

HOG AND HOMINY BALL COMMITTEES ARE NAMED

Prominent Atlanta Society
Women Will Help Make Affair Success

Mrs. William Lawan Peal, who has consented to act as chairman at the annual ball on the evening of December 4, at the auditorium, announced Thursday a list of society women who have consented to be patronsesses at the ball, which is expected to be the most spectacular public affair of this sort ever held in Atlanta.

The list is as follows: Mrs. Frank Anderson, Mrs. G. R. Clark, Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mrs. Ernest Woodruff, Mrs. William H. Kiser, Mrs. Walter Rich, Mrs. L. L. Williams, Mrs. George W. Benjamin Elias, Mrs. William Lauderdale and Mrs. Walter P. Andrews.

Mrs. Peal, who is a young queen and her court decked in royal regalia. She is anxious that the regal attire of the queen and her court be any previous event of this sort. Crowning of the queen and her court will be the feature. This will be followed by a grand ball and a series of dances. Then will come the grand march in which every person at the ball will participate.

A number of society women have already arranged to occupy boxes at the ball, and it is expected that all together, it promises to be an event never before equalled in Atlanta.

COMMITTEES NAMED

Tickets for the carnival in which will be the Hog and Hominy ball and the Hominy carnival, under the auspices of the Atlanta Ad Men's club, may be had at $5.00 each. The tickets are to be bought at the hotels or at the chamber of commerce. The ticket admitting a person to the carnival will entitle him to a vote for the queen and a souvenir gold button of the carnival. The voting is under way at one's White House street door. The first 100 persons to cast their votes are twelve of the most popular debutantes in Atlanta.

THE PARADE PLANS. The afternoon has been finished and there will be in the evening a grand parade in connection with a number of spectacular floats and decorated autos. The march will start at the capitol and proceed down Peachtree street to the first bridge, then turn right and go down Peachtree street, to Baker, thence to Ivy street and dispense.

DINNER AND DANCE AT
DECATOR ATHLETIC CLUB

Thanksgiving will be celebrated Thursday evening at the Decatur Athletic club with a picnic dinner and dance. The dinner will be spread in the club room and catered from the kitchen.

Those members of the club and their friends who do not care to dance will have the opportunity to do so. The dance is being planned by the entertainment committee of the club, composed of the following members: W. C. Clegg, H. H. Hinsbeck, chairman, Clayton Sefton, gill Shearer, Attilus Haygood, H. H. Trotter.

THANKSGIVING EDITION OF ATLANTIAN IS OUT

Atlanta, as you know, the Thanksgiving edition of the Atlanta Journal, Walter Triplett's well known magazine, went on the newsstands Thursday morning.

On the front cover in a one line statement, the editor's column and comments on local politics, the news from Atlanta, national affairs and the European war.

NEGRO THIEF IN HOUSE
FLEES WHEN DISCOVERED

When C. F. Lemon, of 195 Lee street, stepped from his library about mid-Morning, he came face to face in the hall room with a ne'er do well.

According to his report to Cal Officers, and a witness started back for a front door, the street and safety. When he came to the door he was met by a search. Mr. Lemon, says, the burglar had disappeared in the dark.

Nothing of value was missing from the residence.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION

Bankruptcy Petition was filed in the Federal court yesterday by the Home Hardware company and other creditors against the Fowler Drug Company, of Atlanta, Fulton county, a partnership consisting of J. A. and G. E. Fowler. A petition was also filed for a receiver.

THE WHOLE BODY
NEEDS PURE BLOOD

The bones, the muscles, and all the organs of the body depend for their tone and healthy action on pure blood.

If the blood is very impure, the bones become weak, the muscles become unfeeling, the step loses its elasticity, and there is inability to perform the usual functions of the body.

The skin loses its clearness, and pimples, blisters and other eruptions appear.

It is possible to be relieved from the trouble by the use of a stomach remedy such as May's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold by here by Jacobs' Pharmacy. (Advt.)

Hard-Hearted Chicken Thief Steals Woman's Pet Fowls for Dinner

Preparations of certain denizens of Dinktown for a Thanksgiving day of real feasting resulted Wednesday night in raids on many chicken coops. In raids on many chicken coops, not only for the fowls which were never intended to grace a dinner table, but for the mistress, whose pets they were, as well.

The list is as follows: Mrs. Frank Anderson, Mrs. G. R. Clark, Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mrs. Ernest Woodruff, Mrs. William H. Kiser, Mrs. Walter Rich, Mrs. L. L. Williams, Mrs. George W. Benjamin Elias, Mrs. William Lauderdale and Mrs. Walter P. Andrews.

Mrs. John W. Neims, 11 Johnson avenue, was the victim of the fowl thief, who she dressed in fannions on cold days, were stolen Wednesday evening from the oven. The woman's heating arrangement so the chickens would suffer no inconvenience by a drop in the mercury.

According to the police, the thief, who was a man, took any amount of money he could get, she told the officers, "For I love them like children, have always fed them myself, giving them everything to eat that I can find."

The thief was arrested, and was turned over to the police.

Other losses of chickens on the eve of Thanksgiving are reported by Mrs. S. B. Burton, 301 West North Avenue, and L. Thomas, 284 Capitol avenue.

RANCHMAN HINTS NELMS SISTERS MAY BE ALIVE

Story of Stranger, While Not Taken Seriously, Being Investigated

Members of the Neims family are investigating a mysterious Texas ranchman, who recently approached Marshall Neims in San Antonio, asking if he would pay $10,000 if the strayed pet, his two daughters, "dead or alive."

Young Neims was impressed by the mysterious ranchman and wired his mother, Mrs. John W. Neims, about the question. Mrs. Neims Wednesday afternoon instructed him to call the man $10,000 if he would return the two girls.

Strikes, who studies like a book, informed of the new turn in the case, and he is not impressed with the proposition.

"It looks very much like a kind of blind man game to me," said Mr. Strikes, "and for that reason I advised Mrs. Neims not to increase her reward, but the ticket would not recognize the dead bodies of the missing."

The query from the Texas ranchman in the first intimation in several months, and the offer of $10,000, that Neims are still alive.

The list of missing persons, including the two girls, was arrived in Atlanta Wednesday and is being shown on Thanksgiving day at the Cadillac headquarters, 228 Peachtree.

Hundreds of people gathered around to give it the "once over" and to inspect a number of orders have already been booked.

President of the Atlanta Cadillac company, took the new car out for a little run and on his return, said he had a "feeling" that the new Cadillac 8 is the smoothest running car in the history of automobile.

He is positive over the smooth, velvety flow of power that is the main feature of the car.

The car has a streamline body and is 600 pounds lighter than the old car. Notwithstanding its light weight, it is a good runner and the hood is very low.

Toy Town Opens Saturday

Eyes Will Pop & Little Hearts Will Beat Faster at the Many Sights

Welcome All!

Here they come—armies of soldiers, a-foot or horseback, ready to charge, at rest, none retreating.

Over there is where the battleships lay—men-of-war, submarines and great naval fleets.

Dollies are staring open-eyed—astonished at walking animals, caged monkeys and lions that are just awfully ferocious.

But not all the animals are bad—the good kind are nodding their heads and wagging their tails to welcome the little folk of Atlanta.

But what's the clown laughing at—what makes him hold his fat sides in uproarious mirth? Come and see; come and see—everybody laughs in Toy Town.

Our Need for Ships.

The report of the federal Department of Commerce that European orders for cotton greatly exceed the available means of ocean transport emphasize the long apparent need for an American merchant marine. At a time of unexampled opportunity to upbuild its foreign trade, the United States is handicapped by the lack of a sufficient number of vessels to meet ordinary demands. Wanting the facilities to reach established markets, how can we expect to develop new channels of commerce or to exploit new fields of business?

The law enacted at the last session of Congress, admitting foreign built ships to American registry, has proved appreciably helpful. It removed many obstacles, as is evidenced by the fact that eighty vessels, comprising a gross tonnage of two hundred and eighty thousand, which three months ago were under British, German or Belgian flags are now flying the Stars and Stripes. Clearly, however, the law does not suffice the broad and pressing needs of the time; for, since October the nineteenth only four foreign-built ships have sought American registry, though the demand and the opportunity have grown apace.

The new navigation act is very liberal in its terms and in ordinary circumstances, it would seem, should serve the purpose in view. But if private interests are unwilling or unable to undertake the important task of developing a merchant marine adequate to the needs of the United States, then the Government itself should deal with the problem. The Administration is favorably disposed to the Alexander bill, which was introduced at the last session of Congress and which provides for a Government-owned merchant marine. Whether this measure is wise in all its provisions and prudent in all its possibilities is a matter for further consideration; but there is no doubt that by some means or other, this country must secure enough trade ships to take care of its foreign commerce.

Teaching by Motion Pictures.

There are pedagogues who object to everything that will enliven or brighten the steep and thorny path to knowledge. "Soon learned, soon forgotten," they say, and add a hundred other proverbs in the spirit of that ancient wisdom, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." Their theory seems to be that the more difficult the process of education can be made, the better it will be; therefore, they draw back with a strong arm when they are pleased to call the "frolics" of the present-day school rooms and insist that a child get his lessons in the sweat of his brow.

Happily, however, the tendency of modern teaching has been away from this doleful doctrine. The air of the undercarriage, which surely was inspired by some good fairy, is infusing all grades and all departments of our schools. The teacher who makes a thing easy by making it interesting and clear, who makes the recitation hour a part of the pupil's eager life and relates the subject in the book directly to human affairs is far more successful than the old-time pedagogue who stood as a taskmaster rather than a sympathetic friend.

Pictures have been playing a larger and larger part in schooling, and now we find the motion picture employed in this connection. A Pennsylvania teacher declares that a child can learn and remember more in ten minutes by watching a film which shows been making history than he could acquire in two hours by ordinary reading. "The interplay of cotton growing, spinning and weaving," he says, "gives a definite knowledge which is lacking in a printed story." One can imagine the value of motion pictures in teaching history, geography and a number of the sciences. This method is impractical, as yet, for many schools, but it promises much and doubtless will be established more and more widely.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving Day never came with better grace to the people of the United States than in this placid and fruitful autumn of 1914. A country that is blest so bounteously with the riches of nature and the light of freedom has cause at all times for deep and hearty gratitude; but especially is this true in a year when other lands are impoverished and smothered and bleeding with war. Our very pity for the sorrows of the Old World imbues us with profound thankfulness for the concord and security in which our nation and our homes are held.

We are free from war, not only the war of embattled armies but the war of political bitterness, of bottled classes and divided interests. Differences that long disturbed our economic life have been settled, quietly and justly. The special privileges of the few have been supplanted with the equal rights of the many. The forces that tended to make government a matter of patronage for particular groups have given way to the larger and higher ideals of a true republic. The cause of agitation has ceased because the wrongs from which agitation sprang have been rectified. We face an era of good feeling and constructive development.

The fact that our political life has been purged of old ill is a guarantee that our business life shall henceforth move swiftly and securely forward. The light of an ample prosperity is dawning, prosperity based upon economic and social justice and vouchsafed to all men who seek it with honesty and intelligence. For these things, and for innumerable other blessings and hopes the people of the United States should make this a day of heartfelt and universal thanksgiving.

If we have the price of the turkey let us be thankful for that.

If your enemy has a poor memory, that is an other thing to be thankful for.

And if the world fails to understand you, perhaps you ought to be somewhat thankful for that.

Whether the Mexicans will have cause for Thanksgiving in the departure of the Americans from Vera Cruz remains to be demonstrated.

Italy's Difficult Position.

Though the sober-minded statesmen of Italy are striving to preserve that nation's neutrality in the European struggle, the contrary pressure of events and of sentiment at home and abroad grows more and more pronounced. Turkey's entry into the war is a potential if not actual menace to Italian interests in the Balkans and in Tripoli. The traditional hatred of the Italian people toward Austria has been rekindled and intensified; and among the Allies, particularly Great Britain and France, there has developed of late an outspoken feeling that Italy should cast her strength squarely against the war cause of the Teutonic empires.

This insistence, or rather this appeal, rests upon the contention that a victory for Germany and Austria would mean a victory for Turkey, with consequences of far-fung peril to Italy's plans across the Adriatic and the Mediterranean. It is argued, further, that Germany and Austria would be swift to exact retributions for Italy's refusal to stand by the Triple Alliance, should they have the power to do so, and that, therefore, the interests of Italy and the interests of the Allies are in this respect at one.

It is clear that Italy's neutrality at the outset of the war was very valuable to the Allies. As one observer says: "I permitted the French Government to strip its Alpine frontier of troops and to mass its full force in the north and east to resist the Germanic invasion; and it is a reasonable inference that without this reinforcement, Paris might have been besieged, and the Allies, not the Germans, have been foiled in the long and bloody battle of the Mense. Of course the appearance of the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean would have changed the naval situation materially." Of still greater value, however, would be the service which Italy could now render the Allies by an aggressive movement against their foes.

Naturally, then, they are employing every means of diplomacy to win Italy to their side. They urge that Italy as their colleague in arms will have much to gain in prestige and, perhaps, in territory, but that as a neutral power she can expect no special consideration from the Allies in the final settlement of affairs, while she may certainly expect, by reason of her neutrality grave problems if Germany and Austria are victors.

Meanwhile, Italian statesmanship remains cautious and cool. Whatever policy it may decide upon beyond that which now guides it will be the result of delicate and calculating thought. It was not driven to war by the Kaiser's threats; it will scarcely be deterred from war, should the nation's welfare call for arms.

Probably a great many turkeys will be gird to exceed the high cost of living.

Our Thanksgiving Turkey.

By Frederic J. Haskin

On the 18th day of November a special train pulled out of Morristown, Tenn., bearing a most unusual class of passengers. The train was a special made for the Thanksgiving turkey market. Every live turkey in the most luxurious fashion. It was a long train and each car contained from 1,200 to 1,800 live turkeys each in good condition for the Thanksgiving dinner table. The train was hauled directly through to New York with a special provision for dropping off of several cars at Philadelphia. . . .

The special cars for the Thanksgiving train were planned out to their few accommodations "deluxe" upon what is known as the first class as well as their last journey. No pains were spared to provide for their comfort. The cars were thirty-six feet long and nine feet wide. Each was personally conducted, for in addition to the conductor there was a man in charge in the center for the use of the men in charge. An aisle extends the length of the car and on each side are stacked the coupe for the turkeys. The cars are built to have the top open so that they can be pulled into the aisle to be filled and pushed back like a drawer. A water tank at the top of each car holds 357 gallons. It has a hose attachment reaching all the compartments. Below is a large grey eight-seat square table by a cap deck in the floor of the coupe. The cars are so arranged that any single coupe can be removed in transit in case any fowl dies or should become ill, thereby keeping the whole train in a healthy condition. The coupe are piled in there eight feet high those containing the best turkeys being nearly foot high the top.

The bringing of this trainload of turkeys from the south to the north is the pride of the New England no longer stands first in the turkey production of the country. The turkey production of the north has been steadily declining for the past ten years. The south is now in a position to supply the market. Tennessee, now a leader in turkey production, although Texas produces larger numbers and the Kentucky turkeys have lately come into prominence for their excellent quality.

New England turkeys still are ranked as the finest quality, although it is claimed that the best turkeys from the south and the north are now being put upon the market. The price for New England turkeys commanding a slightly higher price than if their real source were given. For many years a Rhode Island farmer named Vose raised a turkey each year for the president of the United States. The turkey was sent to the White House in a box and was fed on a diet of corn and beans for a couple of years. The car was always sent to the White House as a present from the president. The turkey was sent to the White House Thanksgiving turkey and it is believed that the one sent to President Wilson last year from Kentucky did not fall below the New England bird in either size or flavor.

Turkey Day Battles Hold Sway on Many Southern Gridirons Today

Tigers Draw Last Turkey Day Game Here Thursday

Today will see the last Turkey day football game between Tech and Clemson, and the last game, come at least. The jackets have formally announced their new connection with Auburn, whereby the Plainsmen appear here on Thanksgiving instead of earlier as has been the custom. The Tech team, however, for a meeting between the two teams next year has been signed, and it is not at all certain that the game will be played this year.

This means that the contest today is going to be the draw, but the affair will be a real draw, however, again. Last year, in spite of the fact that Tech won by a large score, the game was a real draw, and the affair from the jump. No less is expected this year, and to this the fact that Clemson has decided to make a bold and forceful intention of redeeming themselves from their 1913 defeat, and it is easy to imagine that the game will be a draw.

Indications point to the fact that a large crowd will be on hand for the game. The attendance at last Saturday's game between Auburn and Georgia showed a big decrease from the

Vandy Heavier Than Sewanee

While Commodores Outweigh Tigers Three Pounds to Man, It Will Be One Tough Struggle on Dudley Field Today

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 26.—Eleven primed for the fray and seven to the side, the Commodores and the Sewanee meet here today in their annual football classic, furnishing the feature battle of the Thanksgiving day.

Comparative figures on the two teams give Vanderbilt an advantage of three pounds to the man, and the Commodores will be heavier than Sewanee's.

The Commodores' averages 187 pounds to the man against 178 lbs. Black will be the lighter, and Black, a decided advantage here in the matter of weight. Sewanee's backfield, however, is the best in the South, and Vanderbilt's 154, while Sewanee's ends average 172 against Vanderbilt's 158.

Both teams are in excellent physical shape and odds favor neither of the two in the Thanksgiving battle.

Lineups follow:
