CREW OF FLAX SHIP SWEETHEARD REACHES KIRKBALL IN BOATS

Vessel Was Returning From Archangel; Where Cargo of Cotton Was Discharged, and Was Attacked Off Scotland.

AUSTRO-GERMANS HAVE TOUGH JOB AT WARSAW

Forces Battling to Capture Polish Capital Are Reported Suffering Severely From Russian Counter Attacks.

LONDON, July 26.—The American steamship Leelanaw, from Archangel, July 8, for Boston, with a cargo of flax, was sunk today by a German submarine off the northwest coast of Scotland.

All the members of the crew of the Leelanaw were saved. They were brought into Kirkwall in their own boats.

The Leelanaw was owned by the Harby Ship company of New York. She was formerly a Russian ship. She was 230 feet long and of 1,324 gross tons. She left Galveston May 5 and New York May 17, with a cargo of cotton for Archangel. Her captain was J. W. Sweetheart, who was captured by the British at Kirkwall because her cargo was consigned by way of Gotenburgh, Sweden, which country forbids the export of cotton.

FIGHTING HAS SHIFTED.

Fighting for Warsaw has shifted from South Poland to the north, where the Russians have been unable to advance to the north where the Germans have crossed the Narew river along a waterfront.

Retrospect has not admitted this German success. The Ostroka fortress, from which radiate three useful strategic railroads, apparently is still in control. The Russian forces, although the attack from Pultusk northward has brought the Germans to a point south of Ostroka. The latest German success brings them within twenty-five miles of Warsaw. But the Polish capital has a second line of defense along the Bug river.

PREPARATIONS FOR WINTER.

That preparations have been made by Germany for a winter campaign is indicated by the fact that the German army in which says the war department already has on hand supplies of warm clothing.

A French torpedo boat despatched to the Aegean Sea, where it was to attack the Austrian submarine and aeroplane depot on Lagana, island, one of the Delianian islands, has been captured by a British submarine. The British submarine was observed at the entrance of the strait, and a British aeroplane was seen to be in the air. # AS ARTIST SATTERFIELD SAW THE DISASTER

BABIES WERE BRUSHED INTO RIVER JUST LIKE CRUMBS FROM A TABLE

Cartoonist Who Viewed Horrors From Bridge Describes the Scenes in Vivid Way

(Cartoonist Robert W. Satterfield was crossing the river on an elevated train when the Eastland disaster occurred. He saw the whole disaster and watched the frantic struggles in the water from a distance of only 100 yards. His story follows.)

BY ROBERT SATTERFIELD.

CHICAGO, July 25.—I was just crossing the Clark street bridge when I noticed the steamship Eastland, crowded with people, and with flags and pennants waving. Tugs were just beginning to haul her away from the pier.

I noticed the crowds that blackened the decks. Then looked away for it was 7:40 and I was hurrying to the office.

As I did so I heard a woman shriek just one long piercing scream that rose high above the din and bustle of the early morning traffic.

I looked toward the Eastland again, and the big excursion boat was tipping over—was turning over on her side toward the middle of the river, tumbling its holiday deckload of passengers into the swirling water.

The people, in order to see the tug boats start pulling the Eastland into the river, had crowded to the port railing. The weight of thousands was too much, and the tug heavy boat rolled over, practically turning turtle.

The air was filled with the shrieks of men and women and the thin, shriller screams of hundreds upon hundreds of little children for I feared later it was the annual picnic excursion of the thousands of employees of the Western Union at the end of the bridge to reach the pier I could see the tumbling thousands of people as they fought and scrambled as they were swept into the water.

Women and children and babies, with a sprinkling of men, were brushed into the river as some giant hand would sweep crumbs from a table.

For an instant the part of the deck that still showed the railing and bottom of the vessel were cleared.

The next instant it was blackened with human beings as flies swarming on a lump of sugar, blacked it.

Only instead of flies it was half-crazed picknickers crawling and fighting their way out from inside the boat.

But of the hundreds that screaming and scrambling managed to crawl through portholes and hatchways and reach and cling to the side and railing on the starboard side of the boat that now protruded from the water, still more hundreds were trapped below. It was an hour or more later before rescuers managed to reach these hundreds of drowned.

Many more passengers were below decks than above. They had been herded and jammed into the big passageways on the lower deck just as the order to "cast off" was given.

The big gates across the entrance hatches had been put in place, and as the boat turned they were trapped like cattle in a pen. Hundreds were drowned without a chance. They could not reach the upper decks for the crowds and they could not try to leap for the pier because of the gates.

Women near the gates tried to toss babies and children to the outstretched hands on the pier. Some were caught and others dropped into the water between the boat and the pier piling and sucked under and drowned.

Police from the nearby streets rushed to take charge. With their clubs they cleared the pier of the terrified hundreds, the overflow of picknickers who had been waiting to get on the boat, but could not.

I turned back and managed to climb down on the bulkhead under the bridge. There I could see the water filled with bobbing heads.

Life preservers were rained into the river by the wagonload. Everybody that could grab something that would float threw it to the struggling mass of victims.

Choking in the muddy water, the victims were drawn under and carried down the river by the current faster than they could be pulled into the fleet of lifeboats and tugs that now were arriving on the scene.

I saw women with babies in their arms being swept away under the Fifth avenue bridge, a short distance away.

One woman reached for a grapping hook thrust to her from a rowboat. She missed it.

With a last effort she jerked up in the water and tried to use her little girl to them. The effort plunged the mother down under the surface again and she did not resurface. But the child fell a yard nearer the boat.

"Its white, frilled holiday dress with its ribbons spread out bent her ahead. Then the grapping hook caught it and she was dragged into the boat."

The river literally was black with victims and the boats and barges that had gone to their rescue.

Meantime, police and firemen had leaped onto the alipery side of the boat that now sank up from the river. Firemen with ropes tied to their waists were lowered through the portholes that now served to the sky.

The first victims they could reach were hauled up by ropes. Girl after girl was hauled up, their wretched holiday attire standing out in pitiful contrast against the scene of death.

OFFICIALS GATHER DATA ON NATIONAL DEFENSE

Will Rush Plans for Enlargement of Both Army and Navy

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Officials of the army and navy today were assembling data upon which the administration's program of national defense will be based. Preparation of army and navy reports on the needs of the respective services likely will be rushed to completion and laid before Secretaries Garrison and Daniels within a few days. Upon his return from Corning, N. H., President Wilson and the two secretaries will formulate a comprehensive defense scheme.

Plans for the navy include a large increase in submarines from thirty to fifty being recommended; several battle cruisers; at least four dreadnaughts; a large increase in the auxiliary and aerial fleets and several submarine bases.

Army plans contemplate an army of half a million regulars and militia. A scheme for the federalization of the militia reserves probably will be advanced to provide a force for instant service. In addition, orders of arms will be urged, it is believed.

LIVE TO BE 100 SAYS SCIENTIST

Rid the World of One Thing and Every Other Man Becomes a Centenarian

"How to prolong human life" is now a subject of world-wide discussion. One noted scientist asserts that if the stomach could be freed of one thing the average length of human life would be added up to the century mark. That one thing is stomach disorders.

"The cause of modern civilization is stomach trouble," says the scientist. "It is the cause of offsprings—liver, kidneys and blood disorders—causing the death of one person per second."

"There is one way to relieve the world of stomach trouble; there may be others. But this one is sure and in harmony with Nature. It is by the use of Vitaline. Vitaline is taken out of the earth. It is a natural mineral force and has a wonderful combination of chemical-mineral properties. Vitaline is contained in condensed liquid form. Nothing is added to it and it is free of any habit-forming drugs or any harmful ingredients. It is a natural system many stomach disorders and ailments generally of liver, kidneys, bowels and blood. An inviolable delicate taste makes it. Remarkable cures of chronic illnesses are constantly reported from its use. It is Nature's best tonic and corrective."

Talk with the demonstrator and sample Vitaline at Jacob's Pharmacy 21 Whitehall street, or write there for information.—(Adv.)

CONSTANTINOPLE ACTS AS IF THERE'S NO WAR

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

The city has thoroughly accustomed itself to the war, and follows its pursuits as if the allies were as many thousands as they are hundreds of kilometers away. Business has increased a little and the supply of carpets put up for sale by needy families has diminished, which is interpreted as meaning that once more money can be had from friends, or loans from business acquaintances. Much of this money is spent in the open air cafes, but it is spent in the blunder-plaster. Slightly, without regard to political inclinations, the people gather in the cafes, sip coffee, and absorb whiskies and sodas—of triple entendre meanings—listen to indifferent music, and generally enjoy life. The feeling now is, let the allies take care of their business as best they can. Even the Greeks and Armenians here who formerly prayed secretly that the English and French would force the Dardanelles are now quite indifferent whether they do or not.

THIRTIETH GEORGIA WILL HOLD REUNION FRIDAY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

JACKSON, Ga., July 25.—Many survivors of the Thirtieth Georgia regiment in Butts county are preparing to attend the annual reunion of that famous command, which will be held at Riverdale, Clayton county, on Friday.

Addresses will be made by several well known speakers, dinner will be served on the grounds and the occasion promises to be a notable one. R. S. Osburn, of Atlanta, is president and R. P. Adkinson, of Rex, is secretary of the Thirtieth Georgia regiment. This regiment was made up largely of Butts, Henry, Clayton and Spalding county boys, and a large number of the survivors live in those counties now.

MOTORCYCLES BARRED FROM CARRYING MAIL

WASHINGTON, July 24.—(U. S. Dept. of Post Office.)

Motorcycles in the rural delivery service is prohibited by an order issued today by Postmaster General Burleson effective January 1, 1916. Mr. Burleson holds that motorcycles of the type do not have the carrying capacity needed for the parcel service and do not afford necessary protection for the mails in bad weather. The order will affect about 8,000 carriers who now use the bicycle or motorcycle to cover their routes.

The Governor's Horse Guard.

Since the Governor's Horse Guard was compelled to vacate its quarters in the basement of the Auditorium-Armory, it has had no fixed place for keeping its mounts. It was plainly improper to use any part of the Auditorium building as a stable, but it is equally clear that the Horse Guard ought to be provided with adequate accommodation. The officers and men of this troop are subject to militia duty whenever occasion demands. Their service and, if need be their lives, are answerable at any time for the community's protection. As an integral part of the National Guard, they are an important link in the country's armor of defense. As a matter of public and patriotic interest, therefore, they are entitled to generous consideration.

At their personal expense, the members of the Guard have supplied themselves with horses in order that they may be trained to efficient cavalry service. Surely, the city can afford to provide them with quarters for these horses and equipment. Some months ago Council was appealed to for a modest appropriation to this purpose, but without response. If the municipal government will not meet this need, the citizens of Atlanta should find some means of doing so. Men who stand ever ready to protect the property and life of others and to serve their community or their country in time of peril deserve the appreciation and support of all right-thinking people.

Warsaw and Paris continue inhospitable to the Germans.

Prompt Payment for Teachers.

The shameful delays which so long have marked the payment of Georgia school teachers and which have become a serious menace to the State's educational interests are due to inadequate methods rather than inadequate funds. For any given twelve-month tax income is wholly sufficient to pay the teachers' salaries for that period, but these taxes are not collectable until the end of the year, so that in the meantime hundreds of teachers, particularly those in the poorer rural districts, are kept waiting for the money they have earned. If there were some means of utilizing assured revenues from month to month, before they were actually in the treasury, this urgent problem, it seems, would be solved or at least simplified.

To this end the Senate has passed the Walker bill which authorizes the Governor "to draw his warrant at the end of each and every month of the current year in favor of the State school superintendent or the several county school superintendents and treasurers of local school systems, in the discretion of the State Board of Education for such amount or amounts as are then due the teachers; said warrants to be drawn on the funds appropriated by the Legislature for the current year and to go to exceed in the aggregate the appropriation for the public schools so made for that year." The warrants thus drawn will be negotiable with responsible banks at very low rates of interest, and will serve the broadly important purpose of paying the teachers promptly.

The needs for which this measure provides are so urgent and the principles on which it is based are so sound that it should be enacted without delay. Public servants who work so faithfully and unselfishly as the teachers of Georgia should not be required to wait long months for small salaries. Such a policy is as harmful to the State as it is unjust to the individuals concerned.

American Dyestuffs.

The dyestuff problem, so serious and baffling a few months ago, seems now to be working itself out, slowly but steadily. The federal Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reports that the American firms engaged in this industry, though regrettable few, "are expanding their plants and are producing dyestuffs in quantities hitherto unknown, while equally noteworthy is the increase in the supply of intermediates and aniline oil." Further encouragement is found in the assurance from the Department of Commerce that Americans who now enter this field of manufacture will be protected against unfair foreign competition, when the war is over. This protection, it is said, will probably take the form of "rulings under the anti-trust laws against price-cutting in the United States by foreign combinations."

Though rich in the natural resources needful to dye-making and gifted with inventive talent, America neglected this important industry, depending for the most part on imports from Germany. As a result, the outbreak of the war threatened our manufacturers with a dyestuff famine, and in some instances textile mills were forced temporarily to shut down. Disturbing though it has been and still is, the situation eventually will rebound to the country's industrial good. It stresses the need for greater enterprise and independence, and so brings creative ideas and forces into play.

Georgia's Need of Compulsory Education

Year after year in Georgia we discuss compulsory education pretty much as men once debated whether the earth stood still or moved. Summer after summer our legislators hem and haw over a principle which the greater part of the enlightened world accepted and put into practice long ago. Meanwhile one-fifth of our population is illiterate, thirty-two per cent of Georgia's children of school age are out of school the year around, and Georgia remains one of the only four or five States having no law to remedy these grave ills. Isn't it time to cease quibbling, and to do something definite for the good name and safety of the Commonwealth?

Opponents of compulsory education are in effect upholders of compulsory ignorance. Very jealous of individual rights, they are strangely indifferent to public rights; and while insisting on the liberty of the parent, they would sacrifice the liberty of the child. In early Rome fathers had power of life and death over their children, and sometimes unfortunate waifs were blinded or maimed to adapt them to professional begging. In Georgia a parent may sentence his child to illiteracy, may cripple his mind and blur the vision of his soul while the State looks tolerantly on. To pitch a child "neck and crop into the world," as Sam Weller said, "to play at leap frog with its troubles," without the rudiments of education is to rob him of the means to happiness and liberty and life itself in its wider range. The State that permits such injustice is untrue to the principles of American government.

If a man persists in keeping his backyard in such a condition as to endanger his neighbor's health, he is sent to jail. But if he insists on rearing his child in such a manner as to lower public intelligence, he is indolently let alone. Illiteracy is more than a misfortune to individuals; it is a menace to society. Under our system of government, the people are the State, electing its officers molding its policies and deciding issues of grave concern to property and human interests. Their will is the basic law and the court of final appeal. How important, then, that they be prepared for thoughtful and righteous use of this tremendous power.

Yet, in Georgia there are 36,000 native whites of voting age who can not read the ballots they cast—a number sufficient at times to control the outcome of an election. These illiterates, it is true, do not vote as a unit, and some, perhaps, do not vote at all; but their political influence is present, sometimes decisive. Georgia has 76,342 native white children between the ages of six and fourteen who are not attending school. Of these a considerable percentage is made up of boys, who are approaching the duties of citizenship unprepared. To be thoroughly safe, indeed, we had better assume, without rushing in where only angels dare to tread) that the girl also are approaching responsibilities of suffrage. But whether voting or not, illiterate womanhood is even worse than illiterate manhood; for the home is the heart of society and woman is the heart of the home.

When every child in Georgia has its educational due, we shall have richer farms, fairer cities, able industries, a happier and nobler Commonwealth. Property does not spring from cunning machines and fertile soils; it springs from cunning hands and fertile minds. People are more important than property. A child's mind harbors more wealth than all the farms and factories of the world; for, in that mind what inventions may be waiting, what theories to prosper and enlighten mankind! Railroads and telegraphs and cotton gins, all have sprung from the energy that throbs in a human brain. It is to this energy, fostered and trained by education, that we owe our progress in agriculture and industry. The surest way to make Georgia a richer State is to arouse and free the people's minds.

That is the peculiar function of education. That is the mission of the country school—no less than of the college and university. Public interests as well as individual rights demand that every child be given his educational due. The Legislature should see to it, without further delay, that this is done through the enactment of a compulsory school attendance law.

At any rate, the German offensive movements look fine on paper.

When we think there is a glimmer of hope of world wide peace, the crematory row bobs up again.

Bank clearings show another increase, a condition that should cause the pessimist further discontent.

These European Socialists had better take all the concessions that are being offered, for during peace there won't be any.

Some irresponsible employe of the Eastland may be punished, but there the investigation of the Chicago steamship horror will probably end.

It is likewise time for the Georgia legislature to send an ultimatum to the boll weevil, which now threatens an invasion of the state on the Alabama border.

You Go Sight-Seeing.

BY H. ADDINGTON HAYCOCK.

Now is the time, year when the tourist is most in evidence. The war has put a stop to foreign travel, but from ocean to ocean multitudes of sightseers are journeying, some to the east, some to the west, all intent on visiting new places and enlarging their knowledge of the land in which they live.

Many will derive great benefit, both physical and mental, from the pleasant break in the routine of their lives. But many will come home not only without having been really benefited, but with a distinct feeling of having been cheated.

They will bring back, at best, a confused memory of scenes and faces. They may feel somewhat exhausted that is with diminished, they may feel themselves to have lost their regular tasks.

Not so the true one of persons who have journeyed a great distance during their sight-seeing vacation. Under certain conditions a tour from Philadelphia to New York may prove more fatiguing than one from New York to San Francisco.

When in a new place there is, of course, a natural desire to get as fully acquainted with it as possible. This would be all very well if one had plenty of time in which to wander leisurely around.

But time is precisely what most tourists lack. They have a limited holiday period, after which they must buckle down to work once more. And even when time is not lacking to them, they act as if it were.

They pay hurried visits to cathedrals, state houses, and parks; they dash through museums and art galleries; and they careen madly from one historic site to another. They are determined to see, as rapidly as possible, everything that is worth seeing.

Even if this seems not to be especially exhausting, it would still be most harmful to them because of its effect on their minds.

The human mind is so constituted that it does not readily absorb a great variety of new impressions. Time is needed for the fusion of these with the mental images previously acquired by education and experience.

Consequently, when new impressions of various kinds follow one another quickly, the mind soon becomes fatigued, with resultant fatigue of the whole organism.

The tourist in a strange city, in fact, is in much the same position as a child going to school for the first time. He is gradually familiarizing himself with its surroundings, and adding to his knowledge little by little, or his visit will leave him wearied and confused.

It is this consideration that underlies the following sage piece of advice by a medical authority:

In visiting strange cities a more profitable holiday would be to get by merely wandering about the streets and watching the ways of the people than by seeing the regulation sights, with a guide mechanically pointing out a scene by scene.

At least, don't try to see an entire city, with all its historical associations, in a day or a week. If your time is limited, be content with only a few places.

By so doing you will carry away with you clear and more pleasurable memories of your holiday tour, which will then be of truly enlarging and invigorating value to you.

Ragtime Joe of the Movies.

Old Joe Fay sure could play.
Snake shakin' a rattlesnake.
Rag or swipes 'im jumpy critter.
He could hand 'em some!
Some 'tilla put to die.
Ragtime Joe is the only man.
Sneaky giggle had the thrills.
In the debauch scene,
Y'all get by me for my fall.
Was a cracklerjack.
When Joe kep' shootin' pep
Up and down his back.
One coddy taste.
Little kids galore!
Some 'till bloke piped off snake.
Triflin' the ragtime man.
Near the screen flames was seen
Leap in the air.
But, you bet, Joe set
To play for 'em, for 'em,
Ragtime while down the aisle,
Children get away.
To the street, sleet and meat,
Like they was at play.
When the last child had passed
From the danger zone,
Some one cried, "Joe, inside,
Left in there, alone!"
There he lay, brava Joe Fay,
Silent on the floor.
To the scene of movie screen,
He won't play no more.
Where 'till bloke piped off snake,
If above, things lay,
Angels go to get old Joe.
So to play for 'em, for 'em,
—H. S. Haskins, in the "New York Sun."

Travellette

BY NIKER.
NO. 879.—VIENNA.

This city of the Italian plain, though less known than the great cities of a more recent past in war and an inspiring one in art. Many of the greatest architects of the Italian Renaissance were natives of Vienna, and they probably be sure to say that no other city of its size in the world has so many splendid buildings. It is literally a city of palaces—splendid marble structures surrounded by graceful gardens—and the most notable building of the city is the dome of the greatest religious structures in Italy. It is of white marble, rising in rows of superb arches, lifting against the sky a mass of statues of heroes. Seen at a little distance, it looks like a landscape pattern of ethereal gray, wrought on a tremendous scale, or some distant flock, wrought in the sun.

Vienna is also famous for the bloody fight she made against the Austrians when Italy was at war with that nation in 1849. The famous Austrian general, Nugent, was marching westward to join Radetzky's army, which was besieged in the Quadrilateral. But when he reached Vienna, to his astonishment, he found the city in a state of such splendid defense. Without any fortifications worthy of the name, guarded only by a few thousand volunteers, the Swiss troops and the citizens, Vienna rolled back the Austrian assaults again and again, until the Austrians were repulsed and were greeted by shouts of "Viva Italia!"

A second attack by Marshal Radetzky himself was likewise repulsed, but the town finally fell under a third assault.

Vienna is situated at the head of a narrow valley which lies between the Monti Berici, an imposing range of hills, and the Italian Alps. The forested flanks of both these splendid ranges are dotted with the white marble of thousands of villas, and the valley below is a network of fields and orchards.

The surrounding entrance to the valley, the situation of Vienna is not only a beautiful, but a strategic one. Hence the part which she has played, and perhaps it is to play again in the wars of Europe.

The Searchlight.

Oceanic passengers will be pleased with a "non-politich" in which the crew of the ship has been invited to use his will obviate the possibility of having his dinner dumped in one's lap, as frequently happened in rough weather at sea. Small protection is afforded the wooden framework which is now placed around the cabin.

This new table is supplied with weights, and balanced upon a pivot structure, which supports the top by means of sliding links. The weight of the table in a horizontal position no matter what angle the ship assumes. They adjust themselves automatically whenever the ship's position is altered by the waves.

HOLES IN THE OCEAN

BY FRANK C. CRANE.

It was on June 2, 1912, that the German ship Planet dropped a line into the crystal clear waters off Mindanao, an island of the Philippine group, and payed it out for more than six miles. The weight on it sank for that distance straight through the water, without the slightest resistance. It went further beneath the surface of the earth than had any object guided by man since time began.

Previous to that time the credit for having found the deepest hole in the ocean was held by the United States ship Nero, which had dropped a line that was but eleven fathoms short of six miles. The hole which it penetrated was near the island of Guam, and the occasion for the exploration of the sea bottom was the laying of the American cable that now connects Manila, Guam, Midway and Honolulu with San Francisco, and enables Uncle Sam to chat half way round the globe by the under-sea method.

So deep are these holes that the Himalaya mountains might be thrown in between them and the ocean's surface with half a mile of the surface. These deep sea findings wonder the palm from that depression of the West Indies near Haiti and Porto Rico, found by U. S. S. Dolphin in 1903, which boasts of a depth of five and a third miles, and would cover Nero's Peak two miles deep. They are the deepest holes known, but many are as deep as the deepest ones. Some of them are still great areas of the ocean that have not been sounded. The sea bottom of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans has a mean depth of about three miles and it is very hard to get down to even that distance and at frequent intervals over so great an area as they cover.

But many interesting situations have been developed by these soundings. It is found, for instance, that the major part of the Atlantic is three miles deep, but that there are small basins of varying depths at a depth of a mile and half and actually coming to the surface in a few places, the island of St. Helena to which Napoleon was banished being one of them. There is a small basin in the western part of the Atlantic, and held to have once reached above the water and to have been inhabited. The theory is that as it sank, it may have had a great many animals and birds of the central America, shown in their architecture, their pyramids, their identical calendars, their customs, which may be explained that they once lived on the continent which disappeared.

There was not great need of a knowledge of the deep in the days of the ancient mariners. Their cables upon its bottom. A cable two inches thick, contains a myriad of wires filled in with and surrounded by lead. It is made in two parts. A knowledge of the depth into which the cable is being lowered enables those having the work in charge to take the necessary precautions to relieve strains whenever possible and often to save the cable, also have ocean lanes the world around come to have their depth measured.

The great problem in reaching into these ocean depths was to find a line strong enough to bear the weight of miles of its own length. There was the need of great strength and small bulk. Eventually a fine wire of platinum was used, which is the strongest and most effective. So fine is this wire that it takes 400 feet of it to weigh a pound. To reach a depth of six miles it was necessary to use a cable of 300 miles of it. With a similar weighing sixty pounds the whole weight to be sustained would be 140 pounds, while the wire has a tensile strength of 240 pounds. So it is known that it would be possible to reach a depth of three or four miles deeper than are any of the holes yet found.

When a ship is making a sounding the line is put overboard with the weight at the end of it and allowed to sink as rapidly as it can pass through the water. Yet so great is the depth of some of the oceans that the line will sink so slowly that it takes an hour to fall to the bottom. With the line going down and the drum over which it passes in measuring its length spinning, the man in the rigging watches the line pass and realize that time will be all the time falling into the depth toward the center of the earth.

The weights on the end of the wires are so arranged that they will be released and fall off when they strike the bottom. This done away with the necessity of pulling this array of pounds back through the miles of water that intervenes.

These slim tentacles are the only means that man has to determine the nature of the sea floor. They lie beneath the waves upon which he rides. Yet there is more of the earth's surface covered with a mile of water than otherwise. So does this fine feeder become the major part of the earth which lies in the depths.

THE SCHOOL IN THE WOODS

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

EVERY one in a while you come across something that makes you glad to think that the world of men is not entirely wrapped up in conventional ideas, that a few brave, free spirits yet exist.

The "School in the Woods," recently established in New England, is actually in the woods, real big woods, forest park, as it were, and in the heart of the state, a regular brook that gurgles as a brook should, flows for camp fires, a lake, and all sorts of birds and wild, furry creatures.

There are a few people who see the educational problem with open eyes, unscarred by tradition, have a school with no ideas except the beautiful, simple and clear of the children, and the boys of the world.

The first principle laid down in this school is that the child has an inalienable right to be happy.

Learning, department, skill and all such things come last through happiness, not duty, threats and repression. Isn't that a glorious idea?

Then, also, they teach there mostly through play. A child's free efforts at self-expression are already aided. If you want him to work, let him play; he works at play ten times harder than at a task; it is the business of the teacher to know how to use play as an educational process.

The children learn here, but knowledge comes as the adjunct to effort. The teacher never made men learn first and then do; the real learning comes through doing.

So almost every minute is spent out of doors, the little hands ever doing, doing, doing.

Here's the way these wise teachers put it. Outdoor life gives the children first-hand experience in rocks, trees, bugs, water, fire—which is another way of saying elementary biology with its laws, its distance, its direction, boundaries—which is another way of saying geography, with figures, rulers, compasses, measured, and all such things, which is another way of saying astronomy, with its resourfulness in danger, the will to observe, the practice of truth, patience, self-reliance, and honesty—which is another way of saying mental and moral education.

Renee had said: "cried Amiel; and so these little ones are guided into the great, wide, healing world of the order of nature.

They are made strong, clean little animals, which ought to be the prime essential in any child-training. Keen noses as dogs, quick ears as deer, sharp eyes as cats, like-shoots as foxes, tows and strong as Indians, they have health and vigor, the foundations of happiness and efficiency.

They study books, too, and learn all children learn in school rooms, only they learn it by the way. There is no hate of tasks, no dread of recitations and examinations.

It is better than to leave your child a million dollars to give him such a schooling as this, to provide him first with a childhood, a childhood with green trees and blue brooks, play and laughter.

QUIPS AND QUIDDITIES

There had been a terrific earthquake, and afterward one lady was asking another if she was not terribly frightened. "Oh, no," she said, "I rather enjoyed it for it was the first thing ever happened since I was married; my husband did not blame me for it."

"Now, Tommy," said the teacher, "you may give an example of a coincidence."

"I'll try, sir," said Tommy, "with some hesitation, 'why—' father and me mudder was both married on de same day."

"Every man should know himself," remarked the parlor philosopher.

"Perhaps," said the man, "but in doing so he wastes a lot of time and money in making more desirable acquaintances." Judge.

Clenny was checking.

"What is the joke?" asked Mooney.

"Why, Casey bet me $10 he could shoot a peenut off me head with a shotgun."

"What is funny about that?"

"I took him up because I knew he'll miss it—"

When William H. Crane was younger and less discreet he had a vaulting ambition to play Hamlet. So with his first brothe he organized his own company and he went to an inland western town to give vent to his ambition.

When he came back to New York a group of friends noticed that the actor appeared to be much downcast.

"What's the matter, Crane? Didn't they appreciate it as one of our first triumphs?"

"They didn't seem to," laconically answered the actor.

"Well, didn't they give an encouragement? Didn't they ask you to come before the curtain?" persisted the friend.

"Ask me?" answered Crane. "Man, they dared me!"

A witty Irishman was once invited to a large dinner in Dublin in the hope that he would amuse and divert his host's guests, but from the beginning to the end he did not say a word of anything that was not serious. The host thought this very strange.

"Why, old fellow," he remarked, "I don't believe the best beef in Ireland could make you laugh tonight."

"Try," was the quiet rejoinder.

OFFICIALS WORKING TO FIX BLAME FOR DEATH SHIP HORROR

Whether the water ballast compartments were properly filled. Divers reported to Coroner Hoffman that they believed there was about 200 bodies still in the hull, many of which cannot be taken out until the vessel is raised.

Arrangements were completed for raising the steamer and dynamiting the pier bed to release bodies that may have been stuck in the mud.

At noon Coroner Hoffman reported that 210 bodies had been recovered. Coroner Hoffman believes the total will reach 1,000.

The first funeral services took place today when more than 300 corteges passed through streets.

Bellevue work was continued today under the direction of Mayor Thompson's advisory committee and the local Red Cross.

Efforts in every trade and industry distributed. Coroner Hoffman announced he would not hold an inquest until the search for dead was completed.

LOSSES ALL HERE FAMILY. At the Second Regiment armory, where the bodies of the dead are laid in rows, the identities of the victims of the tragedy are most apparent.

Mrs. Maran, seventy-three years old, went down eight minutes before her two sons. She saw her boys, her daughter-in-law and her grandson leave home Saturday morning to make the trip on the Eastland.

Later in the day she heard there had been an accident, but it was not until late in the evening that she learned that there had been loss of life.

Mrs. Maran had made the trip along with her dead husband's body back when she uttered a cry and fell across the form of a youth.

TODAY'S EVENING STORY NOT TOO OLD.

"MY LAND! You ought to go, Cynthia," said Mrs. Humphrey, reluctant to own herself defeated of her errand and lingering in the door. Cynthia Blisbee sighed. "I suppose I have to go. You're no older than I be."

MONDAY

Tennessee. It's some lonesome at home. So I came here. "My land! You'll be a sight lonesome here," said Cynthia. The girl laughed. She was very handsome, with her black, luminous eyes her red cheeks and rosy lips, straight nose and flashing, beautifully set teeth. The sun seemed to linger upon her, the wind to stir the folds of her red coat, so much was she a creature of the out-of-doors. "No! I shan't be lonesome here," she said softly. "You aren't sick, you know, Cousin Cynthia. Now, tell me, can I run my car in the barn till I want to use it again?"

realized that she had eaten an enormous amount of chicken, salad drenched with olive oil, strawberries, smothered in cream, and cake whose richness was betrayed by its color. "I expect I'll be sick," she regretted. "I'm too old to indulge that way." "I'll tell you," cried Lois, springing up. "We'll leave the table standing and go for a spin. There's nothing like motion to aid digestion." Cynthia shrank. "Lois! You crazy girl! I wouldn't get in that car and go for worlds. I never rode in one, and I never will." "Pshaw!" Lois remarked merely. "You don't want to break my heart by refusing to go with me, do you, dear? Why, both the boys, even father himself, says I haven't any match for managing a car. And this is my dear little runabout. Why, Cousin Cynthia, if you don't go with me I'll rush back home and leave you to your indignation." Her white teeth flashed in a beaming smile. Somehow Cynthia found herself in the car, which began at first to move so slowly that she never once thought of losing her breath. It was a delightful sensation—easy as sitting in a rocking chair. Cynthia's old heart began to rise. She smiled at the spinning lead-and moved into the kitchen. It was time to put on the potatoes for dinner. Cynthia had lost her touch for potatoes, and there was no one in the house but herself, still, the habit was strong. She always had potatoes for dinner, and she always would. She slipped three into a saucpan and set them to boil, then she dropped into a chair listlessly to wait. He lid of the saucpan danced and clattered and Cynthia watched it steadily. Outside the closed window was all the wonder of a late May day—green grass, robins huddling, lilacs shaking out waves of sweetness. Cynthia neither saw nor heard. She had seen too many springtimes to be thrilled by this one. The currents of life had swept her up into a little stagnant pool of her own and rushed past and left her there. She had known joy and hope and triumph, but now she felt she knew nothing, scarcely even sorrow, for she was alone in the old house where she had lived as a girl, wife, widow and, briefly, as a mother. "I don't see why folks will hang on so, when they're too old to live," she thought. Down the placid street in front of the house streamed a glittering red runabout. At the wheel which she managed with skilled assurance, sat a girl in a red louse coat, with a Panama hat fast to her thick black hair. She swung the car at the curb where Cynthia Blisbee's door, picked up a suitcase, took a circuit survey of the forbidding front door and ran around to even made her buy a new satin dress and gloves to wear to Madge's wedding. "For you're going, dear," she said. "I couldn't appear without you. They'd send me away." Lois' mother sent them and Lois suggested that they give a picnic party and invite Madge and all the other young folks. "That night Cynthia lay broad, but smiling in her bed, thinking over the events of the day. She had eaten as much ice cream as anybody, she had had just as good a time as anybody. "I'll never say again that I'm too old to be happy," she thought. "Life is beautiful. I don't care a mite if I live now or in

When we were in Ireland I often marvelled at the rosy health of the ragged little toddlers one sees...

After giving a lot more statistics which I will skip, I find this, which is interesting...

We are now aware of the importance of the alkaline salts found in vegetables which perform the office of the blood, which is essential to good health...

And then, in addition to placing the humble potato near the top of the ladder in regard to food value...

So, on with the paper, let us consume these PLUM DELICACIES.

DAMSON PRESERVES. Measure the damsons and allow an equal weight of sugar...

PICKLED PLUMS. Allow seven pounds of plums, four pounds of sugar, two ounces of stick cinnamon...

SUGARED PLUMS. Suggested plums make a tempting dessert...

LITTLE BEDTIME STORIES BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

By Thornton W. Burgess. Copyright, 1915, by J. O. Lloyd.

A little kid and goodly deed like a little tiny seed; It grows and grows and grows and grows, And where 'twill stop nobody knows.

The little friends of Farmer Brown's boy were trying to help him by killing all the bugs and worms in the Old Orchard...

But Farmer Brown's boy did know what they were doing and they didn't have the least idea of how they were doing it.

When the hole was deep enough to suit him he brought a post and put it in. Then he pounded the earth down.

Why don't you? asked Farmer Brown with a twinkle in his kindly eyes.

Well, it seems to me that those little folks must get dreadfully thirsty when it's hot, and they must have to go a long way for a drink of water.

The very thing," cried Farmer Brown, "I don't think of it before."

With this he strode off toward the barn and there for a time he was very busy.

By and by he came out to the Old Orchard and began to dig a hole just like the one he had dug in the garden.

When the hole was deep enough to suit him he brought a post and put it in. Then he pounded the earth down.

Why don't you? asked Farmer Brown with a twinkle in his kindly eyes.

Well, it seems to me that those little folks must get dreadfully thirsty when it's hot, and they must have to go a long way for a drink of water.

The very thing," cried Farmer Brown, "I don't think of it before."

With this he strode off toward the barn and there for a time he was very busy.

Answering an Alarm

The swain had proposed for the hand of a village beauty and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring quite dazling, and it is only natural that he should be a bit nervous.

"Yes, I love to dance," Miss "No, no, not tonight."

Foot Comfort

SUMMER is hard on most feet, the reason being that they become heated and swollen.

The larger and more varied the assortment of summer shoes, too, the more comfortable the foot will be.

They Sang With All Their Might and Main.

"Have you collected that bill of Smith's?"

"Have I collected it? I called at the house and found that seven Smiths lived there."

Den, dee, dee! See me! See me! he cried joyously, and fitted down to the edge of the pan and began to drink.

Her Destiny A lady of great beauty and attractions met a beautiful man in Ireland, once crowned peer prince of it at a party by saying:

Before and After Before marriage, says a married woman, a man declares that he will lay down his life to serve you; after marriage he won't even lay down his newspaper to go to you.

Keep an Eye on Baby's Teeth

I wish parents would have their child's teeth to come in clean. It is a common mistake to suppose that the eruption of a small pimple on the face is the only sign of decay.

Our Column of Good Recipes

THIS is the time of year to serve vegetables in all and all ways. They are coming into the market from the south and are getting cheaper.

Do not allow rising beans that have become white to stand in water. Wash them and put them in a damp cloth and set in cool place for two hours.

STRING BEANS WITH BUTTER SAUCE—Wash, string and cut two quarts of beans in inch lengths and cook until tender.

FRENCH BEANS—Wash, string and cut two quarts of beans in pieces, boil until tender, drain and pack in sauce pan.

BEANS BRITANNY STYLE—Wash, string and cut in inch pieces two quarts of beans, drain and pack in sauce pan.

Perry's Turling Chicks in Third Game of Series

Big Right-hander Had Chicks at His Mercy When Hits Would Have Meant Runs—Day to Oppose Bill Robertson in Last Game Today

MEMPHIS, July 25.—Scott Perry, of South farm, gave a great Sunday crowd a little demonstration on how he would do the Nashville Vols down without a hit a short time ago in the game between the Crackers and Chick.

He did not do it until he had pitched ten runs and the game for the Cracks to send the local back empty.

He told the Chicks grabbed seven hits by Perry. These were scattered through the innings.

BIG BATTLE BREWING ON MEXICAN BORDER

Funston Ready to Shoot if Bulls Cross the Boundary

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Major General Funston reported today that despite warnings to General Carranza and his assurances that there would be no fighting in border towns endangering Americans, General Calles assembled with 2,000 Carranza troops at Santa Barbara, twenty miles from Nogales and apparently was preparing to attack the border town. General Funston has orders to repel with force any firing into American territory. "I never saw the most appreciative of people I ever saw," Consul General Hanna said in a message today to the state department. "Thousands of the people are praying for President Wilson, the Red Cross and the consular general." The message said salt, pork, beans and corn were distributed among 3,000 people of Monterey, after which the Red Cross was closed until the new crop has been made.

AMERICAN RED CROSS TO QUIT WAR SERVICE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Decision of the American Red Cross to withdraw on October 1 its doctors and nurses from the European battlefields was being discussed today by officers of the society who expressed regret at the necessity for the action. Lack of funds is given as the reason by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of the Red Cross relief committee, who announced that the date mentioned the general fund, aggregating $1,560,000, will have been exhausted. Of the sixteen units all will return to the United States with the possible exception of the two in Belgium which they are greatest need. The Serbian sanitary commission and other work supported by special contribution will be continued as long as funds are available.

ALLEGED CONSPIRATORS ARE PLACED ON TRIAL

Written by Garrett to Miss Griffin. It was addressed: "Dear Honey Gal," and signed, "Yours only, Niles." There were others in the court room as this episode was read by Attorney Felder. Miss Griffin smiled jubilantly as the terms of indictment were emphasized by the attorney, while Garrett appeared restless and ill at ease. The letter, it was testified, was found in the dresser drawer of a room that Miss Griffin had occupied. "TO BUY AUTOMOBILE." Mr. George also testified that recently he was in the place of business of W. L. Allen, on Edgewood avenue, when Garrett came in, saying that he was just from Judge Jackson's office and that he (Garrett) would get $12,000. When he got the money, Garrett was quoted as saying, he expected to buy a nice automobile.

GEORGIA POLICE CHIEFS MEET IN MACON AUG. 4

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) CORDELL, Ga., July 26.—Police Chief L. M. Sumner, of this city, has announced that a great interest is being evidenced among the chiefs of police, town marshals and railroad special detectives throughout Georgia in the approaching meeting to be held on August 4 and 5 in Macon and that the indications are that few, if any, towns of any importance in the state will have no representatives at the meeting.

NEW BUREAU WILL STUDY OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES

(By Associated Press.) PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 26.—A branch of the United States public health service under the supervision of Dr. J. W. Schereschewsky, of Washington, has been established here for the study of occupational diseases. Actual work, however, will not begin for about a week by which time it is expected workmen will have completed alterations at the marine hospital where the local headquarters of the branch will be located. According to present plans, four laboratories, chemical, physiological, bacteriological and physical will be constructed. The investigations of the branch will extend to Cleveland, Buffalo and adjacent manufacturing centers.
