CHARLES BECKER SENT TO HIS DEATH

Former New York Lieutenant of Police Is Executed for the Killing of Gambler Herman Rosenthal

SHOCK SENT THROUGH BODY AS HE PRAYED

Dies With Photo of Wife Pinned Over His Heart—Wrote Statement Denying Guilt Shortly Before Execution

ING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N. Y., July 29.—Charles Becker was put to death in the electric chair here this morning for the killing of Herman Rosenthal, the New York gambler, the former New York police lieutenant, related his composure and protested his innocence to the last. He went to his death with a calm and dignified life pinned on his shirt over his heart. Three sharks were watching the prison physician pronounced Becker dead at 8:45 o'clock.

Becker led the way to his own execution. The condemned man set up his cell on the edge of his cot, calmly talking to Deputy Warden Charles M. Johnson.

"I have got to face it," said Becker, "and I don't want to be troubled by any one." The deputy warden led Becker about a foot before the time set for the execution and when the priest, Father W. J. Conroy, came to administer the last rites they found the man calmly and in a dignified manner, with his hands resting on his knees, looking at the priest with a steady gaze.

Becker rose to his feet when he saw the priest. He took the priest's hand and kissed it. He then turned to the witnesses and said: "I am not guilty by deed, or confession, or by any other means of the death of Rosenthal. I am sacrificed to my friends and to my enemies."

The one-time police officer hesitated as he entered the chamber. He looked at the witnesses as if he was waiting for the death chair was so close to him. He looked at the witnesses as if he was waiting for the death chair was so close to him.

THREE SHOCKS GIVEN. The first shock lasted a full minute and the second and third were given in ten and ten amperes in strength. The physician pronounced Becker dead at 8:45 o'clock.

FOURTEEN DAYS MADE OF CHARTER FOR NEW CAN. ROAD

Attorneys for Proposed New Railway as Competitor to State Line Plan to Carry the Fight to Courts

RIGHT OF WAY ALREADY PURCHASED; HIS REPORT

Will Not Insist Upon Granting of Charter Before Assembly Adjourns; Lawyers Tell Secretary Cook

Attorneys King & Spalding counsel for the North Georgia Mineral Railway company, which is seeking a charter for the construction of a railroad between Atlanta and Cartersville and which road is generally supposed to be a subsidiary construction of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, have made a formal demand upon Secretary of State Philip Cook that he issue the road a charter.

The North Georgia Mineral railroad is the proposed line which it is generally believed the Louisville and Nashville wish to parallel the Western and Atlantic railroad. It is understood that the new road has already purchased practically all of its right of way between Atlanta and Cartersville and that it has secured terms for its construction.

Application for a charter for the North Georgia Mineral railroad was filed with the secretary of state on October 5, last year, but there was no such opportunity to the granting of the charter. The attorneys King & Spalding agreed with Governor Slaton not to present their application until the general assembly met this year.

BILLS OPPOSE CHARTER. The legislature has passed the senate which have for their object the prevention of the construction of a railroad to parallel the Western and Atlantic road. These bills have been favorably reported by the house committee and will be his for their consideration and passage in the house some time next week.

In filing their demand for the issuance of the charter, the attorneys King & Spalding stated that they had no desire to insist that he grant the charter before the general assembly adjourns. They indicated that what they wished to do was to properly preserve their rights and the legal right of the state to grant a charter.

The legislature passed the anti-parallel bills the attorneys for the North Georgia Mineral railroad, who are insisting upon their rights before the law existing at the time they filed their application, and they will, it is believed, insist upon their rights before the law existing at the time they filed their application.

They will insist, it is understood, that the fact that they filed their application does not in any way deny them the right to insist upon their rights before the law existing at the time they filed their application.

Russians Flee Polish Fortress as Austro-German Forces Advance Upon Capital in Overwhelming Numbers

AIM OF RETREAT IS TO SAVE RUSS ARMY

With Fall of Warsaw, It Is Believed, Kaiser Will Throw Many New Troops Into Fighting in West

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, July 30.—Warsaw, the third city in Russia and the goal for which the German armies have been striving since October, is at least in the throes of a standstill. The German advance numbers are at the gates of the Polish capital and dispatches from the city itself and from surrounding districts further resistance would be unavailing.

Dislocated, not only through France and Great Britain, but in Russia itself, the fall of the city is expected hourly, and the problem now is to move the Russian armies intact, threatened as they are by the forces of the Austro-Germans and more seriously from the north where the German forces are aiming at the railway from Warsaw to Petrograd. This latter message, the British press has been stripping the hope in the allied countries now is for continued maintenance of the Russian army.

The Warsaw portofice already has been warned some point to the westward, the populace has been warned to remain calm and presumably for days Russian troops have been stripping the city of everything of military value.

The German army is moving over the city, and according to reports, plans have been completed for the evacuation of the city. The emperor, accompanied by his consort, is expected to leave the city in the next few days. THE GREAT EUROPEAN GAME OF CANNON-BALL

PIRATES VS. CUBS

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The three lost or stolen prohibition bills were found. A senate committee of five was appointed to investigate conditions at the Confederate Soldiers home near Atlanta, the senate not being satisfied with the investigation made recently by the house committee.

A bill by Senator Eakes was passed providing that no life-term prisoner shall be granted clemency or a parole until he shall have served at least ten years, and then, in case the prisoner shall have already been the recipient of executive clemency, it is left to the prison commission alone to pass final judgment upon new evidence introduced to show his innocence.

The bill was introduced by Senator Eakes to prohibit the manufacture and sale of any drink containing caffeine. A bill by Senator Eakes raising the penalty for burglary in an occupied house at night from five to thirty days was passed.

The resolution providing for a senate probe of conditions at the Soldiers' home carried after speeches had been made by several senators. Senator DeWitt Pickett, of the Eleventh, said the house had ignored the matter and that the senate should be charged that the members of the house probe committee, one from each congressional district, were directly under the influence of the soldiers' home trustees, one from each district.

HEARINGS TO CONTINUE IN RECORDER'S COURT

Wild Scenes Mark Opening Session—Thursday Night When Trial Suspends After Hearing Four Witnesses

The trial of Police Chief Beavers, on charges of manslaughter and incompetency, will be resumed Friday night by the board of police commissioners in the recorder's court room. Police station, with a reasonable assurance that no further scenes of disorder will be enacted.

Every effort will be made by the dominant faction of the commission to complete the trial at the sitting, and it is the expectation that a verdict will be reached before adjournment, unless unforeseen developments arise to delay matters.

Chairman William P. Fain has directed Acting Police Chief Mayo to station a complete detachment of police officers in the recorder's court room Friday night. These officers will first admit persons holding subpoenas, witnesses and incompetency, will be resumed Friday night by the board of police commissioners in the recorder's court room.

The acting police chief also has been instructed that no one shall be admitted to the courtroom outside the court room unless he holds a subpoena, or police station, and that no disorder shall be tolerated on the streets.

"There is no good reason why the trial of Chief Beavers should be postponed," said the chairman.

"FAIR TRIAL ASSURED." A majority of the board membership is anxious that the chief shall have every opportunity to make his case. It is expected that the hearing shall be delayed by outside influences, but the board has welcomed cordially to the meeting, but no disorder will be tolerated, and it is expected that a verdict will be reached before adjournment.

"It is my idea that the trial can be easily completed in one evening," said Chairman Key. "I am confident that as chairman of the board, I shall see to it that the trial is completed by finishing it up before adjournment is taken."

Chairman Key's statement to the board of police commissioners surrounding the trial of Chief Beavers Thursday night and the fact that the board has decided to adjourn the trial for Friday night, but he anticipated that the trial would be completed by finishing it up before adjournment is taken.

BOARD NEVER VOTED TO Adjourn Trial To the Auditorium

W. P. Fain, Chairman of the Police Board, stated Friday that the board never voted to adjourn the trial of Chief Beavers to the auditorium Thursday night, and that the current hearing in the recorder's court room is so as a rule to clear the room in "entirely" manner.

"The board voted on the board voted on the question," said Mr. Fain. "It was voted against the adjournment. Mr. Vernoy suggested again that the adjournment to the auditorium, and he was voted against. The board did not vote to adjourn the trial to the auditorium. WOMAN SUFFRAGE BILL IS DEBATED BY WOMEN

Measure Pending in House is Argued Two Hours Before Committee

Before the constitutional amendments committee and audience of one hundred and fifty women the Atkinson woman suffrage bill was debated two hours Thursday afternoon in the house of representatives. Three women spoke for the bill and two spoke against it. The committee postponed its recommendation until Tuesday.

Mrs. Frances Hoke Smith Whitehead, of Atlanta, was the first speaker for suffrage. She was followed by Mrs. Elliott Chestnut, formerly of Atlanta, now of Washington, D. C., who came here especially to speak for "the cause." Miss Millie Rutherford, of Atlanta, former principal of Lucy Cobb, then spoke as a representative of the Georgia Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. She was followed by Mrs. W. D. Lamar, of Macon, who also spoke against suffrage.

Mrs. William H. Felton, of Cartersville, over eighty years old, concluded the final argument for the suffragists, speaking in rebuttal to the propositions of the "antis." Chairman Shelby Myrick, of the constitutional amendments committee, who presided, at first ruled that she should be no applause, but later, at the request of the committee, set aside that ruling and permitted the speaker to be applauded and from that point on clapping and feminine cries resounded at intervals through Georgia's house of representatives as the speakers warmed up to their subjects.

"A man can't be a Colonial dame, nor can a man join the Woman's Christian Temperance union," said Mrs. W. D. Lamar. "Why should we demand equal rights with men? They can't possibly have equal rights with us; there are many organizations and other things that belong exclusively to women that men can't get into; why should we want to invade their province?"

WOMEN ALWAYS RIGHT. Mrs. Whitehead said that women were always on the side of morals, and would vote right on all questions upon which the advancement of the human race depended.

"On woman depends the preservation of the human race," she said. "And women should have equal rights with men and should work side by side with men in all things."

Miss Millie Rutherford drew much applause, and from that point on the situation by paralleling the claims of the suffragists and the anti-suffragists, referring to the former as "they," and the latter as "we" men won't give women equal rights with us; there are many organizations and other things that belong exclusively to women that men can't get into; why should we want to invade their province?"

"They say the divine right of protection of women rests in women—we say that it rests in men, where it has always rested."

"They like the light-light of politics; we shun it. I do not want to see women unsexed; I do not want to see women in politics. I want to see women remain in that sphere for which God has created her."

"The glare of public life burns up the finer sensibilities of women, and leaves her an unsexed mongrel." Mrs. Elliott Chestnut delivered a strong plea for suffrage.

"Women," she said, "stand for all that is best in the advancement of civilization. They are for the home for schools and for sanitation. For such

JUDGE STARK STAYS IN TEMPERANCE COMMITTEE

Chairman Threatened to Resign Because of Delayed Action on Bills

The little flurry occasioned in the house by the resignation of Representative W. W. Stark, of Jackson, would resign as chairman of the house temperance committee, the speaker has called over getting his committee to report out the several prohibition bills pending before it, seems to have blown over.

Judge Stark announced Friday that the situation appeared to be clearing up, and that the result of conferences with several members of the temperance committee it was his opinion that some agreement would be reached for reporting one or more of the bills by Monday. When the speaker in the house called a meeting of the committee for 5 o'clock Monday morning. It is the desire of Judge Stark to have his committee make its report before Tuesday as on that day it is expected the senate will pass the prohibition bills pending before it and Judge Stark did not want all of the house bills to still be in committee when the senate had disposed of them.

Judge Stark attributes the delay in the report of the house temperance committee largely to the attitude manifested before the committee by certain Atlanta prohibitionists, which he says, muddled the situation and offended some members of the committee.

BOY SLAYS A WOMAN; FLEEING FROM POSSE

She Complained of His Killing Her Geese and He Fled on Her

JACKSON, Ky., July 29.—Mrs. Granville Williams was shot and killed yesterday at her home on Quickstart creek, near here, and today a sheriff's posse is pursuing Amos Fugate, a 19-year-old boy, through the mountains of Boone county. According to the sheriff, Fugate shot Mrs. Williams when she complained of his having shot two of her geese.

Two years ago Fugate was tried for the killing of William Coombs, but was acquitted.

Mr. L. B. Thigpen Dies (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)—SPECIALVILLE, Ga., July 29.—L. B. Thigpen, a prominent citizen of Pine View, died Wednesday at Alto. He was thirty-two years of age. He leaves a mother and three brothers besides his wife. He was buried at Cedar Creek church.

measures they should have the right to vote.

"We are not asking you members of the committee and the legislature to give us that right; we are only asking you to pass this bill to put up to the people of Georgia so that they in their sovereign power, can vote as to whether they will not give us that constitution to enfranchise the women of Georgia."

Mrs. William H. Felton spoke eloquently, and received round after round of applause.

"I never heard it said that women are hysterical to enter politics. What you think of Georgia so that they in their sovereign power, can vote as to whether they will not give us that constitution to enfranchise the women of Georgia."

Mrs. Felton scored the "antis" in biting sarcasm.

CHARGE DISCRIMINATION. At the close of the hearing Thursday, Mrs. W. H. Felton, speaking for the suffragists, stated they had apparently been discriminated against by the chair in favor of the anti-suffragists, and that all of the women had been treated rather thoughtlessly.

Mrs. Felton called attention to the fact that the women of both factions had been told to come at 2:30 o'clock to appear before the committee. She pointed out that they were there then, but that they had to wait an hour and a half, until 4 o'clock, until after the committee had heard arguments for and against the proposed Lanier county.

Mrs. Felton pointed out that the committee chairman announced that the sides would be limited to half an hour each, giving each of the three suffragist speakers ten minutes and each of the two "antis" fifteen minutes. Also she announced that these should be no applause.

She pointed out that Mrs. Whitehead spoke for ten minutes, having to the rule, and that some slight applause for her speech, worthy of much appreciation, was frowned down by the chair. Then, Mrs. Felton showed, Mrs. Elliott Chestnut delivered a fine speech, lasting just ten minutes, before an audience enforcedly silent.

However, Mrs. Felton said, when Miss Rutherford, the first of the "anti" speakers, arose to address the audience, chairman Myrick announced that the rule as to applause was suspended. Then Mrs. Rutherford spoke three minutes, instead of ten, and was not "called" by the chair. Mrs. Felton declared after she spoke, Mrs. W. D. Lamar spoke forty-five minutes by the clock, as timed by suffragists without interruption from the chair.

After this, Mrs. Felton, the last suffragist speaker, arose and delivered a speech, which was greeted with applause, and which lasted between twenty-five and thirty minutes, despite a question from the chair that the speech was to be limited to ten minutes. Mrs. Felton said she spoke longer than ten minutes purposely.

FINDS A CURE FOR PELLAGRA

Harvey, La.—Mrs. B. W. Sculliff, of this place, writes: "I suppose it will be a great pleasure to you to know that you cured my child. She had pellagra very bad and the doctor said she never would get well. She is well of pellagra and looks fine."

BLISTERS ITCHED AND BURNED

On Head, Scratched and Scales Came. Combed Out Handfuls of Hair. Could Not Work.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My head broke out with blisters which were as large as my thumbnail. It itched and I scratched, and scales came. My head itched and burned so that I could not do my work. I combed out handfuls of hair, and when I would comb my head it would bleed and burn so bad till I would cry. It left my head and went down my back and under my arms and all over my brow. I had the trouble four years."

"My sister told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would wash my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and let the lather dry in. Then I would apply the Cuticura Ointment. Cuticura Soap and Ointment gave me relief in a week and in six months my head was clear of the trouble. I was healed." (Signed) Miss Verdie Crabb, Livermore, Ky., Jan. 10, 1915.

CHARLES BECKER IS SENT TO HIS DEATH DENYING HIS GUILT

the foul crime for which I must die. You are now being witness my destruction by the state which is organized to protect the lives of the innocent. May Almighty God pardon every one who has contributed to my untimely death. And now on the brink of my grave I declare to the world that I am proud to have been the husband of the purest, noblest woman that ever lived—Helen Becker. This acknowledgment is the only legacy I can leave her. I bid you all goodbye. Father, I am ready to go. Amen.

(Signed) "CHARLES BECKER."

After his wife had said farewell shortly after midnight Becker maintained a casual conversation with Deputy Warden Johnson, who sat beside the screen in front of his cell. Sometimes he smoked cigars, after which he would let his head fall upon his hands and gaze reflectively at the concrete floor for minutes at a time. Dawn found him seated on the edge of his cell, carefully pinning a photograph of his wife on his white shirt just over his heart. Then, as if he desired to have her all to himself, Becker put on a thin black alpaca coat which he tightly buttoned. The photograph was not seen by the witness until the prison physician untied his coat as he sat in the death chair.

NEGRO FOLLOWS BECKER

Becker was put to death by the state executioner, whose name is unknown to the public. This man succeeded State executioner Davis, and he said he did not take the job unless his name was kept secret. He lives in a little town in the mountains of North Carolina. Becker's executioner said that in his opinion the man had died instantly at the first contact.

An autopsy was performed, according to law immediately after the execution. After Becker's body had been removed from the chair Samuel Heston, a negro murderer, was brought into the execution room and electrocuted.

One of Becker's last requests to Warden Osborne was that he be put to death before the negro.

Becker's last effort to save her husband was made yesterday when she appealed personally to Governor Whitman for a reprieve so that an appeal might be taken to the state court of appeals. Missing the governor at Albany, Mrs. Becker met him at Peachtree, and the plea was fruitless and she returned to her husband's cell. She was with him for an hour, leaving the death house at 12:30 o'clock this morning. She left soon afterwards for New York, outwardly displaying no efforts of the severe mental strain. John Becker, her brother-in-law, and John Lynch, her brother, accompanied her.

A lengthy statement to Governor Whitman was given out by Becker late yesterday. Becker restated his innocence, and declared he never had offered to plead guilty to second degree murder.

MRS. BECKER'S STATEMENT

A statement credited to Mrs. Becker was given out here shortly after her husband's death.

"I shall never rest," she was quoted as saying, "until I have proved the methods which were used to convict my husband. Whether he was guilty or innocent, there was no justification in the means employed to convict him. I would rather lose all the other members of my family as dear as I am to me, than lose Charlie. No one can take his place in a little town of two years of our married life. I never had occasion once to regret that I was his wife."

"Charlie was no angel. He made no pretense of being one. He was just an ordinary human being, but perhaps that is why I loved him so."

Dr. W. O. Stillman, of Auburn, who assisted in the autopsy, said that Becker showed unusual resistance to the electric fluid. After the autopsy Dr. Stillman said:

"I noticed no unusual effects upon Becker's vital organs. The way he resisted the strong current was remarkable, showing him to be an unusually powerful man."

It was expected that Becker's body would be removed some time this morning to New York, where funeral services probably will be held on Sunday.

LETTER TO GOVERNOR

In his letter to Governor Whitman, Becker again restated his innocence of the crime for which he has been convicted.

"To these charges and to all others I answer," the letter read, "by repeating solemnly on the brink of the world to which you are sending me, that I could not do my work. I combed out handfuls of hair, and when I would comb my head it would bleed and burn so bad till I would cry. It left my head and went down my back and under my arms and all over my brow. I had the trouble four years."

"My sister told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would wash my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and let the lather dry in. Then I would apply the Cuticura Ointment. Cuticura Soap and Ointment gave me relief in a week and in six months my head was clear of the trouble. I was healed." (Signed) Miss Verdie Crabb, Livermore, Ky., Jan. 10, 1915.

ABLE TO DESTROY ME.

"Mark well, all," these words of mine," the letter concluded, "when your power passes, then the truth of Rosenthal's murder will become known. Be not while your nonline remain district attorney and can hold the club over these persons."

"With the aid of judges who were misled into misconceiving the testimony offered in my trial and into mistaking it both to the jury and on appeal, you have proved yourself able to destroy my life. But, believe me, I will surrender, without ransom. Not all the judges in this state, nor in this country, nor the governor of this state, nor the district attorney, nor all of them combined can destroy permanently the character of an innocent man."

Mrs. Becker Returns to Her Home in the Bronx

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 30.—Returning from her last visit to the death house at Sing Sing prison where she had taken her farewell of her husband, Mrs. Charles Becker arrived at the Becker home in the Bronx at 2:40 a. m. today. She was accompanied by one of Becker's brothers, who had carried her into the house. Mrs. Becker showed evidences of the deep distress she was undergoing. No effort was made to question her about her visit to Sing Sing. She was met by her sister, Miss Mary Lynch. Mrs. Becker, according to her brother, John Lynch, was bearing up well today, after the strain she underwent yesterday and last night. Mrs. Becker is resting at her home today and is not expected to see any one except members of her family.

An undertaker was dispatched today to Oosting to get the body of Charles Becker. The funeral, it was announced, will take place Monday. A solemn high requiem mass will be said at the Church of St. Nicholas of Tolentine by the Rev. Nicholas J. Murray. Interment will be at Woodlawn cemetery.

FULTON COUNTY BOARD
PRAISED BY DR. KNAPP

Chief of Farm Extension Work Appreciates Attitude of Co-operation

Dr. Bradford Knapp, chief of the farm extension work in the federal department of agriculture, spent Thursday in Atlanta, in conference with agents of the agriculture department concerning the work in Georgia. He left Atlanta Friday morning for Auburn, Ala., and from there will travel to the Piedmont coast, through Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.
The board of commissioners of Fulton county is to be complimented for having accepted the government's offer to share the expense of employing a farm demonstration agent and a home economics instructor in Fulton county, said Dr. Knapp. "The people of the county, the business men of Atlanta no less than the farmers of the rural districts, are to be congratulated upon having such an up-to-date, progressive board administering the business of the county. The return from the employment of the agents will more than justify the wisdom of the commissioners and commend the people for the small annual outlay in salaries."
Dr. Knapp is in direct charge of all farm demonstration work in the south, having under him 15 states. His work is supreme in matters pertaining to farm demonstration activities, and also to the extension work under the terms of the Smith-Lever bill. All of the funds expended by the federal government in the fifteen states are distributed under the direction of Dr. Knapp.
"I feel particularly gratified to know that the Georgia legislature has decided to accept the provision of the Smith-Lever agricultural extension act," said
Dr. Knapp.
The action of the legislature will give to Georgia the rank to which she is entitled in the matter of extension work and the money expended in its interest. Only Texas of the southern states will occupy a place in front of Georgia, North Carolina, which has rank-

FREEMAN IN CHICAGO
AT TIME OF DISASTER

Councilman Helped Rescue
Survivors After Steamer
Eastland Sank

Councilman George F. Freeman, who returned to Atlanta from Chicago Thursday, was a witness of one of the terrible scenes following the disaster to the steamer Eastland and aided in the work of rescue.
When the big boat turned over he was but a few blocks from the wharf, passing the city hall, he secured a pass from the assistant chief of police and a patrol boat was taken on a patrol boat to the overturned vessel.
"It was like a great big watermelon," he said. "Holes were cut in the side to allow ladders to be lowered, to the quarters where women and children were caught like rats in their holes.
Divers were busy bringing up the bodies. One man dived and appeared with a woman. Looking at the face, he saw it was his wife. Later this man went crazy. I saw a mother and her baby brought up dead and hundreds of other horrible incidents."
Councilman Freeman stayed over Sunday aiding in the rescue work. The following Wednesday, in Cincinnati, he went into a motion picture show to see films of the disaster. Its horrors still fresh on his mind, he was overcome as they were reproduced on the screen and he had to leave the theater.

ders, of New Orleans, was named chaired second in this respect, will be pushed

Dr. Knapp expressed a deep interest in the southern fair which is to be held in Atlanta next fall, and was high in his praise of the work of the state college of agriculture, at Athens.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY HAS TEN MORE DAYS TO WORK

Appropriations, W. & A., and Prohibition Bills Expected to Take Up Time

The general appropriation bill, the Western and Atlantic railroad bills and the prohibition bills will probably take up the attention of the house for practically the remainder of the session.
The legislature will adjourn on August 11, which means ten legislative days remain after today, Friday.
The house will probably begin holding afternoon sessions next week in an effort to make up for lost time, but even this will hardly suffice to dispose of more than the three measures mentioned above.
The general appropriation bill is expected to take all of today, all of Saturday and perhaps all of Monday.
After the general appropriation bill comes the Western and Atlantic railroad matters. There are several bills to be considered and it will probably take the house three or four days to dispose of them.
This will leave only three or four days for prohibition, and if the various prohibition bills are placed on the calendar —which seems likely—it is altogether probable that the remainder of the session, so far as the house is concerned, will be consumed in disposing of them.
Meanwhile, many important measures in which there is much interest will be forced off the track. Among these are the land title bills, judicial procedure bills, bills abolishing fees and placing solicitors and other officials on salaries, bills providing for rotation of superior court judges, bills rearranging the system of distributing convicts over the state, indeterminate sentence bills, the labor union bills, state cotton warehouse bills, state highway commission bills, state auditor bill, bill exempting college endowments from taxation, several new county bills that have been favorably reported, school book bills and others too numerous to mention.

INMAN CALLS A "STRIKE"
ON TAX COMMITTEE JOB

Mayor Wouldn't Let Chairman
Resign, So He Just Stays
Away From Meeting

Members of council declare that Councilman Edward H. Inman, of the Eighth ward, is on a strike.
Recently Mr. Inman tendered his resignation as chairman of the tax committee to Mayor Woodward.
The mayor declared he wouldn't accept the resignation and that Councilman Inman is the chairman of the committee until he (the mayor) accepts the resignation and appoints a new chairman, something he says he won't do.
Councilman Inman then announced that he was not worrying about the mayor, as he was through with the tax committee job.
Wednesday the committee was called together and Mr. Inman "struck."
At 10 o'clock it was the first meeting since his resignation, and he was conspicuous by his absence.

COOLER WEATHER IS DUE TO ARRIVE NEXT WEEK

The hot spell which has hung over Atlanta recently will continue through Sunday, according to the weather man, with thunder showers and a change to cooler early next week.
The thermometer registered 86 degrees at its highest point Wednesday and Thursday. This temperature is not unusually high for the time of year and with thunder showers and a change to cooler early next week.
A brief resume of the work of the counties reported to the Fulton county ordinary's office Friday, valuing the estate at a total of $33,900.

Leon Walker, C. L. Jerigan and S.
T. Maretz appraised the estate in De-Kalb county at $23,900. E. J. Perkerson, W. L. Gilbert and Fred E. Law appraised the estate in Fulton county at $10,000. Mr. Tidwell was a widely known Atlanta business man.

AD. MEN'S CLUB HOST
TO GOVERNOR HARRIS

Chief Executive Delivers Address After Inauguration of New Officers

Governor Nat E. Harris was the guest of honor at the meeting of the Atlanta Ad. Men's club Thursday night at the Ansley hotel. The governor addressed the club members, following the inauguration of the club's new officers. These officers are:
Julian V. Boehm, president; Lindsey Hopkins, first vice president; Lewis
Denise Hitchcock, second vice president; J.
H. Atchison, secretary and treasurer;
Hubert Anderson, sergeant-at-arms.
"I should rather have a bootblack speaking the praise of a community in which I lived than to have the biggest man in it thundering anathemas at it," declared Governor Harris in his address.
Continuing he said:
"Georgia at present is in a splendid condition; we have just completed the greatest crop in the history of the state, and 25 far less cost than ever before. At the end of this season our people will be in better shape than at any time in their history. Despite the war, Georgia has never had more glorious prospects, and we have more cause for smiling and for song now than ever before."
A brief resume of the work of the club was delivered by the retiring president, St. Elmo Massengale. Victor H.
Kriegshaber, of the club, paid a glowing tribute to the work accomplished under
Mr. Massengale's leadership, declaring

CHARGES CONSPIRACY.
Mr. Hale alleged that Mr. Ayer's attack on the school is simply part of a conspiracy to effect the restoration of Macon. He read the rules governing the school in an effort to show that Mr. Ayer had gone about it in the wrong way if he wanted an investigation. By these rules he said, it proper first to go to the board of trustees; if no satisfaction is obtainable there, to the governor, who appoints the members of the board and has the power to remove them; and only after no satisfaction is obtainable from the governor, to take the matter up with the legislature.
Mr. Hale denied that the school funds had been misappropriated, declaring that the school not only provided an education for food and clothing for deaf and dumb children, but often paid their railroad fare to and from school. He said an appropriation of $46,000 is absolutely necessary to carry on the school work.
Representatives Yoneman, of Terrell, and Knight, of Berrie, then spoke both contending that regardless of the charges the legislature should make an appropriation in order that the school might not go to pieces or be unhampered financially.
At the conclusion of their remarks, the house adopted the $46,000 appropriation.
Mr. Barrian threw some light on the resolution referred to by Mr. Ayer. He said the house had passed it early in the session, that it had then been referred to the senate, and had been adopted by the senate only Thursday. The resolution provides for an investigating committee of twelve, from the house and from the senate, each congressional district to be represented, the members of the committee to be named by the speaker of the house and the president of the senate.
President Persons and Speaker Burwell stated the committee will be named Friday afternoon.
Owing to the time taken up by the discussion on the school for the deaf appropriation, the house Friday adopted but three paragraphs in section 4 of the general appropriations bill. They are as follows: $10,000 for 1915 and $30,000 for 1917 for the academy of the blind at Macon; $46,000 for 1915 and $40,000 for 1917 for the school for the deaf; $25,000 for 1915 and $50,000 for 1917 for the state insane asylum at Milledgeville.
Under a resolution adopted at the opening of Friday's session, the house committee will hold its first Saturday session. Special orders will be taken up, the remainder of the appropriations bill going over to Monday.
Among the bills introduced Friday were two providing for the removal of the state capital to Macon. One, fathered by the Bibb delegation, would amend the state constitution so that any county of municipality may issue bonds for the erection of a new capitol building, and seventy other representatives, provides that the voters of the state shall pass on the removal project.
NEW HOUSE BILLS.
The following bills were introduced Friday in the house.
By Mr. Foster of Morgan—To provide for service in suits against corporations.
By Mr. Redwing, of Fayette—To abolish Fayette county treasurer.
By Mr. Elders, of Tattall—To require ordinaries to keep records of estates.
By Mr. Gellis of Montgomery—To create a new charter for the city of Vernon.
By Mr. Dorsett, of Carroll—To amend the code so as to remove elective officers subject to impeachment by a vote of the people.
By Mr. Edwards, of Bryan—To elect Bryan county commissioners by the people.
By Mr. Short of Randolph—To abolish Randolph county treasurer.
By Mr. Nellie, of Muscogee—To create a board of plumbing examiners in cities of more than 3,000 population.
By Mr. Sheffield, of Early—To pay Early county treasurer $500 per year.
By Mr. Andrews, of Fulton—To create a board of examiners for professional piano tuners.
By Mr. Brown, of Wheeler—To amend town charter of Alamo.
By Bibb Delegation—To amend state constitution so as to allow special method of issuing bonds by any municipality or county for the purpose of erecting a state capitol building.
By Mr. Gills, of Montgomery—To change term of holding Montgomery superior court.
By Mr. Key, of Jasper—To amend act creating county board of Jasper county.
By Mr. Knight, of Berrie—To abolish city court of Nashville.
By Mr. Greene, of Clayton—To prohibit manufacture, sale and giving away of cigarettes.
By Mr. Fowler, of Bibb and 77 other representatives—To refer to the voters of Georgia the removal of the capitol to Macon.
By Mr. Cook, of Talbot—To permit firing of woods between February 1 and March 1.
By Mr. Myrick, of Chatham—To provide for dissolution of the Savannah and Ogeechee Canal company.

We would respectfully suggest that the allies get busy while Germany is occupied at Warsaw.

The Casualties of the War.

Premier Asquith's statement that British casualties up to July the twentieth, almost the end of the first twelvemonth of the war, amount to 350,995 appears particularly impressive when it is remembered that the British forces now on the European front number fewer than half a million men. The losses of the army are reported at 321,889 and those of the navy at 9,106.

TOTAL BRITISH CASUALTIES.

Table with columns: Officers, Men, Total. Rows include France, Dardanelles, Other theaters, etc.

Great Britain alone among the belligerent issues official statements of this kind.

Prussian lists of the killed, wounded and missing are published from time to time at home, but there has been no comprehensive report concerning the German forces as a whole.

It is thus impossible to do more than estimate the aggregate losses of all the Powers engaged in the war. This total has been reckoned at eight millions; and in view of the prodigious size of the Teuton and Russian armies, that figure seems conservative.

In their present effort to invest Warsaw the Austro-German forces are said to have lost five hundred thousand men, a number far in excess of the total British casualties for more than eleven months.

This estimate is unofficial and may be too high, but undoubtedly the force Teuton drives have been made at tremendous cost. Through the greater part of the war so far, the Germans have trusted to swift, heavy strokes, while the Allies, notably the French and the Russians, have conserved their strength at every possible point.

Reports from Berlin assert that almost incredibly large numbers of Russians have been captured, but from a broad balancing of accounts it seems that the Russians killed are fewer than the Germans killed.

However this may be, it is evident that all the belligerents have suffered enormously. Eight million men killed or disabled present a war toll that perhaps is unexampled; and this war has not yet run a full year's course.

The Imperative Need Of W. and A. Legislation.

If the interests of the Western and Atlantic railroad are to be protected and upheld, the Legislature must act promptly on the pending measures to that end. To defer this issue to the crowded, eleventh hour of the session would be extremely hazardous if not ruinous to the all-important cause at stake.

Bills to prevent the construction of a privately owned, competing line parallel to the State road have passed the Senate overwhelmingly. They should be pressed to speedy enactment in the House. A bill providing for a competent commission to work out the terms for the next lease of the State road has been perfected and approved by the Western and Atlantic committee.

Study Your Forehead.

THE next time you see in front of a mirror take a good look at your forehead. Notice especially its breadth, height, and slope. These will give you indications of value in helping you recognize your shortcomings, the weak spots against which you need to be on guard.

Successful observation by many close students of physiognomy have left no doubt that the forehead is an excellent index to character, and that certain foreheads are usually associated with certain types of mind. Generally speaking, the higher the forehead, the greater will be the natural mental power. The lower the forehead, the greater need for careful training to develop the mind.

On the other hand, a person fortunate in the possession of a broad, high forehead, sloping gently back, will take warning if he finds his forehead smooth and unwrinkled. This indicates that he is not using his mind as he can and should use it. The man who thinks hard about his life, and who is full of earnest thoughts, the result of the muscular contractions accompanying concentration of thought.

An unwrinkled forehead also indicates sometimes a defective character. It may be a sign that the person is earnestly cultivating of disregard for the small and worldly things of life, and is keenly interested in whatever is broadening and ennobling.

The forehead, being almost straight up, the nature is likely cold and sluggish. A need is thereby indicated for the development, through self-training, of keener senses and a more alertness of thought and action. A forehead which bulges strongly above the eyes testifies to mental and physical energy. But it also indicates a tendency to certain temperamental defects.

It indicates one who is quick to think and apt to jump to conclusions which are usually correct, but it shows a lack of ability to reason as to cause and effect, or to think out and formulate a well-laid plan. It shows a keenly observant person, inventive, fond of sciences, fitted with intuitive judgment of human nature, but lacking imagination and idealism.

When, however, there is a marked bulging, not of the lower part of the forehead, but of the upper, there is a tendency to a strong, vigorous faculty may be overdeveloped, fancy and feeling predominating over the dictates of logical reasoning.

But if, instead of a bulge, the whole upper forehead is raised and the hair is pressed back, so that the eyes have a person inclined to be ardent, hopeful, and energetic. It is a person, perhaps, to develop his critical powers—though never to such an extent as to denude his natural optimism.

That indeed is a precious gift, the possession of which means much to him and to all associated with him. It is a gift which means much to him and to all associated with him.

The Journal's Letter Box

Hon. James R. Gray, Editor of the Journal, July 26, 1915. Dear Sir—Your editorial on compulsory education as stated in today's edition of the Journal strikes a sympathetic chord and sounds a clarion call for free books in the public schools.

If the parents of every school child would donate the books now in their possession to the board of public education, there would be no bartering of books among the various bookstores. Every grade in every school would hold the books left by the outgoing class and deliver them to the incoming class. The only expense would be the replacing of books that are worn, these being purchased by the school board, could be obtained without the dealer's necessary profit.

Every pupil should be held responsible for the books he or she holds, and the buying or selling of such books by any persons except the board of education would be an illegal act and liable to a heavy fine. There are thousands of unused books in school that are away on shelves in our homes that should be in the school buildings for the use of pupils.

Every citizen must face squarely the law of compulsory education. It is a law that is the progress of the state and her increasing population. If the states of New York and Pennsylvania did not comply with the law, they would be in a state of rebellion. It would be a few years before in control of an illiterate, law-breaking, emigrant people.

It is a question of the future of our country. It is a question of the future of our country. It is a question of the future of our country.

DRUG FARMING

IF all the markets which felt the shock of the European war, none experienced more sudden and startling fluctuations than that for drugs. Except among the producers and dealers, the rise in drug prices attracted comparatively little attention, for persons know anything about the American drug industry. Nevertheless, the prices of some drugs advanced as much as 400 or 700 per cent when the war broke out.

As a result of this propaganda there are now in use United States a few well-managed farms devoted entirely to the production of medicinal plants, and there are a large number of persons who fondly expect to be fortunate by raising drugs in their back yards, even by gathering weeds on their farms, and who will probably be easily disillusioned by the smallness of the returns which they will receive for their labor.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the demand for most crude drugs is extremely limited, as compared with other agricultural products; that wide technical knowledge and great care are necessary for their successful production, and that for all these reasons the opportunity, which is narrow in any case, for organized enterprise rather than for the small producer, seeking a profitable side line.

As a result of the propaganda for the raising of drugs in this country which followed the outbreak of the European war, thousands of letters have reached the department of agriculture from persons who wished to enter upon this agricultural production; that wide technical knowledge and great care are necessary for their successful production, and that for all these reasons the opportunity, which is narrow in any case, for organized enterprise rather than for the small producer, seeking a profitable side line.

The best index to the demand for any given product is the amount of it that is annually imported. This amount necessarily shows how much the demand in this country exceeds the supply, and therefore how much must be raised in this country for production. Horshodun is a medicinal herb the cultivation of which has been strongly recommended as a profitable side line for farmers and gardeners. It is a member of the same family as the dried herb may be produced on an acre. The annual importation of dried horshodun seldom exceeds fifty or seventy tons. In a word, if sixty or seventy acres in this country were planted in horshodun the demand would be fully supplied.

The belief that fabulous prices are paid for dried drug plants is forming for many of the hopeless ventures in drug farming. Thus, it may be correctly stated that from 2 cents to $4 a pound. Counting chickens before they are hatched is not in it as a fascinating occupation compared with figuring the possible profits from an acre in medicinal plants.

A glance at the price list of any dealer in crude drugs reveals the interesting fact, however, that about 80 per cent of the drugs are raised in this country, while in the United States there is a reliable source of supply of a large number of crude drugs in the mountain regions of West Virginia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, where the wild herbs are gathered.

Furthermore, the drug farmer should take into account in raising drug plants that he is competing with cheap labor both in Europe and in this country. In Europe drug plants can be raised at a profit of 100 per cent, while in this country, while in the United States there is a reliable source of supply of a large number of crude drugs in the mountain regions of West Virginia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, where the wild herbs are gathered.

DELICACY

It was said of Matthew Arnold that in all the departments of human life he applied the criterion of delicacy. "A finely touched nature," he said, "will respect in itself the sense of delicacy not less than the sense of honesty." Delicacy is no virtue; it is the flavor of all the virtues. It is not goodness; it is goodness filtered through modesty. It is the gentle hand of the courageous heart. It is the quality without which the most efficient man cannot be a gentleman, and the most accomplished woman cannot be a lady.

It cannot be learned; it must be assimilated. The lack of delicacy has spoiled many a man's career in striving to be so great a sentiment of weakness in a crisis of certain coarseness. Most fallen American idols owe their collapse to the fact that in some crucial moment they offended the delicacy of the people.

These things are crucial to delicacy: Ecstasy. All thrusting forward of one's self, egotism, an air of self-sufficiency, a dictatorial attitude, a non-combatant, "No, nothing, nothing, only the bloke work the steam roller wants us coves to call 'im a chaufferer."

Contrary to her custom, a Boston woman strayed far from her home to encounter a man to whom she was attracted. "I wouldn't of had no trouble wit de constable nor nobody," said the "Pinkiey," "if it hadn't been for woman's love o' dears."

Senator Tillman was arguing on the tariff with a congressman. "You know I never boast," his opponent began, and he added, quietly, "No wonder you brag about it!" Everybody's.

DRUG FARMING

WOMEN and children extensively engage in the work. It is difficult for a farmer, paying high rates for his labor, to compete with those gatherers of wild herbs. As soon as the supply exceeds the demand the farmer will necessarily be undersold.

Considerable experience is necessary both to find and to identify the herbs that can be profitably gathered in the wild state, and, after they are gathered, to find a good market is not an easy matter. The prospect for the production of medicinal plants in this country led many persons to believe that the demand for growing wild upon their farms. These broad-acre farms were growing wild in many parts of the United States, has a certain amount of medicinal value. A lady in New England who owned a large country place wrote to the department of agriculture about her experience in trying to place burdock upon the market. She read various publications about the high medicinal value of this herb which grew wild upon her farm in large quantities. Determined not to neglect what seemed a very opportunity, she wrote to several manufacturers who used burdock in their product and to one manufacturer who advertised the crude drug for sale. Both of the manufacturers replied that they obtained their material in an advanced state of preparation and were not interested in the collection of the crude drug. The third man, who lived in a nearby city, replied that he obtained all of the plant which he could use from a convenient source and was not in the market to purchase any more. Further investigation of this dealer revealed the fact that he lived not far from the lady's farm and was, in fact, accustomed to gathering his burdock in her best pasture.

In one article on drug farming, silver chesnut was described as a drug plant which was native of South America, but which thrives in this country, especially in Pennsylvania. It was represented as a drug used largely by eye specialists, and the implication was that this use created a steady demand for the plant. In general, as a matter of fact, is a rather common medicinal plant in this country, generally known as "daisy miller," and a drug of medicinal value. It is a disease, being employed only to a very limited extent by homeopaths. Each fall enough of it is cut and thrown away by the park grounds of many cities to supply the demand for a few years.

This is the dark side of the picture, and perhaps the one that needs most emphasis at this time. A wrong impression with regard to the possibilities of drug farming has been widely disseminated. It is by no means true, however, that there is no opportunity for profit in the raising of medicinal plants, whatever they be. It is true that these plants are not staple crops, but the demand for them is limited, that the prices are subject to the most unexpected fluctuations, and that wide technical knowledge is necessary to their successful cultivation and preparation for the market. If all these factors are taken into account, however, and if one is prepared to make a thorough study of the subject, drug farming may be a profitable commercial enterprise.

The small producer might succeed in raising some plant which there was no obvious market for. He was a patient and skillful gardener and knew how to dry and pack his product after it was grown. Even then, however, it is important that he should know the causes, might destroy the market for his product before he could sell it. Furthermore, about the only way he could reach a market would be by sending his product to some one in the city, or to Europe, or to other places. He would have to choose to give a "rush," although fair, or even large, profit might be made by a small producer if he were thoroughly conversant with his business, there are many other side lines which would give a more adequate and certain return for the time and money invested.

The possibilities of successful drug farming may be best appreciated by considering some of the more substantial enterprises in this line. In Virginia, not far from Washington, for example, there is a farm of forty-five acres in the raising of medicinal plants. The owner, who is owned by several men of scientific training, and is adequately financed. The proprietors of this enterprise know all of the hundreds of plants which have medicinal value. They watch the market and are able to make a shrewd guess as to which ones it will be most profitable to raise. They plant a large acreage of different medicinal herbs that are ready to grow, realizing a handsome profit on some of their crops, which will more than overbalance a possible loss on others. Each of the cultivators of medicinal plants in preparation for the market are done in a thoroughly scientific manner. This, and adequate financial backing, might be named as the chief requisites for successful drug farming.

DELICACY

It was said of Matthew Arnold that in all the departments of human life he applied the criterion of delicacy. "A finely touched nature," he said, "will respect in itself the sense of delicacy not less than the sense of honesty." Delicacy is no virtue; it is the flavor of all the virtues. It is not goodness; it is goodness filtered through modesty. It is the gentle hand of the courageous heart. It is the quality without which the most efficient man cannot be a gentleman, and the most accomplished woman cannot be a lady.

It cannot be learned; it must be assimilated. The lack of delicacy has spoiled many a man's career in striving to be so great a sentiment of weakness in a crisis of certain coarseness. Most fallen American idols owe their collapse to the fact that in some crucial moment they offended the delicacy of the people.

These things are crucial to delicacy: Ecstasy. All thrusting forward of one's self, egotism, an air of self-sufficiency, a dictatorial attitude, a non-combatant, "No, nothing, nothing, only the bloke work the steam roller wants us coves to call 'im a chaufferer."

Contrary to her custom, a Boston woman strayed far from her home to encounter a man to whom she was attracted. "I wouldn't of had no trouble wit de constable nor nobody," said the "Pinkiey," "if it hadn't been for woman's love o' dears."

Senator Tillman was arguing on the tariff with a congressman. "You know I never boast," his opponent began, and he added, quietly, "No wonder you brag about it!" Everybody's.

I Wonder.

"When stars go out, I wonder where they go? I wonder where the flowers get their smell? I wonder what the talking squirrels know? And what the quiet, shiny fishes tell?"

From dawn to eve, but most when lambs are low And sunset ray and vapor weave their spell— I wonder how the small birds fly so well, And why the wind that blows the birds won't blow Me, too, up through the far green tops of trees! All day "I wonder"—faintly as a prayer—"I wonder," and her deep eyes, unregretted, Shiny the light of heaven in their gleams. As lips, half open, murmur to the air The tremulous "I wonder of mankind!"

The Searchlight.

The existence of an astronomical observatory with scientific instruments of reliable accuracy over two long centuries before Christ has been proved by the archeological investigations carried out last year at Marsa Matruh, the ancient capital of Ethiopia, located in southern Nubia on the Nile.

The remains of an old observatory have been discovered, and on the walls are astronomical observations and calculations recorded in ancient script, which is believed to be the method of the Chinese. These were in the form of drawings, or wall pictures, and something which could easily be used as the altimeter instrument, known to modern astronomers.

QUIPS AND QUIDDITIES

Hall—Bythe is a pretty optimistic character. I'll tell you. "Well—I should say so. If he failed in business he'd thank heaven he had his health; if he failed in health he'd thank heaven he had his business, and if he failed in both, he'd say there was no use in having one without the other."

"Father," said Willie, "I want to write a war poem and I can't think of a rhyme for Praxmaly. Would 'weasel' do?" "I don't know, my son," replied the father. "But I'm sure it is no rhyme for Praxmaly. Why not try that? Nobody'd know the difference."

The Yale freshman year was proving very expensive to father, so Johnny decided to have a "heart to heart" talk with Johnny home for the week end. "Now, my son," said he, gravely but affectionately, "your mother and I are spending just as little as we possibly can. I get up in the morning at half past 8 and I work until after 5. But, son, the money just won't go round at the rate that your expenses are running. Now, as you are one man to another, what do you think we had better do?"

For a moment Johnny's head was buried in thought and then he replied: "Well, father, I don't see any way out but for you to work nights."

Enthusiastic Aviator (after long explanation of principle and workings of his biplane)—Now you understand it, don't you? "Young lady—All by one thing—Aviator—And that is—?" "Young Lady—What makes it stay up?"

MANY housekeepers believe that economy is entirely a matter of saving money and that if the affairs of the household are administered by them with this end in view...

There is also an economy to be gained in certain dishes instead of preparing them, even though they cost more in the end.

Raw fruit is one of the cheapest fruits when plentiful, as well as one of the most wholesome, and even when it is not considered exactly cheap it still pays to buy it.
