Editor of Augusta Chronicle Sets Himself Task of Exposing Watson's Misrepresentations Concerning Slaton

PUBLISHES ARTICLE OF THREE HUNDRED PAGES

Charges Watson Is Promoted by Desire for Money, Vengeance and Political Power. Answers Him With Records

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 11.—Under the heading, "The Slaton-Watson-Whitaker and the Georgia Chronicle," the editor and publisher of the Augusta Chronicle, in his paper tomorrow will carry a three-page article, (twenty-one full columns) the purpose of which is explained in the last two paragraphs of the introduction, as follows:

"With this, I fear rather lengthy prelude to what is to follow—but which, I trust will be excused in view of the importance of the subject itself to our state and nation, as well as in view of the magnitude of the task involved; for we have hardly begun to clear up a full twenty months of continuous misrepresentation within the scope of a few columns of newspaper space—set myself to the task of fully and completely exposing the misstatements which have been made in the open mind—expressing Thomas E. Watson, and defending and making clear the action and the motives of ex-governor Slaton, who has been so grossly and so maliciously misrepresented."

"I am not a politician, and I have never been one. I am not a politician, and I have never been one. I am not a politician, and I have never been one."

General Villa in Person Denies He Has Been Killed

Mexican Leader, on the contrary, Declares He Got the Loot Which He Went to Get From General Urbina

(By Associated Press.) EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 11.—A telegram from General Villa, dated at Torreon, Tex. tonight and received by Hippolite Villa, brother of the northern leader at Juarez, denied that either General Villa or General Ferrer had been injured on their visit to the ranch of General Tomas Urbina at Nieves, south of Santa Barbara on the Parral-Tiames branch railroad as reported here today.

General Villa denied that he had executed Urbina, but added he had obtained from General Urbina the loot he later had collected in two years.

Earlier reports by Villa adherents had claimed that Urbina might have been killed in a fight with Ferrer as General Urbina at Nieves was brought to the border by a Villa adherent who said it reached him at Jiminez.

General Ferrer is said to have accompanied Villa to Urbina's ranch several months ago and disbanded his forces in the vicinity of his ranch and is reported to have told his men that the ranch was over and that it would be his to keep.

Villa has heretofore been a close friend of Urbina and it was thought that Villa would be able to persuade him to give the money to the Villa government.

Villa is known to have taken more than 100 men with him. Urbina several months ago disbanded his forces in the vicinity of his ranch and is reported to have told his men that the ranch was over and that it would be his to keep.

Teutons Must Look to Defense of Present Lines—Vienna Admits Setback in Galicia, 20,000 Men Captured

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Sept. 11.—The Western front, where important events are believed to be impending, attracts almost as much attention as the eastern battle. Field in the center, where the Teutons and Germans are contending for the mastery of all-important railway lines.

For some time, however, the east has not received today to President Wilson's request for the recall of her ambassador, Dr. Dumba, American officials declined to comment on the situation and likewise had nothing to say to Count von Bernstorff's declaration that he gave no communication to the matter of the American government which carried Dr. Dumba's documents.

Nothing further was done today in the case of Captain Freoman, an open enemy of the United States during the war, who was arrested in London on the 11th inst. and is being held in custody.

PLANS ARE COMPLETED FOR BUILDERS' CONVENTION

Building Owners and Managers Will Meet Here September 14-17

All plans have virtually been completed for the convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers which will be held here September 14-17 at the Elmont hotel.

Local building people and real estate men will receive a lot of information from the speeches at the convention. These papers will be read by men who handle some of the largest business properties and apartment houses in the United States. There will be open discussions and a question box.

Frederic S. Arkwright will welcome the delegates to Atlanta, and Governor Harris will welcome them to the state. J. E. Randall, president of the association, will respond. Am. G. Chandler will speak on "The Property Owner."

The local association has issued a pamphlet giving a guide to places around Atlanta, with a list of hotels and theaters.

The delegates couldn't come to Atlanta at a better time. The worst of the warm weather will have passed by then. The visitors, besides their convention business, will get a lot of local entertainment.

Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, they will be taken to see various places of interest, including the home of Joel Chandler Harris and the Cyclorama at Grant Park.

Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock, the delegates, as guests of the local association, will attend a theater party at the Forsyth theater. Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the delegates will go on an automobile seeing Atlanta tour.

LOW RATES GRANTED FOR BOLL WEEVIL MEETING

Big Attendance on Conference at Thomsville Next Friday Is Expected

Especially low rates have been arranged by the railroads of Georgia for those who wish to attend the boll weevil conference in Thomsville on Friday.

It is anticipated this will be one of the largest agricultural meetings ever held in the state. The really important feature at this time is to stress upon cotton producers the absolute necessity for cleaning up all cotton fields by October 1. Every cotton stalk must be pulled up and burned or else effectively plowed under, in order to remove all opportunity for breeding.

Among the well known experts who will attend the meeting is Dr. W. D. Pierce, first assistant to Dr. W. D. Hunter, of the United States bureau of entomology, who has devoted special attention to boll weevil work. It is said that much of Georgia's success in cotton growing next year may depend upon this meeting and the action of the farmers in following out the principles which will there be laid down.

The boll weevil appeared in Georgia between August 28 and August 31, and females began to deposit eggs on squares and young bolls. Under present weather conditions the life cycle is completed within twelve to seventeen days. This means that adult weevils will appear within a few days to attack other squares and bolls and to move further eastward.

It is difficult to estimate how much territory will be covered before frost. The day damage that can be done except on late cotton, is to the top crop which is small and almost negligible this year.

There is no one remedy for the weevil that has been successful. The very best plan known is for the farmers to pick their cotton as early as possible, and then destroy the stalks either by burning or deep plowing, thus destroying also the weevils while they are still at work on the squares and bolls, and before they have a chance to leave the cotton fields.

Instruction Given Crippled Soldiers

(By Associated Press.) PARIS, Sept. 11.—An announcement was made today that special schools were being founded by the ministries of the interior, commerce and agriculture for the purpose of instructing crippled soldiers so as to make them self-supporting.

MUST PUT UP MARGINS TO PROTECT COTTON PRICE

Otherwise Cotton Factors Are Not Liable for Damages

Cotton factors are not liable for damages to their customers when they sell cotton consigned to them for sale at a lower price than their customers instructed if the sale was made after their customers have failed to comply with demands for additional margins, and where, in the opinion of the factors, the cotton was not sufficient security for the balance due them.

Such in effect is the ruling of the state court of appeals in reversing the city court of Sylvania in the case of Letterly & Co. vs. Pearson & Son. The members of the appellate court's decision, which makes the ruling clear, follows:

Where cotton factors sued customers for advances made on cotton consigned to them for sale, the customers could not set off damages because of a sale of the cotton for a lower price than they had instructed it sold for, where, in accordance with general custom and usage of the trade at the place of sale, the cotton was sold after the customers had failed to comply with repeated notices from the factors to deposit with them more margin, and where, in the opinion of the factors, the cotton was not a sufficient security for the balance due them.

SCHOOL OF LIBERAL ARTS OF EMORY OPENS SEPT. 15

Pre-Medical Course Among New Features to Be Introduced at Oxford

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) EMORY COLLEGE, Oxford, Ga., Sept. 11.—The seventy-ninth session of Emory college, the school of liberal arts of Emory university, will begin Wednesday morning, September 15, at 10 o'clock. The opening exercises will be held in Allen Memorial church, and will be addressed by Chancellor Warren A. Chandler, Dean W. S. Elkin, of the school of medicine, and President James L. Dyer.

The indications are that the attendance will be considerably larger than in recent previous years, and the students will come from a wider range of territory.

Two new and interesting features of the university are to be inaugurated at Oxford this session. First, the academy which will prepare students for the school of liberal arts—Dr. Elkin's address will be more especially the pre-medical students, a number of whom have already made their reservations at the college.

Never in the history of the college have buildings and grounds been in better trim for the reception of students. Some of the buildings have been overhauled and extensive additions have been made to apparatus in chemical, physical and biological laboratories.

Atlanta people desiring to attend the opening can leave Atlanta at 7:30 o'clock and reach the college in time for the exercises. Returning, they can leave Oxford at 2 p. m.

BIG BARGAINS MONDAY

Ed Matthews & Co., 23 East Alabama Street Are Making Some Big Offers

The Ed Matthews people believe in giving the people something to talk about and the index will be found in one of their display ads in today's Atlanta Journal. They have secured some of the last importations from Austria which were shipped just before the great European war opened, and it is supposed to be almost one of the last importations from Austria. They are tomorrow making a "special bargain" sale of this splendid chinaware and those who miss the sale will miss a great bargain. At the same time don't overlook those extraordinary library tables that they are offering at a tremendously low price for Monday only.

The Ed Matthews people are exclusively agents for the celebrated Hecker Kitchen Cabinet, and have sold over a thousand in Atlanta since they became agents—pretty good record, eh? Don't miss the Monday offers.—(Adv.)

How to Select a Becoming Hat

Put your trust in the man behind the counter. If you have a limit as to price or a preference for certain colors, tell him so, but by the shape the salesman suggests.

It is our belief that no store has reason to prefer selling one hat to another—we speak, of course, for the better class stores—for they are in position to aid with their advice.

Regardless of the store you patronize, put your trust in the man who, next to yourself, is most vitally concerned in what you wear.

Wednesday is Official Fall Hat Day and the better stores will have their comprehensive ads in The Journal Tuesday.

A Hospital Where Drug Addicts Are Treated Successfully---And Helped to Start Life Anew

(By a Journal Staff Representative.)

"THE Southern General Hospital, located at 201 Capitol avenue, is the institution to which I would send a member of my family, if he or she were addicted to the use of drugs."

That was the statement which a prominent business man of Atlanta made to me one day last week, during the course of a conversation in which we had been discussing the drug evil and the terrible suffering which it is bringing to many hundreds of homes right here in Atlanta, as well as throughout many other sections of Georgia.

"Why to that one?" I asked.

"For the simple reason," said this business man, "that I know from the observation of 'cases' that have been treated at this institution that genuine relief is given. The taste for the drug is not only taken away, but all desire for it is eliminated, and the treatment is such that it leaves no ill effects. It's a great institution, and it's doing a world of good."

I had heard of hospitals where drug addicts were treated and were said to be cured, but I had never been through one. I was under the impression that the treatment was something awful, and especially so when they "run 'em up to a million," as I had heard it expressed in describing the nervous condition into which the patients were worked. This was something new to me. A hospital where drug addicts were treated with no ill effects! Marvelous, I thought; so I decided to go out to the Southern General Hospital and see for myself just what kind of institution it was.

I had always been under the impression that hospitals for the treatment of drug users were prison-like places, with iron bars across the windows and big locks on every door. Imagine my surprise, then, to find this hospital to which I went a handsome, residence-like building, located right in the residential district of Capitol avenue, with the front doors standing open and every window exactly as if you or I lived there. The building shown in the illustration just to the right is the Main Hospital, and the one in the view shown at the bottom of the page is the Annex, where patients who are not able to pay full price for the treatment are given the course for a very reasonable sum.

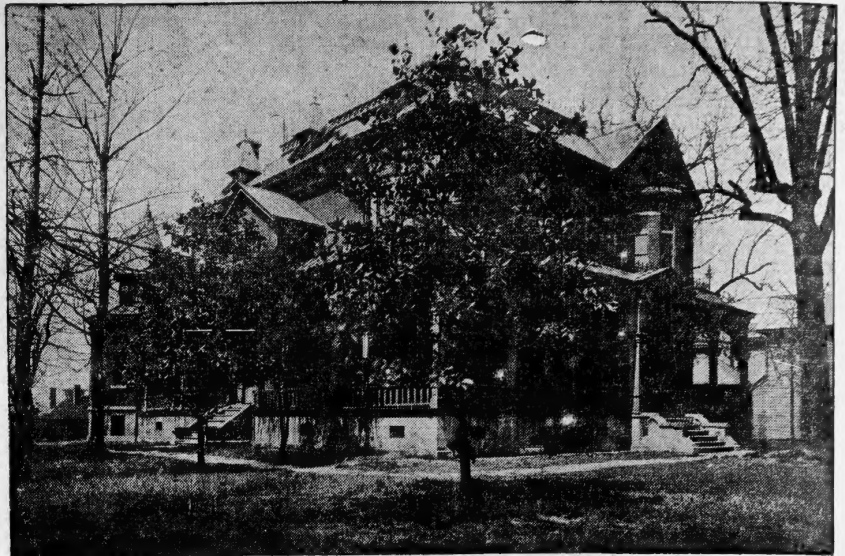

"If it is not asking too much, I would like to go through your institution," I said to Mr. H. M. Owens, manager of the hospital, as he came to the door in response to my request for him. I did not know whether mere curiosity visitors were allowed, but I wanted to see for myself some of the patients who were being treated, and how they felt under the treatment. I told Mr. Owens as much, and he very cordially invited me to come in. He told me that visitors were always welcomed, that the hospital management had nothing they wanted to conceal at any time, and that there was never an hour of the day when the patients could not be seen as well as at any other time. Mr. Owens' manner, his general appearance, and the way in which he talks of the institution and the work it is doing impresses one with the idea that he knows how to do what he is doing, that he has every confidence in the methods used, and that the hospital, under his management, is one in which the patient need have no fears.

"I am going to introduce you to Dr. Herbert E. Truax, who is in charge of the hospital work," said Mr. Owens. "Dr. Truax is one of the physicians who has been devoting his entire life to the study and treatment of the drug evil's victims, and he knows the wants and needs of these unfortunates perhaps better than any other man in the United States. He was at the head of the Truax Sanitarium here in Atlanta, until his health gave way under the heavy work he did for so many years, and he had to take a year or two off to recuperate."

I don't know much about doctors, for I have never required the services of one for very long at a time, but Dr. Truax is my idea of what a physician should be, and the manner in which he addresses his patients is the one that I have always fancied a doctor should use. He impresses you with the idea that he is wrapped up, heart and soul, in his work; you just know from his conversation and the things he tells you about the work and his patients that he understands the suffering, the terrible suffering of his patients, and that his great big heart sympathizes with them to the limit. The expression of his eyes must give his patients confidence, must help them through what are long, tiresome hours, to say the least of it.

"Now I am going to show you through the hospital," said Dr. Truax, "and then I want you to talk to any of the patients you may care to talk to; ask them any questions you may care to ask them, and find out from them just how we give the treatment and whether they suffer any ill effects from it. You can see for yourself that we keep them under no restraint, there is not a key in the house to any one of the doors, and every window is unlocked at all times. Of course we have rules, for with as many patients as we have we must have rules, but there is absolutely no force used, no threats made to use force; the patients are free to go if they please, but they don't go, as you see. We try to make them feel that we are their friends, that we are here to help them get relief—permanent relief—and it is the way in which we treat our guests that keeps them so contentedly."

The hospital is large, and the number of patients was larger than I had expected to find. There must have been fifty or sixty patients at the time I was there. Old men and women, from every walk of life; middle-aged people, and then there was the young—young men from eighteen to twenty-five years of age. It was a pitiful sight, for some of them were in the advanced stages, having used the drug for years. The thing that strikes one first, though, is the fact that every face has the word HOPE stamped all over it. They are being treated—treated in a manner that does not work them up into a nervous state, but that quiets their nerves rather, and they believe they are going to be permanently relieved of all desire for the drug. They see others going out every day who have been successfully treated, and they know they will go out the same way.

Every room of the hospital is as clean as you will find anywhere; they are all well kept, and are inviting; the nurses are all sympathetic in their manner, and it looked as if Dr. Truax had the co-operation of every nurse and helper in making the patients comfortable and at home. There is an operating room, equipped with every necessary surgical apparatus, in case the need of an operation developed from some other cause than the drug evil. In fact, the institution is equipped for the work of a general hospital, and it is well equipped. However, its main efforts are devoted to the treatment of drug sufferers and the chronic diseases that the long use of drugs bring on.

Dr. Truax was called to the first floor, and I had the opportunity I had been looking for to talk to some of the patients. There were four or five men in the room, all under treatment, and you could very easily tell that two or three of them had been using the drug for many years. Two of them, they told me, had taken treatment at other institutions before. One of them, a member of a prominent family not fifty miles from the State Capitol, told me that he had taken treatment once before, from another hospital, and when I asked him to tell me how the treatment he was taking compared with that he had taken before, he said:

"Why, my dear sir, there is no comparison. The contrast is what you want. When I went to ———, naming the hospital he had been in the first time, 'I suffered the tortures of hell itself. For ten months I lay on my back in that hospital, and all that time I was suffering hell, I'll tell you. You talk about 'running 'em up to a million!' They ran mine up to ten million, and then they didn't stop. And you see these legs of mine," he said, holding up legs that were swollen all out of proportion, "that's what that hospital did for me. It ruined me. And the day I left there I didn't want the dope back, but I wanted something, and I had to have something. I went crazy. My sister carried me to see a doctor and he popped the dope right back into me. He had to do it, for I had to have it. Now the treatment that I have been taking here is entirely different. I don't want the dope that I used to take—I crave nothing in the way of a stimulant, and I know as well as I know I am talking to you that I am a well man. I was abnormal when I came out of the other hospital, today I am almost a normal man. Tomorrow I am going to leave here, and I am going to do all that I can to send drug users to Dr. Truax, for he is the one man I know who relieves without practically killing."

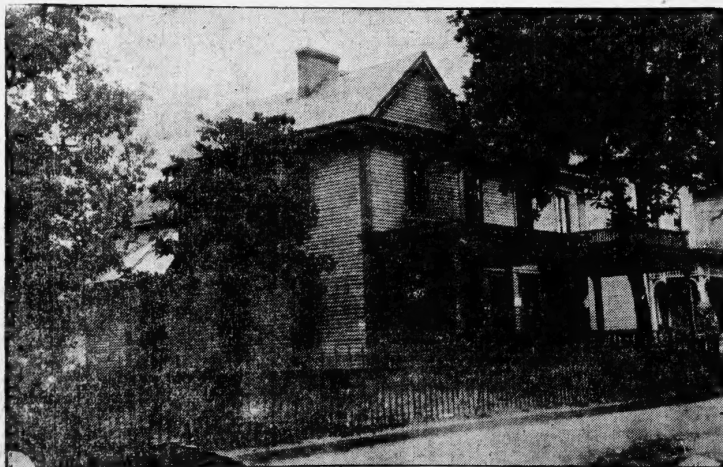

The morning before I went to the hospital, some of the patients in that room told me, an old lady, 73 years old, had gone out of the hospital, relieved from the desire for a drug she had been taking for twenty-odd years. "Why, when she came in here," said one of the men, "she looked like a mummy. Yesterday, when she left, her skin looked fresh and she appeared to be a different woman. When her husband came for her, he broke down and cried. He said, 'I have got my sweetheart back again'—and she was his sweetheart, given back to him by this hospital's treatment." That's the way the Southern General Hospital's patients feel about the treatment.

I asked Dr. Truax about the cost of taking the treatment, and when he told me what it really is, I was surprised, for it is considerably less than most other hospitals charge for treatment of the drug habit. The patient is taken into the hospital, treated as considerably as if he or she were in his or her own home, and every attention is paid to them.

I had always heard that once a drug addict goes into a hospital and is given the violent form of treatment given in some places, he or she is never the same again. They come out, so I had been told, after suffering as they do, abnormal. In some the nerve center that controls the moral side of one's nature is completely paralyzed, and they are never again the right-thinking people they once were. I asked Dr. Truax if this were true, and he stated that the treatment of some hospitals is so violent, so severe, that it almost invariably leaves the patient in a worse state than when they began taking it. They really do come out abnormal creatures, he said, and from what he told me concerning the treatment of these so-called drug addict hospitals, I can very readily imagine that they do.

Now, the treatment given at the Southern General Hospital tends to make the drug users, who have become abnormal from long use of the drug, normal again. It develops the nerve cells that have become inactive—it enlivens the whole moral tissue, as well as the physical part of the patient's make-up, and it sends the man or woman who takes it out into the world, not a new person, but the same person that began to take the drug, perhaps several years before. It blots out the desire for the drug, it renews the right perspective of the patient, and it fits him for life again. So, after having seen the hospital and the patients under treatment, I readily agree with the business man whose conversation caused me to make the institution a visit.

The Southern General Hospital, located at 201 Capitol avenue, is the institution to which I would send a member of my family, if he or she were addicted to the use of drugs.

BRENAU COLLEGE WILL OPEN ON SEPTEMBER 14

Many Improvements Made and Record Attendance is Indicated by Reservations

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Sept. 11.—Great preparations are being made for the opening of Brenau College Conservatory September 14. The prospect for an increased attendance grows brighter every day. Up to August 1, the registration was somewhat behind last year, but since the beginning of August there has been a marked increase in the number of registrations until now the number is quite as large as last year, and before the opening day arrives it is expected that there will be a considerable increase.

Another decided evidence of the general improvement in the business conditions of the country is the fact that last year there were many cancellations after August 1, when work started in Europe, whereas this year there are practically no cancellations.

Several new members of the faculty will report for duty at the opening. Among these are Professor Modesto Jacobi, who is to have charge of the department of romance languages; Professor Mortimer Wilson, principal of the theoretical department of music; Neal McKay, a celebrated tenor, who becomes a member of the vocal department.

Pathe's Week In Atlanta Movies

Drama, Comedy, Serials and Educational Films Booked for Thirteen Atlanta Theaters, With Filmdom's Brightest Stars in New Roles

As the months go by, producers of motion pictures are getting better and better their results, and the general public is showing a correspondingly increase of interest in pictures. This week, for instance, thirteen Atlanta theaters have fairly outdone themselves in preparing their programs and at every one the average fan should find something to please him.

"Neal of the Navy," the Pathe-Journal serial which packed two Atlanta theaters last week, goes into its first chapter tomorrow. Lillian Lorraine, who was not in the prologue, will be seen. "Neal" is at the Vaudeville and the Vaudeville and the Vaudeville.

The Strand has Betty Nansen Monday and Tuesday in a new Fox feature, "The Song of Hate," with special music for the two days from "La Tosca."

Stars at the Alamo Two are Theda Bara, Viola Allen, Betty Nansen, Nance O'Neil, William E. Shay and Mary Miles Minter.

The Victoria announces Mary Pickford in "In the Bishop's Carriage." Other stars are Vivian Martin and Clara Kimball Young.

"The Imperial Quartet" is booked for the entire week at the Alpha, and such stars as Hobart Henley, Grace Cunard and Ella Hall.

The Georgian theater has "After the Ball" for two days, and later in the week "Souls Enchanted."

Besides "Neal of the Navy" at the Selecta Monday, there are other good pictures at the residential theaters of Frank Montgomery, notably some fine features at the Regent.

In West End Alpha patrons will get "Neal of the Navy" prologue this week, and at the Bellwood theater Mutual dramas and comedies are booked.

Among the good pictures of the week at the Savoy is a howling comedy in which Marie Tempest is the star.

The Alamo One also offers some great comedies, including Charlie Chaplin and Keystone specialties.

Among the Grand's pictures are "The Case of Becky," starring Blanche Sweet, and Octavia Handworth in "The Great Ruby."

"A Message Through the Plumes," a two-reel Thousander drama, and "The Plighting Death" is the title of a vivid sea drama, Kaybee brand, which is on Thursday's program, and its feature is "The Girl From the East" one of the screen world.

Monday and Tuesday Betty Nansen, "The actress who speaks with her eyes," will be seen in her latest success, "The Song of Hate," which is based upon a celebrated dramatic work, "La Tosca." This reveals a story singularly well adapted to the dramatic talents of Miss Nansen, who was last seen in this theater in the Wm. Fox production, "Should a Mother Kill?"

"The Song of Hate," bites and scorches like an acid the frailties of our modern civilization and tells a story which will linger long in the memory of every one who sees it.

Wednesday and Thursday the Alamo One all the ladies of the world, Frances Bushman, will be seen in his latest great production, "The Silent Voice." This is a picture of Otto Skinner's great success of the same name based on the story by Governor Morris, "The Man Who Plays with God," Mr. Bushman receives splendid support from Marguerite Snow.

Friday the second of the Pathe Gold Rooter plays, "Via Wireless" is booked for one day. This is an adaptation of well known play of the same name and can be truly called a "mammoth" production.

SOME OF THE WEEK'S STARS AND SCENES: Number One is a scene from "After Dark," at the Alamo Two, Tuesday. Number Two is Octavia Handworth in "The Great Ruby," Grand, Wednesday and Thursday. Number Three is Harold Lockwood in "The Great Question," Vaudeville, Thursday. Number Four is Betty Nansen in "The Song of Hate," Strand, Monday and Tuesday. Number Five is a scene from "Souls Enchanted," Georgian, last three days of week.

"AFTER THE BALL" FEATURE AT GEORGIAN FOR TWO DAYS. Three great pictures are at the Georgian theater this week: "After the Ball" Monday and Tuesday; "Kindling," starring beautiful Leonora Ulrich, Wednesday; and "Souls Enchanted," with Lydia Borelli, Maria Bonnard, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"When Charles K. Harris wrote 'After the Ball' he created a song everlasting. Turned into a photoplay, it is replete with thrills, tears, cheers and laughter. Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon are the stars. Some of the scenes which will give you an idea of the tenacity of this drama, are: McPhee's leap from the high bridge over Harlem river to the water below; a daring escape on cables over the city's roofs; the start of a motorcade; an leaping to a flying train; McPhee's second jump from a moving train into the river.

Wednesday's picture is the famous play, "Kindling," pictured with Leonora Ulrich in the leading role. "Souls Enchanted," at the Georgian the last three days of the week, is a melodramatic romance of Italy, starring Lydia Borelli and Maria Bonnard. The story is of the love of Alba, champion violinist, and of Romero Farnesi, the man who holds her heart in his twin hands. This plot takes one from the streets of the city to the mad luxury of Italian society and the Apocian dens of the underworld.

Selicia shows Pathe film, "Neal of the Navy," Monday. "Neal of the Navy," the great Pathe-Journal serial starring Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, is at Frank Montgomery's Selecta theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Last week's was the prologue, in which was set the riveting style low little Annette Billington, heiress to the lost silver mines of Cinnibar, and Neal Hardin, a son of the sea, who was orphaned by the eruption of Mount Pelee.

Lillian Lorraine did not appear in last week's installment, which is really the last of the series of stories, taking up the adventures of Annette and Neal which they have grown up.

Other good films are booked for the Selecta this week, including "A Daughter of the Earth," a two-reel Elson drama, Tuesday, and "The Battle of Love," a three-reel Essanay drama, Wednesday.

"When the Gods Would Destroy" is the title of a three-reel Lubin drama, on Thursday's bill, together with "Cartons in the Parlor," an Edison comedy, and "The Little Prospector," one of Essanay's offerings.

"Stonewall Jackson's Way" is a Civil War picture which will be at the Regent Friday. It is in three reels, a Lubin drama.

On Saturday's bill are "The Dead Soul," a three-reel Lubin drama; "The Drug Dealer," and Edison drama, and "The Hypocrite Monkey," Kalon comedy.

Patrons of Frank Montgomery's Regent theater, corner of Peachtree and North avenues, have an attractive program awaiting them this week, including many first-class Vitaphone, Edison, Lubin and Essanay comedies and dramas.

"Pat Hogan Deceased," a two-reel Vitaphone comedy; "Destiny's Marathon," a Biograph drama, and "How Wife Won Out," a Mims comedy, are the pictures on Monday's bill. Tuesday there will be shown "Shadows of the Past," a great Vitaphone drama in three reels, starring Rose Parker and Roger L. Clayton.

Wednesday's feature is "The Mystery of Mary," a three-reel Biograph drama. Two tipping comedies will also be shown this day, "The Life Guard" and "The Honorable Baby."

"The Master of Dreams," a mystic romance of the Kalon company's production, is on Thursday's bill, together with "Cartons in the Parlor," an Edison comedy, and "The Little Prospector," one of Essanay's offerings.

"Stonewall Jackson's Way" is a Civil War picture which will be at the Regent Friday. It is in three reels, a Lubin drama.

BLANCHE SWEET AT GRAND ON MONDAY AND TUESDAY. Three great feature pictures, all bordering on the sensational and astounding in thrills, while clean and wholesome are the offering at the Grand for this week.

Monday and Tuesday Blanche Sweet appears in "The Case of Becky," a Paramount feature in which one is carried from the highest society into the factory and by the same character.

"The Great Ruby," the Lubin release of the V-L-S-E, with Octavia Handworth in the leading role, is booked for Wednesday and Thursday. This big production has more thrilling incidents than seen in any previous picture, some of the scenes being so startling in their realism that one will gaze in wonder and amazement. Of course a love theme runs through the story, but it is for the great jewel, but his is not brought to the forefront so strongly as the struggle for possession of the great ruby.

With one of the most remarkable exhibitions of the art of make-up ever presented on the screen, Cyril Maude, is seen in "Peer Gynt," the Paramount release for Friday and Saturday. One of the most beautiful scenes of the story which made Henrik there famous is the five beautiful women who personify the five dramatic love episodes. The settings are magnificent. Wednesday and Thursday the story goes straight to the heart.

GEMS FROM TOSCA FOR PATRONS OF THE STRAND. "The Strand Orchestra, under the direction of Percy Lynn, has arranged a fine musical program for this week. Monday and Tuesday, when "The Song of Hate" is screened, the orchestra will play selections from La Tosca, the opera on which the play is based.

Last week, during the showing of "Destiny" or "The Son of a Woman," the attractiveness of the picture was much augmented when Miss Kathie De Bruler, daughter of Manager Hans De Bruler, sang "The Rosary." Similar features have been arranged for the coming week.

"A Hunting Season" by Biograph, is the concert number Wednesday and Thursday; selections from "La Boheme," Friday, and ballet music from "Faust" Saturday.

Gay Winter Ahead For Savannah

SAVANNAH—There will be a larger number of debutantes next season than there have been before for several seasons. The young girls who will appear in the show to society will be Miss Margaret Ellis, Miss Valencio Knox, Miss Nana Hill, Miss Alice Battey, Miss Julia LeHardy, Miss Jessie Blake, Miss Ellen Carter, Miss Mary Granger, Miss Mary Osborne, Miss Rachael Bremer, Miss Beatrice Lambdin, Miss Emma Munford and Miss Ruth Ely. This year Easter comes about three weeks later than last year, falling on April 21. Judging from the number of parties which will be given in honor of the debutantes, it looks as if the season will be a very gay and beautiful one.

Mr. and Mrs. George Mercer, Jr., who left last Monday for Kirkrav, Mo., were guests of honor at a pleasant little party Thursday evening at Rannan Lodge. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Mercer, the party included Miss Alice Battey, Miss Elizabeth Gordon, Miss Florence Chan, Mr. John Hay, Mr. T. Bryson, Jr. and Mr. John Stevens.

Mr. Spencer P. Steiner has issued invitations to the marriage of his daughter, Eleanor Buchanan, to Mr. Charles Andrew Doolittle, Jr., on Saturday afternoon, September 25, at 4 o'clock at Trinity church, Lenox. Miss Buchanan is the only sister while her sister's maid of honor and only attendant and Mr. Doolittle's brother, Mr. Edward Doolittle, will be his best man. There will be six or eight bridesmaids. The marriage ceremony will be performed by the Rev. William Wood, rector of Trinity church. A reception will be given at the "Oscoda house" which will immediately follow the church ceremony.

The informal party given Tuesday afternoon by Miss Agnes O'Brien at her home on the Thirty-seventh street was a pretty compliment to Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, who leaves on Sunday for Belmont, N. C., to attend school at the Sacred Heart convent. There were three tables of five hundred, the guests including, besides Miss Sullivan, Miss Loretta Heggarty, Miss Eleanor Cothran, Miss Bernadette Joyce, Miss Lucile Gleason, Miss Mary Rockwell, Miss Gertrude Williams, Miss Margaret Morrison, Miss Elizabeth Nelson, Miss Elizabeth Grayson, Miss Annie Laurie Connor and Miss Rose Mary Fitzgerald.

Surrounded by such simplicity and interest, the marriage of Miss Mary Margaret O'Connell and Mr. John Thomas Roman was solemnized Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, the Rev. James Kane officiating. The ceremony was attended by Miss Marie K. Brown as maid of honor, and only attendant, and Mr. Joseph J. Kane acted as best man. Roman's best man. The bride wore her traveling gown, a tailored dress of white and blue over flesh-colored chiffon. Her becoming hat was of black velvet with a touch of gold and she wore a corsage bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor's gown was of pink chiffon with hat to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony the bride's brother, Mr. J. C. O'Connell, entertained the guests at a reception at the Roman family with a wedding luncheon at the Savannah Hotel. Mr. Roman and his bride sailed in the afternoon on the City of Columbus for a month's visit to New York and the Catskill mountains.

A very charming compliment to Miss Mary Agnes Sheehan, whose marriage to Mr. Thomas O'Connell took place Wednesday evening, was the miscellaneous show given in her honor last Thursday evening. Quantities of lovely pink roses and ferns were used to adorn the house, the table having for its centerpiece a chapeau cover of pink, in center of which was a vase of white roses fringed with ferns. Each seat was decorated with a tiny pink basket filled with pink and white mints. This color motif was also carried out in the lace. Mrs. McKenna's guests included Miss Agnes Sheehan, Miss Marie LaBrosse, Miss Susan Ryan, Miss Elizabeth Haggarty, Miss Lucile McKenna, Miss Gwendolyn, Miss Margaret McKenna, Miss Clara Carr, Miss Myrtle Cook, Miss Helen Sheehan, Miss Marjorie Fitzgerald, Miss Bessie Hahn and Miss John Buchanan. Assistant Mrs. McKenna in serving were Mrs. W. T. Deorde and Mrs. Kate Corcoran.

About Wedding Invitations These absolutely necessary articles for the wedding occasion are subject to criticism more than any other feature. Even the wedding dress is not scrutinized so closely as the invitation, for the latter goes into the hands of strangers as well as of every invited-guest and is apt to be considered the forerunner of the style which characterizes the wedding. These days, most people are well informed concerning the requisites of stylish invitations.

The material of which the envelopes and sheets are made should be of approved shade of white; the paper should be those that fashion has most recently decreed and the engraving should be done by artists whose reputation insures the highest degree of skill. All these requirements are met in the extensive plant and thirty years' experience of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. This house has established a high standard of product known all over the United States; the imprint of its name upon an envelope is a guarantee that the invitation is of correct form, latest style and finest quality. If you are particularly interested send to this house for samples and prices which will be sent free of charge in a sealed package. Address J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. 47 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

Hair Made Curly In Single Night

(Woman's Feature) It has been discovered that the application of liquid alloverin actually makes straight hair curly and wavy in a single night. Also it acts as a perfectly harmless hair beautifier and dresser. It has the peculiar quality of drying in pretty waves, curls and creases. Straight, lanky hair and the cruel crusting type are no longer necessary. Any drying or creasing can easily be done with a few ounces of the liquid alloverin, enough to keep the hair curly for several weeks. It is neither sticky nor greasy, but very pleasant to use. Apply to the hair at bedtime with a clean tooth brush. In the morning your hair will be very beautiful and have a most natural curl and waviness. (Adv.)

M. RICH & BROS. CO. Here Are New Dresses & Suits

ONLY two of the many styles are sketched—a suit at $50, and a dress at $25. Each presents (as much as any one article can present), the true trend of fall fashions. The entire collection should be viewed to obtain the correct ideas—to purchase with full knowledge of the various styles. The Suit Pictured at $50. Of broadcloth, wool velours and mannish all-wool materials. They show both long, short and medium coats—the latter being most favored. Checked colour Sport Suits are also here. Trimmed in a variety of ways—with fur, buttons, velvet or self collars, etc. Very smart and well tailored. Newest Dresses, Priced $25. $25 is a good, staple price to pay for a dress. At that figure perfect style, good materials and splendid workmanship can be combined to a wonderful degree. Gorgeously trimmed dresses are fashion's desire for the coming season. Made up of silk and wool materials, crepe de chine, georgette, tulle, serge and all charmes. Sport Coats $11.50 to $29.50. The short Sport Coat is first of all very stylish—it lends an air of smartness for fall wear that is hard to duplicate in the longer models. Mixtures and plaids are represented in these garments at $11.50 to $29.50. Larger coats of high weight, warm materials at up to $45. Other Suits at $16.75. For young ladies leaving for school these suits are very good. The colors are navy, brown, midnight and Hague blue, and materials are serges, gabardines and poplins. Military braid and velvet collars form the trimmings.

The Secret of Growing Queenly Hair

Beauty Secrets of Immense Value Revealed by the Beauty-Queen of the American Stage, Valeska Suratt. MISS N. O. G.—My following formula has been used for its wonderful results in making the skin plump and vigorous and removing every trace of blemish. It is made of two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and two ounces of opion in half a pint of water. The formula liberally and you will not fail to achieve the desired results. It is very economical and more effective than any cream known.

A Charming Complexion

When the proper means are employed, the difference of several inches is made in the growth of your hair can easily be produced. Mrs. half-inch soap are common and nearly always disappointing in results. By securing the following ingredients from your druggist and mixing these yourself at home, you obtain the most effective hair grower known. The results will prove it. Make a mixture of one ounce of this quinine, one-half pint of alcohol and one-half pint of water for use as a full pint of water. Apply this liberally to the scalp and hair; rub a hair-fortifier, that is, it compels hair to grow, and with remarkable rapidity. The hair will fall out, the hair roots will quickly take on new vigor, and when this occurs, a magnificent growth of lustrous hair is the sure result. This formula makes more than one pint of hair-grower, far more effective than the most exalted prepared hair cream that can be bought. Any drug store can supply you with the ingredients. Start with this hair-fortifier to force and secure the most effective results.

Crackers Trim Gulls in Both Games of Bill

Redding Has Edge on Hogg in Box During First Game, Kauffman Does Some Sticking—Perry Wins Second, Manager Smith Given Trunk

BY INNIS BROWN

The Crackers found themselves in a rather peculiar situation Saturday afternoon. They were called on to hook up with the Mobile club in a double-header at Ponce de Leon. The freak angle of the matinee was the fact that though the Crackers were playing on home soil, they were in reality the guests of the Gulls. The Mobile club assumed charge of handling the game...

Phil Redding drew the assignment of being the Mobile coach with Bradley Hogg being the opposition. After the setting off to a rather bad start for the season, Hogg finally struck a home run and the averages show that he is in the lead. In fact he is hovering right around the top. But Redding took his revenge. He outpitched Hogg in the second game. Hogg was again counted out by the Gulls before their former wing was running over three runs.

The first game was featured by the vigorous pitching of Kauffman. Sid Richardson started his tirade against Hogg on his first appearance at bat. Out of the first three men Kauffman found Otto Williams resting on second, with two down when he came up. He promptly slashed one of Hogg's offerings to the dirt pile in left field. It went for a double. Williams took a hand and declined to play himself. It was a normal triple with easy margin to spare. He had the possibility of a home. His next time up Kauffman beat out a strike to third. His third hit resulted in a low fly over Callahan's head at first that went to Hogg.

Large Field of Golfers Enter C. C. Tourney

More Than One Hundred Players Qualify for Club Championship Play at Brookhaven, Jas. R. Gray, Jr., Has Low Medal Score

BY INNIS BROWN

What is believed to be the largest field of golfers that ever entered a club tournament in the city, entered the competition for the club championship in the annual tournament of the Capital City Club over the Brookhaven course Friday and Saturday. Owing to the fact that a similar tourney was in progress at East Lake, both clubs decided to allow two days for playing the qualifying rounds.

More than enough players qualified to fill six complete flights. In fact, 106 players took off for play in this tourney. Furthermore, that number turned out at the end of their rounds. This would have given enough for six full flights and another special flight. However, the handicap committee decided that the seventh flight would require too large a number of byes, and but six flights were qualified and paired for play.

J. R. Gray, Jr., turned in the low card for the tourney with an 85. It was believed that some player would likely lower Charlie Cox's record score of 81 for the tourney. This, however, he did not do. Clarence Knowles had an 84, Lowry Arnold was third with an 85, and Sid Cox, who had no record to date for amateurs, had an 88.

Alexa Stirling Defeated in Semi-Final Round Was Real Sensation of Woman's Tourney

Seventy-Six Players Enter Competition for Golfing Championship of Atlanta Athletic Club

Seventy-six golf enthusiasts turned in cards in the qualifying round for the club championship of the Atlanta Athletic club Friday and Saturday over the East Lake course. Owing to the fact that another tournament was in progress at the same time at Brookhaven, two days were given over to the qualifying rounds. This gives enough players for four full flights and special flight in which the remaining twelve are entered. Four of these drew a bye in their first matches.

Atlanta Girl Startles Critics by Her Brilliant Play—Reached Semi-Final Round Where Players of International Repute Failed to Do So—Great Future Ahead

By Innis Brown

It is a commonly accepted belief already that within the next five years the man who can pick amateur golf champion of the United States a week before the annual tournament opens will be a seer or else he will be a success as a seer. By that time the great army of golfers throughout the country will have developed so many novices, that so-called "dark horses" will far outnumber the esteemed favorites.

The current year has done more to support this belief than any previous year. The annual amateur championship tournament at Detroit produced a most unexpected situation when a young girl, who has never before been named in connection with the tourney, won the title. This was the feature of the tourney.

Gibbons Wins Over M'Farland

St. Paul Scrapper Given Popular Decision Over Stock-Yards Boxer in Ten-Round Mill

RING SIDE, Brighton Beach, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The largest crowd this ever witnessed a boxing match in this country, Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, out-boxed and out-pointed a Chicago ten-round, no-decision contest here tonight. The bout, which brought together two of the cleverest boxers in the ring today, was hard fought from start to finish, but Gibbons scored the more frequent and more effective blows.

Play Soon for City Golf Title

The annual tournament for the going championship of Atlanta will be staged over the Druid Hills course beginning Friday, September 24. This tournament is open to members of the four golf clubs of the city, the Capital City club, Atlanta Athletic club, Anasay Park club and Druid Hills club. Last season nearly 200 players entered this tournament, and it was voted a grand success by all.

Red and Black Squad Develops Fast in Camp

Practically All of Coach Cunningham's Veterans Are on Hand as Well as Bunch of Good New Ones—Squad Returns to Athens Wednesday

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 11.—Reports from the training camp of the Red and Black football squad indicate that the men are already working hard to get in shape early in the season. Coach Cunningham is putting the whole squad through a strenuous routine of work, consisting of swimming, bicycling, and running. The candidates get up at 6 o'clock in the morning, engage in various kinds of light exercise, go under the shower water, shower, bathe and then eat breakfast of fried chicken and Franklin Springs water.

Five Flights in Title Tourney

Match play will begin at once, and will consist of the club championship of the Atlanta Athletic club Friday and Saturday over the East Lake course. Owing to the fact that another tournament was in progress at the same time at Brookhaven, two days were given over to the qualifying rounds. This gives enough players for four full flights and special flight in which the remaining twelve are entered. Four of these drew a bye in their first matches.

Vandy Football Men Take First Week's Workout

Squad of Volunteers Do Early Practice on Dudley Field. Formal Call Will Not Be Made Until Sept. 20—First Game Sept. 25

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 11.—Football practice began at Vanderbilt this week about a dozen men from last year's squad and two of the most promising new candidates for the team working out on Dudley Field daily for a light workout.

All doubts as to Rip King's intention to enter Vandy were dispelled when the husky fullback of prep school fame went out with the other men last Monday. King is the only one of the new promise, was the other recruit to offer his services at the first call of the Coach.

The old men out for the initial week of practice were Captain Cohen, end; Putnam, guard; Phillips, guard; Chester, end; Curry, quarterback; Reed, guard; Ligon, tackle; Coyle, tackle; and Turner, halfback.

Every man of the vet is in almost perfect condition from hard work during the summer, and little extra training will be needed to get this bunch ready for the winter.

Vanderbilt's first scheduled game is with the Middle Tennessee State Normal school of Murfreesboro, which will come to Nashville September 25, three days before the university opens. This school cleaned up with all of the local prep schools in the summer, and year and gave a good account of itself in a number of games with the smaller colleges of this section.

The only outside well of the first week of practice was the punting of Rip King. Coming here with a fine eye as a kicker, King is expected to kick fifty-five yards in his boots pretty regularly, and the old Commodore and his watching him with a broad grin on his face in the early games for the distances he is now making in practice, his place on the team is almost made.

In the event King should fall to a mere good chucker, it will be a pity that the team will have to do the punting for Vandy. In emergencies in the past "Yank" has done the punting, and can usually get good distance under his kicks. He is slow in getting down, however, and it was one of his punts being blocked that lost the last North Carolina game for Vandy last fall.

Chester is going to have some fierce competition for his position at left end this year. With Gordon, Beams, Adams, Sam Chester and Moore banking for the strongest bidders, however, it is being considered favorably for the quarterback job.

Moore comes here with a good reputation as an end on Georgia Tech. As Coach McGuinn needs a quarterback, Moore than he needs end or anything "strong" in going to get a good front at the pilot job, and from the season dope looks to stand a fine chance of clinching the place. He is a fast runner, an armor plate, and a fighter from the ground up. He is a quick thinker also, and has shown several times on the baseball field last spring.

As a last year's player, Coach McGuinn has "Hobby" Curry at quarterback, and it is expected that he will be the man in this position. There is a possibility, however, that McGuinn will be in there, as it was shown last year that Curry lacks the ability to run a machine like McGuinn.

Noccutt and Zerkoff will compete for the quarterback position, however, and both are likely men. Noccutt runs the team part of the time, and is notably in the final game of the season against Sewanee, when he played the best game. He has a fine head for the game, and is very bit as fast as a "hobby" horse.

At Hallinan's Coach McGuinn looks to be the weakest, and it is not clear how many more men for one of the places the team will be handicapped there as it was last year. King is expected to be one of the halves if another acceptable fullback can be found. Curry will be a valuable man to alternate with, some other, but could hardly stand the gruff for an entire season. Turner may develop into a first-class man and be given one of the halves, though last year he showed only flashes of form. Adams is a good reserve halfback but nothing more. To date this is the entire set of halfbacks in sight.

It is stated as a fact, however, by those on the inside with the coaches and aid players that new material of which to use in Vandy when school opens is Coach McGuinn's plan this year to give the new men just as little publicity as possible as he believes that several of his best youngsters in recent years have been spoiled by the spotlight.

Practice will continue through the coming week as it did last, with only a few volunteers coming out. On September 20 Coach McGuinn will make a formal call for all candidates and take command of the troops in person. With the university opening two weeks later than usual this year much of the training and grilling of the players must be done before the men plunk down their pesos for a year's learning.

Slater pitches a winner for the St. Louis Browns one afternoon, then when he plays first base, right center, catcher, he has anything to do right next or left field. Of course if Owner Rogers should get a load of red in the morning Slater would have to put that in before dinner.

Team Tied in Doubles Play

In Battle for State Tennis Title Orr and Carter Win Two Sets, and Lose Two to Grant and Thornton

The final match of the doubles round of the Georgia state tennis tournament at the Driving club was postponed until Monday due to the fact that darkness intervened in the match between Grant and Thornton for the two teams tied, both having one set each.

The match, as far as it was played Saturday, was one of the best doubles affairs that has been staged locally in some time, and both teams played a great game of the net art.

At the start of the match they had both won two sets, Grant and Thornton took the first and third set, by scores of 6-4, 6-4, while the second and fourth sets went to Orr and Carter by scores of 4-6, 4-6.

Grant and Thornton made a runaway of the first set, winning it in seven games. The first two games were halved, but Grant and Thornton took the next five and the set.

At the start of the second affair, Orr and Carter played better tennis, and fighting hard took this set, 6-4. Grant and Thornton had the set 4-3, but the winners won the following three games and the set.

This was a repetition of the second, with both teams fighting hard, and Thornton taking the set behind in this set and won. With the count standing 4-3 against them, they won the set 6-4.

After this set, the two teams took a brief rest. During this time, the umpire proceeded to change their shirts, but in view of the way the next set resulted, they had better do it at the end of every set.

In this set, the fourth, they started strong and won the first five games, playing the older and more experienced opponents off their feet. At the end of the fifth game they relaxed somewhat, and Grant and Thornton won the next two. They won the sixth game by the set. Darkness here caused the referee to postpone the match until Monday.

After a conference, it was decided to stage the match over, playing the best set out of five rather than playing the one deciding set, which remains in this match.

The match Monday afternoon will start at 2:30. Harry Hallinan won the consolation singles, defeating Stacy Thornton of Gadsden in the final round in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. Hallinan was the victor in the fifth game, and although Thornton made a spurt in the last set, Hallinan resulted, they had better do it at the end of every set.

The ladies' singles was won by Miss Katherine Crandall who defeated Miss May O'Brien in the finals in three hard fought sets, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3. Throughout the match both players fought hard and several times in the last and deciding set, Miss O'Brien had Miss Crandall playing her best tennis.

Big Springs Wins
LAGRANGE, Ga., Sept. 11.—Haynes pitched a wonderful game for his Springs this afternoon against the Unity team of LaGrange, striking out thirteen men. The affair was closely contested throughout. Miller and Holaday, featured for Big Springs, secured three hits out of four times at bat.

Scores by innings: R. H. E. Big Springs . . . 000 010 12x—4 9 3
LaGrange . . . 000 001 200 32 3
Batters: Allen and Chapman; Haynes and Burres.

Having been whipped 30 rounds on the nineteenth anniversary of his career as a fighter, Bat Nelson is now certain he can win back the lightweight title.

Fine Reports From Sewanee

Coach Cope Has Big Squad of First-Class Material on Hand—Players in Training Camp

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 11.—In making your pre-season choice of the 1915 football champions of Dixie don't overlook the purple Tigers of Sewanee. It reports which have emanated from the mountain lair of the Juncos are to be discounted as much as 25 per cent.

Harris Cope's proteges still look like an even bet against anything in the field south of the Mason and Dixon line. Very little has been heard so far concerning the Tigers' prospects, but followers of the Purple entertain the opinion that the silence which now prevails will soon be discovered to be decidedly ominous—in short, the full bore for the storm.

The censors on the mountain are deterring all dispatches, beyond doubt, but the fact that forty-five Tigers have been at work for the past three weeks in no longer denied, and among that group some of the finest football material that ever wore the royal purple is said to be found.

As a matter of fact Cope inherits a cracking good eleven from last season. The only varsity man who are missing from the 1914 machine are Tolley and Parker. Of this pair the all-southern quarter alone is a serious loss. Parker never proved to be a player of strength, which was generally supposed to be.

Followers of the purple who are in a position to know as to the whereabouts of the great Tolley are already filled and in addition that there is material on hand that will make numbers in no year's regular work like he does to hold their own jobs. Lack of reserve material will not be one of Cope's worries this fall.

Reports received from Vanderbilt, Georgia and Auburn encourage Sewanee supporters in this neck of the woods as much as the proof of their own strength. Over at Nashville, McGuinn faces the task of building up a championship team from the wreckage of green material. Georgia has lost Padlock and others; Mike Donahue at Auburn loses no less than seven regulars from last year's eleven.

Tech, Tennessee and the Tigers are destined to be the big three in southern football circles this fall, according to the outlook from the local angle. Both Tech and Tennessee have their 1914 teams practically intact in better condition, as before stated the entire squad has already been out three weeks and with Phillips on hand to aid the north Georgia wizard the Tigers today would need but little advice notice to pry open the season.

In addition to having the greatest hand that will make numbers in no year's regular work like he does to hold their own jobs. Lack of reserve material will not be one of Cope's worries this fall.

Semi-Final Round in Inter-Collegiate Golf
GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 11.—The semi-final stage of the intercollegiate golf championship was reached today over the links of the Greenwich Country club, the surviving players being F. R. Blumson and J. S. Bruden of Yale; John Marshall, Jr., of Williams, and Grant A. Peacock, of Princeton. They will make the championship over the 36-hole route on Monday.

Easterners Win Special Match

Norris Williams, II, Defeat Champion Johnston—Pell and Behr Win Over McLoughlin

FOREST HILLS, Sept. 11.—The eastern tennis players made clean sweep in the final matches against the Pacific coast stars this afternoon, upsetting contests between selections of the national championship tournament which ended on Wednesday. These special contests between selections of the far west and Atlantic coast players began in San Francisco in July and the final scores resulted in seven victories for the west against five for the east.

In the contest today, H. Norris Williams, 2nd, of Philadelphia, the 1914 singles champion, defeated William M. Johnston, of Los Angeles, winner of this year's title, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4. Clarence J. Griffin, of San Francisco, Johnston's partner in the 1915 doubles, was defeated by N. W. Niles, of Boston, who won 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

T. R. Pell and Karl H. Behr, both of New York, defeated Maurice R. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, and Thomas C. Bundy, of Los Angeles, three times champion of the United States, in a grueling five set match at 6-4, 8-10, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

The feature match that was between Williams and Johnston. The former champion, eliminated by the young San Franciscan in the semi-final round of the titular singles, came on the scene prepared for revenge. Except in the second set he completely outplayed Johnston, in which players of the same fighting spirit that he did when he was winning his championship honors, and was unable to cope with Williams; almost perfect game.

The doubles contest produced the most spectacular play of the day. The eastern and western pairs were evenly matched, and long rallies and brilliant shots were frequent. Behr and Pell had fine control. They owe their victories to their placing and ability to break up the team work of the former champions. It required six-six games before a decision was reached.

Griffin was no match for Niles, with his fine assortment of shots and control of the ball.

Coach Spiegel Drills 'Noogans

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 11.—Sewanee and Georgia undoubtedly placed the University of Chattanooga on their 1915 schedules in the belief that the same would be an easy one and tend to condition them for more important struggles later on. The Purple and the Yellow and Black are liable to find that they have made a dreadful mistake, however, before many more moons are passed.

The 1915 Moccasins are going to be a dangerous proposition for most any old eleven in the south this fall and don't you forget it. Coach Johnny Spiegel, of Washington and Jefferson fame, has some real all-southern material on hand and what is more it will be as well conditioned and coached as any in Dixie. The Moccasins, thirty strong, have just returned from their training camp on Walden's Ridge and the advent of real football weather will find them more than ready for the opening game.

Just as Chief Bender passes out through his release, Jim Thorpe comes back from the minors to uphold the race and gets three hits in three times up for the Giants.

Bankroll Mightier Than Scout in Landing New Help

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—This season the check book has played a far more important part than the baseball scout in obtaining talent desired by the various managers of major league clubs, and while a small army of "bookies" has been signed for try-outs, most of the real effort to strengthen the several outfits has been through trades or purchases.

In no other season in the history of the national pastime has there been so much swapping and bartering after the races for the pennants actually were started, and the manner in which stars of recognized ability have been bought and sold forever alienates the one familiar statement that no owner could be persuaded to part with a really valuable player for mere cash after the going was rung for the season's beginning in April, because it would "kill his team with the home fans."

The manner in which players of exceptional ability have been placed on the block from the beginning of the season right up to date would indicate that the average team owner no longer is particularly interested in what those who patronize his ball park may think of any sales or trades he may make.

Here is a list showing how a large number of the game's stars were shifted about over the baseball checkerboard for the 1915 season.

From the Athletics—Collins, to the White Sox, sale; Plank, to the St. Louis Browns, sale; Lajoie, to the Athletics, trade; Duxey, to the Quakers, trade; Eddie Collins to the White Sox for $50,000. Collins is one of the most useful all-round players in the game today, and had he been retained as a member of the Athletics, together with Barry and Murphy, who also were exchanged for coin, the Philadelphia team, which for years was the class of the baseball world, would not now be the subject for the gibes and jests of the "fans" generally.

From the Browns—James, to the White Sox, sale; Lajoie, to the Athletics, trade; Johnston, to the Pirates, sale; Tamm, to the Cubs, trade; Jacobson, to the Browns, trade. From the White Sox—Roth, to the Athletics, trade. From the Cubs—Tamm, to the Browns, trade. From the Yankees—Murphy, to the White Sox, sale; Barry, to the Red Sox, sale; Shawkey, to the Yankees, obtained through waiver. From the Red Sox, obtained through waiver.

From the Quakers—Magee, to the Braves, trade; and Lobert, to the Giants, trade. From the Superbas—Ragsdale, to the Braves, sale. From the Giants—Dorner, to the Quakers, trade; Dorner, to the Quakers, trade; to the Cardinals, trade; Murray, to the Cubs, obtained through waiver; May, to the Superbas, trade; and McGraw, to the Braves, obtained through waiver.

OTHER SHIFTS
From the Braves—Whitted, to the Quakers, trade; Stock, to the Quakers, trade; Duxey, to the Quakers, trade; from the Cardinals—Wingo, to the Athletics, trade; Ames, to the Cardinals, trade; from the Cardinals—Wingo, to the Athletics, trade; from the Cardinals—Wingo, to the Athletics, trade; from the Cardinals—Wingo, to the Athletics, trade.

NEW PULLMAN CAR PROVES POPULAR WITH TRADE.

Pullman Junior, Five-Passenger Car.

The Pullman's Three-Passenger Roadster.

MR. L. L. STEVENSON, Sales Mgr.

There is a new car on the market, new in sense that it has sounded a new note in motor car sales, and new in the sense that it offers heretofore unheard of values, distinctive values, at a price that is not believed to be duplicated by any standard motor car maker in the "near or far" or two, to be conservative.

man manufacturers for distinctive motor cars. They knew the reputation of the old K models made by the Pullman Motor company and they didn't believe that such a car as was described in the first announcement could be made at such a low price as the Pullman Junior is selling for. But, to use the words of Salesmanager L. L. Stevenson, "they came, they saw, and they went away convinced."

supply the demand that was instantly created, once the new car was here. "Fifty cars a week is what we have averaged," said Mr. Stevenson yesterday afternoon, and he said it he pulled down a large record book, saying, "Here's the order for you to see that what I have stated is a fact."

Dealers all over the south are taking the Pullman agency on, and they are making record sales with it. It is a car that impresses one to start with, it is a good looking car, its lines are beautiful, and the substantial and comfortable qualities of it stand out at even a cursory inspection.

Rides Week in Non-Stop Auto

Fresno Newspaper Man Spends Solid Week in Maxwell Car Under Freak Test

FRESNO, Cal., Sept. 11.—The feat of a Fresno newspaper man occupying almost continuously for a week, a seat as observer in a Maxwell motor car, is put forward as a bold bid for a world's record and a prominent berth in history's hall of fame.

Mr. Bergh fortified himself for the week by a good sleep and slid into his seat at the appointed moment—Saturday morning. For all day Sunday and until Monday night he asked no relief. The Maxwell traveled continuously. On Monday night he was relieved for a few hours by a newspaper friend, it being expressly stipulated that no supplies were to be installed during Bergh's absence.

Back on the job Bergh stuck it out for twenty-four hours more. Now and then he would catch a few moments of rest but invariably a stop would find him wideawake, ready to check any installation of supplies and keeping an eagle eye on the odometer. Most of his meals were eaten, with the crew, in the car and while traveling the roads of Tulare and Kings counties.

"I'm feeling fine," he declared, "I'm having the ride of a lifetime. I'm going to be the first man in the world to ride a week in an automobile!"

As the end of the week drew nearer, interest in the combined feat of the non-stop "Wonder Car" and the non-stop Winter Observer steadily grew. To inform the various newspapers along the route, Bergh secured a portable typewriter on which he wrote bulletins of mileage and supply consumption.

On Wednesday Bergh's employer offered him relief from the remainder of the trip but the observer's heart was in his work.

Start Overland With Wireless

Startling Demonstration on Popular Car Made at Indiana State Fair

For the first time in the history of the automobile, it was demonstrated that a car can be started from a distance by means of the wireless telegraph.

This was proved at the Indiana State fair where the motor cars exhibit 33 Overland was started every five minutes by a wireless spark from the Overland headquarters in Indianapolis.

A complete wireless outfit consisting of motor generator, transformers, relay and other paraphernalia was installed in the show windows of the city sales rooms. This was connected with an aerial on the roof of the building and by sending the alternating current up from 110 volts to 15,000 volts the apparatus made it possible to send messages 300 miles.

The Overland car on exhibition at the fair grounds was fitted up with a receiving apparatus and the necessary automatic switch and relay for throwing on and off the electric current of the starter and magneto. An automatic relay was arranged to so to start the car to run for forty-five seconds, after which the magneto was cut off. The operation of starting the car was repeated at five-minute intervals.

One of the most interesting features of the experiment was the fact that the entire operation of starting the car was accomplished without the aid of a human hand. A time switch, installed in connection with the wireless outfit in the city, controlled the entire operation. From the time Governor Halston, of Indiana, put the car in operation the first time by touching a key at the sending station, until the last day of the fair, the starting and stopping of the car was taken care of automatically.

That the unique Overland exhibit at the fair attracted more than the usual attention was evidenced by the crowds of visitors who watched for the crackling spark, which was the signal for the car's motor to start going.

From advance information that has leaked out regarding the 1916 Harley-Davidson it is said that many surprising refinements will be shown. Mr. Castle reports the 1915 season has been a very successful one for the southern branch.

Hupp Salesmen Have No Kick

District salesmen of the Hupp Motor Car company who were in attendance at their quarterly sales conference in Detroit last week reported business conditions very excellent throughout the country.

O. C. Hutchinson, eastern sales manager, reported the conditions in New York and New England, and in fact the east generally, were never better. This condition applies not only to the automobile business, but to trade generally and merchants were preparing for a very heavy fall business.

W. H. Young, whose territory comprises Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida, stated that the south is in better shape today than it has been for many years. The farmers and business men were especially pleased with the recent deposits of federal reserve funds in the larger cities. The southern farmers and plantation men have been especially careful during the last year, according to Mr. Young, and as a result are in good shape financially.

For Texas, J. R. Overstreet, gave an unusually favorable report.

STILL they come. "New Model," "New Motor," "New Type," new everything. All in the hopes of somehow getting into line with the requirements of the motoring public.

Meanwhile Chandler goes right along with one model — one right model — that the public continues to demand in quantities beyond the factory capacity.

Chandler is selling ten thousand cars this year, because Chandler was right in the first place when it pioneered the light-six field. And because being right, the Chandler Company has continued to devote all its mechanical genius, all its business ability, to this one model — improving it here and there, from time to time, beautifying its body lines, and driving its price down and down just as far as the Company's lower-car-profit policy would permit.

Meanwhile others have been marketing two models, three models, and new models every six months; all of which must of necessity mean decreased factory efficiency, costly experimentation and uncertain service to purchasers.

So what is the result of the Chandler one-model policy so far as you are concerned? The best value, known value, obtainable at a price so low! Thousands of Chandler owners will back up this assertion. Your own investigation will prove it, too.

Hodgkins Made Sales Manager For Studebaker

Big Corporation Makes Important Changes in Sales Department—Large Increase in Business Makes Necessary New Division of Sales Duties

The past week has witnessed the taking place of several important changes in the personnel of the Studebaker sales department organization, following upon the election of L. J. Oller to a vice president of the corporation. R. T. Hodges succeeds to the post of sales manager, with an additional office of assistant sales manager created.

This has been the first change in the expansion of the Studebaker automobile business, which has necessitated the re-division of sales duties, and distributing agencies in various sections of the country, for handling the greatly increased production of cars.

George L. Willman and William T. Bush have been named assistant sales managers. In each instance the appointments announced have meant promotion to positions of greater responsibility, in recognition of past faithfulness in service and by reason of the fact that efficiency and some special qualification have merited the preferment.

It had been accepted as a foregone conclusion in the motor car industry circles that Mr. Hodgkins would follow in the steps of his chief, Mr. Oller. His particular fitness for the place was generally recognized by those who are in contact with the vice president inured these changes in organization being effected without disturbing smoothness in operation of the department. Mr. Hodgkins' career has been identified with both military and commercial activities, the former possibly having had effect in developing a certain firmness of character and a dash over men, which has steadily advanced him finally to this highly responsible and important post. He served ten years with the New York naval militia, for five years of that period being ordnance officer of the command, and his staff. Receiving his degree in mechanical engineering at the University of Chicago in 1873, he followed this with two years of practical training by shop work, and in 1875 of the Chicago Telephone company at Milwaukee afterward going to the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road. Later he was with the Chicago and Northwestern railway, at Boone, Iowa, where he became the business to become manager of the Air Motor company's branch at Lincoln, Neb. This was followed by his becoming identified respectively with Sears-Roebuck department, as department manager, and the Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., of New York city, as sales manager of the hoisting machinery department. Mr. Hodgkins served a term as chairman of the executive committee of the American Supply and Machine Manufacturers' association.

His connection with the Studebaker corporation began first as branch manager of the vehicle division in New York City, this including supervision of all export business of the department. The value of the services rendered here was the cause of Mr. Hodgkins being transferred to the automobile division headquarters at Detroit and his being made the assistant sales manager.

Having a thorough and practical knowledge of mechanical engineering, combined with an enviable facility for meeting men in both a business and social

Goodyear's New Tire a Success

We cannot help bragging just a little about the success that has greeted our new tire in the 30x3 and 30x3 1/2 sizes, says James E. Taylor, branch manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. "The owners of cars using those sizes and that type tire are just as much entitled to freedom from tire troubles as any of the larger tires, and the Goodyear has spared no pains in working out an ideal tire for the particular service in mind. Before putting out our 1915 type 30x3 and 30x3 1/2 tires we gave them the severest possible tests in jitney bus and similar service, and found that the usual tire troubles had been overcome.

"The new tires are 30 per cent larger than formerly and the 30x3 1/2 tire 18 per cent larger. There is an extra ply above the tread, to prevent wear, and a new fabric—strong, enduring kind that goes into our larger tires—has been used in the smaller car tires, and the rapid increase in sales and the satisfaction given the 1915 product seems to prove that we were right in that prediction."

Along with keen perceptive abilities, has proven of insatiable desire to Mr. Hodgkins in so successfully shaping his business career. With these desirable attributes those of being a careful observer and close student of business conditions, giving him his opinion on real value. The new sales manager of the Studebaker corporation, a particularly fortunate in the choice of his ideas. Mr. Willman is the present advertising manager and will continue to have supervision of that department. The territory has been so divided that Mr. Willman will look after that portion west of Detroit to the Pacific coast, while Mr. Bush has the district to the east.

Upon completing courses at Carroll college and Harvard University Mr. Willman received the service of the Bell Telephone company of England, coming to Detroit for that concern in 1897. Subsequently, he became associated with the Warren Motor Car company, from there going to the board of commerce as business manager. He became advertising manager for the Studebaker corporation in August, 1914. Capable and untiringly energetic, he has been an important factor in the expansion of Studebaker's business.

Mr. Willman has always been especially interested in the training and development of young men, and some of his new duties will be along those lines. Good opportunity is offered—being in his element.

Mr. Bush is a Detroit product and has held positions of large responsibility with some of the city's important industries. Capability shown as manager of the local Studebaker branch house quite naturally brought him to attention when the matter of filling the additional assistant sales manager position came up. By nature and disposition he is to be considered admirably qualified for assuming the charge of eastern territory with its large force of managers, distributors and dealers.

Jess Willard says nobody has asked him for a chance at his heavyweight championship. The trouble is that as long as Jess can get business to break with a wild west show, it costs about thirty thousand an ask.

Paige Making Spurt in Sales

The great building the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company is adding to its plant has progressed so far that another sixty days will see it completed and in operation.

The progress made is a source of great satisfaction to Paige officials, who are straining every nerve and resource in their efforts to keep pace with the extraordinary demand for cars which prevail in all sections of the country. Without the aid, however, of increased factory facilities, production has already been speeded up and greatly advanced over the records of a few months ago. In fact, there has been a steady movement forward all summer.

"This much desired manufacturing achievement is reflected in the very large increase in business, a record which, of course, could not be made without the successful management of the manufacturing end of the industry. August, 1915, shows an increase of about 200 per cent in business done over the record of August, 1914.

and if present plans are continued successfully September will show an increase of at least 500 per cent—all of which is excellent evidence of the demand for Paige cars. These records will, however, be badly beaten when the new factory building is operating a couple of months from now. Much of the space will be used for warehousing materials—a very necessary provision when production is large. But one feature which will facilitate production perhaps more than anything else will be the mechanical conveyor—the modern system of assembling cars that develops efficiency and speed to the very highest degree. "I predict," says Sales Manager Henry Krohn, "that by the first of January the Paige will be up at the top among the foremost producers of motor cars.

Cuban Eleven To Visit States

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 4.—For the first time in the history of football a foreign eleven will visit this country to meet an American team on its home grounds, when the Cuban Athletic club, of Havana, sends a team to Tampa to play the Southern college eleven January 1, 1916. Southern colleges will play two games in Havana December 25 and 27 previous to the fray on Plant field. Coach W. W. Alderman, of the Blue and White, made the announcement here today following the receipt of a telegram from the Havana team. Several times American elevens have ventured abroad in quest of new laurels, and the singular part is that one of the first elevens to visit out of this country was a Florida eleven. The Cubans made the trip three years ago. In the past the game was won. The Cuban Athletic club has been strengthened, though in the past two years and the Southern eleven is expecting the fight of its life.

A large number of American college graduates have their homes in and near Havana and each of these has been boosting for the club to enter the international field again. They have, and Florida pigskin artists and fans will have the benefit of the entry.

Coach Alderman's contract with the Havana school calls for four days in the Cuban capital for twenty men. It is a trip which will make it more than worth while for the successful Southern football men and it is expected that competition for places on the varsity squad will be greater than ever before.

Velie Factories Work Overtime

Company Announces New Policy Concerning Selling Arrangement With John Deere Company

Great changes are being made at the factory of the Velie Motor Vehicle company, Moline, Ill., to facilitate increased production required by the advent of the new Velie "Biltwell Six" at $1,045.

The anonymous six-story building heretofore used for storage purposes will now hold the final assembly departments and shipping rooms. With this new arrangement rough material is received at the west end of the main plant and finds its way through the machine shop, first assembly and test benches to the final assembly, where the bodies await installation after which the completed cars are shipped without delay or further handling. All Velie factories in Moline are working over time—a refutation of the cry of business depression. The truck factory is handling two large European orders for heavy duty trucks, while the body factory and main plant are exerting every effort to supply the demand for "Biltwell Sixes."

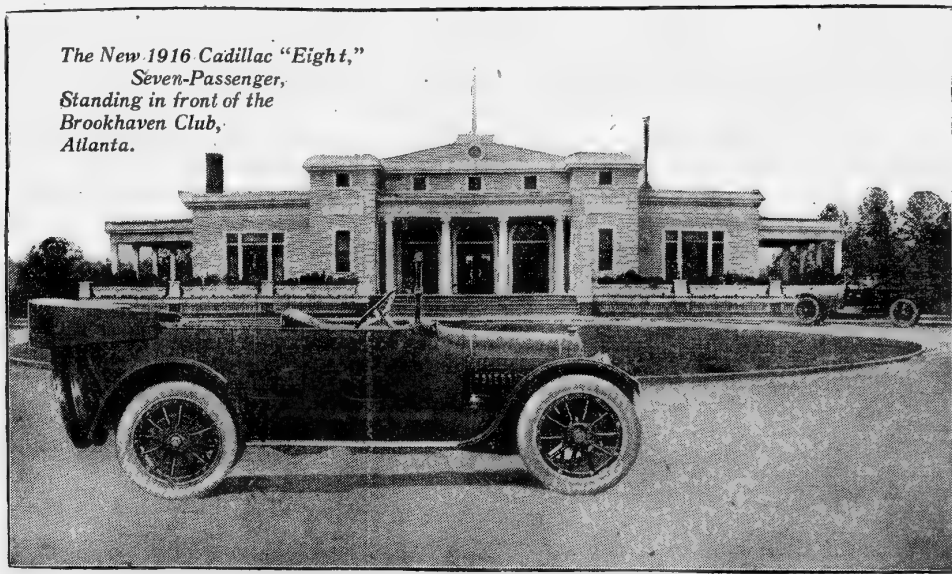

The great increase in Velie sales and production, brought about by the advent of the new $1,045 Velie "Six" has caused the company to change its policy as far as distribution of cars through John Deere branches is concerned—primarily, heretofore with the vast implement organizations established these many years. Hereafter the distribution of the Velie cars in Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas, Oklahoma City, Denver and other cities where John Deere branches were formerly used will be handled by automobile distributors of high standing. Each will carry large stocks of cars and parts and will be fully prepared to give the support and service to automobile dealers expected of the Velie company. This change in distribution policy does not affect the relationship of the Velie and John Deere factory interests in Moline, Ill., the directors and management remaining one and the same, but with the broadened field of distribution Velie dealers may expect the making results from direct factory support.

Cadillac "8" the Only Modern Car of Verified Efficiency and Durability

It Offers You:

- Engineering Pre-eminence
- and Social Pre-eminence
- Unequaled V-type Experience
- The Enthusiastic Endorsement of 13,000 Owners
- Mechanical Construction representing the highest type of fine manufacturing extant
- and an Established Record of Luxury, Long Life and Endurance

The New 1916 Cadillac "Eight," Seven-Passenger, Standing in front of the Brookhaven Club, Atlanta.

SCARCELY a year since the Cadillac established the standard for motor cars by introducing the V-type motor in America—

Scarcely a year, and today the turn to V-type motors amounts practically to a stampede. Nearly every maker has announced that he acknowledges Cadillac leadership—that he is building a V-type motor car, too.

So the well-informed man wisely considers no other type sufficiently modern to justify his investment. Why buy a car you know is outclassed when you buy it? Only a modern V-type motor car is worth its price today.

Remember this, however: V-type motors are still new, and all V-type motors are not good motors, any more than all "fours" are good "fours."

THERE is much to be learned about building V-type motors that can't be learned in a hurry. Mistakes will be marketed because of the pressure from the trade requiring makers to "keep up with the Cadillac."

So, all other reasons aside, the wise man chooses the car of preferred type which has the most history to prove its efficiency and durability. That car is the Cadillac. 13,000 Eight-Cylinder Cadillacs giving satisfaction today is the evidence.

The leading business men of Atlanta have bought the Cadillac Eight; and the reasons why they prefer the Cadillac are reasons that you might well consider.

The price of the 7-passenger touring car with standard equipment, f. o. b. the factory, is $2,080.

BUSINESS REVIVAL ON FIRM GROUND, SAYS PERCY

Sees Prosperity in the Advanced Prices Cotton Is Maintaining

"We have every reason to believe that the business revival is based on substantial grounds," said W. L. Percy, of Dobbs & Wey Co. "I have talked over business conditions with a number of visiting merchants and they all feel that we are on firm ground once more and that permanent prosperity is in store for us. The best feature of the situation at present is that cotton is selling around 10 cents. More than a month ago I predicted that cotton would not sell under 5 cents and now it has practically reached the 10-cent mark. All we need now is for everybody to quit holding back and jump into the business game and do their part for all they are worth."

J. M. Webb, traveling salesman of the All Star Manufacturing company, spent the past week in south Georgia. A number of fine orders have been received from him at headquarters. Fred Lambert, Louisiana representative of this firm, also heard from during the week with a large number of orders.

Luke Cain, of the D. R. Wilder company, was working the trade last week at Jackson, Ga., and points thereafter.

R. L. Wallace, of the D. R. Wilder company, was visiting the trade last week in south Georgia and turned in a fine lot of business. He declares that the south Georgia merchant class is now buying large quantities of syrup and that all indications point to an active fall.

Edwin C. Bell, of the Brewer Candy company, was ill all last week and unable to visit his trade. He, however, expects to be heard from the road during the present week.

D. B. Meadows, popular traveler of Gramling-Spalding company, has a big opening bill to the Chattahoochee territory, which stock of goods was sold to a progressive Alabama retailer last week.

CANDY AND FLOUR SALES SHOW JUMP AT M'CORR'S

"Just at present we are having active sales on stick candy, coffee, and Queen of the Pantry flour," said H. Y. McCord, Jr., of McCord-Stewart company. "September really opens the coffee season, which lasts well through the winter until the coming of the weather and the days of ice tea. This week we received a carload of Queen of the Pantry flour and it did not last more than an hour and a half."

SEPT. BRINGS RUSH FOR BARRINGTON HALL COFFEE

This Coffee Widely Popular. Singer Has Photo of Famous Barrington Hall

September brings with it the beginning of the season for the heavy sales of coffee. The H. L. Singer company report many orders booked for its famous high grade Barrington Hall coffee.

This coffee is manufactured by the Baker Importing company of New York City. It is produced by a special process known as "Bakerizing." Its taste, aroma and quality are unexcelled. It has a nation wide sale and a nation wide reputation for being one of the best coffees upon the market.

The H. L. Singer company, who are distributing agents here for the Barrington Hall coffee, serve a territory within a radius of 100 miles of Atlanta. There is no town or hamlet within this radius so small but what has his regular demand for Barrington Hall coffee.

In the office of H. L. Singer, head of the Singer company, is a big photograph of Barrington Hall, at Rowlett, Tex., the former home of the Baker brothers, who are heads of the Baker Importing company. The photograph is one of the largest photographs ever made in Atlanta and it shows the beautiful old colonial building in all the wealth of colonial architecture and landscaped lawns. It is still owned by the Baker brothers and is kept in immaculate condition.

NIGHT WORK AT MONTAG'S TO SERVE SCHOOL RUSH

Montag Brothers report that they are now working night and day to get out shipments of school supplies. J. E. Matthews, of this firm, reports that business conditions all over the territory covered by the firm are showing a decided improvement. "In fact," he declares, "it is beginning to look like old times and our orders are rolling in and the goods rolling out."

M'KINNEY IS NEW J. K. ORR TRAVELER

Lessons We Are Learning a Bit Slowly

The Wise Ones have been on the job ever since the war began. They are sitting on the same old boxes and barrels, whittling the same old sticks, and saving the country in the same old way.

They're telling how things ought to be done. The Up-and-Doing folks are also on the job. They have had their eyes and ears open and they are pointing out to us some of the big lessons that the war has for the world.

There's many a lesson, too. Some of them we take to heart a trifle slowly. Some we simply cannot fail to catch at first glance.

For instance, the lesson that came head and shoulders over all the rest out of the "hard times," viz—the lesson of economy and saving.

The Savings Bank fraternity tell us that there never was such a wave of conscience as swept over the people in the matter of laying up something for the rainy day. All this just recently.

As a nation we have discovered that we are living too high, spending too much and saving too little.

We are beginning to salt down some of the stuff instead of scattering it around.

Another big lesson is that we CAN DEPEND ON OURSELVES, AND MUST DO IT IF WE ARE TO LIVE, COMMERCIALLY SPEAKING.

OUR OWN LABORATORIES, FACTORIES, SHOPS AND BRAINS ARE BUSIER TODAY WITH THE PROBLEMS OF PRODUCING OUR OWN GOODS THAN THEY HAVE EVER BEEN.

We've got to learn the biggest lesson of all—that we have our richest resources within ourselves.

We must learn to LIVE AT HOME. It is sound economics to do so. It is the safe and sane thing. It is our commercial and industrial salvation.

The simplest and the most obvious way to begin is to patronize the people who make things at home.

That's our battle-cry. We have been crying it aloud in the market place for 10, these many days.

Some have heard and heeded. Others are seeing the light day by day. The common sense of the proposition is sinking in.

Georgians are realizing that GEORGIA-MADE GOODS are the goods they should use.

There are no better goods of their several kinds made anywhere else—you get quality and honest workmanship in every article that bears the imprint of any manufacturer on the list below.

That's the prime consideration—VALUE. Attaching to it is the knowledge that when you BUY HOME-MANUFACTURED WARES, you are a constructive citizen.

You are building better than you know. You are building your state and your section and your country.

You are putting money in your own pocket. And that's the best place for money, after all.

9-Inches-From-The-Ground Skirts

Mrs. Julian Chase, of Inman Park, Is Shown Here in Some of Season's Newest Fashions.

By Jane Dixon.

I've seen them. I was tempted to start this with a descriptive phrase—Peachtree in knee dresses. That is half way true—just about half way.

Whitehall street is one big goods box just opened. Out have poured charmeuse, taffetas and crepe meteoors—all in midnight blues, African browns, and hunters' green.

There are hundreds of new dresses, thousands—so many, when I think of them I think of a Russian army. And not a long dress in the whole town. If your frock isn't five inches from the pavement it has a train.

Nine inches from the ground is the length of some. I looked and looked, and I make this prediction: Later on, Peachtree street will look and look even more. I have reason to believe the usual masculine indifference to style will give place this year to interest.

There are boots and boots and boots. Some lace up the side (and they cost only $19), a very few lace up the back, and some are Russian affairs. You just pull 'em on and there you are.

They are actually worn in New York, and some will be worn here. These are Cossack boots—like the pointed-toed, embossed tops of the czar's cavalry. You have no idea how delightful they are. They seem, at first, little riding boots. But, no, they're for the street.

One store told me it's had to order a second shipment of the laced-up-on-the-side boots.

And the hats! The beaded, gorgeous-colored hats, and the new veils. The newest fastens round the neck and is thrown over the entire hat without being pinned. Another is pinned to the hat and drops down loosely over the face to the nose.

If I'm not incoherent, I'm at least breathless.

Whitehall street is to me like an exposition I saw in Berne, Switzerland, just dress after dress, new thing upon new thing, until it leaves you tired and bewildered, no words to tell it in and sick at heart because you haven't at least a million to buy it all.

This is what I learned: Skirts are to be five to nine inches from the ground, some a bit more. The hem of the dress and the high-up boots, in most instances will just meet. In some cases they won't. Now and then, there'll be interstices of an inch or more. Skirts for street wear will be taf-

Cossack boots, which are already being worn here.

Side-lacing boots which are proving popular.

Allen

Everyone is to wear furs this fall

ONE OF THE new dresses of conservative length is shown here, worn by Mrs. Julian Chase, of Inman Park. Long dresses this fall and winter will be five inches from the ground; short ones will be nine inches or more. Usually, skirt hem and boot top will just meet; often, an inch or more of space will intervene. Boots are all very high; some lace up on the side and a few in the back; and the oddest are the Cossack boots, which you just pull on. Everyone is to wear veils, and among these creations are some you fasten 'round the neck and throw over the hat, giving yourself a Signorita appearance.

tetas, charmeuse, and crepe meteoer, combined with serge and worsted. They will vary in width from 2 to 4 yards at the bottom, which means a yard wider than at the beginning of last season. Inverted plaids, buttons and braid trimmings are to be used.

Suits are to be of gabardine, whipcord, army serge, broadcloth, pile fabric, velvet, duvetyne, and wool velour. Braid and fur trimmings will be used, and necks will be military and open. Some suits have fitted waistlines with the coat flared. Others have straight, loose backs. And I noticed the Norfolk for the athletic lady.

Tweds and English mixture are the materials. The width is two to four yards; some have pleated, some have flared skirts; some are made with yokes, some with shirrod backs.

Afternoon dresses are plaids and Georgette crepe combinations, ruffled waistlines, thin sleeves, full and tiered skirts.

Evening dresses are of light-colored taffetas and meteoers and Georgette crepe. Passamenterie trimmings will be used.

Hats are to be very large or very small. They are to be beaded and flowered and veiled; and most of all I wish you could see the veils.

Take the one that fastens round the neck and is thrown over the hat. It will make Peachtree seem a street in old Seville. It will make Spanish señoritas of us all.

Yet I think the nationality of our costuming will be mixed. Suppose one wears the Spanish veil, originated in Paris; and the Cossack boots, and a ten-inch-from-the-ground skirt?

Every day Whitehall adds to its freshly-opened-goods-box appearance. New things arrive by the hour—more beaded braided slippers, more laced-up-on-the-side boots, more hats, and most of all, more short skirts.

There is much to be seen in the stores. Later, there will be more, to see on Peachtree.

FALSE FAITH TESTED BY FIRE AND WANTED FOR GOD

By Bishop W. A. Candler

THE dark cloud of war which overhangs Europe and casts gloom over the whole world, is not without some silver linings.

They are seeking the Savior as never before. Not the people of France, Godless France has become thoughtful. The infidel writers are neglected or have themselves become religious and sane.

which quicken hope and forbid despair. Social disorder and crimes of violence will cease when men turn to the altar of God.

There are evidences of a revolution in religious thought in both Europe and America, accompanied by a greater simplicity in faith and a more earnest spirit of piety.

Adverting to conditions in the United States upon which the full force of the war has not fallen as it has upon the nations of Europe, this writer speaks as follows:

The men who are called to the ministry of the Gospel, and who ought to have discernment enough to read correctly the signs of the times, should take advantage of this manifest reaction towards a purer faith and a more religious life, and do everything in their power to use it for the accomplishment of a wide-spread revival of religion.

The reading of this issue revealed afresh the fact that the type of theology and philosophy somewhat dominant in the past years has been utterly discredited by the war.

There are many tokens on every hand that the observations of this correspondent of the Watchman-Examiner are correct.

Let all Christian people, both preachers and laymen, unite in prayer and effort for the accomplishment of this great end.

He notes that the Germans themselves have turned from the rationalistic type of religion and philosophy to a more evangelical way of thinking and living.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Showing an increase of from 20 to 25 per cent in church attendance all over the city, a comprehensive census of the population for July and August has just been completed by the leading churches of Greater New York.

Let all Christian people, both preachers and laymen, unite in prayer and effort for the accomplishment of this great end.

EXCURSION RUN TO HELP ORPHANS

THIS is a noble, unselfish work. Rev. W. W. Webb, of Habers, is doing for the orphan children of Georgia.

years. The railroad gives him a percentage on all sales made on the line. He has built and equipped an entire line of babies, and it has been finished and paid for.

for these orphans, and many hundreds in Georgia have come to call him blessed. If we had a few more men like Mr. Webb, of Habers, in Georgia, we would have every orphan in the state provided for.

RIVER RUNS UP-STREAM

THOSE who have been fishing on the Whitehaven river recently are talking of a rather peculiar freak of nature.

It is stated that the river at a point near Mr. Tom States's place runs directly up hill for a space of good many yards and observers are somewhat puzzled as to what causes the unusual condition.

This only happens when the river is high, but is reported to be an actual fact.—Valdosta (Ga.) Times.

"Sleeping The Dope Habit"

By Angus Perkerson

FIFTY are about to take this sleep at the bridge the city has knocked together for the wretched unfortunates whom the government's antidope law is agonizing just as the thumb and screw devilities of the inquisition tortured.

time in twenty years. I began when I was a kid because I got a hick on the head and a doctor started me."

No law was ever more needed or will work more good, and none could be more wisely administered. But just now it is unavoidably filling a class of weak-willed, helpless victims with a fear that is beyond the power of casual expression.

"I'm almost or now," he said, "I'll try the 'knockout' about Monday."

The law is that no more drugs shall be sold. And the exceptions are so few that the poor addict has the overwhelming fear held up before him of a day when he shall be crazed for lack of opiates.

"When I was about eighteen, here in Atlanta," he said forward until the four legs of his chair stood on the ground. "I began by smoking opium. A whole lot of people in Atlanta used to smoke opium until it got so expensive, I remember the time when I could buy a tin on Hunter street for $6.50. Now, if you could get it at all, it would cost $100 to $120. Started out of curiosity, just to see how it would go, and kept it up."

If you could see the fifty you would forget the sight—women who are old and gray-haired, a girl who is only 'ninteen, a man who is seventy-three, a boy who is eighteen. Most of the men are under thirty—mere boys—but except for the nineteen-year-old girl, the women are old. One is seventy. Her husband once was a well-to-do railroad official, and she comes of a good family and has a face that is kindly and motherly.

"I always smoked 'hop'—la Yume we called it—and never smoked opium. Opium is as bad as morphine. Hop last. The stuff didn't have such a bad physical effect, but it took so much time and money to get it, and it was so hard to get, and, in all, it would take me six hours and the stuff would cost nearly $5 a day. I got so at last I spent half of every day smoking and my 'hop' cost me about $10 a month."

And in the doorway, as we turned to leave the room, was the girl, who would seem young enough under any surroundings, with her thin, white face and her ungenerally large eyes; and, who, among these old women, was like a child.

"Parties of us smokers used to get together," went on the boy, "and it wasn't only in the dives we gathered. There was a house on a prominent street where I've stayed a week at a time, spending the whole day smoking 'hop' and the party of us having our meals sent in. We'd have regular debauches of opium—smoke 20 or 30 pills a day, and spend our whole time cooking and smoking the stuff."

The hospital is a part of the pent house, and that very association seems to give it an ugly figure. But, while hospital and pent house adjoin, they are totally separate, and the means of accommodation for the drug addicts has been made as complete as the urgency of the situation would allow.

"I started on morphine," broke in another. "I had rheumatism, and a doctor gave it to me 60 days without any good. After that it was. After that I just had to keep on."

Not a word of complaint was uttered last week, and every part of the hospital was visited. One boy who was perhaps twenty-five and who started and continued the opium-smoking habit in Atlanta as he might have done in any other city, put the state of affairs properly.

"I had moved back toward the group—the five boys, not one more than twenty-five years of age, who were sitting together. They brought up chairs, and we sat down with them."

They may have relapsed and probably will, but the new law prohibits the sale of drugs and the law is being enforced. There will be no ray of buying the old

"No," he declared, "and it's the first time I've been in a hospital since I was a kid because I got a hick on the head and a doctor started me."

The Dope Habit Begins Through Bad Associations

J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, who is to be thanked for the excellence of the improvised hospital. "I can't get enough to eat and I sleep well."

"No," he declared, "and it's the first time I've been in a hospital since I was a kid because I got a hick on the head and a doctor started me."

THE PIGEON LADY

Miss Helen Jones, of Ansley Park, and the Pigeons at Forrest Adair's Druid Hills Home

She was standing with her hands stretched out in a beckoning way. Her face was raised. And she was smiling.

It was as though she had beckoned white clouds, and a torn patch of dots and dashes of color was whisking softly down to drop at her feet. There was the sound of many wings and a great fluttering and stirring.

though trained for picture postures. Another posed on the crown of her head, like the figure piece of a helmet.

Miss Helen Jones, of 123 LaFayette drive, Ansley Park, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Jones, was the pretty pigeon lady photographed at the home of Forrest Adair in Druid Hills.

The pigeons are Mr. Adair's prized rollers, of which he has 235. For thirty years he has made a hobby of pigeons as pets. When he lived in West End he had a large covey. Now, at his home in Druid Hills he has a collection scarcely equaled elsewhere in the south.

They have been taught to come at his whistle or call. But they seemed unusually obedient to the "pigeon lady." One instant she was photographed with them streaming toward her. Her hands were held out, and it seemed as though they were flying right into her arms. They had dropped from high in the air, and, as they swooped toward the little lady who stood calling them, they tumbled in the fashion that gives them the name of "rollers."

It was like an imaginative picture that an artist had done very deftly. But it was no prettier than when they swarmed all around, at her feet, on her head, one perched on the crown of her hat, and one carefully pecking the tip of corn from her lips.

suit, which I usually furnish them mixed with a mud-hall, which they peck at.

"The man of the pigeon household is very domestic. He helps build the nest, and, when the eggs have been laid, he does his part of the sitting. The mother comes off the nest every morning about 9:30, and the husband takes her place and patiently sits until 4:30 in the afternoon. He is quite secure all this time in the thought that she is off looking for food, taking healthful exercise and bathing, and not attending tea-parties or indulging in unkind or scandalous gossip about her neighbors.

He is equally certain she is not engaged in flirtations."

"Burns Twins" Are 77 Years Old
PITTSBORO, N. C.—Messrs. James and John Burns, of this county, are the oldest twins in this state, being 77 years seventy-seven years old. They recently had their photographs taken together for the first time in their long lives. They were both Confederate soldiers, one serving in Company D, Thirty-fifth North Carolina regiment, and the other in Company G, Sixty-third regiment. They live within about a quarter of a mile of each other.

News from Geneva; Mr. Cota's Vault
THE health of this community is not very good. Rev. C. N. Williams filled his appointment here Sunday. Mr. Cota, of Montgomery, sent a brick-mason down to Lytle last week to build a vault to put two people in, himself and wife. The lid of the vault weighs 3,500 pounds.—Geneva (Ark.) Reeper.

'SLEEPING OFF' THE DOPE HABIT

eight hour fast, and the racking effect of scopolamine; and, as he lay propped up in bed, his face was as white as the pillow, his eyes were very large and he was like nothing but a sick child.

We turned away softly and went out. It is a long walk up the hill to the separate hospital for women. There are not so many rooms there. The number of women is twelve. One so old and feeble she seemed scarcely able to talk, lay propped up. Another who occupied the room with her talked and talked.

We turned to the next room. The man that sat on the bedside seemed hardly more than a shadow. Within hand's reach was a crucifix. The voice was faint like a whisper. "I can't eat," she said. "But, with a brave strengthening of tone, I shall be all right in a little while."

We turned finally to the room where the woman of seventy-five lay, her hair snowwhite, her face so kindly, so motherly, so tender, so foreign to all that is not good. There was a sort of holiness about her. We stood hat in hand, and we turned away softly. In the doorway we passed the eighteen-year-old girl with such a thin, childlike face.

Bashful Suitor Is Bound With Ropes
WE do not make it a rule to tell jokes on anyone publicly, but here is one we just can't keep any longer. It seems that a certain young man wanted to see his girl and being somewhat bashful, persuaded two more young men to go with him, and when they arrived at their destination there was nobody at home. These two boys procured a rope and tied him hard and fast to a tree in the yard and left him in which position he stayed until his girl returned. She promptly released him. We imagine he felt a great deal smaller than usual. By the way, we forgot to say that one of the young fellows was a preacher.—Lawrenceville (Ga.) Journal.

THESE photographs were made last week by a Journal photographer at the home of Forrest Adair, in Druid Hills. The pretty "pigeon lady" you see is Miss Helen Jones, of 123 LaFayette Drive, Ansley Park, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Jones. Mr. Adair has a covey of 250 "roller" pigeons, which accepted her at once as their mistress. They came at her call, hovered round her, settled at her feet, and one leaned out to peck from her lips a grain of corn. As she stood feeding them and they fluttered at her feet the picture suggested St. Mark's Square in Venice, where the pigeons fly down to be fed.

CONSERVING HEALTH AND BEAUTY

BY MRS. HENRY STYMES

A WOMAN'S crowning glory is more apt to look like a perpetually greasy and wilted mop of curls at the end of summer, when the hot suns have done their worst to rob it of its sheen and vitality. It is in answer to the many pleas for something to make my hair bright and fluffy that I write this article on undoing the ravages of the summer sun or general neglect of the hair.

One cannot overemphasize the value of brushing and massage for giving health and consequent attraction to dull hair. Massage of the head stimulates circulation about the roots of the hair, and where there is circulation of good, healthy blood there is growth. Brushing also helps circulation and it is a good idea to use a brush that distributes the natural oils of the scalp to the hair, and produces a natural shine. In summer, however, there is apt to be more oil on the head than is desirable, and this excess of oil and perspiration will leave a sticky scalp condition that is anything but pleasant. The only thing to do is to wash the head more frequently. It is normal and healthy. The objection that the natural oils of the hair are washed from the scalp and cannot act upon the growth of the hair is answered by the fact that frequent washing stimulates circulation and frees flow of the blood to the scalp. It is not true that the hair is washed late in wash your head whenever it becomes soiled and the hair heavy.

Many letters ask me if washing with more water is a shampoo. It most certainly is, though there are many other ways of cleansing the head besides the use of soap and water. Perhaps the most normal way to wash the head and the method followed by most people is the soap-and-water method. Use either a good white soap, or what is called "green soap," to be bought at a druggist's. The following soft soap paste may be kept on hand in a jar and used for several shampoos.

Simplest of Shampoos
Dissolve half a cake of white toilet soap in a quart of boiling water. After it has cooled, add one-half cup of washing soda in a quart of boiling water. Add it to the soap solution and mix thoroughly. Use as a shampoo mixture.

Take a handful of this mixture and after mixing it with water, rub into the scalp and hair with the fingers tips. Never rub a cake of soap on the head, as the soap particles are extremely hard to get out of the hair, and unless all trace of soap is removed with the rinsing, the hair will not be fluffy when dry, but will remain sticky and hold the dust. For this reason it is well to take particular care in rinsing the hair. See that the rinsing water is as soft as possible, using borax in preference to soda or ammonia to soften it. After a thorough rinsing, a blond will find the juice of a lemon strained into a last rinse water very effective. It is bright, golden tints to her hair and to aid in keeping it fluffy. Peroxide, a few teaspoonfuls, in the rinse water, will also keep blonde hair light. The Auburn-haired or brown-haired girl also will find the lemon helpful, but the dark-haired woman had best depend upon brushing and massage to coax the oils of the head to give their natural sheen to the hair. Gray hair requires a few drops of blue in the rinsing water to keep the hair silver and not a dirty yellowish gray. Do not use too much blue so that it is evident. Dry the hair in the wind and sun, if possible.

An egg shampoo is to be recommended for a dry scalp. Some people prefer to simply break the egg on the head and rub it into a foam by adding water. Either of the following egg shampoos calls for a beating of the egg before applying to the hair, the first being especially effective for dandruff, but the second of more general application:

Egg Shampoo for Dandruff
Yolk of 1 egg, 1 pint of rainwater, spritz of lemon juice.

Beat the mixture thoroughly and use it with several clear waters.

Egg Shampoo
To half a cake of pure white toilet soap add a pint of hot water and mix thoroughly. To this add an egg, which has been thoroughly whipped and beaten. Stir the mixture with the yolk of an egg and a teaspoon of borax and a teaspoonful of alcohol. Rub the mixture into the scalp and rinse the hair, rub well into the scalp and rinse with a bath spray if you have one.

When the weather is cold or when one's health is not up to normal, a dry shampoo is an excellent substitute for the soap-and-water bath. Many have found it effective to remove dust and superfluous oil with cornmeal, powdered orris root or rolled oats, applying the powder to the scalp and hair by means of a puff or bit of cotton and brushing the hair thoroughly with a good stiff brush. The following is called a dry shampoo, as the liquids evaporate quickly, and the head needs no water

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

small, cordially invited to friends to help her with special clothing and photographs for all occasions.

If a personal reply is desired a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.

THE FORMAL RECEPTION
It is getting time for indoor entertaining, and thoughtful hostesses cannot neglect to have a formal reception on porch or lawn. One is often put to it to think of a proper method of entertaining an out-of-town guest, and probably the best way out of a difficult situation, where you wish your guest to meet as many of your friends as possible, is to resort to a formal reception. You may then invite as many people as you wish, regardless of limited house space and the problem of entertaining, as a reception practically entails little.

The invitations to a formal reception should be sent out ten days or two weeks in advance of the time set for the affair, and, if possible, should be engraved. Where one does not care to do this expense they may be written, using a form something like this:

etc. should be in readiness on a buffet or side table.

To receive her guests the hostess stands just inside the door of the reception room, with her husband or her guest of honor beside her. She may ask a few friends to help her in receiving and to see that guests are introduced to her guest or guests of honor. A guest thus greeted should then mingle with the others, seeking out friends, or making new ones, and taking refreshments in the dining room. On no consideration should he linger after an hour, especially if the house is small and the guests numerous.

Refreshments are kept fresh and in readiness by a maid or two in the dining room, who see that fresh china, silver and napkins are always at hand. The guests may help themselves, but the maid should be on the alert to offer food and gather up soiled dishes. For a formal reception it is well to serve a bouillon, a salad, sandwiches, cakes, ice cream and coffee or wine.

Occasionally, a singer or musician may be engaged to entertain the guests, but this is not necessary. The host and hostess, as well as guests, should be attired in evening costume, with gloves.

stances do not change the table linen daily or more than twice a week. For this reason, the hostess should generally use to identify the napkins of the various members of the family from meal to meal.

Significance of a Ring
Will you kindly tell me when a man wears a ring on his left hand, whether there is any significance attached to it? I have heard that a man who wears a ring on his left hand is a married man, and I am sure that many young people indulge in exchanging rings for a certain length of time before they are married.

Wedding Preparations
My dear Mrs. Adams,
I am going to be married in a few weeks and would like to know if it is customary to have a wedding reception at a church wedding at which I expect to have many guests.

When the arrangements are set out, I expect to wear white and my bridesmaids pink. What color flowers should we carry? How can I specify that I wish some of the flowers to be white and some pink?

My fiancé is from out of town and usually comes to see me on his days off. Should he bring me out with him when he comes to see me?

Written invitations would be rather out of place for a church wedding. It is better to have a wedding on a large scale at all, you should have the invitations and announcements engraved. The announcements should be sent out the night of or day following the wedding. The invitations should be white and the announcements should be pink or white.

I desire a separate card, marked "reception," for those guests whom you do not receive at your home after the wedding.

The best man should stay at the hotel with the groom, at the groom's expense.

COMMON SENSE IN THE HOME

EDITED BY MARION HARLAND

SOME OF OUR ABANDONERS.

WISH women and men could be induced to feel a little more personal responsibility for public good manners. It was brought home to me keenly the other day when I got into a trolley car in my best frock. It was black and I was determined to keep it fresh and clean. I reached the house where I was to meet a friend. As I made my way down the aisle I managed to avoid the feet of the careless men and the feet of several passengers, but as I dropped into the only vacant seat, a man came into contact with my dress. It was a man opposite. It was a man who had evidently been reading a book as well as in a trolley. The impression of it came over my pet skirt and I moved it with a stamp which had to remain there until I could get hold of a dry brush and after that of a damp cloth. If this happened only once in a while I could endure it with some degree of patience—perhaps. But it is a matter of daily experience and women are as much men as the men.

Perhaps because I am not fond of sitting in a trolley, I have less patience with the habit in others, but I do not believe until you have your attention attracted to it you will have an idea of how common an occurrence it is. Look about you the next time you are in a trolley and you will have a better conveyance and make a few observations.

There is the young man in the corner seat. He is wearing respectful socks and is sitting with his feet sticking out half way across the aisle, so that it is impossible to pass him without coming in contact with his shoes, unless you are unkind enough to do as I do frequently—pass and say politely, "I beg pardon, but will you kindly let me pass?"

Does the same fellow for exhibition move the girl a few seats farther down? She has on silk stockings, elaborately decorated, and fanciful shoes. Her attitude toward her hostess was so unkind that I am trying to accustom myself to the extremes and vagaries of dress of the moderns. But I confess I am still sufficiently old-fashioned to regret the display she makes.

Worse still is the show afforded by the young man further along, whose feet also trespass upon the aisle, and the old man who follows the example of the young man. He has on a pair of shoes of radiant foot-gear. One and all, they seem to be considering their own comfort with no thought that they may inconvenience those who have to pass them in their light skirts that cannot escape soil by coming into touch with the dusty or muddy shoes.

This is one of the ways in which the public at large shows its lack of responsibility for general good manners. It is well enough to condemn them in mass, but when we recollect that the crowd is composed of just such individuals as you and I, does it seem strange that no one is willing to regulate himself or herself for the sake of the others?

Perhaps because we are so much in the trolley cars, they offer us more opportunities for criticism than anywhere else. Begin with where we get on. How often does a man seem strange that he is a woman get on first? I hold in grateful memory a few who have done this and I always thank their countrymen. I don't have to express my thanks often. Generally it is a case of first come, first served and every one for himself or herself and there is a scramble to climb in and secure a seat regardless of the comfort of those whom you push to one side in the operation.

Is it worth while to speak of those who have the right to stand and every one of those about behind while they count down money and select the coin to go into the box? The conductor generally leaves the rights of others to him and is so impatient in his orders that he hurries ahead and does not seem to feel sorry for the victims, if it were not for your own sakes.

Are you are in and looking for a seat? When the four last rows of seats are reserved for smokers, will you women people be sitting in them? I have nothing to say about it if there are no other vacant seats, but with empty benches a plethy, there are yet women who crowd into the smokers' seats and then complain because they object to the smell of tobacco!

Illustration of a woman in a trolley car looking out the window, with a man sitting next to her.

Other culprits are those who sit in the end seats, or in the middle of the bench, thus preventing any one else getting a place alongside without asking for it. Sometimes this is done through carelessness, but I have had a savage glance leveled upon me in such circumstances that I had paid my fare and had a right to a seat before I could recover my self-respect.

Of course the man who let women stand while they themselves are comfortably seated are always with us and are as numerous as the women who take offered seats as a right and never utter a word of acknowledgment. Can't we cultivate a little sense of personal responsibility so far as both these breaches of manners are concerned? Possibly I go too far when I suggest, even gently, that it is a decent thing to thank the motorman who opens the door to let you off the front of the car, but with complete honesty I have uttered such thanks but a few of times and have only twice heard, "You're welcome," in response.

"Probably the man was too paralyzed by your thanks to be able to speak," suggested a friend to whom I mentioned this. There are other modes of showing bad manners on trolley cars, but they have received sufficient attention for the present, although I would like to ask why such behavior is practiced by those who are in their own homes would print from anything remotely approximating such discourtesy? Why should we leave our good manners at home when we get into a public conveyance?

It is not only that consideration of the rights of others is lacking. Have you ever noticed how the up and down streams of persons on a pavement collide because neither line will take the trouble to keep to its own share of the sidewalk? Those on the right side wander over to the left and those on the left drift towards the right; one is always jostling or being jostled when a little thought would prevent the unpleasant collisions.

I am sure I have referred before this to the difficulties one has in paying tickets, whether in a railroad station or at a box office, because the would-be purchasers will push in out of their turn. I grant it is hard to be patient and preserve your place in line when the person ahead of you is exasperatingly slow over selection or over gathering up change, but do not owe something in the line of decent manners to our self-respect as well as to the comfort of our neighbors.

Women are said to be worse offenders in this line than men, and perhaps they are. Certainly they are accused of it by men and I own to having been interestedly irritated more times than I can count by the women who have pushed ahead of me and taken my place after I had patiently awaited my turn in regular order. But truth compels me to say that I cannot hold even men free of blame in this respect. I have had them "butt in" in front of me, just as I have had them swing themselves on cars when I was next in place. I don't think either sex can be said to hold a strict monopoly either of good or bad manners.

At this time of year the swinging door nuisance is mercifully abated and one opportunity for rudeness is temporarily checked. I should feel that my missionary work had not been vain if next fall when the doors are once more in working order even a few persons here and there had taken my admonitions to heart sufficiently not to rush through the doors and leave them to fly back unopened in the faces of those coming in next.

We have heard always a great deal of woman's inhumanity to woman and of her rudeness and lack of consideration for the girls behind the counter. I am willing to acknowledge that there is a great deal of stinging in this respect, which is not excused or condoned by the fact that the young women who wait on us frequently have shortcomings of their own in the way of curt and tactless replies to customers. As a rule, I think women are ready to report such failings to the nearest floorwalker or aisle man.

How many of us are prompt to recall the consideration we have received from the saleswomen? How often do we stop on our way from the counter where we have been graciously treated to speak of it to the man with whom a good word in the girl's favor may have some effect? Suppose we think it over and ponder whether this, too, could not come under the head of the public good manners we would like to see cultivated.

I am afraid that in many cases one trouble lies in the failure to practice politeness in the home. We cannot expect to receive courtesy on the streets from those who have not seen civility enforced and heard it taught in the domestic circle. Certain card defects we may not find in our homes. We do not say, for instance, and that is a striking example, we walk and platform filthy through exasperation picked up that habit in their own homes. But we can't get angry in as far as it makes life or action less easy for some one else. I think it would be rather interesting to hear of the result from a letter to the editor of the magazine.

Does the same thing apply to women? In a way, yes; and yet some of her faults in public are more likely to spring from thoughtlessness than from malice. I don't think that although she sits with her knees crossed in her own room, where she is surrounded by nobody but the action may be the way of others if she practices the same attitude in a car. Her transgressions are not because she is deliberately troubling her own comfort when by so doing she deprives others of ease, but because she does not stop to think whether or not her behavior may be an inconvenience to some one else.

Here is a chance for reform for ourselves and for the little intruder in our work with others. Suppose each one of us considers for a while what she does in public which is a breach of manners in as far as it makes life or action less easy for some one else. I think it would be rather interesting to hear of the result from a letter to the

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Wants an Old Piano.

"If somebody has an old piano which it does not need any more I would do any kind of white work or colored embroidery, draw work of coarse linen, or tapestry work in exchange for that lovely instrument. I have been trying in every way to get one, but my husband makes hardly enough to meet the expense of our three babies. They keep me at home all the time or I would go out and earn the money to get a piano. I am afraid my fingers will be a hope only, but who can tell? Here is something some one may like to know. If a child such as my own were to be given a piano, I would like to see some red pepper or dry mustard on it, and tie a piece of cloth around the finger, so that the child will not wash off the application. The first time he sticks his finger in his mouth and feels the burn, he will probably cry, but after that he will be careful to avoid putting the finger into the mouth. MRS. A. M."

Offers English Recipes.

"A while ago I noted in your Corner a letter from a lonely mountain girl, and that led me to wonder if perhaps you could help me. I come from London, England, and have shares in Canada, which I can't realize, consequently I cannot go home and job, as I should like to do. Could you put me in touch with some other Britisher? At present I am fearfully homesick, as I am constantly hearing of the deaths of various friends. I am 21 years old and an enthusiastic Britisher. I would be pleased to give cookery recipes that are economical, from a reliable English book, to any one who would like them, on receipt of a 2 cent stamp and a statement of the kind of dishes wanted."

Music for Violin.

"I would be so glad to get some music I could play on my violin. Either regular violin music or some standard songs with music would be gratefully received. I am just a boy and am not able to buy the music, but I can learn if I have it. I will appreciate any music sent me that some one does not longer care for. It is not an exacting request, certainly, and one which I trust will be granted."

Designs for Quilt Blocks.

"Can you tell me of any designs for quilt blocks, using small pieces of silk and velvet? If so, I would be much pleased and grateful to receive them."

Pieces, Magazines, and Music.

"Is there not in the Corner some old lady who would welcome a parcel of silk scraps? I have quite a supply of pretty pieces for quilting which I will gladly give to any one desiring them. There are doubtless members of the Corner who wish magazines which would furnish pleasant moments. I have a number I would like to give. Also, although practice and enjoyment can still be obtained from them. May I ask some member who has an old-fashioned garden to give me some dried rose petals and lavender flowers? I wish some so much, and I am confident they can be procured through the Corner. I will gladly forward the postage for them."

Called an Old Maid.

"I would like to say a word to the dear girl who doesn't like to be called an old maid. I believe that if you would be so kind as to write me, I should feel an honor to be one. Two of the dearest women I ever knew were old maids and loved to be called by that name. I would be more than willing to omit the prejudices of others and try to do right and be happy, the world would be a brighter and better place to live in."

Cooking a Tough Fowl.

"I want to pass on my way to cooking chickens when they are too tough to fry. I prepare for frying and roll in flour, fry brown quickly, place them in a steamer or a pot of boiling water, and steam until done. The water makes lovely gravy."

Buttermilk Cheese.

"Here is a recipe for the best of C. For buttermilk cheese: Heat buttermilk to about 120 or 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Allow it to cool and then strain. The curd may be served seasoned with salt only or it may be mixed with cream and seasonings. I take this from farmer's bulletin No. 497. Cheese and its economical use in the Diet. A postal card sent to the secretary of agriculture asking for a bulletin by number will bring it, and it costs for it she will find other useful suggestions. A little practice will enable one to guess at the proper temperature for the buttermilk."

Bran Biscuits.

"Mrs. F. J. P. sent the inclosed recipe for bran biscuits to your column. Where is the bran? Please publish with the correct amount of bran given. Mrs. S. F. B. cannot hold herself responsible for the errors of the recipes sent to me by contributors."

Painted by Breton.

"I noticed the request for the name of the painter of 'The Song of the Lark' in the Adoptive Breton article. He is a modern French painter, born at Courrières, Pas-de-Calais, France, in 1887, and died in 1906. His work is something like that of Millet and he has been called the lyric painter of the French peasantry. He is not the simple beauty of his native place and with the plowman and other laborers as models he has painted with a purity and sincerity which give him a distinction all his own. The girl in the picture is undoubtedly French. H. B."

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

BY ROY L. McCARDLE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud, centered over an heirloom, descended from the sky, found in a motor by an ascendant, had erupted between Ock Arthur Stanley and his uncle, Judge Lawrence Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the ascendant to the Stanley estate in England is an American lady. When his wife dies after having given birth to a daughter Ock Stanley says and substitutes as heir a new-born boy who, years later, was the late Mrs. Hagar, steals the coronal's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtains possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, either Stanley, grows up, Hagar returns with her to Stanley Hall. Dr. Lee, acting as a condition that he keep the "diamond from the sky," adopts the boy as a straight heir. Hagar and Arthur are established in Stanley Hall after Hagar has established her girl through the marriage of Arthur Stanley, Arthur's cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the fortune if the truth were known, also falls in love with Esther.

In endeavoring to steal the "diamond from the sky" from Dr. Lee, Hagar causes the old doctor's death. Arthur assumes the onus of the murder in the hope that he himself will escape and Blair, who is a prodigal, will live a straight life. Hagar and Arthur are established in Stanley Hall after Hagar has established her girl through the marriage of Arthur Stanley. Arthur's cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the fortune if the truth were known, also falls in love with Esther.

Whether they dragged the unconscious man from the burning ruins of the dance hall, the mine, and upon one of these Arthur was placed, and then Esther, her strength and resolution leaving her, feels a deadly numbness come over her.

Mammoth is a lawless community, and Peter Huff, the den keeper, is one of its most lawless arblers. But he has the gambler's temperament. The destruction of his gambling hall is the adverse turn of a card to him. The diamond from the sky, since Durand has told him of it, now fills the mind of Peter Huff.

"Joint keepers' luck," he calls it. "Easy come and easy go. In a gamble for a fortune, in a play for a stake worth half a million, I lose a dump worth five thousand—the odds were worth it, even to lose!" says Mr. Huff, when he turns to the late inmate of his den and says gruffly: "Well, Em, you pulled a fine one for your young lady friend there."

Here Pete looked keenly into the white crinkles of the fainting Esther. Pete was not altogether lost to the higher humanities.

"Why, she's only a kid," he said, "and she's all in. Take her to your place and fix her up. We've sent for the doctor. We'll need the coroner, too—and the undertaker," he added.

"I'm a doctor," said Durand, who had been stooping over Arthur, and thrusting aside several of the rough group who had gathered around the stretcher. "There are other people to help besides this one," remarked Durand to these. "Hurry, I'll take care of Mr. Powell!"

"You think you'll live?" asked Huff. "Are you really a doctor?"

"He is badly injured internally," replied Durand. "Several ribs are broken and one of his arms. He should be taken to a hospital, as I think an operation is necessary

Besides this, Durand remembered Vivian speaking of Blair Stanley and the strange regard and fondness the girl injured man had always held for his cousin. For Vivian had informed Durand and her other former associate, De Vaux, that Arthur and Blair were cousins, though she had deemed it best to keep the secret of Arthur being other than John Powell, as he was known in the west.

Hastily, but skillfully, improvising an ambulance by the aid of the stretcher and John Powell's high-powered roadster, and taking with him a mechanic to aid him in running and caring for the great car, Durand departed from Mammoth with his still unconscious patient awaiting in blankets.

he was apt to hide. In the darkness, and on his hands and knees, he clutches the deer head, feels it to ascertain if it has been injured—and his trembling hand closes upon the diamond.

The roof has crashed, mangled, and pitted down a score of men and women who but a moment before murderously sought each other's lives. Several lie crumpled in death's stillness beneath the wreckage.

Of these there is one stalwart young man in auto costume, his face, blanched in death or unconsciousness, is camouflage. It is Arthur Stanley. A great timber is across his chest and he is crushed and sorely shattered.

"Are you hurt, doctor?" asks Kansas Em, turning to Esther from the sickening sight of the wreckage and the hideous cries behind them.

Esther is sick and faint. "I am not hurt," she sobs tremulously. "But where is Arthur? Has he escaped? Is he killed?"

"Was he your friend?" asked Kansas Em. "Why, that's the boss, Mr. John Powell, the millionaire, who has just bought the mine around here. He had just bought when hell broke loose. Is he your friend?"

Esther could have said that the young man known as John Powell was her friend in all the world, save the poor Italian, Quabba, and a gypsy woman bereft of reason. In far off Richmond, But Esther said no word but sped to the ruins and fought her way through several groups of men and women, who coming to their senses, were beginning the work of rescue in the face of the flames that were now burning out in several places in the wreckage.

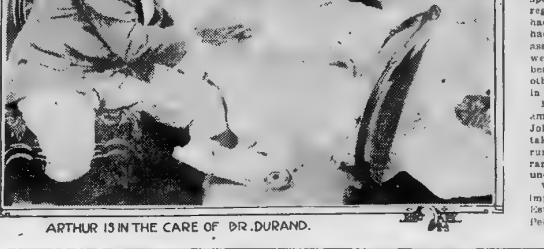

The crackling fire shed its light among the ruins and down in such interstices as where Esther thrust herself in search of Arthur. Those who were pinned in the wreckage and were conscious of the added peril of fire, screamed and begged for aid and succor.

ARTHUR IS IN THE CARE OF DR. DURAND.

They were in the excitement and the struggle he had not noted the diamond had been hurled through the air when Luke Lovell, struck for it like all the rest, had struck the arm of Kansas Em, knocking her down upon the chain of the locket as she held it high above the throng. Over the heads of the crowd it had flashed and fallen upon the deer horn, and so the lawyer had borne it from the scene of struggle unnoticed by any one, not even himself.

Scarcely knowing what he did, the panic-stricken lawyer dashed into the first haven of safety he encountered. It was a bar that Peter's bartender had converted into a kennel for a puppy given to him that day.

Those who had not been imprisoned or rushed by the falling roof of the dance hall dragged themselves from the debris some ran wildly through the muddy streets of the little town crying for help and calling "Fire!" Others blocked at the ruins with torn and bleeding hands, and others still fought at each other's throats. A group as still fought, despite their death and disaster all around them, was Frank Durand, who had come to these wild institutions for the sake of his life and to lose it, and the bestial Peter Huff, the dance hall man. The two fought madly, still with Luke Lovell. The quick eye of Durand had seen the blow Luke had aimed at Kansas Em to gain the diamond. Durand had not seen where the diamond had fallen, but instinctively he had run to the place where the knot that fought around him and had struck Luke's mighty blow between the eyes with his strength and skill, for Durand had been a boxer in his earlier career. But Luke had shaken himself as a dog might do and had closed in on Durand.

Luke was nearly a match for the two but finally they beat him to his knees and searched him, near the barrel where the man's money was hidden. Their curses of disappointment, Durand and Huff rushed back to the dance hall just as the roof fell, and the crowd in the street made off in the darkness, firm now in the belief that the devil himself dwelt in the diamond from the sky. In the excitement and the struggle he had not noted the diamond had been hurled through the air when Luke Lovell, struck for it like all the rest, had struck the arm of Kansas Em, knocking her down upon the chain of the locket as she held it high above the throng. ARTHUR IS VISITED BY HIS FRIENDS AND RELATIVES

AT THE RUINS, PETER HUFF WATCHES THE DIGGERS WITH A KEEN GLANCE.

There was no cry from the pinnacled man whom Esther sought, and whom four million, I lose a dump worth five thousand—the odds were worth it, even to lose!" says Mr. Huff, when he turns to the late inmate of his den and says gruffly: "Well, Em, you pulled a fine one for your young lady friend there."

frantic inquiries. "He's a doctor, kid, that's all I know," Mr. Huff had replied. "He's a big doctor, too, and an old friend of my friend, Mr. Powell, at least, he's a friend of friends of his. You ought to be thankful, Doc Durand told me, Mr. Powell would have a chance for his life but he was taken to a hospital at once and operated on."

"There were tears in Kansas Em's worldly face as Esther's sorrow and distress were expressed in his eyes. "If you're not satisfied you go follow them," Em whispered. "Have you any money, pet?"

"Yes, thank you," murmured Esther. "I have quite enough money. I will have Quabba here get our horses from the stable and we will ride to the station and take the first train to Los Angeles."

"You will think sometimes of me, won't you?" asked Kansas Em huskily. "Here is the prayer from the locket. Did you know that it was in it?"

"No," said Esther. "I don't think any one knew it. There seemed to be a secret spring that was touched."

A secret spring was touched in the sinful breast of Kansas Em. "Your mother put it there when you were a baby," she murmured. "I know it, I felt it, there is a faint perfume like lavender about it. A mother's prayer!" She sobbed as she took the paper from her bosom, where she had thrust it when the fight had begun in the dance hall.

"Even a singer like I am made the better by it," continued Em. "And will you pray for me?"

"Always," said Esther, brokenly, as she took the crumpled paper with its faint perfume. She looked at the paper and her arms around the outcast older woman and kissed her.

But the diamond from the sky? Of all the world Marmaduke Smythe is unmoved by its powers for good or ill. Whether it be helpful to those who have no claim or right to it, or whether it be truly a powerful agent to harm for Stanley's of the blood, means and matters nothing to Marmaduke Smythe. He feels it his duty to surrender it to the Stanley heir, but meanwhile it is a responsibility he does not deem desirable upon him. He will be ready to do anything. He halts by a sign which reads: "Twenty miles to Mammoth. The road is twenty miles that he has traveled, with him by his show at Mammoth." Blair Stanley had been at Mammoth for a day, making a careful memorandum of the diamond from the sky.

One of the boys says it's as strange with the diamond when he fight broke loose."

There is such a pair of animals about the fellow's words that Peter Huff had a glimpse of the future. He remembered the work at the promptings of the mine and commanders the cheap, old automobile, a friend, and with his trunk took out of the mine some of the things that were the winners. So remarkable a figure as Smythe, he did not mention the diamond to the diggers. He only mentioned the fact that he had seen it. Twenty miles from Mammoth Smythe is overtaken and held up at the point. The diamond is not on the person but Pete and Huff had the responsibility of its hiding place.

Back to the oak tree they bear the protesting Smythe, but the diamond is gone again!

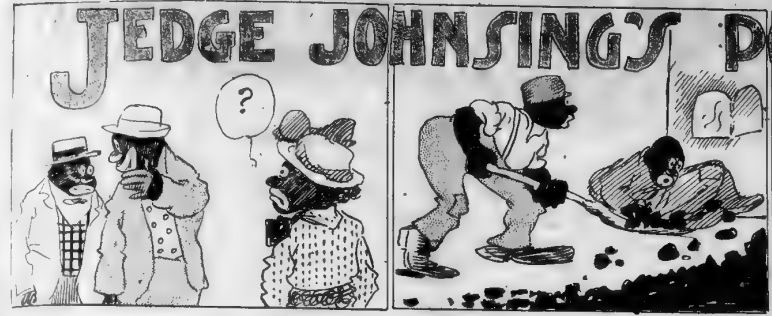

Pete and his pal part from the lawyer with curses and return to Mammoth. The dog, a cry, "I'll tell you, since you've been so good to your feet. One of the boys says it's as strange with the diamond when he fight broke loose."

In Los Angeles the newspapers spread stories of the dramatic first homecoming of the little town, and the news was sensible, more dead than alive, of John Powell, the young oil and mine man, who had been taken to a hospital at once and operated on. Dr. Durand, and of the care attendant of friends and relatives, who had been admitted to the hospital, who had recently arrived and will take complete charge of Mr. Powell's affairs. After the papers had pretty and agitated young woman, who inquired as to Mr. Powell's condition, but refused to give any name of the person who informed her that no one could be admitted to Mr. Powell's bedside except Dr. Durand and the nurse in charge, Miss Harston.

So Arthur Stanley lies helpless at the hands of hatred, while Esther and her quest is barred out of his door and the diamond from the sky is buried under a queen, who perhaps will play a part in the secret—again! It is indeed a jewel for a queen!

Names of Lonely Heroes in the Trenches Are Cabled to Dr. F. E. May, French Consul, Who Wants a Foster-Sister for Each One. Counts, Artists, and Millionaires May Be on the List.

MOST Divine Benefactors: Accept the million thanks of a poor count who is the grand nephew of Napoleon Bonaparte. Accept, also, a set of white furs my aide is ordering mailed to you from Paris. Your letter was adorable. I am merely a major general of the French cuirassiers, but I lay my heart at your feet. It is wretchedly lonesome in the trenches. Your letter was like summer sunshine. May I cable occasionally?"

Such letters are for the 200 "war sisters" Dr. F. E. May, French consul, is organizing here.

Earning glory and legions of honor in the trenches, writing derivative verses tucked inside of shells and thrown at the Germans, is many a lonely hero.

You may have one for a brother—a count, an artist, a poet.

Many are noble by title and by accomplishment. Loneliness is not confined to Jacques, once the plodding keeper of a vineyard in south France. Henri, the studious fellow, who had no time to spare from art for idle moments at the little street tables in Paris, is lonely.

Renaud the say fellow, all of whose fine friends of the Parisian haunts are gone now—one way or another, the men killed, the women nursing in the hospitals—Renaud is lonely.

In the trenches, facing death daily, never a mail bringing letters which are rifts in the tragic clouds of the battlefields, are hundreds, who are lonely.

Paris began the association of "war sisters" who shall write these lonely ones of the army, sending words of comfort and little necessities, (cigarettes and socks) that are luxuries in the trenches.

Dr. May, French consul, caused the "sisters" to include Atlanta. He cabled west before that for 200 names of lonely heroes. A foster sister will be found here for each.

You go up and pick out whatever hero Jacques or Henri or Renaud—you like best, and take him for your foster brother.

It will be your duty to write him sisterly letters, and send him cigarettes, and counsel him not to smoke too much, and whatever he does not get in the way of German shells.

The unknown hero whom you've never seen and never will (unless he sends you a photograph of himself in brave uniform and many medals) probably will try to be your foster brother till the war's done. If you like him you can keep him for a brother afterward.

It will be exciting.

"Here," says Dr. May, "is a grab-bag of heroes. There may be counts and grand nephews of Napoleon and poets and artists and writers. Who knows. Come, pick whom you may and call him brother."

It is quite the most romantic incident of a twelvemonth.

"Who knows," says the consul, "you both may write letters as famous as the love notes of Abelard and Heloise."

"Who knows?"

But here a doubt enters your mind. You from a bit.

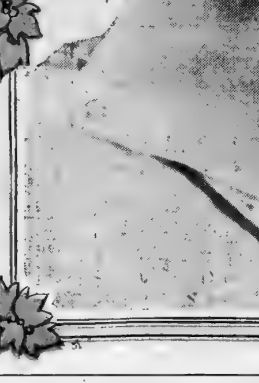

"But I can't write French," you protest. "And my French or my Russian or my Jacques would know nothing of English."

A mere trifle, my dear. Be sure the French trenches have interpreters of English. And can't Atlanta furnish as much French as not an unknown tongue here?

And think of the white furs from Paris. They would need no translation. And the cable messages.

The bell rings, a messenger boy is at the door. It seems at first a mere telegram. And here is a cable from "some-where in France," which means from the trenches, and it says:

"Why haven't you written? No letter for a week. Did you like the books, the candy, and the new hat from Potvret's?"

WHY ATLANTA IS GETTING TO BE A TOWN OF BACHELORS

By Jane Dixon.

IN a few years Atlanta is going to be a bachelor's town, I believe, have the "single life." Have you listened recently to one of them between twenty and twenty-five?

You ought to. It's startling.

I have in mind one whose easy coyness is characteristic of the Atlanta young man. He isn't ill-bred. He's Shawesque. He reminds me of a charmingly impudent young fellow in "Mrs. Warren's Profession." I know that's a naughty play but the two are SO alike.

This modern young man, made according to the Shaw recipe, lighted a cigarette and inhaled it lazily. All he does is done lazily and well. He exasperates you by his ease.

"How much," he asked, "do you think the Atlanta girl, taken all in all, is worth?"

"That was unusual, even for him. 'Worth how?' I demanded.

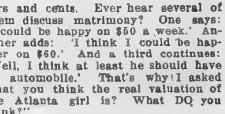

"Suppose she could be assessed a value as properties are." (Blowing a smoke ring carefully toward the ceiling.) "What would you say?"

"I would say," I answered crisply, "that Atlanta men are beginning to associate with women (though I blushed a little as I said it) and not properly value."

"Right you are." He even forgot his cigarette in his enthusiasm. "There's nothing I'd like better than being devoted to. Every other Atlanta man is the same way. We wait to be romantic. We'd like to strum mandolins on moonlight nights beneath the windows of our chosen loves."

"Better said candy," I advised.

"That's it." He snatched him a point, though I hadn't meant to. "Don't offer romance, lay out your fair one's feet a comfortable salary. Agree with the lady she has a high monetary valuation."

A Book You'd Like

THE most popular book in Atlanta is "K" by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Book stores report that next in popularity are "Thirty" by Howard Vincent O'Brien; "Michael O'Horan," by Jean Straton Porter; "The Rainbow Trail," by Zane Grey; and war articles.

"K" is the most "human" book published in recent years. The interesting plot is the least part of it. It introduces fifty characters associated with "The Street," each with the quality of humanness.

The story is of K. Le Moyne, once a famous surgeon who quit his profession and dropped out of sight following the serious failure of an operation. He sets a job with a gas company and goes to live on "The Street," as a boarder in Sidney's home. On "The Street" live Max Wilson and the older Jimmie Rosenfeld and Sidney's aunt, who founds "The Street" by setting up as a modiste and going to Paris for new fashions, and dozens of others.

"K" resolves to shut himself from the world, but the kindly friendliness of "The Street" breaks down all barriers. The associations grew stronger. There are many complications. Sidney falls in love with Max Wilson, the brilliant, but not scrupulous, young physician across the street.

He is shot by Joe Drummond, a jealous boy; and it is found that the famous Edwards operation is all that can save him. "K" in performing it reveals his identity as the famous physician who had disappeared several years before. He marries Sidney.

WHAT I THINK

"FEW women here walk right. I don't, however, mean to make a difference between the women of Atlanta and of other cities.

"Walking is simply an art that not one in a hundred understands. People have lived in houses and offices and ridden in conveyances instead of walking, for so long a time, they have forgotten how to use their hands or their feet."

"Even beautiful women," continued Mrs. William Clegg Spiker, of 33 East Fourth street, "soldiers have hands and feet that are beautiful."

"Among the most beautiful feet and hands in Atlanta are those of the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Blass. This little girl has been trained in expression, has been taught physical culture and she realizes many of the old Greek ideals."

"Nature intended us to walk gracefully, to have graceful hands and feet, and the simplest exercises repeated just a few minutes every day will realize nature's intentions."

DAILY DIARY OF ATLANTA BY OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPPY

MONDAY—Strange the difference of men's talk. Home last night by street car, and it being crowded, had no choice but the front platform, and there held interesting conversation with a doctor at medicine not met by me for weeks. And have since been wondering over two things, namely, that such sensible words should be uttered on a street car platform, and that others of us haven't followed my doctor informant's plan of recreation.

As means of diversion he completed a course at law this past season, and received properly a diploma, though he never means to give himself to the practice of law. Before completing medicine he took degrees also in theology, and he has since given no little time to philosophy.

It not being his intent that his studies should find their way into the prints, I hesitate over his name. But an anecdote not given point by a name seems merely to imagination's creature. Hence, he is Dr. M. C. Hardin, most well known here; and at one time instructor at Vanderbilt.

I asked him how he found the time for so much study, and he said it was his diversion as another's is the game of golf, or the pastime of dancing, or the pleasure of drinking. And he said that just on the street cars he found time to do much study of law, and completed the course easily, despite a large medical practice.

And now he has degrees in the three greatest studies in the world, theology, law, and medicine, and largely because of study is his pastime.

Tuesday—Played a most indifferent game of golf, and concluded woman is not the only fickle thing in the world. A male is equally capricious. At a ninth hole, three ministers of the Gospel, two Episcopals and one Episcopal, read and preached the lesson of middle-aged and of goodish size and of firm Baptist belief, drove fifty fifteen yards.

"Quit off. I do neither side now is better than 45."

And I concluded golf will make Hars even of the ministry.

Wednesday—Heard today of an Atlanta man with perfect eyes, and find it is quite true. His name is W. S. Richardson of the Western & Atlantic railroad, and he is a Scotchman by birth and members the time in the old country country residence of the British royalty, where Queen Victoria often came. And he quite well remembers the occasions on which he saw her.

As a boy he was injured, and on examination doctors had occasion to test his eyes and to their amazement they were no less than perfect. He can see with the naked eye objects you need a glass to discern, and many times within the circumference of a dime he can write the Lord's prayer and do such feats. The figures he makes are so perfect railroad officers to whom he formerly made report, thought they were done by typewriter. Heard also an interesting story of the son of Dr. George Brown, a lad now in the navy. Such is the quirk of his eye he sees two directions at once. It is easy for him to take two pens and write his name twice at the same time, one name being written toward the right and other toward the left.

Thursday—My informant, who was a lady, said:

"If you want to know an Atlanta woman's age, look at her hair. If she has a youthful coiffure, you may know she's past thirty and is afraid she's getting old. Paint and powder aren't used here any more as disguises. Instead, the hair is puffed and curled or drawn tight, as the case may be, to hide Father Time's advances."

"I saw one yesterday with the front part of her hair hauled back so tight it couldn't have been slicker if it had been pulled with cable cord. It gave her a 'wild princess' look."

"In front of me on the same car," went on my informant, "were two girls. One turned by the other and asked:

"Are my ears covered?"

"Yes," said the other.

"And the first smiled in perfect satisfaction. The chief thing about the costume now is to have your ears covered and your skirt short."

Friday—"The Psychology of the Voice," is a phrase read somewhere and so I wondered if it had any meaning, and then to Evelyn Harris of the telephone company to ask an interview on voices, and with him to the change room where the operatives sit a long boards, receivers to their ears. And he chose one and we'll call her Miss Ivy, and this is what she said:

"I try to have a sunshine voice. The gruffer people are to me the more cheerful. I try to appear to be cheerful. And you no notion what a change it brings. A few sunshine rays seem to seep into them. Their voices soften, and I think they feel a bit ashamed at their abruptness. O, there is such a thing as sunshine voices!"

And I thought perhaps really in every day affairs the psychology of the voice could be tried.

Saturday—Heard today a most unusual scheme proposed to the city of Atlanta that we take San Antonio, Tex., for example, in establishing a municipal bat roost for prevention of mosquitoes.

There are no bats in the belly of the man who invented the bat roost. Bats are man's best friends, scientists have discovered. Bats eat mosquitoes, and if mosquitoes are not destroyed they carry disease and cause epidemics, especially malarial epidemics. Therefore in a malarial country bats are better than dogs—they prevent what the doctor cannot always cure.

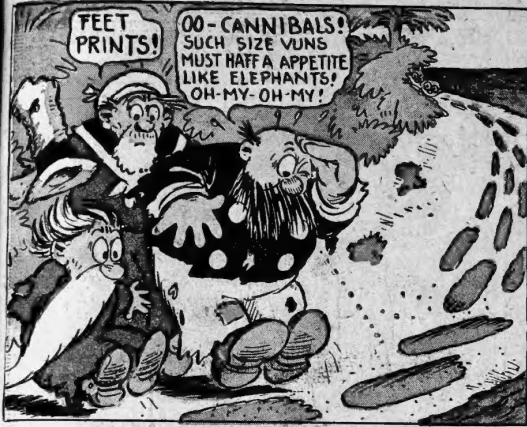

In San Antonio a mighty bestry of batroost has been set for the birds, and will accommodate 250,000 of the blind night rovers. It is estimated that one bat will devour 250 mosquitoes in a night which means that a mobilization of bats would greatly decrease the mosquito population."
