WARSHIPS ARE ASKED FOR ACTIVE CO-OPERATION TO PROTECT AMERICANS

American Naval Officer Notifies Navy Department That He Fears Attack Will Be Made on Foreigners

BATTLESHIPS ARE ORDERED TO GET READY TO SAIL Sea Fighters Will Be Rushed to Mexican Port at First Sign That American Lives There Are in Danger

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Commander McNamee, senior American naval officer at Vera Cruz, has asked the navy department to send battleship squadrons to guard against anti-foreign demonstrations which he fears.

The battleships New Hampshire and Lexington now at Newport with the Atlantic fleet are ordered to proceed to go to Vera Cruz, but if the emergency should become pressing the Connecticut now in Hatlen waters and the other ships of the fleet will be ordered to join Commander McNamee.

The Connecticut could reach Vera Cruz several days ahead of the New Hampshire and Lexington. Commander McNamee's report did not give details, but officials here believe the anti-American feeling, which he reported, is a direct outgrowth of the pro-American propaganda in Washington for the adjustment of differences between the factions. Other developments in Mexico such as General Carranza's displeasure with the United States have taken.

General Carranza's displeasure with the United States has taken. The gambet Sacramento is the only American naval vessel at Vera Cruz. With the arrival of the Louisiana, the danger of a demonstration of the Atlantic fleet, Commander McNamee will be superseded in command of the American forces by Rear Admiral McGowan.

GUANAO TO VERA CRUZ. The Connecticut has been ordered to proceed from Progreso to Vera Cruz in order to have a ship at the disposal of the American minister, who is leaving Mexico. It is assumed that the Louisiana and the other ships of the fleet will be ordered to proceed to Vera Cruz.

Real Admiral Benson and Leon Canales, chief of the Pan-American division of the state department conferred conference with the American minister in danger at Vera Cruz and then went to the office of Secretary Lansing. Additional forces have been ordered to go to Vera Cruz.

Domestic Affairs. The Brazilian ambassador at Long Beach, N. J., reiterated the statement today that Jose Oldoso de Oliveira, the Brazilian minister to Mexico City, was leaving there chiefly to inform the Washington government and Pan-American diplomats of the general situation in Mexico.

Secretary Lansing would not discuss the situation today prior to his departure for New York to resume deliberations with Latin-American diplomats. He was expected to be in New York today. He was expected to be in New York today.

GERMANS HAVE LOST 65,000 MEN IN LAST FEW DAYS IN POLAND

British Capture Trench in West, Russians Check Germans at Riga, Italians Slay 2,000 Austrians at Garzisa

ALLIES ARE ADVANCING IN THE DARDANELLES Russians, Although Routed by Austro-Germans in Poland, Have Inflicted Heavy Casualties Among Kaiser's Armies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—News from the various war arenas today shows activity along all fronts. The Serbian line, and reports say that action in that territory is momentarily expected. The Austro-German forces have concentrated 100,000 men at points near the Serbian border for a renewed offensive.

At four points today the entente powers are claiming the advantage in fighting now raging at the fifth in Poland, which is admitted that the Austrians are being pressed back by the Teutonic pincers, the report comes that the Germans have paid a terrible price for positions occupied northeast of Warsaw in the last few days.

65,000 GERMAN LOST. Sixty-five thousand Germans were either killed or captured in this fighting, says a dispatch of Austrian origin which today found its way into Geneva. Geneva also reports that Austria, reinforced by 30,000 men released from the Polish campaign, suffered a defeat by the Italians before Gorizia and left 2,000 dead on the field.

Rome reports the capture of some Austrian trenches in Cavallo Pass in the Carpathian range and a similar success in the Plava zone.

In the west the British forces captured nearly one mile of trenches from the Germans in the vicinity of Hooge, and took their positions in the face of counter attacks.

In the Dardanelles the allies have resumed operations and the Turkish forces lodged in the positions along the Gallipoli peninsula. Unremitting action by the British and the Turkish forces is said to be under way and Athens reports several Turkish warships were captured and the allies gained for the allies.

The Russian report new successes against the Turkish forces in the Caucasus. Russian military operations in Russian Courland have rapidly reached the decisive stage, the Germans who have been unable to establish a foothold in this area have been checked. Almost simultaneously German warships which attacked the British in the Baltic were destroyed.

The Russian advance in the vicinity of Hooge, although not comparable with the tremendous actions in Poland, marked the most important event in the battle of East Prussia in May. The gain was small but it has been maintained against counter attacks.

NOW FOR SERBIA. The Balkan situation is chaotic. Dispatches from Salonika say that the Austro-German plan to strike again at Serbit already has found expression in a concentration of Teutonic forces along the Serbian frontier.

It is said 100,000 men have been massed near Orsova, Hungary, which may be the forerunner of the predicted campaign through Serbia for the relief of Turkey. Italy has not declared war on Turkey, but it is admitted that the Italians are leaving the Ottoman empire trusting their affairs to American colleagues.

These conditions, then hardly gratifying, are much worse now and the apparent inactivity of the government at Washington, Ill. Mexico with desperate living on a smouldering volcano. There is not even a semblance of government here at the capital and we are living on a smouldering volcano.

The entire city has been impressed without cause. We have seen three changes of armed government in thirty days. There is no communication with the world, except by special messengers.

ERROR IN BILL CAUSES MUCH WORK HOUSE

Large Part of Morning Session Taken Up Straightening Out Mistakes

Errors and changes in local bills took up a great part of Tuesday morning's session in the house and gave rise to one of the most peculiar parliamentary situations. One of these was the local bill introduced some time ago in the house abolishing the office of treasurer of Sumter county. The bill was referred to committee, reported favorably, passed after the third reading and transmitted to the senate. There it was read the first time, sent to committee, recommended for passage with an amendment and so adopted in the senate. It was then sent back to the house so that the amendment might be affirmed or rejected. The house agreed to the senate amendment and the bill was ready for the signatures of the speaker and clerk of the house, the president and clerk of the senate, and the governor of the state.

In the meantime, however, interested parties from Sumter county held a conference with senator from that district and at their request he introduced a resolution asking the house to send back the bill to the senate. The house gave unanimous consent and the bill was sent back to the senate. The senate then passed a substitute which, instead of abolishing the township, increased the salary of the treasurer of Sumter county on a salary of $500 a year. This substitute bill was sent back to the house.

When the substitute came up Tuesday Speaker Burwell declared it one of the most unique things he had ever seen. He said the action of the house in sending the bill back to the senate was not in agreement to the senate amendment, but of order; but as the point was not raised at the time and the house gave unanimous consent, he didn't want to take the responsibility for unswerving the mess and he would leave it up to the house.

The house then passed a motion refusing to recognize the senate substitute and directing the clerk to transmit it, as originally passed with its amendment, to the governor.

Soon after this matter was disposed of a similar point came up. The local bill incorporating the town of Oakhurst in Hall county had been passed in the house, passed in the senate and sent back to the house to be passed and transmitted to the governor. Then Representative Roberts, who had discovered a clerical error by the stenographer in drafting the bill from the original, the error involved the tax rate which the town was authorized to levy, so Mr. Roberts asked unanimous consent to send the bill back to the senate for correction.

But the speaker, in view of the Sumter county affair—which had just been decided—ruled that the bill had no authority to send the bill back to the senate after it had gone through the regular process of becoming a law.

MODIFIED SUFFRAGE BILL IS KILLED IN COMMITTEE

Measure Would Have Given Ballot to Women in Cities and Towns

The constitutional amendments committee of the senate, of which Senator Smith of the Fifth district is chairman, meeting Monday afternoon, recommended that a modified suffrage bill be passed. This kills the last vestige of suffrage legislation introduced at this session.

This bill, introduced by request of suffragists by Senator Dineen of the Thirty-fifth, Ward of the Fifth, and Buchanan of the Ninth, does not provide that all Georgia women shall vote, but that only women living in Georgia cities and towns shall have ballot rights. They shall be allowed to vote in all elections, general or otherwise, the bill provides, and not merely in the municipal election.

Several senators said they have heard of another bill already prepared by the suffragists to allow none but the country women to vote, thus eliminating their city sisters. This bill has not been introduced in the senate.

PHARMACISTS HOLDING MEET IN SAN FRANCISCO

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—Among important resolutions expected to be voted on today at the convention of the American Pharmaceutical association was one which, if adopted, would prevent any person from becoming a member of the association, unless he was a graduate of a recognized college of pharmacy.

Should this resolution become part of the by-laws of the association, it was stated an effort would be made to amend it by barring from practice any ineligible member, even though he had passed the state board of pharmacy's examination.

Wells-Fargo Lost $200,000 By Thieves Trio

Three Men Held Accused of Systematic Thfts Covering Twelve Years—Had a Smooth Scheme

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—With three men under arrest here today, one of whom is said to have confessed, detectives for the Wells-Fargo Express company, claim to have uncovered a system of thefts covering the past twelve years. The men, under arrest here today, are Benjamin Watkins, an employe of the express company, and a man known to the police only as "Tommy," who is said to have traveled under as many as 20 aliases.

Watkins was employed by the United States Express company, which was absorbed by the Wells-Fargo more than a year ago. For eleven years previous to that time, detectives said the United States company had been losing an average of $20,000 worth of goods a month. Watkins remained in the service when the United States company was absorbed.

Packages containing valuables would be wrapped into one large parcel by Watkins, it was charged, and addressed to the "mysterious man" at some suburb of Chicago, where it would be claimed by him under the alias which happened to be on the list.

RECALL COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED IS NAMED

Names Will Not Be Announced for Time, Says Dr. Broughton

Dr. Joe Broughton, who presided at the auditorium mass meeting, which adopted resolutions urging the recall of Mayor Woodward and six other members of the board of police commissioners, stated Tuesday that the committee of one hundred names to be appointed, but will not be announced for some time.

The committee held a meeting Monday night at which a sub-committee was named to secure a list of names after they have the recall committee, and this list will be selected during the day Tuesday, Dr. Broughton explained. The work was on the job there by Wednesday.

No names were made of the number of signatures already secured to the seven recall petitions, which were circulated in the city and later by enthusiasts, who were there.

Dr. Broughton explained Tuesday that his recollections relative to the possible publication of the list of signers of the recall petitions referred to the period of time that the petitions remain in the hands of the committee, which is collecting them.

The list will not be published while we have it," said Dr. Broughton, "but, however, after we have the required number of signatures and the petitions are formally filed with the city clerk, we don't care whether they are published or not."

Several members of council say that they will urge the passage of a council resolution to publish the petitions after they are filed with the city clerk. And it is pointed out that the recall friends of the seven officials say that the recall committee will see that the petition is published.

R. A. Broyles Answers Card of Capt. English

To the Editor of the Journal: Police Commissioner James W. English may say that he has not performed the ignominious part in the removal of a brave, efficient and Christian police chief, but I apprehend he will find it a much more difficult task to get the people of this city or city to believe the following affidavit from ex-Chief James L. Beavers, Georgia, Fulton County—

In person appeared before the undersigned, James L. Beavers, who upon oath, says:

That in the year 1912, about thirty days before I closed the eighth district, Captain J. W. English called me over the phone and asked me if I was very busy. I answered "Not especially so," and he said "I would like to come to his office about 2 o'clock. I answered that I could. He said that he wanted to have a talk with me. I went to his office at the appointed time. He had no idea who he was and he said about "He first asked how the board treating me. I told him all right. He replied by saying "We had no money on the board," and that it was hard to please so many.

He then brought up the subject of the agitation going on at that time about the calling of the board of police and the investigations that he had made in other cities and that these places were necessary and that these grades, like J. K. Orr, knew nothing about running a city. He then told me of his experience that he had with the gamblers when he was mayor, and how he forced the chief of police at that time to resign, and how he selected Arthur Connolly as chief of police and finished his investigation by saying: "But this city is a larger city now than it was then and any man who undertakes to clean up this city, will be in danger."

This is no news to some people in this city. I testified to this before the grand jury last year and the public may remember that I said this same thing in substance about a year ago in answer to some of Mayor Woodward's criticism of me through the press, when I made this statement that I had no idea who he was and he said that he was very close to the mayor had told me some things, but his name was not published at the time.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this August 9th, 1915.

J. L. BEAVERS, Notary Public, Fulton County, Ga.

Among the party was a number of prominent wholesalers, who plan through the trade body to get better acquainted with their patrons and extend business in this way.

ENGLAND KINS 5,000,000 MEN READY FOR WAR?

Atlanta Woman, Just Home, Says Allies Are Confident of Victory

England has five millions of men ready to send to the front, according to Miss Ruth Sanderson, former Atlanta police matron and for fifteen years a resident of this city, who has just returned to America after visiting relatives in Isle of Man, Manchester, Lancashire and other parts of England. Miss Sanderson is at the Aragon hotel and will be in Atlanta for some time. She left here last winter, making the crossing from New York to Liverpool on the Lusitania, which was sunk two trips later. She returned a month ago and for several weeks was in Boston.

"All England is confident that the allies will win this war," she says Tuesday, "and they think victory will come soon. The country is just one bliss of patriotism. Twenty thousand men enlisted in Manchester shortly before I left and every call brings more recruits than the authorities can take care of. The women, too, are doing all they can for their country by doing the men's work at home. Women enlist? They don't have to. England has enough men."

No Appetite, Ached All Over, Nervous, Sick Stomach.

Angus, Ga.—"Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription proved so helpful to my health that I am glad to say a good word for it, hoping that some other woman may be induced to give this medicine an opportunity to help her. I was in a delicate condition and suffered from many discomforts. Had no appetite; ached all over; had no strength to work; was constipated; had indigestion; was extremely nervous; sick at stomach; and upon retiring would lie awake until 12 or 1 o'clock. Another discomfort was the swelling of left limb and foot, which would come on the left foot. In conclusion would add that my kidneys also were disturbed. The relief given by the "Favorite Prescription" could not have been more satisfactory."—MRS. ANNE COOPER, 632 Marbury, St. Augusta, Ga.

TRY IT! SUBSTITUTE FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Starts your liver without making you sick and can not salivate

Every drugist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of Calomel. They all give the same reason. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results, said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. Large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back. Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.—(Adv't.)

If You are troubled with heartburn, gases and a distressed feeling after eating take Rexall's Dyspepsia Tablet

Quickly and Surely Conquers Constipation

Don't let constipation poison your blood and curtail your energy. If your liver and bowels don't work properly get a box of Carter's Little Liver Pills to-day and your trouble will cease.

For dizziness, lack of appetite, headache and blotchy skin nothing can equal them. Purely vegetable.

APPROPRIATIONS BILL IS NOW READY FOR SENATE

Committee Takes Final Action on 1916-17 Budget Monday Night

With the exception of $14,000 increase in the appropriation for the Confederate Soldiers' home, $3,000 for hog cholera serum, and a $25,000 increase for the military department, the senate appropriations committee, at meeting Monday night at the Kimball house, recommended the 1916-17 appropriations as passed by the house appropriations committee, an increase of $1,000 over the appropriation as passed last week by the house.

The house cut the University of Georgia appropriation from $52,550 to $48,000; the senate committee placed the appropriation at $50,000, the amount recommended by the house committee. The house cut the Georgia Tech appropriation from $200,000 to $180,000; the committee placed this at $200,000, the amount recommended by the house committee.

The appropriations, as recommended by the senate committee amount to approximately $6,000,000, which Chairman John D. Walker said was less than the 1915-16 appropriations, and which, he said, ought not to necessitate an increase in the tax rate unless tax revenues should decrease.

Representative Fullbright, of Burke, chairman of the house appropriations committee, was present at the meeting. Orden Persons, president of the senate, was present by invitation, though not a member of the committee.

PERSONS AT MEETING. President Persons, at the close of the meeting, said he thought the appropriations would be passed up in the final form by the house and the senate Wednesday morning and the appropriations are expected to go through at once as recommended by the committee. Then he will be immediately transmitted to the house. If the house does not concur in the appropriations as passed by the senate, there will nevertheless not be much time lost in debate, as a conference committee of the house and senate will be appointed, and will meet and adjust the appropriations to meet the demands of both the house and senate. This committee will report its findings to both houses, probably Wednesday night, and it is expected the appropriations bill, in this final form, will then be passed by both houses, thus eliminating any possibility of an extra session, so far as the appropriations bill is concerned.

Although the senate committee did not recommend a $14,000 increase for the Soldiers' home, it allowed an increase of $4,000, raising the appropriation from $18,000 to $22,000. This hog cholera appropriation was cut because the committee thought this serum could be bought more cheaply than it could be manufactured by the state.

Although the $25,000 increase for the military was allowed, an increase of $15,000 was allowed, making the appropriation $40,000 instead of $25,000 as at present.

The public school fund was set at $2,000,000, which is $50,000 less than the amount passed by the house.

ATHENS SUMMER SCHOOL. The senate committee gave the Athens summer school an increase of $250,000.

The tuberculosis sanitarium at Alto was given $20,000 instead of the $30,000 passed by the house.

The house gave the prison department $80,000; the senate committee recommended $100,000, an increase of $20,000 over the present appropriation.

The house allowed the Athens State Normal school $17,500; the senate committee recommended $17,500, the amount the school is now getting.

The senate committee had to work under extra pressure to get its report finished Monday night. The appropriations came over from the house this year about ten days late, and Chairman Walker and his committee have been congratulated for the way in which they accomplished the mass of work before them in such a short time.

It was imperative that the committee have its report ready by Tuesday morning, as the appropriations bill came up for second reading in the senate then.

ATLANTA CREDIT MEN TO HOLD MEETING TONIGHT

Attorney General Walker Will Deliver Principal Address at East Lake Club

The Atlanta Association of Credit Men will hold its first quarterly meeting of the year Tuesday at 7 o'clock at the East Lake country club. The members will take the 6:30 East Lake car at the corner of Alabama and Pryor streets, and all the members are urged to assemble at the North Pryor corner by 6:15 at the latest.

The address of the occasion will be delivered by Clifford Walker, attorney general of Georgia, on the subject of "Improved Credit Conditions between Credit Departments and Country Merchants." Addresses will also be delivered by J. L. Baldwin, president of the association, and E. L. Adams, delegate to the national credit association. Reports will also be made by heads of the various departments and committee chairmen. A delightful dinner will be served, the main feature of which will be spring chicken, cooked country style.

AMAZING RECORD ON HOME GROUNDS

What 143 People Among Thousands Did at Houston, Texas, Carnival

People of Houston, Texas, have given their approval of Vitalitas in a way to attract nation wide attention. Few products have ever received such a stamp of endorsement at home. In fact the approval extends throughout the state of Texas, but it is at Houston that Vitalitas is perhaps best known, for that city may be termed the home of this wonderful product. The laboratory that extract Vitalitas are here located.

What home people think of Vitalitas was indicated at the recent Deep Water carnival held at Houston, celebrating the opening of the new government Ship Channel. A public Vitalitas demonstration was conducted throughout the carnival. Thousands visited it and paused amidst the bustle to tell how Vitalitas had restored them to health or of friends who had been saved by it. There were 143 who stopped long enough to sign a written testimonial. Many of these recite truly marvelous cures. Some of these statements have been published—others will be. They are particularly prized because they are spoken from the hearts of home people and spoken for the benefit of sick people everywhere.

Vitalitas is nature's greatest curative for ills of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels and blood.

See the display and sample Vitalitas at Jacobs' Pharmacy, 32 Whitehall street or write there for information.—(Adv't.)

TODAY'S EVENING STORY THE CHARMER

It was a dull day at the seaside resort. In the first place, the weather was gray. In the second place, it was Wednesday, that wretched period between week ends. In the third place, Miss Harmon's boarders were all a little sickish toward each other, having talked and rooked together until there were no surprises left among them. It is needless to say that they were all women. The men only came out from the city Saturdays.

There was Mrs. Ingram, who crocheted like mad all the time and seemed never to finish anything; Miss Powell, who embroidered; Mrs. Adams, who merely gazed at the sea and yawned; Mrs. Gibbs, who played with her little dog and got things all crumby by slipping frequent lanches of crackers; three or four others, whose chief business in life seemed to be to sit in porch chairs, and Miss Stafford, who read incessantly when she was not walking.

Every woman at Miss Harmon's disliked Miss Stafford without any better reason than that she was always among them and yet never of them. She was a teacher in the city, and had come to rest and read and enjoy herself in her own quiet way. She did not know how to play bridge or embroidery or crochet, and did not care to learn, and she had Nobody was saying a word when a girl rolled down the street and stopped before the door. Out stepped a man. And such a man! Large, gray, fresh faced, beautifully clothed and with an air even when he left the cabman that every woman began to straighten and preen herself. But before he had more than life his hat and glance about him the door opened and Miss Harmon ushered him in.

Miss Harmon was old and dry and vinegary like one of her own native yuccas, but she had that ability to run a boarding house successfully which comes of common sense, understanding, and vast experience. Half an hour later she brought out her new guest and introduced him all around, beginning with Mrs. Robertson, who was the dowager of the group, and ending, of course, with isolated little Miss Stafford. Miss Stafford lifted her shrewd eyes from an absorbing page and encountered the gentleman. She bowed, so did he. Then she returned to her book and he sat down by Miss Powell.

That night dinner was worth while. Everybody dressed for it. Miss Powell made a notable appearance. She sat at one side of Mr. Everett and did her utmost to enchant him. Mrs. Gibbs sat at the other side and did her best. Mrs. Adams sat just opposite and did her best. Even old Mrs. Robertson came quite lively. Certainly Mr. Everett was charming. He was so frank, so kind, so sympathetic, so entertaining. He was very tired he said, and had come for a few days' change and rest, having left his business in competent hands. He was sure he could not have chosen a more delightful spot. Mrs. Adams played bridge. Later, when it became incumbent upon him to select a partner, he gave the preference of his choice to old Mrs. Robertson.

Miss Stafford went to her room and spent the evening, which had not been her custom. All the other women felt mildly exultant. The school teacher no longer kept herself out of the way, but was thrust out. Her "homespun" had arrived in the form of Mrs. Everett. A walking party was arranged for the next morning and Miss Stafford was not asked. It was evident that Mr. Everett did not care for her society, and she should not, gentle and courteous as she was, have let it inflict upon him. So Miss Stafford went her solitary way, and the party was over.

Miss Powell proved to be a good walker. Mrs. Gibbs saw them arrive. She had returned half an hour before and sat on the porch reading. It was a regular dress affair. In the afternoon Mr. Everett took the whole party sailing. He asked Miss Powell to play bridge. She declined. "She's so queer," confided Miss Powell to Mr. Everett. "Any woman who has taught school as long as she has gets into ways. I suppose she isn't to blame, poor thing!" "Certainly not," replied Mr. Everett kindly. He sighed as if in pity of all femininity which was not Miss Powell's. That afternoon the sea was like crinkled satin. Miss Powell and Mrs. Gibbs were radiantly happy. The latter had no care save to appear adorable in Mr. Everett's eyes, having left Jip at home with Miss Harmon. Mrs. Robertson was happy, too. She almost forgot in the presence of this captivating stranger that she was sixty-five, that she had hair and teeth were not her own and for some twenty years she had considered her heart buried in the grave with Mr. Robertson. It had been a wearing day still down to the last lady they dressed for dinner and fortified themselves against an evening of bridge. Miss Stafford did not appear at table. She had taken a lunch and gone out on the rocks to eat it. There was some clever manipulation for partners, and at last Miss Powell won Mr. Everett. With a thrill she fancied that she was speaking down that graceful impartiality with which Mr. Everett regarded them all. He seemed to single her out for special favor and that night she dreamed of him and, waking made glowing plans for the future. Darnay, however, waited on the morrow. Mr. Everett was gone. He had left good-bys for them all and had expressed regret at going, but he had been in such haste that he could not write any letter. No Miss Harmon did not think there had been any telegram, or any letter; he had simply gone because he felt like it. A depressed group gathered at breakfast. Miss Powell could not eat. Mrs. Gibbs sniffed poor Jip until he squeaked for mercy. Only Miss Stafford appeared undisturbed. And because she had been invested with no heartache he

Mr. Everett the other woman hated her more than ever. That afternoon she came down dressed for travelling, with her suitcases in her hand. "What! Are you going?" cried the chorus. Miss Stafford smiled faintly. "I've got three visits to make before school opens, so you see I've stayed here as long as I can," she replied. "Good riddance," muttered Miss Powell as the cab drove away. "Wonder where she's going," said Mrs. Adams, speculatively. "I wonder who'd ever ask her to visit them." "She's going to visit an old school friend in Averill." Miss Harmon, eased for a moment from boarding house cares, had come out and sat down among them. "Averill!" exclaimed Miss Powell. "Averill! Yes, he was. She's going to visit his wife." "His wife?" Somebody must have said it, though nobody was aware of doing so. Then there was a moment's awful stoniness and Mrs. Gibbs said, with a perky little laugh, "Who'd ever dreamed he was married?" Miss Harmon looked grim. "If you'd asked Miss Stafford she could have told you, even if he did not. She and his wife were schoolmates. Of course they haven't seen each other for years, but she's going there now." Mrs. Gibbs gurgled. "Wouldn't it be funny if she told his wife how he capered down here with us?" she said. Miss Harmon smiled. "She wouldn't! She isn't that kind. I know Miss Stafford. She's boarded a great many sons with me. No, she isn't that kind. She's honest all through. Miss Stafford is." The rest said nothing. They were trying very hard not to see each and stared hard at the sea.

Restore These Appropriations.

The Senate can render no better service at this juncture than by restoring the appropriations for the Georgia Tech and the University to the amounts which the House committee recommended.

The House committee on appropriations allotted Tech one hundred thousand dollars a year for the 1916-17 period, that sum including ten thousand dollars for the maintenance and operation of the new power plant which generous friends of the school have donated without a penny's cost to the State.

The House not only refused to grant the modest increase recommended but actually reduced the appropriation ten thousand dollars below that which Tech now receives.

These slashes at the State's educational service do not mean economy; they mean starvation and decline. They mean narrowed opportunity to Georgia boys and discouragement to Georgia progress.

The sums recommended by the House committee are the least at all commensurate with the urgent needs of Tech and of the University.

The Senate should restore these appropriations to the original figure, and should insist to the last hour and the last minute of the present session that they be kept there.

Incidentally General Scott is something of a diplomat. If the war continues long enough, the Balkans will gain enough ceded territory to be larger than the actual belligerents.

Promises to Poland. The Russian Premier now repeats with the Duma's indorsement the promise, made by the Grand Duke Nicholas at the beginning of the war and subsequently confirmed by the Czar himself, that Poland shall be granted the rights of home rule.

Since its shameful partition among three covetous Powers, every part of Poland has fared ill in the way of liberty, though that governed by Austria has been most fortunate.

Months ago Germany sought to incite them to rebellion by all manner of flattering appeals, but without success. They reasoned, no doubt, that though they had suffered much under Russia, their brethren in Foen had suffered more under Germany.

Of the competing promises, those of Russia appear the more convincing. Whatever the outcome of the present war, Russian absolutism must yield, and rather naturally will yield, to a more liberal order; whereas if German absolutism is victorious, its sabre will rattle louder than ever, and cut sharper.

While the plight of Poland is more grievous than that of any of the lands which the war has torn, not even Belgium excepted, Poland has been overruled not once but time and again by German and Austrian and Russian troops alike. Its fields are stark, its people desolate.

Curmudgeonly Carranza.

The withdrawal of the Brazilian minister from Mexico, apparently upon threats of expulsion by Carranza, marks a crucial development in the problem with which Pan-American diplomacy now is engaged. The tatty chieftain of the so-called Constitutionalists becomes more and more intransigent. Having offended the Government of Guatemala by handing its minister his passports without due reason or explanation, Carranza next turning his cholera against Brazil; and it will not be surprising if he is soon in open dispute with every other republic in the hemisphere.

The departure of the Brazilian minister leaves the United States without any diplomatic representative at Mexico City, he having served our Government in that capacity since the break with the Huerta regime. It is thus more than ever imperative that positive steps for restoring order in Mexico be taken. From the outset, Carranza has played the part of an arrogant dictator. In the revolution against Huerta, he tarried in the rear issuing pompous manifestoes, while Villa was bearing the brunt of battle and winning the important victories.

It was to Carranza's curmudgeonly attitude more, perhaps, than to any other one circumstance that the failure to establish peace after Huerta's flight was ascribable. He has split the Constitutionalists ranks with his petty jealousies and vanities. He has proved himself incapable of rescuing his country and is chivaldly unwilling that others should have a chance.

If Carranza imagines that any attempted government in Mexico can survive without the recognition of the United States and other representative American republics, he will soon awake to his folly. He may make the task of Pan-American diplomacy more difficult, but he cannot stay its purpose or prevent its accomplishment.

There ought to be no lack of employment for the old-time soldier of fortune. These European governments which are making charges against each other should enforce them.

The old-fashioned farmer who brought his bale of cotton to town and returned home with a bale of western hay now rides in an automobile.

On the Western Front.

"With both sides in trenches elaborate enough to be called fortresses, and with both provided with heavy artillery trained ready to fire on every square yard in the narrow space between the two lines, battles and victories of the old-fashioned sort have been practically impossible. Aeroplanes and searchlights have almost put an end to the hope of surprising the enemy, and every charge on a trench is a truly desperate venture for the men who make it."

These circumstances, thinks a writer in the New York Times, go far toward explaining the failure of the Allies to make a more vigorous and effectual attack on the German lines in the west. One of Joffre's uppermost thoughts has been to conserve his troops, for France has no men to waste, and the British force on the Flanders front has been relatively small. Furthermore, until very recently at least, the Allies have been handicapped by a shortage of ammunition.

It should be noted, however, that attacks have been made, frequently and fiercely and sometimes with appreciable if not decisive results. That neither the French nor British have been idle is attested grimly enough by their casualty lists during the last two months, and also by the German losses. An Associated Press dispatch from Paris, based upon undisclosed but "unquestionable" authority, to use the correspondent's phrase, asserts that the Allies "have accounted for two million Germans killed, wounded or demoralized."

The same interview adds that the policy of the Allies in that quarter has been one of "attrition," their hope being that under the tremendous and unceasing strain the German forces will weaken and waver.

Soon or late, it would seem, one side or the other must attempt a decisive stroke in the west; and the rumor that Italy is preparing to send more than half a million fresh troops to France may presage such a movement.

Joy Beautifies the Face

PEOPLE make no too often remarked that one of the surest methods of "destroying good looks is to persist for any length of time in discontent, envy, hatred, or any similar depressing emotional state. And, on the other hand, one of the surest beautifiers is the cultivation of a contented, serene, joyous frame of mind.

Not affect the face beneficially in many ways. Every feature is improved by it. The truth of this was long ago pointed out by no less an authority than the great naturalist, Charles Darwin.

Under the influence of joy, Darwin noted, the circulation of the blood becomes more rapid. Consequently, skin diseases are cured, and a good circulation, the skin takes on a healthier look. Also the eyes become brighter, the entire expression more animated.

"A man in this state," Darwin rightly declared, "holds his body erect, his head upright, and his eyes open." "There is no drooping of the features, and no contraction of the eyebrows.

"On the contrary the frontal muscle tends to contract slightly. This smoothes the brow, removes every trace of a frown, arches the eyebrows a little, and raises the eyelids. The whole face expands."

Since Darwin's day scientific investigation of the effects of various emotions and bodily processes, has brought to light additional reasons for prescribing joy as a beautifier.

Not only so, but it appears, every bodily process is healthily stimulated by joy. The joyous man breathes more fully than the discontented or morose one. He digests his food more readily, and his lifeblood has less trouble in eliminating its waste products.

This smoothness in respiration, digestion, and elimination means that he is pretty sure to be well-nourished. Which in its turn means that, so far as his face is concerned, he is not likely to suffer from pallor or sallowness, abnormal leanness, and general loss of muscular vitality.

These are the facial defects common to the discontented man. The latter cannot well avoid them because of the nature of his life. Always cramped by discontent on the mechanism for breathing, digestion, and eliminating.

Hence those who would retain their good looks as long as possible, or would improve their facial appearance, should make every effort to overcome discontent and to develop and maintain a hopeful, contented, happy outlook on life.

It may be true that the old proverb says that all the joy in the world cannot take one gray hair out of one's head. But joy can and does remove wrinkles, brighten the clear complexion, and put flesh on the bones.

Remember this, all you who are anxious about your looks. Do not become anxious about them, banish worry entirely, cultivate joy, and soon an astonishing improvement in the appearance of your features will become manifest.

BY HENRIK NO. 381—MACAO. This town, on an island in the mouth of the Canton river, and at the very threshold of the Chinese empire, belongs to Portugal, and yields that nation a handsome revenue in gambling licenses. For Macao is the Monte Carlo of the Orient, and the home of the Chinese gamblers.

The gambling houses, of which there are a score, are in the Chinese section. They are one-story buildings, and the gambling rooms are ill-lighted and ill-ventilated. The tables are crowded with Chinese, Portuguese, British and a sprinkling of other nationalities. Most of the players gather around the tables, but the aristocratic Chinese—Mandarins, and other of high caste—at the tables are surrounded by the crowd, and send down the sums which they wish to bet in small red baskets.

Can't win is the most primitive and simple of gambling games. In the center of the table is a square of zinc, the sides being marked 1, 2, 3 and 4. The players place their stakes upon whichever of the four full coins on the table, covering them with a brass bowl. When all is ready, he begins drawing out these coins, one by one, until the number of coins on the table is reached, the corresponding number on the board wins. That is, if there are three coins left, and the number drawn is three, the player whose stake has been exactly even, and there are none left. The winners get three times their stakes, and the house gets a commission of 10 per cent.

On the simple and primitive game, the players become wildly enthusiastic, and great sums are won and lost. The play becomes especially fast and furious on Thursdays, when the gamblers come from Hongkong to spend the day about the tables.

How Fish Live in Water

It seems that nature decided that fishes should live in water. She made them live on land, and she therefore fishes are provided with gills, and human beings are provided with lungs through which to breathe. Now the great difference between gills and lungs is that gills can breathe the oxygen found in water and they cannot breathe the oxygen which is found in air. Fishes, on the other hand, cannot breathe fish can live. So the fish, with their gills formed by nature to take from water the life-giving gas, oxygen, can live under water. Creatures who breathe through lungs are not able to live in water, for they can live only on land where their lungs get plenty of the oxygen which is one of the many gases that make up air.

The Searchlight

A folding wheelbarrow and a folding spade or shovel are two new inventions which will doubtless frequently be used together, although they were invented by different men. Both are designed for travelers and tourists into the mountains and down the valleys, and will be valuable to geologists and other scientists upon expedition in which excavating is likely to be required. The equipment provided must be as compact as possible.

PRECEDENT

PRECEDENT is solidified experience. In the realm of ideas it is canned goods. It is very useful when fresh ideas are not to be had. There are advantages in doing things just because they always have been done. You know what will happen. When you do new things you do not know what will happen.

Not only so, but it appears, every bodily process is healthily stimulated by joy. The joyous man breathes more fully than the discontented or morose one. He digests his food more readily, and his lifeblood has less trouble in eliminating its waste products.

of truth, seeing new values in social justice. Precedent clogs this advance. It fixes and paralyzes the wrongs of man as much as the rights of man. Hence, while the many must trust to precedent, a few must always endeavor to break it, to make way for juster conclusions.

PRECEDENT is the root, independent thinking is the branch of the human tree. Our decisions must conform to the sum of human experience, yet there must also be the fresh green leaf of present intelligence.

PRECEDENT is often the inertial of monstrous injustice. War, for instance, is due to the evil custom of nations who go on in the habit of war-preparedness. The problem of the twentieth century is to battle with precedent by the laws of reason, to overturn it by an upheaval of humanity.

We must correct the errors of our fathers if we would enable our children to correct ours. We must have reverence for the past, but not reverence for the errors of our fathers if we would enable our children to correct ours.

We are on our way to the Golden Age. The moment when the dawn shall be supplemented by the steam of original conviction, and guided by the intelligence and courage of the present.

THE MODERN SPORT OF ARCHERY

THE THIRTY-SEVENTH annual meet of the National Archery Association of the United States, in Chicago, this month brings to the fore again this sport, one of the oldest activities of man thus surviving as a popular amusement.

"So long as the new moon returns in heaven a bent bow, and a long bow, the bow of men," writes one of its modern devotees who has had much to do with the revival of the sport in this country. There is held to be a deep-seated fascination about winging an arrow to its mark. For one thing, archery had its beginnings in the long ago primitive, and the man who reverts to the bow and arrow is, in a sense, harking back to the days when the race was young.

As a modern sport archery has many advantages. Men and women may practice it together. It develops suppleness and grace of body and skill of hand and eye. It is peculiarly associated with the open and sunshine. It requires a knowledge of wind, an appreciation of distance, to attain the highest skill.

Despite all its advantages, archery remains a sport almost unknown to the great majority, though it is rarely passed by its devotees. It is to be said that few persons, outside the circle of its membership know anything about the Archery Association of the United States, which has a membership of many of these still hunt wild game with the long-bow, like Robin Hood of old, is not widely known.

A unique combination of the oldest sport in the world and one of the youngest, that is followed by the members of the Sunflower Archery club, of Atchison, Kansas, members of which go hunting with their bows and arrows in modern, motor-powered touring cars. They spin along the country roads until some squirrel in the top of a tall tree, some rabbit passing in the middle of the road, or a dove on a dead limb, attracts their attention. Then the archers take their mounts and tries a shot. The proportion of misses among the veteran archers is by no means large, though a number of the younger ones have been killed on the run, and even of birds on the wing, brought down by these expert bowmen.

The modern yew bow is not a weapon to be despised in the hands of a man who knows how to use it. It is the result of a steady improvement through the ages, is vastly better than any Indian weapon, and is superior to modern, motor-powered bows of the fifteenth century. It has a pull of from 43 to 50 pounds, and it takes a strong man to do good work with it. The arrow is almost polished, terminating in a knob or steel point, according to the use it is intended for. The pointed arrow drawn well to the head will penetrate an inch of seasoned pine and will strike the vital organs of the animal. In hunting the arrows are carried in a leather quiver at the belt, and the tips of them are painted red so that they may be more easily found and arrows in modern, motor-powered bows. Marking them down after a shot requires almost as much skill as the shooting. Compared to hunting with a bow, the modern motor-powered bow makes a fair percentage of hits, shooting game with the long-bow is sportsmanship of the highest order, for it gives the quarry rather more than a fair chance.

That archery is not more generally practiced in this country is probably due to the fact that an instructor in the art is almost impossible to find. One cannot shoot alone with any great pleasure, and it is impossible to learn to shoot without guidance. For good form in archery is as hard to attain as in other athletic sports. The archer must stand with his heels about six inches apart, his left side toward the target, and the bow extended perpendicularly in the left hand. The arrow must be drawn to a certain point just below the ear, the arrow steered in the crook of the left forearm. All these details of holding and pulling the bow must be perfectly mastered before one can begin to attain much skill.

Then, too, the expense of modern archery is considerable. A good bow costs about $15, and the arrows are $10 a dozen. The target is a straw mat, painted in spots and circles, and representing a respectable additional investment.

There was something of a revival of interest in archery in this country a few years ago. At that time the sport was strongly recommended to women by experts in physical culture as one of the very best means of improving the pulse and figure, and there is no doubt but that it is an excellent exercise for that purpose. Since the days of the Amazons, there have been many skilled women archers, and there are a number of the sex making high scores in the National Archery association today.

Ernest Thompson Seton, the naturalist and originator of the Boy Scouts, also greatly promoted interest in archery among the boys by inventing a game in which the target was placed in the branches of a tree hidden in the woods, hunted for and shot by the boy archers. Although the sport has been greatly stimulated in these days, however, it seems still to remain a diversion of the few.

The first weapon of primitive man in almost every part of the world was the bow, and the bow was his greatest weapon during the fourteenth century when Robin Hood and his bowmen ruled in Sherwood forest. It was the English long-bowmen who won for their country the decisive battles of Crecy and Poitiers against the French. The armored French knights hurled themselves in vain against the long lines of English bowmen, who shot their arrows into the air like rain, and they in turn shot the knights of horsemen, often entering the eye-balls. This was one of the first demonstrations of the superiority of infantry over cavalry, and it was the decisive factor in the long-bow's decline to its present position of a mere pastime. This began a decline of its dominance, hastened by the introduction of gunpowder.

So deep a hold had archery in the national life and story of Britain, however, that the government sought in every way to encourage its practice. Archery societies were formed and meets were held. There were affairs of great splendor and social importance. Silken canopies were erected on the fields, and the archers strolled about in the most brilliant and ornate costumes. The shooting, however, became subordinate to the social phase of the amusement, with the result that it rapidly declined.

Later a revival took place, and the sport was much more scientifically practiced, and has enjoyed an uninterrupted popularity in England to this day. It first came to this country in 1812, when the first archery club was formed in Philadelphia, and remained active for many years. Meantime, a number of small clubs had grown up in various parts of the United States, but especially in the west and middle west. In 1873, these were gathered together under the name of the National Archery Association of the United States, which has since supported and systematized the sport ever since.

The most last year was held at Haverford, Pennsylvania, and that the year before in Boston, Chicago, however, has always been the center of American archery interests, and the return of the annual meet to that city will doubtless insure an unusual success.

QUIPS AND QUIDDITIES

A young student at college in want of $25 wrote his uncle as follows: "Dear Uncle: If you could see how I blush for shame while I am writing, you would pity me. Do you know why? Because I have to ask you for a few dollars and do not know how to express myself. It is impossible for me to tell you. I prefer to die. You try to be merciful, and send me $25, please. Believe me, my dearest uncle, your most obedient and affectionate nephew."

"P. S.—Overcome with shame for what I have written, I have naturally told the messenger in order to take the letter from him, but I cannot catch him. Heaven grant that something may happen to stop him or that this letter may get lost."

The uncle was, naturally, troubled, but was equal to the emergency. He replied as follows: "My Dear Jack: Console yourself and blush no more. Providence grants that the messenger is still on his way to your letter. Your affectionate uncle."

During a discussion of the fitness of things in general some one asked at Charleston, and an obliging porter, while struggling with the luggage, noticed that the young lady's hair was dotted with lice. He approached the young man and, pulling a folded paper from his pocket, said: "A present for you, sir, with the company's compliments."

"Indeed," said the traveler, "what is it?" "A railway map, sir."

"Oh, thank you, but that are these marks in blue pencil?" "That's the beauty of it, sir; these marks show just where the tunnels are and their length."

Meantime, a number of small clubs had grown up in various parts of the United States, but especially in the west and middle west. In 1873, these were gathered together under the name of the National Archery Association of the United States, which has since supported and systematized the sport ever since.

The most last year was held at Haverford, Pennsylvania, and that the year before in Boston, Chicago, however, has always been the center of American archery interests, and the return of the annual meet to that city will doubtless insure an unusual success.

A young student at college in want of $25 wrote his uncle as follows: "Dear Uncle: If you could see how I blush for shame while I am writing, you would pity me. Do you know why? Because I have to ask you for a few dollars and do not know how to express myself. It is impossible for me to tell you. I prefer to die. You try to be merciful, and send me $25, please. Believe me, my dearest uncle, your most obedient and affectionate nephew."

"P. S.—Overcome with shame for what I have written, I have naturally told the messenger in order to take the letter from him, but I cannot catch him. Heaven grant that something may happen to stop him or that this letter may get lost."

The uncle was, naturally, troubled, but was equal to the emergency. He replied as follows: "My Dear Jack: Console yourself and blush no more. Providence grants that the messenger is still on his way to your letter. Your affectionate uncle."

During a discussion of the fitness of things in general some one asked at Charleston, and an obliging porter, while struggling with the luggage, noticed that the young lady's hair was dotted with lice. He approached the young man and, pulling a folded paper from his pocket, said: "A present for you, sir, with the company's compliments."

"Indeed," said the traveler, "what is it?" "A railway map, sir."

"Oh, thank you, but that are these marks in blue pencil?" "That's the beauty of it, sir; these marks show just where the tunnels are and their length."
