MAYOR CALLS COUNCIL IN CAR TRACK WAR

Meeting Friday Will Decide Whether Trolley Company Shall Obey Ordinance

A special meeting of the general council has been called by Mayor Woodard for Friday afternoon in an effort to bring about an adjustment of the differences between the city and the Georgia Railway and Power Company over the latter's refusal to comply with the provisions of the ordinance requiring a concrete foundation under street car tracks where new permanent pavement is laid.

Many members of council took the position Friday that the city should use every effort to force the company to comply with the concrete foundation ordinance, and they commended the action of Earl Brittain, assistant chief of construction, in closing Grant street to the company when it refused to put concrete under the tracks there.

The situation is proving doubly interesting because the course followed in regard to Grant street will most likely be the course pursued in regard to the Ponce de Leon avenue, and probably Gordon street and the other thoroughfares to be paved.

An effort will be made by the seventh ward delegation, as the result of the request of property owners, to exempt the power company from complying with the ordinance on Gordon street. The same course will probably not be followed by the fifth ward delegation on the Ponce de Leon pavement.

The council meeting will be preceded by a meeting of the streets committee. In addition to the paving matter, Mayor Woodard included in his call for the special session the application of the Postal Telegraph company for a permit to lay conduits under Alabama street.

The company is preparing to put underground wires in the concrete and stone before the work of repaving the street is begun.

SAYS HUSBAND TOLD HER HE DID NOT LOVE HER

MR. PATTON MAKES THIS EXCEPTION

Bessemer Druggist So Impressed With Vitalitas He Gives Out Statement

"It is not often I will permit my name to go before the public regarding a medicine," states A. E. Patton, of the widely known Pogram-Patton Drug company of Bessemer, Ala., "but in this particular case it gives me pleasure to state briefly what I know about Vitalitas."

"My ten years in the drug business has given me an opportunity to test many remedies. I have never had a remedy that has given the satisfaction that Vitalitas has, and for the short time it has been on the market my sales have been far beyond expectation. Many of my customers have told me they consider Vitalitas the greatest remedy for sale in a drug store."

Many prominent druggists throughout the south are giving out statements for the benefit of the public regarding this wonderful early drug product. It is free of alcohol and habit-forming drugs. It is wholesome and pure and it beyond doubt nature's greatest tonic and corrective.

SOUTHERN MAKES FINE RECORD MOVING PEACHES

Operates 187 Fast Special Trains on Perfect Schedule Time
The Southern Railway company established a fine record in handling the Georgia peach crop to eastern markets during the season extending from May 27 to August 17 when it operated 187 special fast passenger schedules carrying 3,000,000 peaches, of which 5,774, or 82.2 per cent, made perfect schedule and were delivered to connections in time to make satisfactory connections.
The highly perishable character of the peach makes it necessary that it be moved with the utmost dispatch and the success of the industry is to a great degree dependent on the character of the railway service to the great consuming markets of the country.

The Southern's record in handling this heavy extraordinary traffic was accomplished without interference with the regular traffic over the 616 miles of the Atlanta-Washington line, over 100 miles of which is undergoing double tracking and ratification.
For the movement of peaches to western markets, thirty-five special trains were run from Atlanta to Chattanooga, handling 219 cars, all of which moved on perfect schedule.

Off for Auto Trip
J. N. McEachern, well known insurance man of Atlanta, left Friday with his family for an automobile trip through central and southern cities. The party will visit Louisville, Mammoth Cave, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Asheville and many other points. At Asheville Mr. McEachern will attend the Southern Casualty convention which turns to Atlanta September 15. They will return to Atlanta September 15.

NEW CALENDAR ADOPTED FOR SCHOOL VACATIONS

To Weeks at Christmas and One Week in April

Under the calendar adopted Thursday by the board of education, Atlanta school children get more holidays during the coming 1915-16 term than they have ever had before.
School will open September 13. The first quarter of nine weeks ends November 13. The second quarter begins November 15 and closes January 23 and during this time the schools will be closed for Christmas holidays from December 17 to January 3. Heretofore the schools have not closed for Christmas holidays until the Friday before the 25th, giving the children only about ten days instead of two weeks.
The third quarter begins January 31 and ends March 31. The fourth and last quarter begins April 3 and ends June 3, but there will be a spring vacation from April 21 to April 30, inclusive.
Children who were regularly promoted will then have the usual long summer vacation until school opens September 13, 1916. The vacation schools for children who were not promoted or others who wish to study during the summer, begin June 18 and were run last year. Summer school pupils and summer school teachers will thus have from June 3 to June 19 for a vacation and from August 14 to September 11 for a vacation.

GOOD BREATHING APPEALS
"It just splits up the vacation time and gives everybody more frequent breathing spells," said Superintendent Landrum, in explaining the new calendar. "The entire vacation time was used years ago, when the schools were dismissed for a week during the first of May. The new calendar gives a little time away from actual study and will do away with the long grind which is always so hard on children and teachers."
Every school but the English Commercial High school will open September 13. The English Commercial school will not open until the new building on Pryor street is completed. This may not be until November. Whenever the school opens, time lost from the first half of the year will be made up by extending the spring session a few weeks.
Changes in the high schools were recommended by W. F. Dykes, superintendent of high schools and were referred to committees of the board. The chief of these is that pupils who have attained an average of 75 per cent in all studies throughout the year shall be exempted from final examinations and tests.
The board received the report of Superintendent Landrum that sixty-four new school rooms are under way and that construction so that the necessity of double sessions will be eliminated this year.
The board voted to change the name of Bell Street school to Taylor Street school and use it for colored children this year.

NEW TEACHERS ELECTED.
The following new teachers were elected in nomination by the superintendent Thursday and elected by the board:
Tenth School—C. M. Stodgill, associate science teacher, group 1; H. Green, associate shop and drawing teacher, group 1.
Commercial High School—E. E. Batts, associate English and mathematics teacher, group 2; E. E. Crawford, associate language teacher, group 2.
Boys' High—a clerk for Boys' High and one for Tech High.
Assistant Principals—Miss Mary E. Crawford, Miss Gussie Carr, Mrs. Julia Gardner, Miss Julia Bellinger and Mrs. I. C. Case.

Group 1—Miss May Robinson, Miss Louise Quarterman, Miss Catherine Wright, Miss Adelaide Ward, Mrs. E. L. Saxon.

Misses Eddie Lou Simmons and Annie Zuber were each granted a year's leave of absence.

Dr. George S. Morse was named physician for the colored schools and Charity Collins nurse. The election of a superintendent for the new negro night school was deferred.
The board instructed its finance committee to ask general council for an appropriation to widen the scope of the summer normal school so as to bring prominent instructors here and make Atlanta a summer educational center where teachers in every part of the school system may study.

Let the Telephone Save More Time for Play

"I am getting more time outdoors this summer," said a business man recently, "by letting my Telephone help me to shorten the business day."

"During the hot weather I work with my telephone all I can. I find I can cut a lot of the corners, save a lot of the unnecessary steps, and be ready to close up my desk much earlier when I have made liberal use of my telephone."

"The Telephone is making my summer pleasant and is making me more fit for the strenuous fall work."

Fall coming ahead of time forecasts a long winter season.

We've heard of destiny and that sort of thing, but the Petrograd correspondent who says that the evacuation of Poland was decided on in 1910 goes destiny one better.

Japan's Aid to Russia.

It is hardly possible that Petrograd has asked for troops; if there is one thing Russia has in superabundance it is men. The grim need of the Czar's forces is ammunition; and in this, Japan is able and willing to render important service.

One of the very interesting facts of the war is the cordial relationship that has developed between those countries which were at bloody odds not many years ago. Japan's aid to Russia has been no less valuable than her aid to Great Britain, and in supplying Russia with munitions she will prove a friend indeed.

Don't argue with a bee. It always carries its point.

One might say that there was considerable unrest in Europe just now.

There is nothing left to us but for Colonel Roosevelt to organize his rough riders and punish Berlin, the crime and impudently observed that she had warned our citizens not to travel on British ships. In all the notes from Berlin to Washington there was no recognition of international law and neutrality; there was only evasion of facts and principles; never a hint that the wrongs complained of would cease.

The Plight of Turkey.

Rumors that Turkey is threatening to ask a separate peace unless the Kaiser declares war on Italy are not unexpected. The defense of the Dardanelles is toppling, and only by some giant stroke of relief can it be saved from crashing to a fall. The Turks realize that if Constantinople is captured their day in Europe will be over. They now perceive the danger and folly of their Teutonic alliance. They know that, playing their present role to its disastrous end, they can hope for no consideration at the hands of Britain and France, once their protectors, and that Russia, their traditional enemy, will have her way at the Bosphorus.

In these circumstances Turkey naturally would be disposed to make a bargain that would save her from utter ruin. The interesting question, however, is whether the Allies would concede anything of importance for the surrender of the Dardanelles at this juncture. If they are reasonably sure of forcing the straits within the next few weeks, they will hardly be inclined to forego any fruits of promised victory. A German offensive against Italy might divert Italian aid from Gallipoli, but it is doubtful that it would effect any decisive change in the present trend in that quarter. The finish of the Turks seems inevitable.

Engishmen who used to follow the hounds are now hunting submarines in high power boats.

There is no further excuse for people not being well informed with the chautauque season on.

"No man is fitted to be a citizen of a free country," said Colonel Roosevelt, "unless he is willing to defend that country." It will be seen that the colonel is sticking to his reputation as a fearless, original thinker.

A Wild and Wasted Effort.

There has been much idle talk and wasted effort to constrain our Government to place an embargo on the shipment of war munitions. The movement did not spring from native Americans or thoughtful friends of peace but from apostles of Kaiserism and the enemies of the Allies. Professing to work in the cause of neutrality, they really were seeking to commit the United States to the most unneutral act conceivable. The Saturday Evening Post puts the case convincingly when it says:

"This country might prohibit the exportation of war supplies if its sympathies were so strongly attached to the nation against which they were used that it was indifferent to an appearance of neutrality, but to suppose this country will cast aside its neutrality in favor of the belligerent that sank the Lusitania is absurd."

Mr. Bryan himself in his most sentimental moods never dreamed of proposing that American manufacturers be forbidden to sell munitions to the Allies simply because the enemies of the Allies were unable for lack of sea power to avail themselves of the American opportunity. That doctrine was left to Mr. Hie Dr. Dernburg and Mr. Bartholdt. The United States did not put an embargo on munitions in the midst of the war simply because the United States does not wish to commit a deliberately hostile act against Great Britain and the nations that are fighting by her side.

What will Frisco do after the fair and the convention?

Having had a separate war, you can't blame the Turks for wanting a separate peace.

The Russians are not intentionally laying a trap for the Germans, but they will accomplish that effect in the end.

Germany Sees the Light.

If the latest advices from Berlin reflect true intent, and not merely a play for time, Germany has abandoned its lawless methods of submarine warfare, and American diplomacy has scored a beneficent triumph.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg is reported as saying that if the German submarine commander exceeded instructions in sinking the Arabic, the German Government will give the United States full satisfaction. Just what those "instructions" are is unknown, but presumably they are intended to prevent a repetition of the Lusitania incident and to safeguard the lives of neutral passengers aboard enemy ships. If in fact Germany has adopted such a policy and it develops that the destruction of the Arabic was unauthorized, the tension between Germany and the United States is relieved, at least, and a way is open for the adjustment of perilous issues.

This policy, if it is sincere, involves a complete reversal of Germany's former attitude. In her "war zone" proclamation some seven months ago she declared that every enemy merchant vessel would be liable to destruction regardless of the safety of passengers or crew; and at the same time she warned neutral nations that their ships and citizens would incur grave danger if they ventured upon the waters around the British Isles. A Berlin Journal, supposedly echoing official judgment, went so far as to predict that "men and freight alike, not only on British ships, but also under neutral flags, were doomed to sink." Germany, however, receded from this preposterous stand, and guaranteed that American merchantmen carrying non-contraband goods would be allowed to pass un molested.

In the case of the Lusitania, Germany not only refused to disavow the barbarous act of her submarine commander and to make reparation for the loss of American lives, she even defended the crime and impudently observed that she had warned our citizens not to travel on British ships. In all the notes from Berlin to Washington there was no recognition of international law and neutrality; there was only evasion of facts and principles; never a hint that the wrongs complained of would cease.

If, then, Germany now is disposed to disavow the sinking of the Arabic, provided the circumstances were as so far reported, and to give assurances that no such incident will recur, she has renounced to a radical degree the submarine policy upon which she embarked. She has passed from the point where she threatened American vessels flying their native flag to a point where she recognizes the rights of American citizens traveling on belligerent vessels. She has yielded, in short, to all the important principles for which our Government has contended, but which until now she has ignored.

It is earnestly to be hoped that this is true. The Government and the people of the United States desire peace with Germany as with all nations, but peace cannot dwell with injustice or stand at the sacrifice of honor. A mere apology for the torpedoing of the Arabic and the resultant destruction of American lives will not suffice. There must be reparation in full, and above all there must be positive assurance that the deed will not be repeated. Thus only can Germany show that she has not committed "a deliberately unfriendly" act.

It should be noted, moreover, that if Germany admits a wrong in the case of the Arabic she will have admitted, in principle, our claims in the case of the Lusitania, for the incidents are parallel. This being true, President Wilson will have won a victory for humanity as well as for America, a victory the more lustrous because achieved in peace.

Million-share days in the stock market wouldn't indicate that the American dollar was in any danger of growing smaller.

So many statements and so little action at the Dardanelles leads us to the belief that somebody is putting the lip in Gallipoli.

Editorial Echoes

Attila recalls that in his day nobody expected a Hun to adopt the customs of civilized warfare as a result of his having received three polite notes.—Courier-Journal.

There has been some grief in Scotland at the appearance of the German army of General von Mackensen, who is believed to be a Highlander gone wrong. The Manchester Guardian says the troubled folks fight with the assurance that "von Mackensen is no sort of a Mackenzie," but a member of a very old German family deriving its name from the village of Mackensen, in Hanover. The numerous Macks may be reassured or disappointed, as their sympathies lie.—Springfield Republican.

What will be the effect of Great Britain's declaration that cotton is contraband of war? How will it affect our exports of the great Southern staple? The answer given yesterday by the cotton markets—which presumably reflect the consensus of experts—is that the effect will be negligible. Contracts for future deliveries of the fibre closed slightly higher than on Saturday, before the royal proclamation was known. Possibly some sustaining influence was exerted by the accompanying announcement that the British government "contemplates the initiation of measures to relieve as far as possible any abnormal depression which might temporarily disturb market conditions." This suggests possible purchases for government account or treasury assistance to British spinners desirous of accumulating a reserve of the staple. So far as actual exports from this country are concerned, the proclamation will probably cause very little change.—New York Herald.

To the Bad Tempered.

FRANKIE R. ADKINSON BRUCE.

FRANKIE as it may seem, an extremely helpful means to overcome a tendency to outbreak of bad temper is to develop control of the muscles of the face.

Scientists have lately been studying the physiology of the emotions. They have found that when a man gets angry, frightened, or otherwise emotionally upset, certain bodily changes take place.

Signs of these are internal, others external. The internal changes are of a reflex character, hence not under control of the will. But it is different with the external changes.

These consist chiefly of changes in the expression of the face. The angry man closes his jaws tightly, clenches his teeth. Usually he furrows and furrows with an ugly frown. Sometimes his lips are drawn back exposing his teeth.

Now, experiment and observation have shown that there is so intimate a relation between his anger and his facial expression that if these particular changes in expression did not occur his anger would soon fade.

Some scientists, in fact, adopting the singular James-Lange theory of the emotion, go so far as to declare that the feeling of anger is wholly dependent on its expression. In other words, that one does not look angry because one feels angry, but one feels angry because one looks angry.

Most authorities believe that this is decidedly putting the cart before the horse. They agree that even if the looking angry is the result of feeling angry there is a sort of back action by which the looking angry makes a person feel angrier than he otherwise would.

They also believe that, as was just said, the more the facial expression is controlled, the greater the effect on the mind. This is the case, perhaps even passing away almost as soon as it comes.

On this point interesting testimony was offered more than a century ago by the statesman Burke.

It will not do to delay until your anger has become a real flame. For by that time you will have sought thought nor desire to control the appearance of your face.

And in this matter, as in all things, desire must be present to insure effective action by the will.

Living in the Family.

WE all know the type of person who likes to spread the thin butter of his philanthropy over as wide an area as the community as possible, where it will show, instead of within close quarters, as it should, in the acceptance of his own family. Who expects the great virtuoso of song or piano or viola to give concerts at home to the plain little temperamental woman who keeps the books of the firm? Who expects the world-moulding orator to influence the domestic circle with his subtle persuasiveness, his mounting eloquence and his grand gestures and metaphors. One man goes out and faces an audience; quite another comes home and toasts himself superbly in the fires of his own private fireside.

Living in the family is a fine art, too. It is a delicate balance of the intellect to the contrivance of some adroit or memorial form of beauty. Many never come anywhere near this point, but they manage to hold their own in the family as well as in the world.

One man goes out and faces an audience; quite another comes home and toasts himself superbly in the fires of his own private fireside.

The family structure rests on tolerance, latitude, concessions—all of them things that proceed from the underlying, underlying fact of love as the rivers of paradises are fed by the great waters of heaven. Love is not, it is useless to try to have a satisfactory domestic atmosphere. The strain and friction incident to every day living are inevitable. It is necessary that all the strength the primal feeling of the heart can bring is needed to assure the lastingness of a sympathetic union, and a steadfast and single purpose.

Secrets of Medieval Glass.

THE brilliant colors of the medieval stained glasses have been the despair of glass makers for hundreds of years—those vivid colors that let all the light through so that it painted pictures on the walls of floors so modern craftsmen have been able to reproduce except for a few tints of which a maker here and another there managed to find the secret.

The smashing of so many windows in the cathedral at Rheims, made in the 13th century, gave an opportunity for careful analysis. The fragments picked up around the cathedral were collected by M. Cheneau, assistant director of the French school of mines, who reports to the Academie des Sciences some of the results.

It shows that the workmen of the 13th century had actually acquired an extraordinary knowledge of the effects of many minerals which contained chemical coloring matter entirely unknown to them. For instance, they used natural cobalt as they did the advantage of a delicate process by which the nickel (always associated with cobalt in nature) was eliminated. This they did by heating the brown shade and the darkness that results from the presence of nickel.

Then they intentionally added copper, the greenish-blue of which corrects the too violet blue of the pure oxide of cobalt.

They produced their violet glass with the natural unimpure ore of manganese. Had they purified it they would not get rid of the copper and the cobalt which are found in the ore, and the result would have been tints of far less purity.

Their red glass, the secret of which was lost for many centuries, is obtained, as we know, by the use of a mixture of red iron oxide and lead, made with gold, is really a bottle-green glass covered with an extremely thin enamel colored with oxidized copper.

M. Cheneau's copper was slightly oxidized.

The secret of the greenish blue is the superiority of their stained glass, like the superiority of many of the other arts of those 13th century craftsmen over ours. It is the tendency of the modern-day workmen to seek for results by the use of products that are too chemically pure and to use them in a way that is too restrictive to conform to the methods of the artists knew the great value of iron tints.

"Perhaps he wasn't yawning," suggested Carolyn. "He may have been trying to say something, dear."

NATIONAL DEFENSE PROBLEMS.

LESSONS OF THE WAR—STRATEGY.
 BY FREDERICK J. HARRIS.

WARFARE in modern times is something far different than it was in the days of Napoleon or even during Grant's campaigns in the Civil war. A thousand men are employed now where commanders formerly had to rely upon a hundred; army corps are moved with the most rapidity and efficiency; air warfare is now a factor; at least an air factor; and there entered into the equation of warfare were formerly only one had to be dealt with.

Such being the case, strategy and careful manipulation of the forces at hand are regarded by the military strategists of the future as of a more modern commander. It was to learn the most up-to-date forms of this military strategy that Uncle Sam instructed his officers abroad, among them the most brilliant army officers on his list, to watch the war and report to Washington upon all the moves. These reports go to the Army War College where they are carefully studied and the lessons are then passed on to the campaigns of the future and the men to direct them. For, in the event of war, it would never do for the United States army to be ignorant of any of the latest military habits of the world.

Just as the armies battling in the trenches have been so changed, so have the tactics of the ancient Romans, because of the failure of the modern guns to toss shells between the trenches, so have the commanders of the allied forces resorted to the strategy of the Romans in dealing with the forces of a modern commander. They make believe that every time the Roman senate dispatched an army against the Carthaginian invader it was defeated upon the soil of Italy. For years Hannibal remained victorious. He was the greatest military genius since Alexander the Great. Step by step he led the possessions of Rome under his scepter. Apparently there was nothing that could save the city of Rome from conquest and sack. This situation in Roman history is easily recognizable as analogous to the present situation of the United States. The early days of the war in which the preparation of the war saves them an advantage similar to that won by the military genius of Hannibal.

There came a change in Roman strategy. The Italian legions skillfully avoided open battle for some time and then the Roman legions moved upon the Carthaginian army and scored a decisive victory.

This strategy of the Romans was used with remarkable success in turning the German back before Paris. The German drive was stopped in the Ukraine. Russia indicates that a similar program is being followed. Generally speaking Germany is being kept on the defensive. The Roman strategy is being used to the advantage of the United States.

While the enemy is thus being taken to the utmost, say the experts, the allies are gaining that which is most valuable to them—time. This time they are using in many ways. They are drilling armies that will bring them up to the degree of preparedness occupied by Germany at the beginning of the war. They are marshalling the supplies of the enemy. They are pulling the diplomatic wires that are constantly developing strength in support of their cause.

With about 5,000,000 troops disposed along a battle-line of three fronts, covering some 800 miles and opening up the front of the enemy, the problems of strategy confronting the commander-in-chief in the present war are so much vaster in extent and so much more difficult of solution when compared with any previous war that it is not possible for anyone to call the present war a "struggle like a pasture with toy soldiers when it finally becomes possible to compare them with the problems which have been faced and solved in the present war.

It is only the vastly superior resources of the modern commander which have made the solution of these problems possible. The telephone, the wireless, the air communication with all parts of the battle front for the modern system of inter-communication is so perfect that practically nothing occurs along any cutting of any line that is not reported to the commander-in-chief, no matter whether it appears to be important or not. It is impossible for a man at the end of the line to know what is going on unless a message is sent against his command will have upon the entire army. It may be a feint designed to distract attention from some greater movement many miles away or it may be the forerunner of a concerted attack all along the line.

Accordingly every movement made by the enemy is at once telephoned or wireless to headquarters and it is noted by the officers of the head staff and discussed by them in relation to the entire front. Orders are immediately issued for counter-movements and it is probable that within a quarter of an hour after the receipt of the first message a final course of action has been decided upon. It is not possible to carry it out. This would have been impossible because of the invention of the wireless and the telephone—but, the Napoleon never imagined a 700-mile battle front.

Another factor that enters largely into the strategic equation is the aeroplane scout who hovers over the enemy's lines day and night, reporting instantly every movement which he perceives beneath him. It is possible for their air scouts to watch the activities of the enemy's forces and report instantly to headquarters.

It is therefore practically impossible for one army to prepare for a movement upon a large scale without betraying its intention by its attention to the sky which follows every move. One of the great surprises of the present war, according to military experts, is that there have been no surprises. Not a single instance of a consequence of ambush or flank attack has taken place since the commencement of the war, owing to the superb work of the aviators and aeroplanes. Thus is the modern commander relieved of one great fear which continually harassed his predecessors.

The modern strategist who attacks the problems presented by warfare on the gigantic scale of the present conflict usually selects for his headquarters some large building well to the rear of his army. The telephone wires are strung in a star pattern and exchange erected at the corners possible to ring up any portion of the battlefield at once. Wireless operators are also installed to receive the dispatches from the air scouts and the field wireless stations.

On a large table is spread a scale map, showing the most minute variations of the terrain along the battle-front and the stations of all the troops. Reinforcements under way are identified by arrows.

Sentries are posted at all exits and approaches and no one is allowed to come within fifty feet of headquarters without a special permit. A mounted patrol is stationed nearby, ready to rush messages in case the telephone wire is broken and automobiles ceaselessly dash up to the house and then away again carrying the division commander who comes for personal interviews with the commander-in-chief.

An anxious moment is approaching. The right wing of the army has suffered a setback from which it must recover before the entire field army can operate as a unit. The whole campaign, involving more than a million men and possibly endangering the future of the nation, hinges on the fate of the hard-fighting right. Every time the wireless receiver clicks and buzzes or the telephone bell rings the officers who are bent over the huge map look up and cease talking. But the expected message does not arrive.

A big, square-set man dressed in khaki and with ribbons of multi-colored decorations upon his chest is pacing up and down the room, his hands behind his back. For two days he has spoken only in monosyllables and has only answered in the most curt and curt queries of his staff. The fate of a nation rests in his hands. An hour lost by the right wing in reforming and joining his plan of attack may cost him the battle and with it the campaign.

Once more the wireless receiver clicks. The operator does not wait to type the message, but dashes off at once. The chief tends over his shoulder. The big man scowls, for the right wing is not advancing. Suddenly his face brightens and he dashes to the desk where the operator commanding the right wing to feign retreat for two hours and then, at the moment that the reinforcements arrive, to rally and attack. A moment later a high-power motor car sweeps out from the porte-cochere of the building, carrying an adjutant sitting beside the square-set man in khaki.

The adjutant presses forward, his mind occupied in planning the psychological effect of the battle action. At the very moment when the adjutant retreats, the advance of the enemy line is checked. The adjutant advances his armies will commence, he, the commander-in-chief, shall be there to lend spirit by his presence, to correct any possible error in strategy or execution and to insure the fullest measure of efficient generalship in every corps, in every division, in every regiment and, as far as possible, in every man.

The weapons of war may change, the manner of fighting may change, strategy may change—but men and the psychology of men remain the same.

NOISE

BY DR. FRANK CRAWLEY.

THE chorus of his American soldiers. We are proud of our new inventions, but every one of them seems geared to make as much racket as possible.

The railroad trains are luxurious, the subway is swift, the street cars are convenient, the elevated railway is an excellent device; but all of them have iron wheels that practically nothing occurs along any cutting of any line that is not reported to the commander-in-chief, no matter whether it appears to be important or not. It is impossible for a man at the end of the line to know what is going on unless a message is sent against his command will have upon the entire army. We are an adjustable people. We get used to the infernal din of the clean-baggage car, and learn to sleep sweetly in a car alongside of a switch engine making eleven kinds of noise right by our ear.

The strawberry pudger and the wild clothes man come along as we are trying to get a morning nap, lay back their ears, and howl like a lonely pup.

The newsboys, at 11 o'clock at night, haw! out some extra war news so that everybody in the house runs to the window to see where the fire is.

The workmen on the building that is going up across the way slam down their steel grids until we imagine the Zeppelins have got us at last, and are blowing up a few hospitals and foundling asylums.

Right in front of our flat a chauffeur stops his taxi near his back door. He starts honking away, sounding all the while like a bunch of machine guns in action.

Children squeal and yell in their street games.

The fire engines come along like the day of judgment, the sirens blowing, the bells clanging, the horses clattering.

The postman blows his whistle as he approaches and yells like a Sioux chief up the hall when he has a letter, for which you must come down four flights of stairs to get to him. He is also entitled to a seat on the fire engine.

The iceman, the grocer's boy, the butcher and the baker—each has his part in the mighty chorus of city life.

Emerging from the theater, you find wild confusion like the wrath of heaven, the starter yelling out the carriage numbers, the taxis exploding, the chauffeur quarreling, the crowd all talking at once, and the street car going by like the wagon of Jehu, the son of Nimeh.

We are, of course, a very wonderful and progressive people but why make such a hullabaloo about it? Mr. Jefferson's declaration was deficient, however; he asserted that every man is entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. He should have added that we are also entitled to a bit of quiet—at least now and then.

"You remember that chap Jones, who made a bet of $10,000 that he would walk from San Francisco to New York without a cent in his pocket?"

"Yes. Did he win the bet?"

"Not quite. He got as far as here, was arrested as a vagrant, and forced against his will to ride three blocks in a patrol wagon. That disqualified him."

The passenger on the little jerk-water railroad was irritated at the crawling speed. He summoned the porters.

NEAR-FIGHT IN BOARD OF EDUCATION MEETING

Alderman Armistead and Walter Fudge Clash Over School Geographies

A final effort to induce the board of education to rescind its action in changing geographies in two grades of the public schools was made recently in an afternoon, and its only result was a near-fight between Alderman James W. Armistead, who introduced the resolution, and Walter Fudge, one of several labor union men who went to the board's meeting in an attempt to restrain the board from making the change.

No blows were struck in the disturbance, which occurred just outside of the room where the board was meeting, and the only casualty reported is to the thumb of George F. Eubanks, eighth ward member, who was acting in the role of peacemaker.

Mr. Fudge and Mr. Eubanks both appeared before the board to plead that the board reconsider its action in changing the geographies used in two grades of the school from the Frye to the Farr & McMurrah geography. Mr. Still first made a very lengthy talk in favor of the Frye book.

Mr. Fudge rose from the floor, and said: "What do you think of a board member who will offer to pay a man to withdraw his name from the injunction petition?"

Major E. J. Guinn, president of the board, told the speaker that he must name his specific.

"I refer to Mr. Armistead," Mr. Fudge answered. "He told one of the signers that he would pay him $25 to withdraw his name and to get Eubanks' original withdrawal."

Mr. Armistead asked if it were not true that he had simply told Mr. Eubanks that he would withdraw his name and get the others to do the same, he would be glad to pay him $25 for the time he lost from work in handling the matter, and if he had not explained at the time, that he wanted to get the names of union men off the injunction petition because of the union difference.

Mr. Still answered the question instead of Mr. Fudge, admitting that the statement was true, but adding that Mr. Armistead further told him that there was some animosity between himself and Mr. Fudge, and that he had won this geography fight and wanted to stay in.

It then looked as if the incident was closed. The board members heard reports from several people protesting the change, and then voted not to reconsider the previous action.

Mr. Fudge and Mr. Still left the chamber of commerce hall, where the meeting was held, and they were followed out by Alderman Armistead, with Mr. Eubanks close behind. Just outside the door Alderman Armistead, without speaking, rushed at Mr. Fudge. Mr. Eubanks grabbed him and Mr. Still grabbed Mr. Fudge, pulling him towards the steps. Mr. Eubanks in holding Alderman Armistead back into the room where the board was meeting, and Mr. Still and Mr. Fudge left the building.

The failure of the board to rescind its action in the matter of the geographies used in two grades of the school has been in progress for about two months. First, Still, Fudge, Griggs et al., went to the board seeking an injunction, which was denied them. Then the city council passed its action. Although the board made the change by a vote of only 6 to 5 it sustained its first action Thursday afternoon by a vote of 10 to 1.

A motion by Alderman Armistead was adopted by the board, accepting the books from the Southern School Book Company, to be used in the schools of the city of Atlanta at the following prices: First book at 55 cents, second book at $1.

LA GRANGE GRAPHIC IS CREDITED WITH STORY
In a recent issue of The Journal's Sunday morning section there appeared a short item telling that there was a queer chicken in LaGrange, Ga., and that it was a strictly rooster not wholly hen, yet is a little of both. The Journal designated the reporter as "The Birthplace of this news. This was an error. The news was first printed in "The LaGrange Graphic," of which J. B. Daniel is owner and manager and S. G. DRUGMEN TO CO-OPERATE TO ENFORCE DOPE LAW

Will Hold Conference Friday With District Attorney and His Aids

For the purpose of adopting means to cooperate more closely with the United States government in its anti-drug campaign under the new Harrison act, the retail druggists of Atlanta and of neighboring towns will meet Friday afternoon at a cocktail in the Chamber of Commerce building.

This meeting was called by David G. Wise, president of the Atlanta Retail Druggists' association. Druggists and government officials will speak, including Dr. W. S. Elkin, Jr., District Attorney Hooper Alexander, D. J. Gantt, revenue agent; L. L. Fronberger, special agent, and A. O. Blalock, collector of internal revenue.

The proper enforcement of the anti-drug law, which prohibits druggists from selling narcotics of opium without the prescription of a reputable physician authorized to such sale, depends largely upon the retail druggists, it was pointed out by a government agent, and the co-operation of these druggists will mean much to Atlanta in helping rid the city of drug habits.

Dr. Elkin, in speaking of the meeting, said that there were 3,000 drug addicts in and near Atlanta. He stressed the necessity of a hospital for the cure of these people, and urged the help of all druggists to eliminate the sale of drugs that turn normal people into addicts.

FEDERATION OPPOSED TO PROHIBITION IN CALL

Resolutions by the Atlanta Federation of Trades urging Governor Harris not to include prohibition in his call for an extra session were carried to the governor's office Friday by a committee of the federation. The resolutions were adopted at a meeting Thursday night.

It is the unqualified opinion of the Atlanta Federation of Trades that we have already had too much agitation upon this one question for one year at least, to the detriment of very important questions of vast interest to the people of Georgia, both organized and unorganized," the resolutions read.

Louis F. Marquardt, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, addressed the meeting. He spoke strongly for the passage of the resolutions.

Yes; S. S. S. Is Purely Vegetable
Nature's Safe Blood Treatment

Known for 50 Years as the Best Remedy for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sciatica, Skin Diseases, etc.

Scientists have discovered that the forest and the field, are abundantly supplied with vegetation of various kinds, that furnish the ingredients for making a remedy for practically every ill and ailment of mankind. Medicines made from roots, herbs, and barks which Nature has placed at the disposal of man, are better than strong mineral mixtures and concoctions. Mineral medicines work dangerously on the delicate parts of the system, especially the stomach and bowels, by sitting out the lining membrane, producing chronic dyspepsia and often entirely ruining the health.

S. S. S. is guaranteed to be a purely vegetable remedy. It is made entirely of gentle-acting, healing, purifying roots, herbs and barks, possessing properties that build up all parts of the system, in addition to removing all impurities and poisons from the blood. S. S. S. is a safe treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Chronic Eczema, Erysipelas, and all disorders of the blood. It cleanses the entire system and it's permanent. S. S. S. is at any drug store. S. S. S. is a standard remedy recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. If you are a peculiar case write to S. S. S. Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

TODAY'S EVENING STORY THE BLUE PLATE

(Copyright, 1915, by W. Warner.)

(Copyright, 1915, by W. Warner.) It was an heirloom, that royal blue plate with its bizarre border of queer little cows and its center of quaint old cottages and trees. Also it was a relic and a souvenir and hence very precious to Genevieve. A great-grandmother of some royal duke or general or some notable person—Genevieve herself was a bit hazy about the point—had given it to a great-aunt of Genevieve's grandmother, who had bequeathed it to Genevieve, with instructions to be very, very careful of it and hand it down intact to future generations.

Genevieve had always felt that her grandmother had greatly honored her. Several girl cousins had been bitterly envious. Which naturally enhanced the plate in Genevieve's eyes. Before she was married she kept it in her trunk in a compartment all to herself, where she insured safety by wadding upon wadding of tissue paper. She had a younger brother who was careless and so no place but the interior of that trunk, which she kept in her closet, was remote enough to contain that plate.

But, of course, as soon as she and Cort were married it was brought out and put on the sideboard. Cort ad-

other like it, and, anyhow, you couldn't glare at it as he went out--then his eye-drops in embarrassment. In wide glance. That night he lagged home to dinner, wishing the meal was over. Genevieve was the same as usual, forlornly polite. But the dinner was unusually good--creamed new potatoes and a roast that Genevieve prided herself on. She had learned it at cooking school. Cort ate with appetite. When he had finished his tea, Genevieve rose to get a bowl of nuts on the sideboard. Cort didn't offer to get them for her. He had never touched anything on the sideboard since a certain night. Now he watched her wisely. The dinner was good, but he wished it had been poorer, and he was before that confounded blue plate cracked their happiness in two. He wished-- "Let me try," he urged, picking up the nearest plate. "That's a shame--can we mend it--fix it together?" She swept the fragments to one side and got the bowl of nuts. There was a certain indifference in her mien that puzzled Cort. "I don't think so," he said carelessly. "Let me try," he urged, picking up the nearest plate. "That's a shame--can we mend it--fix it together?" She swept the fragments to one side and got the bowl of nuts. There was a certain indifference in her mien that puzzled Cort.

"Gen!" Cort cried in sympathy. "That's a shame--can we mend it--fix it together?" She swept the fragments to one side and got the bowl of nuts. There was a certain indifference in her mien that puzzled Cort. "I don't think so," he said carelessly. "Let me try," he urged, picking up the nearest plate. more-- Gen was half crying. Cort kissed her with a win unknown for months. Then he gathered up the blue pieces of china and took them out to the garbage can. "Thank heaven!" he said, as he emptied them. "Oh, dear!" finally exclaimed the mother nervously, "what shall I do with this child?" A crusty old bachelor seated across from her got up. "Shall I open the window for you, madam?" he asked.

ILLEGAL DRUG SALE STOPS NEXT MONDAY

Camp for Friends Will Open That Day, and Sale Stops

The death knell of the illegal drug sale in Atlanta will be sounded Monday.

A week ago government officials said they had the drug situation in Atlanta so well in hand that they could cut off the illegal sale of morphine just as soon as provision was made to care for drug friends who might die from the shock if absolutely unable to get their drug.

The physicians of the city health department announced Friday that they will open a camp for the treatment of drug addicts at the city detention hospital on Monday.

The institution will be jointly maintained by the city and county governments.

In Jacksonville, Fla., the federal agents who are now working here cut the sale of morphine and other narcotics down by 80 per cent in a short campaign. They expect to have the same success here.

Mr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, on Friday received the first application of the addict for admission to the new hospital, or "camp," as the physicians term it.

The application was made by a man seventy-two years of age, who told Dr. Kennedy that he had been a drug fiend for twenty years. Recently he had a granddaughter, who is working in the money to buy the drug which he said he could not do without. He told Dr. Kennedy that he wanted to take treatment and to be cured of the habit.

A REAL FLESH BUILDER FOR THIN PEOPLE

Who Would Increase Weight

This man and woman who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 25 pounds of healthy, "easy-to-get" flesh try eating a little Sarsaparilla with their meals for a while and see results. There is a good reason why they should. First, Sarsaparilla cleanses the system, gets rid of the impurities that are in the blood, and makes the blood pure. Then, it builds up the system, and makes the body strong. Many people, having followed these directions, have gained weight, increased their vitality, and have felt better than ever before.

Signs does not of itself make fat but it makes your food the purpose is to help the digestive organs turn the fats, sugars and proteins of what you have eaten into a nourishing nutriment for the tissues of the body. Sarsaparilla is an easily assimilated and it turns the blood on readily accepted food that is nourishment now taken from the people's bodies as waste. Sarsaparilla is designed to stop the waste and make the food building nutriment of the very same grade you are getting now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones, and to see that the elements, efficient and responsive. Jacobs' Pharmacy and other leading druggists are authorized to sell it in large quantities. Forty tablets to a package—no quantity of waste increase of more than 25 pounds in every package.—(Adv.)

TRYING EXPERIENCES FOR MRS. JOYNER IN STORM

Wife and Children of Former Atlantian in Galveston During Hurricane

W. R. Joyner, state fire commissioner, has received an interesting letter from his son, Richard W. Joyner, of Galveston, enclosing a clipping from the Dallas Morning News describing the experiences of Mrs. Joyner and their three children in Galveston during the hurricane.

Richard W. Joyner, a former Atlantian, now lives at 3623 Dickerson avenue, Galveston, but was in Dallas when the great storm broke. His wife and children were in Galveston. According to the Dallas News, he was the first person to connect with Galveston by long distance after the storm.

The News states that Mrs. Joyner and the children sought refuge first in the Beach hotel. When this place was no longer safe, they were carried to the police station to Schott's drug store. While the storm was at its height, fire broke out near the store and Mrs. Joyner and the other refugees there were hurried through the water-filled streets to the American National Insurance building, where they remained until the storm was over.

Mr. Hoxsey will petition the board to renew this appropriation, and he will be backed by the earnest plea of a large delegation of citizens.

ABOUT A SLOWLY WIFE

By Edna K. Wooley

"I HEAR that Tom Ellis has left his wife," spoke a woman who sat back of me in the street car.

"I guess that's so," said the other woman who sat with her. "I saw Bertha yesterday."

"You know that's so," said the other woman who sat with her. "I saw Bertha yesterday."

The Girl's Job

By Jessie Roberts

MY DEAR MISS ROBERTS—My attention was drawn to an article of yours, asking for information regarding equine raising.

"In the first place, it is unwise to buy any but the best birds to start with. Probably Caneaux or Plymouth Rocks will prove the most all-around breeds.

"It is pleasant work raising the birds, the only disagreeable feature being the cleaning of the pens and absolute cleanliness is essential to the health and vigor of the pigeons.

"I would advise a young woman to work-up a trade of her own. She should send a circular letter to such persons as she thinks might purchase the birds, and visit all dealers within reach.

"The wholesale houses do not pay very much, but the advantage is that they buy outright, and will purchase any quantity, large or small, at any time of the year.

"From squabs ranging from ten to eleven pounds the dozen the average price is about $4.50 per dozen.

The Way to Stop Speeders

One way to slow down the auto speeders is to keep the streets in poor repair.

Just at the time when "the freedom of the sea" is one of the great issues in a world war and naval operations are a matter of burning interest, William Hamilton Osborne comes to the front with a gripping naval story that will add materially to his already brilliant reputation.

Mr. Osborne can be trusted to catch the current news values and employ them with tremendous effect in literature. He served his time on the New York Star while he was studying law on the side and his newspaper training gave him rare discrimination.

Osborne's newest work is "Neal of the Navy." It is not yet published except in the form of proof sheets, but in this form it has been passed upon by literary critics and its instant success is assured.

Neal "has the sea in his blood." He is the son of a heroic sea captain from whom he has inherited his love of shipbuilding and his chief aim is to become a naval architect.

LITTLE BEDTIME STORIES BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

"The Hunt For Sticky-Toes," (Copyright, 1915, by J. O. Lloyd.)

TLL through the Green Forest the hunt for Sticky-Toes the Tree Toad went on. It was there he had last been seen, and so it was there that his neighbors and one-time friends of the Green Meadows and Green Forest and Old Orchard looked for him.

So All the Birds, With Sammy at Their Head, Began to Search the Old Orchard.

Sammy lighted on a branch of an old apple tree not two feet from where Sticky-Toes sat huddled up in plain sight. "We'll hunt through all the trees," declared Sammy. "We'll look in every hole and under every piece of bark. If he is here we'll find him. If he isn't here I don't know where to look."

So all the birds, with Sammy at their head began to search the Old Orchard. Chatter the Red Squirrel helped. So did Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. There wasn't a hole big or small that they didn't look into. There wasn't a thing big enough for Sticky-Toes to hide under that they didn't peep under. And as they hunted their tongues flew and they told of all the dreadful things that they would do to him when they caught him.

Friend the Song Sparrow seemed to have caught the madness and declared that any one who would let others suffer so ought to be made to suffer too. Not one of them stopped to think that probably Sticky-Toes wanted rain as much as they did. That foolish idea that he could call rain had quite upset their common sense. It often is that way with people. Somebody says a foolish thing and everybody believes it without using reason at all.

When Sticky-Toes heard Little Friend say that he was tempted to speak for Little Friend was not a foot away, and yet didn't see him. But he wisely held his tongue, for he knew that with all his old friends feeling that way nothing he could say would make them feel any different. So he kept perfectly still and watched the hunt for him and wished and wished with all his might that he could call rain.

A dozen times those who were hunting for Sticky-Toes looked straight at him without seeing him. If it hadn't been for the serious matter Sticky-Toes would have laughed. But he knew that it was no laughing matter. At last July, round, round Mr. Sun went to bed behind the Purple Hills and one by one the little people of the Green Meadows and Green Forest and Old Orchard who had been hunting Sticky-Toes all day went to bed also, hoping that on the morrow it would rain. And not one among them hoped so earnestly that it did Sticky-Toes.

Next Story: At Last the Voice of Sticky-Toes is Heard.

How Thin Trained Nurse (reading)—It may be that in the big one, woman escaped down a drain pipe. Old Invalid Lady—My, how thin the poor thing must have been!

A Warning Be thankful, for your small bit. And, sorry, do not kick. For lots of things you haven't got. Would only make you sick.

Can't Stop It Sister—Johnny, you've showed your bad temper today. Remember the Bible says "don't let your sin go down on your wrath." Johnny—How kin I stop it?

Today's Household Affairs

By Mary Lee

GRAPEs will soon be plentiful and those housekeepers who are fortunate enough to possess a grape arbor will be looking for means of disposing of the surplus that cannot be eaten.

The grapes are stripped from the stem, washed and cooked until broken down. The apples are washed and cut up without peeling or coring and boiled until soft enough to strain. One cup of sugar is allowed for every pint of the combined juices (apple and grape). Put the sugar into the oven to heat and the juice over the stove. Cook five minutes. Add the sugar and cook five minutes after the sugar has dissolved. The best results are obtained when equal quantities of the two juices.

Berries and wild grapes make a delicious combination, but in this case two parts of the elderberries and one of the grapes will make the best jelly. The men of the family will appreciate a grape relish that goes well with bread and meat, hot or cold.

Choose rather underripe grapes, seven per cent of the raisins, and orange juice. Pick from the stems and seeds, and put the pulp from the skins. Put the latter into a preserving kettle over the fire with just enough water to keep them from burning. In another kettle place the pulp and cook until the seeds loosen. Strain through a sieve and add to the skins with a half pint of vinegar, three pounds of sugar and a teaspoonful of citric acid.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—If foxes have holes it is a pity thousands of them did not act there to have compared as the skirts of their bodies along about women's shoulders during the hot summer weather.

Just why women should have taken up this fashion during a humid, sultry summer is more than moderate in using them. It is not pleasant slight to see a fat, wool fox festering against the shoulders of a girl. It makes one think more of the weather than ever, and turn to the soda water fountain as a relief.

There are girls who wear white foxes when they dance. There are those who wear them when they go on the beach, even on Long Island, that things should be prohibited. It is credit to the onlookers. There was a summer in Paris not long ago when every woman who was smart wore a red fox across her shoulders, but fortunately that fashion did not reach America, or if it did, it was quickly squelched. The white ones are bad enough, but the red ones are worse.

This has been a fur summer, and it promises to be a fur winter, and yet we are told that the trappers nearly starved last winter because of the scarcity of foxes. There is a commercial mathematician to explain. Possibly the sheep and the goat are in such great numbers during the hot season in order to make way for a new stock and more sales this winter. A new fashion has been started by the French, and that is to have long foxes to catch its tail on the shoulder and swing down and across with its head resting on her hip. The sketch shows how it is done. This idea was exploited at one of the smart gatherings at a summer resort and has been instantly taken up.

The blouse is circular and embroidered with the gold above the hem. The lines of the metal thread are not heavy, other than the red, which is used for the trimmings. There is just a shimmering wash, but the skirt is made of the velvet. The sleeves also have this gold embroidery at the top. There is no longer any doubt of the fashionable fashion for metal embroidery. There must have been a great deal of this billon trimming in France which can be used during war times when so many of the factories are closed.

No material seems safe from it; even fur and velvet that will be worn during the evening will be lavishly adorned with metal and cut steel is showered on the new velvet hats.

CAKES WORTH WHILE

MARSHMALLOW FILLING FOR LAYER CAKE—Boil two cups of sugar and one of water until to rope. Before removing it from the stove, add a half pound of fresh marshmallows, broken in small pieces; when these have dissolved, pour the mixture gradually into the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Beat with a whisk until nearly cold, when it is time to spread the cake.

Crackers Fail To Hit Timely; Beaten by Vols

Local Club Runs Up Record of Twenty-Five Consecutive Scoreless Innings—Perry a Mark for Drives by Vols

For those who have been trailing in the wake of the fortunes of the Crackers...

Taking said features in order, it may be observed that when Matty Manning...

Speaking in the terms of Mr. F. Yost, of football fame, a strong offense is the best defense...

Twice a double resulted. In the third inning with runners on second and third...

Back in late July, after winning something like 13 out of 15 games...

After that great spree they fell away again, and main attention was given Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

The Braves have had their touch of facing fire—of taking the trenches by storm...

So the Braves have their chance again, as on Tuesday they were but four games from the top.

Ward Dawson and H. A. Throckmorton, the partnership of the Los Angeles and the most and the most...

Light BY GRANTLAND RICE

There comes a giggle of massive proportions. Loud peals of laughter that heavenward flit...

Now they are standing and whooping and raving. Throwing a spasm of pleasure supreme...

Wait till the laughter is loudest and longest. Wait till the cheer is come to its crest...

Two years ago the Indian was a vital, even though a numerically small, feature in baseball. Chief Bender, the Chippewa star...

MEANING WHAT BY "WRECKNESS"? "Travers" weak work with the wood may hurt him at Detroit...

Sir: I see where "Westerner" picks McLoughlin to beat Williams at Forest Hill...

Two years ago, as August drifted into September, there were only two leaders in the spotlight—John McGraw and Connie Mack.

There is more bone and sinew to the Tigers and Red Sox than there is to the White Sox...

THE BRAVES AGAIN. Back in late July, after winning something like 13 out of 15 games...

Now the Braves have worked their way back within range and there is a feeling among baseball men...

Grantland Rice will "cover" the National Amateur Golf Championship tournament...

Rickey Expects Paulet To Round Out His Club

By Innis Brown

"If Gene Paulet shows enough stuff to make me a first-class first baseman, then I will have a hard time keeping my club out of the first division next season."

It was Branch Rickey talking. He referred to the St. Louis Browns, and the statement was made almost before the ink on Paulet's contract was dry.

"You see our club has never had a satisfactory first baseman since the days when old Tom Jones played the bag. Tom has been gone for several seasons, and all this time we have been casting about trying to find a suitable man to follow in his footsteps."
