WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Italy's long expected declaration of war against Turkey has been made. For weeks tension between the two governments has been acute.

Turkish support of the revolt in Libya and the movement of the departure of Italian residents from Asia Minor are reasons for Italy's move, as given in a note handed to the Porte on Saturday by Marquis di Carraro, Italian ambassador to Turkey.

News dispatches recently stated that a squadron of Italian cruisers had sailed from Taranto, Italy, ready to sail at a moment's notice, presumably to attack the Dardanelles. It was said that simultaneously with a declaration of war 150,000 men were ordered to march toward Gallipoli peninsula.

Petrograd announced that a British submarine had torpedoed a German cruiser in the Baltic. The statement does not give the name of the vessel or the ship which was not destroyed.

TURCO-BULGARIAN CRISIS
Tension in the Balkan capitals over Turco-Bulgarian relations has reached the breaking point. Turkey is strengthening its fortifications in Thrace because of fear of a Bulgarian invasion. Bulgaria is considered likely, however, to ally herself with the Serbs and Rumanians in the event of a Balkan engagement in which either of the latter nations is to be involved in secret support for Greece, but in willing to cede Macedonia to her.

Italy is also in the act of mobilizing its army. It is questionable whether he will have any ready troops to send to the aid of the political crisis which caused the downfall of the cabinet in the report of a naval engagement in the Dardanelles. In when, according to German reports, the Russians had destroyed the German fleet and the Germans one destroyer, there has been little news from the front.

POLES HEADS BIG MOVE
The battle, apparently, foresees another big German offensive. It is expected that throughout the Balkan provinces. With the fall of the Polish front, the German army is expected to command large reinforcements for this front. With Riga, however, there may even be an attempt to advance toward Petrograd.

GERMANS, HOWEVER, THE GERMANS AND Austrians, following up their advance, are endeavoring to make the Breist-Litovsk line untenable for the Russians. One of their armaments is to withdraw all Turkish troops and the northwest as far as possible. Russia is making an orderly retreat, doing all the damage they can to the Austro-German forces. On the other hand, large forces have been sent to the front.

Although Italy declared war on Austria May 24, there never has been any declaration of war between Italy and Germany, nor until now between Italy and Turkey.

Friction between Turkey and Italy, however, has been in evidence since shortly after the latter's entry into the war. Early in June there were reports that Italian consuls gradually were leaving Turkey. Later charges were made that the Ottoman government was preventing consuls from leaving and that Italian civilians who wished to quit Turkey were being detained.

Rome advised said Italy had addressed a note to the United States asking recognition of its position in Turkey. The complaint that they were being prevented from leaving was untrue.

TURKS VIOLATED TREATY
Two days later the Italian cabinet met for its supposed purpose of discussing relations with Turkey and almost certainly the Italian government became convinced of the violation of the treaty of Lausanne, by which the pledged herself to withdraw all Turkish troops and officers from the Cretan district in Tripoli and to leave the island to the Greek and Semitic tribesmen in that locality. Instead of doing so, it was alleged, Zover Pasha, the Turkish war minister, last March sent his brother, Nuri Bey, to Crete to foment rebellion.

It was stated Italian consuls still were being detained in Turkey. At that time tension between Italy and Turkey was becoming more acute. It was announced on August 4 that Italy had asked for categorical explanations concerning Turkey's alleged refusal to withdraw her troops from the Cretan district in Tripoli and it was charged Turkey was refusing what was WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—President Wilson and Secretary Lansing conferred today with the text of the two messages from Ambassador Paas before them, giving details of the attack on the Arabic, as far as they have been obtained from American survivors. The ambassador and consular officials in England have been instructed to send all additional information possible bearing on the physical facts of the tragedy. While the facts are being studied carefully, however, the German explanation will be sought.

Ambassador Gerard will be instructed to seek this explanation, or at least a statement of the facts, so far as they have been reported to the German admiralty. That may take a fortnight, for the German admiralty heretofore has declared it cannot communicate with the submarines on the ocean lanes without difficulty and delay.

NO GERMAN REPORT
So far the state department has been unable to get any reports from the German foreign office in the case of the Orduna, shelled more than a fortnight ago, and the German admiral has experienced in the Leelanaw and Nebraska cases. Nevertheless, it has been decided that in a matter as important, justice requires that Germany be given full opportunity to present its side of the case before any action is determined on.

Some officials think there are inconsistencies in the statements of survivors, as to what actually took place. They also had the action of British censors in suppressing details to indicate there might be some condition surrounding the sinking of the Arabic, which would qualify first judgment passed on the act.

Official dispatches today referred only to the casualty list and threw no light on the very features on which the state department seeks information. Considering the department's instructions yesterday to the vice consul at Queenstown to secure affidavits from the Arabic's officers, disappointment was expressed that so far only one such affidavit had been forthcoming. It was a statement of the crew, Zofia.

State department officials think full information cannot be reasonably expected before Monday or Tuesday.

The British government today officially declared that the Arabic was torpedoed by a German submarine. It was expressed that if any other vessel was being conveyed when she was torpedoed by a German submarine that an investigation of the sinking of the Arabic has shown that neither tried to escape, capture nor undersea boat, and that there was no warning whatever given before the torpedo was fired.

ARABIC DID NOT TRY TO MAKE ESCAPE, REPORT
(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, Aug. 21.—No official report has been received, it is learned on inquiry in official circles, that the British government is satisfied that the Arabic did not attempt to escape or to ram the submarine which sank her.

This conclusion is the result of statements by Captain Finch and other survivors. All agree that the submarine was not sighted before the torpedo was fired.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Cotton has been declared absolute contraband by the foreign office this afternoon.

The announcement follows: "His majesty's government have declared cotton absolute contraband. While the circumstances might have justified such action at an earlier period, his majesty's government are glad to think that local conditions of American interests likely to be affected are more favorable for such a step than they were at an earlier period. Moreover, his majesty's government contemplate initiation of measures to relieve as far as possible the depression which might temporarily disturb market conditions."

The statement declares that the government proposes to initiate measures to relieve depression which might temporarily disturb the cotton market because of the contraband order.

It was learned upon inquiry at the foreign office that the French government will issue a similar notice early tomorrow.

The declaration is effective from today.

A royal proclamation concerning the Arabic was published in supplement of the London Gazette issued tonight. It is very brief. After a preamble, citing previous proclamations concerning contraband, it says: "Now, therefore, we do hereby declare, by and with the advice of our privy council, that during the continuance of the war, or until we do give further public notice, the following articles shall be treated as absolute contraband, in addition to those set out in our royal proclamation of the 13th day of August, 1914: "Raw cotton, cotton linters, cotton waste and cotton yarn."

"And we do hereby further declare that this, our royal proclamation, shall take effect from the date of its publication in the London Gazette."

The proclamation was signed yesterday by King George.

U. S. TO PROTEST; NO BIG DROP IN MARKET EXPECTED
WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The United States will protest against the British designation of cotton as contraband, but no negotiations are expected at least to draw out a full explanation of the reasons behind the move.

Cotton shippers would not discuss the subject tonight, but the announcement came today, it was learned informally some time ago that such action had been decided on. Probably cotton factors will be consulted before any formal announcement was delayed pending preparations to protect the market from its effect.

MAY BE ACCEPTED
The first direct effect of the British announcement will be to simplify the discussion over the cotton in council now being held. Cotton shippers have formed a large percentage of the total number of delegates to the conference. The arrangements for informal talk over arrangements for informal cases in which the cotton is seized. Each case, also, became an additional factor in the formal discussion between the two governments. The United States having steadily maintained that Great Britain was violating the accepted rules of international law in halting commerce between neutrals and a specially contraband goods.

NO PAYMENT FOR CARBOHS
With cotton declared contraband, all those shippers who have cargo on hand or on payment for seized cargoes as heretofore and the informal discussion, so far as cotton is concerned, is at an end.

It is understood the British plan to sell the cotton market through actual purchases if that becomes necessary. Probably cotton factors will be commissioned to keep the commodity above a fixed minimum price. It has been suggested, however, that with this determination known to the cotton dealer, it is unlikely there will be any make it easier to maintain prices because open markets unaffected by the allied cotton are more than able to absorb the entire production.

KNOWLEDGE IN TEXAS FROM STORM TOTAL 256 Damage to Crops and Property Near $50,000,000—65 Persons Missing

(By Associated Press.)
GALVESTON, Tex., Aug. 21.—A total of 256 known dead among residents of southeast Texas coast points and persons missing, many of whom are believed to have perished, and damage to crops, buildings, railroads, shipping, live stock and other property aggregating close to $50,000,000, was the toll taken by the hurricane which swept this section last Monday and Tuesday.

These figures were reached from a careful compilation made tonight of what are considered the most authentic reports of the loss of life and property.

Galveston's share of the property loss was placed at approximately $6,000,000.

Reports received here indicate conditions again are approaching normal throughout the Gulf coast.

Divere today reported they had found the link in the submerged main which breaks the city water supply from the pumping station at Alta Loma. Mayor Fisher tonight said the engineers reported that a new section of pipe could be substituted within forty-eight hours.

Officials of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railroads stated that 1,700 feet of the $2,000,000 causeway had been washed away on the Galveston side and 278 feet destroyed near the mainland.

Several hundred men were at work on the mainland today making preparations to bring the wreckage of the break trestle across the bay from Virginia Point to the city.

Sousa's Former Soloist in Atlanta to Claim Share of Million Dollar Estate

A Georgia woman who has won the heart of New York with her exotic beauty and ravishing looks, it is said, has come home to Atlanta to inherit a fortune.

With it she plans to do many things, not for herself but for others. Her philanthropies will be exploited and it may be that when she comes into her own many ragged little dogs, strays of the street and the gutter, will be pampered in purple and fine linen.

"Because I do love dogs," she said yesterday on the porch of her mother's north side home. "Dogs and music. There is nothing finer than a Scotch collie or Schuber's Serenade, is there?" she said, it she smiled out of hazel eyes beneath arched brows, a strange contrast to the crown red gold which is her hair.

For Mrs. Lucy Gairrell Everhart is a Spanish blonde, and please spell the first name with a Z because her great-grandmother so spelled it, said Mrs. Everhart believes in family.

PART OF A MILLION.
The fortune which Mrs. Everhart has come here to inherit is a comfortable slice of a million. When old Josiah Howell died the other day in Texas, he died without son or daughter. And he left broad acres, which are worth over a million, according to Texas authorities.

To the descendants of his brothers and sisters this wealth was given. One of these is Mrs. Everhart, daughter of the late Francis Bartow Gairrell, who was the lawyer conservator of Josiah Howell's estate. Mrs. Everhart was the daughter of Josiah Howell.

Mrs. Everhart was in Atlantic City when Bridges Smith, mayor of Mescon, old friend of the family and attorney for the Howell estate, wired her her good luck.

COUNTY TAX RATE WILL BE REDUCED BY BOARD With Courthouse Paid for, Rate Will Be Cut From 85 to 70 Cents

Two highly interesting pieces of news emanated from the executive offices of the Fulton county commissioners yesterday afternoon when Henry M. Wood, the general clerk, raised his eyes from a long tabulation of figures, stretched his arms, and as if unconscious of the presence of others, observed:

"Well, that job's out of the way, and I can 'knock off' for the day."

To a representative of The Journal who had just entered the office with County Commissioner W. Tom Winn, Mr. Wood explained:

"First, that he had satisfied himself from certain computations that the county commissioners were well justified in the actual cost of the Fulton county courthouse.

Second, that he had just arrived at the actual cost of the Fulton county courthouse.

"I have the figure to a penny, you see. It has never been published, and here it is."

He handed over a sheet of paper showing that the magnificent temple of justice at Hunter and Pryor streets, which has been under construction since the first court house in the southern states, cost the people of Fulton county $1,282,149.84.

Commissioner Winn broke in to observe that the county is out of debt, excepting two small accounts, approximately $12,000, which will be paid just as soon as some trifling differences are adjusted.

INCLUDES EVERHART.
"And," he said, "the total cost as announced by Mr. Wood includes everything the building completed and furnished."

"That the courthouse is paid for and that the county is out of debt, excepting two small accounts, approximately $12,000, which will be paid just as soon as some trifling differences are adjusted."

Features of Great Plan To Handle Cotton Here

Notable features of the warehouse and compress project are as follows:

It will issue a receipt on a single cotton to individual, whether or not they are customers of the Central Bank and Trust corporation.

The compress project will be the most remarkable in the country, and the warehouse, which will be of concrete, will cover forty acres of ground.

A total of 300,000 bales will be taken care of, and Atlanta will be advanced in the leading cotton centers of the south.

Following the purchase Saturday by A. A. Chandler, for $100,000 cash, of forty acres of land in the southern part of the city, announcement was made by the Central Bank and Trust Corporation that work would be started Monday on a cotton compress and warehouse on the property that would make Atlanta one of the leading cotton centers of the south.

The compress and warehouse combined will cost approximately $550,000. The compress and several of the warehouses will be completed by October 15. There will be capacity for 200,000 bales.

A significant feature of the announcement is that the Central Bank and Trust will issue warehouse receipts on cotton with which money may be borrowed up to seven cents above the rate of 6 per cent per annum, unless the condition of the money market should cause this rate to be changed.

The enterprise will be started and carried forward by the Central Bank and Trust corporation, which has A. A. Chandler as president. Later, as soon as a charter can be obtained, which will be done by the Central Bank and Trust, it will be turned over to a corporation to be known as Atlanta Cotton Warehouse and Compressing Co., whose capital stock will be approximately $1,000,000.

The sale of the property was handled by J. R. Smith and J. E. Ewing, and consisted of a tract of land known as the Southern and Central railroads and Atlanta one of the leading cotton centers of the south.

The compress itself will be the largest and most powerful in the world. It will be insured for $100 bales of cotton, therefore, would be only 10 cents a year, in striking contrast with a former rate of 5 cents a bale a month.

WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS.
An application for an amendment to the charter of the bank started last fall, when cotton receipts without a market.

At that time the bank offered to lend on cotton receipts to its customers. Now it will lend to anybody on any amount from a single bale up.

A farmer, for instance, may bring a single bale of cotton to the bank and the bank will accept the bale and store it, issuing the farmer a warehouse receipt in return.

These receipts will guarantee the weight of the bale and the grade and condition of the cotton, and will be negotiable anywhere and at any bank.

In other words, the farmer may take this receipt to the Central Bank and Trust corporation, or to any other bank, national or state, and borrow seven cents a pound on his cotton, with interest, as explained above, at 6 per cent per annum, unless the money market should require a change.

While the Central bank will loan on these receipts, the owner of the cotton is not required to borrow from it. He may borrow from any other bank.

A letter which appears in the Central Bank and Trust WORK MONDAY.

The survey or the property and other preliminary work on the buildings will be started Monday.

A feature of the project is that the cotton will own its own tracks, which will connect with the lines of the Central and Georgia, and the Southern railroads, and will own its own right-of-way.

J. C. GAVAN, Manager of Southern Book Concern. Who trimmed prize winning window.

Gets First Award Over 600 Contestants in Campbell Art Company Kewpie Window Display Contest

The Southern Book Concern of Atlanta, is winner of the first prize of $200 offered by the Campbell Art company, of Elizabeth, N. J., for the best Kewpie window display.

The news that the Southern Book Concern had won the prize came in a telegram to J. C. Gavan, manager, from the Campbell company, which is as follows:

"Congratulations. You win first prize of $200 in Kewpie window display contest. Rush photographs of your window trimmer and exterior of store that are suitable for half tone reproduction.

There were over 600 contestants in the United States and Canada for the prize, and the fact that an Atlanta firm won the first prize is a tribute to the decorative ability of William Mills, the expert window trimmer of the Southern Book Concern, who arranged the prize-winning display.

The awards were made from photographs of the window forwarded to the company. The judges included the editor of the Merchants' Record and Show Window and officers of the International Association of Display Men.

Big Sunflower Tips the Scales At Ten Pounds

Walter J. Stoy brought a flower to the Journal office today that weighs ten pounds. This little blossom is a Russian sunflower, but it was Georgia born and bred.

The petals were torn from the sunflower, and just the big, golden center was weighed. This center is eighteen inches in diameter, fifty-one inches in circumference and was so heavy that it caused the nine-foot stalk on which it grew to bend down for two feet.

In telling the story of the sunflower Mr. Stoy destroyed a very pretty illusion that the flower sets its face toward the east at sunrise and follows her to the west at sunset.

An Extra Tread Makes the Goodyear All-Weather a Double-Thick Anti-Skid

Cost $1,000,000. This is for men who think "Tires are tires" and who fail to get the best for that reason. Most anti-skids, if you cut them, would show only a regular tread made rough. The Goodyear All-Weather shows an extra tread, about as thick as the regular, vulcanized on top. That one difference, on our output of All-Weathers, costs us $1,000,000 this year.

It's Worth Getting. Thus the Goodyear All-Weather is a double-thick tread. And the extra thickness is rubber toughened by a secret process.

This insures grips which are deep and tough. They last for thousands of miles and keep sharp. When they do wear off there's the regular tread beneath. Is that not better than thin, soft treads with shallow, round-edged grips?

Alleged Insult to Mother Caused Shooting by Son

"I bought the pistol a week ago, determined to kill him if he ever insulted my mother again. When he slapped her I shot him," was the way Frank White, fifteen years old, son of Mrs. May White, 961 Marietta street, explained to the police the shooting of J. E. Brown, thirty-five years old, at Mrs. White's house, 961 Marietta street, Saturday night.

Brown was rushed to the Grady hospital after the shooting. The bullet penetrated his liver, and the physician states his condition is very serious.

Frank White, held at police barracks charged with assault with intent to murder, stated that Brown, a roomer at his mother's house, after disputing with his mother Saturday night, slapped her face. Frank got the pistol he had bought to defend her with and shot Brown in the abdomen.

Later Saturday night W. B. Neal, of Eastman Park, a stationary engineer employed by the county, was arrested by the police charged with being connected with the shooting. The police accuse him of giving the revolver to young White, who denies this, insisting he bought the weapon.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN ALMOST MILLIONAIRE, HE SAYS

In Seven Years Movie Fans Have Laughed Him Into a Fortune

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—If people continue to laugh one year more at his antics on the screen, Charlie Chaplin will have a million dollars added to the bank, he asserts. Seven years ago he says he was at a job in a glass factory in London at $1.80 a week, with nothing but a salary.

Laughed into a millionaire in a few years by the American motion picture public. That's the power of being funny, as demonstrated by the premier comedian of the film world.

Chaplin, who has for a year been with the Essanay company staging his scenes in the California hills near here, has just contracted to go back with the Mutual people at a salary reported to be enormous.

Coming back along his checkered life, Chaplin says it was only a fortunate circumstance that kept him away from being a probable thief in the London streets where for years he lived a precarious existence as a youth at times enjoying misadventure and confusion again tramping the streets, dependent, searching for work.

Only his "colossal egoism" saved him from becoming a tragedian instead of a funny man—"possibly a great tragic actor," as he says.

All of us, says Chaplin, are but "proteins of the time" and he is not a comedian. He is just a man who has found his own way of making a living.

He is now busy, he says, he begins by falling out of his big automobile to "amuse the chauffeur." Then he coats his face with brick-brown paint, loops up his heavy trousers, slips a bit, and by the time the camera begins to click he is enjoying his own comedy as heartily as anyone in the cast.

His comedies seem to me the funniest thing on earth while I'm watching them," he confides. "I laugh, the other actors laugh, and often the camera-man chuckles out loud."

Governor W. L. Douglas SEVENTY YEARS OLD

Millionaire Shoe Manufacturer of Massachusetts Hale and Hearty Despite Years

BROCKTON, Mass.—August 22, marks the 70th milestone in the life of W. L. Douglas, 4th governor of Massachusetts and Brockton's most widely known citizen.

Mr. Douglas was born in Plymouth in 1845, and has led a very busy life. He is in splendid physical condition now, owing to his careful living, and is still the active directing head of the shoe manufacturing business that bears his name.

Mr. Douglas lives at his beautiful seashore estate at Marston, and travels back and forth to his business in his automobile. Not only do these trips give pleasure, but it affords opportunity for a busy mind to formulate plans for making his already great business greater.

The Douglas business has grown to such huge proportions that Mr. Douglas can and does do a successful business on a very small margin of profit.

A thorough engineer at 70, Mr. Douglas looks back over a long life that has not always been one of ease. At the age of five his father was lost at sea.

Two years later he was apprenticed to an uncle, who was a shoemaker and began his employment pegging shoes by hand.

He was eight years learning his trade during which he studied the hard ships and injustice, and finally left his uncle with a mere pittance in ready money.

He then attended school for a few years, worked employment at Chiltonville, later he worked at boot-making, first at Hingham, then at South Scituate for three years.

He then returned to his trade in the association of Zephaniah Myers, of Black Hawk, Col. In 1867 he opened a retail boot and shoe store at Golden City, Col. in partnership with Alfred Studley, formerly of Scotland.

Foreign Exchange Declines to Extremely Low Points—Special British Bond Issue Suggested to Remedy Situation—Railroad Gross Earnings Decrease—August Business Very Satisfactory—Buying Versus Inspecting

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The most serious cloud on the horizon today is the international monetary situation, more familiarly known as the foreign exchange market.

In normal times the British pound sterling is equivalent in value to 48.67% of American money. On Monday of this week sterling exchange was a drug on the market at 4.64, and only the special efforts of skilled international bankers prevented a still further decline.

This represents a discount of 22 points from normal value, or about 4 1/2 per cent decrease. Normally the exchange rate is equivalent to 28 cents of American money; in other words, one dollar will buy five francs.

With the present depression in French exchange, it is not surprising that the equivalent to 28 cents of American money; in other words, one dollar will buy five francs.

One practical effect of these conditions is the foreign exchange market is the obvious decline in the value of American securities in the foreign money centers.

With the British pound sterling at the 4 1/2 per cent discount and American bonds payable in dollars, the investor who sold his securities in London at the same nominal price at which he purchased them one year ago, would in reality receive 4 1/2 per cent more than he paid for them.

An American bond for 5,000 francs at prevailing exchange rates would net the seller 6,000 francs, while one traded at the same price at which it cost 5,000 francs one year ago. This represents a profit of 20 per cent, and it is stated that the same process in Rome would net the investor 25 per cent.

This is, of course, only incidental to the real problem, and it may be assumed as most unlikely that sufficient of such transactions will be recorded to show any appreciative effect upon the exchange market.

Cable reports from London this week tell of the very urgent desire of the financial leaders in Great Britain to effect a satisfactory adjustment of this exchange problem.

The latest suggestion is that of a government loan, short of the American market. The amount involved would be anywhere from $200,000,000 to $500,000,000 in the form of two-year 5 per cent bills, free from the income tax and all special incumbrances.

MARINES ARE HELD READY TO EMBARK

Admiral Caperton May Need More Help at Haiti

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—One battalion of marines, 800 men, at Annapolis, has been ordered to be ready to embark for Haiti if Rear Admiral Caperton calls for more forces.

Further trouble with unruly natives inland from Cape Haitien is believed to have prompted Admiral Caperton to ask that an additional marine battalion be held in readiness. He has not definitely asked for reinforcements.

The relic of the revolutionary army left Cape Haitien after refusing to disarm and with the threat that they would resist invasion of Haitien soil.

A slight disturbance was reported by Admiral Caperton at Port-au-Prince last night. The message said quiet prevailed today.

RAILROAD EARNINGS DECREASE

Gross earnings of the leading railroads in the United States for the six months ended June 30, 1915, amounted to $1,388,472,003, a decrease of $41,423,035, or 2.9 per cent, from the corresponding period in 1914.

The decrease is due to a number of factors in connection with these figures is that, though business conditions in the United States, stimulated by the large war orders from abroad, considerably improved during the six months and tone and sentiment improved for the better, no relief was found in the revenue returns of the country's railroad transportation systems.

In the west and southwest some instances of considerable gains are recorded, but these arise out of the fact that the harvest of the previous season, giving the railroads in those favored parts of the country a greater agricultural tonnage in 1915 than they had in 1914.

The great railroad systems of the east, which are dependent mainly for the course of their traffic and revenues upon general manufacturing and industrial activity, give no evidence of revival in trade sufficient to affect very materially the course of their revenues.

The situation in their respective localities justifies this fact is not remarkable in itself, because in 1914 every part of the first a horizontal line and business was dead. To say that the present situation is better than it was then is to repeat a truism.

At this time the hotels of the city are filled with out-of-town merchants and buyers. This does not mean that the hotel business are putting up cots in the corridors to accommodate the overflow or that the city needs a dozen more hotels to hold the arrivals.

A STATEMENT from THE WHITE COMPANY to MOTOR CAR BUYERS. IN view of the confusing market which confronts motor car purchasers, many are looking to this company for an expression of its attitude toward the innovations in mechanical design and new price levels now being announced. We therefore take this occasion to state our beliefs and purposes, which are based on fourteen successful years of experience. We believe the four-cylinder motor is to be the standard and ultimate type. We therefore consider it wiser to continue perfecting this type of motor, which we have already spent years in developing, than to step abruptly into a field of design that is new to the entire automobile industry, and thus impose an experiment upon our customers. With reference to price, the White policy will be as it always has been—to build cars to the White standard rather than to a standard that would make a cheap price possible. Materials and labor cost more now than ever before—consequently, lower prices must and do indicate compromised quality. We hold it as a first principle of our duty to purchasers of White Cars to make a product that will give maximum service with the least amount of attention and of expense for operation and maintenance; a product of such quality and approved construction that it will command high value at any time the owner may wish to dispose of it; in all, to build motor cars which the owners can truly regard as investments. White policy will always be governed by consideration for the ultimate service-value of White Cars. We will not take part in the spectacular methods, adopted solely for sales stimulation, which prevail in the motor car market at the present time. In short, the stability of policy which has always meant security to White owners will continue. We neither consider it good business nor do we find it necessary to repudiate the design nor to depreciate, unnaturally, the value of cars which have been purchased from us, by making frequent radical changes in design and price. NEAL OF THE NAVY

William Courtleigh, Jr.

Lillian Lorraine

THRILLS a-plenty for story readers and picture-goers alike; romance to satisfy the most romantic, adventures for the most adventurous, and the best photoplay art to please the most artistic. A great story and great pictures making Neal of the Navy a most worthy successor to the world famous "ELAINE" and "PAULINE" serials.

A tremendous volcano belching fire and dealing death and destruction over a wide area;

A great ship caught in the torrent of flame and white hot ashes and burning to the water's edge;

A ship's mate securing by a cowardly crime the fancied security of a floating spar only to become the screaming prey of a shark;

A tiny child left helpless and alone by the great disaster; her only protector a boy not yet in his teens;

A bundle of crumpled papers containing in their faded writing the suggestion of a vast fortune and the incentive for weary wanderings over uncharted seas;

A band of dangerous crooks who stop at nothing to achieve their ends and who have marked the girl for their own and her heritage for their booty;

The life of a boy who enlists as a sailor on one of Uncle Sam's floating fortresses and by pluck, character and efficiency, rises to a commission and a position in the world;

A mysterious and unmapped island hiding beneath its palm-shaded sand mines worth a king's ransom:

Here indeed are the seeds of a wonderful romance — of a story that fascinates, and pictures that will hold audiences spellbound! William Hamilton Osborne, the author of the story, is a famous short story writer and novelist. Among his successes are "The Red Mouse", "The Catpaw", "The Blue Buckle" and "The Running Fight."

Lillian Lorraine is one of the most famous of Broadway's theatrical stars. She was featured in the famous "Follies" for three years and "The Whirl of the World". She has beauty, grace and talent.

The pictures of navy life and scenes will be authentic, being taken with the approval and by the sanction of the Secretary of the Navy. The House of Pathé, the largest and most famous motion picture house in the world, will release the pictures which have been made by Balboa, under the trade mark of Panama Film.

The Pathé Company has three great serial successes to its credit.

"The Perils of Pauline" and "Who Pays?" were great. "The Exploits of Elaine" was greater.

"Neal of the Navy" will be the greatest.

This Great Story of Love and Adventure Begins in The Atlanta Journal the Week of August 29, in Daily Installments. It will be Shown Every Week at the Vaudette Theatre, Beginning Monday, September 6.

Kelly Counts Two Victories Over Travelers

Blanks Visitors In Opening Game of Double Header, and Comes to Rescue in Time to Save Second Game—Crackers Get Him Some Runs

By Innis Brown
Hurling Herb Kelly, left-hand flinger for the tribe of Bill Smith, had his game at Ponce de Leon Saturday afternoon. Herb hit on successful plays of winning ball games for the Crackers.

WANTED TO WORK BOTH.
The two-time stunt was offered as an old man's undertaking. The pitcher was despatched to handle the Travelers in the opener, and by agreement it was out to seven innings, as was the second game.

After Hardgrove Early.
A levy on Omar Hardgrove, who opened here in the first game, was begun at the third inning. Joe Jenkins fired along linear to left that broke through the Atlanta mitts like a bright star.

Detail Games Today.
The Detroit-Washington tie-head-to-head will be detailed today by Johnson in his detail reports in the "Daily Column" building, the first game being called at 10:30.

Addition of Ex-Traveler to Local Forces Gives Crackers One of Best Hurling Staffs the League Has Ever Had

In purchasing Day from Little Rock the local club was looking ahead toward the 1918 season. The Crackers did not need hurlers. They already had a fine staff, but Day is a first class salesman, and will prove a valuable asset next season.

Lookouts Come For Last Visit

The Crackers begin tomorrow their last full week's stand for the season at Ponce de Leon. They clash with the Memphis Chickasaws next week, and the Memphis Chickasaws next week, and the Memphis Chickasaws next week.

Triple Tie for Low Medal Card

The battle for low medal score in the qualifying round for the president's cup golf tournament at Druid Hills Saturday afternoon resulted in a three-cornered tie. Perry Adair and Little Bob Jones, Atlanta's two youthful stars, and the latter's father, E. P. Jones, were tied at 80.

Atlanta Paper Co. Loses

The World-Record Agency defeated the Atlanta Paper company sine, 6 to 3 Saturday afternoon in a fast game at Deva park today. It took three straight games to win, with the pitching of Green for the winners, and the fielding of the entire paper company team.

Anderson Wins Big Road Race

Leads Field Home in Elgin National Trophy Race, Whizzes Along at Average of 77.25 Miles Per Hour
ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 21.—Gilbert Anderson today won the sixth annual renewal of the 30-mile road race for the Elgin National trophy. His time was 3:53:25, an average of 77.25 miles per hour, or nearly three miles faster than the record established by Ralph De Palma, who won last year, when Anderson was second, and two miles faster than Cooper's record yesterday.

Outlook Good For Winning Eleven Tech

Jackets Will Return Wealth of Material for Both Line and Backfield Positions—Players Will Start Reporting Sept 1

With the echo of ash crashing against household still resounding in the vicinity of Ponce de Leon, when the weather man puts the kibosh on the pastime, and the report of big league dodgers, still courting the interest and confidence of sport followers, basketball still holds the boards in the sport realm. But just the same football is drawing near very rapidly and supporters of the gridiron game are getting impatient.

Reports from Athens indicate that Georgia will face the barrier this year but decidedly better prospects than the coaches and captain encountered at the beginning of the 1916 season. News from Auburn is exceedingly scarce, as it generally is in advance of the season. However, some few who are in a position to know, state that Auburn has fair prospects for the 1918 season, not so good perhaps as last year, but not the year before, but still far from gloomy.

Then what about Tech?
If you approach a real Tech enthusiast and ask him what the Jackets will do next season, he will squirm in a kind of embarrassed way, and admit that if nothing goes wrong, and the team is attended by good luck, they may prove able to hold their own. In fact some are optimistic enough to admit that the prospects of the Jackets are rosy. This about reaches the top of the scale, however, for Tech boys are pursuing a course of diplomacy, at least so far as talking is concerned this season.

Peach Approaches 400 Limit Again--Pitcher Ruth Some Hitter--How They Rank

Cobb is making a valiant effort to bring his batting mark back above the .300 mark. He dropped away last week to .285, but he has since placed him back where he was at the beginning of the week.

WILBERT ROBINSON-BROOKLYN INOUEY JENNINGS-DETROIT

Pat Moran, manager of the rejuvenated Phillies of the National League, is certain he will win the pennant. But he is no more confident than is Wilbert Robinson, manager of Brooklyn. Bill Carrigan, manager of the Boston Red Sox of the American League, is not a bit more confident than is Hugh Jennings of Detroit.

Snyder Leads N. L. Stickers

Cardinal Catcher Replaces Larry Doyle at Top of List. T. Long Hitting Even .300

Change is the order of the day in the leadership of the National League hitting line. Accordingly, this week finds a new man on the job. He is Frank Snyder of the Cardinals, and he reached the top by displacing Larry Doyle, of the Giants, who had led the honor for the past two weeks.

Pitching in the old league is proving a rather tough proposition to judge from the standings of a long list of good hitters. Just now are hitting as good as .300, and of these one has played in less than twenty-five games.

Larry Doyle and Jake Daubert are tied in the number of hits made, with 137. Little Hains Groh, of the Red Sox, has grabbed the honor of premier slugger with a total of 178 bases.

Braves Through Hendryx Increases Lead

Player Admits, Hopes Are Gone

Recent Visit to Philadelphia Brought Confession From 'Important Member of Stallings' Club That Players Are Whipped--Team Has Lost Hope

The Philadelphia Braves, baseball champions of the world, apparently are through as far as the pennant chase is concerned. This was the impression gathered by 10,000 fans who saw the Phillies win their third straight game from Stallings' team.

"We are going to fight to the finish," says the manager of the Braves, "but we are going to fight to the finish without Phillips. Phillips is the only man we have who is capable of going the distance in this league."

"Opposing teams have saved their best pitcher to go up against Rudolph each series, as they realize that we did not have James and that Tyler was not so good as we were a year ago."

"I still think we are the best team in the league and the best team in the world. We are the best team in the world. We are the best team in the world."

"This fellow Riley is some pitcher. He is the best pitcher I have ever seen. He is the best pitcher I have ever seen. He is the best pitcher I have ever seen."

Pelican Outfielder Now Has Well-Defined Margin Over Rest of Field--Only Five Players Are Hitting as Good as .300, Moran Doing Some Slugging

End of another week finds Tim Hendryx still leading the Southern League in batting. The Pelican outfielder is just about maintaining the stride he was making a week ago, up through the games played on Wednesday of this week.

Apparently the league's best hitters have been having trouble enough in giving the delivery of the batters. Only five men in the league are hitting as good as .300. It is a rather notable fact that each of these is an outfielder, and no two are members of the same club.

Tim Hendryx is proving his worth as an offensive player for the Pelicans in more ways than one. For instance, in addition to his stunt of topping the batting list, he has scored the largest number of runs with 81 and has hit for more total bases than any other player with 115.

Last of Yanks' Veterans Pass

NEW YORK, Aug. 21--The last of the old guard of the Yankees was formally laid to rest in the days of 1908 has passed. It went with the release of Jack Warhop and Sweeney into the veterans' club of the team, who with Charley Muller have been seen to join the Veterans' club in the International League.

Warhop and Sweeney both joined the Yankees in 1908, Warhop coming from the Williamsport club in the old Tri-State League, and Sweeney from Atlanta. Warhop first went to Detroit, but was traded to the Yankees.

Warhop has been known as one of the greatest pitchers in the big leagues. He has always shown wonderful nerve in his games and no batting order was as terrifying that he clinched it. In fact he is delighted in pitching to such men as Cobb, Crawford and Baker. Last season he had Baker's number and made him so sure that the home run king once threw his bat at Jack Warhop. Warhop has also been a good pitcher, but he has been the Leon Ames of the Yankees. He simply could not win for them many times. He pitched many a close game, but he was never a pitcher. His annual record never was a true record of his endurance. He pitched many a close game, and good ones, and lost through error. Jack had a lot of stuff, but he lacked luck. His pitching was not the only thing that kept him in the American League, except Maye.

Paige Pays Big Stock Dividend

Authorize the Distribution of Quarter Million Dollars—August 5% Cash Payment Also Ordered

Following the increase in capitalization from $1,000,000 to $1,000,000, directors of the Paige-Detroit Motor company, at a meeting held August 2, authorized the distribution of $250,000 par value of the new stock, pro rata among the company's stockholders in the form of a 100 per cent stock dividend. They also ordered the transfer of $250,000 from surplus account to capital stock as part of the operation. The remaining $500,000 of new stock, it was decided, is to be retained for the profit on the treasury of the company. The directors also declared a cash dividend of 5 per cent for the month of August on the old and new stock payable September 10 to stockholders of record August 15. The directors also authorized the corporation will be able to make regular monthly dividend payments equivalent to at least 5 per cent on the stock outstanding.

This belief seems to meet cooperation in the fact that for three or four months the company has been paying dividends of 10 per cent, exclusive of the 5 per cent authorized August 2, the company's dividend payments for the current year aggregate 45 per cent on the original outstanding capital stock of $250,000. While this is especially good news to Paige stockholders and of general interest because it reflects excellent business conditions, Paige officials also have been of particular interest to Paige business men because of the expansion of the Paige business under the leadership of President H. M. Jewett, however, he personally informed each and every one of the stockholders of the Paige organization of the steps taken to meet this situation and has given them his assurance that the company is rapidly placing itself in a position to take care of extra dividends to the extent of 10 per cent, but that the stock, four-year addition to the plant is 100,000 bearing completion. The building will be used exclusively for the warehousing of surplus stock. The mechanical conveyor system of assembling will soon be in operation. When this is ready, the Paige will have a capacity of 125 cars a day.

Kid Jockey Is Proving "Find"

SEBASTOIA, Aug. 21.—His name is July, yes, he is called "Punch" and weighs in for John W. Schorr, and weighs in at sixty-two pounds. He is a little apprentice who has not ridden more than twenty races, but that is the bunk. The jockey club has passed a rule that no kid under sixteen years of age is to ride under any circumstances. July, who is sixteen years old, has just made his debut. He had been admitted from Kansas City. He has no trainer, but has been fitted in the saddle this season. John W. Schorr paid $1,000 for the contract. A few months ago he had won several races at the present meeting on outsiders.

July is a jockey by accident. He was not brought up around horses, as was little Paul Louder. His father is a doctor of the law in dear Kansas City and never had any interest in the thoroughbred. A girl named C. C. Catta, of whom nothing is known beyond his name, says July is a little fellow. Fred Schorr took him down to Barney Schreiber's farm at Sedalia, Mo., where he spent a week exercising. Then Lee Erb took him in town, and they went to Junes. July's debut was a little bit of a surprise to those who had seen him. He was ridden by the Scherr obtained his license for $100. July rode his first winner a few months ago. He was not well spotted and named, as Paul Louder says, "Not in the line of any of the boys." John Schorr has too much sense to know how to handle jockeys and apprentice jockeys.

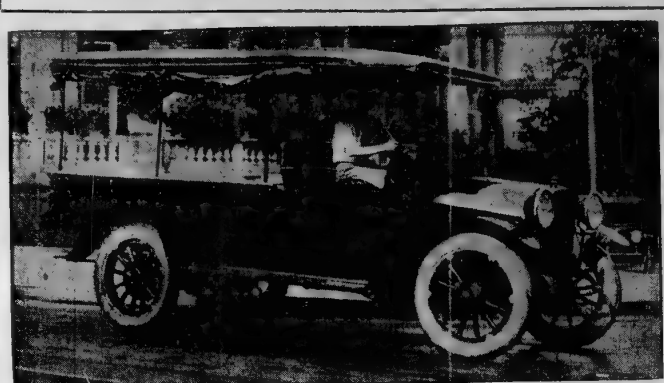

July sleeps out at the stables. He is an excellent horse every morning. He is a good converser and would tell all his stable money home to his mother. "He will make a great jockey," says John Schorr, "and he will not be spoiled around here. The trouble with the average young man is that as soon as he wins a few races the owner rides him down to his hat to dinner. I was riding him around in an auto and studied the kid an altogether false idea of his position."

Marsans to Play With Terriers

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—The injunction restraining Armando Marsans from playing with the St. Louis Federals was dissolved by Judge Dyer in the federal district court here Thursday and Marsans is to play ball with the Terriers of the St. Louis team. Judge Dyer in deciding the case considered only one of the three points raised by Marsans in his petition for the dissolution or dissolution of the injunction. This was that Marsans' contract with the Cincinnati Nationals was binding after October 1, 1914. Points that the Cincinnati club did not comply with its contract with Marsans and that the contract was not binding because it lacked in mutuality were not considered.

Technically the decision is a production and not a dissolution of the injunction. The court did not decide the entire question raised in the Marsans injunction suit, but set aside that part of the injunction that restrained Marsans from playing with any other team in 1914 or 1915. The decision reserves for final decision the question of the mutuality of Marsans' contract with Cincinnati, that is the ten day clause, but sets forth that clause eight of the contract applies only to the season of 1914. The court held that this clause did not bind Marsans to play for Cincinnati during the 1915 and 1916 seasons, but held forth that the three year claim of Cincinnati to the Cuban player can not be grounded on this clause. An attorney for the Cincinnati club filed a motion for an appeal which will be heard by Judge Dyer today. An appeal, it was said, would serve to prevent Marsans from playing with the St. Louis Federals pending a decision by the circuit court of appeal.

NEWCOMER IN MOTOR TRUCK FIELD

The Johnson Motor Car company of this city has contracted to handle the new pleasure cars and trucks in this section. Above is one of the truck models in the distributor. The appearance has created considerable favorable comment, and the company expects it to prove a winner with local truck purchasers. The company proposes to make an active campaign toward introducing this truck among local users.

A. C. M., Boston, Mass. I have a Hopkins & Allen revolver, Safety Police, 5-inch barrel, .38 S. & W. What makes it break open when it is fired? Answer: You would advise me of the accurate shooting range of 25-35 Winchester carbine and also the extreme range of same. Is the .38-35 too large enough for deer, bear and elk? Answer: The accurate shooting range of the .38-35 cartridge is about 300-400 yards. The ultimate range would be in the neighborhood of 10,000 feet. A number of these rifles are used for deer and bear, and also for elk, but if you are going after this game particularly, it is best to use a heavier cartridge.

E. H., Punzoutawney, Pa. A few months ago I came in possession of a gun the caliber of which I have been unable to find out. It is a bolt action; model 1874, has a 24-inch round barrel, a box magazine for four or five cartridges. This frame is of the breach of the barrel, "P. Stevens is Maas tricht," and I believe it is 24, and I do not know whether this is the caliber or not. Answer: I do not identify it from the markings. It would suggest that you make a cast of the chamber. This can be done either with paraffine wax or better with a mixture of sulphur and graphite, sulphur three parts, graphite one part. Send the cast to one of the ammunition manufacturers and see if they cannot identify the cartridge.

Dalton Regains Form With Bat

Outfielder Who Deserted Dodger for Outlaws Is Just Now Showing Real Stride With Stick

ST. PAUL, Aug. 21.—"That boy will lead the Federal league in hitting before the season is over," said Secretary Jack Kelly, who was watching a recent game from the press box at Federal field. The "boy" was "Coiled" Jack Dalton, the Bud-Feder right fielder, and when Kelly made his prediction Dalton had just made his second hit of the day off Crandall, the only two hits made off the ex-Cincinnati twirler that day, in twelve innings.

"He's hitting about .395 now, according to the latest averages," continued Kelly. "But in reality he is hitting about .400, and barring an injury, he should hit that way for the rest of the season. If he does he will show Benny Kauff, Lee Magee, Steve Evans and company what real hitting is. Dalton is a hitter who, once he gets into his proper stride, no pitching in the world can stop him. Three or four weeks ago he was hitting .400, and barring an injury, he would do what was wrong with Dalton. But just before we started on the western trip Jack started to wobble the pill to all corners of the lot, and his work at bat was one of the bright spots of the trip.

"Bringing an average of .345 up to close to the .500 mark in a month means that a player must hit almost 400 and that's what Dalton has done. All pitchers have looked alike to him, and now when Crandall is having one of those 'bad' seasons, Jack comes in with his usual two hits. Dalton has always been a .300 hitter, leading the National league in hitting in 1914 for five months, when his wrist was broken. This season he had a little trouble rounding into first-class shape, but he is 'right' now and the hurlers will have a big job on their hands to stop him. Dalton led the International league in hitting when with the Newark club. He is a natural hitter, and if he has a weakness it seems that the National and Federal league twirlers haven't found it.

"Jack is extraordinarily fast for such a big man. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and in his college days he was a crack sprinter and a great football player. He is giving Manager Legg every ounce of his weight and should prove one of the most valuable men on the club before the season closes."

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 21.—Johnny Ertle, of St. Paul, had a slight shade over Eddie Coulon of New Orleans in a fast ten-round bout here Friday. The boys are bantamweights and it was announced before the start that the winner would meet "Kid" Williams, world champion bantamweight, in a ten-round bout here September 8. Williams has signed for the bout.

Berg Safety Steering Device Proving Popular

"There is no longer any danger in driving a Ford automobile." Or that is what Mr. Wiley H. Young says about the matter, and from the demonstrations that he has been giving with his Berg safety steering device, those who heard him make the remark consider that he is mighty right about it. The Berg is a safety steering device that makes it almost impossible for the front wheels of the Ford to hit an object and be turned from the road. "It's simple and it's safe," said some of those who witnessed the demonstration. "The Berg holds the Ford in the road and relieves the muscular strain the driver has when driving along rough country roads."

George Kuhn Sets New Service Expense Record

Mr. George A. Kuhn, assistant secretary of the Astoria Trust and Savings company of Indianapolis, Ind., has driven a Pathfinder standard car over $1,000 miles at a service expense of $1.90. "This is a great record," says Mr. Kuhn, "but it's not my record with my Pathfinder Six since May, 1915 until July 1, 1916. During this time I have run 14,000 miles on my present car, but throughout the east and Canada, and I have averaged 15 miles per gallon. The Pathfinder is extremely easy on tires. I have run 14,000 miles on my present set of Kelly-Springfield Kant-Bip tires. The service expense on the Pathfinder is superior to any car I have ever owned and I have driven cars for nine years."

Syracuse Eleven to Set One Record Sure

The members of the Syracuse university football team will be able to qualify as veteran globe trotters when the 1916 gridiron season has ended. No sixteen college eleven of recent years has faced so many and as long-jumping as the Orange schedule calls for this fall, with a season which begins at home on September 25 and ends at Portland, Ore., on December 8.

The team starts touring on October 5 when Princeton will be played at Princeton. The following Saturday Rochester will be met at home and a week later the Salt City eleven will go to Providence to face Brown in a game that will be visited on October 30, for the purpose of playing Yale, a member of Michigan gridiron clan. The first two Saturdays of November will be spent at Syracuse entertaining Mr. Colman and Colman's team. Dartmouth will follow on November 20 and then the Orange eleven will tour westward. Thanksgiving day will see the team engaged with the University of Montana players at Missoula and on December 1 Syracuse will close an exceedingly busy season by tackling the Oregon Agricultural college team at Portland, Ore.

Studebaker Is Shipping Cars

At the Rate of Two Trainloads Daily to Their Branches. This in Addition to Other Shipments

In addition to other shipments Studebaker has adopted the plan of consigning two trainloads of the new models each day to their branches, from which the cars are passed along to dealers.

Accordingly on last Monday two trainloads of the new Studebaker models were under way for other branches, and on Wednesday another double trainload was sent out, this program to continue until branch issues will have received its quota of cars. The demand for 1918 models has been so great, that, although working day and night, the enormous Studebaker plants at Detroit and South Bend have been unable to meet the situation. "Because of the changes in the new models," said Mr. L. Oillet, the sales manager, "naturally our production was somewhat delayed. But we are now producing each day more cars than were produced in any one day last year, and every day an increase. With the great reduction in prices, while at the same time increasing the quality and power of the new models, we of course expected a large demand for the cars, but really never anticipated our sales at this early date."

There is there any indication of a slackening up in the buying of cars over the country, so far as reports from our agencies indicate. "Having attained a production that makes possible the shipment of two trainloads of cars daily to branch houses, while at the same time taking care of other agencies to a speedy extent, give ample assurance of reasonably prompt deliveries to purchasers of the new models."

The completion and occupancy of a new building at Plant 1 in Detroit, to be known as number 37, work on which is being expedited to the fullest extent possible, will greatly facilitate Studebaker production. The building is of the most modern type, providing nearly 100,000 additional square feet of floor space. It will house the enameling and stamping department of the factories, and it is to be equipped with special machinery for greatly augmenting manufacturing. Additional over-see work in the finish of enameled parts used on cars are also in these new quarters.

Manila Man Buys His Third Pathfinder

W. E. Stalnaker, vice president and director of sales of the Pathfinder company received a call last week from I. L. Cook, of Manila, Philippine Islands, who is the owner of two Pathfinders in the division of the bureau of public works and has given them continuous service for several years. He purchased another Pathfinder while at the factory and said: "I am purchasing my third Pathfinder because of the wonderful service these cars have given me. They are the most beautiful cars in Manila. One car has been used for over-hauling speed fiends and has never failed to catch them. Pathfinder cars are powerful and are regarded highly in the Philippine Islands."

Mr. Cook drove his new Pathfinder Single Six overland to New Orleans where he embarked for Manila.

MODERN MOTOR TRUCK SAVES TIME, TROUBLE AND MONEY FOR USERS

Sure Profits Come from Quicker Method Which Has Replaced Horse-Drawn Vehicles Throughout Country

This is the age of the motor truck, just as it is the age of the automobile; and this is true because it has been found that the motor-driven vehicle is a saver of time, money and energy. The motor truck was not welcomed with wide-open arms by the owners of wagon teams, when the truck first made its appearance—rather, it was regarded with a degree of suspicion. It had to prove itself, make its worth actually a known fact, demonstrate what it could do, before it began to sell.

The motor truck has proven itself to the satisfaction of most men who have a use for its services, and it is the purpose of this article to show how that has been done, how the work that was done with wagons and horses has been lightened and made easier, and, perhaps, to point out to you new ways in which you, the Atlanta business man, or the Georgia farmer, as the case may be, can make the motor truck pay you.

THE WIDE RANGE OF ITS USES

There seems to be no limit to the uses to which the motor truck can be put—it is used with satisfactory results by every class of business man and by farmers who produce different kinds of food products; and the work of all is done better and with greater ease.

The truck farms of counties adjoining Fulton have been brought within an hour of Atlanta's produce exchange by the motor truck; and the same power which has brought the fresh milk and cream of dairies in neighboring communities to within a few minutes of Atlanta's homes, the groceries the housewife orders in the morning, the hat that she buys towards mid-day, the necessities that she sends a rush order for late in the afternoon—they are all delivered to her quickly and in good condition by the motor trucks of Atlanta's business houses.

LAND VALUES INCREASED

There was a time when the value of a farm depended almost entirely on its nearness to the market or shipping point. Now the markets are being brought within range by means of automobile transportation and more land made available.

Not only are motor-driven vehicles being used for the direct transportation of food-stuffs, but they find just as much of a field of usefulness on the farm. In the gathering of the produce, and in the numerous capacities formerly occupied by horses, in the rapid carrying of peaches, tomatoes and other products which are canned, the truck has made it possible to eliminate a tremendous waste and loss in handling. One hundred bushels of wheat or potatoes is now carried to the railroad station five to ten miles distant, and fertilizer, lime, feed, lumber, etc., brought back with the same facility, which formerly 20 bushels were carried, and in one-fifth of the time.

A TRUCK FOR EVERY USE

The wide range of sizes in which the motor trucks that are proving such a boon to American business are built, makes it possible for nearly every business man and every farmer to own and operate a truck with profit. For the man who needs a light, small truck, light, small ones are built, and the cost is little; for the man who needs a medium-size vehicle, with a little more horse-power than the smaller ones are equipped with, medium size trucks are built, and the cost is nominal; for the one who needs a large, high-powered machine, these are built, and always the cost is low, when the results to be obtained are considered.

COST OF OPERATION SMALL

The cost of operation, which includes maintenance and upkeep, oils and gasoline, is small when compared with the cost of feeding the number of horses or mules necessary to take the place of the truck.

TRUCK SAVES $1,100 OVER HORSES IN FIFTEEN MONTHS

The Commercial Car Journal tells the story of a dairy farmer who, fifteen months ago, disposed of his teams and replaced them with a 40-horsepower truck. He averages about 30 miles each day, and claims that the truck has taken the place of six horses and two wagons, one man handling the deliveries that formerly two were required. As an example of the daily routine, with a boy as "hopper," that is, to jump off and on the truck and put the milk on the porches, the car covered 30.5 miles in two hours and fifty-five minutes, during which time seventy-five gallons of milk were delivered, all of which was put up in quart and pint bottles.

The owner has figured the cost of delivering with a motor truck, as compared with the delivery by horses and wagons, and the following is his statement of the comparative costs, together with the saving which the motor truck has made for him:

First truck cost	$1,200.00
Gas for 15 months	250.00
Oil	45.00
Tires	175.00
Repairs	75.00
Making a total of	$1,745.00
Credit allowed on new car	500.00
Total expense for 15 months	$1,245.00
As compared with team delivery:
Three teams, 15 months at $15 per month	$675.00
Extra man, 15 months at $50 per month	750.00
Original cost of horses	450.00
Cost of two wagons and harness	470.00
Making a total of	$2,345.00
Leaving a balance in favor of the truck	$1,100.00

In commenting on this report in a letter to Kimball's Dairy Farmer, the owner states:

"You will note that I am figuring the cost of team very low. With the truck we can place our milk on the market in less than one-half the time required when using teams, which has almost entirely eliminated complaints. Living in a do, eight miles from the heart of the business district, we are enabled to place our milk in the homes of our customers within 3 to 15 hours from the time it is milked, thus putting us in a position to secure the highest price for our product."

FRUIT GROWER'S TRUCK PAID FOR ITSELF IN FOUR MONTHS

Fruit growers over the country are beginning to realize the assistance that trucks offer to successful handling and marketing of their products, and while a comparatively small number of Georgia fruit growers have fallen in line with the progressive march of the times and have begun to use motor trucks in moving their fruit, there are many thousands of others who could find a profitable use for them.

In many instances a systematic analysis of local conditions and an intelligent use of the truck as a delivery medium will bring added profits from an orchard. Such was the experience of Mr. B. Oliver, owner of the Lake View Fruit Farm, at Orchard Lake, who has his best market in Detroit, but that city is thirty miles distant from the orchard, and one trip with a team and load of forty or fifty bushels of apples was a long day's work. There are one or two markets much nearer the farm, but to deliver his fruit there or sell the truck outright to commission merchants meant a much smaller margin of profit on the crop.

Last fall, with 6,000 bushels of apples to dispose of and the logical market just out of reach, he figured that the only way to boost his profits was to invest a little money, so he bought a motor truck and moved the entire crop to Detroit, where he received from 25 cents to 40 cents more per bushel than if he had sold them at the farm. The truck, which is a one and a quarter ton, made two round trips per day, 80 bushels to the load. Figuring at 25 cents, which was the lowest amount of additional profit received per bushel, his truck has made him a net profit of $1,500 and paid for itself in the four months it has been in service. He has been to no expense whatever for repairs on his truck, and it has never failed to make the sixty-mile trip, even in the snow, which has been the heaviest in that section of Michigan in years.

Similar experiences are frequently heard of from all fruit-growing sections of the country, and it begins to seem that the motor truck is taking a most important part in the successful handling of crops. As in the instance of Mr. Oliver, his truck has enabled him not only to get his apples to the right market, but to get them there when the market was best.

TO THE GEORGIA PEACH AND APPLE GROWERS:
This is merely a suggestion that those of you who live within a radius of thirty or forty miles of Atlanta, Macon, Augusta, Columbus, or any one of the other thousand and one cities or towns of Georgia, might be able to make a motor truck pay you in the same proportion that it paid Mr. Oliver. If you are a truck farmer, you could use the truck to the same good advantage, and in fact, the truck is almost a necessity for you. IF YOU CAN USE A TRUCK TO ADVANTAGE, IT WILL PAY YOU TO BUY ONE.

If you can do your work better, more quickly, and at less expense by the use of a motor truck, then buy one. It will pay you to do so. Atlanta has dealers for all the principal trucks, and you can get your truck in any size and with any horse power needed. By all means, if you need a truck, buy it. It will pay you and will pay you big.

YOUNG HELMSMAN MAKES SWIFT ASCENT TO FAME

DETROIT, Aug. 21.—Gene Stratton Porter's "checkers" had some nerve, but he wasn't one, two, three with Johnny Miot, whom they call "Freckles" up around Algona.

Johnny went to Manassas bay, Long Island, with the Detroit syndicate's speedboat, Miss Detroit, as a mere helper—just to polish her up and groom her. He stood on the barge she was moved to, costless and halless Saturday afternoon, just eight minutes before the race started. Through some hitch, there was nobody to drive the boat. "What's the matter with Johnny driving her?" one of the men working on the boat suggested. Johnny did it. And he won the event in a "common contest."

The truck followers praise it. As he said afterward, he had never before, and it is supposed to take months, if not years, of experience to guide a jumping, lurching craft that fairly leaps over the water. "Never" even held an automobile wheel" he was asked. "None," he replied. Then he added, after some thought: "I've driven a Ford."

DIDN'T STRAY THE SCENERY.
They strapped a life preserver around Johnny before he started and pulled a lever over his ears, but he didn't have any goggles or gloves to grip the wheel with and keep his hands from burning or his knees from getting black and blue from bumping against the wheel. All the experienced drivers had these things. He just sent Miss Detroit up the course a half mile and he became the star of the sun boomed out, while she coughed and spat. Then they were off. He was over the starting line, but he didn't know it. He just followed the Baby Reference V, which Commodore J. Stuart

READ WHAT SOME OF MY CURED AND SATISFIED PATIENTS SAY

Science is on the wing. Treatments used one year ago are back numbers now to be forgotten. NOTCH Specialist requires not only skill and energy, but insight. The public is not satisfied with the doctor who sticks in the OLD RIG, and who prepares to let his patients die because of all the great discoveries as soon as they are perfected. My patients are my business. They pay for my PREVENTION and announcements or because I have cured some of their friends.

Every testimonial is in file in my office. I favor public testimonials without consent of patient. EXTRACTS FROM A FEW OF MANY SWORN TESTIMONIALS.

 It is quite apparent that the Arabic was not conveyed.

Generally speaking, the American public is with Wilson even before he decides what to do.

It is a long way to peace, and a long way, too, to the time when we shall cut hearing Tjerry on the phonograph in the next block.

A Call to Americanism.

Never since the outbreak of the European war and seldom before in our nation's entire history has there been so high a call for a united, unswerving Americanism. Germany's latest blow against the rights and lives of our citizens brings to a fateful crisis an issue that long has been ominous and tense. The sinking of the Lusitania was a crime against civilization and humanity; and because it has never been atoned or acknowledged, because its perpetrator has gone indifferently, even haughtily on, the sinking of the Arabic, in all essentials a repetition of the Lusitania outrage, becomes insufferable to a free and righteous Government.

In the light of present circumstances, a continuance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany appears impossible. Just what course events will take, no one now can foresee. But there is one thing that every loyal American can do, and that is to stand staunchly, heart and soul, behind the President. In this country there is no place for hyphenated citizens; there is no place for any man who holds the interest of a foreign nation more dear than the United States.

Within the last six or eight months millions of money have been raised for Prussian propaganda in America, and there has been a persistent campaign to infect our people with Kaiserism. The hour has come when this must cease. The rights and honor of the United States have been challenged, they have been defiled wantonly and brutally. No true citizen of the United States can have another moment of divided allegiance or sympathy.

To stand by the Administration, to let the world know that Americans are all for America—that is the supreme duty of the day. And in this united spirit, we can trust our Government to take the course of wisdom and honor.

The Drift in the Dardanelles.

Diplomatic as well as military developments point to a hastening of events at the Dardanelles. Italy is reported to have sent what is virtually an ultimatum to Turkey; Bulgaria is reported to have reached an agreement with the Allies and to be massing troops on the Turkish frontier; and Turkey itself is reported on the verge of seeking a separate peace. Any one of these incidents would be significant; to get both, they flame with portent.

It was practically foregone at the outset that soon or late Italy would engage in the Dardanelles campaign. Her interests in the Mediterranean and also in the Aegean argued that to end. Her first task as a new member of the Entente alliance was to gain substantial ground in Austria, both for the purpose of weakening the common enemy and also of protecting her own frontiers. That accomplished, her next stroke obviously would be to join in the attack on the gateway to the Bosphorus and the Black Sea.

The invasion of Austria has progressed to such an extent that Italy now holds more Austrian territory than she demanded as the price of her neutrality. True, her campaign in Italy and the Trentino is not completed, but it has reached a stage at which she can bide her time and turn a portion of her resources to all the important work of piercing the Dardanelles. Several weeks ago it was announced that Italy soon would send half a million or more troops either to France or the Gallipoli peninsula, the latter being the more likely destination. The fact that there had been no declaration of war between Italy and Turkey was unimportant. That formally could be attended to when occasion required; and now, it seems, the occasion is ripe. "The rights of Italian residents in Turkish domains have been disregarded. Italy has been very tolerant toward these indignities, but self-respecting Government cannot allow its citizens to be mistreated indefinitely." So, in effect, spoke Rome, with an ironic glance at Constantinople.

"Italy would regret being forced to attack Turkey, but if Turkish wrong continue"—and so on, while the bewildered and gasping Turk brought his Teutonic overlords for Allah's sake to rush munitions.

Whether or not the latest Italian note is an ultimatum, there is scant doubt that the British and French army at Gallipoli soon will be reinforced by Italian troops. The Allies keenly appreciate the need of a decisive blow at this crucial juncture of the war, and the Dardanelles evidently is the point at which to strike.

The development in Bulgaria is even more significant than the Italian drift. If it be true that an understanding between Bulgaria and the Allies has been reached, the Balkan knot is disentangled. The concessions which the Allies are supposed to have offered Bulgaria must be approved, of course, by Serbia and Greece; but Serbia is tractable, and Greece under the restored guidance of Venizelos is expected to continue unbending. Bulgaria heretofore has presented the stubbornest problem of the Allies' diplomacy in the Near East. If she at last is satisfied, Rumania, who has hesitated to venture far until Bulgaria's course was assured, will be free to join the Allies and attack Austria in accordance with her inclination. The isolation of the Teutonic Powers thus will be complete. Literally they will be walled in. Their source of food imports will be cut off on the east as well as on the west and north and south. Their hope of opening a path to aid despairing Turkey will be shattered. The beginning of their end will be marked.

For weeks past, it has been rumored that the defense of the Dardanelles is crumbling. Under German command the Turks have fought effectively, but their munitions have dwindled and dwindled until now, it is said, the supply is almost exhausted. That Germany has realized the desperateness of the situation is evidenced by her repeated appeals and threats to Rumania who has denied a right of way for the shipment of munitions to Turkey. It has been reported, indeed, that the Teutons were preparing for a giant drive against Serbia to clear a road to their Turkish ally; but if Bulgaria has been won over, to the Entente Powers, that attempt would be very difficult and costly. In any event, it appears that Turkey is nearing the end of its resources, so that reports of peace proposals from Constantinople are credible.

It is doubtful, however, that the Allies would make any important concessions to Turkey for the surrender of the Dardanelles at a time when that stronghold is nearing its fall. If they are assured of winning the whole stake by fighting a few weeks longer, they will hardly be disposed to complicate the future by present bargains with the enemy.

In moral as well as military value, the capture of the Dardanelles would come near being the decisive event of the war. It would be worth incomparably more to the Allies than was the fall of Warsaw to the Teutons. It would go far toward relieving Russia's handicaps and perils, and in one way or another would strengthen the Allies in every field of the struggle. It is with peculiar interest, therefore, that the latest reports from Italy and Bulgaria and Turkey are received.

Bulgaria mobilizes and Italy threatens Turkey on an average of at least three days a week.

It is significant of the president that he can visit his outfit or play a game of golf calmly and still stick to the job.

Germany has discovered that the cost of war has exceeded her previous estimates. War is like everything else. It costs more than you think.

Those Who Buy Our Cotton.

Cotton exports in July, 1915, according to the Manufacturers Record, were practically double those in July, 1914. Two hundred and forty-three thousand, five hundred and twenty-two bales were shipped abroad this July, and only one hundred and twenty-six thousand, two hundred and eleven bales in July a year ago.

Of the cotton exports last month, 88,944 bales went to England, 27,209 bales to France, and 52,995 bales to Italy. In July, 1914, 41,291 bales were shipped to Germany. This July no cotton went directly to Germany, though a considerable amount is supposed to have reached that country by circuitous ways. It should be noted, however, that the increased shipments to France and Italy during July, 1915, overbalanced by more than thirteen thousand bales the recorded loss of July exports to Germany.

In the light of these figures, it is not apparent how an embargo on trade between the United States and the Allies would help the cotton interests of the South. It is not apparent wherein the South would profit by a breach with those countries which are taking virtually all the cotton that is being shipped across the Atlantic.

Earl Kitchener is on the western front, but the heralded "drive" is still conspicuous by its absence.

Terrible is the thought that we must pay more for champagne, but those with a beer income will manage to worry along.

Going too Far.

No trustworthy, intelligent newspaper in any part of the Union has deplored Georgia's recent tardy and shame more deeply or condemned it more severely than the newspapers of Georgia itself. With one or two obscure and ignoble exceptions, the daily and weekly press of this State has spoken with all the power and earnestness at its command, denouncing the mob and urging that the guilty be brought to justice. As with our representative journals, so with our right-minded people there is no disposition to extenuate the crime or to evade the issue. On the contrary, there is insistent demand that this terrible matter be dealt with as the State's honor and well-being require.

In these circumstances, we feel warranted in saying a word to those scornful and rabid outsiders who are vilifying Georgia in sheer malice and are manifesting a spirit as violent and evil as that of the mob itself. Here, for example, is a characteristic passage from an editorial in the Montgomery (Alabama) Advertiser of August the eighteenth:

"The time has come for the Great Seal of the State of Georgia to be taken down and broken. It bears the words 'Wisdom, Justice, Moderation.' The history of Georgia for the past two years has given the lie to its promise. They (the politicians and leaders) have raised up a class consciousness of lawlessness, with the lower orders running the gamut of violence, and protected by the men whom they elected to office and who had worked upon their prejudices."

On the very day that this malignant drive was printed, three persons were lynched in Alabama on the charge of having poisoned a mule. We suggest that the Montgomery Advertiser pause in its insane abuse of Georgia long enough to sweep the dirt from its own doorstep. We suggest that a newspaper in whose own State three persons were lynched in a single day for the offense of poisoning a mule can find abundant work at home, without turning to foul trades against a neighbor.

It will be well also for self-righteous critics in every part of the country, whether North, East or West, to search their own dark corners and record and denounce indiscriminately the entire people of Georgia. Such indecent balderdash as the Chicago Tribune has vented against the South is unworthy of any self-respecting newspaper in America; it is unworthy of even the Chicago Tribune itself.

The thoughtful people of Georgia realize the grave issue which confronts them, and they are resolved to grapple it with all the patriotism and moral vigor they can muster. They alone can solve this problem, and to solve it they are determined. They represent the true spirit of our State, and by them will Georgia be judged in the minds of all fair Americans.

Editorial Echoes

Julia Marlowe is through with the stage. She is sick of menu cards and bell boys, of pomp and ceremony. And now she is going to have a home that will stay put, a fireplace, a couple of dogs, a few servants, friends and peace. We say this because we take her word for it, at the end of time remember the experience of Margaret Illington who quit the stage for the cottage home, for husband, cats, etc., only to return in less than a twelve-month to the world of misery. All of which is an argument either for or against the simple life. It is an argument merely that what lies farthest dreams best.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

No one in this country has been in ignorance of the great effort being made by Germany to bend the United States to her will. The elaborate scheme to "run" this Government from Berlin has been known to all men, and the World has performed good service in producing documentary proof. Proof is what is needed at this time. Germany lost control of the sea through the inadequacy of its navy—therefore the United States must be compelled by the coercive power of money and agitation to restore to Germany the control of the seas! Germany had all the munitions needed to wage war—therefore the American merchants must be compelled to cease selling munitions in the open market! Our Government bullied and threatened, our foreign policy to be "made in Germany." Where the "Kaiser touch" could swing Americans susceptible to flattery the "Kaiser touch" was applied. Where the dim of coin would prove effective the coin clinched. The "invincible army" remained invincible only while the designs of the precious crew of conspirators were being formed. Then the mask was dropped and forged passports and other measures were adopted as naturally as though the operators were in Berlin. So it went. It is a revelation which should stir this Government to action.

Germany appears to have assumed that President Wilson would tolerate anything. The exposure should go and there should be a house cleaning in the diplomatic corps. For this matter drives at the very heart of national decency and popular self-respect. This Government must be conducted by Americans and not by Germans.—New York Herald.

If the Zeppelin raids are not going to have the effect of scaring the English almost to death and demoralizing the nation, what can be the gain or profit to the Germans? As the invasions are later made at night on fortified places is the objective; that is to say, military successes. It is in coming out at night that the Zeppelins are at their best. The only result is the killing and maiming of a score or two noncombatants at the most, and the majority are women and children. What is the effect of this sort of savagery except to rouse a spirit of revenge in the people attacked in such a cowardly way? If it were the desire of the German Government, which permits this revolting kind of warfare, and gives in it, to stimulate recruiting in England and ultimately bring in conscription service, these frequent Zeppelin raids would be comprehensible. If they are frequent in the General Staff will convict itself of an obtuseness which even its enemies have not suspected of it.—New York Sun.

President of Georgia Bankers Indorse the Journal's Stand on Cotton Shipment Question

(ED. NOTE.—The Journal has received access of letters from every part of Georgia and the South, commending its editorial on the shipping question. Because of the personal nature of the matter, and because of the fact that we have not published them. But the following communication is of such interest and significance that we deem it desirable to reproduce it herewith.)

Editor of the Journal:—I have read with my attention called to your most excellent editorial of August 13, headed "Senator Smith's Mistake," which I most heartily commend for the way in which it has set forth the present cotton situation.

My failure to see this article when first published was caused by my attendance at the Southern States Banking conference held in Galveston, Tex., on the 14th. The very purpose of this conference was to devise plans for gradually marketing the cotton crop and financing same. It was regarded that England would declare cotton contraband and that their action might result in demoralization of prices and a repetition of the kind of England's attitude had previously taken to take retaliatory measures, if necessary, to see that our cotton exports had the freedom of the seas, and therefore shared Senator Smith's views on the subject. Permit me to say, however, I had my views much broadened when coming in contact with many of our strongest, sanest and conservative bankers, representing nearly every southern State. Even one of them was deeply interested in the South and desire to do all they can to prevent cotton from selling at distress prices and who would all be benefited in higher prices to the producer.

There was a universal sentiment in this conference that nothing should be done in any way which would injure the cotton grower by resolutions, memorials, or otherwise; but that the confidence in the president was such that all believed our interest would be safeguarded in his hands, thus leaving him free to handle the situation in a broad way for the good of the entire nation.

It was the unanimous opinion of those attending this conference that the South was in better shape financially which together with the promised aid of the Federal reserve bank and other financial institutions would be fully equal to handling the situation provided the farmers would warehouse and insure their cotton, so it could be used as a reserve.

So, Mr. Editor, let us face the situation squarely, but do not lose our heads, for if the co-operation of the president in the administration of his policy is successful, we will get a reasonably fair price for cotton and not a bale of distress cotton need upon the market.

There is no occasion for our becoming pessimistic. What we need is courage and good "old-fashioned" common sense. The cotton situation is not so bad as then your editorial of the 13th veritably stirs the old Anglo-Saxon blood in our veins which we most cordially endorse and say Amen!

Yours very truly,
 F. S. ETHERIDGE,
 President Georgia Bankers' Association,
 Jackson, Ga., Aug. 19, 1915.

Queretaro, Mexico, ever the center of the most dramatic incidents in the history of the land of the Montezumas, has just fallen out of the hands of one revolutionary faction and into the possession of another.

Its narrow, stone-paved streets now echo to the tread of the troops of one faction and now another. Its many churches, erected during the centuries when Spain grew rich from the mines of Mexico, are listening to the tread of the marching cavalry of the north that has paused here to do penance. In the Plaza de la Independencia, where Maximilian was executed, the center of the town, where the bookshelves offer many old and quaint volumes and the opal vendors harvest many an illegitimate dollar from the tourist.

Queretaro is the gateway from the north to Mexico City, 170 miles away. It rests upon a high plateau which is undecided as to whether it shall be a productive plain or a desert. A composite of the Aztecs who built it and the Spaniards who followed, largely untouched by the new influences of Mexico, Queretaro, pink-walled and red-tiled, is set like a gem in the clear air of central Mexico.

Just back of the city stands the chapel, which, a decade ago, the Austrian government built to mark the centenary of the battle of the Marston, the emperor for a day, faced a firing squad of which Victoriano Huerta, recently president of Mexico, and now President of the United States, were members. That most fantastic vision of one-man conquest that the modern world has known.

Queretaro is also the cradle of Mexican independence. Here stands a building that is virtually the Independence Hall of that nation. In it the conspiracy was hatched that freed the nation from Spain. Here today may be seen the last through the keyhole of a woman whispered the word that led to the birth of a nation.

Great emphasis is laid upon the importance of keeping the heads, and especially the finger nails, as clean as possible, and there are many places along the front where the arrival of the official manure is a regular feature. These manures have the same in common with the dairy blouses who inhabit the majority of our barber shops. They are men interested with the habit of keeping the hair on the neck and preventing their finger nails from getting long enough to harbor dirt and disease germs. Chiropractors advise the men regularly to attend to their feet, and it is not that these whose hair in the condition warrants it, are sent to the rear to be cared for.

Hope and Memory.

Ah, Campbell, yes; a beautiful scene
 Entrancing meets the captured eye
 Where gazing on the peak, serene
 Dim-outlined on a distant sky.
 But Rogers tells us, just as sweet,
 The summit gained, to stand and gaze
 Down on the plain from which our feet
 Climbed, step by step, the rugged ways.

Anticipating forward points the view
 And glides with happiness;
 Live right, and retrospection, too,
 Will charm us none the less.

Quips and Quiddities

A story is told of an Irishwoman who tried to wash her clothes from the public house by employing her brother to act the part of a ghost and frighten John on his way home.

"Who are you, the girlman, and the apparition arose before him from behind a bush."

"I am Au Nick!" was the reply.

"Come away, man," said John, not daunted; "give a shake of your head—I am married tale a sister of yours."

"Were any of your boyish ambitions ever realized?" asked the sentimentalist.

"Yes," replied the practical person. "When my mother used to cut my hair I often wished I might be baldheaded."

National Defense Problems.

JUST now when the nation is turning its attention to the problem of increasing the size of its army and navy are the lessons that have been learned on European battlefields in fighting disease—both enemy and what barred-wire entanglements and aeroplanes scout avails not—of particular importance.

Determined not to overlook anything in the solution of war-making which would strengthen the military arm of the United States in time of national conflict, Uncle Sam gave orders to the military authorities that he sent to take lessons in the school of the great war; to pay special attention to sanitation. For it is recalled, the most formidable of the Madagascan campaign in 1894 where, out of 14,000 men he killed, 7,000 died of disease, while only twenty-nine were killed in battle.

During the first six weeks of the Spanish-American war some 300 men were killed by the enemy, while about 4,000 died of disease—a proportion of about fourteen to one.

With the exception of the Franco-German war, where the Germans lost only two men by disease to every five killed in battle, the Russo-Japanese war was the first conflict in modern history where the average of those who died from sickness was less than one for every actual fighting. Here the Japanese achieved the remarkable record of having only one man die from disease out of every four killed in battle, a result obtained by putting into practice the lessons of sanitation taught by the western war.

The two great causes of sickness in an army, aside from injuries resulting from wounds, are improper diet and infection by disease germs. Inasmuch as it is known that the man who eats the most and who succumb to disease much sooner than he who is strong and healthy, the first care of the modern army surgeon is to see that the food supplied is sufficient in quantity, clean and nutritious. No credit due to the medical corps, therefore, is credit due for the superb condition of the majority of the troops battling in the theater of the present war. It is also to the excellent work of the commissary department, which has the burden of supplying the right kind of food to the men who serve the guns.

The influence which the medical corps may wield upon the life of a nation has, perhaps, never been better illustrated than when the man who has the best of her largest warships were useless because of the ravages of beri-beri. Doctor Takaki, a close student of the disease, had the good sense to have his men undertake the study of the diet of the American navy that it resulted from the absence of a substance now known as vitamin, which is found in the milk of rice and which he removed from the diet. The addition of the use of polished rice brought about the gradual lessening of the disease and, in 1887, beri-beri had almost disappeared from the navy, despite the increase in the number of fighting men.

The Japanese army, however, failed to profit by the lesson of the navy and, during the Russo-Japanese war, polished rice was served to the milkado's soldiers, with the result that beri-beri was comparatively prevalent among the land forces, while the navy was kept practically immune from that disease.

Cholera, dysentery and typhoid are to the western armies what beri-beri is to the orientals. The first of these has been practically eliminated through the most thorough medical care and, while one reports more that cholera is gaining ground in the American army, there is little confirmation of this report. Modern sanitation and up-to-date methods of fighting disease have had a hand in this, even if they have not entirely banished it and military medical experts have turned the major portion of their attention to typhoid, a menace that hides in milk and contaminated drinking water.

The greatest care is being exercised abroad to see that each of the millions of fighting men now in the field is supplied with pure drinking water. The Germans have a radio-active process for purifying water that has proved of immense value in dealing with rivers and open wells, but which has not been used near battlefields where the dead have lain for weeks unburied.

All the nations engaged in the war have issued strict instructions to their soldiers not to drink water which has not at least been filtered and, where possible, to wait until supplied with water purified by medical experts. But it is not always easy to restrain a thirsty man or weary soldier claim that the percentage of typhoid in the present war is surprisingly low, when the conditions of the streams in the vicinity of the battle-front is considered. The small percentage of typhoid is probably due to the excellent general condition of the fighting man and the great care exercised over them by the surgeons in charge.

The modern soldier, for example, is maintained at stated periods; his hair is closely cropped so that vermin and dirt are kept from the scalp. His uniform is examined and given attention that infection may be prevented and other handicaps to marching avoided. The men are encouraged to keep their feet clean and to change their shoes and stockings, or at least to remove these and allow their feet to rest. Baths are not as frequent as when the men are at home. Whenever a change of detail is effected and it is possible, the men are stripped and washed before being allowed to rest. In this way dirt, the arch-foe of health, is kept at a distance and the work of the surgeon greatly facilitated.

At times when it is impracticable for the men to bathe, they are instructed to rub every part of the body with a rough, scrubby soap which may remove a portion of the cuticle along with the dirt, but at least guarantees a certain degree of cleanliness, even under the most trying conditions.

Great emphasis is laid upon the importance of keeping the heads, and especially the finger nails, as clean as possible, and there are many places along the front where the arrival of the official manure is a regular feature. These manures have the same in common with the dairy blouses who inhabit the majority of our barber shops. They are men interested with the habit of keeping the hair on the neck and preventing their finger nails from getting long enough to harbor dirt and disease germs. Chiropractors advise the men regularly to attend to their feet, and it is not that these whose hair in the condition warrants it, are sent to the rear to be cared for.

The modern soldier is instructed not to expose his head to the direct rays of the sun and never to sleep on damp ground if it is possible to obtain branches or straw to cover it. He is warned against drinking too frequently and too freely while on the march and is given such useful hints as that of holding a leaf or pebble in the mouth when no water is available. A word, but an instruction, in the common-sense rules of hygiene which science has evolved.

The modern idea of prevention rather than cure has also changed the position of the medical corps during the advance of an army. Formerly the surgeon remained in the rear to care for the wounded, now a number of doctors accompany the first advance to inspect the wells and test the drinking water which must be used by the troops. The drinking places are labeled in three ways, according to the results of the inspection: "Use for drinking water," "Use for the making of coffee," "Use for washing only, not drinking." Occasionally there will appear the sign "garage-purified," which assures for itself a certain degree of purity. But the triumphs of modern medicine do not eclipse the triumphs of modern surgery, both in preventing death and in bringing about the rapid healing of the wounded.

WHITE CO. INCREASES SLICED BACON CAPACITY

Cornfield Sliced Bacon Trade Attains Large Proportions in One Year

One of the features of the business of the White Provision company that has in a very short time increased from a small beginning to very large proportions is its sliced bacon trade. The company ever since its organization has cured and put upon the market its famous Cornfield brand of breakfast bacon, but it was only one year ago that they began to market sliced Cornfield Bacon. The bacon is sliced by an electrically-run machine and is carefully packed in its one-pound cartons, then these cartons are packed in six and twelve-pound cases.

Mr. White also mentioned another feature of the Cornfield bacon which has its greatest result in the appearance of the consumer. It was noticed that all the men about the plant were happy and on the occasion of the visit of the Firing Line representative. "This sliced and uniform sliced and its attractive packing and appearance. Our sliced Cornfield bacon seems to be the only right way for a business man to start off the day, that with a proper allowance of Cornfield Bacon. It seems to produce a large degree of cheerfulness and disposition and optimism or outlook."

Mr. Malone, who was driving the car, turned it quickly toward the curb and threw out his arm to aid in warding off contact between the car and the man. The impact, however, drove his arm with such force against the car that it was broken. Mr. Malone's nerve and quickness, however, probably prevented serious injury to the street car passenger. The party who were with him all commended him highly for his exhibition of courage and alertness.

Atlanta Takes To Trouserettes

New Dancing Costume Is Praised by Atlanta Women as "Emancipation" in Feminine Dress.

TROUSERETTES as a part of the dancing costume were introduced to the East Lake Country club less than two weeks ago by Mrs. Julian Chase, of Inman Park. In the attractive dress in which she is shown here, she attended the mid-week dance at the club a week from last Thursday.

"In New York," said Mrs. Chase, "trouserettes are worn by everyone in dancing, and transparent dresses are worn by no one at all. The new costume allows greater freedom of movement, and possesses more grace and more modesty."

In this opinion she has the support of half a dozen Atlanta women who were interviewed last week. "I think," said one, "that the new dress is an 'emancipation' in women's styles. Before this we have worn uncomfortable fashions because someone or other thought they were modest. Now, in this new dancing costume, we have something that allows us to walk instead of mincing along. At the same time the new style is neither translucent nor awkward."

"I think trouserettes as a part of the dancing costume are preferable to the flimsy dress which is a means of 'exhibition,' instead of a form of clothing. Another, who is a well known club woman, said:

"I think dancing costumes went to an extreme in Atlanta this season and that some change is needed. The new costume seems to me sensible and becoming and much to be preferred to the rousamer style that makes you afraid to stand in a strong light. This is simply a return to the style of our grandmothers, and it is one I hope to see become popular."

Recent visitors to New York speak of the popularity of the new dancing dress. Miss Lucile Goodrich, a sister of Mrs. Julian Chase, in talking not long ago of dancing and of fashions said:

"Every one dances now with his shoulders instead of his feet. New York doesn't do the one-step any more. The old-fashioned waltz has replaced the hesitation. Every one does the fox trot and the pigeon walk. And they don't wear the 'see-through-'em dresses' either. No—trouserettes."

A Whitehall street merchant said this: "Trouserettes as a part of the dancing costume are not on our sales lists. But we expect the new costume to be in demand here by fall. Of course this fashion of dress isn't absolutely new to Atlanta. But as a style for every one, instead of just a few, it is entirely new."

Predictions are made that by fall the fashion of our grandmothers will be the prevailing style. Perhaps along with the trouserettes that peep below the dress, will go lace mittens and a poke bonnet.

MRS. JULIAN CHASE, of Inman Park, in the becoming costume she wore a week from last Thursday to the midweek dance at the East Lake Country club. Will trouserettes become a fashion in Atlanta this fall?

Why Can't I Ever Catch Up on Sleep?

Atlanta Doctor Advances New Theory That Sleep Lost Can Never Be Regained. Sleeplessness, He Thinks, Induces a Condition Like Old Age.

BECAUSE Issues are torn down during loss of sleep that never are rebuilt fully though you over-sleep the next night.

This is the theory of an Atlanta doctor. He is a member of the visiting staff at Grady hospital, and is one of the best known physicians in Atlanta.

His theory is absolutely new. The modern tendency, indeed, is to urge less sleep. A recent writer said:

Does not the growing tendency to insomnia point to a transition period from the old-time periods of mental torpor to the time when man shall be able to use his cerebral engine every hour of his brief life?

Look at Edison. He sleeps five hours a night and says it is enough. In opposition to all this comes the Atlanta doctor who says:

Seven to eight hours sleep nightly is necessary for the average person. Every hour of sleep lost is lost for good. It can never fully be made up. A part of your life has been wasted and can never be regained.

For ethical reasons he asks that his name be withheld. But if you have lived in Atlanta any length of time you know him. He is one of the foremost physicians here.

Recently The Journal's Sunday magazine mentioned his theory, but went into it no farther. Here he will be quoted more fully. The gist of his opinion is that loss of sleep affects one like old age.

"People grow old," he said, "because their arteries harden. This is largely because the body grows less able to throw off poisons. Sleep is a means of disinfecting the body of poisons. It is one way the body has of ridding itself of waste products before they become injurious. When you lose sleep you encourage conditions that bring about old age. If you over-sleep the next night you don't do away with the bad effect.

If everyone realized the great change in the body during sleep, he would realize the great and lasting effect of loss of sleep.

"We don't simply sleep because we are tired, and wake up because we are rested. Sleep is a defense against the conditions that cause old age. We sleep not only to renew the body, but also to prevent further exhaustion.

What I wish to bring out is that when we fail to sleep enough we don't simply fail to build up the next night, but to prevent the injurious breaking down of tissue.

"The whole truth is that loss of sleep means a wear and a tear for which we never make up.

We hear of Edison sleeping only four hours, we know that John Hunter, the great physician, and Napoleon did on that little sleep, and that Humboldt got along very well on only three hours a night. Herbert Spencer and many others thought that a minimum of sleep sufficed for them.

But I almost think if they had slept longer they would have lived longer and would have been greater men.

"You hear even now and then of an old citizen who has lived a hundred years and drunk corn whiskey every day. But doesn't it occur to you that he would have lived maybe 120 years if he had left the liquor alone?

These are the natural reasons for nervous breakdowns today is loss of sleep. There is so much to tempt people from sleep—when they are tired, and when you think you are missing a lot. You are—and among them is premature old age.

"Sleep regularly, sleep sufficiently, sleep in the open air. It is the one great rule of happiness and long life.

"Don't think you can follow the example of the Edisons and the Napoleons who sleep four hours and are read 'the next morning for a hard day's work.' Sleepless men are abnormal and probably deluded.

If you are physically an average person, you should sleep you know how actually long. As one writer has put it: "Sleep is a protective function, an instinct which is intended to prevent us from arriving at a condition of exhaustion. We sleep, not because we are poisoned or exhausted, but so that we shall neither be poisoned nor exhausted."

When you lose sleep you encourage a condition of poisoning of the system and a condition of exhaustion. This poisoning and this exhaustion induce the conditions that bring about old age. They cause a breaking down of the body that extra sleep the next night won't rebuild.

"Sleep lost is like something burned up. It's gone. It can't be brought back. When a building is destroyed by fire so much property is wiped out. You can build another building, but you can't bring back the one that is gone.

"Sleep lost is sleep lost. There is no such thing as catching up."

A glance at magazine articles and books at the Carnegie library on sleep will show how different is this belief from the modern theory.

H. Addington Bruce says:

Personally I have no doubt that most of us sleep longer than is really necessary. It has been experimentally shown that, even following protracted vigils, a surprisingly small amount of sleep is needed to effect complete recuperation. In one particularly interesting set of experiments, made some years ago by Prof. Patrick and Doctor Gilbert in the psychological laboratory of the University of Iowa, three members of the teaching staff were kept continuously awake for about 90 hours. Being then allowed to go to bed they found it necessary to make up from 16 to 25 per cent of the time lost from sleep. Students of sleep are agreed, in fact, that it is the quality of sleep rather than the amount, and that certain dangers, physical and mental, attend the development of an undue sleep habit.

A number of other writers express a somewhat similar belief. None, however, agree entirely on any one thing. A thousand explanations have been offered of what sleep really is. Various experiments have been tried to prove when we sleep soundly, and these seem to show that we rest most completely during the first hour after going to sleep. During the remaining time our rest becomes more and more broken and less refreshing.

But the soundest theory seems the newest one, advanced here: "Sleep is a means of keeping the body from growing old. Sleep lost induces aging conditions of the body that can't be relieved by longer rest the next night. Sleep lost is sleep lost for all time.

Our most popular way of losing sleep.

SOUTH'S BRAVEST WOMAN WAS ELIZABETH TEMMS, OF CALHOUN

THE SOUTH'S bravest woman in the Civil war was Mrs. Elizabeth Temms, of Calhoun, Ga. The Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, recently offered prizes for true stories of heroism by southern women. The life of Elizabeth Temms, told by Miss Louise Hancock, of Nashville, won first prize, as an account of the south's most heroic woman.

"All the south," wrote Miss Hancock, "has thrilled at tales of the southern soldier, who though cruelly outnumbered, outarmed, outclevered and outfought, dauntlessly fought four years. The lives of these brave men have gone down in history."

"Such has not been the lot of the southern women. History gives no mention of the mothers who gave their sons, the wives who gave their husbands and the women who gave their lives."

"There was one woman especially, Elizabeth Temms, the wife of a Georgia soldier, whose heroism is a fit theme for song and story. Right through the enemy's camp she continually and fearlessly sneaked clothes and food to the suffering boys in gray. Often she and her children also lived the hungry soldiers might be fed.

"It happened that her home lay directly in the line of Sherman's march to the sea. The Yankees had been routed in a skirmish near the Temms plantation on a certain day, and the Confederates were hotly pursuing them. The Yankees hid in a dry creek just behind the house. They hid high above the water, and the Confederates were compelled to climb this to continue the pursuit. While in the disorder necessary for climbing the Yankees would open fire on their unsuspecting foe. A panic would ensue. The boys in gray would be butchered.

"Elizabeth Temms, from her upstairs window, saw this clearly. She must save her people, at what price she cared not. Better the death of one than the death of many. Without a moment's hesitation, Elizabeth Temms boldly rushed out and warned her people of their danger.

"And so the soldiers were saved. But for her heroism she must pay the penalty. The Yankees commanded her to take the oath of allegiance. Elizabeth Temms, powerless in the enemy's hands, dared refuse. She defied them, swearing love and eternal devotion to the south, though her home was in ruins and it meant separation from her little children.

"She was sent to Louisville and placed in the old residence at Twelfth and Broadway, used during the war between the states as a woman's prison. Her spirit was unbreakable. Hunger, suffering and privation could not bend her. She was thrown into an old ice house in the yard and there compelled to remain all night on the moulding, wet straw. When taken out next morning she had developed pneumonia, and was soon near death. Unconquered, she died, feeling her tragic fate as a sacrifice, but a supreme privilege. Her dying request was, 'Bury me with my people.'"

Elizabeth Temms gave up for the south her home, her husband, her children, her life. The south gave to her a grave in Cave Hill cemetery, beside the Confederate soldiers, and a simple marriage slab with her name and date. No written word of appreciation records for posterity the memory of this woman. But in the name of justice, should not the memory of Elizabeth Temms be cherished among our martyred dead?"

The name of Mrs. Temms is also spelled Timms and Teems.

The author of the prize story recently visited the grave of Mrs. Temms at Cave Hill cemetery in Louisville, and found but one woman's name among the Confederates. On her tomb was inscribed her name, home, date of her death, and "Bury me with my people."

"The experience of the association in California is that the brain is clearest without the morning meal—that we can do most and feel best if we eat nothing until noon.

"The rest of the diet directions of the club are summed up in the injunction not to eat meat and not to drink tea and coffee. Meat is held to be a means simply of introducing poisons into the system. Other foods as nutritious, without the poisoning effect, can be found.

"Industry, believes the California association, is one of the secrets of long life. Do constructive work, avoid idleness, and you have achieved one of the great successes of life.

"The purpose of the association in California is to find the way of living a hundred years, because in such lengthened life life might be accomplished for which no one now has the time.

"No one lives as well as he could. These rules we have from California are simply an effort to show us a way by which we can realize our possibilities," said Mrs. Cummings last week.

"The California club considers many phases of the subject of health and efficiency. It takes up diet, exercise, and our mental attitude.

FOUND: The Lost White Elephant

By Angus Perkinson

YOU remember the white elephant that stood so many years on Alabama street just around from Fryor.

It was found last week in the back of a negro house off Luckie.

Hundreds of people knew the elephant. They stopped beside it daily and leaned against it, and children wanted to be lifted up and set aside the broad mable back.

The owner of the White Elephant saloon had it carved. Soon after he set up his drinking shop on Alabama, someone remarked:

"Well, you've got a white elephant on your hands."

"That furnished him an idea. He'd give his saloon a hood name, and make it a money-maker. Wouldn't a No. 23 barber shop, or a '33' quick lunch stand attract you?"

"White elephant" was a phrase that caught the fancy. First the saloon-keeper hung out a sign with that name, next, he sent in an order to a quarry:

"Ship at earliest practicable date our white marble elephant, four feet high, price doesn't matter."

The saloon boss talked it over with a city marshal. The latter said it was perfectly all right for the elephant to be in marble to rest on the sidewalk.

"I hurry up that elephant," was the order wired three days later.

Just an even month passed when the saloon boss had a 'phone message from the quarry company:

"You got a white elephant down here but the darn thing's so heavy we can't move it."

It took about 48 hours to shift the stone creature from the old station depot block down to Alabama, and the price of where the Fulton market is now, the white elephant found a footing on the sidewalk.

There for years and years it stood. Didn't you ever pass by and stoop to rub your hands over the smooth marble back? You'll remember just exactly how it stood and looked, and how it was absolutely a part of the street.

"To me," said an old timer last week, "Alabama street has never been the same since it lacks something."

It has lacked that "something" since the day prohibition went into effect.

The man who owned the White Elephant saloon was never one to talk trash, but what he said had a meaning. It was the morning the bill became an effective law that he walked out and rubbed one hand over the back of the elephant. He stood there a little half regretfully, as though lingering over a "good-bye."

"Well," he said, "if this town can't let me keep up my old business, then it let me sleep. I'll put you where nobody sees you any more."

He closed that day. All that night a squad of men were busy working Alabama just around from Fryor. There was the sound of heavy blocks, of men heaving away at a great weight, the rattle of wheels.

The next day there was something queerly lacking about Alabama. It quivered and trembled. It quivered and trembled. It quivered and trembled. It quivered and trembled.

The saloon man never said much. Now he answered all questions just with a smile, and one sentence: "You'll see it no more."

Though people who knew the stone figure never laid eyes on it again it was gone. Where?

All these years it has been in the back yard of a negro house in the rear of 131 Luckie. By a coincidence it was found last week.

Just back of No. 131 lives an old negro with a watch-dog roster. The plain or beast that approaches the negro bit. No dog's needed with such a chieftain around.

The rooster was being sought last week when the white elephant was found. Extending back from a vacant lot on Luckie is a big patch of grass. The old negro grows a few stalks of corn. The old negro grows a few stalks of corn. The old negro grows a few stalks of corn.

COTTON WILL WIN THE WAR

ALABAMA, Ga. — "Germany is whipped, and as soon as she realizes this fact she is going to quit." This is the opinion of Julian P. Clark, of this city, who has just returned from a two months' business trip to England, France and Italy.

Mr. Clark is the American representative of Arturo Bonaschi, cotton importers, Milan, Italy. Sailing from the United States, he went to Liverpool, and after a short while in England, went to France and Italy. He says the last-named country is serene and that business activity there gives comparatively little evidence of the conflict raging near Italian borders.

Speaking of the war situation as it relates to cotton, Mr. Clark said: "The British blockade prevents Germany from getting cotton, and she can't keep up the war without it. The great quantity of smokeless powder which Germany has been using is responsible for the consumption of cotton at a tremendous rate, for cotton is essential to the manufacture of this explosive."

"Germany has put up a plucky fight, but she won't be able to hold out much longer. She is pulling the clothes off the backs of her women and children in her desperate search for the staple to be used in the manufacture of explosives. The Kaiser has no chance whatever, and every one in Europe seems to know it, aside from the Teutons."

MISS HELEN STEWART, of Atlanta, now in California with Margaret Anglin's Greek club. Miss Stewart was the foremost exponent in Atlanta of rhythmic dancing and of the ideals of physical culture, studied now by several clubs here. The purpose of this study is to increase efficiency and to prolong life to a hundred years or more.

"You never feel better than after accomplishing some worthy task. You never feel worse than after waste of time.

"Then, be happy. The habit of happiness can be acquired. It is as easy to be happy as it is to be glum.

"Get fresh air, be interested in the worthy things of life, be industrious, keep busy, feel an interest in beautiful things, in books, in music, in dancing, be of a constructive, of a positive attitude of mind, and you will live longer, be more useful.

"In fact, it is believed by the California association that you do all these things a life of a hundred-year span is quite possible.

The club of which Mrs. Cummings is president, and through which the precepts for efficiency and a long life were introduced into Atlanta, is modeled in part after the California club. Both are devoted to physical and mental culture. Such culture, in fact, is studied here now by many clubs.

WORLD WISDOM EQUALS WEALTH

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

It is now stated upon the most responsible authority that the true worth of the United States amounts to $137,000,000,000. Some statisticians put it as high as $200,000,000,000. It is increasing with amazing rapidity. The foreign trade of our country during the fiscal year that ended with June showed a balance of trade in our favor of $1,094,442,792. It is said that the wheat crop for this year amounts to one billion of bushels, and the corn crop to three billions of bushels. During the year 1914 our agricultural products were worth $3,572,036,000. Our mineral products reached a valuation of $2,200,000,000. Our manufactured goods amounted to $2,700,000,000.

These endowments in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, as reported to the National Bureau of Education, do not amount to as much as the endowment of one university in New York. The endowment of Harvard University lacks only about $25,000 to exceed all the college endowments in all the Southern States. This record is doubtless a stimulus to us and it should not continue longer.

We talk much of developing the resources of the South, but our richest resources, and the resources which are capable of the most entrancing development, are the minds and hearts of the youth of the South. What will mere money mean to a people whose children and children's children are ignorant and incapable? We might well waste our money until we have strengthened our enterprises which are devoted to making better men.

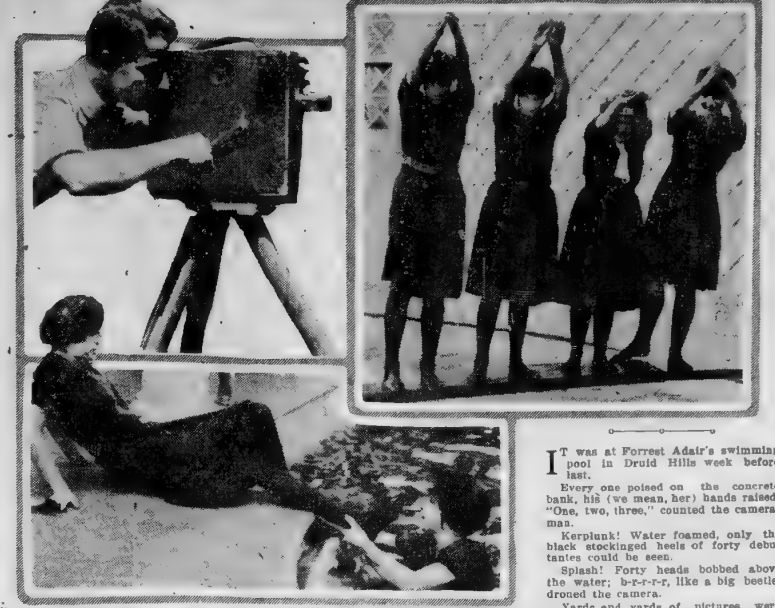

There are women by the thousands among us who bedeck their bodies with polished stones, and boast of the worth of their jewelry, and diamonds. Their money has been expended to keep lapidaries at work in polishing dead stones for personal adornment. What have these women done to engage teachers to polish the more precious minds of the youth of our section? It is a glistering shame for any one to care more for shining jewels upon their own persons than for the shining minds of cultured manhood and womanhood for the blessing and adornment of our land. Yet many complain of what they pay for educating a youth, and boast of their outlays for polishing diamonds.

Not a few men and women of means complain that laboring people do not know how to spend their wages. Perhaps the complaint is justified by the facts. But it is not equally true that many rich people do not know how to expend their incomes. It is the greater simplicity of life were practiced by the opulent classes, and more money spent by them for the public good, it is quite possible they might lead the less fortunate to nobler levels of life and a wiser use of wages.

There is nothing more glorious for a man or woman to do than to expend effort upon the enlightenment and ennobling of their fellow man. God's first command was, "Let there be light"; and it is a god-like thing when one human being creates light for others who walk in darkness. On the other hand, it is a diabolical thing to turn resources into darkness which might be devoted to illumining the world.

Will we be as wise as we are wealthy? Will our goodness be equal to our gold? Will we possess our property or be overpowered by it?

40 Atlanta Debutantes Swim For Moving Pictures

Adair swimming pool, where moving pictures were made week before last.

It was at Forrest Adair's swimming pool in Druid Hills week before last. Every one posed on the concrete bank, his two men, both hands raised. "One, two, three," counted the cameraman.

Keprank! Water foamed, only the black stockings and heels of forty debutantes could be seen.

Splash! Forty heads bobbed above the water; h-r-r-r, like a big beetle, drove the camera.

Yards and yards of pictures were made—diving, swimming, poised on the bank, collected in one big circle round the pool.

All this because Mr. Adair has an idea several reels of moving picture film are a far better memento than an old plumb-colored album where, as he said, you have a picture of "Aunt Jane and of 'Uncle' John and nothing much else.

Found: The Lost White Elephant of Alabama Street

this miniature jungle; and, there, right ahead of us, was the lost marble figure which stood to many years on Alabama street.

The day it was moved this hoodoo sign which brought good luck was set down in the backyard of the negro house beyond the jungle of weeds. There, hidden from the street it has stood all these years.

It looks just as it used to. Time, it seems, would have worn it a little here and there. But it hasn't. It is absolutely the same in the backyard of the negro hut that it was on a down-town thoroughfare.

From round the corner of the house hobbled a gray, bent old negro whom Time hasn't treated so kindly. He was walking with his shoulders stooped and was peering here and there.

"Son," he called, "so—"

He had a squeaky, womanish voice, which would not break a smile.

"Howdy, boss." He stopped and looked up. "You all seen a rooster?"

"I 'traid he'll git outen de yard and herd somebody else." He's run all de dogs out de neighborhood, an' there ain't a child kin set foot round here."

"Son, you got a rooster?"

He slid through a hole in the fence paling and hubble-lobbed into the weeds to get a better look at the rooster. He was beginning to fade and he was all oblivious, his and "Son's" pictures were made.

He thumped the chicken on the head and the rooster tried to peck him.

"Law, me," he said, "ain't he a man, boss!" He comes from Darktown. Daps all I knows bout him. Fellow sump Albert brought him to dis neighborhood six months ago, and he's been fightin' everybody since. They ain't nothin', boss, dis chicken won't fight. He's whapped every dog in de neighborhood. Police man can't come round 'outen dat rooster take a lick at 'im.

He set the rooster down and "Son" stood still a moment, then slowly filled his lungs and let forth a mighty crow. He walked round us, stepping high, and as much as saying that for two cents he'd fight anybody in the yard, including the white elephant. Pausing a moment as though urging provocation, he looked us over and slowly retreated under the house.

"Uncle" William Mobley heaved a sigh that was half belied by the gleam of pride in his eye.

"Boss," said he, "ain't he a chicken?"

He led the way round the house and down what might be called a street to his own hut which sets up high of the ground as though it had caught the habit of walking on stilts from the little pickaninies playing about.

The cat twice as big as an ordinary house cat, dozed on the front porch.

"Button!" called "Uncle" William Mobley. "Button!"

He reached up, took the furry bundle by the tail, and "Button" descended the four feet to the street without the aid of steps. In protest at such rude swiftness, "Button" meowed and made efforts to return to the porch. It was all useless. "Uncle" William retained a hold on the tail.

"Hell quiet down, boss, after awhile. Peculiar sorter cat. Twice as big as he is now two years ago. But he took to drinkin'." I believe, for goodness, he won't be big as a kitten in two years mo'."

"Button" was beginning to resist himself to quiet. He was turned loose for a moment, his picture was made, he rushed madly for the porch.

"Uncle" William Mobley showed the way back to the hole in the fence, which is the exit to the weedy patch, which leads to Luckie street.

"Fact, boss, dat cat was bigger 'an a dog two years ago. Den, he started shrinkin', and he's shrunk and shrunk."

"Uncle" William was standing with one hand on the marble white elephant hidden there in the rear of a negro house.

"I don't know, boss, how come they brought it here." But I think they jes set it down and here it's set."

There were many others, too; in all about 100 swimmers.

In large cities moving picture film as a memento is rapidly replacing the "plumb-covered album." But Mr. Adair is the first to make this departure in Atlanta. He has had many photographs taken of his swimming pool, which is the most popular and complete recreation place of its sort to be found as the adjunct to any southern home.

But these pictures had none of the life and motion of the real pool, with water splashing, heads bobbing, and divers flashing, head downward, through the air.

So, he decided to have a moving picture party. A hundred came to take their first moving picture swim, and a sort of scenario was arranged.

First, every one took every edge of the circular pool, and a large revolving picture was made.

Secondly, a dozen or more, one by one, dived off the spring-board, and Thirdly, every one stood on the bank, one, two, three, was counted, splash, and the water was full of swimmers.

And, fourthly, all of it is to be shown at a local "movie" theater. These, this 1915 album, is being given away; and, later on, probably in the dead of winter when every one is hibernating over big fires, or steam radiators, it is to be brought out for us to see how we looked at our first moving picture swimming party in that dreadfully hot month of August.

BIG GAME HUNTING IN GEORGIA DOCTOR FOUND IT

THE only bloodthirsty creature I saw was the tick."

But kodak pictures tell another story of Dr. Howard Bucknell's six weeks in East Africa. A giant rhinoceros photographed with a group of natives as a timid background, was killed after charging him.

The gun-bearers fired hastily and fed. Dr. Bucknell was left alone. Two shots from a Winchester failed to stop the heavy beast. By a margin of inches this Georgia hunter in East Africa avoided the charge; and, with a last shot, ended the big creature.

Dr. Bucknell has a room at his residence, 1142 Peachtree, decorated with the heads of game slain by him on his six weeks' hunting trip.

On the walls of his office in the Candler building are the trophies. Each tells a story of the expedition, where he and his white man accompanied him. His party consisted of himself and many natives—38 at the outset, 50 on their return.

Dr. Bucknell has lived fourteen years in Georgia, and is one of the best-known physicians in the south. Two and a half years ago he was in London engaged in medical studies. It was January.

"I believe," he decided, "I'll try the big game in East Africa."

Always he has been a hunter. He hunted deer in the Adirondacks. The best bird shooting is to be found in the south. But he had never before had a chance at really big game.

The route, from London to the great hunting ground of East Africa is Paris, Naples, Mombasa, then, up to Nairobi and into the game lands. It took sixteen days to get started.

Dr. Bucknell "with it set out."

"I get out. You need so many because they carry everything on their heads, and every hunting party must be made up of a number who bear no burdens. And these were two gun-bearers, the headman, the cook, the tent boy, the 'sails,' who takes care of the mules; and the 'skari,' or native policeman.

It was only white man in the party, because big game hunting is necessarily selfish. It can't be sociable, like our bird hunting in the south. You wouldn't wish to be responsible for someone else on that sort of trip.

"I had to begin by getting a license that cost $50. found if you kill an elephant you must pay $50; a giraffe, $25. One company at Mombasa advertises to hunt on a party at a cost of $500 a week. But really the cost is far greater than that.

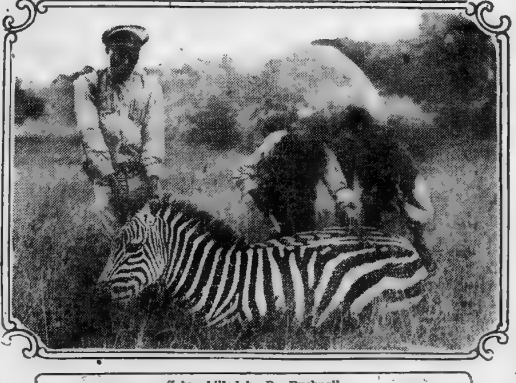

"I don't know how to describe the game to you. It can't be described. You must see it. There's no hunting in the world like that in Africa. In the Adirondacks, the instant you go out for deer, and, if you don't happen to find any, you have no shooting.

"Where we were, you could go up on the plain in the morning, and see hundreds of animals, particularly where there was water. Game was endless, and it isn't being killed so thick. This isn't the case here. Leopards, rhinos, giraffe, buffalo, eland, kongoni, water buck, fringe-eared oryx, kudu, both Grant and Thompson's gazelles, reedbuck, red duiker, dik-dik, wart hog, and any number of smaller animals.

"I saw lions, but never had a shot at them. They were too timid. This isn't the experience, however, of hunters in districts where there is less hunting.

"In all, my party went 150 miles from Nairobi, and returned in a circular route. The only one in the party, except myself, who could speak English, was the cook.

"The weather, I found, was too warm to be comfortable, and the ticks were a plague. They really are the most blood-sucking animals in Africa. But the trip did me no end of good. I began it, soft as a man is after a life indoors over books. I ended it thirty pounds less in weight, hard as nails, and feeling as fit as I ever have in my life.

"Of course I took precautions. For instance, I boiled both the drinking and bathing water. But the heat did me no harm.

"I found in the game fields that the number of animals interferred that the hunting. Often we couldn't get close to the bushes, the snarl of the water were between us and our quarry, would take fright and spread the alarm.

"I killed two rhinoceros, and the second one taught me respect for the beasts. I had begun to take them as a joke. The natives were afraid of the beasts, and to scare away the others we came across, I would creep up close, a gun in my hand, and yell at them.

"This one charged straight at me. I was accompanied by the two gun-bearers. One was ahead, the other behind." Both fired the heavy guns they carried, something, of course, they shouldn't have done. I was left only with a 35 Remington. The rhino was coming at me squealing at every step. Two shots in the chest didn't stop him. I managed to get out of the way as he charged by; and the third shot, the shoulder, brought him down."

One of the pictures on the walls of Dr. Bucknell's office showed a buffalo. He pointed to it.

"They are probably the most dangerous animals you met in Africa. Oftentimes they'll stampede and come straight toward you. If you can't get out of their way you must take your chance of shooting the one that is about to run you down. It's had many a most dangerous predicament was from such a stampede.

"Nothing in the way of hunting can compare with big game shooting in Africa."

Spice Tree Grows In Thomas County

THOMASVILLE, GA.—That "angar and all things nice" can be easily raised in Thomas county is the opinion of Tom Williams, one of its best known citizens, and he will guarantee to furnish the spice from his own spice tree.

Mr. Williams has on his place in the country a large spice tree which he thinks is about 40 years old. The tree is in full bloom now and the flowers are a pretty lilac in color and smell strongly of the spice. Mr. Williams says the tree is quite hardy and needs no cultivation and he sees no reason why similar trees should not be grown to a large extent in this section.

IMPROVING HEALTH AND BEAUTY

BY MRS. HENRY SYMES

IMPROVING A NEGLECTED COMPLEXION

Apply Ice to Reduce Large Pores

There are three when one becomes very careless regarding one's complexion. It may be that for a while one is a very enthusiastic follower of certain rules to improve the complexion, but gradually the enthusiasm dies down and all efforts are ceased. Then it is necessary to work doubly hard to repair the damages wrought by inactivity. Many things can be done to improve the neglected complexion, but there are just as many things, which should be learned and practiced so that they become habits, which keep the complexion in perfect condition.

Not only in hot water to be taken, but cold water, too, is advised. All water for drinking purposes should be filtered or boiled for thirty minutes. After it is boiled and allowed to cool, it should be poured into large bottles, and these, after being tightly corked, should be placed in the refrigerator next to the ice. When serving the water, the mistake of adding ice to it. Ice water should never be taken. It retards and interferes with the digestion.

Three pints of water should be taken daily. The water improves the quality of the blood. Its presence in the blood is really an essential to carry foods to the tissues and to convey the waste matter away from the tissues. By thus getting rid of the impurities of the body the complexion is bound to be benefited.

The external application of water is quite essential in the work of improving and keeping the condition of the skin up to the mark. A person having robust health should take two baths a day, a hot one at night and a cold plunge in the morning. The body has thousands and thousands of little pores which throw off waste matter. If this refuse is not washed from the body it is certain to irritate the skin. It is very important that the wash-cloth and all other toilet articles be clean and sweet, else all further attempts to beautify the skin will be of no avail.

Many girls have the habit of eating candy every day. It may be only ten cents' worth at a time, but this amount is sufficient to produce unsightly blotches on the skin after the stomach has been given more than it can possibly digest. A little candy now and again is very good for the system, but an overindulgence is harmful. To satisfy a craving for sweets substitute fruit for the candy. An apple a day will have a beneficial effect. Apples are said to possess a food as well as a medicinal value. They provide a source of energy which is a necessary quality of every wide-awake girl. As the most aromatic part of the apple lies nearest the skin, only a thin paring should be removed. Baked apples, as well as other cooked fruits, are good for the general system. It takes strength of mind to steer from the candy store to the fruit stand, but a little exertion of the will power will satisfy vanity, so it is worth the effort.

While a good complexion comes from within, it is necessary to apply external treatment very frequently. For instance, a skin which has been neglected will often have dust and dirt ground so firmly into the pores that it is impossible to remove it with a washcloth. In this case, a steam bath is necessary to relax the skin so that the pores will open. The face can be given a steam bath by pouring very hot water into a basin, holding the face over the basin and using a towel to prevent the steam from scattering. See illustration.

After the face has been sufficiently steamed, scrub it with a good flesh brush to release the dirt. Of course, an agreeable soap must also be used with the brush. Rub the face with warm water and gradually reduce the temperature of the water until it is very cold. The cold water has a stimulating action on the blood vessels and improves the circulation in the skin.

Persons who are afflicted with enlarged pores will do well to massage the skin with ice after giving the face the above treatment. The ice will not only reduce large pores, but it will improve the tone of the elastic fibers in the skin and, in a measure, delay the appearance of wrinkles. The cream must be of good quality and perfectly fresh. Rancid cream is very irksome to the skin.

Very frequently persons who have a clear complexion find it impossible to have the family physician give a medicine which will suit their case. Having improved the complexion in this manner, it is a good idea to prevent, which is such a thing to do under such circumstances is dependent upon good health, and that good health is dependent upon plenty of exercise in the fresh air, attention to the diet, and the condition of the bowels and the kidneys.

Drink Hot Water Before Breakfast

one-half pint of water, just as hot as it can be sipped with a spoon, should be taken three times a day, one hour before each meal. The water can be made more palatable by the addition of a little salt or lemon juice.

Not only in hot water to be taken, but cold water, too, is advised. All water for drinking purposes should be filtered or boiled for thirty minutes. After it is boiled and allowed to cool, it should be poured into large bottles, and these, after being tightly corked, should be placed in the refrigerator next to the ice. COMMON SENSE in the HOME

EDITED by MARION HARLAND.

PICKLES FOR FAMILY USE.

CHEAP materials cannot be used in making pickles if you desire satisfactory results. The vinegar and spices must be of the best; the vegetables or fruits must be firm and green. All of these must be picked over carefully in the search for decayed portions and soft or speckled spots must be cut out or the product rejected.

The same rule which should prevail in all cooking must be observed in putting up pickles. All ingredients should be in the house and assembled in the kitchen or pantry before the work is begun. The jars or glasses must be inspected to see that tops and rubbers are in good condition and all must be well rinsed in clean washing water.

Preparation for the work by dressing to fit the part. Put on old clothes which will not be injured by the splashed juice of fruits or vegetables, or by a dash of vinegar. Place your chair in a cool corner while you are peeling or cutting up materials and try in every way to make yourself as comfortable as possible. Pickling is always more or less hard work, and it is only the part of wisdom to take care from it every disadvantage you can. Don't undertake too much at a time, but plan to do a smaller amount at once and to do it with a minimum of fatigue and nerve wear.

The best preserving kettle I know is porcelain lined, although I have had satisfactory results with one of copper. If you use the latter, take care that it is thoroughly scoured before using it, and be sure there is no suspicion of verdigris about the inside. With sliced cucumbers it is safe to take the precaution of laying an inverted plate in the bottom. This saves the likelihood of a scorch, which would spoil the entire batch of pickles.

CUCUMBER PICKLES.

If you have your own garden it may seem best to gather the cucumbers a few at a time, as they attain the right size. In this case keep a crock of brine in a clean or cool pantry and drop the cucumbers into the brine as they are gathered, looking over the stock every two or three days to see that sage is softening. On the other hand, if you buy the vegetables or are able to gather a large quantity at once, you are spared this care. The cucumbers should be about the length of the little finger. When they are small and of uniform size they make a better and more attractive pickle than when of varying proportions.

The first stage in pickling the cucumbers is to make a brine so strong that it will bear up an egg; put the cucumbers in this and leave them there for three days. At the end of this time pour off the brine, take out the pickles and lay them on a clean cloth to dry, rinse out the crock, and put the pickles back in it, covering them with fresh, cool water. Leave them in this for twenty-four hours.

Prepare the vinegar for the pickles by allowing to each quart of sharp cider vinegar one tablespoon of brown sugar, one dozen black peppers, one dozen whole cloves, three allspice, and three blades of mace. Put all in a preserving kettle, bring to a boil and cook for ten minutes. Take the cucumbers from the water, drain, and wipe dry, turn them into the boiling vinegar and leave them in it just long enough to become hot. Do not permit them to boil. Soak out a stone crock, set it on a wet cloth that it may not crack, and put pickles and vinegar into it. Cover closely, set away for three days, drain off the vinegar and heat it to scalding, and pour it back on the pickles. Repeat this process every week for a month and at the final scalding add another teaspoon of sugar for each quart of vinegar. Put the pickles away to ripen for six weeks or two months before using them.

PICKLED PEPPER WASH.

Select five large green peppers and one red one, cut them open and remove the seeds with a stick. If you handle them they will burn your fingers. Chop the peppers fine. Chop also one good head of white cabbage which you have examined carefully for slugs and from which you have removed all wilted or decayed leaves. Put minced cabbage and peppers together and mix well. Strain them three tablespoons of salt and one of sugar, two tablespoons of brown mustard seed, and enough good cider vinegar to cover all. Stir well together, put into jars, screw down the tops, and put aside. It will be ready to use in a few days.

CHOW-CHOW.

For chow-chow prepare equal proportions of small cucumbers, string beans, little white onions, a cauliflower, and green tomatoes. Slice the tomatoes, divide the cauliflower into clusters, peel the onions, stem and string the beans. Wash these put four small red peppers of the long variety and place the vegetables in a stoneware crock, alternating each layer of these with one of salt. Pour in cold water to cover all and lay on top of the vegetables a board with a weight on it to keep them from floating. In this brine leave them for three days, then drain, rinse with fresh water, and leave them for one day in a jar, covered with unseasoned water. Pick over the vegetables carefully to make sure there are no decayed ones among them before you put them into vinegar. To prepare this measure out a gallon of vinegar, put it into a kettle with one and a half cups of brown sugar, three tablespoons of ground mustard, and two of turmeric, one teaspoon of ground horseradish, and one each of whole cloves, whole black peppers, whole mace, celery seed, and white mustard seed. Bring all to a boil, cook for five minutes, drop in the pickles, and let them simmer for five minutes after the boil is regained.

Take the pickles out with a skimmer and put into a stone crock and pour the vinegar over them, leaving them in this, the jar covered, for two days. Drain off the vinegar, then return it to the fire with a tablespoon of curry powder and let it boil up once. Pour it again over the pickles and when these are cool pack them into small jars and screw down the tops. They will be ready for use by the end of a month, but are even better after longer keeping.

STUFFED PEPPER PICKLE.

Select firm green peppers of uniform size, cut a slit in each near the top and remove the seeds with a stick or a small knife. Fill the peppers with salt, lay them in a jar, and cover them with cold water, leaving them in this for two days. Drain them and lay them in fresh water for a day longer. Make a stuffing for them in the following proportions: Two tablesps of grated horseradish and of finely chopped cabbage, one teaspoon each of ground mustard, whole black peppers, celery seed, and mixed onion; half a teaspoon each of ground ginger, mace, and nutmeg; one tablespoon of salad oil and a teaspoon of white sugar. Mix all well together.

Fill the peppers with this stuffing, sew them up with white thread, pack in an earthen jar, and fill with boiling vinegar. Leave them for a week, drain off the vinegar, heat it to scalding, add and pour it back on the peppers. Cover and leave them to simmer for at least three months before using.

GREEN TOMATO PICKLE.

Slice a gallon of unpeeled green tomatoes; peel and chop six large white onions. Put a layer of the tomatoes into the preserving kettle, sprinkle them with the onion and half of a mixture consisting of two cups of sugar, one tablespoon each of salt, black pepper, and ground mustard and two teaspoons each of ground allspice and cloves. Repeat the layer of tomatoes, onions, and seasoning; pour in one quart of cider vinegar, heat the material slowly, and stew for three-quarters of an hour. Put up in small jars and seal. Keep three months before using.

PICKLED PEACHES.

Peel firm white freestone peaches, dropping each into cold water as it is pared. Take the fruit from the water, weigh it; allow three pounds of sugar and two cups of vinegar to six pounds of fruit. Slice a whole clove in each peach, arrange the fruit and sugar in layers in a preserving kettle, and put the vinegar on to heat in another vessel; with two tablespoons each of cloves, cinnamon, and mace to the six pounds of fruit. The spices must be tied up in a muslin bag and put in the vinegar for five minutes after it comes to a boil. When the sugar and peaches have stewed together for five minutes after boiling the vinegar may be added to them and all boiled gently until the peaches are tender, but not broken. Take them out then with a skimmer, spread on flat plates, and boil the sirup until thick. This will require about fifteen minutes. Put the peaches in jars, turn in the sirup, and seal while still boiling hot.

PICKLED PEARS.

Use small firm pears, peel them, but do not remove the stems, and follow the same course as for pickled peaches.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Portieres of Chenille.

Will you please tell me how to make portieres from chenille? And have you a formula for a permanent stove polish? If so, will it burn off if the fire is hot? Is alum harmful when put in pickles, and in what respect? I would also like to have a recipe for blue ice cream. I hope I'm not asking too much at one time, but the corner is a wonder. It seems to me that it can give anything one asks. Here is a recipe for eggless gingerbread: One cup of molasses, one cup of sugar, half cup of shortening, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one of ginger, and one of salt; quarter teaspoon of cloves, one teaspoon of baking soda dissolved in a quarter cup of water, and one of flour. As flour varies in the way it thickens it is better to try a little of the gingerbread when mixed in a party pan, and if it seems too thin you can add more flour. I know this gingerbread to be excellent.

"Mrs. R. L. S." I shall have to refer your queries about the chenille rope portieres to some of our expert. I am sorry to say I cannot tell you how to make them.

As to the permanent stove polish, I have never heard of such a thing. I have excellent directions for making stove polish, but they all wear off or burn off in time, and I would be glad, for my own sake, to learn of any that do not. Can some of our householders supply a formula for such a preparation? A little alum is put into some pickles when the fruits or vegetables used for them are being prepared for the vinegar, but it is usually well washed or soaked out afterwards. Like any other of them may be able to answer this query. Unfortunately this correspondent was one of those who omitted to give her address, but I will print any replies that may come in the Corner.

Value of Old Coin.

"Will you please advise me through your Corner of the value that is placed on silver dollars dated 1787? This coin is wonderfully preserved and I am of the opinion that a liberal payment would be offered for it.

"W. A. B." I cannot tell the value of such a coin, but I am happy to lay the question before our correspondents in the hope that some of them may be able to answer the query. Unfortunately this correspondent was one of those who omitted to give her address, but I will print any replies that may come in the Corner.

Offers Air Cushion and Trust.

"If you will kindly send me the name and address of the woman with the four children who asked for an air cushion for her invalid husband who is suffering from tuberculosis, I will see that she gets it. You may also send me the name and address of a person desiring a trust. It is about twenty-five inches. The trust is new and complete, with leg steps and a small bed.

The rubber arm tubularly has already been supplied with the needed air cushion, but I have no doubt the offer of this kindly Corsette will be eagerly accepted somewhere else. So will her profit of the trust be welcomed, and I am personally grateful to her for the generosity she displays.

Catalogue of Coin Values.

"Can you tell me where I can find a catalogue or price list of the values of old coins? If there is a demand for them I would like to know it, as I have many on hand.

"Mrs. H. M. L." Another inquiry to be referred to those learned in such things. I have the address of this correspondent and will send it to any one who can give her the information she asks.

Pictures for Invalids.

"Please tell me, if you can, how much a switch of natural curly Auburn hair is worth. It is made on three long stems, weighs three and three-quarter ounces, and is about thirty inches long. It has never been worn. I enjoy the Corset, and often see things asked for that I would not more than they are worth to send them. I can send you of this part of the country to any extent that would like to have them if you will please send me addresses.

"M. W." A letter from far off Alaska! I wish I could give the information about the switch, but I cannot. Who can help her? I am sure there will be applications for the post cards. We welcome M. W. to the Corner!

Calico Pieces Great Help.

"I saw in the Corner that Mrs. E. M. had calico and percale pieces to give away. I would be glad to receive some. As I have a family of small children, it would be a great help to me and I would be much obliged to her and to you.

"Mrs. B. E. D." Again I must say with regret that the pieces had been given away before the arrival of this letter. Has any one else similar pieces the would like to present to this correspondent?

Price of Paper Kisses
MANY jurists of more or less renown have attempted to fix the value of a kiss, and all have failed to agree. They have appraised kisses stolen from demute damsels who suddenly revealed sophistication by filing suits for breach of promise. They have attempted to place a value on the kiss of the old maid who also feels sometimes that her affections have been trifled with. They have been asked to grant divorce on the ground of a death of kisses after the honeymoon, and for a too pronounced penchant for osculation, characters have been requested to sever the marital bonds because kisses didn't remain at home. In fact, the kiss—was a real kiss—has been a fruitful source of trouble in the human family for many, many years, but it has remained for modern cupid to claim a reward for kisses on paper.

Carnegie Hero Medal For 18-Year-Old Atlanta Girl

A CARNEGIE hero medal is being sought for Elizabeth Enloe, an eighteen-year-old Atlanta girl.
From a treacherous stream in north Georgia she rescued a six-foot mountaineer, of triple bar strength and size.
The man was sinking the third time, but an oddling current separated the group of nearly a dozen people on the bank from the swimmer.
"I won't go in there," a man in the party exclaimed. "That water would drown anybody."
The eighteen-year-old girl, slight in build, already stooped with one foot in the water. She stepped out from the bank, threw herself into the eddy, fought her way with the stroke of a

Rooster-Hen Is Owned in LaGrange
A FEW months ago, Mr. C. L. Hearn purchased a lot of chickens, and among them was found a fowl which is both hen and rooster. Its head, legs and body are those of a hen, but its neck, back, tail and spurs are those of a rooster. It neither cackles like a hen nor crows like a rooster, and is perfectly indifferent to the society of either. Mr. Hearn has refused a fancy price for this bird.—LaGrange (Ga.) Reporter.

Guilty, But Wanted To Fight the Case

Style on the Farm Returns to Muskmelon

Fruit of 9 Years' Labor Is Stolen

Earl Jackson's Snake Makes Ham Envious

Convict Brought Back Even His Shackles

DALTON, Ga.—To see the results of nine years' faithful and careful work wasted was the experience of Ab Weaver and his son, Tom Weaver, when they discovered two of their beds of precious grapes, despoiled.
Mr. Weaver and his son nine years ago began, on their farm in the lower end of Murray county, work which was to bear fruit this year. They had secured a fine stand of grapes, which they intended harvesting and curing this fall. That stolen will not benefit the thief, for it was not matured.
With what is left, they are confident of clearing several thousand dollars this fall.

SPECTATORS to Judge Beall's court had a laugh one day this week when a negro was brought in on a charge of larceny after trust. He had employed no lawyer nor given any intimation of how he wanted to proceed, so his honor led off by asking the defendant if he was guilty. "Yassir, judge," came the eager reply. "The guilty, but I wants to fight de case."
The judge appointed two lawyers to defend him and let him fight it.—Carrollton (Ga.) Press.

STYLES change on the farm just as they do in the city. For many years the muskmelon gave place to the cantaloupe; now the big, yellow, corrugated rind, odorless muskmelon of forty years ago is coming back. Well we remember the muskmelon of boyhood. It grew on a vine in the cornfield, the only vine of its kind on the farm. When the tiny melon first appeared we saw it before it dropped the blossom. Never did a miser watch his hoard grow with more eagerness than we watched that melon develop. At first almost round and of a rich, dark green color, gradually it elongated until it assumed the proportion to us of a small green mountain.
It seemed an age before the green gradually began to turn to yellow and two ages more before the powers would allow us to pull it. Before it was removed the tempting odor could be discerned for a hundred yards. Then it was carried to the house and rolled under the bed, awaiting Sunday. During the intervening time it made our mouth water when we were in smelling distance until the day of rest came. Then, on a hot afternoon, the melon was剖开, split, the seed removed and meat divided along the corrugations in slices. Salt and pepper added to its savor and the taste of the one slice we got fingers with us yet.
We wish good things tasted that way now.—Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

Cowardly Terrier Is Killed on Suspicion

Earl Jackson's Snake Makes Ham Envious
LYELLY, Ga.—Attorney Earl Jackson is envied by a number of LaFayette men, according to the Walker County Messenger, since it has become known that a large snake has taken up its abode in the attic of the Colonel's residence. Mr. Jackson says he would not take anything for this snake, and is especially proud that it has selected his home as a dwelling place, for the reason that it is easy for him now to secure Mrs. Jackson's permission to keep snake-bite medicine on hand. Mrs. Jackson is the one woman in a hundred who is not afraid of snakes, and when she discovered the snake in the attic one day last week she made a brave but unsuccessful effort to kill it.

Black Pepper Plant On Mr. Willis' Place
MR. H. H. WILLIS, who lives seven miles south of Ty Ty, brought the Gazette office Friday a twig cut from a black pepper plant growing on his place. The plant, or shrub, for it is seven feet high and nearly eight feet across, is the best he has ever seen growing brought by Mr. Willis from Florida. The mother tree has produced seventeen pounds of pepper in one year.
This tree grows on Mr. Willis' place in the yard without any protection. Its fragrance is aromatic and it makes a pretty ornament. Following is a translation of a useful article.—Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

Convict Brought Back Even His Shackles
H. A. Hammond, the escaped convict who recently wrote to Warden Forester, offering to pay his railroad fare to Dalton if the warden would give him his old job of assisting in the work around the camp, is back. Hammond's intention of the best; his officers learned that he was an escaped convict, nabbed him before he could make good his promise.
But in order to show that his heart was in the right place, Hammond went to his home near East Point, Ga., and got the convict suit he was wearing at the time of his escape, and also brought back what was left of the shackles, which he had removed from his ankles. The chains were cut; but they can be easily mended.—Dalton (Ga.) Citizen.

Does Silence Give Consent?
THE preacher said: "Mr. Seividge subscribes a hundred dollars." Mr. Seividge said: "Does the publishing of the progress of the concert, and if the question to be answered by Justice Brosch, who now has it under advisement, following the trial by jury in which the First Christian church of Rome is the plaintiff.
The defendant's attorney requested payment on the ground that the adage, "Silence gives consent," is not, in this case, gods' law, and also because there was a lack of consideration, and therefore no contract.
B. F. Archer, secretary or clerk of the meeting at which Rev. George P. Cutbush, formerly pastor of the church, asked subscriptions, swore substantially to the allegations made by plaintiff with the additional statement that when a hat was passed around, Mr. Seividge dropped a dollar into it and he, the secretary, then said: "I leaves you owing ninety-nine dollars, John." Mr. Seividge still said nothing.
Attorney J. P. Jones, representing the church, insisted that to have a part in building a church for the worship of God is a more valuable consideration than to get an automobile for one's money, but Attorney Mehane, his opponent, did not appear to be impressed by the argument. Justice Brosch heard the statement impassively. His decision will be delivered within a few days.—Rome (Ga.) Herald.

Teeth of Monstrous Fish Are Dug Up
WHILE excavating at the rock quarry on the Hapeville road about six miles from Perry, the gang under Superintendent Chapman dug up recently from a depth of about twenty feet from the surface, two well-preserved teeth, which are undoubtedly the teeth of a monstrous fish.
The largest tooth is about three inches in length and is tapered from a width of about two inches to a fine point. The edges of the teeth are rough like a fine-tooth saw. Part of the jaw bone is attached to the teeth.
Numerous bones were also found at this location.
It is thought probable that the teeth have lain in the earth in a petrified condition for thousands of years, since the geologic days when the part of the world was covered by the sea.—Perry (Ga.) Journal.

FIERY METEOR IS SEEN IN SAVANNAH

A METEOR believed to have weighed 10 or 15 pounds was seen July 30 in Savannah. Otis Ashmore, superintendent of schools, saw the phenomenon.

"The meteor appeared in the southeast," he said, "and dropped downward to the southern horizon. I was on my porch at the time; it was the latest I have ever seen."

"Presenting a beautiful appearance, a mass of bright blue and white color, it fell quite slowly indicating a great distance intervening between the meteor and Savannah."
