Commissioner Price, After Trip Over Georgia, Is Enthusiastic Over Plans for Safeguarding Market

FINDS GEORGIA CROPS WIDELY DIVERSIFIED

Farmers of State in Better Conditions, So Far as Food Goes, Than Before in Years, He Says

Just returned from a trip through south Georgia, Commissioner of Agriculture J. B. Price, announced today the plans which have been made for safeguarding this year's cotton crop in the event of the outbreak of a pest or the declaration of a embargo against this product.

MUCH COTTON PICKED

In the southeastern section of the state, Commissioner Price said, it was found that many fields were two-thirds open and that not a few of them were half picked. This cannot possibly be more than 50 per cent of an average crop in that section.

ATLANTA BANKS PRAISED

"The people over the state are interested in every thing that is going on in Atlanta, and it is particularly important that, insofar as is possible, this situation should be taken care of locally. It is the duty of the producer right at his home, and this is what is most needed."

The South and Its People.

"I do not know," said Edmund Burke, the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people."

Here and there among our friends in the North and elsewhere are certain splenic and wised souls who have undertaken to indict the whole South-land for the madness of a Cobb county mob.

The epithets quoted are from the Chicago Tribune, a paper chiefly memorable for its defense of carpet-baggers and still notorious for sectional rancor.

The Journal heretofore has refrained, for the most part, from notice of these transductions because we have felt that in the circumstances it was more important to defend the State against inward dangers than outward gabbings; and we still insist that the supreme duty is to purge away the crime of the mob against the Commonwealth.

Hence, we find in this region a social solidarity, a sense of common kinship rarely witnessed except, perhaps, in certain portions of New England.

"If lynchings were the one manifestation of disregard for human life or the supremacy of law, the remainder of the country might presume to set itself up a judge of the South.

This record, which might be multiplied almost indefinitely, in no wise extenuates lawlessness in the South; but it does show that lawlessness is not peculiar to the South; it shows that elsewhere as here, "the web of our life is of a mingled yarn, the good and ill together."

Plans for Carnival Week are being formulated by Atlanta never conceived a happier or timelier enterprise than that of Carnival Week, to be held in November when Georgia's bountiful crops have been gathered and the hearts of the people are as mellow as the golden autumn sun.

from blood no base as this and from ideas so insane. Only the most bigoted prejudice could harbor such an opinion; only the most abandoned viciousness could express it.

In an economic sense alone, the South of 1915 is far stronger than was the entire United States three decades ago. Commenting on the South's marvelous progress within that period, Mr. Arthur D. Yittle, of Boston, Mass., one of the most distinguished scientists of the day, has said: "It cuts more lumber, mines nearly twice as much coal, produces four times the petroleum and nearly six times the spelter; it has more looms and spindles and a much larger investment in manufacturing plants; the products of its farms are worth fifty per cent more; it makes nearly twice as much pig iron and twice as much coke as the whole country produced only thirty-five years ago."

These are the achievements of Southern blood and Southern ideas working to reclaim and increase the fortunes of which war bereft them. No people without a profound regard for law and government, no people without rare gifts of mind and heart could ever have plucked such wonderful prosperity from such overwhelming disaster.

"Who speak the tongue that Shakespeare spoke, The faith and morals hold that Milton held."

When, therefore, the boresia upear of the Chicago Tribune babble of "better blood and better ideas for the South," he betrays both ignorance and ill breeding and writes himself down an egregious ass.

It's time now for the old-fashioned weather prophet to come out and tell us whether we are to have a hard winter.

Atlanta never conceived a happier or timelier enterprise than that of Carnival Week, to be held in November when Georgia's bountiful crops have been gathered and the hearts of the people are as mellow as the golden autumn sun.

the Presidents' club, an organization composed of the heads of fifteen civic bodies, each of which stands for the upbuilding of Atlanta and Georgia.

It is time to have a carnival. For the past twelve-month our minds have been cankered with thoughts of Pandora let loose. We need a new state of mind, adapted to the new era of prosperity that is developing.

We have found little difficulty in pronouncing the Russian names. Take the River Bug, for instance.

Colonel Roosevelt should observe that while he is urging us to go into war, those actually engaged in it are trying to quit.

Some years ago certain romancers were lamenting that the brave old days of derring-do were gone; forever gone, they sighed.

Poor, needless misgivings! "The present-day fighter," writes a military historian from the battle front, "faces more dangers than any fighters of old. He makes longer marches than Caesar's legions could have hoped to make over the best Roman roads.

"Now God be thanked Who has matched us with his hour, And caught our youth and wakened us from sleeping!"

"Blow out, you bugles, over the rich dead! There's none of these so lonely, poor or old, But dying, has made us rarer gifts than gold.

Never fear that civilization will wither the freshness of the human heart and that what Falstaff calls "the cankers of a calm world and a long peace" will rust the steel of the human spirit.

Terrific taxation is not the only thing that Germany will have to face after the war is over.

FASTING FOR HEALTH

A WOMAN in Altoona, Pa., a little while ago terminated a voluntary fifteen-day fast. It had been undertaken to relieve long continuing digestive troubles which had failed to respond to medical treatment.

Voluntary fasting as a curative measure is receiving attention of many scientific men. Distinguished dietitians and physicians have scientifically studied the physical changes in the body wrought by a period of abstinence from nourishment.

The Carnegie Institution of Washington, through its nutrition laboratory in Boston, has completed the most elaborate study of prolonged fasting yet made and thus acquired the most accurate data regarding its physical effect upon the patient.

Levanin slept each night in a calorimeter room that an accurate record might be kept of the temperature of his body and his respiration while sleeping.

He was under continuous surveillance by responsible members of the laboratory staff. He could not leave the room without the permission of the doctor on duty, although he was so much interested in the advantages his fast might be to humanity that it is hard to believe he would have refused food indignantly if it had been proffered him.

At the termination of the fast, he was supplied with food of his own choosing consisting of rice, butter, boiled rice and honey. He claimed to have no natural hunger and said he would have to fast a considerably long time before he would have natural hunger return to him.

THE world will await with profound interest the possibilities of a D'Annunzio-Puccini collaboration in the production of an opera on the war. As shown in his "Cabiria," is capable of the portrayal of spectacular scenes of horror and emotion.

Germany to America: "Keep off the high seas or we'll sink you to the bottom!" America to Germany: "We won't, and you'd better not, or we'll hold you to strict accountability."

Germany to America: "The Kaiser forbids you to sail on British ships." (Thereupon Germany sinks the Lusitania without warning, killing more than a hundred Americans.)

seemed to retain their normal activity. The reports of the rigid psychological tests certified that before long fast in this case at least produced no harmful effect upon mental activity or muscular strength.

During this time he made a study of all literature upon fasting available in several languages and entered into correspondence with European scientists interested in the subject. His wife became sufficiently interested to maintain a thirty-three day fast herself, which cured her completely of her chronic indigestion.

The observations made upon Levanin have done much to establish the safety of fasting, but have revealed little definite knowledge as to its curative measures. The curative possibilities have not worked out individually, so far, and are largely based upon the results of general research.

A New York physician last year had three patients under observation who seemed greatly benefited from absolute fasting. All three were able to resume normal food for ten days. After the third day all signs of discomfort disappeared.

Death from starvation usually occurs between fourteen and twenty-eight days, but it is influenced by the mental condition of the individual. The fear induced is more detrimental to the physical condition than the suspension of food for two years.

Fasting does not require the patient to remain in bed. A certain amount of exercise helps to maintain bodily strength. Levanin kept himself busy through the day while in the laboratory except during the periods in which the specialists were making tests upon him.

It is all very simple. In "Don Quixote" Strauss had wind machines for the windmill; in his Don Quixote Sinfonia, with 120 instruments all going like-madly, the daily bath was represented by the "Bath of the Huns," his "Mazepa," Raff's "Lenore Symphony," the ride, all grim and grisly, while in "1812" Tchaikovsky gives the battle for Borodino its epic grandeur.

Germany to America: "The Kaiser forbids you to sail on British ships." (Thereupon Germany sinks the Lusitania without warning, killing more than a hundred Americans.)

D'ANNUNZIO AND PUCCINI

THE world will await with profound interest the possibilities of a D'Annunzio-Puccini collaboration in the production of an opera on the war.

Quips And Quiddities

One of Australia's best landscape painters was out with his bag of tricks near Dawson recently. He had pitched in front of a big, two-story, wattle-clad hut, so fitted with a crimson-flowered creeper, which he thought would make an excellent sketch.

AT VADUETT MONDAY
Hundreds of requests have decided the Vaduett management to book a return engagement of "The Toast of Death," or "The Fate of a Vampire," the Mutual masterpiece in which Louise Glaum is the star.

It will be shown at the Vaduett tomorrow, one of a number of great feature pictures of the week. "The Toast of Death" is a sensational story of India and America. Louise Glaum, advertised as "the vampire of vampires," takes the star role, supported by a capable cast. The final chapter of the "The Romance of Elaine" will be shown at the Vaduett Tuesday. This great feature serial has been a phenomenal success since it first began as "The Exploits of Elaine." With East, White and Lionel Barrymore, the concluding installment winds up the tangled threads of adventure and brings to an end the mystery of the missing detective.

"Infatuation," a four-part Mutual masterpiece featuring beautiful Marguerite Fischer is at the Vaduett Thursday. Infatuation of a young girl of wealth, social position and refinement for a strange young man who lacks many essentials of the gentleman, is the powerful plot on which the picture is founded. The film was taken from the book by Lloyd Osborne and is an absorbing drama of love's power.

THREE FEATURE FILMS OF GREAT PROMISE
Beginning Monday with Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer," while un-conventional, has a heart interest in-teresting and appealing. It is a picture that will please the greatest number and add to the popularity of this big movie house.

NAT GOODWIN at the top, is at the Alma on Monday in "The Master Hand." Marie Cahill, at the bottom, is at the Savoy Tuesday in "When Judy Forgot."

NEW SELECTA THEATRE
OPEN THIS MONDAY
Montgomery's new Selecta theater, Peachtree street at Tenth, the second of a chain of picture theaters to be established in the residential sections of Atlanta, will be opened Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Elaborate preparations to make this theater equal, if not superior, to the Regent, are in progress. It is a great attraction at Peachtree and Ponce de Leon, have been undertaken.

The W. E. Brown company, Atlanta decorators, have been engaged by Mr. Montgomery to make the Selecta theater have been placed 35 inches apart, providing ample passage room. Everything has been arranged as comfortable and up-to-date as possible. Mr. Montgomery has given the minutest details his careful attention and no stone has been made in any part.

Eye strain has been eliminated at the Selecta, as at the Regent, by the installation of mirror screens of the finest quality and machines of the latest model. These insure noiseless operation and steady, even pictures. Ventilating machines, creating a constant supply of pure air, have been installed.

Two of the features to be offered at the Selecta the opening week are "The Barefoot Boy," a three-part Kalem drama, to be shown Wednesday, and "The Barefoot Boy," a three-part Kalem drama, to be shown Wednesday, and "The Barefoot Boy," a three-part Kalem drama, to be shown Wednesday.

IRENE FENWICK, star in "The Spendthrift," at the Victoria Monday, is shown at the top. Below is Henry B. Walthall, at the Georgian Wednesday in "Beulah."

IRENE FENWICK is the latest recruit from the legitimate stage to enter the movies. A new play by George Barrington has been written for her. Contrary to the usual procedure, Miss Fenwick will be starred in this vehicle, first in the movies, then on the speaking stage.

FOREWORD
We desire to impress on the minds of the people who live in the section near Tenth and Peachtree streets that at all times our performances will be such as will appeal to the ladies and children of refinement. Quality shall always be our watchword. There will never be a picture of a questionable character presented. We have established a clean reputation for our company in the performances presented at the Regent theater, and at no time will there be anything done or said that will injure the reputation of which we are proud. Entirely different subjects in pictures will be shown at the Selecta theater from those shown at the Regent. Each day the program will change at each of these theaters.

If the Best to Be Had is Good Enough for You, We Can Please You
We are in a position to present a performance second to none in the city. We save your time and money by visiting our theaters, and all we insist upon is a single visit. If you call, once we will cinch your steady patronage.

Don't forget the names of our parlor-like entertainment palaces, and beyond all, remember their locations.

WALKED RIGHT IN AND THEN OUT WITH $45.95

Negro Thought Word on Key Meant Change of Possession

A tall yellow negro strolled nonchalantly into the Rogers grocery store at 13 North Forsyth street about 7:05 o'clock Saturday night.

He punched the key marked "change" and then changed $45.95 from the cash register to his pocket.

A number of people saw the negro start out of the store and heard Mr. Phillips yell "catch him," but the negro headed towards the railroad yards, evidently on the first lap of his summer vacation.

Several customers were in the store at the time, but the negro left too quickly for any of them to get a very accurate description of him.

ALLIED POWERS BUYING MANY MULES IN ATLANTA

Twenty-Five Carloads Will Be Shipped Out for France This Week

Mules in twenty-five carloads will be shipped out of Atlanta this week to New Orleans, thence to be taken as soon as ships are available to the battlefields of France, where they will haul British cannon for the allies.

The shipment is one of a number made from here since agents of the British government began a month ago to scour the south for war material.

Already, it is said, the British agents have purchased 150,000 head of stock in the south, about 1,400 of which were bought in Atlanta.

NEGRO WOMAN STABBED TO DEATH NEAR BOLTON

Mary Francis, colored, was found stabbed to death on the banks of the Chattahoochee river a mile beyond Bolton, near the Southern railroad bridge Saturday afternoon.

At 7 o'clock Saturday evening Carrie Piggman returned to the Fulton side of the bridge and was arrested by County Officers Williams and Allen, who took her to the tower.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

THE TIME TO BUY REAL ESTATE?

This question is asked me repeatedly by my friends. Now I wish to tell you something right from the shoulder and I mean every word and every sentence of it.

The time to buy Atlanta real estate is when you are convinced by an agent, in whose judgment and integrity you have absolute confidence, that you are getting property worth your money with a good prospect of enhancement in value.

There are thus and tried men in our line of business who can be trusted with every dollar you want to invest, and they will manage your investments with such skill and good judgment as to bring you the highest profitable results. Remember I say integrity, skill and good judgment.

I have lived in Atlanta 48 1/2 years and my estimate of values of Atlanta real estate is well settled, by attorneys for securing debts, by litigants in the Court house and for various other purposes.

If YOU have any money to invest and are willing to trust my skill and judgment, I say right now is the time to invest through me a few hundred or a few thousand dollars in Rosedale Park with an absolute certainty of making 50 to 100 per cent on your money.

WHY DO I PROMISE SUCH RESULTS?

Because I am selling the property far below its value to pay debts. It must be sold and you will reap the benefits if action is taken right away by you. As soon as I sell a certain amount the balance will be withdrawn from the market.

Snellfield lots at $550, $600, $650, $750, $800, $1,000, $1,200. Worth right now 50 per cent more money. It's a fact beyond any inference or doubt.

Every man, woman and child ought to buy some of this property. It's simply the best investment offered today in Atlanta. My skill, integrity and judgment are behind this statement.

ROSEDALE PARK is that beautiful property opposite Grant Park on the East side. I will build for you a beautiful bungalow with payments of $100 cash and balance easy.

Terms on all lots to suit you.

Business Leases on Edgewood Avenue and Decatur Street. Marietta Street Sale—$30,000 Exchange and Small Sales. Building Improvement Noted During the Week—DeKalb County Permits Increase Also

A. S. Adams, of H. M. Grant & Co., leased to Smolenek Brothers, owners of a men's furnishing business, the two-story and basement building at No. 28 Decatur street. The term of the lease is for five years and the lessees will make alterations.

EDGWOOD AVENUE LEASE. Another lease by Mr. Adams was of the store room at No. 19 Edgewood avenue to A. M. Babin, the jeweler, for a term of five years.

The locations both on Decatur street and Edgewood avenue are between Fryor street and Five Points.

RENTING BUSINESS. Renting agents expect to be kept busy through September, and reported a rather better demand and quicker action in closing up during the past week.

The season this year has been late. This was due to the fact that tenants hesitated to vacate, and the agents had to make selections, and tried to get reduced rates.

During the past week, however, they began to close up, realizing that the time for definite action had arrived.

What threatened to be an August slump in building values has been averted to a large extent by the week's improvement in permits.

The monthly values to date, including two applications in file, is now $351,000, compared with $372,000 for the whole month last year.

The September showing should be made good by the permits for the candidates.

ADVANTAGES OF KEEPING A FEW FOWLS AND HOW TO SELECT STOCK

At retail prices, they can well be used most freely when produced at home at a cost much below that of purchased supplies. And there is the added advantage that the home-grown goods are fine in quality, since they may be used when perfectly fresh.

It is surprising how cheaply a flock of a dozen hens can be maintained. Such a flock demands but little yard space and can be comfortably housed in a small, inexpensive structure which any one who is reasonably handy with carpenter's tools can easily construct.

Lawn clippings, waste vegetables from the home garden, the scraps from the family table—and possibly some donated by kindly neighbors—can be incorporated in the ration, thus reducing the amount of supplies which must be purchased.

At this season of the year one can logically take up the pleasant task of providing quarters for a home flock and securing the needed stock. To begin with, one should select the best quality stock, and to those whose present flocks are not all that could be desired, a little advice regarding the fowls themselves may not be out of place.

First, do not attempt to handle a large number of fowls until some practical experience has been gained. There is much to learn, and most poultrymen do not let that deter you from making a plan to start on a small scale and gain the necessary experience.

Exercise great care in selecting the birds. Choose a suitable breed, and then get good specimens of the breed, not necessarily show birds, those which are nearly perfect in color, markings and type, but of strong, vigorous, healthy stock, which is capable of doing good work.

Such fowls are not necessarily expensive when one is willing to shop around a bit, and in so doing, but if you feel that you cannot afford to buy pure-bred stock from a reliable breeder, do not let that deter you from making a start anyway. Go to the produce houses, where large quantities of live birds are sold, and personally select the number of birds which you require.

So far as possible, have the fowls uniform in size, color and general type, but put greatest value upon health and vigor, and select the best of the commonly used meats.

"THE GEORGIA RAILROAD ITSELF IS HISTORIC. OUT OF IT GREW ATLANTA."

THE EMPIRE LIFE BUILDING

Atlanta's New Railroad Headquarters

After September 1st six big roads—the Southern, the Seaboard Air Line, the Atlanta & West Point, the Georgia, the Southern Pacific and the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic, will occupy the ground floor of the Empire Life Building as their City Ticket Offices. Also leases are pending with other roads for space on floors above.

We will offer for rent September 1st, to desirable tenants, part of the second floor. Located as it is, surrounded by three of the most prominent streets, with large windows for advertising and just one flight of steps up, makes the space ideal for railroad, insurance, real estate or any other kind of business offices—in fact, it is next best to the ground floor space.

We also have some very desirable space on floors above, en suite or single rooms, which we will arrange to suit your convenience, and at reasonable rates.

The Empire Life Building—right in the heart of the busy section, surrounded by car lines to all parts of the city, convenient to the leading hotels, postoffice, and all other places of interest to the business world.

For space, call at the office of the building, room 310.

BELLES AND BEAUX OF THE FUTURE

Atlanta, Ga.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did me a most wonderful amount of good when I was in a nervous state. My nervousness prevented sleeping at night, which added to my general breakdown. I considered my condition very bad, and accordingly was depressed and low spirited. My digestive organs were not in proper trim, this interfered with nutrition, causing me to grow thin and pale. A bad liver, too, gave me a yellow complexion, with the liver trouble, as well as constipation, was fully relieved by your Pleasant Pellets." As to my general afflictions, they were benefited in a most satisfactory way by "Golden Medical Discovery."—MRS. S. G. CONKLE, 28 Lumb St., Atlanta, Ga.

Now is the time to bring to your aid Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (in tablet or liquid form). This wonderful remedy helps to restore the stomach to its natural health and strength and to secure proper flow of the digestive juices, a good appetite and full digestion of the food you eat. It invigorates the liver, regulates the bowels and purifies and enriches the blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is absolutely free from alcohol and injurious drugs. You can take it and be certain you will find it a true blood-maker, tissue-builder, and restorative nerve tonic and that it will produce so evil after-effects. Thousands—probably many of your own neighbors—are willing to recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because it has made them stronger in body, brain and nerve.

Write Doctor Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice and for free book on woman's diseases.

RIVERSIDE
ACADEMY
No better evidence of the value of military training is needed than that furnished by the present European War. Those nations that require military training not only lead in military affairs, but in their efficiency and capacity for defeat have accounted the world by what military trained men can do in civil life. Preparation begets perfection.
An Ideal Preparatory School
Barracks, new hall and class room electric lighted, steam heated, sanitary and spacious, built of brick and covering the top of one of the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, with kindred views facing in the distance, the Chattahoochee River winding at its feet, and Lake Warmen right at hand in the setting of Riverside, the most completely equipped school for boys in the South. Two miles out from the cultured city of Gainesville, an all year round health resort, possesses every requirement and environment which goes to prepare boys for College, West Point, Annapolis or commercial life. The teaching force is composed of experienced instructors of conspicuous success in handling boys. Every cadet receives every lesson every day. A special system insures personal efficiency.
The moral atmosphere of Riverside is religious and democratic. A number of the faculty is chosen within in three doors of each cadet's room. Strict military discipline is maintained by severe West Point army officers detailed by U. S. War Department. Out door drills daily. Campus of 2,000 acres affords ample opportunity for manoeuvres, target practice, field, bridge building, etc. Riverside has always been noted for its athletic supremacy and championship teams. Modern gymnasium being erected. Competent coaches for each sport. Three and four teams on athletic field at same time. Only Military Academy in South furnished Naval Equipment by U. S. Government. Patience exclusive. Board room limited. References requested.

Wonders, Secrets, Mysteries

Grand Free Distribution of Two Remarkable Books on Mystery and Science

"The Mystic Oracle" "REVELATIONS OF A MYSTERIOUS FORCE" OR, "THE POWER THAT RULES THE WORLD"

"THE COMPLETE FORTUNE-TELLER & DREAM BOOK"

This book, written over two hundred years ago, is the work of a Hindu adept, and is without doubt the most valuable work upon the subject of fortune telling or the art of scrying ever written. It fully explains the secrets employed by fortune-tellers, and reveals to you the truth about the power of the occult. It tells you how to tell your future by all known methods, and contains a vast amount of information on the subject of the occult, and is a most interesting and valuable work.

This is a new book which deals exclusively with the mysterious powers of the human mind. It is written and published by Mr. Norman Barolay, London's foremost psychologist, whose newly discovered process is claimed to be beyond anything yet devised. The book reveals the secret of Personal Magnetism, explains a simple method of quickly drawing out the secret of the human mind, and initiates one into the mysterious power of the human mind, and shows how to direct a subtle force which controls the thoughts of others. It explains the power of suggestion and memory. The subjects of Personal Magnetism, and the Power of the Mind, will be of great interest to all who are interested in the occult.

Applications for the two remarkable books on Mystery and Science should be mailed either plain (sealed) or registered mail. Address: NORMAN BAROLAY, 115 ARKLYE HOUSE, NEWINGTON ROAD, LONDON, W. ENGLAND.

Capital City Club Is Preparing to Open Up Extra Nine At Brookhaven Giving Club Full 18-Hole Golf Course

New Course Will Be Thrown Open for Play on Saturday, Club Championship Tourney Begins September 11

After a long and patient siege of preparation and improvement the Capital City club is now ready to open up their new eighteen-hole golf course at Brookhaven.

The real shock was that he won his game with a capital 74, all that, consistent golf, but neither Travers nor Outmy had any such consistent whirl. Jerry started by topping his shot, topping his second by driving a five on the first hole. But from then on through the nine he played the hole going out in 37. It was upon the third round that he slipped and he needed a 41 for a 79. The 41 was a 10 on the 17th hole. It was a 10 on the 17th hole. It was a 10 on the 17th hole.

Looking over his forces, there was none other to do the job. Kelly, since Manning is on the irritable list as yet, Rumler had been hopping around on the coaching line, with a bad toe, and had just finished convalescing from a sprain in the right hand. Kelly's shot in the eighth inning was the winning run.

Enger 12 Proves Big Sensation

Placing of Many Cylinder Car to Sell at $1,000 Unprecedented in Automod—Demonstrators Shipped

What is creating the biggest sensation of the year in the automobile industry is news that the Enger Motor Car company has placed a twelve-cylinder car on the market to sell for the revolutionary price of $1,000.

Shipment of demonstrators already has been started and the company officials declare that they are now prepared to make deliveries to purchasers in a short time.

Of further interest is the fact that in design, lines and mechanical make-up, the new car is essentially a high class production. It betrays none of the characteristics of the cheaply built car, but reveals a striking abundance of detail and quality.

The Enger company is widely known as a successful manufacturer of motor cars having developed a six-cylinder car which last season met with a most favorable reception from the public.

The absolute secrecy which surrounded the company's plans caused the announcement of the car to come as a complete surprise to the public.

In appearance, the car is striking, with long, low, racy lines. The chassis of 116 inches has given the designers ample leeway for a roomy, attractive body.

The chassis of the car is of the highest quality and the construction of the body is obvious to the observer. Officials of the company declare that the Enger is the only car selling for less than $2,000 to be furnished with such a high grade body.

The body is of a fine grade of real leather, over hair cushions and long, flexible springs. The riding qualities of the car, as well as the appearance, are further enhanced by the use of the over springs which give the body the look and low appearance which has become so popular among discriminating motorists.

The predominating feature of the motor is its perfect smoothness and freedom of vibration at all engine speeds. This is due largely to the small bore of the pistons as well as to the fact that the reciprocating parts are extremely light.

Being about one-half the weight of pistons in other twelve cylinder motors, the small piston weight and small explosion give the car a most surprising range of high gear activity. Those who have ridden in the Enger "six" say that it is remarkably flexible, ranging from high speed to one mile per hour without a change of gear.

Another great advantage of the small cylinders is that a high compression can be used. This obtains the greatest percentage of fuel efficiency, reducing the amount of gasoline required and making for economical operation in every respect.

The uniform torque developed by the motor is also an important factor for economy, reducing the expenditure necessary for tires.

In the design of the motor, the company has endeavored to include every feature which has proved practical and desirable. The valve in the cylinder which is said to give greater power than any other design, is used for the first time in a twelve cylinder car.

The cylinders, 2-5/8 inches bore by 3-1/2 inches stroke, are cast in blocks of six, placed at an angle of 60 degrees from the center line. The cylinder heads are removable, making the motor readily accessible for inspection and cleaning. This construction also follows easy adjustment of the tappets.

Each valve is operated by an independent cam. Both the camshaft and generator shaft are driven by the main shaft, which, although an expensive form of construction, adds to the quiet operation of the motor.

A force feed system of lubrication is used, the oil being fed through the hollow cam shaft. Engineers have pronounced this the most efficient practice for motors of the V type.

The ignition drive is direct from the camshaft and can be advanced both automatically or by hand. The carburetor is of the double entrance type with a hot water jacket of ample proportions around the manifold.

The transmission is bolted direct to the bell housing of the motor, making a complete unit power plant construction. The transmission is connected to the rear axle through a propeller shaft and two universal joints. The axle is of the pressed steel housing type, with spiral bevel gear and double roller bearings in each wheel.

The electric starting motor meshes directly in the fly-wheel, while the generator is of the drive type.

The wheels are equipped with demountable rims and 32 by 4 inch tires, non-skids in the rear.

Forty to Ride In Motorcycle Speed Classic

Leading Two-Wheel Speed Demons of the Country to Whizz Over Fast Chicago Speedway in 300-Mile Race. Rich Prizes Offered

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—For the first time in the history of American racing a great speedway, on which the best of foreign and domestic cars, piloted by the greatest of drivers, have been given the supreme test, will be turned over to motorcycles when the Speedway Park association of Chicago holds its first annual 300-mile race at its new two-mile race-holding course Sunday, September 6.

Designed primarily for motor racing, motorcycle experts say the two wheelers will show as great a field of speed for 300 miles than was shown by auto races at the same track on June 24.

It is certain that more than fifty machines will be entered. Anticipating an enormous crowd, the directors of the track stipulated that no more than forty riders should be allowed to start on the track, and that every machine must have been shown a speed of not less than eighty miles an hour. Elimination trials will be held on the Saturday before the race.

After a conference with John Donovan, chairman of the contest board of the Federation of American Motorcyclists under whose direction the race will be run, it was agreed that every rider must have passed a strenuous physical examination before he is allowed to take part in even the elimination trials.

Dr. Jay P. Pitts, the speedway surgeon, who has had charge of fitting all the motor pilots who have appeared on the course in competition, will conduct the tests.

Prizes amounting to $2,500, the largest purse ever offered motorcyclists, have been hung up. The winner will be given $1,000; second, $800; third, $500; fourth, $150; fifth, $100, and sixth, $50. In addition to the conditions imposed on the drivers by the Federation of American Motorcyclists, the Speedway management has added the following restrictions:

Postponement—In the event of rain on Sunday, September 6, the race will be postponed to Monday, September 6, or some subsequent date.

Speed Requirements—Each machine must show eighty miles an hour in the official speed trial of one lap of the track to be eligible. Speed trials will be held on September 4 in the inverse order of their entry. All machines entered must be on the ground no later than September 2.

Number of machines to start—Only forty machines will be allowed to start. In the event of more than forty entering the race, the forty fastest in the official tests will be eligible to start.

Finish of Race—The Speedway management reserves the right to stop the race when the conditions are such that the entire distance and if no more than an hour shall have elapsed since the first rider shall have finished.

Minimum Age—No person under eighteen years of age will be permitted to use the track as rider or pit attendant.

Service Plan of Hupp Is Success

Many New Motor Owners Are Availing Themselves of Keeping Cars in Good Condition

Pathfinder Man Makes New Find

Says That Difference Between Twin '41' and '46' Is Just as Great as Between Single '41' and '46'

The operation of a twelve-cylinder motor," says W. K. Stainaker, general sales manager of the Pathfinder motor.

"I'm like the action of any motor thus far evolved. I have ridden in cars carrying twin-four motors and there is the same fundamental difference between a Twin-Four and Twin-Six that is generally conceded to exist between a Single Four and Single Six. The motor's efficiency is not affected by the number of cylinders. It is the same ratio of improvement that is noticeable between the Twin-Four and the Twin-Six? As a matter of fact, actual experience proves that such a difference does exist. If the laps between cylinder explosions is objectionable, why emphasize with them?"

It is true that in an eight-cylinder motor the edges of the explosions meet. But what would you think of a roof on which the shingles merely met? Good construction is good construction, whether it applies to roofing or motor building. The explosions of your motor should not merely meet—they should overlap.

True to their promise, the committee in charge had taken care of every little detail. The grounds were admirably arranged. The traps were placed so that the shooter faced into the blue skyline above Lake Michigan's sky blue waters.

The weather throughout the entire week with the exception of a little wind and some rain during the last day or so, was all that could be expected. There were times, however, when the breeze swept in the water at a fairly good clip and occasionally the targets would jump or leap in a most tantalizing manner, and incidentally the fact that conditions demanded good shooting speaks in silent terms of the fine performances made by many of the entrants.

The main event was won by L. B. Clark, of Chicago. Shooting from the seventeenth mark and breaking 26 targets out of a possible 100, Clark was tied with three other shooters for first honor. In the shoot-off, however, he ran out on a block of twenty straight, beating M. E. Dewire, of Hamilton; J.

TARGET TIPS AND HUNTING HELPS

There have been other Grand American Handicaps. And each one in its time has been a leader. But never before in the entire history of the sport has there been a bigger, better or more glorious Grand American than the one recently completed at Grant park, Chicago. Even for never before has this favorite sport so completely justified its claim to popularity and participation.

Grant park with its holiday dress of myriad flags and pennants—the many tents—and its exceptionally fine facilities for the event—was literally crowded with spectators. This slight in itself was most impressive. But the $25 contestants lined up at the score and the constant popping of shotguns settled the matter of fair sex in attendance served still further to lend a distinctly social atmosphere to the gathering.

True to their promise, the committee in charge had taken care of every little detail. The grounds were admirably arranged. The traps were placed so that the shooter faced into the blue skyline above Lake Michigan's sky blue waters.

The weather throughout the entire week with the exception of a little wind and some rain during the last day or so, was all that could be expected. There were times, however, when the breeze swept in the water at a fairly good clip and occasionally the targets would jump or leap in a most tantalizing manner, and incidentally the fact that conditions demanded good shooting speaks in silent terms of the fine performances made by many of the entrants.

The main event was won by L. B. Clark, of Chicago. Shooting from the seventeenth mark and breaking 26 targets out of a possible 100, Clark was tied with three other shooters for first honor. In the shoot-off, however, he ran out on a block of twenty straight, beating M. E. Dewire, of Hamilton; J.

Pacific Coast Classic Be Held in November

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28.—The automobile classic of the Pacific coast, the Corona road race, will be held November 20 next, according to announcements by the Citrus Belt Racing association.

The course will be placed in the best of condition for the 500-mile event that last year permitted an average speed of 37.03 miles an hour by Edith Fulton, the winner. This speed broke a world's record.

The $15,000 in driver's prizes has been raised, it is announced, and some of the big drivers of the country are expected to enter. This is the only big race scheduled for southern California this year.

CITY TO OPEN CAMP FOR DRUG ADDICTS MONDAY

Experienced Physicians and Nurses Will Have Charge of Treating Patients

Preparations have been completed for opening Monday of the newest city institution, the camp for drug addicts, which has been established at the old detention hospital near the stock yard.

Dr. J. C. Ware, one of the city physicians, will be in direct charge of the institution and he will be assisted by two experienced nurses.

Dr. N. W. Branner and Dr. Hannell have agreed to serve as consulting physicians and they will visit the camp every day and direct the treatment of the patients.

The city and county authorities are preparing to care for more than fifty patients, which is the number they estimate will apply for admission to the new institution.

Although the officials in charge of the government's crusade against the illegal drug traffic estimate that there are more than 2,000 drug fiends in the city, they think all except about fifty of them will go to private institutions.

With an institution ready to receive patients who are in need of treatment, it is expected to vigorously prosecute the campaign during the week.

At the new hospital one ward has been set aside for negro patients and they will receive the treatment as well as the white people.

Dr. J. Kennedy, city health officer, has already received several applications for admission to the camp, but he does not expect many applicants until the government's campaign has been in full force for a few days and the supply of drugs cut down.

SUPPLY CUT DOWN
Dr. Kennedy states that he learns from druggists that already they have cut down the amount of morphine sales in the city by about 25 per cent.

The opening of a hospital for the treatment of drug fiends Monday will mark the second time that the detention hospital has been used for that purpose.

A number of years ago the city itself began its crusade against the sale of narcotics and had such fair success for a few weeks that many victims went to the institution.

SANITARIUM OFFERS AID
The Frank Sanitarium company operating at the Southern General hospital, at 242 Capitol avenue, has written to Mayor Woodruff and the members of the general council, offering the co-operation of their staff of physicians, who have had years of experience in handling the cases of drug addicts.

The suggestion made that there will be a certain class of drug addicts, who have not quite enough money to go to a private institution, but who will be unwilling to go to the city camp.

After one gets out that in order to give assistance to the campaign and help solve the city's problem of caring for the drug victims, the hospital authorities are willing, if the city so desires, to rent an additional building and care for this middle class of patients at the actual cost of operation.

CHARLES SHELDON PLAYS AT AUDITORIUM TODAY
Well Known Organist Gives Concert in Absence of City Organist Kraft

It was erroneously announced yesterday that Miss Mildred Langworthy, soprano, would assist City Organist Kraft at the free organ recital this afternoon at the auditorium-armory. This was caused by a confusion of dates. The recital this afternoon will be played by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., the well-known Atlanta organist, as Mr. Kraft is out of the city. On next Sunday, September 3, Miss Langworthy will appear on the program, assisting Mr. Kraft.

JENNY DUFAY IS ADDED TO ALKAHEST SERIES

Jenny Dufay, leading soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company, has been added to the Alkahest Lyceum series for the coming season. Miss Dufay and her company will appear in Atlanta at the auditorium October 15 as the opening number of the course.

Miss Dufay has never before sung in Atlanta, but she is a favorite in Nashville, Birmingham, New Orleans and other southern cities.

Two years ago she made her debut with the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company as a substitute for Mme. Tetrazini, scoring a decided triumph. Her voice is of refreshing purity and rich in color.

Season tickets for the course will go on sale about September 10 at the Cables Piano company.

RULES ARE ISSUED FOR GRADING COTTON SEED

Crushers' Association Sends Out New Regulations to All Members

Rules and regulations covering the grading of cotton seed have been promulgated by the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia, and are being sent out to members of that association by Secretary-treasurer E. E. Chivers, of Atlanta.

These rules and regulations were drawn up with a view to encouraging the farmers to improve the grade of their cotton seed, and to handle this important part of the cotton crop with care from the time the cotton seed leaves the field until the seed are sold to the oil mills.

Throughout the south to grade cotton seed on the same principle that lint cotton is graded, for the reason that all seed are not worth the same.

It is expected that crushing will be begun by all of the mills in the state early in September, some few having already begun in south Georgia.

Summer Heat Dangerous to Little Ones if Bowels Are Neglected

A mother cannot do better for her child than to train it from early infancy to regular habits, not only as a preventive against much of the illness to which children are more or less subject, but also to insure their health in later life.

Normal activity of the bowels is the basis of sound health. This is especially true with children in hot weather. Do not neglect any tendency they may show to constipation, but promptly administer a gentle laxative, that will carry off the congested waste without without griping or other discomfort and positive in its effect. UGH! CALOMEL IS HORRIBLE! IT SHOCKS YOUR LIVER, IF BILIOUS

Calomel sickens! Don't lose a day's work! Clean your Liver and Bowels With "Dodson's Liver Tone"

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work. Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bowels. Calomel, when it comes into contact with your bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and full of bile, you will feel that your bowels are constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if your bowels are constipated, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine, entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick. I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.—(Advt.)

I Will Pay You 10½ Cents A Pound for Your Cotton

I BELIEVE that cotton will be worth 10 cents a pound in 30 days. Am so confident of this that I will allow all of our customers 10½ cents a pound in trade for all cotton (middling) that they ship us. The freight must be prepaid to Atlanta, or some other point in Georgia that we may name. Write me before shipping the cotton.

FORSYTH REOPENS TOMORROW; SPANISH DANCERS AS HEADLINERS

Edward and Elisa Casino

Forsyth for Week Aug. 30.

Blanch Marrill

George F. Britt

Brilliant Bill Is Promised for Beginning of Vaudeville Season in Atlanta—Seven Acts on Program

Spanish and Moorish dances, as executed under the direction of their respective king and queen of Spain, will be the headline features at the Forsyth for this, the opening week. Edward and Elisa Casino, natives of romantic Andalusia, who were introduced to this city by Mr. Stuyvesant, first at New York, will give their Andalusian interpretation of the "poetry of a dance." Probably the most notable of the dances of those two, said to have been first to flourish the vivacious Spanish style in America, will be La Cuchipanda, a dance combining enchanting movements of the body and arms.

In addition to this, there are six other big acts of Keith vaudeville, as well as the Pathe news weekly and the famous animated cartoon, "Colonel Heeza Liar." George F. Hickman, who is representing Jake Well, as the new manager of the Forsyth, has had a number of important improvements made and everything is in readiness for the opening, which promises to be the most brilliant in years. Already advance sales of season tickets indicate that vaudeville will be possibly more popular than ever in Atlanta this year.

THE OPENING BILL

The opening bill will include nearly everything that vaudeville lovers could desire in seven acts and some mighty pleasant surprises may be anticipated without disappointment.

The headliners, Senorita Dona Elisa Casino and Senor Don Eduardo Casino, in addition to their novelty, La Cuchipanda, will present, among other dances, the American whirling dervish, which keeps them spinning about the stage at an amazing rate of speed.

Another big act of this week will be the Seven Colonial Belles, who derive their name from the period of their costuming and their number. Each of these young ladies is a "placid" musician. They present a scene in the twilight of the living room of an old colonial mansion in 1776, the seven neighborhood belles having gathered for an evening's entertainment. The costuming is in keeping with the picturesque setting. Miss Dorothy Sherman, who presides at the piano, is responsible for the ideas and the assembling of her co-workers.

Gertrude Long will present this week a singing act which she is pleased to term "something different" and which is quite a big and interesting novelty which Miss Long doesn't want disclosed in advance is promised.

Miss Long is an English prima donna who prefers to be a singing comedian despite her splendid voice. She has achieved much success on the concert stage both here and abroad and recently returned to America, her child hood home, because of conditions arising from the European war.

"SPEAKER" MILT COLLINS. Milt Collins, "The Speaker of the House," will be responsible for a big number of laughs. He discusses various timely topics with clever philosophy. His conception of the German politician discoursing on American subjects being extremely funny. He is said to be one of the best character actors Atlanta has ever seen.

Another rare act will be a mixture of vaudeville by Billy Lloyd and George F. Britt. There is a singing, talking and dancing comedy sketch, in which some Scotch and American humor are introduced to great effect.

The Noel Travers-Irene Douglas company will offer a fine comedy sketch, "A Novel Marriage," full of splendid lines. The sketch was written by Franklin Seagriff, who plays a part in the act.

The Alfred Hildford trio—two men and a girl—will do some daring cyclists' stunts, some of which are extremely sensational and breath-taking. They stand at the top notch in cycling acts and bid fair to be sure to please even the most exacting.

Column Heeza Liar and the Pathe news weekly will put the finishing touch to the opening bill.

ONLY THREE FILM STARS GET OVER $750 WEEKLY

Pickford, Chaplin and Marguerite Clarke Lead the Salary List in Filmland

"What they really get" is told in the October issue of the Photoplay Magazine, from which the following is an extract.

With the exception of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and possibly Marguerite Clark, there is no film star in America who receives more than $750 a week as salary.

Recognized film favorites like Clara Kimball Young, Florence Lawrence, Blanche Sweet, Norma Phillips, Anita Stewart and Ruth Stonehouse, receive from $200 to $600 a week. This is the weekly salary of Clara Kimball Young, who ranks second only to Mary Pickford in popularity. When it comes to male film stars, their salaries are considerably less. From $100 to $400 is the weekly salary for leading men like King Baggot, Francis X. Bushman, Arthur Johnson, Maurice Costello and Carlyle Blackwell.

Here are some specifically stated salaries, per week: J. Warren Kerrigan, $400; Earle Williams, $300; Mary Fuller, $250; Mabel Normand, $200, and Charlie Chaplin, $1,200.

TRY IT ON LOS ANGELES INSTEAD OF THE DOG

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 28.—Theatrical magnates with new wares to feed the pleasure-loving public used to try all productions scheduled for New York on the dog in Los Angeles. Now they often try them "on the tenderfoot" in Los Angeles. That's since Oliver Morosco put the city of the angels on the theatrical map.

That's all four productions which have stood the acid test of the western city's first nighters will be taken East to tickle the fancies of fastidious New York.

They are all Morosco productions. They were all shown here at 50 cents, and will be given there as $2 attractions.

The first of these will be "The Unchastened Woman" by Louis E. Ansbacher, Emily Stevens and Christine Norman, both eastern lights, will play the unique dual star roles in the production.

Second will be the comedy drama, "The Songbird," in which Jane Cowl played when it was produced in Los Angeles. A search of the theatrical mart is being made, now, for a New York lead for this production.

"So Long, Letty," the comedy with music written by Morosco and Elmer Harris, music and lyrics by Earl Carroll, which made a phenomenal run in Los Angeles, is the third offering.

The last of the four is "Madie Love" by Avery Hopwood, author of "Seven Days." Morosco will present this show in the east as the vehicle of his latest star, Marjorie Rameau.

"BEST-DRESSED GIRL" IS STRONG FOR RIDING

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Margaret Thompson is one of the best-dressed girls in southern California, but she doesn't care a continental for style.

She creates and wears striking costumes because it is her business to do so. As soon as work hours are over, she keeps the fiery worn during the day upon the nearest coach, and dons a riding habit.

"If there were twenty-four daylight hours in each day, I'd never have time to ride as much as I should like," she avers.

Miss Thompson, on horseback, is as attractive looking as when she dons an evening dress.

She takes the stand that riding increases circulation and shakes up the liver, she maintains.

Miss Thompson's profession has brought her in contact with the outdoors. She is one of the stars of the New York Motion Picture company, with headquarters at Inverville, Cal.

NEAL of the NAVY

In the molten deluge that brought death and desolation to Mt. Pelee eighteen years ago were sown the seeds of a wonderful story.

"Neal of the Navy" is the title and William Hamilton Osborne, who wrote "The Running Fight," "Blue Buckle," "Catspaw," etc., is the author.

With the United States Navy as a background, Mr. Osborne has written a story that will hold your interest from start to finish.

Annette Ilington was a babe in arms when thousands fell victims to the "Red Death." Pinned to her clothing was a map containing the key to the hidden treasures of Lost Isle—a map that marked her as the prey of a piratical band of fortune seekers.

Throughout the story is presented a true-to-life picture of Uncle Sam's floating fortresses.

Pathe has pictured "Neal of the Navy" and the pictures will be shown in leading Atlanta theatres.

U. S. SHOULD PUT FIXED PRICE ON EXPORTED COTTON

State Press Chairman of T. P. A. Urges Valorization Plan as Answer to Contraband Decree of the Allies

Under the date of July 24, the British government and her allies, as everybody knows, have declared cotton an essential contraband of war, which is to be sold by those in possession of it on the unconditional violation of the peace agreement by the nations of the world. They undertake to excuse this act on their part upon the theory that the emergency of the case makes inspection a positive necessity.

It is frank enough to admit that the will unquestionably be of material value to the allied powers in the outcome of the war, as it is a reasonable presumption that if cotton, as it is understood to be, is a necessary ingredient in the manufacture of high explosives, Germany's supply of cotton goods will be seen at a glance that with a army will be more or less the mercy of their enemies for the lack of the means to protect themselves.

Nevertheless, we must contend that regardless of how desperate the needs of Great Britain and her allies may be, the prosecution of the war, they have no legal right under international agreement to force a great loss upon this government, and especially the cotton producers of the south, in order that they may profit by this action. A man might as well justify the act of cracking the neck of a man who has been shot in the back of the head by the prosecution of the war, they have no legal right under international agreement to force a great loss upon this government, and especially the cotton producers of the south, in order that they may profit by this action.

MARKS SUGGESTION
However, I do not believe that it would benefit this government to press a claim to the point where it would ultimately mean a declaration of war between this government and the allies. It is, however, a sacred obligation upon this government to protect its citizens, and the property of its citizens, and under existing circumstances I believe the government should make every effort to protect its own interest, and that of its citizens, by fixing the price of all export cotton at not less than 12 cents and not higher than 15c, and in this way force the allies to carry the loss that would otherwise fall upon the cotton producers of the south, upon those who have closed the markets of the world against the staple crop of the south, upon which all the commercial operations are based. This could not, and would not work any hardship upon any section of the United States or upon any section of the world produced in the United States, but would be the most profitable and certainly the most prudent manner this government could use to discharge the obligations it owes to its people in the protection of its property.

The further fact that cotton being the staple crop produced in this country, that has been declared contraband of war, we believe that such action would not only be the means of protecting the cotton producers, but its effect would reach every section of the United States and would be the one established a principle that would result in immediate and complete valorization of all exports. This would be equal to valorization of cotton, which certainly would be less than the loss of the government without any criticism from other sections on the charge of discrimination. It is true that in doing so, the United States would be made upon the production in future years during the course of such a law. We believe, however, that President Wilson is fully capable of handling this matter in an extraordinary manner, and without a moment's delay. We do not believe that it is a practical scheme entirely beyond the reach of plans of this government, and that it could be carried out in a comparatively easy manner because of the unprecedented condition forced upon this government in violation of international law.

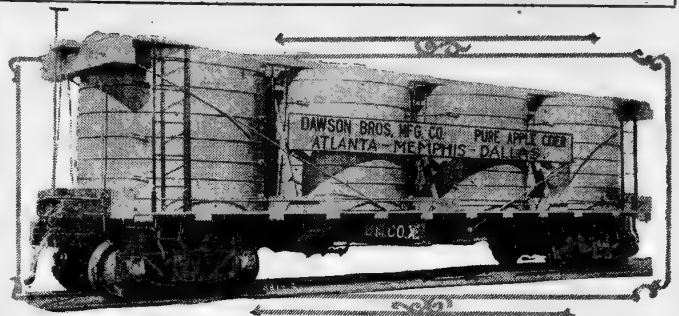

In my conception of the present situation, even in a crude way, the people of the country, assisted by the government, can easily work out a plan by which these results can be accomplished, and without anything under the law which we are entitled, and could be accomplished, that would bring peace in the life and vitality of this country, and a peace which is not only a peace, but a peace which would lead to the deliverance of this people in a speedy and satisfactory manner.

Yours very truly,
W. S. ANDREWS,
Chairman Georgia Division T. P. A.

A TEN THOUSAND GALLON TANK CAR, one of ten owned by the Dawson Brothers Manufacturing company, pickle and vinegar manufacturers of Atlanta, Memphis and Dallas. This car arrived last week at the Atlanta plant from Lansing, Mich., loaded to capacity with pure apple juice from which the firm makes its famous brands of apple 'Whinger. After being unloaded the car was dispatched to southern Mississippi where it is being filled with the pickle stock recently purchased here by the firm.

BICKERSTAFF MADE SALE A LITTLE TOO QUICKLY

Found Himself Without an Auto and $7 Distant From Railroad

R. H. Bickerstaff, the popular traveler of McCord-Stewart company, has always had the reputation of being a rapid fire salesman. He is a man of few words, he makes his proposition, closes the deal, and gets the purchaser's name on the dotted line in a very short time. But last week Mr. Bickerstaff found himself in a predicament that he never met his match. It all happened far out, away from the railroad, near Lincoln, Ga.

Mr. Bickerstaff makes his territory in his automobile. After he had sold a merchant and was about to leave for another place, the rural mail carrier of the community approached him and asked him what he would take for his car. Mr. Bickerstaff named a sum. The mail carrier produced the amount forth with in cash and said to Mr. Bickerstaff, "Get your grip out of my car."

Accordingly Mr. Bickerstaff pocketed the money and grabbed up his grips and started for the nearest railroad station, which was quite a distance away. He found it too far to walk and after securing a relay conveyance he finally boarded a "choo-choo" but at the cost of about seven dollars. He was not right on in Atlanta, however, and purchased himself a new Ford runabout.

JOHNSON RETURNS AMAZED
AT ZARCO CIGAR SALES
Lamar & Rankin Drug Co., Distributors, Rushed to Supply Demands

Mr. Johnson, factory representative of Zarco cigars, was back in Atlanta last week after a several weeks trip in out-of-town territory. Mr. Johnson reports his amazement at the sale of Zarco cigars have increased here during the time he has been away. He declares that in all his experience in the cigar game he has never seen anything like the hold Zarco cigars have taken upon the smokers of the country. The Lamar & Rankin Drug company, who are distributors of Zarco in this territory, declare that the only trouble they have with this brand is the difficulty of keeping on hand enough to supply their demands.

TROUBLE WITH AUTO; NOT WITH ALL STAR GOODS
J. M. Webb, who travels for the All Star Manufacturing company, was at headquarters last week for a few days, returning to his Georgia territory. He reports the trip to Atlanta in an automobile and returned in the same manner. When last heard from he was in Macon, having trouble with his machine, but no trouble in selling the All Star products.

SONGS, GAMES AND SPEECHES FEATURED U. C. T. GATHERING

Fulton Council and Its Friends Make Merry at Entertainment in Honor of New Members - Big Crowd Present

Interesting speeches, lively games, songs and the awarding of prizes in the guessing contests featured the social meeting of Fulton Council 508, United Commercial Travelers, held Saturday Night, August 28, at the council chamber in the Kiefer building.

The unique number of the program was the sample sale talks given by the officers of Fulton council. These officers sang the praises of the wares which they sell in exactly the manner in which they sell them to customer upon the road. R. L. Wallace spoke about the delights of Union brand Georgia cane syrup. C. E. Ryd told of the fragrance of Arbuckle's coffee. W. E. Arnold spoke of the deliciousness of Lowrey's candies, while D. A. Horn praised his brand of electric lamps and W. G. Moore stressed the benefits of health insurance.

There were a series of guessing games in which the ladies choose their partners by glancing at the feet of the men, who were hid behind a curtain. In guessing that a number of the prizes displayed upon a table represented the number of seats contained in a motor car, which was won by Mrs. Clark. Miss Barber, in the number guessing contest, was awarded a box of candy also.

Among the special guests of the evening were R. L. Adams and Press Hudson, both of whom made interesting talks. There were other by D. A. Horn and George Byrd, which received much applause. There was also a contest in which the members of the council, and past grand councilor of this jurisdiction, presided at the exercises.

The special entertainment committee which arranged the program for the evening consisted of Mrs. E. B. Bolton, E. B. Ball, Byrd and R. F. Bolton. The committee is being complimented by all the members and guests for the interesting program which was rendered. Due to the great success of the social meeting the council hopes from time to time to give other such affairs.

Florida Merchant to Come In Sept. for "Lloyd's Week"

W. S. Loyd, of Havana, Fla., as he appeared at the Merchants' Convention barbecue last year.

Missed His First Atlanta Convention in Years - Will Be Here, However, Next Month
"Why, where is Loyd?" Where can that merchant prince of Havana, Fla., be? These were the questions generally asked by the visiting merchants and wholesalers during the recent merchants' week. They had reference to W. S. Loyd, who has never failed heretofore to attend the merchants' convention in Atlanta. Usually he is the first one to register at the celebration and the last one to leave. He is present at all the festivities and at all the convention meetings and takes an active part in everything. He always looks to Atlanta for his supply of goods and buys generously from the wholesalers here. This time, however, he was absent. His jolly smile was sadly missed from among those present. Hence it was that everybody was saying, "Where is Loyd?" He has written friends in Atlanta, however, that he was unavoidably detained on this occasion, but would certainly be here in September, and it necessary would inaugurate a merchants' week celebration all by himself. So all the wholesalers and traveling men are looking forward in September not to a merchants' week but to "Lloyd's week."

THE PROFITS THAT COME FROM "GET-TOGETHER"

The Profits That Come From "Get-Together"

"To my way of thinking," said a Big Chap the other day, "the whole secret of mutual prosperity as between retailer and manufacturer lies in getting together." So true that it's worn slick. So true that, like other good thoughts, we often overlook it. So true that, in our haste and rush for something new, we pass right by this simple solution of many of our problems.

The interests of both parties—dealer and manufacturer—lie in the same direction. If this be true, we ought to travel TOGETHER.

Especially is this true of the manufacturers who are striving to make the SOUTH industrially independent.

Those who have planted their stake here and are pouring out their best efforts for the enrichment of the home territory—these are the manufacturers who ought to have the positive and loyal support of their neighbor merchants.

We belong to this group of Manufacturers.

We are distinctly and distinctively builders of Southern Industries. We never for a moment have believed, however, that this fact ALONE entitles us to the patronage of our Southern merchants.

We know that it is the QUALITY OF OUR GOODS that must draw business to us.

We measure up to that standard of excellence and quality and variety that commands respect and produces results.

The goods that are turned out by OUR factories (list below) are fully the equal of any goods sent into this market by the so-called "big factories" of the North and East.

Added to this essential is the equally important fact that this work is done by people HERE.

Hence when you buy our goods you are helping to give employment to local labor.

"Local labor" means more business for YOU.

Ever seem to realize this. Ever seem to realize this.

Yet every day that passes brings us all nearer to a realization of our inter-dependence in this respect.

Here's the point:

Georgia merchants, Southern merchants, local merchants—are blocking the game for themselves when they don't co-operate with local manufacturers.

This is a good season of the year to consider this seriously.

You are doing more or less buying.

Why don't you do it AT HOME?

It is to your own best interests. It will come back to you bearing greater returns than you can figure in a book.

It is constructive merchandising. It looks to the future. It means more factories, more trade, more money—more folks for you to sell to.

Buy from us—your neighbors—and do your share in the work of the Home Guard.

Have You Proposed To This Atlanta Girl?

THIS is not one girl. It is six in one. The nose is Atlanta's most beautiful; the eyes are the brownest; the hair is the most truly chestnut.

Indeed, it is a composite of six most beautiful Atlanta lassies. And the six in one received 100 proposals this season. Not just the ordinary kind, either. But a new sort that sprang up this year. I suppose we might call it the photographic proposal. Let me tell you about it.

Just after Christmas this began happening and it still keeps up. A merry little picture, all laughing eyes, flashing white teeth, and a dimple in the left cheek started it.

Such fetching pictures seldom hold their charm after printer's ink has rolled over them and soggy paper has blurred them. But this one did. It stood out from all that week's debutantes and visitors and little folk.

No picture in Sunday's section of Atlanta papers that day "drew" you so. It seemed to speak.

There was actuality and not mere seeming in a voice over the phone three days later. It was the little lady herself. But she wasn't merry. There was hidden trouble in the voice that came over the wire—almost a gusty sigh.

"Don't tell anyone," she cautioned.

"But do you know what's happened? Three men I never saw or heard of have proposed to me by mail. And the worst part is none of them knew how to spell."

"They all saw my picture, and they said it was their 'ideal,' and they wondered if I couldn't come to care for them. One has a two-horse farm, and one clerks in a grocery store, and one teaches school in the country."

"I do think at least the school teacher might have known spelling."

"This was not an isolated incident. For an indefinable reason, Georgia idealists search the Sunday papers now for embodiments of their dreams. They write in moods of deep earnestness. Occasional confusion of "s's" and "t's" or omission of letters may mar their confessions. But light sentiments find no place in their missives.

The six Atlanta beauties whose photographs make up the accompanying composite picture have received 100 such letters since Christmas.

For proof, ask the society editor. For the most part the idealistic messages have been from Georgia; in some few instances, from near-by states. One might almost duplicate the other.

First a paragraph starts with feeling, though it may lag in orthography.

"Your picture is the essence of all beauty," sighs the writer. "You are incomparable. Your eyes have caught all the light of the sunshine. Your smile is as glorious as the dawn," etc., etc.

Secondly, a sentence or so tells of the adorer's condition and hopes.

"I am new," he confesses. "Tired to the commercial wheels of a grocery store. But time will tell. Lucrecia, once split rails."

Thirdly, comes the well-worn but never-tire sentiment.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets And simple faith, than Norman blood And fourthly and lastly

"Could you ever think kindly of me?"

Each of the many letters has expressed a simplicity that was not an urban form or address to the individuals who appear here in a composite of beauty.

It is something to fall in love with a photograph. And that is a spontaneity to which many have proved equal this past winter, spring and summer.

It is something also, through the difficult medium of photography, engraving, and printing, to convey a personality that brings proposals from unseen suitors.

As evidence of this capacity for adoration and the equal power of evoking it, are the dozens of letters received there—each a proposal to the original of a newspaper photograph.

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

By Bishop Warren A. Candier.

NOTHING is worse for a nation than over-wise wickedness," says Bishop Warren A. Candier, in the article which follows. "The awful state of things in Europe is the ripest fruit of secularism. We are reaping some of the fruits of secularism in our own country. Men are inquiring the cause of social restlessness and moral disorder in our land. Whatever secondary causes may enter into the case, we may be sure the final and fruitful cause is the departure of man from God. If the torch of civilization has been handed to us, let us see to it that it burns with a pure and steady flame, and guide the nations in safe and holy paths of peace."

In a recent address at the Virginia Hot Springs, the Hon. Myron T. Herrick, who was the United States ambassador to France at the outbreak of the war in Europe, said: "The light of Europe has gone out and the torch has been handed down to us."

A few days later in an address before the National Educational Association Chancellor Frank Strong of the University of Kansas declared that "American Universities must become the centers of the intellectual life of the next generation as a result of the European war."

These utterances direct attention to a most serious result of the European war, and they point out a most solemn responsibility which has come to our country. No more weighty obligation has ever fallen upon a nation than that which in this crisis has fallen upon the United States.

In confirmation of the views expressed by Ambassador Herrick and Chancellor Strong, there are at this time thousands of students from Oriental lands in American institutions. It is said that something like 15,000 Chinese students are attending colleges and universities in the United States. It is impossible to say what may be the numbers from other lands, but we know there are many thousands of them. The influences, educational and otherwise, which are now prevailing in America are reaching to the ends of the earth, and they are giving color to the thought and life of all mankind. This condition of world wide influence is not a temporary matter; it will abide for many years, not only for many generations.

It behooves the American people to pause and inquire what is the character of the influence which we are imparting to the world. What is the type of education which we are giving? Will it make for religion and piety and peace, or will it engender selfishness and secularism and strife?

It is to be feared that in many of the strongest institutions of learning in the Northern States, if not measured by financial resources alone, the type of education which is being propagated is by no means admirable, but is such that it cannot promote the welfare of mankind. In recent issues of the publication called "The Outlook" have been published sundry "confessions" of undergraduates which exposed the weakness of these institutions. The first of these "confessions" appeared in the Outlook of July 25, and the writer declared that his observations of college life led him to believe that it begot "an incapacity for work."

In the Outlook, issued on August 18, appeared other "confessions" and criticisms of the import. One feature writing from a place in Illinois says, "Many parents who think they are giving their sons an opportunity of building a foundation for the future in sending them to college, are simply sending them on a vacation of idleness that may spoil them for the rest of their lives."

In the same issue of the Outlook appears a "confession" from a student in California which reads as follows: "I myself am a thirty-year student in a Western university, which is one of the largest in the world. I take it that this article was written of an Eastern University, and therefore hasten to say that the same evils which were set forth in it are true of our Western institutions, and exist in perhaps an even more aggravated form."

"Between the social life, of which the fraternalism is the dramatic or fraternal center, the political life (we have student government), and the athletic life, in at least one of which a student must take an active part to maintain the respect of his classmates, there is but little time for study, and, as a matter of pure fact, there need be little for it as A. B. is merely a question of artful dodging—of the shrewd course."

"One does not have to go to college long to learn that the real student is a doubtful quantity, a dim figure in the far background of college life, who gets little respect from his professors and none whatever from his so-called fellow-students. The intricate maze of 'student activities' absorbs the major part of the time of ninety per cent of the students. I myself am working overtime toping out the 'easiest way' so that I can maintain my present 'ultra-active' part in dramatics; and I am only one of thousands in the same side-show of inefficiency rubbed to a fine polish."

Other writers speak very much after the same manner, and their statements make out a bad case for many of the largest institutions in the United States. The subject has attracted the attention of the editor of the New York Sun, who has published a scathing editorial on the subject.

We of the South should not take pleasure in these manifest defects of Northern and Western institutions; but we should be careful that our colleges and universities do not imitate them. It may be claimed that these evil characteristics promote what is vainly called "college spirit"; but let it be said in reply that they do not promote the real objects for which institutions of learning are founded. A college or university is not an end in itself, but a means to an end; and the object of its existence ought not to be sacrificed for the shadowy and ghostly thing paraded as "college spirit."

In view of the world conditions to which reference has been made, the Southern people are awake to the duty of strengthening and improving their institutions of higher learning. This is a duty which we cannot afford to neglect. We can not afford to sacrifice quality for mere bigness. Unless the faculties of our institutions of learning seek the conversion and spiritual development of their students, grounding them in the essential doctrines of the Scriptures, and leading them into the Christ life, they forfeit the claim of these institutions upon public benevolence and favor.

It is regrettable that secularism in education has come too far in the United States. As a people we are in danger of defining knowledge and civilization as the sum of what is good, but when it is separated from religious principle it becomes positive evil. Nothing is worse for a nation than over-wise wickedness. Our example of secularism in education is bearing bad fruit in the Orient. The Imperial Government of Japan recently proclaimed a programme of educational secularism for Korea, and the advance of the schools of the Christian churches in Korea. This would be nothing less than a full scale attack on the Christian people of that country. Nothing is more concerning for the welfare of the Orient, should lay this matter to heart. The lay student who is awake to this growing peril of secularism in education has been advancing. The poison has infected many of our own institutions, and is now spreading to the heathen lands. Who can overstate the dreadful significance of such a fact?

The awful state of things in Europe is the ripest fruit of secularism, and, if similar conditions exist, to the Orient, especially to Japan, which bears a peculiarly influential place in the Orient, there is before mankind a more direful and fruitful cause than that which is now being written on the bloody fields of the barbarous conflict of Europe.

We are reaping some of the fruits of secularism in our own country. Men are inquiring the cause of social restlessness and moral disorder in our land. Whatever secondary causes may enter into the case, we may be sure the final and fruitful cause is all the departure of man from God. This explains the crises of blood which have and must come. Human life is held cheap because the Creator and Redeemer of man is despised. What sort of example does a State set for the rest of mankind when lynchings are repeated within its borders and the perpetrators of such

In this connection, let us remind ourselves that if we are to have any part in the future of the world, we must set a good example as well as teach by precept. What sort of example does a State set for the rest of mankind when lynchings are repeated within its borders and the perpetrators of such crimes go unapprehended and unpunished? How can we teach the Chinese to abandon the demoralizing use of opium when we encourage, under the protection of law, the use of more destructive intoxicants? How can we teach honesty, when defalcations and thievery are reported in every day's issues of our newspapers? What sort of purity can we impart to other lands when hoodlumness runs riot in our own country?

These questions may be painful for us to consider, but it is necessary for us to face them. We must have a revival of right living or suffer the decay of faith and the decline of morality. Because we have been favored with great natural resources and long years of peace, we are not to suppose that we can set God's laws at naught and still be secure. We are not such favorites of heaven that we can expect partial treatment before our throne of God. The Scriptures teach us, and all history exemplifies the teaching, that the nations which forget God are turned into hell; and we may as well understand that God-forgiveness on our part will lead to that dreadful end just as truly as it has led to the utter overthrow of all the nations who have tried the wicked experiment.

The torch of civilization has been handed to us, let us see to it that it burns with a pure and steady flame and guide the nations in safe and holy paths of peace.

HER name is Stella Maria Williams. And Stella Maria means "Star of the sea."

It was that name William J. Lockett gave his heroine who "passed her life by the sea, away up on top of a cliff on the south coast, in one big beautiful room that had windows south and west."

The story book "Star of the Sea," was fanciful and very much adored and had a court of her own, where there was a "great high favorite" and a "great high beloved."

The Stella Maria this is about is from Union City, Tenn., and she is nineteen years old, and goes to Columbia university. She intends some day to be an Emma McChesney of business, and she was here last week to complete the task of earning $2,000 in three months.

But this isn't the story of a heroine, just turned nineteen, who shrewdly earns in a summer what the usual man labors for more than a year.

It is about the oddities of men as Stella Maria, from Union City, Tenn., has seen them.

The work that brings a three-month's income of $2,000 is soliciting sales trips for a weekly magazine.

She gets 90 cents to one dollar from each subscription; that means more than $2,000 must be gained to bring the three months' earnings to $2,000.

It is not, as it is possible, because her voice is so? Because she has gray eyes and light hair. And because she knows psychology.

"A woman," said Stella Maria, "if she really is younger than twenty-five, if she really is well-bred, in the way we southern people mean—if she keeps the delicate balance between dignity and good humor; and if she knows something of psychology, can always bring men to her way of thinking."

"And, while I have put psychology last, it is very important, though not so much so as good breeding and the dignity that induces respect."

"It may surprise you, but the color of eyes and hair of your prospective customer is vital. I can always sell my magazine to men with brown eyes. I have gray eyes. I find that particularly true in Atlanta, though I can't explain why."

"The rule that opposites attract holds true here, too, in any city I ever visited. I should think that Atlanta girls with grey eyes would have brown-eyed suitors, wouldn't they?"

"A man here who is a brunette seems to look on every blond as the embodiment of beauty."

"This attraction of opposites holds true, of course, in all cities—I have canvassed New Orleans, Montgomery, Savannah, Charleston, and Nashville—and it certainly is true of them."

"But here, gray eyes and brown eyes seem to seek each other. Blue and gray don't go together, do they? I don't think I have on my subscription list a dozen men in Atlanta whose eyes are blue."

"Really, I believe as far as the masculine half of your city is concerned, it is the brown eyes that are the most kindly. Perhaps, if I were of brunette type I wouldn't find it so."

"And another thing, not an oddity but a fine trait of character is this: Real, actual simplicity, and that dignity on which I have insisted, are the qualities of behavior one must have here."

"Atlanta isn't a bit a flirtatious city. It is a little chatty." If you have the sort of eyes the somebody you are trying to sell our magazine to, likes, he will want to know about your hair color and when you're coming back to Atlanta."

"But that's just because folks here are kindly. They don't like you if you are not their sort. And they like you best if you are ingenuous."

"When a southern man knows you really are trying to work your way through college; that you are southern folks, too; and that you have come to him just as another man would, he treats you very fairly and very kindly."

Eight Deeds of Heroism in Georgia

ACTS of heroism in Georgia are enumerated in the latest report of the Carnegie hero commission. A full list of the names of whom medals and money have been given by the commission is printed. Among these are seven whose heroic deeds were done in Georgia.

John B. Hill, colored, aged 25, coachman, rescued Thomas S. Prescott, colored six, and Florence Williams, (colored) aged 21, from a runaway. Atlanta, Ga., December 1, 1905. By grabbing the bridle of one of the horses of the runaway team which was about to land on the child and maid, Hill, after being dragged some distance, threw the horse. It fell upon breaking his clothing in a wound due to a recent operation.

William N. Williams, aged 21, farmer, saved John C. Reed, aged 71, lawyer, from being run over by a train. Atlanta, Ga., February 10, 1907. Forthright ran 20 feet ahead of the train—a passenger—which had been running 30 miles an hour up to within 45 feet of Reed, and crossed the track, pushing Reed in front of him, barely being missed by the engine.

mayor and lawyer, and Green Thomas, aged 55, laborer, from a runaway. Madison, Ga., June 27, 1909. Walker tried to grab the rein of one of a team of eight horses drawing a surrey containing Butler, Thomas and the Obears, but falling, he ran alongside the horse a few steps, and then grabbed the reins. It slipped through his hands to the loop, and at that moment Walker was struck by a wheel and knocked to the ground. The wheel struck David by his injuries, passed over his legs below the knees and, still clinging to the rein, he was dragged along the street for about 15 feet, when, the result of his injuries, none of the occupants of the surrey was hurt.

Archibald H. Davis, Jr., aged 19, student, attempted to save B. Manly Hassard, aged 16, student, from drowning at Tallulah Falls, Ga., August 10, 1908. When they reached the rock, Davis, 100 feet to Hassard, who had become depressed in the Tallulah river in water about six feet deep. Hassard grabbed Davis and they struggled desperately, while the current carried them rapidly toward a large rock in the river. They went under the surface together several times and at one time Hassard had hold of Davis at the throat. When they reached the rock, Davis, who had broken Hassard's grasp, stood in shallow water and tried to lift Hassard up, but the current swept them off the rock and they became separated. Hassard was drowned. Davis was almost powerless from fatigue, but after swimming twenty feet, managed to catch hold of some bushes and pull himself out of the water. He then collapsed and was not revived for an hour.

er, from suffocation, Duncan's Creek, Ga., August 9, 1912. Bowls was working in a well three feet in diameter, and fifty feet deep. He was overcome by carbon dioxide and fell to the bottom. Burel and others were attracted to the well; and when they learned what was wrong, three men, one of them Burel's assistant, refused to let Burel's hearing to enter the well. Burel took off his shoes and descended to Bowls by means of notches which were cut in two sides of the well, and then climbed to the surface without assistance.

Bowls was raised and was revived. Arthur Lockett, colored, aged 33, fireman, saved Claude H. Potter, aged three, from being run over by a train. Jefferson, Ga., May 2, 1912. Lockett was in the cab of a locomotive running 25 miles an hour, and his attention was attracted by a scream from the engine. He saw Claude on the track 150 feet ahead of the locomotive, which was then revving eight or nine miles an hour. He fell forward as he struck the ground and grabbed Claude as he fell. With two strong, quick jerks he threw himself and the child off the track to safety. The locomotive was stopped when the pilot was 35 feet beyond the point of rescue.

The Georgia girl for whom a Carnegie hero medal is being sought is Ellisabeth Enloe, age 15. This summer she was refused to attend the school near Clayton, Ga., she rescued a man who was drowning in a swift stream. A man, who stood near her on the bank, refused to attempt the rescue because he thought such an effort would be suicidal.

Barker M. Burel, aged 21, student, saved Adolphus Bowls, aged 28, farm-

House Has Stood In Four Counties

THE old Carter Hill place, now occupied by James Wages, is perhaps the most historic home in Barrow county. It has the distinction of having been located in four counties of Georgia. The dwelling house was originally built in Franklin county in a part of the territory which later went to Jackson. Then when Cut Oge District was taken from Jackson and added to Walton it included this old home, and it is now a part of a prosperous section of Barrow county. The building was erected of hewn and split logs, slatted together with oak and pine. It has stood for many years and is still in good repair. It was used as a fort and its port holes aroused the curiosity of present visitors. Could the old building ever be so wide? Women are mysterious to you.—Wander (Ga.) News.

Battle With 'Gators Near Lovett, Fla.

REPORT has been received of a battle with two big alligators. The young men were fishing in a swamp back of Mayland and one of them remarked of the particular place, "gator cave." In about five minutes a huge gator struck at R. Dewey and the whole party cleared out of the place in a hurry. One of the had a 22 rifle and when the gator started for him, after the shot in the eye had been exhausted and poles secured to prod the alligator out of the mud it was discovered that two had been killed, one ten feet long and one seven feet long.

TRAIL OF DRUG DEVIL IN ATLANTA

Story Told By Atlanta Victim Whose Use of Drugs Exceeded That Of De Quincey, Author of "The Confessions of An Opium Eater."

Drug Evil Here Is Compared To A Great Hand That Closes On Its Victims.

By Angus Perkerson

FOLLOWING is an interview with two brothers, confined on a vagrancy charge in Fulton county jail, one of whom used greater quantities of opiates than De Quincey himself. They say 5,000 Atlanta people are addicted to drugs. D. J. Gantt, revenue agent, puts his figure at not more than 2,000. But Dr. John W. Hurt, county physician, supports the estimate of the prisoners.

TWO brothers told this. One stantly. He needs merely to sit and stare at you.

His shoulders are humped forward, his back craned and—his eyes. They have the wide, distended look of someone constantly afraid. He looks at you as though he doesn't see you, but something terrible and fearful, instead. He has the muteness of despair. He doesn't move or speak. "You question him and he shifts round."

In the gloom of the cell he was half raised—just his white face, and his staring eyes. He was like something not peering out of the darkness. "Come on," he said. They came heavily through the doorway.

"All right, boys," said the jailer. "There was the scuff of feet on the iron floor. One brother came leading the other."

The older was withered till his face was sallow white and his skin was in little folds and wrinkles. At the door the smaller stopped. "Come on," he said. They came heavily through the doorway.

The younger's eyes were bright, his face seemed firm, he looked about sharply.

The other stood where he was halted, as though without power or thought to move.

Minor comes in many for is to the gray stone jail. But never in greater loneliness.

He wore only ragged trousers and torn, dirty shirts. The very clothes have been sold off the backs to buy the stuff that makes them old and despairing.

These brothers, confined in Fulton county tower, pending commitment to the state farm, are like symbols of reprobation.

They were brought out of the cell in some such guise; and the younger, for the sake of others, told their story—the story of the drug evil here, of how, like a great hand, it has closed on hundreds, wringing from them, the last drop of life and happiness.

He used this figure for he talks descriptively, with now and then a nervous trembling and hesitation.

He seemed actually to see a great hand with closing fingers—one that held him hopeless, reaching out always for new victims.

With a queerly depressing effect he employed the metaphor. But he is a tough, stubborn, piece of flesh. His brother, in three years has gone to nothing—white, wrinkled skin, staring eyes.

But this younger even has color in his cheeks, his words come readily, his gaze is firm.

In six years he has spent $5,000 on drugs, and taught his brother the habit. Before his imprisonment, his daily diet of opiates was greater than De Quincey's.

The average injection of morphine is half a grain. Two grains would kill you. This little man, only twenty-five, wants 70 grains a day.

He ruined himself, his brother, his family. Vagrancy as a technical charge was brought against the two to save them from themselves by a year's imprisonment.

"I want to be cured," said the younger. "But I never will. Once it gets you, it has you for all time."

He leaned against the railing that circles the iron platform. The older stood where he had been halted, as though he had lost the idea of movement.

In the group gathered near them were Dr. John W. Hurt, county physician; and D. J. Gantt, revenue agent detailed to enforce the law against the sale of drugs.

The government man had mentioned these two brothers as the most wretched victims here of the drug horror; and one best able to tell of the evil of morphine.

He didn't know the older showed in his white face and wide-parted eyes a story no one could tell.

The younger was to talk, it being understood his name should not be given. He at least had pride left. It is surprising what a body drenched with opiates has left him. He still has clear thought, quick words, and a fatalistic philosophy.

"I can never be cured," he says. "Never." And asks you for a cigarette. Dr. Hurt had slipped back the sleeve of the older, rolled it to the elbow, and then to the shoulder.

The man's arm is like a leper's. The skin is grayish. It is tough as leather. The needle of a hypodermic no longer can puncture such flesh. It is scaly and swells in puffs. It is horrible. Thousands and thousands of times the needle has pierced the skin of his arm.

"It's understood," cautioned the younger, "you're not to use our names. I don't mind telling you what I can. The government is right in going down with this drug law. Shut it down too quick and you'll kill people."

"He twisted and winds. It goes into your head, don't you think so?"

He turned to Dr. Hurt. "Just about that many," agreed the physician.

"It isn't only men, it's women, too," he continued. "It isn't only one class, it's all classes. I know, because there is a sort of fellowship among us. The dope evil is everywhere—'It twists and winds. It goes into all sorts of homes, rich and poor."

"Morphine doesn't stay out because there is a portico-cochere at the side and a garage at the back. I was well-to-do six years ago. Just on the morphine I have used I spent $5,000 in that time."

"I was of the better class, though I wasn't rich. I got me. It's got hundreds of others like me."

"It's—here he changed his figure—'It's like a great big hand, always reaching out and closing and mashing; then reaching out again."

"Once it's got you there's no escape. I want to quit, but I won't. I'm one of the few, though, it didn't seem to hurt. It nearly finished my brother. But he isn't as strong as I am. It never bothers me except when I don't get it."

It hurts them. My whole body from head to heels aches. It is as though a thousand knife points were drilling into me. If it were to be taken from me altogether I would die. The agony is more than I can explain to you. It means a thousand neuralgic pains at once."

He looked at his brother who stood exactly where he had been stopped.

"Come over here."

The older, with the uncertain movements of an automaton, advanced to the railing and leaned against it. His staring white eyes turned from one to another of the group.

The younger shook his head at the sorry sight and heaved a sigh.

"I got the habit as the aftermath of several years of drinking. I simply went from whisky to morphine. I taught it to my brother without meaning to. He had toothache and I eased the pain with an injection of morphine."

WHY NOT TROUSERETTES?

ASKS MRS. FELTON

TROUSERETTES were introduced to the East Lake country club several weeks ago as a part of the dancing costume. Interviews with Atlanta women approved the new fashion as an emancipation in women's styles. Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville, Ga., adds her commendation in the following article: Pantalottes, she says, were the fashion 70 years ago. Why shouldn't they be worn again today?

By Mrs. W. H. Felton

As an octogenarian, my views are likely to have little weight with the fashionable; but I can recall for your readers the style of seventy odd years ago, when "pantalottes" were all the fashion. "Mens breeches were called pantalons, and women's garments to match were called pantalottes. The same relation I presume exists today between trousers and trouserettes.

As far back as I can recollect my mother dressed me in pantalottes. My nurse was very particular to keep the trimmed ones for dress-up and Sunday wear. "The ladies' trouserettes were finished at the knee with a double hem to hold the buttons firmly and the gay stockings on the lower limbs, especially when the aforesaid limbs were apparently as shapeless as beanstalks or table toothpicks, and to maintain decent comfort in both ways, but mine were sold from waistband to bottom, until I grew large enough to make my own supply of pantalottes.

They always came down lower than the hem of my short dress to show the trimming and to give the proper finish to the costume. If the ladies who now wear trouserettes had adopted this fashion when skirts were so tight and pressed up so decidedly when the wearer sat down, I think the trouserettes would have been more becoming than the gay stockings on the lower limbs.

There was endless variety as to the trimming applied to those old-fashioned pantalottes, embroidery, lacing, knit edgings and ruffles. We called the new style (such as you illustrated your last Sunday's magazine section "Bloomers") if bloomers had not been so popular in the north they would have been more in vogue in the south.

They were worked by contraries in those rabid anti-bum days in everything. The slavery question fiercely tintured our preferences and our antipathies. Heretofore, I have never discussed the woman question or the right of women to the ballot, nowadays.

Our anti-bellum orators in the south discussed "long-haired men and short-haired women" without gloves. What ever Henry Ward Beecher and Lucretia Mott agreed upon was deemed heresy in

I did that several times, and he got the taste for it. Since then we've lived for the effects of dope—we've looked forward to the sensation of this or that opiate and to nothing else—just as hundreds of others here do.

"As a rule, people are not broad enough to live for more than one thing, and we chose sleep and rest. I've read a little, though not in the last few years. Even reading doesn't go well with morphine. And it seems to me we were trying in the wrong way for a sort of lotus eater's existence."

"We found too much suffering. The dreams that are supposed to make opium so wonderful never came to me.

EXTRME STYLES IN TROUSERETTES worn recently at the Black and White ball at Narragansett, R. I. It really was at Narragansett the trouserette fashion started. At the top, Miss Dorothy Norris; at the bottom, Miss Lucia Chace, both of Narragansett. Photos copyright by Underwood & Underwood.

the south, and as bloomers were fashionable in Plymouth church gatherings, and anti-slavery lecture rooms, our southern men folks sat down hard on bloomers or trouserettes. If Jane Addams or "Mark Hanna's daughter" advocated trouserettes today the style would be condemned by those who are still wedded to their prejudices and sectional hatreds in old Georgia.

I will also add that I am in favor of trouserettes if it is easier to dance in them than in tight skirts. I should fancy there is more liberty in action with the bloomers and the modern dances require this freedom, if I am a judge of them without any experience in the business.

I will also add that I am in favor of wearing sufficient clothes to hide the female body from sensuous gazers, and to maintain decent comfort in both summer and winter time. I think men are more sensible than women in this matter. Sometimes they prefer to go bareheaded, but always they are careful to cover up the limbs and the torso for health's sake as well as for decency's sake.

One of the most comical scenes that ever greeted my eyes was last year. A black woman, tall and stout, was garbed in a thin white dress and the underskirt was likewise diaphanous. This she showed in such a way as to silhouette her body for at least a hundred yards. The movement of the black woman's limbs was like the regular movement of a pair of long black shears thinly veiled from the outside me—thousands, though not as bad off. There used to be opium dens here. I've been to them. There never was any trouble getting all the stuff you wanted. I've bought as much as $150 worth at a time.

"The drug habit is a hand, a great gripping paw of a hand, always reaching out and closing; reaching out and closing again."

He leaned back against the railing, a slight flush in his cheeks, his eyes bright.

The older brother suddenly straightened up as though an idea had flashed to him.

"Got a cigarette?" he asked.

and she was happily unconscious of the diversion she was giving to outsiders. I remember seeing a fashionable white lady whose body was covered with a very thin silk white waist. So long as she wore her coat it was all right, but when she took off her coat at the public dinner table I had a reliable glimpse of her small, white slim body with the hide (?) in sight where the waist was not closed by suitable fastenings.

But you must not forget that I have largely outlived modern styles or fashions. I nearly always make my own dresses and prefer to make my simple wearing bonnets, and I have been able to keep some fullness in my dress skirts and I am also convinced that I must cover up my throat and neck and wear a reasonable amount of clothes, both summer and winter, for health's sake.

I lived at a time in early youth when ladies used to wear eight or ten stiff petticoats to give proper expansion. I lived also when hoop skirts were mammoth in dimensions. I have lived to see fine dresses skin tight on arms and body and then spread out to full length as a peacock's tail spreads in full plumage in a way only possible to our peafowl species and female vanity.

I suggest that you induce some of the modern fashions to give you a fuller movement of trouserettes for the dance next Sunday. I am prepared to say I have never once abandoned the trouserette idea—in theory or practice—for three score and ten years.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME

EDITED by MARION HARLAND

WORK AS AN ANTIDOTE FOR SENILITY.

A FEW weeks ago an interesting letter came to me from which I quote a portion which caught my especial attention:

William Hanna Thompson, in his book entitled "Brain and Personality," says that in order to keep young in mind and body one must have some work to do in which one has an interest. Looking at this, the brain begins to decay and we have the dreadful example with which we are familiar—dementia people whose minds have given way and who have become amiable, awayed by the interests and the impulse of the moment.

Perhaps because I am well along in years myself I am peculiarly interested in anything pertaining to mental or physical vigor. I attribute much of my own reason and vigor to the fact that I have always found the world and all it contains a absorbing world and have never suffered from boredom. So I am eager to make converts to my theory that age is largely within one's own control. On this account I am happy to find myself backed by so eminent an authority as Dr. Thompson.

Longer than I can say I have believed in every one keeping a log of one's mind in good working order. Riding a hobby has always impressed me as one of the best forms of mental and physical exercise, and the bread of the hobby seems to me moment that the necessity of having one strong enough to carry one away from daily and wearing cares.

To drop the metaphor, let me ask those who have kept their eyes open if they have not observed the same state of affairs as that commented upon by the correspondent from whom I have just quoted. Have you not seen the "dreadful examples" to which she refers—persons who have aged suddenly and pitifully when their active occupations have ceased? Have you not known, as I have, cases of men who have retired from business with the expressed purpose of taking a well earned rest after a hard working life, and who have, in popular phrase, "gone all to pieces" as soon as they had nothing to do but sit about and read the papers? Have you not seen old ladies who had always been brisk about their work, who were forced by well meaning relatives to delegate their duties to others and "take life easy," and who have sunk into apathy and depression?

Depend upon it, Dr. Thompson is right. We all need a vigorous interest to keep us youthful in mind and body when the years gather thick upon us.

I recall the case of one woman I know who had always been a busy wife, mother, and housekeeper. When after her husband's death and the marriage and departure from home of several of her children she kept comparatively young and as active as the time when her last child married. Then it seemed hardly worth while to keep up the home just for herself, and she went to live with her married son.

Her occupation was gone. She had nothing to do but to sit at leisure, sew a little, read a little, chat a little. She had no hobby or fact to absorb her mind, and that she was not of real use in the home. Within many months she dropped into a feeble old lady, and those who loved her best felt it was a blessed release when a few days later she slipped quietly out of life. She was not old enough to be tired of living, she simply lacked an interest which would have given her power of resistance to disease.

The truth is that many of our elderly men and women are like a man of whom I read not long ago and who had always had all his life with the one aim in view of some day having time to read and study. When he was about 60 he had achieved his aim, he could retire from some business to his library and devote himself to the books he had read for, and then he found that he had forgotten how to read! All his powers had been given to the problems of business; he could no longer concentrate his mind on an expensive conservatory, but a small greenhouse was within his means, and it was astonishing the results he achieved with his modest outlay. Not only actual work among his plants engaged him, but the interest opened up lines of reading and study which occupied many hours and effectively saved him anything like ennui.

Besides this, I have known men who made a specialty of raising chickens and pigeons and found employment in it which not only kept them out of doors and gave them an object like, but also added comfortably to their income and made them feel they were of some practical value in the world—an agreeable sensation for any one, old or young, and of especial service to those who have ceased to belong to the regular army corps of laborers.

If I have put out the patience of elderly men who have found interesting occupations ahead of those of women who were similarly fortunate it is because old men are usually thought of as less lucky in these lines.

"An old lady can always make herself useful about the house," said some one to me only the other day. "She can help about the work and do the mending and look after the children, but what in the world is there for an old man to do unless he lives in the country and can have a share in the care of the chores?"

But this is not the kind of work I wish the old ladies in whom I am interested to occupy themselves. My plan is that while they are only middle-aged, or elderly, or even while they are still young, they should provide themselves with pursuits which will give them something to think of and plan for and work at, and that will mean more to them than supplementing the labor of the housekeeper with whom they live.

"If I had not so much work of other kinds to do I would like to take up my painting again," said a busy philanthropic worker to me. "I love painting in water colors, and I always look forward to the day when I shall be too old to do the sort of thing which takes all my time now and shall be able to go back to my picture making."

Not everyone has the talent for such a pleasant pastime as that, but nearly all of us have some faculty which may be cultivated. One woman whom I know is well over 80 and still does exquisite embroidery. Also she always keeps up her reading and her interest in public questions, and her only complaint is that she doesn't have time to do all she wishes to accomplish. She embroiders while her daughter reads aloud to her and they both lead a happy life.

Another of my acquaintances lives in the country on a farm. She is not strong enough for the hard work which engaged her in her earlier years, but her especial care is given to the baby chicks.

But this is not the kind of work I wish the old ladies in whom I am interested to occupy themselves. My plan is that while they are only middle-aged, or elderly, or even while they are still young, they should provide themselves with pursuits which will give them something to think of and plan for and work at, and that will mean more to them than supplementing the labor of the housekeeper with whom they live.

"If I had not so much work of other kinds to do I would like to take up my painting again," said a busy philanthropic worker to me. "I love painting in water colors, and I always look forward to the day when I shall be too old to do the sort of thing which takes all my time now and shall be able to go back to my picture making."

Not everyone has the talent for such a pleasant pastime as that, but nearly all of us have some faculty which may be cultivated. One woman whom I know is well over 80 and still does exquisite embroidery. Also she always keeps up her reading and her interest in public questions, and her only complaint is that she doesn't have time to do all she wishes to accomplish. She embroiders while her daughter reads aloud to her and they both lead a happy life.

Another of my acquaintances lives in the country on a farm. She is not strong enough for the hard work which engaged her in her earlier years, but her especial care is given to the baby chicks.

world is there for an old man to do unless he lives in the country and can have a share in the care of the chores?"

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

A LETTER signed "C" requests a recipe for making Dutch cheese from buttermilk. We think it makes a finer cheese than that made from sour milk.

"Let the buttermilk get sour; heat it very slowly some little time, to separate curds and whey. Then drain off the whey and wash the remainder in a bag until it is dry. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika. To me it is a little above, but anyway needs to be added. Roll the cheese into small patties or rolls.

"Pimento may also be used to make it more attractive. It will have to stand twenty-four hours or so to dry out, as this cheese is more moist than that made from milk that made from the sour milk; but it is also much finer grained and rich. I think if 'C' will try this way she can use every bit of her milk but the whey."

he cheered. You cannot guess how hard the writer has been for me, as I have tried to do over those of my family who could not get work. Mrs. A. M. T. At I have already written to this correspondent, we cannot ask for paid employment through the Corner, but it may be that some of the constituency have unfinished pieces of crocheting they could turn over to a helper, or that they would be willing to give her the chance of finding a market for them when they are done. It is hard to be in such a position as hers. I know our sympathy goes to her freely, and I hope there may be letters as well as other methods employed for encouraging her. She deserves all we can do for her.

About Printing Addresses.

"I wonder if the following recipe will be new to you: Lay a slice of smoked ham one inch thick in a baking dish and add three or four raw potatoes upon it. Cover with milk, and bake as long as you would scalloped potatoes. No seasoning is necessary. If it is not possible to print the addresses of persons making requests in the Helping Hand department? So often I would respond if I could send at once, but a busy business woman is prone to put off until night to write the address and then perhaps too tired to do so.

"L. V."

"The recipe you send is novel to me and welcome. It will give me pleasure to try it myself. I have said often before that the matter of printing the addresses of persons making requests is a matter beyond my control. A higher power than myself sees fit not to publish them. It is one thing to make my sympathy go through the printed page and quite another to see your name asked to write the address of a person who would do me a favor. Thanking it accordingly, I think that more harm than good would be done by printing names.

The Still Corresponds.

"I sent music to Mrs. F. E. B. and received a grateful acknowledgment. I am still corresponding with the lame daughter of Mrs. C. E. S. who says she enjoys letters immensely. I receive much good from the Corner. I. A. Y."

This is part of a letter asking for the addresses of several others to whom the correspondent feels she can be of service. She says that she receives much good from the Corner, and I have a strong impression that she is one of those who give fully as much as they receive. I am glad to know there are many others like her.

Thankful for Address.

"My husband wishes me to thank you for the address of E. B. At her request he has sent her quite a variety of stamps. Mrs. J. S. C."

"The Song of the Lark" was exhibited at the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893. If interested Reader has never seen the painting, I have a copy of it, card size, which I would gladly give her. Mrs. G. E. B."

This friendly offer comes from a correspondent in Los Angeles, and I regret that "Interested Reader" did not give her address, that I might put her in communication with Mrs. G. E. B. Should she see this paragraph and write for the address, I will gladly send it.

She Needs Work.

"I am a shut-in and need work. I can do any kind of crocheted work. It occurs to me that there must be a number of interested people who would be glad to help a shut-in. I have realism and it is hard work to get it. I am willing to do what work I can. How many pieces of silk I have received through the kindness of the Corner! When I have a market for the many bright pieces and try to

Song of the Lark.

"Although I am only a girl of 14, I read your Corner with much interest, and I notice that a reader desires information with regard to 'The Song of the Lark.' Jules Breton, a French artist, painted this picture. The girl is a French peasant on her way to work in a field. Breton's best pictures are of the everyday working class. If there is any girl of my age or younger, who is a cripple or a shut-in, I would be glad to exchange letters with her. R. R. H."

I am glad to have young girls among the readers of the department, and I am sure some crippled or shut-in girl would be happy to correspond with R. R. H. I will keep her address on file. I am also obliged for the information she sends and print below other notes on the same subject, conveying substantially the same facts, with interesting additions.

"The Song of the Lark" was painted by Jules Adolph Breton and the girl in the picture is a French peasant. Bre-

ATLANTA GAS LIGHT COMPANY

THE POLICE

By Ward Greene
Mutt and Jeff
 Every time I pass him in the middle of the road.
 His lips are makin' motions de whil he tote his load;
 Den I alius wonder what his fixen fo' ter say,
 But I'll nebbber heah him tell it twell de judgement day.
 —That Mysterious Man.

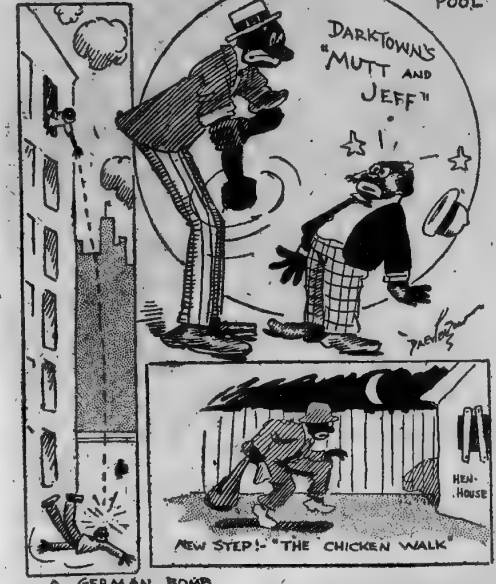

"The idea! The very idea! A great, big nigger like you jumping on a young fellow like that! You ought to be ashamed!"
 Thus did the officer deliver his tirade when he arrested Slim Jim, so called by his neighbors in the black belt. Slim Jim was found by the police wielding a face palming across the back of Henry's face as arrested atom whose face had the appearance of a perpetual pout.
 In court the reporters called them Darktown's Mutt and Jeff.
 "Dat up-standin' nigger mighty nigh beat de debil outen me," Jeff, alias Henry, complained to the court in whining tones. "He come up without no provenshan whutsomeber and commence whargin' wid de pain'. An' I ain't say nothin' ter him a-tall."
 Mutt, alias Slim Jim, looked his lips and spoke.
 "Jedge," he declaimed, "Dat 'll b'ity nigger nester me ter death. I big seein' dat boy walkin' rou'n' heah fo' months an' months, an' he alius talkin' ter hissef! 'Ery time I run erross him he's ermuterin' an' er-mumbalin' twell he git on mah nerves. Hoccome he keep on talkin' ter hissef' dat erway, jedge? Whutchu reckon he sayin'?" "Whut big-ness he got talkin' ter hissef' anyway?"
 With this impetuous plea Slim Jim concluded his argument. But it availed him nothing. The recorder pronounced sentence for assault and battery and fined Slim Jim $10.
 As the plaintiff, Henry, departed from the courtroom, his lips were seen to quiver up and down, "talkin' to hissef'" in a mysterious largon.
 An even the recorder could not restrain a frantic desire to know what the vanished Henry was talking about. But they never knew.

The Voice of Rastus
 Moway mawlin' honey, water's in de pan,
 Close on de table, soap's in mah hand,
 Skye's erminlin' sweetly, sun's erashin'—
 Eh-rybody's waitin' fo' de charcol man!
 —Sons of Suda.

LOLO JENKINS got into difficulties with the law because she dropped a fatron from the sixth story of a building into the senseless head of Rastus Peck, snarling along below, in the best of humor with a beautiful woman until the crash on his cranium.
 When the woman split in half, and while Rastus was able to appear in court, he protested he would be head-headed for the next day.
 "An' I ain't sorry of he is," sobbed Lolo Jenkins indignantly. "I told dem plenty times it was er accident, but I see Jedge ter say now dat I done it ap-puppos. 'Ery mawlin' jedge, dat Peck kam come walkin' 'roun' underneath mah window, an' he say, 'Yu-are-cole! Yu-are-cole!' I kin heah him cemin' fo' blocks erway an' de noise don't quit twell he's out de next corner. His suitin' to die."
 "Why do you sing that way, Rastus?" asked the recorder. "It's a most peculiar song."
 From beneath his handgrip bow Rastus turned a pair of sorrowful eyes on de jedge.
 "Jedge," he said, "Dat's mah big-ness. I gotter sing dat way fo' ter git trade de er charcol man, jedge, an' I has er roller. White folks, willy' want er ash me."
 And sing his voice in melody, Rastus Peck made the rafters ring. "Yu-are-cole! Yu-are-cole! Yu-are-cole!"
 Lolo and gave Rastus the limit.

Sporty All the Way
 I've er spot an' er cutter f'm mah hand ter mah toes,
 Oustin' de straight in mah go-ter-meatin' close,
 Prancin' down de sidewalk, dressed er f'm ter hill,
 Can' no' ervey rou'n', yaller gas, an' look yo' fill!
 —Hotfoot Hat's Song.

"KELLY POOL!" called the clerk.
 "Entered a sweet gentleman in magnificent blue silk shirt, crimson A. J. trousers and shoes to match. A young, smiling stranger across his face, a crime made his presence known."
 "But he's a good fellow, your honor. And when he's out of drink the finest workman you ever saw."
 He's out of it now, and has given Fulton county Tower a cuisine like a Parisian, or rather a Berlin, hotel. You would hardly connect "Schmidt" with the allied camp.

The strangerman himself could not talk owing to the chastisement inflicted by Jumbo, but the policemen told how they found him doubled into a bow-knot in Pickle Lane, with Jumbo Sam calmly wiping his razor on the strangerman's shirt.
 "I spec yo'll get me wid de goods," said Jumbo Sam to the court. "But I wants ter explain jes' why I did dat strangerman. He say he was f'm Memphis, but he talk lak er coast nigger. An' no matter what he come f'm, he ain't got no big-ness buttin' rou'n' in Atlanta. He come in de parlor down ter Mis' Sule's and commence talkin' mighty big 'bout hissef' an' braggin' 'bout de way he kin dance. He say, 'I reckon yo'll ain't nebbber seed de chicken walk, is you? Man, dat an some dance, Billy me!' An' I say, 'Yep, I reckon you done dat chicken walk f'm de back fence ter de coop, ain't you? Aids den he say—'"
 "The judge interrupted impatiently. "I don't care what he said to you or what you said to him. Why did you cut him?"
 "Ain't dat jes' what I'm tellin' you?" queried Jumbo Sam. "I cut dat strangerman kaze he talk too much an' how you gwine know he talk too much less? I tell you what he say?"
 "I admit the force of your argument, Sam," agreed the recorder. "But I can't admit its length. I'll just bind you over for stabbing and you can tell Judge Andy all about it."

An Alien
 Fust I shoud, 'looky heah, you better sense 'em!"
 Den he 'low he's gwine bus' me on de 'er lawbone."
 So I hawl off wid er brickbat an' I heave it at his head,
 Atter dat, I ricolle', dar was nothin' no' said. —How It All Began.

WHERE the white lights burn in Darktown they arrested Jumbo Sam. The white lights burn in draggery which shines in summer nights, bootleg whiskey, sharp razors, druggery and names such as the Silver Moon Saloon and the Gold Dollar Cafe.
 And when they arrested Jumbo Sam it was summer night, the whiskey flowed, Sam, agreed the recorder, "But I can't admit its length. I'll just bind you over for stabbing and you can tell Judge Andy all about it."

THE big opportunity waits someone in queer places. It waited for Joe Schmidt in jail.
 In-and-out-Joe has been called in the workhouse this week, out the next. Many is the time the arresting officer, his hand on Joe's shoulder, has ended his testimony with apologetics.
 "But he's a good fellow, your honor. And when he's out of drink the finest workman you ever saw."
 He's out of it now, and has given Fulton county Tower a cuisine like a Parisian, or rather a Berlin, hotel. You would hardly connect "Schmidt" with the allied camp.

Blind Man Rescues Party of Hunters
Party of Hunters
 VALDOSTA, Ga.—Possum hunters from Naylor, a small town in Lowndes county, were rescued from a night in the woods, recently, by Riley Fender, the blind fisherman. In some ways Riley Fender is the most remarkable man in the state. When he went blind and there seemed nothing he could do, he took to fishing. He walks out from Naylor to the Alabama river, a distance of two miles, and returns a fish basket laden.
 The possum hunters had given up hope of finding their way home, when they heard some one approaching through the woods. Riley Fender, to whom all hours of the day are night, stepped out of the bushes. In half an hour he had shown the whole party the way home.

Anti-Pan Law Is Passed in Cordele
 CORDELE, Ga.—The anti-pan law has spread to this town. An ordinance is now in effect here which prohibits servants from carrying any foodstuffs from the residence of their employers, unless they have written permission to do so. The ordinance was introduced by Alderman J. N. King.

Colquitt Chambers Is a Rain-Maker
 L YERLY, Ga.—Colquitt Chambers, of Romeville, believes he is a rain-maker. A few days ago he killed a large blacksnake and hung it up in a bush. A shower came up and gave him a wetting before he could reach shelter. A day or two later he moved some hay and this, he thinks, brought another rain. Now people in every section are killing snakes and hanging them up and moving hay to bring rain.

"J. E. F." Georgia's Rarest Philosopher
 GREENSBORO, Ga.—One of the rarest characters in Georgia journalism is "J. E. F.," who contributes to the Greensboro Herald-Journal under the caption, "Richard Philosophy."
 One of his latest notices is "We are going to write the Kaiser a postcard and tell him to quit fighting and let the peace treaty be signed. We will furnish some big daily with our picture. We may put in a grandchild and great-grandchildren's pictures. We have 37 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. So we will have to purchase a whole page of the paper to put them on."
 Anent the present popularity of automobiles, "J. E. F." philosophizes. "The north thinks that the south is a mighty good place to fish for suckers. The last bait they put on the hook was automobiles and they seem to be catching suckers, both going and coming. There are plenty of folks buying automobiles and their last year's grocery bill unpaid, and thousands of the incoming generation will be working out mortgages given for these automobiles. It is mighty hard for this generation to leave debts for the next to pay off. If a man has got money to burn he can afford to spend it on luxury, but buying luxury on credit is mighty bad policy."
 "J. E. F." harkens back to the days of his childhood to the thirties and forties, with the following incident: "When the writer was a boy the man who owned the place that was now the bridge on the bridge on the Greensboro and Penfold road, and it was falling to get ripe when ten of his best mules got into the coffee and all of them died before day. The pioneer cut that coffee down the next day and burned it up."

Ring Marbles the New National Game
 GREENSBORO, Ga.—Ring marbles have become the national game—at least as far as Greensboro is concerned. Saturday has been set aside as "Countryman's Day," and it is an unwritten law that the official marble grounds that no one but countrymen have the right to play upon.
 A steady and remarkable evolution in the kitchen of the Tower.
 He discharged the acting assistants and selected others who were competent. He painted the walls and floors of the kitchen. He scrubbed every nook and corner. He set up the German rule of efficiency.
 With a ladle in one hand and a white cap on the back of his head he addressed his assistants:
 "Cooks, he said, have a duty to perform. They have, in fact, the highest of all vocations. It is given to no man to do a better work."
 "And, friends," he entreated, "I ask you to do your work well."
 Since then the kitchen at the Tower has seen the marvellous production of delicate dishes from a pantry that once yielded peas and side meat. In unrecognizable disguises these plain rations have appeared.
 Joe Schmidt has all but turned cornfield pass into peacock's tongue, and his pie—Mein Gott!

Hero's Reward Will Pay School Tuition
 THOMASVILLE, Ga.—His heroism in saving three people from drowning, May 15, 1915, will mean something more to Joseph Blackshear, of this city, than simply a Carnegie hero medal. Along with the medal he has been given money enough to pay his way through school. Until now work has left him no time for schooling. With the opening of the scholastic term this fall he will use the money won by his heroism to pay his tuition at Riverside Military academy.

Two Weeks in Jail For a 60-Yard Ride
 VALDOSTA, Ga.—Two weeks at hard labor is a dear price for a one-yard ride on a freight train.
 Alton Steed, a negro, who lived in Columbus, lost his job and set out to get another at Waycross. He left Columbus with $5 in his pocket; when he got to Valdosta his money had given out. Rather than stand a chance of losing his new job, Steed decided to hobo—the remaining sixty miles.
 He caught an outboard freight, but when he had ridden six yards a cop nabbed him. He was taken to court and sentenced three months of hard labor on the Lowndes county chain-gang.

Terrapin Lives For 44 Years
 IN 1871 Mr. M. C. Cantrell, then living in near Corbett, Ala., found on his farm a common dry land terrapin on the under shell of which he cut with his knife, the date 1871; frequently since that time the terrapin has been seen about the farm, and again in 1876 another date was cut on the shell.
 In June 1908, Mr. Cantrell caught the terrapin and showed it to the editor of the Bowdon Intelligencer, who mentioned the facts above narrated in his paper of June 14th of that year.
 Since that time Mr. Cantrell has died, but his widow still lives on the old homestead. Last week her son, Mr. I. F. Cantrell, who lives at Burwell, brought the terrapin to the Times office, his mother having caught it and sent it over to him some three weeks before.

Mr. Cantrell, of the First National bank, says the fact that the terrapin has been crawling over the rocks of Alabama more than 31 years since it was first marked.
 Mr. Cantrell intended sending it back to the old home and giving it the freedom of the farm.
 Again this week Mr. Cantrell has brought this same patriarch of a terrapin to the Times office for exhibition and as heretofore the dates above mentioned identify it as the one caught by M. C. Cantrell in 1871, the year that gave birth to the Carroll County Times. While hoary with age the terrapin is as sprightly as of yore and bids fair to roam around the Cantrell farm 44 more years—Carrollton (Ga.) Times.

Enjoyable Day Is Spent at Bethlehem
 L YERLY, Ga.—The Subliga corresponds to the Summerville News. "I don't think the news from here will excite any one this week, as the writer is almost certain to be home after his trip. However, I can say that our people spent an enjoyable day at Bethlehem, two miles east of here, last Sunday. It was called "Home-coming Day." The history of the church was read by Mr. R. C. Orsby in the forenoon. Also some good singing was heard by a big crowd. After a few minutes' intermission, Rev. Billie McKinney, of Armuchee, pastor of Bethlehem Baptist church, preached an interesting sermon. After services were ended a nice dinner was spread and everybody enjoyed his letter off like the Times. After dinner was over and everybody had rested they returned to the house, where some good singing was done until 4 o'clock, when all returned home."

BY THE GHOST OF SAMUEL PEPYS

"HOME, SWEET HOME" NOT WRITTEN IN JAIL

A WEEK'S diary of Atlanta as it would be written by Samuel Pepys, follows here. The chattering Englishman kept a record even of his vertiginous proclivities, and it was all printed in several volumes that are classics of gossip today. Among other things, Samuel's ghost tells here of a visit to a fashion shop of Whitehall street and of what the new hats for fall will be. He discovered that green and purple will be the prevailing colors, and that the beads and veils of Spanish signoritas are to be the style here.

most graceful of writers, Maeterlinck's "The Bee."
 Mistress John Hill, at her residence on Peachtree Circle, has bee hives and the combs of golden honey are boxed and stamped with a brand chosen for the sweet.
 Dr. Bates Block is another in my informant's list.
 Marie Antonette churned butter; should not Atlanta keep honey bees?

MONDAY—Arose betimes this morning after retiring at 9 the night before. But feel indifferently well. Virtue has no reward. I hear two members of Arnold Broyles' century club are ill of cold, and dissemination has broke out among certain culture clubs to lengthen the age of Atlanta women to 100 years. Rules imported from California, enforcing early rising and abstinence from breakfast, have brought several down with nerves and a headache.
 A pretty fair morning, and down to the office at 8 o'clock and straightway to the photographers with a certain beauty in profile as the quest. Hither among the newest of Atlanta we made our search, and then back to the oldest.
 Nothing rewarding our diligence we had from a dusty corner a nest of tin. The lid spilled off and long-age photographs poured out.
 A face all smiles, like Mistress Joyce, looked up at us from the table cover, and twinkled in a way that took me mightily, but my gossip photographer a man with the knack of chatter, sighed.

THURSDAY—To the office and at once to a fashion store to learn what hats are offered for the coming season. And in all reason hope such another experience never again befall me.
 Find that purple and green are to predominate in colors, purple in particular ruling in a very royal fashion, though I doubt the shade will be such as I have seen at Mistress Jemimah's.
 Hats for wear on the streets are to be small with soft brims, which will curl up to show the hair. But for affairs of careful dress, they are to be large and of the Gainsborough style, named, I presume, after the painter.
 Furs and beads and veils are to be parts of every hat. In the very cosmopolitan city of New York I hear each woman of fashion is beaded and veiled like a signorita.
 And I had heard skirts with a train were perhaps to be worn and had been seen in New York. But I was assured

A face all smiles, like Mistress Joyce, looked up at us from the table cover, and twinkled in a way that took me mightily, but my gossip photographer a man with the knack of chatter, sighed.
 "Divorced," he said. "Ruined her husband by extravagance."
 Then he very freely chose another and put it down, and remember yet the round softness of the eyes that regarded us, and the out-spreading hands of the little man beside me.
 "Her affections," he said, "were expansive. The divorce suit named three co-respondents."
 There on the table it was a pleasant sight to see the third face, such as I have noticed at Captain Holland's, with thought and purpose showing plainly, and, yet, hidden under it all a quirk of fancy.
 Over it brooded my gossip's eyes, and thereat he sighed heavily.
 "She discovered her soul," he said, "and the husband found there was no living with her afterward. She is a leader now of new thought."
 From the bottom of the box appeared a face of much calm with neither censure nor honey-sweetening, and the face of my photographer showed approval.
 "An old maid," he said. "The one happy woman in the box."

At THE TOP, twins of Mr. and Mrs. Ben R. Padgett, Jr., of 18 David Place; next, twins of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith, of 15 East Fourteenth street; at the bottom, twins of Mr. and Mrs. Dameron Black, of the Avalon apartments. Photos by McVay.

TUESDAY—Read comments very pleasingly and uniquely put on, a Russian novel, an ancient poet and a modern novelist, and thought it all very engaging and especially interesting the conclusion—that America is all in a turmoil of business and has forgotten business and its ties and duties and that race suicide is a threatening danger. Then, to bed, and on the morning awoke with an idea. To the office, and immediately to the keeper of the city's statistics at the department of health and sanitation.
 And he had at his finger's tip interesting deductions and comparisons. Born last year in Atlanta, 3,160 rosy-toed babies (the adjective phrase was his own invention); of this number, 1,207 white males, 1,137 white females. Number of twins greater than ever before, and reports showing the number of births for the first months of this year greater than the corresponding period of twelve months ago.
 To the office, concluding there is no great "turnout" in Atlanta.

FRIDAY—This very pretty story I had from a conscientious confidant who never varies from truth, and I think it worth the retelling and makes quite a pretty story, and it is this:
 A little lady of 12 summers who lives on West Peachtree and who is Miss Genevieve Miller has for a pet a collic that believes devotion ought to be more than a mere bark of pleasure. Through that spring (they live where open woods are yet adjacent) she appeared each morning with a tiny woodland rabbit in his jaws, the bundle of brown always alive, in fact, never at all hurt, and brought it as a tribute to his mistress. Now, he is wretched because the rabbits have all grown so large they can't be caught.
 And I heard this too, that old daguerotypes are being brought from their resting places in drawers and trunks and are being copied in the way of photographs and hung on the walls. Such copies are to become one of the chief decorative parts of Atlanta homes.

SATURDAY—To town after an inoffensive breakfast, and a neighbor as companion, who has learned from Biblical prophecies the exact date next year the world is to end, and how the conclusion of all mundane things will come to pass. And he says a new religion of this belief has sprung up, and the converts meet weekly, I shall attend church Sunday.

SALUDA, S. C.—L. A. Rowe of the Emory section probably has the largest family in Saluda county and doubtless as large as any to be found anywhere in the state. To date the number of his children is 23, the last one arriving on July 26 last. Mr. Rowe is 59 years of age and has been married twice, 16 of the children being by his first wife, and the remaining 12 by his last wife. He also has 41 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. He evidently does not believe in race suicide.

28 Children Born To South Carolinian

THE Atlantic Monthly allows a writer in the February number to say:
 "I screamed in silent rage." The month before the Atlantic printed a story the heroine of which sits "happily prone in her worn-elastic armchair."
 One of the March magazines had a story in which a character is made to say: "What, therefore, was our surprise to find 'fish sitting by the fire in her bathrobe and slippers, with a cup of tea in her lap, and her feet in a tub of water." In Munsey's Magazine a story writer says: "The walk had been long and tiresome and Davidson stood wiping his forehead with his hand, and in the same magazine another story writer tells us: "James awoke with a fine sensation of uplift in head and heart. Victoria had kissed her hand to him! He loved the world. He breakfasted on a corner of the writing table."
 Sometimes authors put their characters in strange positions. Edith Wharton in "The Custom of the Country" writes: "He woke on a stony bench, his legs and arms still lashed to his sides." Isabel Gordon Curtis innocently says of one of her characters: "He stood poised on his crutches, with his one leg swinging impatiently like a pointer's tail awaiting the master's word." A writer in the Cavalier says: "He rose and stood before the mantel, his hands clasped behind his back, and took down the photograph," and in a story in the New York Magazine we are told: "He tore her eyes from the stage, but her ears still lingered," and one may read in a story in the Compaignon: "He was breathing hard, his pulses were beating in his ears; he tore his eyes from her face, and they fell upon her arm flung across him."
 In the Compaignon again we may read: "Kennedy dodged, negatively, and in another number: 'The legless man picked up a silver dollar from among the papers in front of him, and tore it savagely into four pieces.' In a story in the Ladies' Home Journal we are told: "Mrs. Galway had given up the parlor again, and was in bed with a novel and a kerosene lamp."
 "The dark eyes on each side of his protruberant nose," says G. K. Chesterton in one of his stories, "glared gloomily like black buttons." In "The Danger

ENGLISH ATROCITIES

Mark" Mr. Chambers' heroine writes, that her throat is full of tears. A magazine writer says: "I reached New York at night. The whole city swung like an iridescent bubble in the luminous darkness." "He looked at her," says Henry C. Row in the Saturday Evening Post, "for a long instant." In the Century for March a story writer says: "Mrs. Riceot closed her lips tightly, it would be the death of her, she said; Kenneth Harris in the Saturday Evening Post, informs us that a maid "ramped softly on the door-hinge." "Silence in the woods is described in "The Call of the Cumberland" with the phrase, "No sound, except at intervals the clatter of a nesting partridge." In a story in McClure's Magazine we are told: "And the moon fell. He saw it crash silently into the lake."
 Many authors apparently do not know that the word "biss" has a definite meaning; that one can hiss the exclamation, "Serjeant" or "Sarcorosa!" but not "Fool-ed" or "Coward!" So we find:
 "Do you or do you not want to hear this proposition?" he blazed.—Wallace Irwin in McClure's Magazine.
 "A work of art!" he blazed.—Capelyn Wells.
 And seems to hiss, "Haunted!"—James Montgomery in McClure's Magazine.
 "I will never speak to you again so long as I live," blazed Dollie.—Saturday Evening Post.
 "He pushed across to her and, taking her by the scruff of the neck, hissed: 'Go and tell him I've got the child. They can come and fetch it at my place, Rue Chateaubriand.'"—Loblanck's "The Crystal Stopper."
 Even Thackeray wrote in "Henry Esmond": "Have you ever heard me utter a word in my Lord's disparagement?" she asked hastily, hissing out her words.
 Authors sometimes clothe their characters in strange attire—with the complimentary editor's consent. "A frock coat, a white tie, and a high hat comprised his attire," says a writer in the Saturday Evening Post, and in the same more or less carefully edited publication we have three pictures drawn by Mary Roberts Rinehart, thus:
 "He looked very tidy and wore the aloes we had repaired, a plaid carnation in his buttonhole, and an air of suppressed excitement."
 "The officer was empty except for a swarthy gentleman in a fuf and his shirt-sleeves, wearing a pair of green suspenders and dancing alone."
 "But that was not all. In front of the machine, marching slowly and with dignity, were three bearded gentlemen, two in coats and one in a striped vest."

HAS DALTON A PET VOLCANO?

DALTON, Ga.—In Mt. Rachel, in the northern part of this city, a startling affair has occurred. It was a pet volcano. It was a volcano of the most violent. They came—three of them—on Sunday. Distinct tremors of the earth were felt within a radius of ten miles, accompanied by a low, booming sound.
 The second shocks were a few years later. The last were felt May 2 of this year. In every instance they were severe enough to cause houses to shake; but no damage was done.
 It is believed the shocks came from a slight settling, as a result of the arrangement in the mountains to the west of the city.
 Those who advanced the theory that Mt. Rachel is a smoldering volcano, immediately after the first shocks, a small party of the city, to show its contempt for such a belief, had construction on the top of the peak of the mountain its large, concrete water reservoir, which supplies Dalton with water.
 Those who insist that the shocks came from a settling of the earth tremble violently after the first shocks. A deep sink was discovered in the mountain five miles west of here. A spring which had a large flow at the foot of the mountain dried up. In view of the number of earth tremors felt, people here have come to look on them as a matter of course.

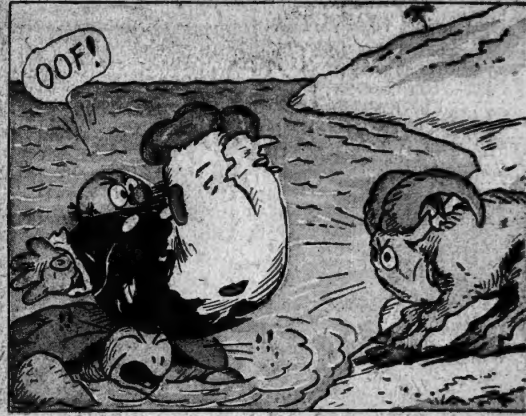

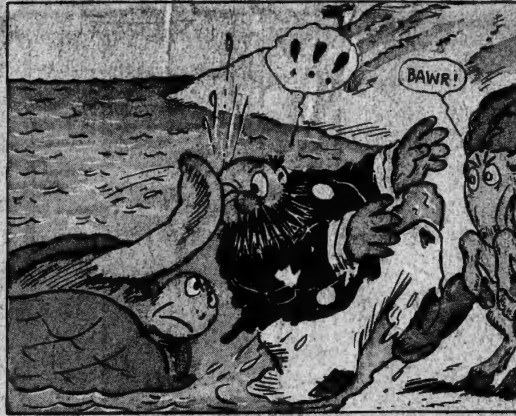

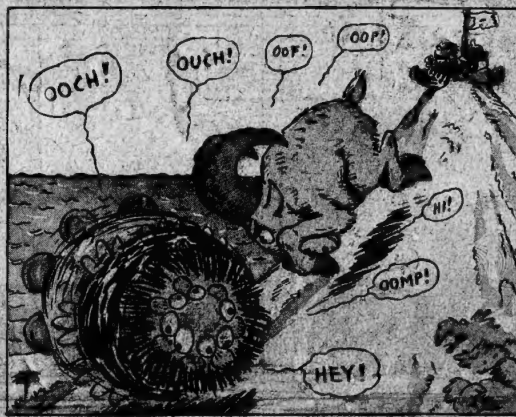

WEDNESDAY—Heard at the club this interesting bit of news and thought it a most pleasing fact to record. And I find it is entirely true. Swarms of honey-sucking bees are here, much as fine dogs, or spegmen of the barnyard would be. My confident learns Atlanta even reads that most interesting essay by that
