOUNG man, if you lack the acquisitive knack,
If your money fades into thin air,
Don't think there's no chance in the realm of finance
And give away to utter despair.
You can easily be in the class with John D.,
George Gould and Charles W. Morse,
If you'll merely come through with a dollar or two
On the Doc's educational course.

GO and hear how the Doc whose bland soul it would shock
To think of the evil called greed,
Counts his house every night lest the treasurer might
Get away with an overlooked seed.
Though he looks upon cash as the veriest trash,
He'll teach you to keep it by force;
Not a cent will you burn if your lesson you learn
In the Doc's educational course.

YOU'LL observe how it pays to spend years, months and days
In hunting a job you can't land,
If the spotlight you keep while less foxy men sleep
And always go round with a band.
You will learn that to grace a good Cabinet place
As an ad. beats a two-headed horse,
You will never know need if you'll only pay heed
To the Doc's educational course.

HOW kind of the Doc, who has tucked in his sock
All he'd need for the next thousand years,
Thus to bustle around and tell youths how to found
Good, solid, financial careers!
And if all the while he sees with a smile
More dollars heap up in the vault
And his holdings accrue while he educates you,
Remember, it isn't his fault!

LAND UPHEAVAL IN WASHINGTON BEING STUDIED

Strange Series of Movements of Earth on Coast Thought Due to Subterranean Lake.

SEATTLE, WASH., Sept. 13.—A strange series of upheavals of the land in a little district in Skamania County, Washington, had caused wonder and some consternation among the settlers. State Forester Ferris, who has just returned from the rather isolated region near Stevenson, where he viewed the results of nature's outbreaks, is at a loss to explain the phenomena.

Within five miles of Stevenson a man planted a garden a year ago in a fertile little area just below the house. Last spring he planted in the same spot which nature had elevated to a position considerably above the house. This same rancher pumps water from a lake into a tank and carries it from the tank to the house in buried pipes. Several times he has had to remove joints from the pipe to counteract the contortions of the earth on his farm.

A lake that used to be in a corner of the field is now removed to another quarter, while the lake bottom is transformed into a little hillock. In the center of a little lake in another part of the area an island has appeared within a few months.

War Veteran Regains Sight Lost in Battle

Dazed by Things He Sees Since Successful Operation, He Declines $100 Pension.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—Isaac Gates, of West Virginia, a veteran of the Civil War and blind since he was affected by a wound at Chancellorsville, left the Eye and Ear Hospital after an operation the other day possessing full sight and so happy that he has talked ever since about the wonderful things he sees.

He is dazed by the hundreds of modern things.

Just before the operation he was offered by the Government a pension of $100 a month. He sent word to Washington that the Government may keep the pension; he is happy without it.

"I am 77," he said, "but talk about enjoyment! I did not know what life's charms were until I got back my eyesight. The years that I was blind made a great difference to me. Now I am enjoying myself."

SEX HYGIENE IN SUNDAY SCHOOL PASTOR'S PLEA

Chicago Clergyman Also Urges That Subject Be Taught in the Churches.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The teaching of sex hygiene in the church and Sunday school was advoted in a sermon by the Rev. W. H. Head, of Chicago, preaching at the Rochelle, Ill., Methodist Church.

"Let the preacher and Sunday school teacher teach sex hygiene," he said, "and not turn it over to hirelings.

"Much has been said about eugenics, but to prohibit marriage absolutely (among the sick) will be only increasing the evil. To make marriage too difficult is to create a condition where marriage laws are ignored."

Says Extract of Beef Causes Intoxication

Liverpool Doctor Finds That Teetotaler's Drink Produces Effects of Alcoholic Poisoning.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A Liverpool doctor declares all the symptoms of alcoholic poisoning are caused by the consumption of large quantities of meat extract. This is a favorite teetotal beverage, and to say that it produces a special kind of intoxication is somewhat of a paradox.

A patient of whose habits there could be no question went to the Liverpool doctor with every sign of alcoholic poisoning, and an inquiry proved definitely that his state resulted solely from a habit he had formed of taking meat juices in several forms.

Some rather similar cases, say the expert, have occurred from eating excessive, though not apparently bulky, portions of cereal foods.

THAW PANIC STRICKEN AS HE FIGHTS ON U. S. SOIL

Cool, Masterful Pose He Assumed in Canada Disappears When He Faces Jerome Under Stars and Stripes—Angry With Dominion.

Preparations Under Way to Speed Extradition From New Hampshire to Matteawan—Array of Counsel Retained for Struggle.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—Harry Thaw, far from maintaining the cool, masterful pose that he affected when he began his fight against returning to Matteawan, is living in a state of terror. The unexpected freedom given him when the Canadian authorities without notice hustled him over the border has unsettled him.

Free for a few hours, Thaw was thrown into a panic of indecision. His plans were disarranged. He had no means of making good the escape for which his freedom gave him opportunity. And the panic seems to have remained with him.

Here in the hotel where he remains under guard, Thaw insists that the officers sleep just outside the door. The presence of Jerome fills him with terror.

Added reason was given to his fear when requisition papers calling for his extradition from New Hampshire to New York State were approved by Acting Governor Glynn, of New York, at the request of the authorities of Dutchess County. The papers were directed to Governor Felker, of New Hampshire, who has announced that he recognizes Mr. Glynn's right to issue them.

However, there come moments of calm, in which he plans to continue his fight against return to New York soil. He announced to-day that he has employed a retinue of lawyers to conduct his fight here, and that he keeps in touch with his advocates in Canada, who are endeavoring to obtain his legal return to Canadian soil.

Scores Immigration Officers.

Also, in these moments of logical behavior, Thaw is loudly indignant in his attack on Canadian authorities for arbitrarily hustling him over the border. He and his lawyers charge that the action was without legal basis. His hopes were that the courts of the Dominion would heed his plea and prevent extradition. In Canada he was glowing in his praise of Canada and its people, declaring his belief that he would obtain justice. Now he is disgruntled.

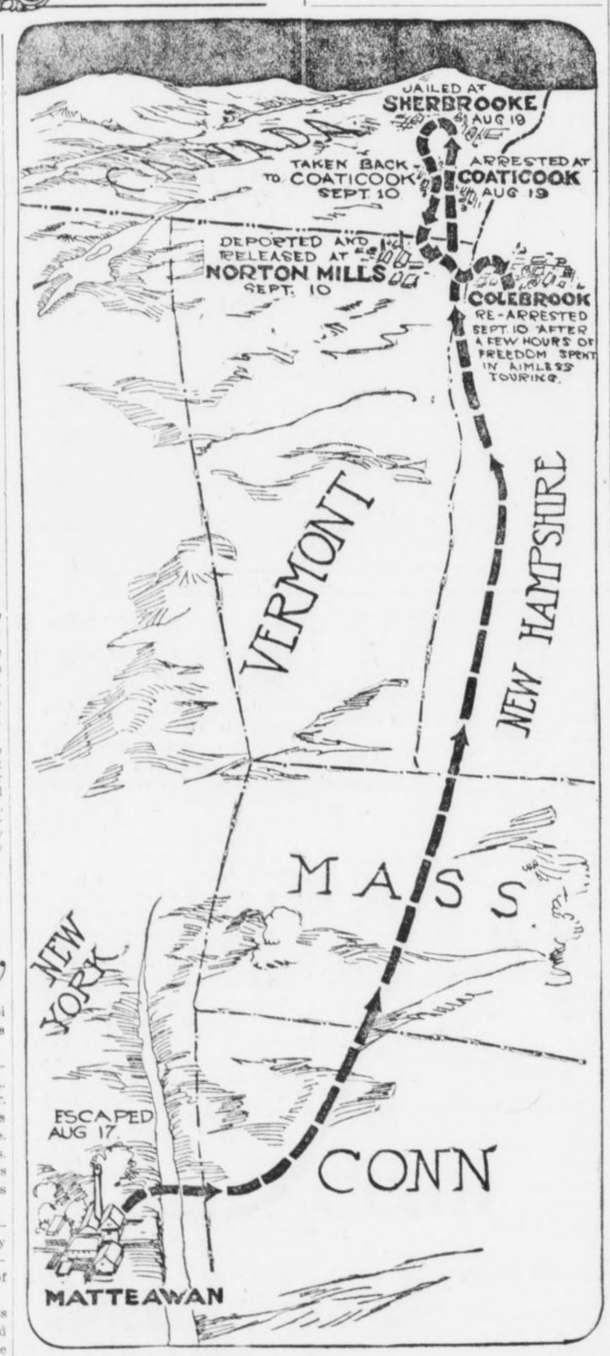
"I hope to get a better variety of justice under the Stars and Stripes," he said to-day, in talking of his plans to fight against returning to New York.

Oddly enough, Thaw and his enemies are of a single mind in denouncing the action of the Canadian immigration authorities. Jerome and his allies who have been pursuing Thaw are not yet over the fright they received when they found the fugitive had been released. For three hours they scoured the countryside, obsessed by the fear that they would lose their quarry. And now they are indignantly talking of the high-handed action of the immigration officials.

Jerome and Deputy Attorney General Kennedy, of New York, both were bitter in their attack on those who sent Thaw across the border free.

The fight, transferred from Canada to New Hampshire, will take on a slightly different aspect. Jerome and his allies will attempt to obtain Thaw's return to New York on a warrant charging him with conspiring to escape from the asylum, a criminal charge. Thaw's lawyers will attempt to offset this with the argument that Thaw, being insane in the eyes of New York authorities, could not conspire, in the sense of the law.

Jerome Grows Impatient.



The fight probably will consume several days or a week, so that even if the fugitive loses he will not be taken to Matteawan before late this week. Jerome is growing impatient over the stubbornness of Thaw's fight, and immediately upon his arrival he sought audiences with Governor Felker and Attorney General Tuttle, of New Hampshire, to obtain from them the promise of no delay in the hearing.

With the time for the hearing at hand, Thaw finds himself among a people who are not nearly so universal in their admiration of him as were the Canadians. There are elements among the populace who are emphatically favorable toward his suit, it is true, but there are many New Hampshire men who stoutly maintain that he has no right to remain in New Hampshire.

Not that the opinion of the public is significant in this matter, but that opinion has been a spectacular factor in the case so far, and probably will continue so. The Monadnock House, the hotel where he is held, has become a public debating field, its lobby being crowded with men for Thaw and against Thaw.

HARRY THAW is shown being escored by the Sheriff at Colebrook, N. H., while below is a map showing route he took in his flight from Matteawan up to his capture in New Hampshire.

Thaw Evolves Another Handmade Interview

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—For the first time in nearly a week, the special correspondent of The Georgian was able to-day to obtain an interview with Thaw. The questions and answers were all written by Thaw himself.

Q. Why do you suppose such unusual methods, special trains, etc., are used in pursuit of you?—A. We supposed it was part of the tender care with which a few New York officials have been shielding the names of Messrs. Blank and Blank——

Q. But in Canada you published a statement that you and your friends were forced to declare that you had no intention of uncovering those names?—A. Yes, and now we are bound not to.

Q. Then why this persistent chase at the cost of the taxpayers of New York?—A. It has been suggested that one reason may be a desire to keep hidden a curious relation between a lawyer who acted as counsel for the late Mr. White and the Gerry Society.

Q. Do you mean the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children?—A. Yes, there was nothing unprofessional in this, but we are told that this secret has done us much harm.

Q. Mr. Gerry is not concerned in this?—A. Not the least; the control of that society was taken from the excellent Commodore long ago.

Q. Did Judge Olcott testify something about this last summer?—A. Yes; Judge Olcott testified that Mr. Nicholl was counsel for Mr. White's associates, as well as for Mr. White.

Q. That he was counsel for Messrs. Blank and Blank?—A. Yes; and his firm also is counsel for the children's society.

Q. How many people know this?—A. That is the trouble. A great many people know it, so it can't be completely concealed like the names of Messrs. Blank and Blank.

Q. Didn't your lawyer speak of this last summer?—A. Yes; he explained that influential gentlemen from the beginning wanted to pretend I was insane to keep these facts from coming out.

Q. Didn't Jerome himself say the same thing to the jury that acquitted you?—A. Jerome said, "Is there anything strange that these people should wish that these things should not come out?"

Q. It has been said that you assaulted a man named Robinson when, in defiance of the writ of the court of Kings bench, you were carried out of that court's jurisdiction?—A. That was an error.

Q. They said you fought in the motor car?—A. That is nonsense. I sat between two Dominion policemen, McFadden and Charron, who are good friends of mine, and joked about my only baggage being a box of cigars.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN TAMED.

SHELDON, N. DAK., Sept. 13.—A young prairie chicken came to the home of Robert Gray, near here, and established a residence with the tame chickens. It comes to be fed every morning and stays with the rest of the poultry all day.

EVELYN SAYS SHE IS ANXIOUS TO AID HUSBAND

All Harry Thaw Will Have to Do Is Ask Her, She Declares.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—"There are many ways in which I could help Harry, just as I have done before. Some day he will realize that and come to me asking for help."

The above statement was made to-day by Evelyn Nsbit Thaw aftr she was asked what she would do if the attorneys for Harry Thaw should call her to appear as a witness for him in his efforts to obtain his freedom.

"There is nothing in all this world that I would not do to help Harry if he would come to me and make a request," continued Mrs. Thaw. "He realizes that I have sacrificed everything in the past for his happiness and that any one who has gone as far as I have gone would not 'quit' until they had won a complete victory."

"Do you believe you could help Harry in any material way in his fight for freedom?"

"Yes, Harry realizes that. But I will never give any assistance to Harry until he sends for me as his wife."

Depends on His Lawyers.

"There are a hundred ways in which Harry could communicate with me. I realize that he can not come to me. But he doesn't communicate with me; he depends upon his high-priced lawyers."

"Could a friend transmit a message to you from him that would act the same as a personal message, so that you would hasten to his side and aid in his fight?" Mrs. Thaw was asked.

"Yes."

"In what way could you help your husband?"

"I will not discuss that with anyone," was Mrs. Thaw's answer. "I will say that I stand ready to help him in a way he knows. But he refuses to ask me. But let Harry send me the proper message and I will show the world that I stand ready to again make every sacrifice and do everything in my power to make Harry a free man."

"Why don't you communicate with Harry Thaw's mother?" was asked.

"Because she cut off my income more than a year ago. You all tell stories of how Harry Thaw's mother has worked and sacrificed for him, but let me tell you that her sacrifice has not been one-half what Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's has been."

Wishes to Win Success.

Asked why she refused to appear in a vaudeville act billed as Evelyn Thaw, she answered:

"It was not because the name Thaw is distasteful to me, but because I did not want people to come to gaze upon Evelyn Thaw, the heroine of a murder trial, but I wanted to win success and thereby obtain an income for my child and myself by real ability and not by notoriety."

GEMS SEIZED BY SHERMAN ON MARCH CLAIMED

War Department Asked for Jewelry Taken by Noted General on Invasion of South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two persons giving the names of Lord and Lady Banff called at the Treasury Department yesterday and claimed a quantity of jewelry and silver plate said to have been stored there for safe-keeping during the Civil War. They were referred to the Wtr Department, where records are being searched in hope of finding the valuables.

Lady Banff, who acted as sopkesman, told a dramatic story of how the jewels were sent to the Treasury by General W. T. Sherman from a convent in Columbia, S. C. A record, she said, was sent to the War Department.

During the war, according to the story, the people of Columbia became alarmed lest the Federals would rob them of their jewelry and silver. They gathered their goods together, made up a list and hid the valuables under the floor of the Ursulian Convent there.

Nuns Revealed Hiding Place.

When General Sherman arrived in Columbia, he set fire to the convent, and the nuns, fearing that the valuables would be forever destroyed, revealed their hiding place.

General Sherman took charge of the property, it is said, and sent it to the Treasury, making afull report to the War Department.

Yesterday's visitors saw Byrom Newton, private secretary to Secretary McAdoo, and told him the story. Mr. Newton, on investigation, found that during the war a great deal of jewelry and silver plate had been turned over to the Treasury for safekeeping. This was kept there, he said, until about ten years ago, when it was sent to the War Department. The visitors were sent to that department.

On arrival there they met John C. Scofield, assistant and chief clerk, who referred them to Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, Acting Adjutant General. They told Colonel Heistand the same story, asking him to let them look at the report made by General Sherman.

Lady Banff explained that her mother had placed some of the family jewels in the lot, and that she now wanted to recover them.

Unable to Find Report.

Colonel Heistand made an examination, but failed to find any report made by General Sherman. He called in some of the oldest clerks of the department, but they, too, were unable to remember anything of the kind. Lady Banff insisted that it was there, declaring that when she was a girl she had visited the War Department and had seen it.

Colonel Heistand said that he would make a further investigation, and that he would notify the visitors, who are living in Washington, in Sixth street northwest.

This couple has been living in Washington for some time and has on several occasions been prominent in the news. The man claims the title of the Rt. Hon. Robert Walter Finlater Ogilvie, Lord Banff and heir to the earldom of Finlater, Scotland. He is a graduate of three universities —Princeton, Columbia, and West Virginia. Lady Banff was a Southern beauty, it is understood.

Youths Confess They Invented Meteor

Celestial Visitor Is Found to Have Been Composed of Dynamite and Slag.

TIVERTON, R. I. Sept. 13.—The Tiverton meteor of August 27 was to-day removed from the realm of natural phenomena by two young men who confessed to the police that the supposed celestial visitor was composed of 60 pounds of dynamite and a quantity of copper slag. The "meteor," which was reported to have fallen in the Seaconnet River, was accompanied by a blinding light and a deafening crash. Two fishermen later found in their nets a heavy piece of metal which was declared to be the fallen "meteor." The fishermen put their find on exhibition, and did a profitable business.

The police began an investigation, which resulted in the confession of two young men that they had taken the dynamite and exploded it behind Gould's Island in order to cause a sensation.

Snake Collector Has Rattler Pets

'Lonesome Jack' Allman Has Captured 18,000 Reptiles—Declares Ther Are Affectionate.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Ever since "Lonesome Jack" Allman was 7 years old he has been "foolin' 'round" snakes. He captured his 18,000th snake the other day.

"The rattlesnake is the most intelligent of all reptiles and the most affectionate," Jack declared. "After they have been fanged they are the most desirable of snake pets. They can be made to come to you just like a pet dog or cat." Jack and his brother Shirley made a journey through the mountains the past week in quest of snakes and brought back several large rattlers.

JUDGE BINDS MAN OVER ON IDLENESS CHARGE

WILMINGTON, DEL., Sept. 13.—For the first time in this State a man was held in bail on a charge of idleness in the Municipal Court here. When Alphonsus M. Acton was arraigned on a specific charge of breach of the peace, preferred by his wife, Judge Churchman remarked that, according to the defendant's wife, he would not work. The judge then said that having understood that idleness is a crime, according to Blackstone, he would also place that charge against the accused.

Acton was held under a $300 peace bond and ordered to give $300 additional for a hearing on the idleness charge.

Cougar Holds Right Of Way Over Train

Beast Measuring Ten Feet In Length Takes His Time About Clearing the Track.

POTLATCH, WASH., Sept. 13.—A large cougar, mistaken for a calf, was nearly run down by the logging train on its way up into the woods near Lake Cushman after a load of logs. The cougar, whose length is estimated at ten feet, paid little attention to the engine and loped along for about 500 feet before getting out of the way.

The animal was on the property which adjoins the water power site which has been offered to the city of Seattle. Only a few hundred yards away is the camp of Government cruisers Dennie Ahl and G. Hutton, who took up the chase. Other old-time hunters took up the search, but have not as yet located the lion.

The road to Lake Cushman, which is much traveled, lies but a few hundred feet away, and the locality is daily frequented by campers and fishermen.

Iowa Professor Scores 'Apostasy'

Professor Lamson Says Colleges Threaten to Destroy Foundations of the Government.

HASTINGS, MICH., Sept. 13.—Professor J. C. Lamson, of Nevada, Iowa, one of the most prominent leaders of the Seventh Day Adventists, condemned the tendencies in modern life which, he said, threaten to destroy our constitutional government.

Though the professor had for his topic "Apostates From Republicanism," he failed to attack any particular political party and did not say how he classed the Progressives.

The class of professors in American universities and colleges and others who are joining them in attempting to overthrow the Constitution in its present form were denounced at length by Professor Lamson. Such tendencies, he said, would commit the Government to religious legislation.

Governor Feeds His Guests Sparrow Pie

New Dish Tasting Like Squab and Reed Bird Meets With Instant Success.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 13.—Governor Cox is introducing sparrow pie to his guests, and the gastronomic offering is popular. Besides being savory and satisfying, it tends to the solution of the problem of the high cost of living.

The dish was introduced in Columbus by Paul Meeker, formerly in politics, now a broker. He lives in Bexley, a Columbus suburb. Recently he made a self-operating trap, in which he can obtain a supply for a company dinner in a few hours.

The pie was good and Governor Cox decided to introduce it in the Gubernatorial Mansion. His guests thought it a pie of squabs and reed birds until informed. Sparrow trap making has become a serious business since the feast.

Police Chief Shocked; Nabs Vision in X-Ray

Wearer of Gauzy Dress Spends Night In Jail; Pays Fine, and Hears Lecture.

BUTTE, MONT., Sept. 13.—Miss Della Clark, tripping down Wyoming street in the bright glare of the noon sun yesterday, shocked Chief of Police Murphy and he arrested her. She was kept overnight in jail.

Police Judge Booher fined her $5 in court to-day for wearing the diaphanous costume.

"You women have got to dress decently in Butte," said the court.

CHILDREN CURED BY FRIEDMANN, PARENTS ASSERT

Crippled Boy Treated With Serum Now Running About Streets of Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Two of the worst cases treated by Dr. Frederick Friedmann, the noted German physician, on his visit here have been absolutely cured, the sufferers themselves declare, and a number of others have shown such improvement, they assert, as to warrant the patients' hope of ultimate recovery. The two patients who it is claimed have been cured are Philip Chase, aged 5, of No. 2114 Fourteenth street southeast, and Edith Strauser, aged 7, of No. 3221 Reservoir street northwest.

Each of these children was treated once by Dr. Friedmann. The Chase boy was taken to the George Washington Hospital, barely able to limp on his crutches. Yesterday he was running around like any normal boy. His father claims that the lad is cured, and gives all the credit to Dr. Friedmann.

The mother of little Edith Strauser yesterday was one of the happiest women in Washington. "Oh, to think that my little one has been cured!" she cried. "And that after ten doctors had given her up. When I took her to the hospital for Dr. Friedmann to operate on her, I did not believe that she had a chance for recovery. The doctors had told me that there was no hope. He gave my daughter only one treatment, and within five weeks she showed great improvement. Before I took her to him she had not been able to move in bed for eight months. During those whole eight months she was in agony. Not a muscle could she stir, she was so weak. To-day she is able to play with the other children in the neighborhood, although I believe she would still be better if she could get just one more treatment from Dr. Friedmann."

Mrs. Strauser said that since her daughter had been treated she had not suffered any pain, where formerly she was in agony. A cough, which annoyed the little girl before she went to the German physician, has not totally disappeared, according to the mother.

Fisher and Albicore In Death Struggle

Man Refuses to Give Up When Big Fish Hauls Him Into Water.

VENICE, CAL., Sept. 13.—S. N. Reppert, formerly a motorcycle officer in the Venice police department, battled for his life in the waves to-day while he was dragged about by an albicore which he had succeeded in hooking. As he was pulling in the fish, which weighed close to 60 pounds, Reppert's leg became entangled in the line and he went overboard headfirst.

Reppert would not drop the line, for it was his intention to land the big fish. The albicore made a sweep to the surface and jumped clear of the waves. The next moment the fish was on a course for the bottom with Reppert in tow.

A companion finally cut the line and permitted the albicore to continue its journey alone while he helped Reppert into the boat.

Bloomer Girls Beat Ministers in Skirts

Drexel Biddle Bible Class Sees Exciting Game, but No One Knows the Score.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Nine ministers dressed in skirts, sans slits, and nine pretty girls clad in bloomers furnished the amusement and excitement in a game of baseball for 2,500 members of the A. J. Drexel Biddle Bible class at the outing of that organization at Lansdowne.

It wasn't much of a game of ball, but the contest, which was for a box of candy, proved of much interest and never-ending merriment. None of the players knew the score when the game was called at the end of the seventh inning, but Mr. Biddle announced that he girls had won.

Miss Anna Zang twirled the bloomerites to victory. Nearly all of the girls shut their eyes when at bat, but at that several hit for two bases.

Because he was dissatisfied with conditions in the signal corps and voiced his complaint in a letter addressed to Joseph Tumulty, private Secretary to the President, Private Clarence L. George, Company H, was sentenced to a year in the military prison here. He also will receive a dishonorable discharge.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

GRAND JURY TO BEGIN CRAWFORD INVESTIGATION

Inquisitorial Body Will In All Probability Take Up Poison Case This Week.

WIDOW SEEMS CONFIDENT

Sees Only Move in Will Contest in Charge Brought by Relatives of Dead Husband.

Grand jurors of Fulton County will this week in all probability begin their investigation of the death of the late Josua B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose widow has been charged with poisoning him in order to get his riches barely a month after their marriage in 1909.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, is at her Peachtree street home, serenely confident that if the Grand Jury should indict her she would be promptly acquitted by a trial jury. She declares the bringing of the charge of poisoning against her was done merely as a new move of the heirs of the aged real estate operator, who are fighting for the $250,000 fortune that was left to her.

Poison Presence Admitted.

The report of Dr. H. F. Harris that traces of morphine poisoning were found in the stomach of the deceased is not denied by Mrs. Crawford or her counsel. They simply contend that this drug was prescribed for Crawford during his last illness, and declare that the attending physician will take the stand and testify that he administered the opiate to relieve the aged man's pain.

The Crawford heirs, however, take an entirely different view of the matter. They charge a deep-laid conspiracy on the part of Mrs. Crawford and Fred Lumb, a barber now in New York, and who is sought by the heirs as an accomplice.

Their contention is that when J. B Crawford, then in his seventies, went to St. Augustine, Fla., in 1909 in search of health and took board with Mary Belle Bishop, the woman then and there planned to wed the old man and as soon as she could make him will her his property, poison him, and then wed Lumb.

The contesting heirs are nieces and nephews of the man for whose wealth they are fighting, and though the will contest has been on practically since the death of Crawford, it was not until a few months ago that the poison charge was made and the body was exhumed for examination of the stomach.

Sheriff Issues Warrant.

A Coroner's jury at Carrollton, the old home of the Crawfords, returned a verdict declaring that the deceased had come to his death from poison administered by his wife.

It was then that the Sheriff of Carroll County mailed a warrant to the Sheriff of Fulton for the arrest. When officers went to serve it, Mrs. Crawford was not at her Atlanta home, but she afterward surrendered to the Sheriff here and promptly furnished the $6,000 bond required.

In addition to the poison charge the nieces and nephews have alleged that undue influence was exercised by Mrs. Crawford to have herself made the chief beneficiary in the will, and witnesses have been introduced at the will hearing to prove that at the time he uttered the instrument, Crawford was not only mentally unbalanced through senility, but was constantly under the influence of alcohol.

Rays From Brain of 'Wizard' Edison

Opinions Flash From Thaw to Eugenics

Back at Work After Brief Vacation, Inventor Is Still "Human Dynamo" at Sixty-six.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 13.—Thomas Alva Edison, the "Wizard of Menlo Park," whose life has been one invention after another, is back in his wonderful laboratories here today plunged into nineteen hours of work a day, after a fortnight's vacation in New England.

That Mr. Edison should take a vacation at all is regarded as unusual, for the "human dynamo," as he is often called, is a tireless worker at the age of 66. Fully recovered from a slight cold, Mr. Edison has been enjoying himself at Monhegan, Maine, then at the summer home of his wealthy friend, Richard Colgate, the soap manufacturer, at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Mr. Edison looks to-day the man he is. His heavy thatch of white gives him a distinguished appearance at a distance. He is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and is thick-set enough to weigh about 175 pounds.

The traveling public noticed him at Monhegan, Maine, in Lowell, where he and Mrs. Edison stayed overnight, to break their long automobile trip, and at Lake Sunapee, where the Edisons wound up their New England stay.

Unusually Vigorous.

Those who failed to recognize the inventor saw in him an unusually vigorous man for his years.

If his hat was off, one noted instantly the wide, lofty brow, the brow of a thinker. As General Lew Wallace said of Simonides, the steward in "Ben Hur," it is apparent that a man with such a head must have a tremendous brain from cubic capacity, if nothing else.

Mr. Edison has bright eyes, gray-blue eyes, that gaze ever so keenly But they are not merely sharp eyes. They are kindly ones and humorous, too; for "Wizard" Edison exemplifies the old saying:

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

Witness his little joke about "running up to Colgate's to take a bath"—a sly illusion to the soap with which his host is ever associated.

Brain Works Like Flash.

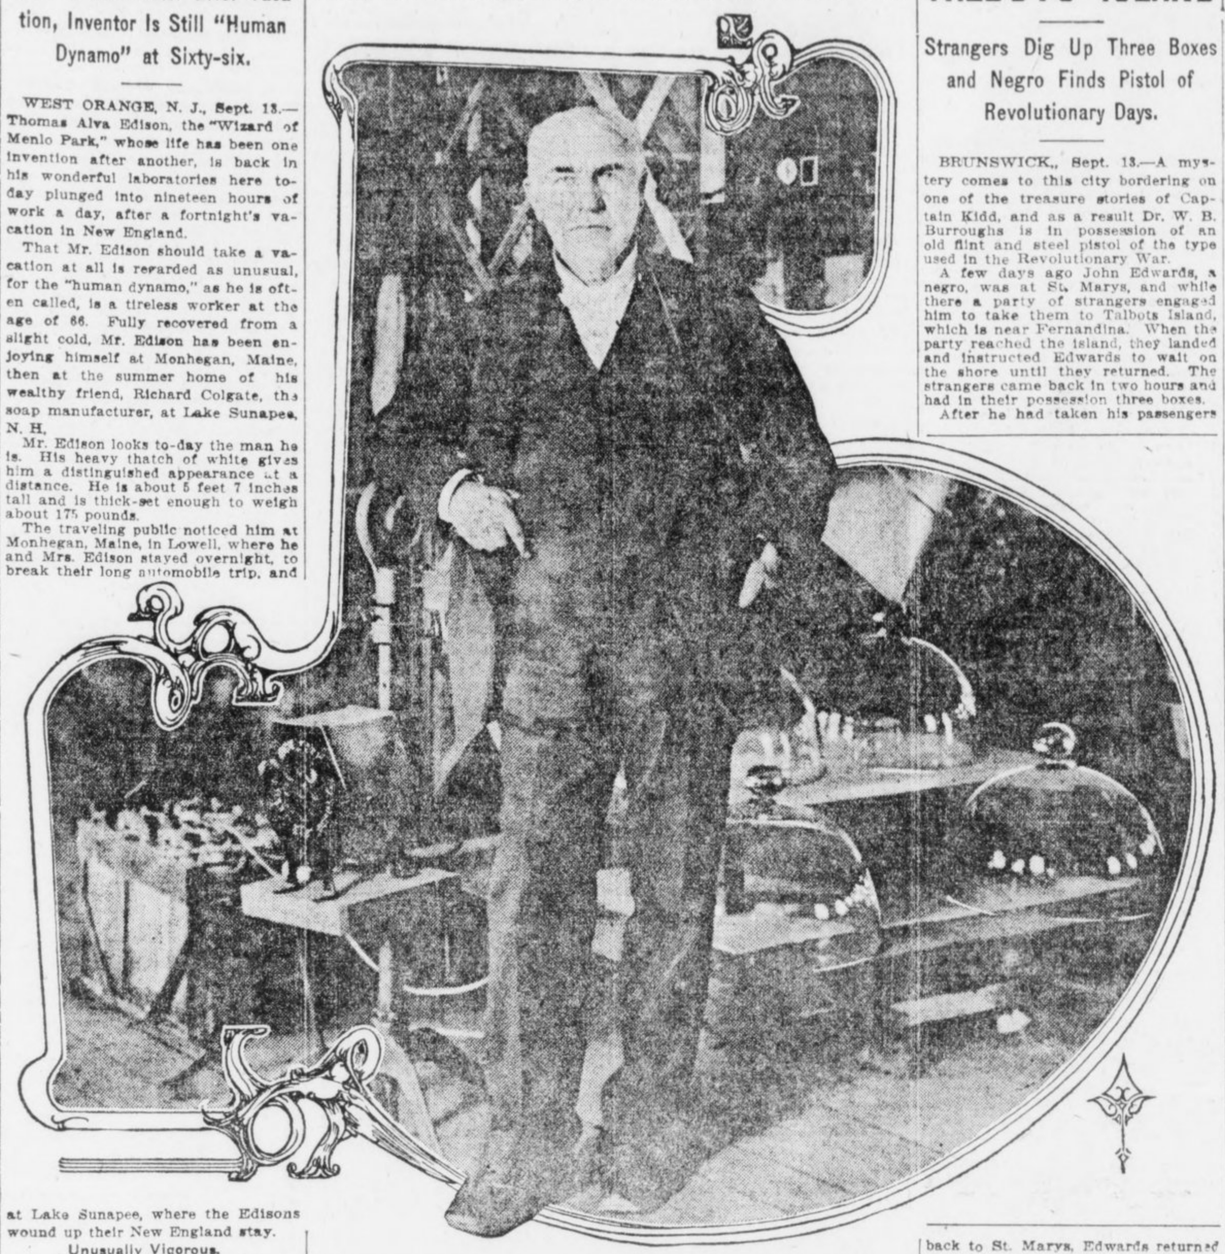
Dressed usually in a sack suit of dark mixture, Mr. Edison is neat in appearance. Any idea that an inventor has to wear mussy clothes and necktie askew does not apply to Mr. Edison. Maybe he is naturally natty, maybe Mrs. Edison sees to it that her distinguished husband always is presentable. Anyhow, he is as well kept as a man need be.

Speak to Mr. Edison and right away you realize that you have started something.

He replies quickly.

His brain seems to work like a flash.

His answer comes on the instant, and is a full, complete one. Mr. Edison knows what he knows and when he makes a reply he covers the ground.



He uses few gestures, but he keeps his right hand cupped up against his right ear because he is hard of hearing in the left ear and he uses the right one. He has put his hand up to that ear so many thousand times that he has actually pushed the lobe of the ear out a little.

Cordial and Democratic

He is as cordial as he is alert, and as simple and democratic as he is cordial. Such is the best known living inventor in appearance.

Mr. Edison has pronounced ideas on about every topic of current thought, from "X-ray" gowns to mental standards and from eugenics to "Casino Johnny," as he dubs Harry K. Thaw.

Thomas Alva Edison, as he appears in his marvelous laboratory in West Orange, N. J., in which he labors 19 hours a day.

HERE ARE MR. EDISON'S VIEWS ON SOME OF THE LIVE TOPICS

DANCES AND DRESS—The weird dances and freakish dressing are not an indication of moral deterioration, but merely the expression of peculiar mental flights. They are here today and gone to-morrow.

EUGENICS—A splendid proposition. Affection will not be subordinated. As physical and intellectual evolution takes place affection will be deeper and more wholesome.

THAW—It is about time we lost "Casino Johnny." The country is better without him and too much publicity has been given him.

AMERICA—America is the hope of the world. Here we are constantly advancing, because the mental standard is constantly improving as the result of public school education.

TRUSTS—Trusts are good and bad. Government control means the end of the trusts that conspire against the public good. It is for the Government to regulate the trust business, eliminating the bad and protecting the good.

ROOSEVELT—A solid man, an honest one, who has been under fire for twenty years, without one shaft by the enemy striking a vulnerable spot.

POLITICS—I am a Progressive. Advancement cannot be attained without these changes. The Republican and Democratic parties stand for the old order of things.

MEXICO—Latins and Anglo-Saxons do not mix and never will. Mexico is incapable of self-government. It would not be wise for us to interfere.

VACATIONS—It does seem great to have a day off. What a wealth of material there is for the human mind to enjoy if one only has one's eyes open to it.

WORK—Sometimes, after nineteen or twenty hours' work; I hate to give it up, even for a few hours' rest.

SLEEP—Sleep is largely a matter of habit.

ELECTRICITY—We are in the infancy of electricity. It is taking the place of steam the world over.

"CANNED" MUSIC—It has been the aim of all phonograph manufacturers to eliminate the scratching noise of the needle and the composition. Eventually we will produce music minus all scratching sound.

WAS TREASURE UNEARTHED ON TALBOTS ISLAND

Strangers Dig Up Three Boxes and Negro Finds Pistol of Revolutionary Days.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—A mystery comes to this city bordering on one of the treasure stories of Captain Kidd, and as a result Dr. W. B. Burroughs is in possession of an old flint and steel pistol of the type used in the Revolutionary War.

A few days ago John Edwards, a negro, was at St. Marys, and while there a party of strangers engaged him to take them to Talbots Island, which is near Fernandina. When the party reached the island, they landed and instructed Edwards to wait on the shore until they returned. The strangers came back in two hours and had in their possession three boxes.

After he had taken his passengers back to St. Marys, Edwards returned to the island. He searched about the place and found three square holes out of which the boxes had been lifted. In one of the sinks he found the pistol.

Yesterday the negro came to Brunswick and showed the relic to Dr. Burroughs, who, being a collector of war-time guns, purchased it. It is believed the boxes the strangers carried from the island contained treasure or were valuables buried there during the Civil War by residents of St. Marys or Fernandina. The island is not inhabited, and it is thought the men had learned of the burial of the boxes by some of their ancestors. No other solution was offered, as none of the party has ever been heard from or seen since that time by the negro.

'BRAINSTORM' TO BE DEFENSE OF CHARLTON

American Will Present New Plea to Italy When He Faces Trial as Slayer of Wife.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Sept. 13.—From the beautiful Italian lakes to the sunburned hills of Sicily the chief topic of conversation is the trial of the Americano, and a feeling of pity has been aroused at the thought of the added bitterness of the man fighting for his life before a court in which he can not understand the language spoken.

Porter Charlton himself, however, has so far seemed undisturbed by this consideration and has already made arrangements to take lessons in Italian—a desperate effort which, of course, will have no appreciable result in the few weeks at his disposal.

Lawyers are all agog over his counsel's intention to introduce into Italy the hitherto unknown defense of "brainstorm," which is expected to have a great vogue with certain classes of criminal lawyers. They have decided that in Italy it will have more effect if designated as "morbid fury" and "irresistible force."

Prisoner Is Tranquil.

Of this "irresistible force" there is at present very little indication in the prisoner. His conduct and words are tranquil and deferential almost to humbleness, while he neither expresses remorse nor seeks to justify himself. Indeed, his attitude seems to be that of a person taking a rest cure.

Charlton has already exercised his small amount of Italian upon his jailers, and is much puzzled at the difference between the Como dialect and that of the Genoese stewards on board the Re d'Italia.

The slovenliness which was a marked characteristic of Charlton during his sojourn with his wife at Moltrasio has entirely disappeared. Indeed, although alone in his cell and unvisited by anyone, his dress is kept in an immaculate state. On one point he is classed with the "crazy" English, as he insists upon having an extra supply of water for his ablutions, over which his jailer grumbles, saying, "What is the use of washing and then doing it all over again next day?" But a few lire soon soothes his ruffled feelings.

Wilson's Influence Talked.

Absurd rumors are flying about as to what is being done for Charlton in the United States; as, for instance, that ex-President Taft is using his influence with the Italian Government, and that, if things go badly for the prisoner, President Wilson will ask to have him pardoned—all of which is absolute nonsense, since once he is in the hands of Italian justice and tried by a jury, even the King himself can do nothing for Charlton.

In fact, any extraneous interference would probably prejudice his case. Of this the American Government is well aware, as it has not even communicated with the Embassy at Rome or the Consulate at Milan.

Arctic Has No Terror For College Girls

University of California Graduates Sail to Spend Year Teaching In Alaska.

BERKELEY, CAL., Sept. 13.—A winter in the frozen north has no terrors for Miss Florence Getchell and Miss Lorraine Andrews, two intrepid young Berkeley girls, who will leave soon to teach in the high school of Juneau, Alaska.

Miss Getchell and Miss Andrews are both recent graduates of the University of California, where they were very prominent in college doings. They sailed to-day for Alaska and will be gone a year.

Miss Getchell will teach mathematics and Miss Andrews will teach English. A number of sorority girls will go up to Alaska on a jaunt next spring, and will join the two girls and return with them in the summer.

GIRL DREAMS COMBINATION AND OPENS COUNTY VAULT

NEVADA, MO., Sept. 13.—A dream aided Miss Blanch Richardson, Deputy Treasurer of Vernon County, and as a results the door of the vault in the Treasurer's office is open again.

A little girl visiting Miss Richardson saw the shiny knob on the vault door and turned the lock. The office force was new and no one knew the combination. Arrangements were made to drill into the door.

Miss Richardson dreamed of a combination that would open the lock. She tried it and the lock opened.

BELLS ON FRUIT TREES.

LANCASTER, PA., Sept. 13.—Hiram Wagner does not propose to have his choice peaches carried off by thieves, so he has placed bells on the trees, which will ring with the slightest movement of the limbs.

Tries to Aid Bandit Who Killed Father

Son of Victim of Coffeyville Raid Would Pay Fine of the Slayer.

JOPLIN, MO., Sept. 13.—For more than a decade James C. Brown, a Joplin miner, lived with the intention of killing Emmett Dalton, the only surviving member of the notorious gang that terrorized Kansas twenty years ago, but last night he was here at the city jail attempting to have the former bandit released.

Dalton was fined $25 and costs in Joplin Police Court a few days ago when he pleaded guilty to being drunk for the fourth time within a week. Brown attempted to have his fine reduced, and said if this was done he would pay it.

"I want to return good for evil," the miner explained to Chief of Police J. H. Myers. "In the Coffeyville raid Emmett Dalton killed my father.

"I nursed an oath to kill Dalton for thirteen years. Then I saw the folly of my way of thinking. A few years ago I gave up the idea and now I want to do Dalton a good turn by getting him out of jail."

Gum Chewing Brings Health, Says Doctor

The Habit Exercises the Jaw and Cleanses the Teeth, Speaker Tells Ohio Physicians.

CEDAR POINT, OHIO, Sept. 13.—A discussion of diseases and abuses of sanitary conditions, described as causing most of Ohio's sickness and suffering, marked the sessions of the sixty-eighth annual convention of the Ohio Medical Society.

Gum chewing was approved by Dr. H. C. Brown, of Columbus, president of the National Dental Association. Gum chewing exercises the muscles and the tissues of the mouth, at the same time cleansing the surface of the teeth, said Dr. Brown, who added that the American people do not use their molars enough.

"It is a fact to be deplored that the uncivilized have better teeth than the civilized," said Dr. Brown.

STOCK OWNER ENRICHED.

SPOKANE, Sept. 13.—Nearly twenty years ago Patrick Hurley paid $170 for 4,250 shares of stock in a Coeur d'Alene mine. The stock is now worth $1 a share, and Hurley has been located by officers of the company after six months' search.

BROKER BLAMES 'FATAL' CHARMS FOR HIS ARREST

Weird Fascination of Woman in Case Is Brought to Notice by Friends.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—The young and handsome wife and the friends of Francis W. Keeler, a Denver broker, have brought up another defense for his arrest with Mrs. Jacquanna Russum.

They point to the past record of the woman whose weird fascination has, according to the writings of Professor Oscar L. Trigg, of Chicago University, caused several other men to give all for her smiles.

Keeler and Mrs. Russum were arrested here in a hotel room and he is now a defendant in an alienation suit for $75,000 damages brought by the woman's husband, Thomas Russum, of Chicago. Keeler's firmest friends assert that Mrs. Russum had an irresistible influence over him.

"I did not know the woman was married," Keeler told close friends. "She had a fatal fascination for me that seemed irresistible. When I found she was married I suspected a blackmail scheme, thinking she and others had conspired against me, believing I was wealthy."

Blackmailers Reap Harvest of $200,000

Los Angeles Chief Says Swindlers Work Under Guise of Being Private Detectives.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Declaring that Los Angeles is infested with blackmailers, operating as private detectives, Chief of Police Sebastian recommended to the County Grand Jury and to the Police Commission the passage of an ordinance licensing all private detective institutions.

Sebastian said he based his recommendations on a record showing the payment of upwards of $200,000 in blackmail tribute.

At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

Safer 'Harbors' for Germany's Airships

Even Subterranean Dock Is Planned for Kaiser's New Aerial Dreadnought Fleet.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—Germany is providing airship "harbors" along the French and Russian frontiers. Already she has 30 hangars that shelter 40 dirigibles and are supplied with stores of hydrogen and petrol.

New and improved hangars, each capable of holding two Zeppelins, will be built at Darmstadt, Mannheim, Hanover and three other cities. Some will revolve as the wind varies to admit monster airships entering or leaving.

A subterranean dock is planned to protect the airships from overhead attack.

Spellers Stumped by 'Rhythm' First Word

Chicago Club Members All Miss and Judges Order Spelling Bee Started Over.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The word "rhythm" almost broke up a spelling match at the outing of the Empire State Club at Rautina.

It was the first word given to the twenty-five contestants—all former New Yorkers now living in Chicago—and not a person could spell it.

The judges conferred and started over again, after promising that "rhythm" would not be given again. Mrs. Alexander Dennison finally won, after her closest competitors had stumbled over the word "judgment."

About three hundred attended the outing, which was in charge of J. C. Merrill, president of the club.

ACCUSED SWINDLER IS TRAILED FOR 5,000 MILES

CENTRALIA, ILL., Sept. 13.—After having traveled more than 5,000 miles in an effort to run down a crook, Special Agent J. E. Stoy, representing a Chicago furniture company, arrived here this afternoon.

Stoy has been on the trail of this man nine months, covering Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Missouri and Southern Illinois. Traces of the fugitive's work were discovered in Carbondale, Duquoin and Staunton. He takes orders for a furniture house, collecting on the orders, and the goods are not delivered.

'Count the Flies,' Now Slogan of Kansas

Novel Method of Making Merchants Drive Out Pest Decided on by Board.

TOPEKA, Sept. 13.—"Count the flies!" instead of "Swat the fly!" will be the slogan of the State Board of Health for next year.

Without getting nearly the amount of advertising from such a war cry, the Health Board of Ohio has been getting results that are entirely satisfactory by the application of a clever idea which the Kansas board has determined to appropriate.

Next year the proprietor of the restaurant or store who permits flies to buzz around where flies ought not to be may expect to find in his daily mail small cards bearing some such message as this:

"Dear Sir: While in your place of business yesterday I counted fourteen flies. Yours respectfully,

"JOHN DOE."

That is the Ohio idea. The Kansas Board of Health will have a lot of cards printed and will get the women's clubs over the State to distribute them.

MAMMA, DADDY AND CHILDREN ALL LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "Fruit Laxative" Cleanses Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful to-night means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping.

Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can't not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT BRINGS 'YANKEE' HOSTS AGAIN ON DIXIE'S SOIL

Chattanooga and the Southland Give Warmest Welcome of Friendship as Invaders Return to Historic Battlefields of Mountains of Tennessee.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Chattanooga has put on her gayest dress, and with flags and bunting, flowers and decorations of all kinds, is today anxiously awaiting the opening of the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic on Monday.

This year's encampment marks an auspicious occasion in the history of the G. A. R., for it is not only the first reunion of Northern veterans ever held in the real South, but it is also the centennial of some of the most famous battles fought during the Civil War in the vicinity of this city.

Fifty years ago the armies of the North and South entered into deadly combat on the fields of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga falls on the last two days of the encampment, September 19 and 20.

Already the city is crowded with thousands of veterans and visitors, and each incoming train adds to the number. Although no official figures have been given out, it is estimated that more than 200,000 strangers will be here by Monday morning, when the city of Chattanooga tenders an official reception to the visiting veterans at the Hotel Patten.

Commander-in-Chief Arrives.

The G. A. R. commander-in-chief, Alfred B. Beers, of Bridgeport, Conn., has arrived and will take a prominent part in the reception and the events of the following days. This reception will introduce the visitors to the citizens of Chattanooga and will be an elaborate social function, one of the largest that Chattanooga has ever undertaken. A committee composed of leading citizens, under the chairmanship of the Hon. A. W. Chambliss, a prominent member of the local bar, has been at work for some time arranging the details of the reception.

The Chattanooga Encampment Association, in conjunction with the local chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy and similar organizations, have seen to all arrangements for the housing of the veterans and visitors during the encampment.

Because of the limited hotel accommodations the home of private citizens have been thrown open. Most of the arriving visitors had secured their accommodations several weeks ago and they are being conducted to their places of residence for the week with the utmost dispatch. The same plan of caring for the vast crowds as was used during the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans last May is being pursued in administering to the wants of their one-time enemies.

Confederates on Committees.

Many prominent Confederate veterans have served on the various committees, and the success of the encampment, which is already assured, is due in no small measure to the work of these veterans, who have thrown themselves into the task of entertaining the men who once faced them on the battlefield. The encampment will in a way be a reunion for the veterans of both the North and South. General Bennet H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, who was largely instrumental in securing the peace memorial which will be dedicated in this city in 1915, will in all likelihood be a visitor at the present encampment.

Everything possible has been done to make the week a gala one. Many special features for the entertainment of the veterans and visitors have been arranged, among them being the Battle Above the Clouds," reproduced in fireworks on Lookout Mountain. This spectacle, taking place on the bench or shelf halfway up the side of the mountain, where during the conflict both sides were enveloped in a cloud which obscured the view and prevented the contestants from seeing each other, will be visible for miles from the surrounding country.

Another feature in the fireworks line has been decided upon for Signal Point on Walden's Ridge, north of the city. This point was used as a signal station by the Union army in 1863, and a large signal fire will blaze forth from this point every night during the encampment. The fire will be visible from four States.

Sham Battle a Feature.

Another event will be the sham battle on the field of Chickamauga between regiments of the regular army, concluding at historic Snodgrass Hill, where 50 years ago Generals Thomas, Brannan, Steedman and others checked the advances of the Confederates and saved the Union army.

On Saturday, the last day of the encampment, the survivors of the battle of Chickamauga will meet on the battlefield at 10 o'clock in the morning at a point where the regimental monuments of the Twentieth Brigade of the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps are located.

The call for this meeting was sent out by Adam Foust, president of the Chickamauga Survivors' Association, and the exercises at this spot will be under the direction of this body. The local committee has also arranged to hold exercises on this battlefield, but they will probably be held separately from those held by the association.

Many Confederate survivors of the battle have signified their intention of attending this meeting, and the reunion of the Blue and Gray on the field where 50 years ago they fought each other so bitterly will be a touching bit of sentiment and a memorial to the peace which now unites the once hostile sections into a composite whole.

Greatest Battle of West.

The battlefield of Chickamauga has many points of historic interest. Snodgrass Hill is to Chickamauga what Little Round Top is to Gettysburg. Here the battle reached its height, as a climax to the fierce two days' fighting between the army of the Tennessee and the army of the Cumberland. Although Chickamauga is regarded as one of the decisive battles of the war, it was, like Gettysburg, almost a drawn battle; neither side could rightly claim a victory. And it was not until the following November when the battle of Missionary Ridge took place, that the Confederates were finally driven out of Tennessee and Sherman began his famous march to the sea.

On the third day of the encampment, Governor Benjamin W. Hooper of Tennessee will deliver an address of welcome on behalf of the State. Governor Hooper also delivered a similar address before the Confederate veterans on the occasion of their reunion here last May.

Under orders from the War Department, two full regiments of United States troops are at Fort Oglethorpe, at the entrance to Chickamauga Park. The Eleventh Cavalry is regularly stationed at the fort, and the Seventeenth Infantry has been brought from Fort McPherson, Atlanta.

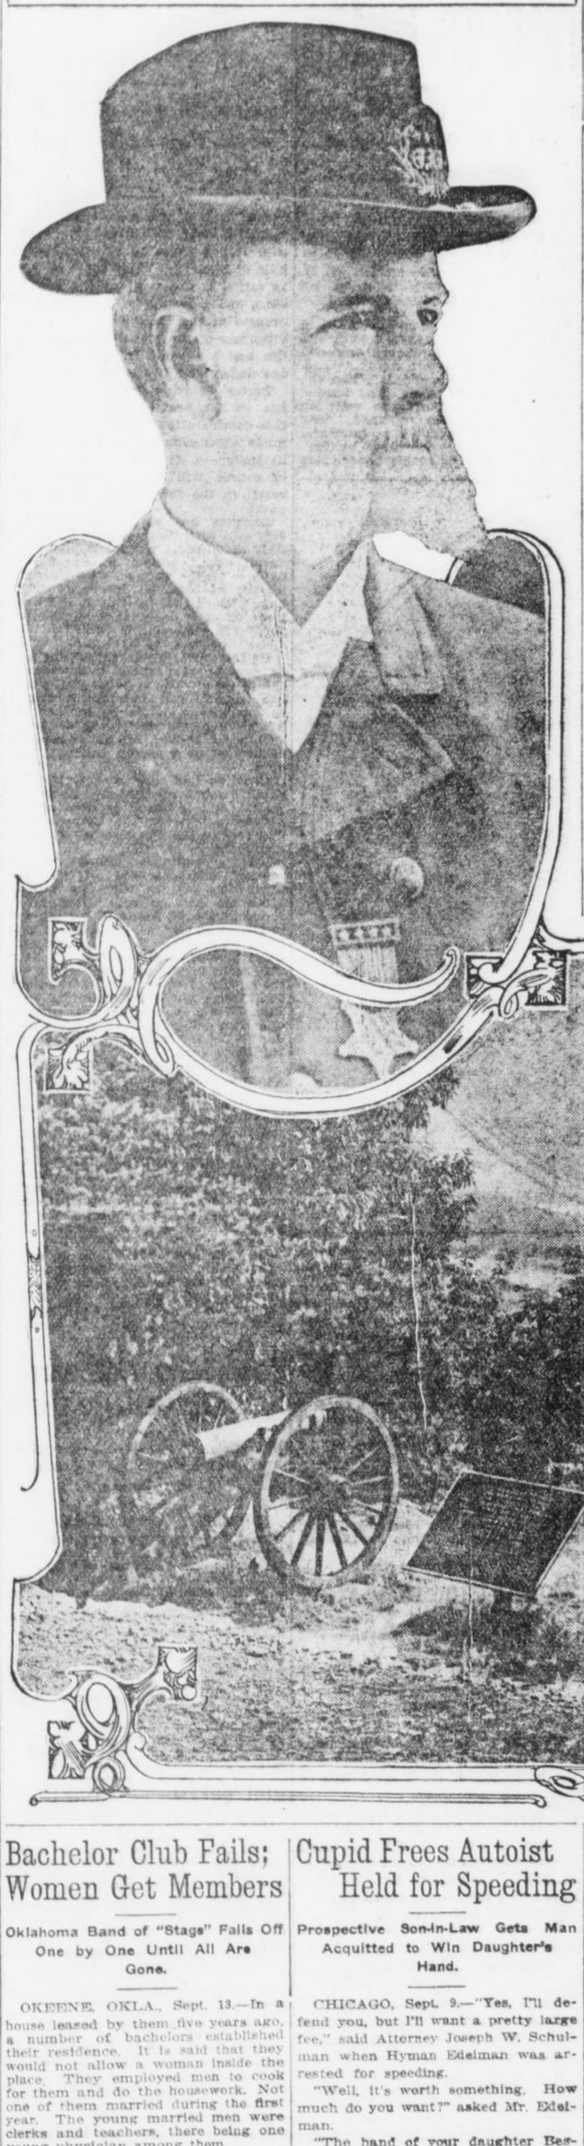
20,000 to Parade.

Although many of the veterans have been enfeebled by age, there are still enough of them who are able to march, to make a strong showing in the monster G. A. R. parade. Every State in the Union will be represented by marching veterans, and it is estimated that at least 20,000 will be in line. The parade will be headed by the officers of the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans, followed by the veterans of each State in a separate division.

Most of the time of the visiting veterans will be taken up by sight-seeing, but one important piece of business will demand their attention. That is the election of a commander-in-chief. The highest official position in the largest organization of veterans in the world is no small honor, and the rivalry for the distinction is quite keen. Five States are preparing to push their candidates and in the short time the veterans have been here there has been much electioneering. When the election comes up there may be other candidates in the field as well, but it is expected that the choice will be made from one of the five.

The department of Indiana has indorsed Comrade O. A. Sommers, a private in the ranks.

Nebraska has entered the lists with Colonel C. E. Adams, a banker and farmer of Superior, Nebr.



Michigan has come to the encampment carrying the flag of the Hon. Washington Gardner, of Albion, the well-known editor-statesman, and enters him as a candidate for the honor.

New Jersey's candidate for the honor is Colonel Ralph D. Cole, a popular Grand Army man, who has a creditable war record.

South Dakota has indorsed Captain N. H. Kingman, of Selby, and has come to Chattanooga determined to land him.

With five strong candidates, said to be the greatest number ever presented before a national encampment, the fight for the honor promises to be spirited and full of interest.

BOY SLAYER OF THREE TO END DAYS IN "PEN"

Psychologists Declare That Lad of Fourteen Is Most Dangerous Inmate of Illinois Prison.

JOLIET, ILL., Sept. 13.—Tousle-haired and undersized, in appearance like scores of other boys who may be found on baseball lots or at the "old swimmin' hole," Hermann Coppes, slayer of the wife and two babes of his benefactor, presents to the State prison officials and criminologists one of the most baffling cases that has ever come to their notice.

Only 14 years of age and sentenced to life imprisonment, the boy is kept in almost solitary confinement, and psychological experts declare the future holds no hope of the boy being transferred to any asylum or winning any liberty or privileges beyond the rules which govern the most desperate and hardened of criminals.

Suffering from an incurable homicidal mania, the child has been declared the most dangerous prisoner in the State prison.

Four months ago the boy killed Mrs. Manny Sleep and her two babes on the Sleep farm near Elgin. For three days he went calmly about his chores and then coolly confessed to the crime and led searchers to a cistern where he had hidden the bodies. He showed no remorse and no fear, not even when he arrived at the State prison, the youngest convict ever admitted to that institution.

Alienists, criminologists and penitentiary officials are agreed that it would be a menace to any community for the boy to be free in it, and that were he sent to an asylum the cunning of his brain would devise some way to satisfy his lust for blood.

"He is a second Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," said one of the guards. "One day he'll be as happy as a kid with a baseball bat. The next day he hangs his head and mopes in his cell."

FIGHTS OCTOPUS FOR 45 MINUTES FAR UNDER SEA

Diver, Over Telephone, Tells Crew Above How Struggle For Life Goes.

SEATTLE, Sept. 13.—Eighty feet under the sea, at Alden Banks, near Anacortes, Puget Sound, Walter McKay, a diver, fought a furious forty-five minutes battle with a devilfish, nine feet in circumference. It was a battel to the death for the man-devouring fish, and while McKay finally won, several times he was on the verge of collapse during the desperate struggle, and more than once announced that he believed he would lose. James E. Hill, who was in charge of the assistants to McKay, tells the story.

During the battle with the octopus, Hill stood with the telephone receiver to his ear, listening to the graphic bulletins given him by the man below engaged in a fight for his life.

All through the battle, Hill, desperate through his inability to help his chief, dripped with cold sweat. The telephones used by divers allow the man underneath to talk to the man on the surface, but the latter can not reply, and the only encouragement Hill could offer to the diver was an occasional tug on the signal line.

The octopus had thrown two tentacles about McKay's body, binding his left arm tightly to his side.

McKay with his right arm drew his knife from his belt. He had to use great caution not to cut his suit.

Finally McKay disentangled himself having to cut away yards of the wire mesh. The devilfish still held a death grip on his left arm. McKay, seeing he could not break the hold, signalled to Hill to haul up Man and monster were pulled to the surface. The fish held on until it was half raised above the surface when it let go, but only to be dragged out dead by Hill and the assistant diver.

McKay collapsed.

Fighter-Evangelist Converts Old Rival

Minister Obeys Dream Command to Erect Altar on Prize Ring Site.

MONTGOMERY, MO., Sept. 13.—An unusual scene, in which there was considerable sentiment manifested, took place at the courthouse entrance here, resulting in the conversion of Jack Swezy, a noted character, and a woman by the name of Mrs. Hays.

About fourteen years ago Roy Hudson was a prize fighter at Montgomery. Finally he got hold of an antagonist who gave him such a beating that he went to Terre Haute.

There he was converted and joined the Methodist Church and became a licensed minister. He says God appeared to him in a dream and told him to come back to Montgomery and hold a revival meeting and show to the people what a transformation had taken place.

He came here a few days ago and began a meeting at the courthouse. Jack Swezy, whom he had the honor of subduing in a fistic encounter, fell on his knees at the courthouse steps and cried for mercy, while the evangelist from Indiana announced to the large audience that he was now seeing his vision and dream fulfilled; that the very man whom he had met in the ring here had been brought to repentance through his efforts.

Woman Licensed as Full Fledged Skipper

Mrs. Mary A. Billings Ambitious to Become Second Officer on Great Liner.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The distinction of being the first woman in New England to whom the United States Government has granted a license to operate a boat run by power fell to the lot of Mrs. Mary A. Billings, of No. 23 Chestnut street, Cambridge, yesterday. After receiving her license, Captain Billings let it be known that "her one ambition now" is to be a second officer aboard one of the trans-Atlantic liners. She is now preparing for the examination required to obtain that class of license.

Captain Billings' boat is the Yarma, and it now rides at its anchorage on river basin. Although now empowered to operate her boat for business purposes, the new skipper hadn't quite made up her mind yesterday whether she will launch the Yarma, a 24-foot boat, carrying a six-horsepower engine, in the merchant marine service or simply use the boat for pleasure.

There are only seven other women in this country licensed by the Government to operate boats run by power.

20 GIRLS RACE IN STAGE COACH; SAVE MAN'S LIFE

Miner Bitten by Rattlesnake Rescued and Taken to the City by Fair Campers.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13.—Twenty girls in a stage coach, thrilling with excitement over a mad dash across hills and canyons in a race with death, arrived in Los Angeles from the Los Angeles Playground Association camp in San Gabriel, bringing in their coach Frederick Robert Hessert, mining engineer, who had been bitten by a 6-foot rattlesnake.

The girls, part of a party of 65 playground campers, had just concluded a most peaceful two weeks' vacation, and were starting hom in their coach and six. A few miles out from Mountain View, their camp, the stage was stopped by Hezekiah Bohanon, a miner, who hastily explained that Hessert had sought help at his camp after being badly bitten by a snake.

Wild Ride, Says Girl.

Greatly excited over the danger to Hessert, the girls assisted Bohanon in getting him into the coach on the seat by the driver. Then the mad ride began.

Miss Evelyn Thon, of No. 1642 Glendale avenue, one of the girls in the coach, declared that the ride was one of the most exciting experiences of her life.

"We girls were all awfully interested in the man, Mr. Hessert, when he got in the coach," she said, "and he told us about the snakebite.

Reptile Six Feet Long.

The snake was about 6 feet long, he said, but it was coiled, and some way or other Mr. Hessert had thought the thing he heard in the bushes nearby was a gopher. He was mining, it seems, at the time. So he was careless an didn't investigate the rustling noise, and as a result the snake bit him in the thumb.

Among other occupants of the stage were Miss Hazel Washburn, Ruth and Julia Martin, Flossie Ramsey, Gladys Talbot and Alma Fanjoy.

USES CORSETS AS WEAPONS IN FIGHT WITH CONDUCTOR

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Mary Newaski, who was arrested Friday evening for hitting a street car conductor with a package of corsets, was fined $50 and costs by Judge Mahoney yesterday. She asked for a jury trial on a charge of larceny, which is also preferred against her. She is charged with having stolen the corsets which were her weapon.

Bachelor Club Fails; Women Get Members

Oklahoma Band of "Stags" Falls Off One by One Until All Are Gone.

OKEENE, OKLA., Sept. 13.—In a house leased by them five years ago, a number of bachelors established their residence. It is said that they would not allow a woman inside the place. They employed men to cook for them and do the housework. Not one of them married during the first year. The young married men were clerks and teachers, there being one young physician among them.

During the second year they began to drop away, two of them being married during that time. In the third year they scattered even more, but new recruits were brought in and the "den" was maintained.

Recently there have been only three of the bachelors left, all the others having married. Three of them have moved away, but they were married before they left Okeene. A week or two ago Louis Hey was married and the two remaining bachelors gave up the house that has been known as the "den." They could not get any others to join them and take the oath.

LONG LOST HEIR OF WEALTHY HERMIT FOUND

AURORA, ILL., Sept. 13.—Frank Robbins, an heir of the estate of the late John Robbins, wealthy Plainfield bachelor farmer and recluse, long believed hidden from the world in a Roman Catholic monastery, has been located at West Melbourne, Australia.

Cupid Frees Autoist Held for Speeding

Prospective Son-in-Law Gets Man Acquitted to Win Daughter's Hand.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—"Yes, I'll defend you, but I'll want a pretty large fee," said Attorney Joseph W. Schulman when Hyman Edelman was arrested for speeding.

"Well, it's worth something. How much do you want?" asked Mr. Edelman.

"The hand of your daughter Bessie."

"I think I can clear you; and you might go to jail, you know," insinuated Schulman.

So finally it was agreed.

Yesterday came the trial. The evidence was so strong that the court prefaced a sentence with the remark that a heavy fine as an example might have a good effect.

Miss Bessie, who sat in court chuckling at her father's plight, grew suddenly grave at this, and whispered to the judge the state of affairs.

"I will not fine this defendant, I parole him to his prospective son-in-law."

LEAN MEN LIVE LONGER.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Sept. 13.—Fat men are more likely to die in middle life, while thin ones are more likely to either die young or live to a ripe old age, according to figures given the medical section of the American Life Insurance Association by Dr. H. A. Baker, of Pittsburg, chairman of that section.

Used One Girl's $60 to Elope With Another

No. 1 Drew Savings From Bank for Railroad Fare, Supposing She Was To Be the Bride.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Miss Rose Lesser, of Yonkers, being persuaded by Alexander Manscher to agree to elope with him, drew $60 of her savings from a bank and intrusted the money to his care.

He left her ostensibly to buy railroad tickets, and when he did not return she became suspicious and asked police aid. He was found and arrested in Providence, R. I., having eloped there with 17-year-old Pauline Deyhan, also of Yonkers.

Blind Postman's Girl to Ride With Him

Miss Jessie Wilson Sees That Postoffice Department Rule Is Lifted for Her.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The little blind daughter of Mail Carrier Sherry at Mandale, Ohio, may ride with her father over his rural free delivery route, although a postoffice regulation expressly forbids it, because Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, interceded for the child, and got Postmaster General Burleson to issue a special permit.

Jessie Columbia, 13 years old, of Cleveland, spent her vacation this year with her grandfather, the postmaster at Mandale, and saw the blind girl's plight. She wrote Miss Wilson of how little Miss Sherry longed to ride on her father's mail cart, and an appeal to the Postmaster General was followed to-day by an order waiving in this case the regulation which forbids that anyone but a carrier shall ride on a mail wagon.

Society Revelers Climb Into Windows

Only Way Ardent 'Trotters' Could Get Into Club to Finish Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

BAR HARBOR, MAINE, Sept. 13.—The liveliest whirl that the smart contingent has indulged in for years took place following a subscription ball at the Malvern—when the turkey trotters still wanted to trot.

When the time came for turning out the lights in the Malvern ballroom—and Proprietor Brob insisted the rule must be obeyed—Edgar Scott invited the whole bunch over to his "trottery," the Swimming Club.

The revelers had to climb in the windows, but they got in, the ladies being judiciously aided by the men in negotiating the high places.

After dancing, with gay music, until dawn, the crowd wound up at one of the cottages for a badly needed rest.

PERSONALITY OUTLIVES LIFE, SAYS SCIENTIST

Sir Oliver Lodge Declares That Psychic Region Can Be Studied Effectively.

EXISTENCE RESEMBLES LOOM

Intercourse Across the Chasm of Death May Be Gradually Attained, He Asserts.

Special Cable to The American.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, Sept. 13.—"I am one of those who think that the methods of science are not so limited in scope as has been thought, that they can be applied much more widely and that the psychic region can be studied and brought under law, too."

So declared the learned Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, in his address at the opening of the association's meeting here today.

And again the erudite president said:

"Already the facts examined have convinced me that memory and affection are not limited to that association with matter by which alone they can manifest themselves here and now, and that personality persists beyond personal death."

So, despite his denial that he would invade the psychic region in his address Sir Oliver did enter it, but he watched his every step, guarded his every word.

"Keystone of Evolution."

Said he to his great audience:

"If we have learned from science that evolution is real, we have learned a great deal. Surely evolution is not an illusion; surely the universe progresses in time. Time and space and matter are abstractions, but are none the less real; they are data given by experience; and time is the keystone of evolution.

"I see the whole of material existence as a steady passage from past to future, only the single instant which we call the present being actual. The past is not non-existent, however; it is stored in our memories; there is a record of it in matter, and the present is based upon it; the future is the outcome of the present and is the product of evolution.

Life Is Like a Loom.

"Existence is like the output from a loom. The pattern, the design for the weaving, is in some sort 'there' already; but whereas our looms are mere machines, once the guiding cards have been fed into them, the Loom of Time is complicated by a multitude of free agents who can modify the web. * * *

"Either we are immortal beings or we are not. We may not know our destiny, but we must have a destiny of some sort. Those who make denials are just as likely to be wrong as those who make assertions; in fact, denials are assertions thrown into negative form.

"Scientific men are looked up to as authorities and should be careful not to mislead. Science may not be able to reveal human destiny, but it certainly should not obscure it. Things are as they are, whether we find them out or not.

Asks for a Fair Trial.

"Allow us, anyhow, to make the attempt. Give us a fair field. Let those who prefer the materialistic hypothesis by all means develop their thesis as far as they can; but let us try what we can do in the psychical region and see which wins.

"Our methods are really the same as theirs—the subject matter differs. Neither should we abuse the other for making the attempt.

"In justice to myself and my coworkers I must leave on record our conviction that occurrences now regarded as occult can be explained and reduced to order by the methods of science carefully and persistently applied," said Sir Oliver, on whom universities have showered honorary degrees.

"The evidence, to my mind, goes to prove that discarnate intelligence, under certain conditions, may interact with us on the material side, thus indirectly coming within our scientific ken; and that gradually we may hope to attain some understanding of the nature of a larger, perhaps the real, existence, and of the conditions regulating intercourse across the chasm."

Newport Belle Again Dodges Cupid

Father Denies Troth Fourth Time

Young Belmont Latest Victim

Miss Margaret Andrews, beautiful daughter of Paul A. Andrews and most-reported-to-be-engaged girl in America.

Most-Reported-To-Be-Engaged Girl in United States Still Reigns Supreme.

NEWPORT, Sept. 13.—For the fourth time Paul A. Andrews, possessor of millions and a surpassingly attractive daughter, has wearily penned a note to the public. It is the same note every time with but the only difference that each bears the name of a different young man coupled with that of beautiful Margaret Andrews, the surpassingly attractive daughter hitherto mentioned.

This last note was a denial that Miss Andrews was engaged to Morgan Belmont, son of August Belmont. One before that had its mission in telling the world that Miss Andrews was not engaged to Harold Vanderbilt. Before that it was Herman Oelrichs. And the first one was Vincent Astor.

And Miss Margaret is but 19, and her second year out. She is the most-reported-to-be-engaged girl in the Newport set. Rumor has coupled her name so often and so sincerely with one youth after another of the gilded set that it would seem Rumor would lose its reputation for veracity. For each time the gossip has fallen flat, under the emphatic little card from Father Andrews.

Young Belmont Attentive.

This last time all Newport thought the pursuit of beautiful Margaret Andrews over. Morgan Belmont was most assiduous in his attentions. The things he told Miss Andrews and the manner in which he told them didn't seem to make her a bit angry. They were together much of the time. And so, in Society's mind, it was all settled. Until came the note from Mr. Andrews.

The affair has served merely to increase the score of Miss Andrews as the most-reported-to-be-engaged girl for her years. She is just 19, and they say her head is not turned a bit. And she is well worth while in other ways, being beautiful, slender, lively and a daring motorist, rider, swimmer, tennis player and all that.

From the moment she first entered the gayety of the younger set she has been courted. Several years ago, when she was very young, indeed, and before she had made her debut, Vincent Astor noticed her. He was then a freshman at Harvard, and morning, noon and night found him at the side of the dainty girl. But she was very young then, and Society's gossip of their engagement did not bear much conviction.

Herman Oelrichs Ardent.

Vincent Astor, the suitor, was somewhat distant, somewhat superior, somewhat open in his attitude of being the richest youth. Miss Andrews' next suitor, however, was as ardent as could be desired. He was Herman Oelrichs, not quite as rich as Vincent Astor, but wealthy enough at that. Then it was Harold Vanderbilt, who courted in a warm, orthodox fashion himself.

But of them all, Morgan Belmont was the most attentive, the most tireless, the most devoted. And Society believes that is the reason Father Andrews' note of denial bore so emphatic and conclusive a tone. He probably was perturbed a bit himself.

Miss Andrews, the object of all this gossip, is with it all the most popular girl in Newport. She is never bored, never listless, never indifferent. In so far as that goes, she is different. Therefore, she has more than her share of attention, and no girl who gets attention can hope to escape the gossip. Hence the reports, and hence the weary job of Father Andrews in penning his notes to the public.

ELOPERS ARE MARRIED AFTER NIGHT IN JAIL

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Sept. 13.—After being in jail overnight, Chester R. Schlatter, of Chicago, an employee of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Bernie E. Martin, aged 17, of Bloomingdale, were married by the Rev. Paul C. Cusnick. Schlatter was visiting in Bloomingdale when the elopement was planned. They left for Chicago after the wedding.

MASHERS PUT TO FLIGHT BY WOMAN'S FIST

Pair of Men Routed When Young Matron Resents Their Approach With Blows.

LOGANSPORT, IND., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Jessie James stood on a corner in the business district to-day conversing with her father, John Gingaman, and near by, gazing at her, were grouped five mashers. Mrs. James bade her father good-bye and started away.

"Oh, you chicken! Busy?" cried one of the group.

Wheeling around, Mrs. James stepped back to the group, and smilingly inquired, "Who spoke?"

One of the crowd stepped out and asked: "Where you going?"

Mrs. James slammed her fist against his face and he staggered. Before he could recover she struck again, a fair, straight blow, which put him to the sidewalk.

Then she rushed upon the other four, who crowded against a building. Her attack was so unexpected and forceful that the quartet had felt the effects of her fists before one of them fought back and knocked Mrs. James across the sidewalk and against a mail box.

She stooped, grabbed a loose paving brick and let it fly. It landed on the head of the man she had knocked down, and who had risen and was running away. The others followed and boarded an outgoing interurban car.

From the corner to the place where they took the car a trail of blood marked the passing of the one against whose head Mrs. James' brick collided.

"Sometimes I carry a gun," said Mrs. James to the crowd that gathered about her. "I am glad I did not have it to-day. Hereafter I will carry it, and if I am addressed as I was to-day I'll kill the man who does it."

Wife Asks $50,000 For Husband's Loss

Colorado Women Files Sensational Damage Suit Against Her Parents-In-Law.

GEORGETOWN, COLO., Sept. 13. Robert and Isadore Nimme, wealthy residents of Idaho Springs, have been made defendants in an alienation suit filed in the district court of Clear Creek County by Jennie May Nimme, their daughter-in-law. Judgment is asked in the sum of $25,000 and $25,000 punitive damages.

Mrs. Nimme the younger alleges in her complaint, which is rather sensational in its wording, that the defendants poisoned the mind of their son Henry against her, causing him to finally drive her from home. She further charges that they have on various occasions beaten and bruised her, all of which she contends has "caused her much mental anguish and bodily injury."

History Study Scored By School President

Indiana Solon Says World Events Are Too "High-Brow" for Youthful Minds.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 13.—History is one of the most useless subjects taught in the common schools, in the opinion of W. W. Parsons, president of the Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute.

President Parsons says he bases his thoughts about history on the necessary reaction on the part of a person acquiring historical knowledge. To make his words clear, he said the mind of a child, and even that of an older person, can not grasp the magnitude of the battle of Gettysburg or similar events, which are the more important history lessons.

Despite his opinion, President Parsons did not advocate less history in the grade schools or any change in the system of teaching that branch.

Suffragists Scoff "Adamless Eden"

Denver Women Voters Admit That They Do Not Possess Spinster Spirits.

DENVER, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Kate T. Wolsey, of New York, who has offered to subscribe $500,000 to found a college of women that would be a real Adamless Eden, need expect no help in her project from Denver women.

"I am going to the colony when it is organized," announced State Senator Helen Ring Robinson, "to write an article about it, not to stay. I might stand it a little while. I could bear having men around less, but I like to see them at dinner sometimes. An Adamless Eden might be an interesting experiment, but I'm sure it would not be an interesting place to live in, at least, not to me. There are women who have 'spinster souls;' they can live without the society of men and not be unhappy. I frankly admit I have not a 'spinster soul.'"

Police Get Burglar Pausing to "Primp"

Robber Is Donning Stolen Raiment When Neighbors Notice Him and Give Alarm

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Stopping for half an hour to "primp" before a mirror and adorn himself in raiment he was preparing to steal caused the undoing of Thomas Kennedy, arrested on a charge of burglary in a home in the fashionable South Side residence district after a revolver battle with three policemen.

Kennedy forgot to pull down the blinds. Neighbors called the police. Several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry had been collected in a bundle by the intruder.

HAWAIIAN LINERS PLAN FREQUENT TRIPS TO PANAMA

Company Will Send Big Vessels Through Canal Every 36 Hours, It Is Announced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company will send a steamship through the Panama Canal every 36 hours next year, and that instead of sailing every five days they will send their vessels out every three days, was part of the program announced here to-day by the company.

The statement was provoked because an issued report stated that the American-Hawaiian line was considerably "overbuilt."

In answer the company stated that it requires a year to complete a steamship, and they have thus far launched four of their new fleet of eight big cargo carriers. The others will go into service in March, 1914, by which time it is expected the canal will be ready for use.

The statement of the company follows:

"The fact of having excess tonnage far ahead of the opening of the canal does not disconcert us and the American-Hawaiian line is proud of the fact that their fleet with a capacity of 270,000 tons will be ready in time. When the canal route is used we shall maintain a schedule of one steamer sailing from New York every three days.

"It is true that we have chartered the American and the California to the American and Cuban Steamship Company and we believe these steamships will make several trips to Brazil. These are the ships we constructed when the company was feeling its way, and their arrival in the South American ports will place on view the American flag, the lack of which in foreign waters has been commented on many times."

Greeley Coach Will Make One More Trip

Ancient Vehicle That Hauled Editor, Brete Harte and Mark Twain Will Reappear.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—When California makes merry at the Portola Festival next October, in this city, a post of honor in the parade will be given to "Charlie McLean No. 1"—a stage coach with a place in the history of the State.

This coach is a link with the period of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. According to Honn. from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in bullion has been transported in it. Black Bart, Joaquin Murietta and Vasquez halted it in their heyday or were defied by its messengers. It still carries bullet holes.

It was in the "Charlie McLean" that Horace Greeley made his noted ride to keep a lecturing engagement at Placerville, when the name wasn't Placerville, but Hangtown. Sam Clemens was its passenger many times when, in his newspaper days, he covered the Nevada Legislature at Carson City.

Buys Whole Town and the Landscape

Hotel Keeper Will Take Over Entire California Hamlet for a Summer Resort.

CHICO, CAL., Sept. 13.—Not satisfied with owning property in Chico worth a fortune, Jack Murphy, owner of the Western Hotel, has bought a whole town, Burney Valley, and the adjoining landscape.

The purchase includes the picturesque pioneer village, located in Northwestern Shasta County, near the celebrated Burney Falls, and 800 acres around the place. The town consists of five residences, two hotels, a store, blacksmith shop, postoffice, granaries, barns and a building or two where there used to be saloons before the interior of the county went dry. He got the whole outfit for something over $50,000.

Murphy will raise stock on the land and convert the town into a summer resort.

This practice has been declared illegal by H. E. Barnard, State Commissioner of Weights and Measures, and he is preparing a pamphlet on the subject to be distributed among the small town shopkeepers.

Love Preceptor Seeks Divorce

Lillian Bell's Advice Fails

Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, former Atlanta and first aid to Cupid, who seeks divorce.

Famous Author of Matrimonial Essays Sues for Freedom from Young Chicago Husband.

Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, famous author, in the days when she still was Miss Lillian Bell, of Atlanta, indorsed a cynical bit of advice. It was:

"Marry early, and if the circumstances permit—often."

Now Mrs. Bogue is an inconsistent person, as you will come to know. She forgot what she had written, at least the last part of it, married Arthur Hoyt Bogue, a young Chicago man seven years her junior, and vowed undying love.

Later she recollected, and wrote:

"What is marriage for, anyway? Is it built on anything but selfishness? And if so, is it surprising that it fails? The wonder to me is that so many hold."

And now she is seeking a divorce from her husband.

Considered Love Expert.

Her divorce suit has created something of a stir in literary circles, because Mrs. Bogue professed to be an authority on matters pertaining to love and marriage. But the courses of erotic experts sometimes go awry, it seems.

Under the name of Lillian Bell she wrote miles upon miles of pseudo advice and instruction upon the relation of sex to sex. One of her pet theories was a "college for lovers," in which she would establish courses in "How to manage a clever woman," "How to keep your wife in love with you," "How to develop your wife's personality," and all that. It is notable that most of her advice went out to men.

Through it all her writings were a strange mixture of sentiment and a cynicism, with more of the latter than the former, perhaps, just as her career has been a strange mixture of happiness and sadness. Altogether, she is inconsistent. For instance:

"No man under 35 is fit for marriage. Younger than that, men are stupid, egotistical and boorish."

When she wrote that she was 33. Within a few months she met, loved and married Arthur Hoyt Bogue, just 25 years old, a Chicago real estate man.

"Of course," she explained it, "I do not really believe all the things I wrote. That article was merely the result of a conversation with a magazine editor."

Another proof of her inconsistency: Miss Lillian Bell laughed at the suitor who did too much suing. She said the man must take what he wants, after the manner of the old cave dweller.

Compelling Power Wins.

"It needs a compelling, not a persuasive power, to win a woman," said she. "No man who takes me like this can have me," and she gently touched together her forefinger and thumb. "He must take me like this," and she clenched her fist.

Then she married. To all appearances; that is, to judge from appearances as she presents them. Mr. Bogue was anything but the character of forcefulness.

"My husband has never earned a living for me since we were married," she said in an interview the other day. "I have supported him and our daughter for the last ten years."

Mrs. Bogue, it seems, has not the ability to abide by her own precept, nor to persuade her own husband to accept her advice.

Too bad, too. She had much advice to give, especially along the lines that had to do with man and maid. All she wrote was on that sentimental subject of love, courtship and marriage: "The Love Affairs of an Old Maid," for instance, and "From a Girl's Point of View" and dozens of articles of the same tone.

Mrs. Bogue says her husband is a drunkard and worthless. If so, she can hardly be blamed. Mr. Bogue says his wife is fanatical and intolerant. If so—but this is not brief of their affair. It is merely a revelation of the fact that Mrs. Lillian Bell Bogue, estimable author, preceptor of lovers and wedded folk, is an inconsistent philosopher, and a teacher without the ability of self-instruction. Also, it might illustrate the fallacy of setting one's self up as an authority on matters of love, courtship and marriage.

Boy Twice Struck By Lightning Bolt

Knocked From Wagon, He Recovers and Goes Home, To Be Hit Again on Doorstep.

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 13.—Royal Danner, aged 15, after being knocked unconscious from a delivery wagon by a bolt of lightning yesterday, recovered sufficiently to reach his home, but as he started up the front porch steps he was felled by a second bolt. He quickly recovered, however, and is little the worse to-day for the double shock.

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

(From The Family Physician.)

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or in advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had of any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes on gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Advt.

U. S. RESTORING GAME ANIMALS IN VAST PRESERVE

In the Wichita Park of 70,000 Acres Great Care Is Taken to Perpetuate Them.

FORT SILL, OKLA., Sept. 13.—In the Wichita National Game Preserve, ten to fifteen miles west of Fort Sill, the United States Government has undertaken to restore and perpetuate the useful wild game animals and the wild game birds that abounded in the Southwest in frontier days.

This was the natural range of the buffalo, the elk, the deer and the antelope. All have been brought back to the preserve, which contains nearly 70,000 acres. Frank Rush, an experienced plainsman, is warden of the preserve.

In March, 1905, the New York Zoological Society sent a herd of six male and nine female buffalo to the preserve. The herd has increased to forty fine full-blooded specimens.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, the noted naturalist, predicts that by 1918 the herd will number a hundred.

Eleven prong-horned antelope arrived from Yellowstone Park in 1911. The antelope is wild and timid, and four died from the long railroad journey. Later five more died. A fine buck and a fine doe survived, and Warden Rush is confident that they will grow into a herd.

A herd of twelve elk is thriving. The native white-tailed deer is rapidly increasing and now numbers possibly 200.

"What is the best medicine in the world besides whisky?"

"Can you tell whether a man is married or single by the drink he orders?"

"Which is considered best to remove a whisky breath—cloves or another drink?"

Western Farm Lassies Compete With Each Other in Getting Up Cheapest Meals.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13.—The Tomato Club, founded by Mrs. J. K. Turner among a group of farm girls in Geauga County, and the recent attack on the high cost of living on the farm, also led by Mrs. Turner, have attracted the attention of the United States Government.

Miss Ilena May Bailey, of the farm management office of the Department of Agriculture, is at the Turner farm, near Chardon, to investigate the work being done. Miss Bailey is interested particularly in the contest among farm women to prepare the best and most economical meals in the farmhouse for the month of August.

NOT ONE STALL IN CITY MARKET IN GOOD SHAPE

Chairman of Health Committee of Savannah Council Finds All Places Insanitary.

LAWS ARE OPENLY VIOLATED

Says Conditions Are Revolting and Can Not Be Eliminated With Broom and Water.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—In company with a State inspector, Dr. John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of City Council, has made another inspection of the city market, and, to use his own language, "found that not a single stall was sanitary or could be made so."

"It is a disgrace to Savannah, not to mention the menace it is to the public health," declared Dr. Daniel. "The dealers are openly violating the health laws. They seem not to pay the slightest attention to even the simplest rules of sanitation, or even common decency. The situation is one which should be remedied at once.

"The revolting conditions I found can not be eliminated with a broom and a little water. The whole market must be given a thorough cleaning. New equipment must be installed. The dealers must be required to disinfect their refrigerators. Not in any way are the stalls in the market sanitary.

Jeopardize Health.

"People are jeopardizing their health when they eat meat that comes from the city market. It is better not to eat meat at all than to buy it there. That a great deal of unsound meat is sold there is a fact of which we have undisputed proof. The State inspector who went with me confiscated a quantity of sausage, some veal and some beef tongues, all of which were unfit for human consumption.

"Some of the dealers admit that they were using preservatives on their meats. This is distinctly prohibited by State law. I intend to see that the City Health Department co-operates with the State authorities and enforces the laws. I am going to see that the market is cleaned up, if such a thing is possible.

"To my mind, the most important duty before the present administration is to see that the city market is improved. Before we build an auditorium or do anything else we should see that conditions at the market are remedied. It will cost some money, but it will be money well spent. I think anyone who will make an inspection of the market will agree with me with what I have said about conditions there."

Dr. Daniel says that the present force of health inspectors is not sufficient to see that the laws are properly enforced. Under the present arrangements it is impossible to inspect the meat stalls in the city market and elsewhere in the city, he says.

Failure on the part of the slaughter houses and butchers to comply with suggestions recently made to them through the sanitary board by the State Department will result in P. A. Methvin, State Pure Food Inspector, making another trip from Atlanta to Savannah next week.

Inspector Methvin in Savannah.

Some weeks ago Inspector Methvin visited Savannah and found the sanitary conditions of many of the markets and slaughter houses far from satisfactory. In a number of markets he found that tainted meats were being offered for sale. Several of the slaughter houses were practically condemned because of their filthy and insanitary surroundings.

The Department of Agriculture filed its report with the Savannah health officer, hoping that this organization would take up the matter and see that the conditions were remedied. This has not been done, however, according to a report which has been sent forward by Louis Garfunkel, the State inspector here. Inspector Methvin will therefore make another investigation.

It is probable that City Council will be asked for an appropriation sufficient to remodel the city market and eliminate all of the present insanitary conditions. The chief engineer will be asked to prepare an estimate of the cost and give some idea of the improvements that should be made. That the market is in an unsatisfactory condition is agreed upon by the committee.

Woman Smoker Shocks Savannah

Calmly Puffed Cigarette as She Rode Down Street in Carriage. Stopped by Police.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Motorcycle Officer Berner took a look at a hack moving down the street, gasped, took another look and then started chugging after the vehicle. When he overtook it, he hailed a well-dressed woman who sat in the hack calmly puffing a cigarette. The motorcycle cop remonstrated.

"Why," said the woman, "I smoke all the time when I'm home, and nobody objects."

NEW HIGH PRICE LEVEL FOR COTTON

Savannah Spot Market Expected to Reach 14 Cents Pound in Near Future.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The local spot cotton market has established a new high price level for the new season. There are many of the trade who firmly believe that the quotations will go to 14 cents at least within the next few weeks.

The farmers who are able to get their supplies to market early will probably fare well. There is an unmistakable eagerness for supplies manifested among the rank and file of the buyers.

The free on board quotation has also moved up, and the farmer or dealer who elects to sell his stands at interior points on this basis is also securing a gilt-edge price.

It will be only a few weeks now before the wharves and docks and storage sheds will assume their wonted activity. The charter list of vessels at Savannah for various foreign ports is showing a steady increase.

Columbus Agog Over Water Bond Contest

Municipal Ownership Club Opposes Water Company in Hottest Fight in Ten Years.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—The war between advocates and opponents of waterworks bonds goes merrily on. The election will be held October 18, and the registration books will close September 27.

The Municipal Ownership Club is conducting the fight for bonds, while the waterworks company is opposing. The opposition is not willing for the present city government to select the site and have complete control of the bond funds. It is the hottest campaign waged in Columbus in ten years.

PLUNGES 100 FEET, BUT WILL RECOVER

Hindu Falls Headforemost From Smokestack in Savannah. Both Wrists Broken.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—While at work on a smokestack 100 feet in the air at the Atlantic Coast Line docks, Vangaather Cooley, a Hindu, lost his footing and plunged to the ground below.

Both wrists were broken, one knee and his right arm broken, one hip dislocated, and he was hurt about the head. It is said he has a chance to recover.

Other workmen saw Cooley slipping from the high smokestack, on which a new cover was being put. They shouted a warning. The Hindu made frantic efforts to save himself, but in vain. He shot headforemost into space.

He was taken to the United States Marine Hospital for treatment.

Thought Delirious Man Was a Ghost

Fever Patient Escapes From Savannah Hospital Dressed Only in Night Shirt.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A ghostly presence startled the residents in the neighborhood of the Georgia Infirmary on two nights this week.

A white, blurred figure, flitting silently from shadow to shadow, gave superstitious spectators a thrill and awakened startled curiosity in those not afflicted with a belief in the supernatural. The police were summoned.

The mystery was exploded when the officers arrived in an automobile and identified the ghost as a patient who had escaped from the infirmary.

In the absence of his nurse a fever patient slipped out of a window and went his way. He was clothed in his nightshirt.

DYNAMITE CAR RUNS WILD AND HITS ENGINE

When Explosion Doesn't Occur Negroes Refuse to Unload Car. Engineer and Fireman Jump.

BRUNSWICK, Sept. 13.—Engineer Fred Girvin and his fireman faced death here when a runaway box car loaded with dynamite collided with their locomotive. Despite the heavy jar, the dynamite failed to explode, and superstition regarding it suddenly developed among the negro laborers, who have refused to unload it.

Girvin operates a locomotive on the Georgia Coast and Piedmont Railroad at the Dent plantation. The runaway car broke loose from a train on a slight grade on the plantation spur and started toward Girvin's engine. Other trainmen called a warning to Girvin and his fireman, but the car collided with their locomotive before they could jump.

The freight car was nearly torn from its trucks, but an explosion failed to follow. The negro laborers who were preparing to unload the car took to the woods and absolutely refused to return to their task.

That the dynamite did not explode from the jar is regarded as miraculous by men on the plantation who are accustomed to handling the explosive.

Automobile Truck For Sumter Roads

Combination Dumping Car and Traction Engine—Takes Place of Dozen Mules.

AMERICUS, Sept. 13.—The Sumter County Commissioners have closed a trade for a five-ton automobile truck. It will be added to the road machinery and put to work immediately.

The truck is a combination dumping car and traction engine. It is equipped with a set of beams that make it possible to pull three or four road scrapes at the same time. It is figured that the auto will take the place of at least a dozen of the county mules.

Candler to Dedicate Church at Columbus

St. Luke's Congregation Has Many Wealthy Members and Long Missionary History.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, will be in Columbus to-morrow and will preach the dedicatory sermon of St. Luke's Methodist Church, which is one of the leaders in this entire section, both from a standpoint of numbers and finances.

This church has a highly interesting history. Dr. Young J. Allen, the great Methodist missionary, was admitted to the South Georgia conference there in 1852, and was later sent as a missionary to China, at a conference held in the same church.

Boys Form Ladder To Enter Toy Store

Children Tell Police That Love of Playthings Prompted Their Taking Them.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A love for toys led four boys to break into a toy shop in Whitaker street. Their names were docketed at police headquarters.

According to the story told the officers, the children were overcome by their longing to possess some of the things exhibited in the shop window. They therefore formed a human ladder to secure the coveted prizes. The oldest boy took one of the younger lads upon his shoulders, from which vantage point the youthful marauder broke the window and dragged forth such things as his hands could reach.

SAVANNAH METHODISTS TO GREET BISHOP CANDLER

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The Methodists of Savannah are to tender a reception to Right Rev. Warren D. Candler, of Atlanta, when he comes to Savannah this fall.

All the Methodists in Savannah are expected to join in the plans for the reception and entertainment of the distinguished visitor, who has not been in Savannah for several years. Bishop Candler will deliver an address while here, and it is probable that a banquet will be arranged in his honor.

COTTON RECEIPTS ARE HEAVY AT VALDOSTA

VALDOSTA, Sept. 13.—Cotton receipts here have been very heavy this week, and despite the rather poor price for sea islands, there does not seem to be any disposition to hold the crop back. Every farmer seems anxious to get his cotton to market as soon as ginned, and to sell it at once. No. 1 sea islands is now bringing about 20c a pound.

CREDITORS TO BE PAID IN FULL, SAYS BANKER

American Naval Stores Company to Pay Every Penny, Is Optimistic View Expressed.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—"Belief which was always entertained by those having an intimate knowledge of affairs and conditions, that the unsecured creditors of the American Naval Stores Company would receive every penny due them in due course of time, has crystallized into a definite certainty.

"The time when the final details of the big corporation are wound up and the enterprise dissolved depends wholly on the condition of the money market, the time when new capital can be secured to finance the Union Naval Stores Company in the payment of its notes due to the American Naval Stores Company. The final dissolution is expected to take place shortly after the first of the year."

This is the statement of a prominent Savannah banker, head of one of the institutions involved in the suspension of business on the part of the American. He was very optimistic in his view of the situation, and expressed it as his belief that the final business of the big concern would be wound up before spring of the coming year at the very latest.

Unsecured Creditors.

"There is nothing new in the belief," he continued, "on the part of the creditors of the American Naval Stores Company that the unsecured creditors will receive every penny due them. This has been the view held by them since just a few days after the suspension took place, following an investigation into the affairs of the concern.

"The present situation is that the Union Naval Stores Company was the producing end of the American Naval Stores enterprise. Notes for a million and a half dollars were held by the American Naval Stores Company, given by the Union Naval Stores Company. While the Union Naval Stores Company was a part or subsidiary concern of the American, the Union Naval Stores Company is and has always been absolutely solvent.

"But it takes a long time for even the biggest of concerns to raise a million and a half dollars, and with the money market in its present condition such a thing is even harder than it would be ordinarily."

Prominent Crawfordville Lawyer Suffers From Unusual Cause at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

GREENSBORO, Sept. 13.—Unusual symptoms have developed in the operation upon J. A. Beazley, a prominent lawyer of Crawfordville, at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. For several years Mr. Beazley has been a sufferer from stomach trouble, and when the operation took place it was found that inflammation of the stomach has caused the intestines to adhere.

Since the physicians operated they are afraid to sew up the incision across the stomach for fear adhesion will continue if the cause is not removed. The wound will be kept open so the inflammation can be cured.

Escaped Lunatic Runs 14 Miles From 'Devils and Dogs'

Savannah Officers Capture Man Who Was Almost Exhausted, but Insisted on Continuing Race.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—D. S. Rutland, a white man, who is thought to be an escaped inmate of the asylum for the insane at Milledgeville, had run fourteen miles from devils and dogs when officers of the county met him on the Ogeechee road.

Rutland wore no shoes and showed every evidence of having traveled a great distance. He told the officers he had run to Savannah from the place where he encountered the dogs and devils. He assured the officers that his pursuers were still hot on his trail, and insisted on continuing his flight.

Rutland told the officers he had escaped from the Milledgeville Asylum. He said he would rather go to the penitentiary for life than to return there.

He Held Three Aces; Refused to Lay Down Hand When Raided

Savannah Poker Player Held On to Cards When Officers Entered and Broke Up Game.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Even the appearance of the police was not sufficient to cause C. G. Murray to cast aside a hand containing "three aces" when a room over the Stag Hotel, where the police believed gambling was going on, was raided.

Men were seated around the table when the police entered the room. All quickly threw down their hands with the exception of Murray. An officer instructed him to toss aside his hand, too.

"No," the player remonstrated; "I've got three aces—it's a good hand."

The players were arrested.

Tars Marooned as Trousers Are Stolen

Sailors In Savannah Unable to Return to Ship When Apparel Is Missed.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Three solicitous comrades led a pair of extremely sleepy bluejackets to a room in the Belmont Hotel where the two erstwhile merrymakers went peacefully to sleep, and their comrades departed. After a time they returned to the hotel and awakened the sleepy pair for return to their ship.

But they didn't depart. The reason for the delay was that neither custom nor the ordinances of the city of Savannah approve of a man's appearing on the streets without his trousers. And these highly necessary parts of the apparel of the weary sailors had been abstracted as they slept.

The police were asked to aid in the search for the missing trousers. After a long and exhaustive quest the garments were found hidden in a bureau drawer in the room. The pockets had been depleted of coin.

'Boy Burglar' Admits To Seven Robberies

Teasdale Calmly Pleads Guilty to Charges When Arraigned Before Savannah Recorder.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—With the same frankness that has characterized his demeanor since his arrest, William Teasdale, alias W. F. Palmer, the Jacksonville "boy burglar," pleaded guilty to seven charges of burglary at his preliminary hearing in Police Court, and was held by Recorder Schwarz for trial in the Superior Court.

Teasdale was arrested after a report had been made to headquarters that a young man was trying to dispose of certain articles at a suspiciously low price. This report was made by M. J. Bettencourt, who kept the young man under surveillance and was of assistance to the police in locating him.

No Aid for Harrison From Rich 'Brother'

Charges Accumulate Against St. Petersburg 'Doctor' Arrested in Atlanta on Check Charge.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—The preliminary hearing of Dr. M. L. Harrison, of St. Petersburg, for passing worthless checks, and who was arrested in Atlanta at the request of Columbus officers, will take place Monday morning.

When an officer returned from Atlanta with the "doctor," the latter wired a "wealthy brother" in Clearwater, but the rich brother is apparently a myth, for nothing has been heard from him.

If the charges here are settled, there are requests filed with Sheriff Beard from Sparta, Ga.; Marianna, Fla., and other points, asking the Muscogee Sheriff to hold Harrison, as he is wanted in those places on charges of cheating and swindling.

METHODIST STEWARDS OF SAVANNAH ORGANIZE

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—The boards of stewards of the Methodist churches in Savannah propose to organize themselves into a union for social and fraternal development. Committees have been appointed with power to perfect an organization. These committees will meet in joint session at Epworth Church next Thursday evening.

The idea was first suggested by the presiding elder of the district, the Rev. W. F. Smith, who briefly outlined the many benefits of such an organization.

SAVANNAHANS TO VOTE ON BONDS FOR AUDITORIUM

Election To Be Held Monday on $200,000 Issue—1,000 Votes Necessary to Carry.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—Savannah will vote Monday on the question of issuing $200,000 of bonds with which to finance the erection of a proposed city auditorium.

The issue of bonds is an administration measure. It has the indorsement of the Chamber of Commerce and trades bodies. Considerable interest is being manifested in the proposition, with very little open opposition.

Plans have been completed for polling the 1,000 votes necessary to authorize Council to provide for the issue. Half a dozen telephones have been installed in the Chamber of Commerce and a squad of girls employed for the purpoes will call every voter who has a telephone on Monday and remind him to vote.

It is necessary for two-thirds of the total number registered to vote in favor of the project before the bonds can be issued. There are 1,681 registered voters. Of these, 191 are disqualified for failure to pay their taxes. It is estimated that there will be 1,500 registered and qualified to vote. At least 1,000, therefore, must vote in favor of the auditorium before the bonds can be issued.

Sponsors of Movement.

The movement to build the auditorium is sponsored by some of the most influential persons and largest property owners in Savannah. For years the city has been handicapped in its efforts to induce national organizations to hold conventions here because of the lack of a suitable place in which large numbers of persons can assemble.

It is now practically certain that the auditorium will not be erected in connection with the armory of the Chatham Artillery, the First Regiment, or any other organization, but that, instead of these propositions, which were considered originally, the municipal government will purchase a suitable location, convenient and accessible to the greatest number, on which to construct the building. Neither of the armories is to be erected in the heart of the business district, which is believed to be the proper place for a public building such as that under consideration.

Youths Are Held as Robbers of Church

Communion Services, Alms Basins and Other Plate Taken From St. Paul's in August.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—George and William Cannon, two Savannah lads, aged 18 and 19 years, respectively, are under arrest in Columbia, S. C., charged with the theft of the silver memorial plate from St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Augusta.

It is said that the lads have confessed to the theft and admitted hiding the silver at some point near Hamburg, S. C., across the river from Augusta. It is understood they have agreed to return to Augusta without the formality of requisition.

A silver memorial communion service, includinb chalice, paten and wafer receptacle, a silver plate communion service and four alms basins were stolen. The loss was discovered by the sexton, who reported the matter to the church authorities. The sacristy in which the valuables were kept was looted.

BOND ELECTION FOR VALDOSTA STREET PAVING

If $50,000 Issue Carries Will Be Best Paved City in the Southern States.

VALDOSTA, Sept. 13.—An election for $50,000 additional municipal improvement bonds will be held here on Monday, the 15th instant.

Of the proposed issue, $35,000 is for paving and $15,000 for improvement of the waterworks, the latter to be used mainly in extending the system to parts of the city not yet furnished with city water.

No bond issue of the several heretofore made has caused as much comment or aroused as much opposition as the proposed issue. It is the first time in the history of Valdosta that any tangible opposition has been shown toward municipal improvements, and just how effective the present opposition is can not be determined until the election is held.

No fault is found with the work done so far, and there is no charge of graft or misappropriation of funds from previous issues. The outstanding bonded indebtedness of the city is now $306,000, or $150,000 less than the legal limit. Against this there is now in bank a sinking fund of nearly $53,000, which is drawing interest and increasing every year.

Saving in Repairs.

For a number of years the city has spent annually on street work between $8,000 and $10,000, the greater part of which is patchwork. It is claimed that the saving in repair work will much more than pay the interest on the proposed $35,000 paving bonds.

The waterworks during the past year made money for the city, turning into the treasury a profit of $4,893.

The asphalt paving which has just been laid on three of the principal streets is highly satisfactory, and will be continued on other streets if the bond issue is authorized. The work proposed will make Valdosta the best paved small city in the State.

LABOR UNIONS HIT PROCESS OF INJUNCTION

Macon Central Body Protests Against Judge Fixing Price of Commodity by This Method.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Macon Central Labor Union, representing 2,200 laboring men, has strongly denounced the injunction process as it has been used in Macon within recent weeks and also protested against a judge fixing the price of any commodity also through the injunction method.

Many are wondering whether Judge H. A. Mathews, of the Superior Court, will take cognizance of the Central Labor Union's resolution. Some hold that the union men may be adjudged in contempt of court for their action.

The resolutions particularly pertain to the Law Enforcement League's petition for permanent injunction against fifteen saloons and to Judge Mathews' action in designating the prices at which ice may be sold in Macon.

Already one of the petitions against the saloons has been granted, and the saloon has been put out of business by a permanent injunction. The other petitions are pending in court and set for hearing in November.

As to the ice proposition, Judge Mathews acted on the petition of the Southern Ice Company against the Atlantic Ice and Coal Company, the Macon branch of a big Southern combine, and fixed a scale of prices. The Southern Ice Company alleged that the other and older and stronger company was cutting rates so low that it would be forced out of business, and asked for an injunction. The judge granted only a temporary order, but arranged prices that must obtain during the entire ice season.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—A committee composed of J. Edgar Chancellor, Park Dexter, James W. Woodruff, W. L. Williams and Jack Stern, representing Columbus Shriners, is making extensive preparations for entertaining Shriners from South Georgia and East Alabama, who are coming to the city September 24.

A special train will reach the city from Savannah on the evening of September 23, bringing a team of 75 Shriners who will come equipped with a car full of paraphernalia for putting on the work on the day following. There is a class of 35 Shriners in Columbus to be inducted into the mysteries of the order and the work of initiating this class will be one of the features of the meeting.

3,000 Enrolled In Tift County Public Schools

Building in Every District—High School Courses for the Country—Fifty-six Teachers.

TIFTON, Sept. 13.—The public schools of Tift County will open for the fall term October 20.

There are 37 schools in the county this year, 28 for white and 9 for colored. Since the closing of the last term two new schools have been added and now there is a school in every district in the county.

Last year 2,500 white pupils out of 2,000 in the community were enrolled. Forty-three teachers will be required. Thirteen teachers will be employed in the colored schools, making a total of 56 teachers in the county.

This does not include the Tifton Public Schools, which are operated under the city system and supported by the city with an entirely different board of education.

This year the high school course will be taught in four different county schools—Brookfield, Ty Ty, Omega and Chula.

Raines Confesses Mail Train Hold-up

Black Sheep of Pennsylvania Family Will Be Returned to Atlanta Federal Prison.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 13.—In a report made to-day by the Federal Grand Jury to Judge Grubb, Harry Raines was indicted for the hold-up of the northbound Louisville and Nashville train between Calera and Birmingham August 5, when the mail car was entered and robbed of registered packages. Raines confessed, and Judge Grubb will sentence him Monday to the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

Raines comes from a respectable family in Pennsylvania.

READS ABOUT ROBBERY AND BANKS HIS CASH

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—After reading of the robbery of $70,000 from the Southern Express Company, Ned Daily, living at Lula, a little junction on the Southern Railway, looked up the cashier of the village bank and had him go to his home with him. He dug out of the chimney and floor $1,200, which he turned over to the cashier for deposit, fearing it would be stolen if it remained in its hiding place.

It will now serve to help move the cotton crop in that vicinity.

Miss Georgianna White

1913 first honor graduate of the Griffin High School, who will attend Agnes Scott College at Decatur this fall and winter.

Coal Deposit Found In Anniston Suburb

Farmer Digging a Well Strikes Apparently Rich Ore Vein at Depth of 14 Feet.

ANNISTON, Sept. 13.—Calhoun County, which is already rich in mineral deposits, is believed to have another valuable asset in coal deposits which were discovered recently on the northern outskirts of this city, near Aderhold's Mill. W. J. Edmondson, a prominent planter, was in the city Friday demonstrating samples of the deposit.

The deposit was uncovered by men digging a well, after a depth of fourteen feet had been reached. The coal is being used at blacksmith shops near by.

In this neighborhood there has been frequent evidence of oil deposits and black marble has been found in abundance. Should the discovery of Mr. Edmondson pan out as it it believed it will the property will be developed.

Shake-up in Athens Postoffice Expected

Postmaster William Fleming May Be Asked to Make Room for Devout Democrat.

ATHENS, Sept. 13.—United States auditors have been checking up the local postoffice for the last ten days, and it is freely rumored that a shake-up is scheduled such as has just happened in Atlanta. Postmaster William Fleming was appointed at the expiration of Cleveland's term as President, and if he does not see fit to resign, he will very probably be asked to step down and out to make room for a more devout Democrat.

Captain J. H. Rucker has been mentioned prominently for the position, as has Harvey Stovall, who is a brother of the United States Minister to Switzerland.

BOGUS SUFFRAGE WORKER LEAVES BATCH OF DEBTS

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—A man named J. L. Howell and claiming to be a suffragette worker recently came to Spartanburg to boost the cause.

He also claimed to be a literary man and a refugee from Mexico, but had renounced his profession and taken up the cause of the suffragettes in this country. His idea was to have a State convention of the suffragettes in Spartanburg, and he seemed to get the confidence of the ladies, who agreed to assist in the movement.

After getting everything in shape, Howell suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, incidentally leaving behind him an unpaid board bill and other little debts, for which he gave checks on a Los Angeles, Cal., bank. The checks have all returned, but Howell has not.

The balance needed, $200, will be secured, and those interested will get together some time next week and map out a campaign.

Advertising in local and adjoining county newspapers will be pushed, circulars scattered broadcast over this section of the State, and something that will prove entertaining to the people will be brought here within a short time.

5,000 REGISTER TO BALLOT FOR MACON MAYOR

Race for High Office Grows in Interest as Day Approaches. Claims of Candidates.

MACON, Sept. 13.—To what extent Macon is interested in the mayoralty campaign is shown by the registration of over 5,000 citizens. This registration exceeds by nearly 1,800 the registration of the Miller-Moore election of 1909.

With only thirteen days intervening before the election on September 26, the three mayoralty candidates are keyed up for much hard work on the last lap of the race. The most work in the line of public speaking will probably be done by the Wallace-Miller ticket, which is running on an anti-administration platform. The Miller workers will have a rally Monday night in South Macon and another during the week in East Macon. There will also be meetings in North Macon, and in the Third and Fourth Wards.

Mr. Dasher has a number of ward rallies scheduled.

Starting on Monday night, September 22, there will be public rallies at the city auditorium for four consecutive nights. The Miller party will have two, the Smith workers one, and Dasher one.

Predictions Vary.

Upon the closing of the registration, the Miller campaign committee made the prediction that there would be 4,200 votes polled, and that Miller would receive 2,150; Smith, the administration candidate, 1,550, and Dasher, independent, 500. The Smith forces predicted Smith's election by a majority of fully 700. Dasher merely stated that he was confident of election. Neither Miller nor Smith concede over 500 votes to Dasher.

The charge made by Dasher, both from the platform and in the public print, that the Macon Railway and Light Company is contributing liberally to Smith's campaign fund, elicited an emphatic denial from Smith.

Freight Rate Bureau To Meet in Raleigh

North Carolina Shippers and Legislators Prepare for Long War With Railroads.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 13.—Fred N. Tate, president of the Just Freight Rate Association, has called a mass meeting of shippers and business men to be held in the Raleigh Auditorium Wednesday, September 24, the same day the General Assembly meets in extraordinary session.

So important is the freight rate matter regarded that Governor Craig, in issuing his call, placed freight rates in front of constitutional amendments, thereby emphasizing his position. Many believe that the State will enter upon a long warfare with the railroads unless an agreement is reached.

ALABAMA PRESBYTERIANS AID PROHIBITION FORCES

HUNTSVILLE, Sept. 13.—The Huntsville Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., held its annual meeting at Copeland Church in Limestone County, and adopted resolutions pledging the support of the efforts that will be directed toward the removal of the dispensary from Huntsville and saloons from Sheffield. The Presbytery asked all loyal members to co-operate in the fight to place Alabama in the State-wire prohibition column again. The Rev. W. J. Bruce, of Sheffield, was elected moderator and H. L. Turner, of New Decatur, was elected clerk.

WARM SPEAKER'S RACE IN NORTH CAROLINA HOUSE

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 13.—Five new Senators and Representatives will take their seats in the General Assembly when it convenes in extraordinary session ten days hence. The Lower House will elect a Speaker to succeed George W. Connor, of Wilson, appointed a Superior Court judge by Governor Craig, and several lively campaigners are in the race. Walter Murphy, of Rowan, and T. C. Bowie, of Asheville, are the most likely candidates. The so-called Progressives will fight Bowie and the prohibitionists will not stand for Murphy.

MOB VIOLENCE FEARED IF NEGRO IS ACUITTED

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 13.—The trial of the negro, Will Fair, for criminal assault will come up Monday. Jurors have been drawn. The trial will be short.

It is said the defense will spring a surprise, and there is considerable conjecture as to what action will be taken by citizens who recently stormed the jail, when the negro is brought from the penitentiary to be placed on trial here. If he is acquitted, it is probable there will be trouble. No violent action is anticipated, however, before the trial.

BOLL WORM DESTROYING COTTON AND CORN CROPS

SPARTANBURG, Sept. 12.—A boll worm having the appearance of a caterpillar has made its appearance in the cotton fields of Spartanburg County, and as a consequence the crops affected are suffering almost complete destruction.

The worm is green in color and is known scientifically as hte "Heliothis armigera." It comes from a moth and multiplies rapidly. It not only works upon the cotton boll, but is equally destructive to the corn crop.

BAILIFF CLAIMS KILLING OF BOY WAS ACCIDENT

Trial of Columbus Officer Who Shot Youth on Account of 50-Cent Debt Set for Friday.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13.—Robert L. Willis, the Columbus bailiff who shot and killed Luther Hawkins, the Atlanta youth, August 29, will be given a preliminary hearing next Friday morning before Recorder Frank D. Foley, who will sit in the case as a special magistrate.

It will be remembered that Willis, in company with Charles Jordan, a boarding house proprietor, was attempting to arrest Hawkins under a warrant charging him with beating a 50-cent board bill, when the latter started to run off from the officer, laughing at the time. The officer drew his revolver and began flourishing it in the air, when the gun was suddenly discharged, and Hawkins fell to the ground mortally wounded, dying a few seconds afterward.

Says Killing Was Accident.

Since the firing of the fatal shot Willis has maintained that his revolver was accidentally discharged, while the State claims to have eyewitnesses who state that Willis, after taking deliberate aim, shot and killed him. The State has refused to divulge the names of the witnesses.

Willis will be represented by T. Hicks Fort, Solicitor of the City Court, and Attorney D. L. Parmer, who will maintain that the defendant accidentally shot Hawkins, while the contention of Solicitor General George C. Palmer, who will represent the State, will be that the killing is murder. The father of young Hawkins is now making Columbus his home in order to attend the preliminary hearing and assist in the prosecution. The people of Columbus continue to condemn the killing, because of the smallness of the offense that had been committed by the young man, whose life was forfeited because he did not pay a balance of 50 cents on a board bill, for the simple reason that he did not have the money at the time.

RUN-OFF NECESSARY IN SPARTANBURG CITY RACE

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 13.—No candidate in the Democratic primary received a majority on last Tuesday, hence a second municipal primary has been called for next Tuesday. O. L. Johnson, incumbent, and John F. Floyd, the two leading candidates, will again make the race for the Democratic nomination for Mayor.

Eight candidates will make the race for Commissioner out of the nineteen who entered the first race.

The election will be held under the new commission form of government, which goes into effect with the new officers.

Concentrated Form Of Fertilizer Made By Macon Scientist

Believed It Will Revolutionize the Present Methods of Soil Cultivation.

MACON, Sept. 13.—Dr. M. M. Stapler, of this city, widely known among the medical profession for the invention for the cure of incipient deafness, has devised a form of fertilizer which he and his friends believe will revolutionize the present methods of soil cultivation. Dr. Stapler is a wealthy specialist with a penchant for farming during his leisure hours, and it was during his spare time that he evolved the idea of concentrating fertilizer.

After working on the idea for several years, he perfected a fertilizer, compounded in cube form, each cube, no larger than a brick, having the potency of 200 pounds of the ordinary fertilizer. His fertilizer is a composition of about 95 per cent soluble plant food, the remainder being a light plastic composition to hold the fertilizing ingredients in shape. His method is to drop one of the cubes—he proposes to make them of any size and strength desired—into each of the holes where seeds are planted.

Decree Expected in Dalton Paving Cases

$15,000 Involved in Abutting Property Assessments Before Supreme Court Second Time.

DALTON, Sept. 13.—When the Supreme Court meets September 22 an opinion in the Dalton street paving cases is expected, for the court must either hand down an opinion by October 6 or the case go by default.

The case grew out of assessments under the abutting property law. Several refused to pay and the city advertised their property for sale. They then filed an injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the sale, but the injunction was dissolved by Superior Court. The case was taken to the Supreme Court, and the decision was affirmed. On certain new features alleged by the property owners the matter was again taken to Superior Court, where the city again won the victory. It was carried to the higher court a second time.

There is something like $15,000 involved in the litigation.

Numerous letters addressed to him disclosed his identity. Schlatter has been reported dead upon many occasions, once at Denver, Colo., and another time at Albuquerque. He precipitated a riot in Kansas City a few years ago.

G. A. R. HOSTS GATHERING AT CHATTANOOGA

Ten Thousand Veterans Have Arrived—Every State in Union Is Represented.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 13.—Grizzled Union veterans, men who left their homes to insure the integrity of the United States in pursuance to Lincoln's call, to-day are mobilizing by thousands in Chattanooga for the second time.

Now their mission is peace. When first they came it was war. Fifty years have wrought a wonderful change, both in guests and hosts.

Special trains arriving every hour are emptying their complement into the already crowded city, but the local committee, with its innumerable ramifications, assisted by Commander-in-Chief Alfred Beers, who arrived with his staff last night, is handling the situation in exemplary manner.

10,000 Have Arrived.

Ten thousand probably are already arrived, and it is stated that at least 100,000 will be the guests of the city when the encampment officially opens Monday morning.

From Maine to California, from Michigan to Texas, every State is sending her complement, although the Middle Western States seem to have the greatest representation.

General Beers has proclaimed the arrangements here complete in every detail. The veterans are being housed immediately upon arrival in private homes, but the huge mess tent and commissary is ready for emergency use.

To-morrow special patriotic services will be held in every church in the city, the majority of the pulpits being filled by chaplains of the G. A. R.

MRS. GODBEE IS UNSHAKEN BY HER LIFE SENTENCE

Convicted Woman Immediately Begins Fight for New Trial. Declares She Will Surely Be Freed in Long Run.

Mother of Slain Bride Expresses Joy When She Hears of Conviction Without Death Penalty. Dramatic Scene in Court.

MILLEN, Sept. 13.—Stoical and calm as she has ever been since she fired the shots that ended the lives of her former husband and his young bride, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee immediately began preparations for her fight for a new trial as soon as she heard the jury pronounce her guilty and the court fix her punishment at life imprisonment.

Colonel F. A. Saffold, senior counsel for Mrs. Godbee, announced this afternoon that a skeleton motion for a new trial would be filed at once, according to statutory regulations.

Slain Bride's Mother Glad.

"I am glad Mrs. Godbee was given a life sentence," was the comment of Mrs. M. G. Boyer, mother of the slain girl, after Judge Hammond had set the penalty. "She deserved punishment, although I did not want her hanged. A woman of her type is dangerous at large."

Mrs. Godbee would not see reporters, but it was reported by friends who visited her cell that she was cheerful and optimistic, and was confident of an acquittal on a new trial.

Miss Sarah Godbee, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Godbee, collapsed as the foreman of the jury announced the verdict. She has been a constant companion of her mother during the trial, and her own cheerfulness has had much to do with the cheerfulness of her mother.

She held her mother's hand in hers as the jury filed slowly into the courtroom. Eagerly she scanned the faces of each man, hoping for a sign that they would declare Mrs. Godbee not guilty. Each man's face was grave. Her hand tightened over that of her mother, and tears rolled down her cheeks. As the foreman rose to announce the verdict she leaned forward, the most intensely eager person in the room.

Mrs. Godbee Not Moved.

As the dreaded word "guilty" fell from the lips of the jurymen Miss Godbee shrieked and collapsed. In a hush broken only by the sobs of the daughter, Judge Hammond ordered Mrs. Godbee to stand and receive the sentence of the court. Gently disengaging the clinging hands of her daughter, Mrs. Godbee rose and stood without a tremor while the court ordered that she be confined in the penitentiary the remainder of her natural life.

Mrs. Godbee's daughter, young and beautiful, presented a pitiful spectacle that brought tears to the eyes of every person in the courtroom. She clung to Mrs. Godbee's neck, while the mother gently patted her head and whispered words of encouragement. As the Sheriff stepped forward and placed his hand on Mrs. Godbee's shoulder to lead her away to prison the young daughter broke down completely. She pillowed her head on her mother's breast, tears streaming down her face, her sobs audible in every part of the courtroom.

As the hand of the Sheriff fell upon her shoulder, opening wide the gates of the prison, Mrs. Godbee disengaged her daughter's hand, imprinted a last kiss upon her lips and rose to her feet, gazing calmly at the jury.

"I am ready," she said.

Still Expects Liberty.

Silence fell over the crowded courtroom as the convicted woman was led to the doors. The crowd outside, sensing the dramatic touch given to the trial was as silent as the grave while Mrs. Godbee entered an automobile that was waiting. She was followed to the jail by a number of her friends, many of them prominent in Millen society. As the gates clanged behind her, her only words were

"I'll be freed in the long run."

MADERO FAMILY IN OPEN REVOLT AGAINST HUERTA

Brother of Assassinated President Leads Army of 1,500 Men On Aguas Calientes.

FEDERALS AWAIT ATTACK

Government Force Has 2,000 Troops in Town—Dr. Urrutia Refuses to Quit Office.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13.—Private dispatches received here to-day announce definitely that the family of Francisco I. Madero, Jr., who was assassinated after abdicating the presidency of Mexico, has launched a full-fledged revolution against the regime of President Huerta.

Raoul Madero, a brother of the late President, is reported to be leading an army of 1,500 rebels against the city of Aguas Calientes, capital of the State of the same name. The city is defended by a Federal army of 2,000.

Dr. Urrutia has refused to give up the portfolio of Minister of the Interior and will be allowed to retain that office.

Americans' Absence Stuns Hotel Keepers

August Is Disastrous to Both Bonifaces and Tradesmen in Southern Germany.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—The hotel keepers and tradesmen in certain quarters of South Germany are dismayed by the marked decrease in American tourist traffic; August was almost disastrous to them.

The Munich hotel proprietors were hit hardest and are complaining loudly. This loss of American patronage is due largely, it is said, to the agitation by certain Americans in Munich against the systematic exploitation to which travelers are subjected in that city. Experienced tourists, tired of paying double prices for everything, are shunning Munich and going to Berlin and other North German cities.

Ambassador Wilson To Take Platform

Former Diplomat Will Write Book and Lecture on Experience in Mexico.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Henry Lane Wilson, who has resigned as Ambassador to Mexico, is writing a book and is getting ready to make a lecture tour with a lyceum bureau. Mr. Wilson has arrived at the Waldorf from his home in Indiana to receive his household furniture, which was forwarded from Mexico City.

The book will deal with Mr. Wilson's seventeen years in the diplomatic service, including his work in Mexico and events of a recent date. Parts of the book dealing with the situation across the Southern border will be printed in a magazine. The lecture will deal with the Mexican situation. Mr. Wilson declined yesterday to comment on Mexican affairs.

Washington to Lose Most Noted Beauty

Special Cable to The American.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Washington will soon lose "its most beautiful woman," for Mrs. Spencer Cosby, wife of the newly appointed military attache of the American Embassy in Paris will accompany her husband to the French capital in a few days.

Prince Christian of Prussia, during his recent American visit, saw Mrs. Cosby in Washington and exclaimed: "There is the most beautiful American woman I have ever seen." Mrs. Cosby has a fragile, delicate beauty, and her arms and hands have been pronounced by sculptors to be faultless in proportion.

Poetess Enjoys After-Dinner Cigar

Sister of President Lowell, of Harvard, Makes No Attempt to Hide Smoking.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—That Miss Amy Lowell, poetess, sister of President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, made a regular habit of smoking an after-dinner cigar on the deck of the Cunarder Laconia, was the assertion made by her fellow passengers on the vessel, which arrived Wednesday from Liverpool.

No attempt to conceal her penchant for cigars was made by Miss Lowell, these passengers say.

To newspaper men at the dock Miss Lowell admitted that she was interested in suffrage, though she denied any sympathy with the militants and insisted that she supported them very "mildly." Miss Lowell's age, a matter of some discussion among her fellow passengers, is understood to be about 45.

Georgia Man Plans Ocean Flight

Proposes European Air Line

Inventor Sees Sure Success

Captain Matthew A. Batson, U. S. A. retired, of Savannah, who is the inventor of a multiplane which he declares will make aerial commercial navigation possible.

Captain Batson's multiplane, in which he plans to fly across the Atlantic from Savannah to England.

Multiplane Intended to Carry Passengers Across Ocean Is Being Built in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Sept. 13.—A Georgia man, with ambitious vision, is planning an aeroplane trip across the Atlantic Ocean. The time for the venture is not far distant, and the busy hammering and filing that can be heard in the workshop near Savannah tells that every preparation is being made.

It is Captain Matthew A. Batson, a retired army officer, who will make this challenge to destiny. He has been working for years toward this end, and has perfected a unique type of flying machine that is popularly known as the Batson hydro-aeroplane.

So certain are Captain Batson and his friends that the daring venture will be successful that a concern has been organized, known as the Batson Aero Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $300,000, "to operate between Savannah, Ga., and Liverpool England, a line of passenger-carrying air craft," according to the words of the charter.

Captain Batson is president of the company. The line will not be established for little more than a year, but there will be trial flights a-plenty before that time, as the plans state, at Thunderbolt, Brickyard Island, on the Wilmington River, where the plant is located.

Models Fly Faithfully.

The first flight of the hydro-aeroplane will be made early. The models of the machine have flown faithfully. The entire machine is now assembled, the flying section having been fixed to the boat hull several days ago.

It is the intention of Captain Batson to navigate the craft into the Wilmington River, and to make the first trial flights in the direction of Wilmington Island. The tests of the airship will be visible from the Casino, Thunderbolt, and it is expected that thousands of people will make the trip to the resort to see the big machine as it takes to the air.

Lest some envious person see their house and try to raise the bid on it, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall are refusing to tell its exact location.

It is admitted, however, that it is on the fashionable Avenue of the Presidents.

NICKEL IN SLOT MACHINE PLANNED FOR STREET CARS

14-CENT COTTON AND BUMPER CROP FORETELL REIGN OF PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT GEORGIA

Fine Yield of Corn, Oats and Hay, With Top Prices for Staple's By-Products, Is Expected to Give the State Its Banner Year.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM IS EVIDENT IN ALL BUSINESS

Strict Economy Practiced by Farmers Makes Margin of Profit Tremendous---Bankers Are Jubilant, While Merchants Predict Great Season.

By M. A. ROSE.

Georgia, the whole Southeast, and Atlanta—because it is the commercial and financial center of the Southeast—will enter upon one of the most prosperous eras any section of the nation ever has enjoyed when the cotton crop is moving in earnest this fall—by October 1 at the latest.

In 1911, all seasons put their heads together in kindly conspiracy, and Georgia grew 2,768,627 bales of cottton, the greatest crop the historic State ever knew. It is the fashion to quote 1911 as the most wonderful year the State could expect. Unmistakable signs show 1913 will overtop 1911.

Here is the proof:

In 1911 Georgia grew, or let us say gathered—for it grew thousands of bales which never were ginned or even picked—2,768,627 bales of cotton. But the whole South grew 15,622,701 bales, excluding linters. Prices were correspondingly low. Georgia got about $124,500,000 for its 1911 crop.

Almost ready for the gins to-day are 2,250,000 bales. Indications are that this crop will bring Georgia $155,500,000, for 14-cent middling cotton is a probability, not a possibility.

Of this $155,000,000 a much greater proportion will be profit than accrued from the banner crop. Four reasons are apparent: This is a yield produced at less cost than any previous crop; drouth in the West will make the total yield short of the world's actual needs, particularly as the left-over supply is abnormally small; Georgia will spend less for corn, hay and oats than ever before, having record-breaking crops of all three food-stuffs; the shortage of corn, hay and oats will mean good prices for that most important by-product of cottton, cotton seed.

SHORT CORN CROP INEVITABLE.

Consider the last first, because it has been overlooked generally.

Drouth in Kansas and the other great agricultural States of the West and Southwest makes a short crop of corn inevitable. Corn is selling at an abnormally high price—around 77 cents at Chicago and St. Louis for the actual stuff.

Seventy-seven cent corn means high beef and pork. It's pretty expensive to fatten hogs or cattle for market on that sort of diet. High pork spells high lard. High lard means greater demand for cotton seed oil products, so much so that the cotton seed oil speculator watches the lard market as closely as he does the oil quotations. Expensive feed, too, means a shortage of cattle for slaughter and a shortage of blood and bone fertilizer, the packers' by-product, which is just where cotton seed meal fertilizers may reap a harvest. Expensive corn, again, insures greater demand for cotton seed hulls as cattle feed.

No one wants to go on record as saying that cotton seed will sell at a record price. But it is evident it will not be a drug on the market. Already cotton seed is selling for $20 a ton and better in South Georgia.

Crushers say Georgia will send 900,000 tons of seed to oil mills this fall. At $20 a ton that is $180,000,000. Add that to $155,000,000 for the lint—it makes one dizzy!

Back to the first reason for Georgia's enormous prospective profits. Everyone recognizes that economy has been the watchword for the year. The farmer has bought as little as possible at the store. He has borrowed as little money as possible. He has cut down his supply of fertilizer. The old harness, the old wagon, the same old mule, the same overalls, have served another season. Small expense and good selling price make excellent profits.

LITTLE COTTON IN WEST.

Texas and Oklahoma, experts say, will produce not more than 4,000,000 bales this year, as against 5,278,500 in 1911. Alabama and Mississippi show severe deterioration through the combined malevolence of bad weather and insects. Louisiana never has been a factor in the cotton world since the boll weevil invaded the Creole State. The Southeast will make, in proportion, the best crop of all the belt.

All this would be of little avail if the Georgia farmer had to spend all the money he got for corn, hay and oats to feed his mules. In past years he has done this, but this year he will not. Georgia this year produced the largest corn crop in its history. The hay and oat crops also were good. It would be ruinous to spend the proceeds even from 14-cent cotton for 77-cent corn. Fortunately, in 1913 Georgia will not.

Biggest Money Crop in Years Believed To Be Already Assured Farmers, While City Merchants Are Jubilant.

There is some difference of opinion just now as to the probable size of the crop in this State. Gentlemen otherwise calm and serene are wont to grow purplish of face and thump desks when the subject is argued.

J. D. Price, Commissioner of Agriculture for the State, says Georgia will gin 2,000,000 bales of cotton. He believes dry weather has lopped 400,000 to 500,000 bales from the early prospect.

A. P. Coles, who has made the estimate for the Central Bank and Trust Corporation for seven years and missed it not more than 50,000 bales in the seven, puts the crop at 2,600,000 bales. A favorite estimate is 2,500,000 bales. Other figures stand in order between these two extremes.

GREAT PROFIT ASSURED.

Just to stay out of the argument, 2,250,000 bales has been selected as the basis for computations given here. It does not affect the argument. If the crop is 2,000,000 bales, Georgia still will make an enormous profit. If Georgia's crop is 2,600,00 bales—all the better.

As to 14-cent cotton—it is not an impossibility, but a probability. Thirteen cents now is being paid at Savannah for middling. That part of the crop which has been ginned is being sold freely. Although little has been said about it, there undoubtedly is a good deal of "distress cotton" on the market—cotton sold to pay debts which are pressing. With continued reports of bad weather in the West, or anything like an early frost, and consequent shortened yield, the market may jump again.

And there is little cotton left for the mills of the world to use. The visible supply at the end of the cotton year, August 30, was in round figures only 2,000,000 bales. The crop has been estimated at 12,900,000 bales. That leaves 14,900,000 bales for the world to use, and the mills of Europe, Japan, India, China and the United States want 16,000,000 bales yearly now, the best authorities agree.

It looks like a "bull" year.

Georgia has been through the test of fire. The year has been an ordeal. But harvest time finds sagacious business men in jubilant mood. Cheerfulness amounting almost to exultation is the keynote of sentiment to-day among the shrewdest. Expressions of the city's recognized leaders are unanimous in their forecast of prosperity.

Georgia Is To Be Envied, Declares Governor Slaton

GEORGIA is to be envied. The season now opening will bring to this most favored State the blessings of plenty and prosperity dispensed with lavish hand. Every circumstance is in collusion to make this a record year.

Georgia this year will make a reasonable cotton crop. The other States will have short yields. Georgia's, then, will be big in relation to the total, and every Georgian should get good prices for his cotton.

But that is not all. The best part of it is that not all the millions which come into the State for cotton will go out this year for hay, corn and oats. Georgia this year raised what seems conceded to be the largest corn crop in its history. It has hay and oats in large quantities as well, while the nation's yields of all these feed stuffs is short, because of drouth.

Georgia has every climate from the cold winters of North Georgia, which serve to perfect the apples of Habersham County, to the almost tropical mildness of the coast, where you can see rice fields. Between are corn and cotton, oats and hay, peaches and melons, sugar cane, yams and potatoes. We depend, not on ditches which may go dry, but upon the kindly rains from the Almighty, and are not disappointed. And in this wonderful State live the nation's finest people.

What more could Georgia ask?

---GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

Looks for Huge Crop, Easily 2,600,000 Bales

A. P. Coles, of the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, is convinced there will be a huge crop in Georgia, and he never before has missed it far. He writes to the country banks:

"We have made careful inquiry and considerable personal inspection of the crops of Georgia. Information compiled from reliable sources leads us to believe that we are on the eve of harvesting a bumper crop in Georgia, not only of cotton, but of corn. We believe that with an open fall and a reasonably late frost the cotton crop in Georgia will easily reach 2,600,000 bales and that the corn crop is probably by far the best that has ever been produced in this State, all of which means prosperity in Georgia, at least temporarily.

"There is no reason why a sufficient amount of funds can not be obtained to move the cotton crop, provided the bankers, farmers and merchants work in harmony. Country bankers, especially those located in the cotton districts, should endeavor to educate the farmers to the habit of depositing checks received for the sale of cotton and paying their debts by check. This would go a long way toward relieving the currency stringency during the cotton-moving period.

"We confidently expect a prosperous fall and good business."

City Banker's Views Give Cheerful Analysis

"I see no reason," says Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, "why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity.

"Now, just take stock of the year just closing. Notwithstanding the fact that the cotton crop for 1912 was 1,000,000 bales short of the 1911 crop, there have been no failures of importance among banks or business houses. The failures were few and, in Georgia, of comparatively little importance. That shows the banks and mercantile houses were in good shape financially and could take care of their customers who have gone through a period of depression which was more or less world-wide.

"The fall season opens with every assurance of a cotton crop 500,000 bales larger than last year and raised at less expense than any previous crop ever grown; better and more scientifically cultivated. From every point of view this augurs a splendid trade for fall.

"If the crop experiences no backset, we can reasonably expect excellent fall collections. The farmers will be able to pay their obligations to the country merchant. He will be able to pay the wholesalers in the cities, and the wholesalers in turn will reduce their indebtedness to the city banks.

"This is sure to make money easier after the crop moves, and all lines of business are bound to feel the good effect of the splendid period of prosperity now so promising.

"I believe the further consideration by the Senate of the currency bill and the expressed desire of the Senate committee to get all the facts connected with the proposed legislation is certain to lead to the passage of a wise and conservatively planned measure.

"If this is true, and such a bill is passed, it will eliminate for all time the danger to the country which arises every fall from the fear of having insufficient currency to move the crops. This will, therefore, be of special benefit to the South and the West, and I see no reason why 1914 should not find the whole United States entering upon a period of unsurpassed prosperity."

'Flush' Year Is Time To Learn Economy

Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, is not given to hyperbole. Yet he waxes enthusiastic when drawn into conversation about the crop outlook and the business prospects for Georgia this season.

"There is a general cheerful feeling," he explains. "Some of the country merchants and the city wholesalers report the best business they have had for several seasons, and, of course, they expect to do even better when the cotton crop moves.

"Outstanding obligations—some of them, to tell the exact truth, older than they should be—will be wiped out by the present crop, and settlements passing from hand to hand up the line should make money easier all around.

"But this is the time when I would preach thrift. It is something of an absurdity to preach thrift to a man who is 'broke.' But now that the Georgia farmer and the Georgia merchant have money in their pockets, or at least have money in sight, they should practice thrift. They should fortify themselves for the possible lean years. I hope there will be no lean years, but history teaches us to believe there will be.

"Remember recent history. That is all I would ask. Remember the banner crop of 1911, the extravagances which followed, and then the short crop of 1912, and what befell. If only the farmer will keep his money from burning a hole in his pocket, this season will result in permanent good for Georgia."

Chamber of Commerce Prophesies Rapid Growth

As head of a life insurance company and president of the Chamber of Commerce, Wilmer L. Moore has exceptional opportunities to study the trend of events and the condition of business. From rather an apprehensive mood in the spring, Mr. Moore has been converted into an optimist of the extreme type.

"Everything looks good to me," says Mr. Moore. "The Chamber of Commerce foresees unrivaled prosperity for Atlanta, and remarkable expansion. Plans and projects in sight, new factories and business houses inquiring for locations, and a dozen other hopeful signs give rise to our optimism.

"Business done by life insurance companies is as good a barometer of general conditions as any, I imagine. And without making any unusual effort we are doing a greater volume of business than ever before.

"Reports to us from our agents all over the South show the crop conditions in this section to be exceptionally good. Coarse grains and cotton promise great yields, and this, too, in a year when the yield of other sections will be curtailed, and prices consequently go higher. There will be business this coming year for every man of energy and enterprise, and the South will go straight ahead with its development."

Country Banker Expects Moderate Crop, Big Prices

It is interesting to know what the country banker thinks of all this. P. D. Rich, of Colquitt, was in Atlanta the past week.

The country banker, as typified by Mr. Rich, does not believe Georgia is going to make such a wonderful crop. He doesn't think it will go to 2,500,000 bales. He does think prices for cotton will be high and that Georgia, with two million, or, say, two million and a quarter bales, will get more money than it has in some years for huge crops.

The country banker finds himself able to get all the money he needs in New York and Atlanta at a rate which is not excessive.

He believes that the remarkable ginners' report of September 1 does not spell a great crop so much as it does an early movement.

Crushers Foresee Busy Season in Southeast

Cotton seed crushers are preparing for one of the greatest years in their history in Georgia. They expect a crop of 2,500,000 bales, and expect to crush, in round figures, 900,000 tons of seed, or just about the same amount as was crushed in 1911, when the banner crop was grown.

L. G. Neal, vice president of the Empire Cotton Oil Company, one of the largest corporations in the Georgia cotton seed trade, says the Empire's mills in South Georgia, numbering seven, have been operating about ten days.

"Seed now is bringing about $20 a ton," said Mr. Neal, "and is yielding about 39 gallons of good quality oil to the ton. With the exception of the fact that there is considerable moisture in the seed, there are no untoward factors to be considered this year. We look for an excellent season.

Wholesalers Are Busy Replenishing Retail Stocks

Willis E. Ragan, one of the city's prominent wholesalers and holder of extensive real estate, believes the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras it has known for years.

"We have a splendid 'house trade,'" said Mr. Ragan. "Buyers both from the city and country are thronging into the wholesale houses to replenish stocks with the advent of fall retail buying.

"It seems to me the South is entering upon one of the most prosperous eras in its history. The cotton crop looks fine, and the price does, too. All indications are that the farmers are selling as quickly as possible and paying their debts. Everyone is feeling good and looking forward to the best business in many years. The outlook is excellent."

"Business is good. It has increased greatly this season, and shows every promise of growing even more," says Ernest L. Rhodes, wholesale milliner.

"The Atlanta houses in our line have had a remarkable volume of sales. How much of this is due to general business conditions and how much to the energy and enterprise of Atlanta jobbers, continually invading new territory, territory which always has been conceded heretofore to other cities, I can not tell without close analysis of sales records. But in all probability, the greater business is due to both factors.

"At any rate, sales are larger. That's the main thing, after all.

"If the farmers, the retailers and the merchants who sell to them will now only take advantage of their prosperity to liquidate their obligations, then we shall have ideal conditions. And I believe this will be done."

Whitehall Street Filled With Autumn Shoppers

Along Whitehall street, the center of city retail trade, the sentiment has been brighter throughout the year than in some other localities. City retail trade has held up unexpectedly well. Atlanta has not felt the depression reported from smaller centers. But the advent of fall weather, or perhaps just a foretaste of it, has put life into business in a way which has surprised even these merchants.

"We are reordering certain lines already. That, to any one acquainted with the retail business, is the most emphatic presentation I can make of business conditions in Whitehall street," said W. H. Brittain, president and manager of High's. "Our September business to date is much larger than it was at this time last year. People are eager for new things. Mail orders have started coming in rapidly. It is a regular revival of trade.

"Shoppers are numerous. It is not a question of going out after them. They are coming to the stores. People are anxious for the new things, for the better class of merchandise. Stocks have been low. Every one has bought sparingly since the first of the year, and the result now is an active movement all along the line."

"Just a little more cool weather, such as we have had a few days this past week," said J. P. Allen, "and fall business will surprise every one. People are anxious to buy. The stores are crowded. The salespeople are busy. The retailers have every cause to congratulate themselves."

Early Trade Opening Amazes Col. F. J. Paxon

F. J. Paxon is amazed at the early opening of the fall trade.

"I was surprised," says Mr. Paxon, "to return here in August and find fall ready-to-wear goods moving well. Millinery is moving particularly early. There has been a good increase in sales volume. Both the number of sales and the average amount of sales has increased.

"We expect a remarkable year, a steady growth and a rapid one through the next year.

"I am speaking not only for the business with which I am most intimately connected, but also for other enterprises in Atlanta of which I have accurate knowledge, when I say that the resumption of activity already seen, with the cotton crop not generally moving yet, is something at which to marvel.

"Georgia is to be envied, and nothing at the conference of Governors in the West attracted more attention than Governor Slaton's speech in which he extolled the virtues of his State."

THERE was a time when kissing in the good old-fashioned way
Was altogether ruled by what the lady had to say:
If she said "Yes," the couple didn't ask for better right.
But fell into a close embrace and smacked with all their might.
But times, it seems, are changing; loving couples when enclinched
Are apt to be disturbed thus wise: "Hey, stop it; you are pinched."

IN olden days, the moonlight always played a goodly part
In scenery befitting demonstrations of the heart;
Dan Cupid made a throneroom out of every cozy nook,
And lovers came there wooing and defied the world to look;
But now, when couples wander out to sit beneath the moon,
They're apt to be admonished thus: "This ain't no place to spoon."

THE moonlight hasn't changed a bit; its beams are still of gold;
And ways of kissing are the same as in the days of old;
The eager swain still has to bow before his lady's will,
And even parents' wishes are respected by them still;
But, to kiss or not to kiss, it seems, now hinges on the law
Regardless of the say-so of the lady or her ma.

West Point Schools Break Roll Record

Great Growth Is Noted and Building Is Remodeled to Meet Demands.

WEST POINT, Sept. 13.—The forty-fifth annual session of the West Point public schools has opened, with the largest enrollment of pupils since their organization.

The Board of Education, anticipating an overflow of pupils, had made every preparation in the way of room and teachers.

The building is equipped with sanitary drinking fountains, electric lights, electric bells, electric clocks, telephones and all other modern conveniences.

The chair of English and history recently made vacant by the death of Miss Naomi Wells is being filled temporarily by Mrs. C. F. Pattillo, of West Point.

Mr. Walter P. Thomas, who is now serving his seventh year as superintendent, is devoting his time and efforts for the continuous growth and betterment of the schools.

Immortals to Hear Lecture on 'Tango'

Jean Richepin Will Address Academy on Subject, but It's a Play, Not a Dance.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Paris has been excited for some days past by the report that Jean Richepin, the distinguished dramatist, who in his younger days forsook his family hearth for the love of a great actress, is about to defy conventions and stir up more scandal by addressing the immortals of the French Academy on the subject of "The Tango."

It now turns out that the "tango" of M. Richepin is a new comedy which he has completed for the Theatre Marigny in collaboration with Madame Richepin.

Next month, at a public meeting of the venerable academy, he will read extracts from the play.

Current From Customers' Heads Makes Him Nervous, He Says, in Retiring.

DARBY, PA., Sept. 13.—After 41 years as a barber, Phil Sipler, of Darby, announced to-day he had quit business.

"As I grow older," he declared, "I become more and more sensitive to slight electric shocks with which human hair insulates my shears. It makes me nervous. I should hate to figure the total voltage of the shocks I received during a year."

Forty Georgia cities will send delegations Tuesday to the meeting at Macon which will organize the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. Atlanta will send 50 representative men in a special car. Waycross and Albany also will send specials.

Indications are there will be 400 civic leaders at Macon to launch the State Chamber of Commerce, which is expected to do for Georgia what the Atlanta Chamber has done for the city.

The meeting will be called to order at the Hotel Dempsey, Macon, at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by C. J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 o'clock at the hotel, with the Macon Chamber as host. An afternoon session will complete the deliberations.

There are 70 such State-wide development organizations in the United States. Texas has furnished the model for the proposed Georgia chamber.
