WATSON SAYS HE'LL INDICT MULHALL FOR LOBBY PROBE CHARGE

Former Congressman Denies "Lobbyist's" Accusations That While in House He Was Retained

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 22.—Martin M. Mulhall today retracted his charge against Representative Watson, of Indiana.

BY RALPH SMITH.
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22.—"Who Martin Mulhall, or by whatever name he is known, and I understand he has been known by many names, swears that he or any other man paid me $500 while I was a member of congress to represent the national manufacturers or any other organization, he lies, and I will have him indicted for it if I can accomplish that result," said former Representative James E. Watson, of Indiana, today.

The former representative was today in consultation with one of the ablest Washington lawyers to retain him to prosecute Mulhall. This was the result of the testimony given by Mulhall yesterday that he had hired former Congressman Watson by paying him a retainer of $500, while he was still in congress.

The former congressman said today that he was retained in April after his term in congress had expired. He said that a committee of one hundred of the National Association of Manufacturers, created by a national convention in Indianapolis, wired to him asking him to take up the work for them. Mulhall, he declares, had nothing to do with his retention. He claims he has witnesses waiting in Washington who will impeach Mulhall on other vital points in his testimony. He is mad clear through.

The former representative has retained lawyers and intends to proceed against newspapers for libel that attribute to him conduct unworthy or corrupt as the result of his work, which he claims is above criticism. He named a prominent western publisher who in editorial had referred to him in what he contends is libelous phrase, whom he says he will proceed against, both criminally and civilly without delay.

It was learned under investigation following his dismissal from the United States secret service, where he served under the name of "Michael," not Mulhall, in the administration of President Harrison. Three investigations were held and each report was adverse to him and he was refused re-employment.

The secret service has sent to the senate lobby committee, at the committee's request, the report of these investigations, which the committee has not yet made public. The report shows that Mulhall was twice an enlisted man in the navy. He has had a most remarkable career. Governor Levi P. Morton was once asked to appoint him as factory inspector in New York, but, learning of the record in the treasury department of investigation of Mulhall's conduct, asked for a certification of the record from the treasury department, receiving it Governor Morton refused to appoint him.

NO CROSS-EXAMINATION.
Attorneys for the National Association of Manufacturers were not permitted to cross-examine Martin M. Mulhall, the confessed lobbyist, before the senate investigating committee.

FELDER SHOWS HOW STATE CAN PAY ITS TEACHERS AT ONCE

Attorney General, Answering Governor Slaton's Inquiry, Says State Can Borrow Funds Up to $500,000

SENATE IS STIRRED BY HOT DEBATE OVER MEXICAN SITUATION

Senator Fall, of New Mexico, Demands Passage of His Resolution to Give Full Protection to Americans

BACON URGES SENATE NOT TO ACT HASTILY

Fall Criticizes Administration, Stone Favors Armed Invasion to Protect Americans and Their Rights

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 22.—Senator Fall, of New Mexico, today called up his resolution for the protection of American citizens in foreign countries. It refers to conditions in Mexico. Chairman Bacon, of the foreign relations committee, demanded that it be sent to that committee, so that its terms might be carefully weighed.

Senator Fall asked that it be passed at once, asserting that it was thoroughly understood by every senator.

BACON URGES SENATE NOT TO ACT HASTILY.
Senator Bacon insisted that the people of the United States are in a grave position of responsibility "at this time, and any enunciation of principle such as this should be thoroughly considered."

Senator Bacon asked if the resolution did not mean that the United States should send an armed force into Mexico to protect American citizens.

Senator Stone, reviewing certain conditions in Mexico, declared that he would favor sending an armed force.

Senator Williams maintained that a citizen of the United States has no constitutional rights in foreign countries. Amended, he thought, such a resolution ought to be passed "to strengthen the arm of the secretary of state."

Resolution in House Asks for Intervention

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, well known as "Alfalfa Bill," introduced an elaborate set of resolutions today, in which he invites the senate to concur in directing intervention in Mexico.

Order and peace are not restored within thirty days after President Wilson issues a proclamation to that effect.

Murray's resolutions characterize Provisional President Huerta as a "usurping marauder, a black-handed murderer, and his regime as founded upon treachery, duplicity and murder."

CABINET MEETING DELAYED.
The regular cabinet meeting slated for today did not take place because at the last moment it was discovered that most of the secretaries were out of town. President Wilson's report of the situation in Mexico, upon which some important development may be based, probably will not take place before Saturday.

Changes in the plans of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, now hurrying north from Mexico City, so that he will continue from Havana to New York by sea, instead of landing at Key West and proceeding by rail to Washington, are expected to make a day's difference in the time of the ambassador's arrival.

The conference at which Mr. Wilson is to lay before the president and Secretary Bryan a first-hand report of the situation in Mexico, upon which some important development may be based, probably will not take place before Saturday.

Senator Hoke Smith will recommend the nomination of Bolling Jones as postmaster, and the assistant probably will be picked from among the clerks on the eligible list, as the place is covered by the civil service regulations.

While First Assistant Postmaster General Roper today declined to discuss the report of the inspectors, who made a careful and painstaking investigation of the Atlanta office, it is understood that the report charges both McKee and Cole with general lack of proficiency in the management of the office, and recommends an immediate change for the good of the service.

Postmaster McKee was in Washington last week in conference with the first assistant postmaster general, and it is reported that he came to defend himself against the charges of the inspectors.

Mr. Roper stated today, however, that Mr. McKee stopped in Washington en route to New York only to pay his respects to the officials of the department.

"I haven't taken up the report on the Atlanta office," said Mr. Roper. "I cannot say when I will reach it, but I hope to give it consideration at an early date. The same is true of the report on the Savannah postoffice, which also was inspected."

Postmaster McKee's term ordinarily would not expire until next year, and the tenure of the assistant postmaster ordinarily is given indefinite periods.

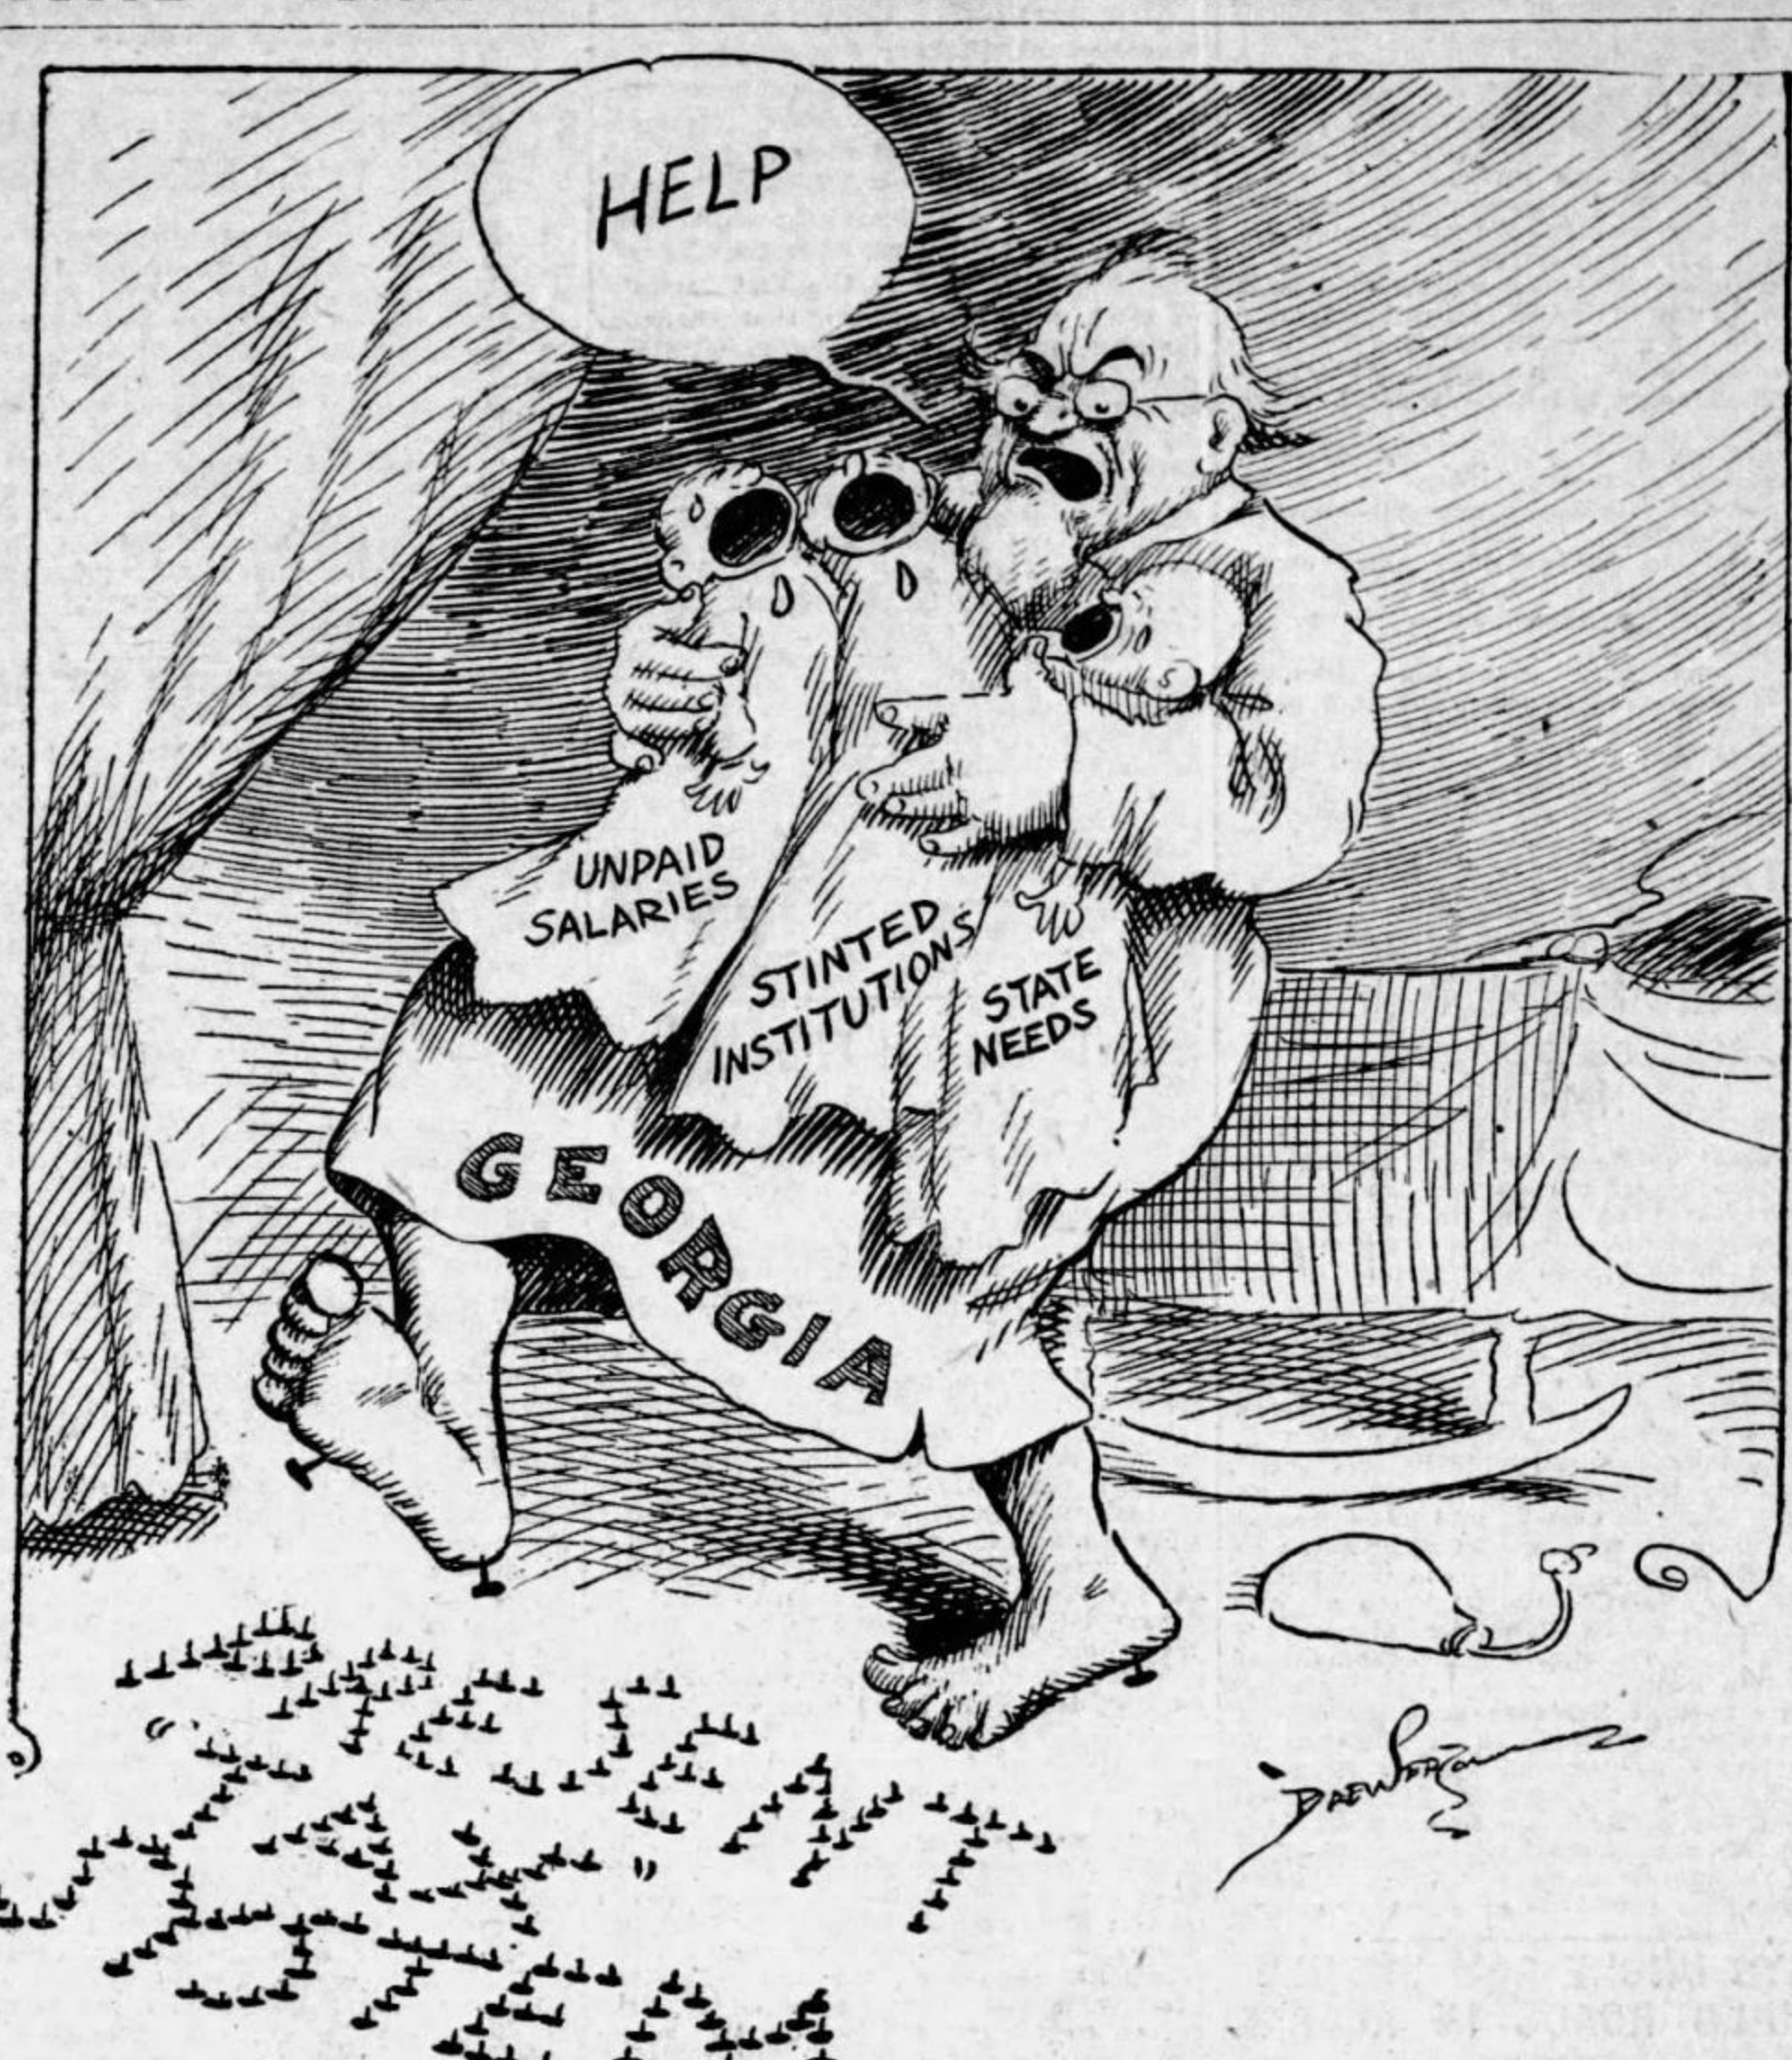

Mr. Cole came to Atlanta as assistant postmaster shortly following Mr. McKee's appointment. Prior to that time he had served as postmaster at Marietta, where he now lives.

In the event First Assistant Postmaster General Roper agrees upon the report against Messrs. McKee and Cole as it is believed he will do, the "buck" will be passed along to Postmaster Burleson. If he follows the usual course he probably will ask for Mr. McKee's resignation as he did in the case of H. S. Edwards, the Macon postmaster.

Should the resignation be not forthcoming, the usual procedure would be for the postmaster general to recommend to the president the appointment of a successor, and the confirmation of the man named by the president would act as an ouster against Mr. McKee.

The investigation of the Atlanta postoffice was ordered some weeks ago by the postoffice department, as was indicated in the dispatches. It was predicted immediately upon charges of inefficient service, lack of discipline among the clerks, and general dissatisfaction with the service in Atlanta.

Report of Inspection of Atlanta Postoffice Filed—Early Changes Expected

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22.—The inspection of the Atlanta postoffice has been completed and the report is now in the hands of First Assistant Postmaster General Daniel G. Roper, awaiting his consideration.

As a result of the inspection it is stated in reliable circles that Postmaster Hugh L. McKee and Assistant Postmaster DeWitt C. Cole will be succeeded within thirty days by officials to be named by the postoffice department.

Senator Hoke Smith will recommend the nomination of Bolling Jones as postmaster, and the assistant probably will be picked from among the clerks on the eligible list, as the place is covered by the civil service regulations.

Consequently it was not possible to obtain at the postoffice any local information bearing on the situation.

EMPLOYEES OF CITY HALL NEED AN "EMERGENCY" FUND

For What? Well, if You Went Up Against the Appeals for Church, Charity and Miscellaneous Contributions for About a Week, You'd Know, According to Walter Taylor

Be it resolved, by all the employees of the city hall, that some influential member of council be requested to introduce a resolution providing an emergency fund on which said employees may draw when "touched" for contributions to church, charity and private penury.

Not that the employees are niggardly or indisposed to give to church and charity, but the requests are so many, that if they gave to all they would exhaust their salaries.

"It's a fact," said City Clerk Walter Taylor, as he flipped a letter across the desk in which a "thank-you-in-advance" South Carolinian begged financial aid in rebuilding his church. "If we responded to every request for donations we would have no money at all at the end of the month. Now that man says his church was struck by lightning, and that if I will help him to rebuild it, the Lord will bless me. What I want to tell him is that if the Lord struck it by lightning, He probably knew what He wanted, and the man had better let things be. But instead, I am sending him a polite answer declaring there are so many churches in Atlanta it takes all my money to help them along."

"And this is just one of many. That's what comes from getting your picture in the paper," concluded the genial clerk with a sigh.

"Why," he resumed with new impetus, "they come in here trying to sell us ice cream festival tickets in the dead of winter, when the heat's all off, and we are shivering in our shoes. Or some man wants us to buy tickets for regattas, tells us we're sure to enjoy it because his little girl is going to recite."

"One woman proffered tickets the other day, asking me to buy. She said I would have a lovely time because her little girl was going to recite 'I Am Mad.' I told her the little girl might not be, but that all of us would surely be if we had to sit through it, and the lady left in a huff."

"But the climax of them all was Monday. Just after council adjourned, a wavering-footed man elbowed his way to the front of the crowd, unrolled a dirty scroll and said: 'Is there a man in this crowd who will lend me a dime until tomorrow on this piece of poetry?'"

"It was three stanzas long, but nobody responded, and with muttered malice on their faces they all looked on until tomorrow on this piece of poetry?'"

BLOODY STICK NOW IN POSSESSION OF FRANK'S ATTORNEYS

Was Found on May 10 by Two Pinkerton Detectives on the First Floor of the Pencil Factory

DEFENSE TO CLAIM NEGRO WIELDED THE INSTRUMENT

It Was Sent to Chemist Outside of State for Examination—Subpenas Issued for State's Witnesses

In the possession of the defense of Leo M. Frank is a bloody bludgeon, with which it will be claimed at the trial, in all probability, that James Conley, the negro avowed, struck Mary Phagan over the head while she battled on the first floor of the National Pencil factory for her life.

While it has been known for weeks that the defense of Frank will try to pin the crime on the negro, the claim that any weapon other than the negro's hands and the cords placed about her neck, were used, is an absolutely new development to the public, although the bloody stick, about an inch in diameter, has been in the possession of the defense since May 10.

It is said that it was found in the factory on that date by two Pinkerton operatives, L. F. Whitfield and W. D. McWhorter, who at that time were conducting a systematic search of the factory.

According to the story, which has come to The Journal on excellent authority, on May 9, after city detectives, factory employees, various private sleuths and quite a few curiosity seekers had searched for nearly two weeks without finding any new clues to throw light on the tragedy, Whitfield and McWhorter, two of the Pinkerton operatives who are on the "silent force," never appearing before the public, went to the factory for a new examination of the big building, which was the scene of Atlanta's most sensational tragedy.

They started on the second floor, where the state maintains that Mary Phagan met her death, and spent the entire day going over that floor.

By the next day, May 10, the detectives had reached the third floor of the building. They went back by the boxes upon which Conley says he sat while waiting for instructions from the factory superintendent. Some ten or fifteen feet past the boxes and considering the fact that the "silent force," never appearing before the public, went to the factory for a new examination of the big building, which was the scene of Atlanta's most sensational tragedy.

CITY DETECTIVE WORKED WITH BURGARS SAYS CHIEF

Lanford Claims One of His Men Joined Gang in Order to Trap Them

That a member of the city detective force has been working with the gang for some time past as one of its members, under instructions from headquarters, was the interesting admission made Tuesday morning by Chief of Detectives Lanford, although the chief declined to reveal his identity. The officer was assigned to this delicate task when it was thought that the gang could be caught at petty thievery of suit cases and such work. But it soon developed that they were bigger game, and their smaller misdeeds were recorded and passed until they could be caught at more serious undertakings.

Chief Lanford stated that the men had been sticking their store in an adjoining county with the goods that they stole and that their thieving furnished the store with all the wares it has. The police will get a search warrant and raid that store immediately, said he.

In the capture of two burglars at their work Monday night the city detectives consumed plans which they have been casting and recasting for six weeks past, and heeded the leaders of a gang whose activities they have been following almost in detail, according to Detective Chief Lanford. R. W. Miller and T. W. Reeves are the names of the men caught.

Detectives learned in advance their plot to rob the store of R. A. Gohar at 30 Carroll street, and surrounded the store and waited for hours in order to catch them "dead to rights" and insure conviction.

REEVES FORMER SLEUTH. Reeves formerly was a railroad detective and at one time was town marshal of East Point. Not very long ago he was tried for killing a youth in the railroad yards of Atlanta while he was on duty there one night. He was convicted, sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary, and appealed for a new trial, but it was denied.

Detective Chief Lanford now claims that Reeves has admitted to a "pal" that he killed the boy because he was caught him looting a freight car.

"Dead men tell no tales," the chief says Reeves remarked to his pal.

By means unknown to the gang detective headquarters have been keeping in close touch with its work, says Chief Lanford, and has tried twice previously to catch its members at work, but each time was frustrated by unforeseen circumstances.

NEARLY CAUGHT BEFORE. About three weeks ago four detectives secreted themselves at Barfield's store, West Hunter and Chestnut streets, and waited for the gang to come.

The officers, who were kept in the dark for a long time, saw four burglars, one of them an expert safe cracker, when the burglars started to force their entrance to the store.

Just at that moment an alarm clock in the neighboring negro laundry rang, and the burglars fled, thinking they were being followed.

About a week ago the detectives were following them to another "job," when the burglars grew suspicious, and Reeves, doubling in his tracks, encountered one of the sleuths face to face.

The detectives claim to have known practically all of the movements of the gang's members for some weeks past. The officers who were kept in the dark for a long time, saw four burglars, one of them an expert safe cracker, when the burglars started to force their entrance to the store.

Four suit cases, alleged to have been stolen, were recovered after the arrests Monday night. The police say Miller when caught was wearing part of the contents of two suit cases stolen from a LaGrange physician in Atlanta on July 4. The detectives expect to recover much more loot.

"We may turn up as much as several thousand dollars' worth of goods stolen by these men before we get through," said Chief Lanford.

Notwithstanding the rigid questioning to which they were put after their arrest, and which continued nearly all night, neither of the two men arrested had admitted anything, Tuesday morning.

TRIAL POSTPONED. The preliminary hearing of the cases against the men before Recorder Broyles will be deferred until the detectives have finished their search for stolen goods.

Miller's home is near Red Oak, Ga., on the College Park-Fairburn suburban car line. Reeves lives at 13 Stonewall street.

STORY OF CAPTURE. By the ruse of calling for someone to open the store (at 30 Carroll street) and wait on them at a late hour, the robbers secured entrance without the necessity of breaking in.

Edward M. Davis, a youth of sixteen, employed by the store owner as assistant and night watchman, responded to the call, knowing that the detectives were watching.

Immediately after arriving in the store, however, he was hit upon the head and dazed so that before he could raise an outcry a hand had gagged his mouth and he was being bundled into the ice box. There, in the frigid cold, he remained until after the arrests were made and the handcuffs were fastened on his wrists.

Someone heard a muffled shout at that critical moment, and a search for the youth located him in the ice box. He was so stiff with cold and cramped with confinement that he had to be carried across the street to his home.

The police learned of the plot to rob the store by overhearing two of the men as they talked of their plans. Detectives Harper, Davis, Sturdivant, Garner and Cheving were assigned to the case. The detectives stationed themselves around the store at 8:30 o'clock Monday evening. At 11 o'clock three men appeared and called for the owner of the store. When young Davis appeared, Miller asked for a soft drink and some smoking tobacco.

The youth got his keys and accompanied the trio to the store. He was struck as he turned on the electric light. No sound was heard, but the detectives noticed that the light fixture on was turned out again immediately. Then they closed in on the store, Miller, standing at the entrance with a club in hand, was surprised and captured by the detectives before he could warn the others. Reeves was caught inside, and the third man ran, diving through the window.

RETAIL MERCHANTS WORK WITH THE LEGISLATORS. They Are Holding Their Business Sessions at Night at Hotel Ansley

Several hundred members of the Retail Merchants' association are bending every effort to secure the passage of the new garnishment law and the fraudulent check bill in this session of the legislature.

The merchants are in annual convention here, having chosen Atlanta during the meeting of the legislature in order that they might keep in touch with any action on the two bills in which they are particularly interested.

They are trying to reach each member of the house in person, and have divided the delegates who are in attendance at the convention among the legislative districts. Each merchant is to see the legislator in his own district, and try to persuade them to sign an indorsement of the two bills.

The regular business sessions of the convention are held each evening at the Hotel Ansley, and special programs have been arranged. In between times, the visitors are being pleasantly entertained, a number of enjoyable things having been planned for them by resident members of the association.

SAYS UNCLE SAM SHOULD BUILD ROADS IN ALASKA. Secretary Lane Advocates Opening Up Country's Immense Resources

CHICAGO, July 22.—There should be a million miles of government-built railroad in Alaska, in the opinion of Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, who is here on his way west for an inspection of Indian reservations and several irrigation projects.

"I believe that Alaska should be aided as far as possible in opening up her immense resources," the secretary said. "The first step should be a government-owned railroad to the seaboard from the fields. Let congress appropriate money for the first Alaskan railroad and there will be, in the next two years, a colonization movement to the northern territory which will place in its insignificance the rush to the government lands within the nation proper."

HE IS LOOKING FOR RUSSIAN'S ESTATE. From far-away Russia comes a letter to Governor Slaton inquiring if he or any other official in the state of Georgia has any knowledge of a large estate left by a Russian emigrant named Trooshkovsky.

This letter, written by W. Thooshkovsky, one of the prospective heirs, was dated St. Petersburg, Russia, June 25. It was penned in a neat hand and employed the best of English. The writer stated that some years ago an emigrant named Trooshkovsky came to America from Russia; that he acquired considerable property and died here.

It is not known in what part of the United States the Russian located, and for this reason his relatives are writing to the governors of the various states in an effort to obtain information concerning his estate.

ATLANTA HORSES ARE GIVEN DRINKING FOUNT. Atlanta's horses at last have a "locker club" of their own. It is right on the city's main street, a place where they can cool off during the long hot summer days, while they sip cooling liquid, but nothing stronger than pure old Adam's ale.

Manager A. R. Keen, of the Georgian Terrace hotel, conceived the idea of establishing a drinking station for animals on the northeast corner of Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue.

The fountain is under the trees, on one of the corners of the hotel. "Free Water for Your Horses and Mules." A man is there all day with a sponge with which to cool off the heads and necks of the animals.

COTTON IS OPENING AROUND QUITMAN, GA.

Corn Acreage in Brooks County Is in Excess of Cotton

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) QUITMAN, Ga., July 22.—J. W. Thrasher, of Hickory Head, brought a cluster of fully matured and opened cotton bolls to town yesterday afternoon and declared he could pick at least 150 pounds of cotton from his field.

Cotton is beginning to open in other fields where conditions have been favorable, although this is the first brought to town, and this means that the cotton picking season will begin within a week or two, certainly by August 1. It is always said that one can tell nothing about the cotton crop until it is gathered and sold, but every indication points to a fine crop in this county.

The corn crop will be exceptionally large and the farmers are priding themselves upon the fact that the acreage of corn is much larger than the cotton acreage in the county.

At the annual meeting of the Brooks County Agricultural club at Hickory Head yesterday the reading of the crop reports revealed that on the thirty-three farms of the club members there was a total of 954 more acres of corn than of cotton. President J. G. Stanley in commenting on this said he doubted if any thirty-three farms in Georgia selected from any particular neighborhood could show a larger preponderance of corn acreage over their plot.

Battle Raged Here 49 Years Ago Today. Forty-nine years ago today, Tuesday, the battle of Atlanta was being fought. At noon, July 22, 1864, the first gun was fired. In a few moments artillery was booming, and the battle of Atlanta was on.

South Moreland avenue today traverses the major part of that day's battleground. Much of the fiercest fighting was done where the present Inman park is now, east of Hurt street, where Battery place gives out upon the Georgia railroad. Between Battery place and the Georgia railroad, between the Georgia railroad and the city, the battle raged.

Not less than 5,000 men were killed on both sides. Two corps of Hood's Confederate army were pitched against McPherson's whole army in blue, while General W. T. Sherman, whose headquarters were where the home of A. L. Waldo stands today on Cleburne avenue, held his army of the Ohio and Army of the Cumberland in reserve. The federal troops stretched out around the north of the city through Piedmont and Ansley parks and across Peachtree street to Howell station on the Western and Atlantic railroad; but none of these troops beyond Ponce de Leon springs engaged in the fighting that day.

The forty-ninth anniversary of the battle was observed silently and reverently, Tuesday, by those of its survivors who live now in Atlanta—particularly by the survivors of the Forty-second Georgia regiment, recruited in and around Fulton county, which assailed the federal position at the Hurt house that day and were driven back with heavy loss.

The anniversary brought to the minds of many the suggestion voiced some time ago that the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Atlanta be observed in some manner next year.

Yes, This Is July. Says Weather Man. Sure this is still July, but you would hardly recognize it as the same month of last Friday and Saturday night when the shadows. The change is certainly pleasant, isn't it? The showers did it. They have cooled things off remarkably. The thermometer made a brave effort to come back, but old mercury seems to have lost his battling eye. Seventy-six degrees was as high as it ever got Tuesday even in the middle of the day.

The senate adopted resolutions of sympathy proposed by Senator John T. Allen.

Golfer Holes Out In One Stroke By A 290-Yard Drive

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, July 22.—A world's golfing record was established in the eliminating play of the western championship tournament, at the Homewood country club today by E. P. Allis III, of Milwaukee.

The young man holed out in one from the first tee, the first time in recorded annals of the game that such a feat has been accomplished at the distance—290 yards.

Allis' drive was perfect, according to experts, who said the ball would not have rolled six inches further had it missed the cup.

"Chick" Evans, western champion, scored a two on the eighteenth green, his brilliant work netting him a 73, the best thus far of the tournament.

35 CAGED CONVICTS BURN TO DEATH IN MISS. CAMP

Were Trapped on Second Story When Stacks of Hay Caught Beneath Them

(By Associated Press.) JACKSON, Miss., July 22.—Trapped by flames in the second story of an antiquated convict cage, the first floor of which was used to store hay, grain and molasses, thirty-five negro prisoners were burned to death at the Oakley convict farm, twenty miles from here, late last night.

With the flames rapidly eating away on the only stairway leading to the second floor, the entrapped prisoners frantically tore at the heavy bars that covered the windows, but to no avail.

Their screams brought the two night guards to the scene before they had seen the flames, and soon other prison attaches hurried to the "cage."

Their efforts were futile, however, as the flames drove them back each time they attempted to liberate the men. At last they stood against when slowly the frantic screams of the burning convicts died away as one after another succumbed to the flames. Finally all was quiet, and the smell of burned human flesh permeated the air as the flames devoured the last of the building.

BUILDING OLD STRUCTURE. The building was constructed ten years ago of lumber taken from a discarded penitentiary; there is no fire-fighting apparatus at the farm and the first floor of the building was filled with inflammable material. Farmers living nearby hurried to the scene to help the two guards—all that are on duty at night—of other prison attaches, but they were of no assistance, as the fire burned too rapidly. It was only a few minutes from the time the fire started until it had claimed its awful toll.

The convicts all were worked in the cotton fields of the state farm and were housed in the "cage" at night. Among them were some desperate criminals serving long sentences.

The Oakley farm is one of the most important in the state; the state prison hospital being located there. No other building was in danger, however, as the destroyed "cage" was some distance from other buildings.

The fire started under the stairway on the first floor. The origin has not been determined.

SENATE PASSES BILL ON HOMICIDE DAMAGE SUITS

Bills on Granting Divorce and Rotating Judges Blocked by Committee

The state senate passed two bills Tuesday morning. One was a local measure and was approved in two minutes, the other was a general measure and was approved after two hours of discussion.

This was Senator Tarver's bill which says he has been trying for four years to make a law, the bill extending the right to sue in case of negligent homicide to all kindred of the deceased and to his creditors.

The bill was opposed by those whom the opposition characterized as "railroad lawyers" and was favored by the "damage suit lawyers," as named by the opponents of the measure. Senator Miller led the fight against the bill, speaking for forty-five minutes in favor of a substitute he offered designed to make Senator Tarver's bill less drastic.

The substitute characterized the Tarver measure as "a bill to benefit the damage suit lawyers of the state." He said that it was not only a monstrous travesty of justice but might become a serious tragedy as well.

Senator Allen also opposed the bill on the grounds that it merely widened the field for damage suits, a field, he said, which was greatly overworked already.

When the chair called for the vote on the bill it was passed 28 to 11, as recorded by Senator Smith.

According to the bill, any relative of a negligent homicide may sue for damages and his creditors may sue for the amount of the indebtedness.

REPORT ON FINANCE.
Several interesting committee reports were received Tuesday morning.

The committee on finance recommended for passage the bill to provide on what conditions foreign fire insurance companies doing business in the state which reinsure all their policies may withdraw from the state.

The general judiciary committee reported favorably on Senator Harrell's bill to create notaries public for the state at large; on Senator Tyson's bill to amend Section 1037, paragraph 4, of the code of Georgia, making husband and wife competent but not compellable to testify for or against each other; and on Senator Sweet's bill to authorize the seizure of a lost or destroyed deed to be proven.

The same committee reported adversely on Senator Bush's bill to appoint a geographic reporter for the grand jury of the counties of the state; on Senator Bush's bill providing that a divorce be granted only on statutory grounds; and on Senator Stark's bill to rotate the judges of the superior court by the North Carolina plan.

The two latter measures have excited considerable interest. A minority report may be filed on the divorce bill.

"THIRD DEGREE" BILL.
Senator Searcy's bill directed against the use of "the third degree," was registered favorably by the penitentiary committee. By the provisions of this bill no officer of the law can turn over a prisoner to any person not qualified by law to receive him. Neither is a prisoner allowed to be grilled by any person but the officer who has him in charge.

SHOP EARLY WEDNESDAY IT'S A HALF HOLIDAY

Weekly Half Holidays Meeting With Favor Among Both Merchants and Customers

Shop early. Wednesday's the weekly early closing day for the clothing and grocery and butchers and shoe men.

Take a little tip from this reminder—and get there before 1 o'clock, unless you can wait till Thursday.

The Wednesday half holiday for the workers in the retail stores has met with wide favor, not only among the employees themselves, but among the patrons of their stores. The latter find it entails practically no inconvenience to themselves to adjust their purchases to the half holiday, and it results in better attention on other days when the shops are open.

The Wednesday half holiday, preferred over the Saturday half holiday by those merchants whose trade is busy each Saturday, will continue until September 1.

JOSEPH A. JOHNSON DIED TUESDAY MORNING

He Was the Father of George E. Johnson—Resident of City 47 Years

Joseph A. Johnson, one of Atlanta's pioneer citizens, died Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock. He was eighty-six years old and for forty-seven years had been a resident of Atlanta. He came here from Richmond, Va., and was connected with the manufacturing interests of the city.

He was a veteran of the Mexican war, having fought under General Scott, with the rank of sergeant. He was captain of the National Guards of Richmond.

For a year and more he had been totally blind and feeble, but was confined to his bed for about three weeks only preceding his death. But a few years intervened between his death and that of his wife, to whom he had been married for fifty-five years.

He is survived by three sons, George E. Johnson, Orle Johnson and W. L. Johnson, and by two nephews, in Richmond, George and Charlie Crawford.

The funeral will take place at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the residence at 202 Luckie street. The pallbearers will be Captain Henry Jennings, Frank Whitley, A. Q. Adams, George H. Sims, James Hudson and Andrew Klassett.

The interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

10,000 CITIZENS FAIL TO RETURN PROPERTY

City Marshal Is Busy Sending Out Notices to This Effect

Ten thousand and more residents of the city have not turned in their property for taxation, according to the records in the city tax office. This was ascertained by securing a list of the patrons of the various schools, and by comparing this list with the tax digest for the year.

So the city marshal is now busy sending out notices informing the delinquents that they must pay their taxes, give good reasons why they did not return their property or, failing in this, they will be served with a tax lien.

Every year the tax digest is checked by the city directory, but even this does not mean that the tax collector gets an accurate record, because many names do not appear in the directory.

The school list gets most of those, however, whose names do not appear. Frequently there are good reasons why the names are missing from the digest, some families moving into the city after the tax records for the year are completed; but by checking the digest by the school list, the city is able to keep tabs on property owners.

GEN. WEST GETS MEDAL FROM GOVERNOR OF PA.

The medal, which is silver, has the figures of two veterans, Confederate and Federal, clasping hands in brotherly love.

COMMITTEE FAVORS BILL FOR CHEAPER TEXT BOOKS

House Calendar Is Crowded, However, and Bill May Not Come to Vote

Favorable report on the McCrory bill to authorize the state to print certain school books and sell them to pupils at cost was made to the house of representatives Tuesday morning by the house committee on education.

This was the second victory scored by Representative C. R. McCrory, of Shelby county, originator of the movement to have the state print its own school books and reduce their cost materially.

Mr. McCrory's first victory was recorded recently when the house committee on education reported favorably upon his resolution that a joint commission be raised by the two branches of the legislature for the purpose of investigating the difference between prices of books and the corresponding books elsewhere.

The well-informed surmise is that if the McCrory bill recommended Tuesday comes before the house for a vote it will stand a good chance of passage. But the condition is a big one, for the calendar of the house is crowded just now with much business. It is said that unless the McCrory bill is set as a special order there is small chance of its reaching the house at this session.

And if it is not passed at this session, it would be futile, for the school books for the next five-year period are to be selected at the end of this present calendar year by the state school board.

The McCrory bill in detail provides that the state superintendent of schools shall select the text for copy books and fifth grade readers and primary histories; and that, after the state school board has approved those texts, the printing of them shall be awarded by contract to the lowest bidder in open competition; and that the printed books shall be sold to the school children at their actual cost of production.

AUTO DASHES MADLY ON AFTER WRECKING BUGGY

Mrs. J. D. Huggins Injured
Seriously—Reward for Motorists Is Offered

Demolishing a buggy and throwing its occupants out, an automobile hesitated just long enough to regain its momentum, lost by the impact, and sped away down Peachtree road toward Atlanta Monday evening at 9:15 o'clock. Mrs. J. D. Huggins, wife of the superintendent of Ashford Park nurseries at Ashford station on Peachtree road, was thrown out upon her head. Her son, Hubert, aged twenty years, was thrown out also, but was not hurt. They were the only occupants of the buggy. In the automobile were two women and two men. Cobb Caldwell, in front of whose home near Ashford station the accident occurred, has offered a reward for the apprehension of the motorists. "Such wanton carelessness as a menace to all life on the public roads," says he. "If these people are found, whoever they are, I will help to prosecute them."

Mrs. Huggins was conveyed to her home in the nursery park. It is not anticipated that her injury will result fatally, though her condition is serious. She and her son were returning from Chamblee when the automobile, coming up behind them, ran them down, wrecked the buggy, threw them out, and hurried on.

Tuesday Morning

In joint session Tuesday morning, the senate and house consolidated for the purpose of the election of July 15, and declared Augustus O. Bacon elected to the United States senate for his fourth term. The vote for Georgia's senior senator was 25-23.

Through a house resolution, the senate concurring, Senator Bacon has been invited to address the general assembly during the present session. A joint committee from both houses has been appointed to deliver the invitation and only the acceptance of the senator and the setting of a date suitable for himself is awaited.

The general appropriations bill, of Crawford Wheatley, summer, set as a special order did not come up in the house owing to the brief session. It will be put on its passage Wednesday.

Furthermore, these associations are to receive notice of proposed action and have an opportunity to be heard by the local forester in reference to any proposed changes likely to affect materially their use of the forests.

SUFFRAGETTE MEETING EXPLAINED BY MRS. PEEL

Atlanta, Ga., July 22, 1913.

Mr. Editor:
I am asking that you give this announcement place in your columns in order to avoid placing the daughters of the American Revolution in an embarrassing position.

The Habersham chapter, as everyone knows, is preparing to erect a building on their lot on Peachtree street, which will be a very beautiful addition to that handsome thoroughfare and one of which the whole city will be proud. In order to increase their funds they have planned a series of entertainments from time to time, which have been generously patronized, and the last of which takes place this evening at 7:45 at Taft hall.

This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading thoughts of the day. It must not be thought for a moment that the daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization, or even as individuals. For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all gone. Our next venture will be a presentation of some of the beautiful Indian legends, but it cannot be inferred that we are Indians.

We hope all our friends will come out tonight. There will be some very bright thoughts exchanged, and a great deal of information disseminated, no doubt. The difference between a suffragist and a suffragette will be explained and many unique points taken.

Thanking you kindly, I have the honor to be,
MRS. WILLIAM LAWSON PEEL.
Vice President General N. S. D. A. R.

FORMER ATLANTIAN TELLS OF TRIPS INTO MEXICO

A. P. Rutherford Now of Houston Says Border Americans
Sympathize With Rebels

That the border population of the United States is largely in sympathy with the rebels' cause in Mexico and would like to see them win, is the assertion of A. P. Rutherford, at one time a resident of Atlanta, here now on a visit to his wife's parents. Recently Mr. Rutherford visited Mexico on business. His home is in Houston, Tex.

Mr. Rutherford adds that the reason for this leaning toward the rebels consists largely in the method used to dispatch the former president, Francisco Madero. The border theory is firm, says he, that Madero was murdered in cold blood.

Also, says Mr. Rutherford, the rebels are more courteous toward Americans than are the federalists, the latter showing their resentment that formal recognition has not yet been given to the Huerta administration.

"The abuse of Americans in Mexico is done almost wholly by the guerrilla bands, the nondescript who roam the country, looting as they go and fighting for neither side in particular," says Mr. Rutherford. He deprecates the fact that the federal army includes a large proportion of young boys, thirteen and fourteen years old—mere children, armed with rifles, furnishing food for the rebels' powder.

As the representative of an engineering firm in Houston, Mr. Rutherford has had occasion several times to visit Mexico on construction work. His most recent trip was to Columbus, where he spent five weeks. He returned from there by way of Matamoros, crossing the border on July 4 into the United States. The battle in Matamoros had occurred just a few days before he arrived there. The rebels occupied the town at the time, and some federal skirmishers were to be seen even then on the hills near by. The rebels had looted the banks, that being their usual method, according to Mr. Rutherford, of obtaining war funds; but the American citizens in the town were not molested.

"The fighting down that way hasn't bothered me personally," says he. "My only worry has been in getting transportation."

Mr. Rutherford's last work was upon some irrigation plants. The fact signifies that notwithstanding unsettled conditions within the republic, there still are those who regard conditions as safe enough here and there to warrant further investment.

WARM WORDS EXCHANGED IN SENATE COMMITTEE

Lawyers of McRae, Ga., Have Argument Over Reinstatement Bill

In the general judiciary committee of the state senate Monday afternoon hot words were exchanged between certain lawyers of the Oconee circuit and William B. Kent, the Alamo, Ga., man who was disbarred from practicing law in the state in 1910 and whose reinstatement is sought by Senator Fred Kea, of the Sixteenth, in a bill to that effect which was before the committee.

Action on the measure was deferred until the next meeting of the committee.

Eschel Graham, a McKee lawyer, opposed the bill, presenting a petition signed by members of the Oconee bar circuit requesting that it do not pass. Graham charged that Kent was guilty of defrauding clients, altering court records, and other shady transactions. Kent replied that Graham's petition was signed at a lawyer's barbecue at which 250 bottles of beer had been drunk. He intimated that the main played some part in the signing of the petition. Graham declared that the petition was signed prior to the barbecue. He stated, moreover, that Kent had practiced law illegally since his disbarment.

Senator Kea said that he based his bill for Kent's reinstatement on the fact that he had won the support of the better element of the county and had been honored by several high officials. Kent should be given another chance, said the senator.

The Mexican Situation.

There is no occasion for surprise in the reports from Mexico forecasting an early collapse of the Huerta regime. It has been evident for months past that the provisional government was trembling on its treacherous foundations. The most it could hope for was a precarious tenure until the election next autumn when a new administration might be established by means at least nominally fair and constitutional. But now, it seems, the revolutionary forces are oversweeping every barrier; apparently it is but a matter of weeks or perhaps days when even his spurious title to power will be wrested from Huerta.

The provisional president essayed to be a dictator but evidently he lacks the qualities of which successful dictators are made. That he was a gifted soldier, no one could doubt; and he was also unscrupulous and as regards sheer doggedness of will, unbending. It was predicted, when he seized the presidency, that he would soon have the rebellion under heel. That very ruthlessness with which he was credited was regarded by some as a virtue which would scourge the country back to peace.

But there was little or nothing in Huerta to command popular confidence or support. His own followers knew the dishonorable paths by which he had risen to power. The world condemned the slaughter of Madero as inhuman and uncivilized. The new administration lacked moral strength to begin with and it was unable to muster physical strength to go on with.

The army became first indifferent and then, in many instances, openly hostile to the provisional president. Troops sent out to put down an uprising would go over boldly to the rebels. In these circumstances it was inevitable that the Huerta regime would eventually fall.

The wisdom of the United States' policy in declining to recognize so flimsy a pretense to government is now manifest. Such recognition could not have bolstered up a regime that lacked the first elements of stability. It would merely have proved embarrassing to our own country. What the immediate future of Mexico may be is beyond prediction. One thing, however, is certain; the Wilson administration has done well thus far to pursue a neutral and waiting policy toward Mexican affairs.

No, Alonzo, a barnacle isn't a tramp who sleeps in a barn.

What we want now is light on the prospect for a scuppernong crop.

The Proposed Nicaraguan Treaty.

The proposed treaty with Nicaragua whereby the United States would acquire the exclusive and perpetual right to build a canal across that country and would also assume a friendly supervision of its affairs seems to have won the approval of leading members in both parties of the Senate. Such an agreement would remove once and for all the possibility of foreign competition with the Panama canal, an assurance much to be desired; and furthermore it would give our nation a valuable naval base, together with several islands, in the Gulf of Fonseca.

In return for these advantages, the United States would pay Nicaragua three million dollars which would be applied to the upbuilding of the latter's public works and educational interests. This arrangement would be distinctly beneficial to Nicaragua whose development has woefully lagged because of a lack of funds and also the lack of any guarantee of a stable and efficiently administered government. Under the sympathetic protection and guidance of the United States, the latter difficulty would cease to exist. The Nicaraguans themselves appear heartily in favor of the proposed treaty. Indeed, their National Assembly has previously sanctioned a somewhat similar agreement that was advanced during the Taft administration and is now in special session to approve the new plan.

Senator Bacon, chairman of the foreign relations committee, who opposed the former proposition, is quoted as saying that the treaty now suggested is "entitled to the most careful consideration." Other Senate leaders, Republicans as well as Democrats, hold the same view, so that the administration's Nicaraguan policy is assured of a responsive hearing. Any such plan requires, of course, thorough and far-sighted inquiry; but it is evident that if the United States can secure so important a concession as the exclusive and perpetual right to the Nicaraguan canal route, without unduly involving herself in foreign problems, she should certainly do so.

The currency bill will come in time to make our Christmas purchases easier.

Now that Turkey has recovered what she lost, we may expect peace in the Balkans.

Japan has paused long enough to watch the Chinese fireworks display to forget us for a time.

Teachers' Salaries.

One of the distinctly cheering omens of our time is the public awakening to the injustice and the folly of underpaying school teachers. From the discontent which this state of affairs is bestirring the nation over, a remedy is bound to spring. In the meanwhile, it is well to note the fact, recently established by the Russell Sage Foundation, that in the United States as a whole the average annual wage of teachers is only four hundred and eighty-five dollars, smaller than that of coal miners, factory workers and many unskilled laborers; and that in the South thousands of rural school teachers are paid less than a hundred and fifty dollars a year.

It is particularly worth while to observe Georgia's rank in this regard. Though there was an appreciable increase in the salaries of our common-school teachers between 1911 and 1912, their average annual salary is now only two hundred and fifty dollars a year. This state stands forty-fourth on the roll of the Union in respect to teachers' salaries.

That record is lamentable enough, but what shall be said of the additional fact that, under its present policy, the state compels its teachers to wait long months after their services have been rendered for the penurious salaries they do receive! For this latter condition, there is no excuse. The legislature can no longer afford to neglect a matter that concerns so vital a sphere of the people's interests. Some means whereby the teachers will be assured of prompt and regular payment should be devised without further delay.

The most feasible means yet suggested to this end is the proposed levy of a special school tax of one mill for the first year and of a fraction of a mill for the second year. A constitutional amendment making this possible would, we believe, be heartily ratified, if submitted to the people. It is to be hoped that the legislature will open the way for the solution of this urgent problem.

Never call any man a liar to his teeth unless they are false.

And many a man looks upon a dollar saved as a good time lost.

Maybe in time the Mexican dollar will be brought back to a peaceful circulation.

Don't kick on the weather. It does no good and the present brand makes two to one blades of cotton.

The Standard Oil Co. has had to pay the state of Texas $500,000, which ought to go some distance toward making up for the boll weevil.

The Atlanta Municipal Court Bill.

There was ratified at the last general election in Georgia a constitutional amendment empowering the larger cities of the State, if they so desired, to replace their Justice-of-the-Peace courts with a Municipal court that would banish the abuses which had crept into the older system and would also guarantee a fairer and more efficient administration of this important province of the law.

The changes thus allowed were limited to the centers of population because it was in them that the evils and shortcomings of the "J. P." plan were felt. The magistrates of country districts and smaller towns are chosen in Georgia, as they were in old England, largely on a basis of deserved honor and they serve for the most part from a sense of public duty, not for the purposes of gain. But the "J. P." system in such communities is vastly different from what it is in cities like Atlanta, a fact which was evidently appreciated throughout the State, if we may judge by the overwhelming majority of votes in favor of the amendment.

Through a bill introduced in the Legislature Monday, Atlanta now seeks to avail herself of the right to supplant her numerous and generally unsatisfactory Justice of the Peace courts with a single, well designed Municipal court. The three Representatives from Fulton county and the Senator from this district, Senator Huie, of Jonesboro, are all said to have pledged their support to this measure, so that it seems assured of passage at the present session of the general assembly.

Certainly there is no one piece of legislation which the Atlanta people are more earnestly desirous of seeing enacted. This city's Justice of the Peace courts are outworn and inefficient. In some instances they have been made instruments of flagrant wrongs and inhuman oppressions. This is not to be taken as meaning that there are not worthy men holding the office of Justice of the Peace in Atlanta, for, there are; but these magistrates themselves have testified to the inadequacy of the system and some of them were among the staunchest supporters of the amendment making a new and better order possible.

The Atlanta Bar Association, representing the conviction not only of its own members but of the general public as well, is unitedly behind the Municipal court bill for this city. The measure is admirably drawn to meet local needs. It should, and doubtless will, receive the legislature's unhesitating approval.

THE NEW RURAL SCHOOL

A RADICAL EXPERIMENT.
BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

A school without school books, without classes, without grades, without examinations, without punishments; a school where the children may not only whisper but may talk aloud, where there is neither reading nor writing nor arithmetic by such names, where the pupils never work but always play—such is the rural school at Rock Hill, S. C.

To school children it may seem to be only a bit of heaven by chance transferred to earth, but to educators and pedagogues it is intensely interesting because it appears to be a successful experiment pointing the way to the solution of the vexing problem of how to improve rural schools. It is hardly necessary to say that in this school the pupils do learn the three R's, even when they think they are playing and not studying. What is more important is that they also learn how to grow cotton and corn and beans and tomatoes; how to cook, how to sew, how to buy and sell, how to enjoy their lives and how to make homes happy.

This experimental school has been as successful as it is radical in its departure from conventional ideas of what a school should be, and of how it should be conducted. It was not conceived in an effort to support some one's pedagogic theory, for it is quite innocent of a theory. It was designed as an attempt to remedy the shortcomings of the ordinary rural school, especially in the south.

Between the Potomac and the Mississippi rivers there are, in round numbers, 50,000 rural schools. Forty thousand of these are of the one-room, one-teacher type. Seldom does one of these rural schools grow. The trustees, generally conservative farmers, usually employ a young woman teacher—the cheaper the better. More often than not she comes from a distant community. Her interest is but temporary and her influence but the money inspiration. The school usually lasts but four, sometimes six, months. Such children as may be spared from house or field work are sent to the school. Next session a new teacher is employed, the work is begun as before, and the school has no chance to grow.

Many of these 40,000 one-room schools are housed in miserable shacks and huts unfit for swine. Few of them even remotely approach a sanitary ideal. Most of them are positively centers of infection for hookworm disease, for tuberculosis, and on occasion, for epidemic diseases.

Many of the children who go to them hope to get away from the country and into the city as soon as ever they can grow up; others have no ambition at all. Only the exceptional child is content to build his hope upon improving his condition on the farm. Until recently none of these schools so much as attempted to give any instruction that would be of practical benefit on the farm, or in the farm home. The few that did make the attempt did it in such a fashion as to make of the fascinating mystery of plant growth as dull a tale as ever was six times six is thirty-six. The Boys' Corn clubs and Girls' Tomato clubs have changed this in hundreds of communities, but much is yet left to be done.

The dreamers who dreamed Rock Hill school first endeavored to see clearly what the farmer must do all his life long, and what the farmer's wife must do all her life long. Then they resolved to make a school regardless of convention or tradition that would train the farmer children for their future work, and train them not only to do that work well but to have joy in it. And they saw, too, the awful loneliness of the farm, that thing that drives farmers' wives to insanity, and they resolved that this school should train children how to amuse themselves, how to find enjoyment in the society of others, of themselves and of books.

As this school experiment was to be made not to determine a laboratory theory, but to be of use in practical, everyday life, the utmost care was taken in the initial steps.

First of all, it was evident that the school trustees would not be willing or able greatly to increase the amount of money to be spent on a school session, so it was decided to retain the one-teacher idea. The problem then was how to enable one teacher to make her school a live and vital factor in the community life.

The Peabody board on November 2, 1910, appropriated the money for the project. As it was a new experiment it was decided that the appropriation should be liberal, but yet not beyond the bounds of any school district. The sum of $600 was set aside to do the work. A home was found for the new school on the edge of the campus of Winthrop college at Rock Hill. It was an old farm house, lately used by the college carpenter, but just such a house as might be found or easily constructed in any country district. The three rooms of the ground floor were utilized, and there was a veranda or gallery running all around the house—a valuable part of the plan as it later developed. With the house was a tract of land to serve as a garden with enough yard for a generous playground. On one side was the college, on the other the open country.

At first the children were not farm children. They came from the home of cotton mill operatives in the nearby mill town, but they were all from country families who but lately had left the farm for the mill. There were also a few children from the families of the college faculty. That was for only the first short term, from March to July, 1911.

When the time came to open the school again in the fall the trustees from a rural district came in of their own motion and asked if they might send the money they usually had paid to a teacher for a four-months' school and pay a driver who would bring the children to the school in the morning and take them home at night. The proposition, welcome as it was to those who would experiment on rural children, was accepted and proved to be so successful that still another district asked to do the same thing. But this would have destroyed the one-teacher idea, and it was declined. The result is that not one but dozens of school districts are now planning to follow in the "new way."

The school was born in the brain of Dr. A. P. Bourland, secretary of the Conference for Education in the South. When the time came he received valuable help and suggestions from W. K. Tate, the state supervisor of rural schools for South Carolina. They decided to place the experiment school at Winthrop college, where it could have the friendly care of President D. B. Johnson and others of like faculty.

All of these men recognized that in blazing new paths they must needs have a hardy pioneer, and they searched carefully for a teacher to whom to entrust the experiment. Their choice happily fell upon Mrs. Hetty B. Browne, then a teacher in the city schools of Spartanburg.

They talked with Mrs. Browne, discussed with her the familiar shortcomings of the rural school, went over their plans in a general way—a discussion of the essentials of teaching by the senses—and left the matter to her. It was as if they had written on a bit of paper: "There never was before in the whole world such a thing as a school. You have the first school. You have the pupils. Let them learn."

The Conning Tower

BY FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

SUMMER NIGHT.

Softly dance sweet singing zephyrs,
Through the trees, through the trees,
And a new born silver crescent
Gleets the breeze, gleets the breeze.

In the heaven, shining brightly,
Twinkle stars, twinkle stars,
And the white clouds, slowly sailing,
Look like bars, look like bars.

Zephyr, crescent star and cloudlet,
Make hearts light, make hearts light,
Fill our thoughts with pleasant fancies,
Pure and bright, pure and bright.

Singing zephyr, greeting crescent,
Twinkling star, sailing bar,
Make our vision heavenly glimpses,
Without war, without war.

MARY C. BURKE.

Many the ode that Miss Burke has inspired, but none so fair in all the world as this elegiac, by William Wallace Whitehead:

O Mary Burke, I love your work,
It's so delightfully irregular—
It's easy as smoke to rhyme like Pope,
But it's hard to be original and jocular.

Speaking of poetry and the desire to shirk, as Quintus Horatius Flaccus used to do (cf. yesterday's Columnade) we t. g. p. in printing "Song of the battle ship Texas," by a new contrib., Elson B. Cahn, act. 7 1-2 years:

The battle ship Texas is going to sea,
The Spaniards are firing at you and at me,
But we are brave and we are strong,
And we still sing a gallant song.
If we die it is for our own country and the people therein,

So come on fellows be brave and fight and try to win,
For the battle ship Texas is going to sea.
The Spaniards are firing at you and at me,
Come let's try to be like Washington who never told a lie,
So come boys we have a fleet, too,
Hurrah, hurrah, we have something to do,
For the battle ship Texas is going to sea,
The Spaniards are firing at you and at me.

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPPY.

July 16.—Slept ill, and at my office I am querulous with the printer-men, who, Heaven knoweth, do their best. Read this day the first chapter of "Angel Island," wrote by Miss Inez, my Mistress Inez Gilmore, that is, and found it to promise well, and I shall like it. Home early and slept all the afternoon, which I never could do when Gretchen or Martha was with us, what with the great clatter they did make, but Lena is very gentle and quiet, and in all things as she should be. In the evening with my wife to seek out a dwelling-apartment, but find all too costly and I fear I must go upon the lecture platform to augment my income.

17.—Up by times and at my office all the morning, labouring. Read further this afternoon in Hugh Walpole's "Fortitude" and found therein something he quotes, but from what source I do not know, but I did transcribe it and shall set it down:

"But, concerning the Traveler who would enter the House of Courage there are many lands that must be passed on the road before he rest there. There is, first, the Land of Lacking All Things—that is hard to cross. There is, Secondly, the Land of Having All Things. There is the Traveler's Fortitude most hardly tested, here is, Thirdly, the Land of Losing All Those Things That One Hath Possessed. That is a hard country indeed for the memory of the pleasantness of those earlier joys redoubteth the agony of lacking them. But at the end there is a Land of Ice and snow that few travelers have compassed, and that is the Land of Knowing What One Hath Missed.... The Bird was in the hand and one let it go.... That is the hardest agony of all the journey.... but if these lands be encountered and surpassed then doth the Traveler at length possess his soul and is master of it.... This is the Meaning and Purpose of Life," which I deemed fair words and heartening.

The Inez Millholland Alumni Association will hold its first meeting at Madison Square Garden, Monday, July 21. The meeting will be called to order by John Fox, Jr., and Lord Curzon will make a short address.

Sir: I called at your editorial rooms yesterday, entering the outer chamber. The boy was absent. On the door, which was closed, leading to the sanctum sanctorum was a sign "No Admittance." ## SWEET ALICE

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.
(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

"O don't you remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt, Sweet Alice, so good and so true?"

There is not much being said about her nowadays. Naturally she never gets into the newspapers; she is not that kind. And the novels of the day seem to pass her by for more thrilling types, although once she was quite the vogue. But for all that she is still doing business at the old stand.

I refer to the simple, loyal, lovable girl who loves just one boy, the one who is to be her husband, the one into whose career all her life is to be gladly poured.

I would not dare these days to say she is the highest kind of woman. She couldn't be a suffragette nor a leader of any "movement." She is just girl. When she grows up she is just woman. She is not famous nor in anywise conspicuous.

But she is the kind men go crazy over; the kind to live for and die for.

And while the great and grand woman-leaders of our time are being garlanded and feted I may be allowed perhaps to hand this one little flower of appreciation to Sweet Alice.

Yes, I know it is sentimental; it is gush. But the heart that won't gush once in a while is pretty dry. I don't covet it.

The loyal devotion of one man to one woman is still the thing that today excites the most universal admiration.

There are all sorts of loves; but the love that is stuck to is the best. Nothing in McKinley's career so popularized him as his tender and constant attention to his invalid wife.

Before Pickett led his braves to that fatal charge at Gettysburg he wrote to his sweetheart, and in telling her how he loved her alone he found something that nerved him to courage.

It may not be much to inspire and ennoble a man, to make him unafraid to tell and to live the truth, to keep him clean, "without fear and without reproach," but that is what the Sweet Alice girl can do.

I like to think of the army of lovers in the world. Just a week or so ago the college towns were buzzing full, but no incidents of commencement time meant more than those walks where they went a-twozing, hand in hand in the summer night, and talked of how passing wonderful it was that they should have found each other and that love came. If there's any more important business than making love I don't know what it is.

I like to think of the innumerable little households where the young husband glazes over Sweet Alice and her babies and still tells her fond and foolish notions that warm her heart.

I like to think of the pairs that have held loyalty together through sun and storm, of the two that are grandparents now, but still find no hours so full of content as those they spend together and apart from the world.

This love is the best; the love that is weathered and beaten; that has been assailed by every outward enemy and all inward weaknesses, but still holds and glows; the love that death itself cannot slay, the love that lives on yonder in the unknown, as sure and eternal as the God who gave it, who wrought it, this miracle of miracles.

The President Unconvinced

President Wilson is said to have found no reason in any representations that have been made to him for a change in the policy adopted with regard to the Huerta government in Mexico. His determination to consider this as a moral question is admirable.

It is hard to believe that other nations have sought to force the administration into another course, and it is said in Washington that reports of pressure brought to bear have been greatly exaggerated. It would be, indeed, a fine piece of presumption for any country to represent to the United States that refusal to recognize the existing government in Mexico was ground for complaint.

Ambassador Wilson, when he reaches Washington, may be depended upon to endeavor to persuade the president that interest urges and honor permits the recognition of Huerta. Mr. Wilson was promptness itself in representing to Washington the wisdom of such procedure. Madero was not laid out for burial before a recommendation of Huerta's government from Mr. Wilson was laid before the secretary of state. It was hardly less enthusiastic than the recommendation Huerta submitted himself.

Mr. Wilson may be persuaded of the wisdom of his opinion, but the viewpoint of the American resident in Mexico City is not one which embraces the issue nationally. It is purely local, even if not purely selfish.

The United States can confer no benefit on Mexico and obtain none for itself in recognizing as a government one erected by duplicity, treachery and assassination.—Chicago Tribune.

Worry Is Diseased Thought

(Collier's Weekly.)

Concentrated thought is virtually irresistible. All the vast edifice of modern science and industry is obviously the product of thought, much of it of our own time and observation. The birth of an idea in the human mind is clearly the one and only dawn of empires and revolutions, of engines, philosophies, trade routes, civilizations.

To class worry under the head of thinking, therefore, seems a glaring sacrilege. Yet worry is thought, for all that—diseased, impure, adulterated thought. It means an admixture of emotion, of the worst of all the emotions—fear—into one's thinking. Instead of concentrated, clear, serene thinking on the problem in hand, worry is thinking, muddled black with fear. It is about as helpful as clapping the brakes upon wheels tolling uphill.

Yet all the world is laboring under that Egyptian heaviness of the wheels and almost every spirit is a spirit in the dark prison of fear. But once we grasp this truth clearly, once we convince ourselves that we can rid our thought of emotionalism, of fear, the day of our deliverance is at hand. And the substitution of encouraging, healthy thought, of new channels among the worn ruts, is a powerful aid.

There may be failures and backslidings, as is customary in all mortal effort and human endeavor. But fear is weakened like a choking thing, and more and more clear and unimpeded becomes our thinking. For more clear and unimpeded becomes our thinking. For we realize at last, once for all, that where thinking cannot help us, fear certainly will not. And then we have, worry by the throat.

Quips and Quiddities

Pat was over in England working with his coat off. There were two Englishmen laboring in the same store, so they decided to have a joke with the Irishman.

They painted a donkey's head on the back of Pat's coat and watched to see him put it on. Pat, of course, saw the donkey's head on his coat, and, turning to the Englishmen, said: "Which of you wiped your face in my coat?"

Dugald was ill, and his friend Donald took a bottle of whisky to him. Donald gave the invalid one glass, and said:

"You'll get another yin in the mornin'."

About five minutes elapsed, and then Dugald suddenly exclaimed:

"Ye'd better let he hae the ither noo, Donald, ye hear o' sae mony sudden deaths noodays."

PUBLIC WILL BE WELCOME AT SUFFRAGETTE MEETING

Mrs. Peel Will Preside and Speakers Will Discuss
Both Sides

Taft hall at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night will be the scene of Atlanta's largest suffrage meeting, when the suffragists and the anti's will be given a chance to expound their views to the public.

The meeting is to be held under the auspices of the Habersham chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. William Lawson Peel will preside.

More than a dozen well known Georgians, who have pronounced views either for or against equal rights for women, have been selected as speakers, and the announced purpose is to instruct rather than to convert the public.

The meeting follows directly the meeting of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, and is to be another evidence of the increasing interest in the south in the woman's movement.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, the organizer, will open the meeting with several selections on the echo organ. The list of the speakers at the meeting, besides Mrs. Peel, will include:

R. H. Hardeman, Dr. A. M. Hughlett, H. H. Swift, J. L. Wade, W. L. Cogrove, Louis Pope, J. R. Smith, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Frank Rice, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, R. A. Broyles, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, E. B. Black, Miss Rosa Woodberry, J. J. Spaulding, Samuel Lumpkin, Olive Leonard, J. Grossman, Ernest Neal, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mrs. M. T. McWhorter and Mrs. S. E. Cunningham.

WOODWARD WON'T PAY THE DICTOGRAPH BILL

Says Whole Procedure Was an Outrageous Piece of Dirty Work

"I am not liable to waste the city's money by signing any check in payment of the dictograph warrant," said Mayor Woodward Tuesday morning. "I said before," he continued, "that the installation of that dictograph was an outrage, a dirty piece of work; and they'll have to show me where the city has derived benefit from it before I'll sign a check for it. It's an expense, anyway, for which no provision is made."

Though the mayor declined to commit himself definitely in the matter, it may be inferred that he will not sign the dictograph check.

Chairman A. R. Colcord of the police committee has been asked to approve the warrant which is for $19 in installing only the cost of installing the instrument. He has stated that he will approve the warrant which will then go to council after which it will rest with the mayor.

B. O. O. B. LODGE IS ORGANIZED AT ANSLEY

The buffaloes have herded in Atlanta, in the palm room of the new Ansley hotel a number of Atlantians gathered Monday and were formally organized into the Atlanta herd, No. 150, of the Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, by Senator W. S. Wells of Indiana, the supreme organizer of the order.

At present the local lodge is located in the Atlanta Trust building, 440, but a committee has been appointed to make arrangements for a permanent location for the herd.

At the meeting Monday night the following officers for the lodge were chosen: A. P. Bayless, past worthy lion; H. T. Kilpatrick, worthy lion; Dr. Dan T. Sage, vice worthy lion; H. S. Courtney, guide; S. S. Bak, guard; William P. Jones, sentinel; and Dr. J. C. King, J. C. Acton and Henry Murall, trustees. J. W. Leaux, C. O. Duvall, Dr. King, C. F. Hoffman and W. C. Flury were appointed on an organization and boosters committee. Oscar Barnes was elected treasurer.

GRAND UNITED ORDER WINS ODD FELLOWS' SUIT

The Grand United Order of Odd Fellows of America has won out before the state supreme court in its efforts to obtain a permanent injunction against the use of the name "Ancient Order of Odd Fellows, Leeds Unity," by an organization in Macon.

The case upon which the supreme court based its ruling was that of Emory et al vs. the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, etc., et al. In the Bibb county superior court the "Grand United Order of Odd Fellows of America" had obtained an injunction against the "Ancient Order of Odd Fellows, Leeds Unity," and the members of the latter organization had excepted an appeal.

Passing upon the case, the supreme court held that the lower court did not err in holding that the name of the defendants' order was "substantially similar" to the name of the plaintiffs' order, and a "colorable imitation" thereof.

"But, doctor," she said, "I want to raise my baby with all the modern improvements. I don't want a single modern improvement about him," the prosaic old man replied.

Mrs. W. R. Smith, of 12 Erin avenue, has requested The Journal to aid her in a search for 16-year-old son, Byron Estes, whom she fears has met with foul play.

COMMITTEE VOTES FOR WOMEN LAWYERS BILL

Stormy Debate Ends in Favorable Report for Admitting Women to Bar

After a hot discussion, general judiciary committee No. 1 of the house Monday afternoon voted 9 to 3 for the passage of the bill introduced by L. J. Cooper, of Ware, to allow women to practice law in Georgia.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd, led the fight for a favorable report on the measure, and was seconded by Samuel L. Olive, of Richmond, and H. B. Moss, of Cobb. Women, they declared, were admitted to all vocations in Georgia except law, and there was no reason why they should be barred from one when members of their sex took part actively in others.

R. B. Blackburn, of Fulton, opposed the bill on the grounds that a woman's place was at home and not at the bar of justice, with all kinds and conditions of criminals.

CHAMBER MAY RENT SPACE TO THE MANUFACTURERS

Your Town's Regeneration

DID you ever think that city officials can materially lower the death-rate of their towns if they would do it?

Serious thought, that. We want to talk to the officials of towns or cities that need better sanitation.

So long as disease has a wide-open chance at your town, neither you nor your neighbor is safe. And if you can prevent it, you are criminally negligent not to try.

The sewerage system of your town--is it correct? How about it?

Is the water supply pure? How about the chances for a summer's run of fever that may sweep right through your population?

Somebody says it is wiser to spend time arousing town

We want you to write to us and let us show you how it will pay your town to put in modern improvements. Write us your needs.

The California beetle cannot stand music. Three playings of a slow piece, like "Home, Sweet Home," puts him out of misery, but ragtime will kill him in a few bars.

Butterflies are not affected. The bumblebee flies into a nervous fit.

The recent warm weather has caused a rush of summer visitors to the mountains and the Kanuga attendance is growing daily. There is a large reservation list for August.

Kanuga's reputation as a "Paradise for Children" has received an impetus this year, due to the presence of Miss Marion Robertson, of Norfolk, Va., as play leader for the smaller children.

This is probably the only resort in the south, and one of the few in the country, that has a children's building and a playground equipped with modern play apparatus especially designed for the wholesome out-of-door recreation, planned and supervised by a playground leader.

August, however, will be the month of most interest to everyone, and plans are now being made for recreation activities to which all are looking forward. There are to be a number of trips of Camp Fire Girls under Miss Robertson's direction.

Mr. C. R. Weeks, a national Boy Scout commissioner, will spend August at Kanuga and will give his entire time to the leadership of boys of boy scout age. Council fires, "hikes" over-night camps on the nearby mountains, swimming and boating contests, etc., are all in the program.

Arrangements are being made for the golf tournaments for the week beginning August 18. There will be the usual open tournaments for visitors in addition to the various contests among members. A number of last year's golf enthusiasts are already here and the course, now acknowledged to be one of the best golf courses in the south, is in daily use.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

Picture gowns have become quite the fashion, and as they are a caprice of the day, women do not take them seriously, and therefore experiment with them at home. The result is good. No one knows just from where this fancy sprung; many have attributed it to the stage, some to the revival of the Louis XVI fashions. Whatever the source from which the idea came, the fashion itself is distinctly acceptable in mid-summer when women wish to look cool and attractive at one and the same time.

Every woman cannot wear a picture gown; it may not be easy to convince her of this fact, just as it is almost impossible to persuade her that a huge black picture hat is not becoming. It is not only the slim who can wear these fanciful frocks; stout women can also do it for the reason against them is not one of flesh so much as of facial features and expression. One needs a certain pliancy in the tell of a woman's face that is away from the conventional.

When women take this to heart there will be fewer serious mistakes made in dressing. Certain clothes belong to certain women, and they should never depart from them.

The Dolly Varden Frock.

It is difficult to know what to call the new kind of gown. They might be styled frocks from far and near, they seem to have stepped down from the French and Spanish fashions that have been used for centuries. There is something of Watteau, something of Boucher, and something of the figures of the 18th century. They are made with slightly full paniers, narrow satin skirts, covered with lace flounces here and there, and the square neck is outlined with a high white lace ruche.

Maybe it was the fashion for the ruche that brought in the gown. Maybe it was the fashion for red-heeled slippers which brought in the gown, or possibly it was just the yearning of women to be pictorial according to an earlier idea. Whatever the reason, here are the gowns, and the majority of them are called by the simple name of Dolly Varden.

The material is usually of figured crepe or voile which the show now sell in large quantities and which come in artistic patterns. The usual gown made in this fabric is not the kind to which I refer, for we have had that for us for six months made along ordinary lines, all of the same materials.

The modern frock is made of two materials with the addition of net or lace and sometimes colored tulle. For instance, if one has a round bodice and a full panier of figured crepe, the skirt may be of raspberry pink satin, or oyster satin, with two lace flounces underlined with deep pink or turquoise blue satin ribbon.

There will be a wide flange of white lace and tulle which fits closely around the neck at back and sides and falls down the front in loose folds. The collar at the back is run in a ribbon of blue or pink, and the elbow sleeves are finished with five-inch pleatings of lace with a festoon of ribbon at the top.

Take this costume and add to it a pair of pink or blue stockings, and high-heeled black slippers with red heels, and you have a dancing gown of rare charm.

Red-Heeled Slippers. It was only a matter of time before the coming of these foolish and effective little frocks should have brought with them the high-heeled slippers of the Louis XVI period with their immense buckles in front and their backs in the rear. There is a new kind of heel, too, which is used on these black slippers and it makes the foot look about three inches shorter than it is.

One would say that it was impossible to walk in such a shoe, but it is not. The ability of women to get along in yard-wide skirts and Spanish heels that put them on stilts. We have learned during the last three years that there are few limitations to what women can do in the name of fashion; if ever these Louis heels are adopted by the majority of American shoemakers, women will wear them, and not only turkey-trot in them, which is all very well, but they will go shopping in them, which is all very wrong.

The Evening Story

(Copyright, 1913, by W. W. Weller.)

"What makes you even think of such a thing?"

It was the first hot day, and to Christina's mind it was far too early in the season for a hot day. She sat on the porch and scowled. Not a soul had passed the house all that afternoon. "I hate it all—the farm, this stupid old house, and—Thad. Yes, I'm even growing to hate Thad," she muttered.

Thad had gone to town that morning to get a load of feed. He was always buying feed. It seemed to her that the cattle and horses always demanded fodder just at the time when she most longed for something. Now she not only longed for, but actually needed, a light frock and a net hat. Sometimes she felt that Thad had more heart for the cattle than for her.

"Thad seems to think," she thought, "I should grow my clothes the way they do. If it hadn't been for him I'd have been earning my own things and getting what I wanted. He came, and I thought he was the only thing that mattered. I was willing to do anything he wanted me to do. I didn't know what a farm was like. But I do now. I hate it. I thought I was going to die standing behind a counter, but now I wish I was right back there. I do! At least I'd have a little money to spend as I wish. I never went without a spring hat before in my life."

She was too angry to cry. Tears were impotent, anyway. She had found from trying that they did not have much effect on Thad. There was a hard streak in him which needed more than tears to melt. The more she said the more silent and firm Thad grew. She had spent herself trying to master him that morning, and in the end he had driven off to town quite as he had meant to do in the first place.

For three days she had been seeking to make him do her will, to take her to town in the buggy and let her spend some of the money as she wished. And in the end he had conquered. The cows must be fed if they were to give milk. Thad said. He had hidden her by a reasonable. Reasonable! Christina rocked so fast at the remembrance of that note in Thad's voice that the old cow dog lying flat and fast asleep on the other end of the porch lifted his head and looked at her reproachfully. The next instant he cocked his ears, leaped up, and scrambling off the porch, bounded across the yard toward the house.

The other end of the porch lifted his head and looked at her reproachfully. The next instant he cocked his ears, leaped up, and scrambling off the porch, bounded across the yard toward the house. Christina became aware that he had heard something; that she also was hearing something. First came a woman's voice, entreating yet mounting to impatience, then the sound of smart feet, and finally the scurry of feet in the road. A Jersey calf trotted meekly into view, followed by the old dog, grinning and victorious. Some distance from the dog followed a woman, helping herself along by a stick. She wore a limp calico wrapper and a sunbonnet.

"How do, Miss Howland?" she called, genially. "How do? Tolerably hot day."

"Yes, it is," replied Christina coldly. She hoped the old creature would go on after the calf.

Instead of taking the hint the woman turned in across the yard. "I guess I'll sit down with you a spell," she said amiably, as she took off her sunbonnet and began to flap it in an effort to cool herself. She was very brown and ugly and wrinkled and her worn and soiled wrapper seemed a mere sack for holding her bones and sinews together. She sat a moment panting and squinting down the road after the calf and dog. "She'll drive him home all right," she continued, "and I thought I'd let him do it, seeing he was willing."

Christina felt more than annoyed at the intrusion. The old woman was one of her neighbors and a typical farmer's wife of that locality, and as she looked at her she seemed to be viewing the result of a long process of deterioration such as now apparently threatened herself.

"Maybe it began by her husband spending all his money for fodder," she thought. "Maybe she used to like hats and lawn dresses as much as I do. And when she didn't get them she gave up. I shan't give up."

The old woman turned her head and looked up at Christina with a gathering light in her shrewd brown eyes. "How do you like farming?" she asked.

"I like it!" Christina's tone told nothing.

The old woman's scrutiny made Christina blush. "You must excuse me for looking at you so hard," she said quietly. "But you're so kind of pretty I couldn't help it. Besides, you make me think of somebody." Her chest heaved as she stared out across the fields with vistas of recollection in her eyes. Suddenly she aroused herself.

"You've never been over to see me," she remarked.

Christina shook her head impatiently. "I don't go to see anybody. I work all the mornings, and the afternoons I rest. There's a lot to do."

"Your man's a splendid young fellow. He thinks a sight of you. He ain't one to say much, but you can see that."

"I hope so." There was no mistaking the bitterness in Christina's voice. She laughed dryly. "I guess he likes his cattle better, though," she added. "Now, what makes you say that, child?" The old woman hitched nearer and lifted one hand and laid it upon Christina's knee. "What makes you even think of such a thing?"

Christina was moved. After all, talking relieved more than any amount of mere thinking. "I'll tell you, Mrs. Finley," she said.

"There's things I want—things I've always been used to having, and instead of Thad's giving me money to get them he goes off and takes it all to buy feed for the cattle. I've always earned my money. I don't like this having to beg a man for a cent." Her voice sank. "I guess I made a mistake in marrying him. I begin to wish I hadn't. Love! What's love when the real things of life creep in? You can live without love. You can't live without some other things."

She had spoken explosively. The old woman merely listened, patting the girl's knee. As Christina ceased she nodded reflectively. "See," she said. After a moment she went on slowly. "I'll tell you something since you seem to kind of need it. I was young once myself. That was some time back—a good many years. I was young and I was pretty. I lived up there in the town you came from. I worked in a millinery store, and I always had the prettiest clothes a girl could wish for. I earned 'em honest and I had 'em. But there came a time when clothes wasn't everything. I wanted something bigger and better'n I'd ever known. I got it in Jim Finley." She paused. "He was a farmer—something like your farmer. He come into the store one day to buy a hat for his ma, and he helped him pick it out. So I got acquainted. And we were married right away. I went to live with him on his place. Do you see it over there?"

She flapped her sunbonnet in the direction of a gray roof or two showing above a cleared hill. The poorest of the place in the section. Thad called it. Christina had never been there.

"Well, it was kinda nice them days," the old woman continued. "I went to it in the spring of the year just about this time. I thought I was going to be awfully happy. I didn't know any more'n you do about farming, but I had Jim. That seemed plenty. It wasn't long before I began to think different. The first time the

to get a load of feed. He was always buying feed. It seemed to her that the cattle and horses always demanded fodder just at the time when she most longed for something. Now she not only longed for, but actually needed, a light frock and a net hat. Sometimes she felt that Thad had more heart for the cattle than for her.

"Thad seems to think," she thought, "I should grow my clothes the way they do. If it hadn't been for him I'd have been earning my own things and getting what I wanted. He came, and I thought he was the only thing that mattered. I was willing to do anything he wanted me to do. I didn't know what a farm was like. But I do now. I hate it. I thought I was going to die standing behind a counter, but now I wish I was right back there. I do! At least I'd have a little money to spend as I wish. I never went without a spring hat before in my life."

She was too angry to cry. Tears were impotent, anyway. She had found from trying that they did not have much effect on Thad. There was a hard streak in him which needed more than tears to melt. The more she said the more silent and firm Thad grew. She had spent herself trying to master him that morning, and in the end he had driven off to town quite as he had meant to do in the first place.

For three days she had been seeking to make him do her will, to take her to town in the buggy and let her spend some of the money as she wished. And in the end he had conquered. The cows must be fed if they were to give milk. Thad said. He had hidden her by a reasonable. Reasonable! ## LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Peter Rabbit stared at the two soft, gentle eyes peeping at him from behind the big fern just back of the sunning bank in the far corner of the Old Pasture. He had so fully expected to see the angry face of the big gray old rabbit who had made life so miserable for him that for a minute he couldn't believe that he really saw what he did see. And so he just stared and stared. It was very rude. Of course it was. It was very rude indeed. It was always rude to stare at any one. So it was no wonder that after a minute the two soft, gentle eyes disappeared behind one of the great green leaves of the fern. Peter gave a great sigh. Then he remembered how rude he had been to stare so.

"I—I beg your pardon," said Peter in his politest manner, which is very polite indeed, for Peter can be very polite when he wants to be. "I beg your pardon. I didn't mean to frighten you. Please forgive me."

Peter waited for a reply with the greatest eagerness. You know it was because he had been so lonesome that he had left his home in the dear old hilly patch on the Green Meadows. And since he had been in the Old Pasture he had had no one to talk to. So now he waited eagerly for a reply. You see, he felt sure that the owner of such soft, gentle eyes must have a soft, gentle voice and a soft, gentle heart, and there was nothing in the world that Peter needed just then so much as sympathy. But though he waited and waited there wasn't a sound from the big fern.

"Perhaps you don't know who I am," said Peter Rabbit and he came up to the hilly patch on the Green Meadows and I'd like very much to be your friend," continued Peter after a while. Still there was no sound. Peter peeped from the corner of one eye at the place where he had seen the two soft, gentle eyes, but there was nothing to be seen but the gently waving leaf of the big fern. Peter didn't know just what to do. He wanted to hop over to the big fern and peep behind it, but he didn't dare to. He was afraid that whoever was hiding there would run away.

"I'm very lonesome; won't you speak to me?" said Peter, in his gentlest voice, and he sighed a deep, sorrowful sort of sigh. Still there was no reply. Peter had just about made up his mind that he would go over to the big fern when he saw those two soft, gentle eyes peeping from under a different leaf. It was Peter Rabbit and he came up to the hilly patch on the Green Meadows and I'd like very much to be your friend," continued Peter after a while. Still there was no sound. WIFE TURNS UP HUSBAND
TO NEW ORLEANS POLICE

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, July 22.—How a wife's jealousy caused her to furnish information which led to her husband's betrayal to the police, was revealed today when Detective Charles F. Mellen, of New Orleans, left Chicago for the southern city with Jules A. Zatrain, thirty-two years old, who is charged with larceny involving $3,700. Zatrain was arrested yesterday.

Zatrain formerly owned a tailor shop in New Orleans and obtained $3,700 worth of cloth from a Chicago firm without paying for it a year and a half ago. Later Zatrain disappeared, but subsequently was seen in New Orleans in company with another woman. The wife traced the couple to Chicago and notified the police.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Congressman Edwards Would Hasten Appointment of Democratic Postmasters

Congressman Charles G. Edwards, of the First district, who is spending a few days at his home in Savannah, is a bit impatient over the administration's delay in appointing Republican postmasters in Georgia. The congressman would hasten the day when Democrats will be in charge of the postoffices both in this state and throughout the country.

Commenting upon the situation he says: "You know the policy of the administration is to let the Republican holdovers stay in office until the terms for which they were appointed expire," said Mr. Edwards. "I think this is bad policy and so does the entire Georgia delegation, but the ruling has been made and it seems it will be adhered to. For this reason the filling of presidential postoffices will be slow. I have eleven such offices in my district. The term of the Statesboro postmaster expired July 20 and that of the postmaster at Waynesboro expires July 23 of this year. I will have these vacancies filled promptly, I am sure. The others must wait."

Prospective Congressional Candidates Said to be Plentiful in Baldwin County

Although Baldwin county has been a part of the Tenth congressional district but a few months, several of its well-known citizens are said to entertain congressional aspirations.

Judge Carl Vinson, of the Baldwin county court, has announced that he will be a candidate next year to succeed Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, and news comes from Milledgeville that Solicitor General Joseph E. Pottle, of the Ocmulgee circuit, and Colonel J. D. Howard are considered as probable candidates.

Congressman Hardwick has not yet indicated whether he will seek re-election. Should he be in the race he will no doubt be successful, for he is conceded to have the strongest and most loyal following of any man in the Tenth district.

Friends of Colonel John T. West, of Thomson, have urged him to be a candidate in the event Congressman Hardwick does not run, and with Mr. Hardwick out of the way there is a probability that Representative J. J. Harris, of Washington county, will enter the contest.

Colonel W. W. Lambdin Favors Creation of Hardeman County

Colonel W. W. Lambdin, of Waycross, one of the ablest lawyers in south Georgia, was in Atlanta a few days ago to lend his influence to the movement for the creation of Hardeman county with Alma as the county seat.

The bill providing for the creation of Hardeman county has received a favorable report from the house committee on constitutional amendments. It proposes to take 212 square miles from the southeastern portion of Appling county, twenty-three square miles from the northeastern corner of Ware and thirty square miles from the northern part of Pierce.

The people of Appling county, from which the largest area of territory is to be taken, apparently indorse the Hardeman county bill, and the grand jury of Appling has passed resolutions commending it.

Barrow County Bill May Be Passed on Thursday

It is very probable that the house bill creating the new county of Barrow will not come up for passage in the senate until Thursday. The bill has been reported on favorably by the committee on constitutional amendments and a resolution has been introduced making it a special order for Wednesday.

But the senate committee on rules in discussing the matter Monday decided that inasmuch as by the calendar the bill would come up Thursday anyway, that there was no necessity for making it a special order. It will probably be left to its regular place.

Both sides in the fight on the bill claim a victory. Certain it is that the measure will be more hotly contested in the senate than it was in the house. The supporters of the bill are claiming thirty-five votes, six in excess of the necessary two-thirds. Each is working hard to win, though, and only the roll call will tell.

Persistent Perseverance Characterizes Judge Fite

Judge A. W. Fite, of the Cherokee circuit, heartily concurs in that old maxim: "If you do not succeed at first, try again." Several days ago the judge called a mass meeting at Cartersville to pass upon certain resolutions relative to the changes in the government of that city.

The meeting came off according to schedule, but Judge Fite's opponents were in the majority and he was unable to get a favorable vote on his resolutions.

Unfazed, Judge Fite called another mass meeting for Monday morning at which he got through his resolutions, calling upon the representatives of Bartow county in the legislature to introduce a bill providing for the Cartersville board of education to be increased from three to five members and be elected by the people; and a bill to establish a recorder's court in Cartersville. Another resolution opposed any reduction in the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville.

When Judge Fite makes up his mind that he is right, he goes ahead, and he is known throughout the state as a hard, effective fighter. Even those who do not agree with him concede this as a fact.

Attorney Kent's Pathetic Fight For Reinstatement Seems Hopeless

There's something pathetic in the appeal which W. E. Kent, former Georgia football star, of Wheeler county, makes to the general assembly for the enactment of a law which will restore to him the right to practice law in Georgia.

Mr. Kent was disbarred in 1910 in the superior court of Montgomery county, the disbarment proceedings containing twenty-one charges of unprofessional conduct.

The bar association of the Oconee circuit has passed resolutions against his reinstatement, and there is little likelihood that the legislature will interfere. Bills for his relief have been introduced in both the house and senate, but the indications are that neither house will look with favor upon these measures.

Similar measures were introduced at the last session of the general assembly and failed to pass.

Mr. Kent charges his disbarment to political persecution, but those who oppose him vigorously deny this charge. They contend that Mr. Kent's professional misconduct has been such as to justify his disbarment, and they take the position that the proper course for Mr. Kent to pursue would be to apply to the courts of his county and circuit for a reinstatement rather than to ask the legislature to pass a special law for his sole benefit.

In the resolutions of protest passed by the Oconee Bar association appears the following paragraph: "The courts of a man's county and circuit, which have time to inquire into the facts and a man's qualifications and character, the question of a disbarred attorney's reinstatement than the members of the general assembly."

Mr. Kent is quite popular among the people of his section. This fact is attested by his election to the legislature from Montgomery county after his disbarment and by his election to be ordinary of the new county of Wheeler, also by a petition urging his reinstatement, which bears the signatures of more than 2,000 of his fellow citizens.

THE DAVIS CUP.
"England's cliffs are white like milk,
But England's fields are green."
So sings a well known English bard
Who's jerry to the scene;
But while we're glad to grab this tip,
Excuse one final poke--
Arise and tell us, gentle bard,
How is her tennis stroke?

He adds: "I know an English atm
Beside an English lane,
That calls me through the twilight and
The miles of misty rain."
I wonder if he also knows
In peering down or up,
An English player who can trim
McLoughlin for the cup?

England vs. America again for the Davis cup. The gods of high Olympus be praised that whoever wins the cup stays out of Bulgaria and Russia.

THE DECIDING FUEL.
This Davis cup melee in a way is the deciding clash of the international summer. The Big Four retained the polo cup and got the jump. But our American golfers no one was able to saunter beyond fifth place. This leaves it an even break to date, although Great Britain as a nation might claim an edge through the skill of her Wilding.

THE YANKS AND THE PENNANT.
No, this is no prediction, but the Yanks are not forced to win the pennant to be a party intermingled with its ultimate destination. Back in 1911 they finished eighth and yet were big factors in the flag race. They beat Detroit that season, fifteen games out of twenty-three and twice started Jennings downhill. Then they succumbed to the Athletics and helped push the Mackmen in front.

The same dope carries this season. They have beaten Cleveland steadily upon her home grounds with six of the first eight games played packed away. Against the Athletics they have won one out of fifteen. Reverse these two counts and Birmingham today would be beak and beak with the alert Connie.

THE ZEIDER-CHASE AFFAIR.
A number of eager bystanders have queried us to the true merits of the Zeider-Chase-Callahan-Chance embroglio.
If Chance is correctly quoted he received the worst of it. If Callahan knew that Zeider was out of shape he should have broken the news, even though gently, to the other end of the deal. If Callahan entertained no knowledge of the justly celebrated bunion he was hardly at fault. It was then merely the fortune of war.

AT ANY RATE.
Lives of trained stars remind us
How to start an awful brawl
When departing, leave behind us
Knowledge of a bunioned toe.

The Athletics have been reported to be upon the verge of splitting apart three times this season, but in some way have managed to struggle feebly along and make a noise like a regular ball club at sparsely scattered intervals. If they are where they are after cracking three times we yearn to know about where they would be after a consistent spurt.

Cleveland out--Yankees to the Athletics.
In the meanwhile Pittsburgh is poised for her invasion of the Polo grounds. Ye, who have "crucial" serieses to use, prepare to use them now. There may not be another chance.

And then again--well you know baseball.

HARVARD BEST AT WINNING IN ALL SPORTING BRANCHES

BOSTON, July 22.--The wearers of the Harvard crimson excelled on the intercollegiate athletic field for the academic year of 1912-13. Out of sixteen possible athletic championships the men from Cambridge won four outright and divided honors for the fifth. Harvard triumphed in football, in addition to dividing the lacrosse title with Johns Hopkins. Since Johns Hopkins declined the Harvard challenge to play off the tie for the lacrosse title this might reasonably be awarded to Harvard, but when the Harvard challenge reached Baltimore the southern team had disbanded and was under no obligation to play off the tie.

The University of Pennsylvania scored first in three championships and therefore ranks second to Harvard, with Yale, Cornell and Princeton tied with two championships each. For purposes of computation each championship is regarded as a single point, which would make the score of the eight universities as follows: Harvard, 4-12; Pennsylvania, 3; Yale, 2; Princeton, 2; Cornell, 2; Syracuse, 1; Columbia, 1; Johns Hopkins, 1-2.

Not only did Harvard win outright more championships than any of her

Reputations were made and lost with bewildering rapidity at the recent national A. A. U. championships, but among the dozens of great cinderpath champions who showed their wares at the big Windy City meeting there were three whose work in the track and field events stood the acid test of the hardest kind of competition.

Carol B. Hauff, of the University of Michigan, Dan Ahrens, of the Illinois A. C., and A. M. Richards, of Brigham Young University, Utah, went into the "Nationals" with great reputations, and came through the big competitions still possessing them.

Hauff is one of the fastest men developed in the colleges in recent years. For two years running he has run the quarter-mile at the intercollegiate games in 48 2-5 seconds--a feat never performed before by any runner. Hauff easily qualified for the final heat of the 400-meter race at Stockholm last summer, but he was not quite in shape to battle successfully against the great brand of running shown by Charley Reidpath and Hans Braun, of Germany.

Dan Ahrens, holder of the world's record for the running hop, step and jump, despite a temporary retirement, was as good as ever in his favorite event at Chicago. Ahrens is one of those slender Irishmen who remain good for years. The chances are that he will still be jumping to records ten years from now. Dan is not a pound heavier than he was five years ago, and he has not lost an ounce of his great springing power.

Athletic experts have criticized more than once the jumping style of Richards, the youth from the Mormon country, who won the world's high jumping championship at Stockholm last summer. Richards is awkward about clearing the bar, but he clears it, and that's the most important thing. Last summer on the Olympic trip some of the coaches suggested to Richards that if he would change his style he might do even better. "No, I won't try anything new," he answered. "I can do 6 feet 4 inches the way I jump and that's good enough to win any place." Before the games at Stockholm Richards predicted that 6 feet 4 inches would win the Olympic high jump. "and I know I can do it," he added. His winning jump measured up 6 feet, 3 7-8 inches.

NEW YORK, July 22.--Now that Willie Ritchie has taken a secure grip on the lightweight title, there does not appear to be much chance of any of the present champions being displaced for some time to come. New material in all the classes is scarce. From bantamweights to heavyweights there are scarcely half a dozen newcomers who threaten to become dangerous to the present leaders.

Bantam Champion Charlie Coulton is in the most apparent danger of being ousted. But Coulton appears neither anxious nor physically able to defend his title against Kid Williams, his most dangerous rival. Eddie Campi is another who might be capable of relieving the Chicago midget of his honors. Neither Campi nor Williams, however, can be reckoned as newcomers. There is also Ledoux, the Frenchman, but he does not appear to threaten. There are other good men in this division.

For all his unpopularity, Johnny Kilbane seems to be firmly seated upon the featherweight throne. Johnny Dundee is outgrowing the class, and in any case is scarcely of championship material. Of the new men Kid Julian looked rather promising for a time, but later developments have shown him to lack the essential qualities of a champion. None of the others has shown consistent form.

In the lightweight class there are many contenders, and among them a few who may outdistance the present stars. Most promising of these is Young Shugrue, Welsh. Cross, Britton and Murphy are all old in the game. None of these can be expected to show improvement over their present form. Shugrue, however, has his future before him. His work is consistently good. He has the steadiness that is only found in a boxer who has real class. He has no weakness that is apparent. He is fast, scientific, game, enduring and can both give and take a hard punch. That he is also a good ring general is shown by the fact that he soon learns the style of his opponents and does better work in the closing rounds than in the early periods.

Byrne Proved Star Catcher

Few people know how Bobby Byrne, the Pittsburgh Pirates' little third sacker, broke into the big league. He was originally a catcher, and even in his town lot days in St. Louis when he weighed from 125 to 130 pounds, he acquired a reputation for fierceness through handling the smoochy shoots of flingers nearly twice his weight. He did not carry any more avoirdupois when he secured his engagement with Shreveport, La., but he signed up as an infielder and played third for Shreveport most of the time.

Byrne's work at Shreveport attracted the attention of friends of McClosky, who had the Cardinals, and he sent a scout down to look Bobby over. He had met with an accident which deprived him of the free use of his legs, and he had one finger in a bandage, but it happened that when the scout arrived the Shreveport catcher had a wooden arm and was unable to stop the pilfering of bases by the opposing club. The manager asked Byrne if he felt that he could replace him. Bobby replied that he could not move without suffering excruciating pain, but that his arm was good and he could stop the base stealing. So he was substituted for the catcher who was on the blink.

When the Cardinal scout saw the condition Bobby was in and coupled it up with the excellent game he caught he concluded that Byrne had the stuff in him out of which major league ballplayers are made, and he signed him. Bobby's subsequent career is familiar to all the followers of the Pirates.

The gameness Bobby displayed at the outset of his career got him a merited promotion and the gameness he showed will not bring him a demotion. Other players may be made "ball shy" by blows on the head, but not Bobby. He figures that it may never occur to him again, but realized that it may happen in any game he plays. It was the same philosophy which caused him to remark while he was holding out for a higher salary this season that a player's career is short at best and that he owes it to himself to get all the remuneration he can while he is useful.--Exchange.

DINING CARS

WITH A LA CARTE SERVICE TO CINCINNATI & LOUISVILLE

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 22.--The race between the six clubs comprising the North Carolina league grows more exciting as the end of the season approaches. Winston-Salem is leading with a percentage of .562 but is only two games ahead of Asheville, Durham and Raleigh who have a percentage of .533 and are tied for second place. Charlotte third in the race has a percentage of .438 and is only nine games behind the leaders, while Greensboro brings up the rear with a percentage of .400 and is only twelve games behind Winston-Salem.

During the past week Raleigh traded Outfielder Batts to Durham for Pitcher Yon and, since that time, Batts has been battling like a fiend while Yon has made good. Pitcher Belanger, of Raleigh, the premier twirler of the league, is ill from typhoid fever and will not be able to play for some time. Greensboro has signed two new pitchers, John Fox who played in the South Atlantic league last year and comes to the North Carolina club from the Virginia league, and Fry, who played with Anderson last year. The batting all around the circuit has been poor this season only five players going above the .300 mark at the close of the first half of the season. The season ends September 3.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

The Price of Throughbred Poultry

IN nearly nine cases out of ten when a buyer writes to a producer for prices on thoroughbred fowls there are but little idea of what they are asking for, and not one in ten is willing to pay the price that it actually cost to raise a thoroughbred fowl. Yet, they want something that has years of hard work and line breeding behind it, and while in the letter asking for prices they state that only for family use is what they are buying them for, still they will go further and state that they want some first-class specimens and very often describe almost in full a perfectly marked standard colored bird that would be fit for show purposes. It will be a long time before the buyer will ever realize what it cost the producer to raise a good fowl, and to this class of purchasers only experience can teach them the worth of a bird. There is a lot of educational work in this line that will have to be taught the Southern people not only in poultry but in live stock, seed and in the value of farm lands before the actual price of different qualities can be realized. There are but few people who realize the difference between a good acre and an unproductive acre of land. The same can be said of seed, fowls, cattle and live stock of all kinds. Most chickens are looked upon as an ordinary chicken. Big and little, good or bad are supposed to be worth the same price, but things will have to change in this respect.

A good thoroughbred chicken, when properly raised, will cost not less than $1.50 at the very lowest estimation to feed and mature this chicken as it should be, to say nothing of the original investment of producing the right kind of parent stock to breed it from. It will cost $50 for a decent shipping coop to ship a single bird in and the cost of correspondence and other details connected with a good thoroughbred chicken makes it impossible for a breeder to realize any profit at all unless he gets from $3 to $10 each for thoroughbred fowls. A person only keeping a few chickens for their home use can well afford to invest $3 to $5 each in a few nice birds that have been bred to lay eggs and produce themselves. They can lay in two years enough more eggs than an ordinary bird would to pay this difference in price, to say nothing of the pleasure and satisfaction of having only thoroughbred chickens, and the difference in price that you would realize from two settings of eggs or a lot of nice chickens produced from them.

It is discouraging to many breeders to answer letter after letter from people who will write and ask for prices on fowls, and you sit down and describe or write a nice long letter giving all the details of a single bird or a pen of birds and make the price as low as you can possibly afford to sell such birds for, and never hear from them again. This is one thing that discourages hundreds of people in the poultry and live stock business. It costs money to answer correspondence and to advertise and it takes time to fully describe different fowls and animals, and so few people, especially the inexperienced ones who write for prices on fowls, take into consideration this expense of correspondence and advertising but think that a good thoroughbred chicken should be sold at $1 or $2, practically speaking, the same price an ordinary scrub would be worth, produced by a party who never advertised, selected his chickens and raised any attention whatever to line breeding and egg production of the careful breeder's flock of birds. It takes time and money to do this and a breeder must pay for it over and above the average scrubs or they cannot stay in the business. One reason today that so many poultrymen quit the game is because a majority of the buyers are inexperienced and not knowing the difference between good and bad, are not willing to pay a reasonable price for something good to start with. A person who has had experience and knows these things is easy to sell, and it is no trouble to close a trade with people who are familiar with and know these differences, but we have so few of this class of people in the south that it is a hard matter to find.

Wanted buyers of the difference without writing a great many letters.

Yours very truly,
(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TAKE a stand with any of these "near wise ones" out at Ponce de Leon and Peachtree, and we will be here for you for an hour, pointing out this place and that place, and telling of the future of the city, and how you can get a piece of it for $500 per foot, now it is $750, and so on and so forth.

WE HAVE A PIONEER DEED ON Ponce de Leon on a corner close in, that when in the near future it will be selling for $750 per foot, when we can sell it now for less than $200 per foot for the 150 feet, this same near wise one will say "Gee, but I missed it again." Are you a near or a real wise one? See Mr. Phillips.

PEACHTREE ROAD. WE HAVE the cream of vacant lots this side of Governor Slaton's estate. Select yours now while the prices are right. Every time a new home is built in this section it adds to the enhancement of all the vacant lots around it. Buy out there where you know they are building fast. Today's prices, $75 to $100 per front foot. Your last chance. See Mr. Clark.

NORTH SIDE BUNGALOW

WE HAVE JUST HAD LISTED with us several especially attractive bungalows, located in the best sections of the North Side. Prices range from $5,000.00 to $7,000.00. September will soon be here and moving day with it. We can make terms about like rent on most of these properties. Will be glad to show them at any time.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Council Permits the Walker Street Syndicate to Cross Mangum Street With Tracks—Marist College Applies for $40,000 Permit for a Dormitory—Several Small Sales Are Reported—Real Estate as Sinking Fund Security

The city council on Monday afternoon gave permission to the syndicate behind the Walker street development to lay tracks across Mangum street, and the syndicate now needs only the concurrence of the aldermen to go ahead with the work. The board will act on the petition next Thursday.

Between then and the first of August work will be started on laying the tracks through from the southern railway to Haynes street. This will take about thirty days.

The syndicate will next give its attention to two large concrete buildings on the Walker street frontage. These buildings will be two stories and basement, and will be designed specially for manufacturing and other concerns needing railroad tracks. They will occupy between 700 and 800 feet of street frontage and as much more on the tracks.

The syndicate reports that it has about twenty applications for quarters in these buildings.

The Walker street development was started a year ago by this syndicate, which is composed of Tom Stocks, W. S. McKemie, Ernest Duncan and others. Progress was delayed, however, because of recalcitrance of the aldermen against the A. B. & A. railroad, which is to have joint use of the tracks with the Southern railway. These difficulties, however, were removed by recent court orders allowing the A. B. & A. to sign the necessary contract with the Southern, and also to buy certain additional property on and near Magnolia street.

$10,000 DORMITORY. The Marist Society of Georgia applied on Tuesday for a building permit for the erection of a dormitory for the Marist college. The building will cost $40,000.

It will occupy a space 100x60 in the rear of the Marist college on Ivy street, and will be three floors and basement. Eugene Wachtendorf is the architect.

LEGISLATIVE MEETING. Indications Tuesday were that there would be a large attendance of Atlanta real estate men at the meeting of the committee of the legislature which has the sinking fund measure under consideration.

Harrie G. White, S. B. Turman and W. A. Foster were on the committee of the board to appear before the legislature.

Priceless Sculpture Stolen from Greece Found in Baltimore

(By Associated Press.)

BALTIMORE, Md., July 22.—A piece of Greek sculpture, the bust of a girl child of about five years of age, stolen from the National museum at Athens fifteen years ago, said to be of priceless value and 3,000 years old, was recovered by the local police today. The figure was dug up in the cellar of Charles Nemphos, a Greek confectioner, at Hampden, a suburb.

Search for the bust was instituted here after Dr. Alexander Vouras, Greek charge at Washington, called on Federal Attorney Hill.

To Major Hill was unfolded the story of the disappearance of the efforts of the European governments to recover it for the past decade and of clues involving a Baltimore Greek.

Major Hill decided that it was a problem for the local police, and search warrant for Nemphos' home was issued.

It was only after Nemphos had been subjected to a "third degree" lasting all night that the bust was shown where the bust was buried. Under his direction the officers began digging. Three feet down they unearthed the head of the figure, broken off at the shoulders. A few more hands were called and the bust was recovered.

The relic was taken charge of by the police and Nemphos was locked up on the technical charge of receiving stolen goods.

According to Nemphos, he came into possession of the figure ten or eleven years ago. He obtained it, he said, from a fellow countryman he had employed and told him to keep the bust as security. This man said it came from Athens and "was worth much money."

Information which led to recovery of the bust was furnished to the Greek by a relative of Nemphos, with whom he had quarreled.

The figure, which is of marble, is said to be one of the finest examples extant of the sculpture of the Archaic period. Its age is estimated at least 3,000 years. While it has a money value of $250,000 because of its sentimental and historical associations, yet it is regarded by the Greek authorities as almost priceless.

Resigns, He Says, Because He Must Be Absent From California Often

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 22.—Thomas E. A small detachment of federals from Monclova, out on a scouting trip is reported to have killed its officers, left their bodies by the roadside and dispersed to the hills. Federals are forcing many residents of Monclova to join the army under stress of punishment for refusal.

The constitutionalist outposts are a mile from Monclova, which it is claimed is completely shut off from supplies.

CLAIMS AMERICANS PROTECTED.
Colonel Jesus Carranza said today that he believes Americans will find the reports about atrocities at Durango to have been exaggerated. Governor Carranza, he said, has given positive orders to protect lives and property of all foreigners and has punished severely all violations of these orders which his authority could reach.

At Sabins, near here, there are 1,000 refugees from Monclova, most of them living in box cars on constitutionalist railroads. So far as known no Americans are among these. Constitutional soldiers here appear well fed and are abundantly supplied with arms and ammunition.

ANOTHER FRENCH AVIATOR HURLED TO HIS DEATH

(By Associated Press.)
CHALONS, France, July 22.—Another French military aviator was killed today and his comrade badly injured while experimenting a new airplane at Mourmelon.

Lieutenant Gabriel was in charge of the machine and Sapper Malarte was acting as his mechanic. As they started the motor one of the wheels of the aeroplane caught in a rut. The machine toppled over and the motor fell on top of them.

BLOODY STICK NOW IN POSSESSION OF FRANK'S ATTORNEYS

ally come to trial on next Monday is the fact that already the majority of the state's witnesses have been subpoenaed.

While Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and the attorney for his office, who are serving the subpoenas, refused to divulge the names of the witnesses or their exact number, it is said that about seventy-five witnesses, many of whom may not be used, will be called to the trial. It is known that the defense has approximately 100 witnesses, many of whom will testify simply to the good character of the defendant in event the defense decides to put his character in issue. As counsel for the defense refuses to divulge any information relative to its plans for the trial, it is not known whether or not subpoenas on the Frank witnesses have yet been served.

The reason for serving the witnesses a week before the date set for the trial is that after they have once been served they will be in contempt of court in event they fail to appear in the court room when the case is called.

Although there is a strong probability of a postponement of the case, court attaches are going ahead with preparations to hold the trial Monday in the court room on the first floor of the old city hall building.

FANS INSTALLED.
Deputy Sheriff Plennie Minor, who will be in charge of the court room during the trial of the case, has already ordered a dozen electric fans, which will be installed in the court room.

Like all trials the hearing of the Frank case will be public, but Deputy Sheriff Minor states that when half of the seats in the court room have been occupied the doors will be quickly closed in order that the comfort of the judge, jury and attorneys will not be jeopardized by an overcrowded room.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, is holding court this week in Covington. So the drawing of the venire from which the twelve jurors to try Frank will be chosen, will fall to Judge John T. Pendleton, of the superior court.

The venire will be drawn in open court on next Thursday and it will precipitate another pre-trial clash between Solicitor Dorsey and Frank's lawyers for the state, and attorneys Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold for the defense.

The defense will ask that the venire be drawn from the grand jury box. In this move will be bitterly opposed by the solicitor general. The prosecuting official will ask that the venire, which will consist of 150 men, be drawn from the regular petit jury list.

The solicitor general is certain to take a strong stand against any postponement of the trial.

ONE GIRL PUTS UP 4,000 CANS OF FRUIT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VALDOSTA, Ga., July 22.—The reports from the Boys' Corn club and the Girls' Canning club show that the school girls in Lowndes county are putting up many thousands of cans of vegetables, fruits, etc., and that all of the girls together will probably put up more than goods this year than are usual sold in all of the stores of Valdosta during the year.

One little girl in the Ousley district has already put up over 4,000 cans of fruits and vegetables. Two sisters in the Bethany district have put up 1,000 cans each, while all of the girls have put up from several dozens into the hundreds of cans. There are a large number of girls in all of the district doing canning club work. Their exhibits of canned goods at the county fair next fall is going to be a very fine one. The stockholders here are very highly pleased at the showing which is being made by the instructors in this department.

Remember, if you feel constipated and bilious, what you need is Dodson's Liver Tonic. Fifty cents—any druggist. (Adv.)

EDITORS OF GEORGIA GATHER AT LAGRANGE

Record-Breaking Attendance Expected to Gather in Interesting City

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
LAGRANGE, Ga., July 22.—A record-breaking attendance of Georgia editors came into LaGrange last night in order to be on hand for the first meeting of the association this morning at 9:30.

About 125 delegates arrived last night and more are arriving on every train this morning, and it is believed that the attendance this year will run around the 150 mark or nearly double any mark ever reached in the history of the association.

The interest in the present meeting and large attendance is attributed largely to the desire of the editors of the state to see LaGrange and get information in regard to the remarkable progress of the town in order to transmit the information to the people of their home towns.

Governor John M. Slaton is expected early tomorrow morning and will be accompanied by Mrs. Slaton.

Among the other prominent visitors who are expected to arrive today, having accepted the invitation of the LaGrange chamber of commerce to be on hand at the banquet Wednesday night, are: W. H. Leahy, general passenger agent, Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad; St. Elmo Massengale, of the Massengale Advertising agency; Ernest Dallis, of the Dallis-Johnson Advertising agency; James R. Gray, editor of The Atlanta Journal; Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; C. B. Rhodes, general passenger agent, Macon and Birmingham railroad; J. P. Billups, general passenger agent, Atlanta and West Point railroad, together with some fifteen or twenty other visitors.

WATSON SAYS HE'LL INDICT MULHALL FOR LOBBY PROBE CHARGE

$250 to work for the passage of a tariff commission bill with a promise of an additional $10,000 if the bill was successful. Senator Reed declared himself against cross-examination, but proposed that questions be submitted to the committee. The point was not finally decided.

Mulhall today swore that he drew $500 from a Baltimore bank to be paid to Watson.

Mulhall swore that Watson had made the office of James A. Emery here his headquarters after he was defeated for governor of Indiana in 1908. Emery, Mulhall swore, was the "chief lobbyist" for the manufacturers. The witness declared today that former Senator Henryway, of Indiana, occupied rooms next to Emery and that Watson was in one office or the other much of the time.

"WAR LIST" OFFERED.
A "war list" including six congressmen, said to have been marked for defeat by former Speaker Cannon and former Representative James E. Watson, was offered in evidence today by Mulhall.

Augustus P. Gardner, of Massachusetts; Gilbert N. Haugen, of Iowa; Victor M. Mook, of Kansas; E. A. Morse, J. M. Nelson and Irvine L. Lenroot, of Wisconsin, were the marked six. Mulhall on March 17, 1909, wrote Secretary Schwedman, of the manufacturers, to that effect.

Names of a dozen other congressmen marked for "war" and which have been included in other Mulhall lists, were included.

COLUMBIA PRESIDENT DISCUSSES THE CANAL

Urges Importance of an Understanding With the United States

(By Associated Press.)
BOGOTA, Colombia, July 22.—References to the Panama canal occupied a prominent place in President Carlos E. Restrepo's annual message today to the Colombian congress.

The president said that the approaching completion of the canal, the development of the country at large and the special interests of the coast provinces rendered daily more important an understanding with the United States.

"The Colombian government," he continued, "has refused the propositions made by James T. Du Bois, the United States minister, as not affording that reparation and satisfaction desired by the nation."

The new administration at Washington has inspired the Colombian people with great hopes. After the arrival of the new American minister, Thaddeus Thompson, the president hopes to submit satisfactory terms for a settlement of the Panama affair to this congress.

LINER CROSSES ATLANTIC WITHOUT AID OF SUN

LONDON, July 22.—Sides were so laden all the way across the Atlantic during the past week that the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which arrived at Plymouth yesterday, made the entire voyage by dead reckoning. The weather was misty and for the entire 3,000 miles from New York not a glimpse could be caught of the sun for nautical observations.

Primitive methods of navigation and wireless reports from other steamers served to keep the big liner from getting lost, however, and she reached port without mishap. Her experience, however, is a rare one.
